

Homoeopathy and animals / Weleda (UK) Ltd.

Contributors

Weleda (UK)

Publication/Creation

Ilkeston : Weleda (UK), [1992?]

Persistent URL

<https://wellcomecollection.org/works/uvt98bce>

License and attribution

Conditions of use: it is possible this item is protected by copyright and/or related rights. You are free to use this item in any way that is permitted by the copyright and related rights legislation that applies to your use. For other uses you need to obtain permission from the rights-holder(s).

wellcome collection

Wellcome Collection
183 Euston Road
London NW1 2BE UK
T +44 (0)20 7611 8722
E library@wellcomecollection.org
<https://wellcomecollection.org>

HOMOEOPATHY AND ANIMALS

In general, animals respond very well to homoeopathy and it is now used by an increasing number of veterinary surgeons and by the general public to maintain the health of their domestic pets.

Maintaining Animal Health

Weleda offer a range of ten homoeopathic products in the 6C strength to help maintain animal health. The range, packaged in green and white, is now available from many retail outlets.

The range comprises:

Aconite
Arnica
Drosera
Gelsemium
Hepar sulph

Merc sol
Nux vom
Pulsatilla
Rhus tox
Sulphur

Further Information

Your local stockist will carry a range of information booklets for further reading - or write to Weleda direct for their booklist.

WELEDA (UK) LTD.

Heanor Road, Ilkeston, Derbyshire, DE7 8DR.

Telephone: (0602) 309319

WELEDA

WELEDA AND HOMOEOPATHY

What is Homoeopathy?

"Homoeopathy", like many words in the English language, is derived from the Greek words "Homoios" and "pathos". Translated this means "like suffering". Homoeopathy is essentially the medical practice of treating like with like.

The present day use of Homoeopathy stems from the work of Dr. Samuel Hahnemann, an early 19th Century physician. His first discovery concerned the action of Cinchona bark, which had been used by contemporary doctors to treat malaria. Hahnemann, as a healthy person, took a material dose of the bark and found that it caused him to exhibit the symptoms of malaria. He then went on to successfully treat people suffering from the illness using dilute doses of the same bark.

Homoeopathy is essentially natural healing. The highly dilute, potentised remedies assist the patient to regain health by stimulating nature's vital forces of recovery. Homoeopathic medicines are safe, gentle and highly esteemed by those who use them.

The Weleda Homoeopathic Medicines Range

Weleda, from their base in Derbyshire, supply many hundreds of homoeopathic medicines, in many different strengths, to doctors, practitioners, hospitals and the general public.

Weleda also manufacture a range of frequently-used homoeopathic medicines in the 6C and 30C strengths. Particularly suited to home use, this range is available from retail outlets throughout the UK.

To ensure the quality of their medicines, Weleda grows several hundred species of medicinal plants in its own herb gardens. Weleda homoeopathic medicines are potentised by hand and packed in recyclable glass bottles, the best medium to maintain the quality of these medicines.

Weleda homoeopathic medicines are also available within the National Health Service.

7-12-72: weleda UK Ltd

WELEDA