Bread stall in Kingston, Jamaica. Native bakers make their bread into loaves of odd and unusual shapes.

JAMAICA is the largest of the British West Indies. Because of its delightful climate it has become a popular winter resort. At this time of the year Kingston on the South and Port Antonio on the North Coast are filled with tourists from many parts of the world. One of the finest motor trips in the tropics is the one over the mountain range that runs the length of the island.

Bread baking in the tropics is a more difficult process than in the temperate zones. Stability and uniformity of quality are absolute essentials in the flour that is used in the best bakeries. GOLD MEDAL has long been the popular flour in Jamaica.
