HITLER JUST WOULDN'T UNDERSTAND THIS

BATTLECRAFT FOR HOME GUARDS — 1944 VERSION

The Germans have boasted of the "terror" effect of their flying bombs on London and Southern England—they just can't grasp the fact that the British sense of humour will prevail under any test, as this cartoon shows. It was drawn by a member of the 32nd Surrey (Croydon) Battalion of the Home Guard, who have been assisting in repairing flying bomb damage in Southern England. Although the Home Guard love to poke fun at each other, they are really doing most useful work.
