

A man leans against some lockers holding two books with a warning about the connection between sexually transmitted diseases and AIDS; a poster from the America responds to Aids advertising campaign. Lithograph.

Contributors

United States. Department of Health and Human Services.

Publication/Creation

[Washington (D.C.)] : [Department of Health and Human Services], [between 1990 and 1999]

Persistent URL

<https://wellcomecollection.org/works/rkubwx2j>

License and attribution

You have permission to make copies of this work under a Creative Commons, Attribution, Non-commercial license.

Non-commercial use includes private study, academic research, teaching, and other activities that are not primarily intended for, or directed towards, commercial advantage or private monetary compensation. See the Legal Code for further information.

Image source should be attributed as specified in the full catalogue record. If no source is given the image should be attributed to Wellcome Collection.

Wellcome Collection
183 Euston Road
London NW1 2BE UK
T +44 (0)20 7611 8722
E library@wellcomecollection.org
<https://wellcomecollection.org>

Why there's a connection between sexually transmitted diseases and AIDS.

Simple. The same type of sexual behavior that can infect you with gonorrhea, genital herpes, syphilis, and other sexually transmitted diseases (STDs) can also infect you with something else... the AIDS virus.

You get STDs by having sex with someone who is infected. That's bad enough.

But if you continue the same unprotected sexual behavior, you could get something you can't cure. AIDS.

If you'd like more information on the relationship between AIDS and sexually transmitted diseases, call the National AIDS hotline. 1-800-342-AIDS. The hotline for the hearing impaired is 1-800-AIDS-TTY.

AMERICA
RESPONDS
TO AIDS