

The head and shoulders of a man with the words 'Afterward, I worry about what I've done'; an advertisement for ARIES, a phone group project organised by the University of Washington for gay men to promote safer sex to prevent AIDS. Colour lithograph by Megan Adcock.

Publication/Creation

Washington : ARIES, a project of the University of Washington School of Social Work, [between 1990 and 1999]

Persistent URL

<https://wellcomecollection.org/works/hahs6zm5>

License and attribution

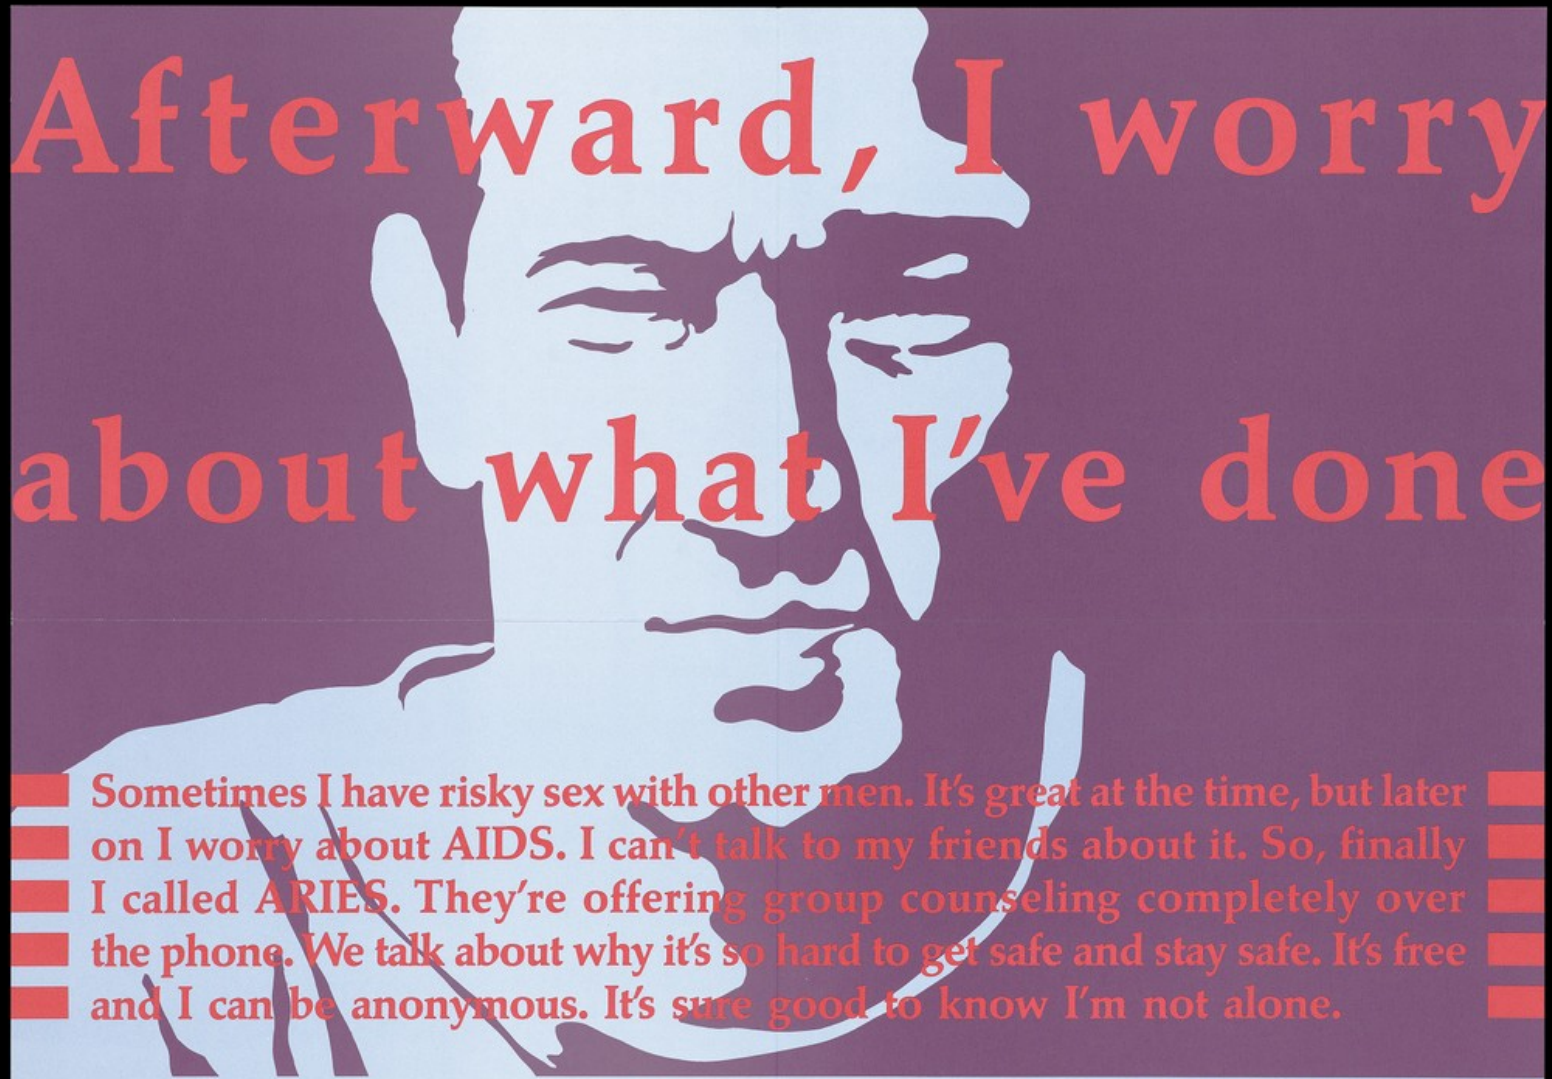

You have permission to make copies of this work under a Creative Commons, Attribution, Non-commercial license.

Non-commercial use includes private study, academic research, teaching, and other activities that are not primarily intended for, or directed towards, commercial advantage or private monetary compensation. See the Legal Code for further information.

Image source should be attributed as specified in the full catalogue record. If no source is given the image should be attributed to Wellcome Collection.

Wellcome Collection
183 Euston Road
London NW1 2BE UK
T +44 (0)20 7611 8722
E library@wellcomecollection.org
<https://wellcomecollection.org>

Afterward, I worry about what I've done

Sometimes I have risky sex with other men. It's great at the time, but later on I worry about AIDS. I can't talk to my friends about it. So, finally I called ARIES. They're offering group counseling completely over the phone. We talk about why it's so hard to get safe and stay safe. It's free and I can be anonymous. It's sure good to know I'm not alone.

ARIES

...men becoming sexually safer together...

Toll free from the US or Canada

1-800-999-7511

A project of the University of Washington School of Social Work. Poster by Megan Adcock.

Monday-Thursday 9am to 9pm
and Friday 9am to 5pm
West Coast Time