

A soldier coughing over his food in the canteen and spreading germs over his colleagues. Colour lithograph, 1941/1945.

Publication/Creation

[Place of publication not identified] : [publisher not identified], [1941/1945]

Persistent URL

<https://wellcomecollection.org/works/sz74nbdu>

License and attribution

Conditions of use: it is possible this item is protected by copyright and/or related rights. You are free to use this item in any way that is permitted by the copyright and related rights legislation that applies to your use. For other uses you need to obtain permission from the rights-holder(s).

A black and white photograph of three soldiers in uniform sitting at a table eating. The soldier in the center is blowing a large, frothy bubble of food, possibly mashed potatoes, from his mouth. The soldier on the left is looking down at his food, and the soldier on the right is looking towards the camera with a serious expression. They are all holding forks and knives. There are white cups and plates of food on the table.

Qualitative Comments: In general, the first five to six years of life are the most important for the development of the child. The first year is the most important. The first year is the most important. The first year is the most important.