This Hospital was organised by Miss M. Bromley-Martin for French wounded soldiers.

It has been authorised by the Anglo-French Committee, and accepted by the French Government, and by General Joffre as a Military Hospital.

The Management and Staff are entirely British, and the surgical stores are sent out from England.

The wounded are brought to the Hospital from the front, about 60 miles distant, by rail and motor ambulance. A large proportion of the cases are very serious, and the French Authorities are more than satisfied with the results obtained.

The Hospital, except for the customary grant from the French Government of two francs per day, per patient, is supported entirely by voluntary contributions. In consequence of the recent terrible fighting near Verdun, the Hospital is full to overflowing, and its resources are being taxed to the utmost.

Unless money is forthcoming, the work cannot continue, and our French friends, who have given of their best, must be refused our help, at the moment when they most need it. Will you do what you can for them, by giving a donation, or a monthly subscription however small?

All contributions will be most gratefully acknowledged by ~~from Collectors by Viscountess de Vesci, at 20, Elvaston Place, S.W., for R. Martin-Holland, C.B., Hon. Treasurer, 68, Lombard Street, E.C.~~

The Hon. Mrs. VICTOR RUSSELL. Hon. Sec.

The following, from "THE TIMES" of March 7th, speaks for itself:—

"The endurance of the French troops during this battle has been beyond all praise. After two days and two nights' continuous fighting they still maintained their dash and unshakable moral . . . I spoke to a wounded man just back from the firing trench. He had lost his right hand, and I condoled with him on his bad luck. 'That is nothing,' he replied cheerfully; 'I offered my life to France, and she has only taken my hand, so there I gain.'"

It is for soldiers such as these that we ask your help.
