ANOTHER VICTIM OF THE OIL MENACE

PLEASE HELP US FIGHT THE BATTLE OF THE BEACHES

The cartoon on the front of this leaflet is as true today as it was when Illingworth drew it nearly ten years ago—waste oil dumped in the sea is a menace which ruins holidays, brings a slow and terrible death to sea-birds, and spoils fishing and yachting. Much has been done to reduce the amount of oil pollution, but much still remains to be done. The Co-ordinating Advisory Committee on Oil Pollution of the Sea is intensifying its urgent campaign to end the oil menace, but more money is needed to help in its work.

"I should like to stress how very deserving are their efforts of the fullest praise and support."

Lord Chesham, the Government spokesman, referring to the Co-ordinating Advisory Committee on Oil Pollution of the Sea in the House of Lords on 1st December, 1960.

Will you please give a donation, large or small, to help fight the Battle of the Beaches?

Cheques and Postal Orders to the Oil Pollution Fund:
