Dec. 3rd. 1914

Dear Sir David,

I am enclosing herewith a box of the cigars I mentioned to you yesterday. I am afraid you will not find their flavour equal to a Havana; but I sincerely trust they will relieve your trouble at night.

I selected six small objects from the Museum yesterday, together with some of the models of Japanese extemporized stretchers, which are most interesting. I am sending for the things to-day and have insured them for £ 29.0.0. I can assure you that we shall take the greatest possible care of them while in our possession and return them to you by hand when the special exhibition is over.

Thanking you very cordially for your kind assistance and trusting you will soon be quite fit and well again

I am,

Yours faithfully,

Dear Mr. Thompson,

Thank you very much for your letter and box of "cigars" received this morning.

I have received a list of the articles you selected from the Museum here, which were removed yesterday.

When your letter arrived, I had already written Dr. Balfour and informed him that the amount, viz. £29, for which you have insured the objects, would be quite sufficient.

Thanking you for your kind expressions,

I am,

Yours very truly,

David Bruce
