I have tried very hard to trace the writer, Ignatius L. De Abren, of the accompanying letter from British Guiana, but without success. We cannot find him in any commercial or professional directory and the letter would simply call for regret that we have no books in stock to send him, if it were not that he offered valuable information in regard to medical traditions.

Perhaps you would like to take up this matter?

Dear Sir,

Your letter of October 25th addressed to Mr. Henry S. Wellcome who is at present travelling abroad has been forwarded to me, and I am pleased to know that you are interested in the little book on 'Ancient Cymric Medicine'. I have pleasure in sending you a further brochure on 'Anaesthetics ancient and modern' which is the only other publication of the kind which is at present in print. We shall much appreciate your kindness if you will send us any information you can with regard to medical traditions and treatment in the district in which you live.

I am,

Faithfully yours,
