Dear Sir,

Thanks for your kind letter of 27th ult.

I shall be pleased to call upon you tomorrow

and I hope you will be there. Yours Truly

Dear Sir,

Will you kindly inform me if you know of any representation or picture in ancient Chinese literature of Maize or Indian Corn? We have in the Wellcome Historical Medical Museum a copy of the great Chinese Encyclopaedia of Botany and Materia Medica, which contains what appears to be a representation of Maize.

If you could call and see it any time during the week, I should be greatly obliged. Kindly let me have a post-card saying when you will come and I will make a point of being in.

Thanking you in anticipation,

I am,

Faithfully yours,

Dear Sir,

I regret I was unable to be here on Saturday afternoon when you called to see the model of the old Apothecary's Shop. My man has told me of the suggestions you so kindly made and for which I tender you my cordial thanks.

I enclose herewith a copy of the 'Pharmacists' Diary' which I think may prove useful to you.

Again thanking you for your kindness,
