Dear Sirs.

In reply to your letter of the 10th inst., you are quite correct in your surmise that a Tundish is a funnel. It is best described as a kind of wooden funnel like a small inverted bucket with hoops round it, and a tube at the bottom which was used for pouring liquids into a cask. As I daresay you may be aware, the word 'tun' meant to pour liquor into casks or bottles. 'Tunner' was another old name for a funnel for filling barrels or bottles, generally used by brewers. The only reference that I know of at present of a Tundish (as my reference books are not accessible just now) is in Shakespeare's play 'Measure for Measure'; Act III, Sc. 2 "For filling a bottle with a tun-dish."

I trust this description will answer your purpose, or if it is not exactly what you want, I shall be glad if you will let me know.

I am,

Faithfully yours,

C.J.S.T.

Dear Sir/-

Could you kindly tell us where we could find a Reference to what we think is an old method used by Pharmaceutical Chemists, of Filtering a Material for a Tundish ? We take it Tundish would probably be a Funnel, but would be glad if you could favor us with full details.

With thanks in anticipation, and compliments - Enclosing stamped envelope. Hoping you will not mind our We are, Yours faithfully.
