The image shows the front cover of an antique book. The cover is decorated with a traditional marbled paper pattern, often referred to as a 'stone' or 'shell' pattern. This pattern consists of irregular, overlapping shapes in shades of reddish-brown, blue, and yellowish-tan, creating a complex, organic texture. A small, rectangular, cream-colored paper label is affixed to the center of the cover. The label is slightly aged and has a simple, elegant border. It contains the text 'Table of' on the first line and 'J, S, J, S.' on the second line, both written in a cursive hand. The book's spine is visible on the left side, showing some wear and the underlying board material. The overall appearance is that of a well-used, historical volume.

22 Jan. 1741-2. The Duke of Montagu was please to ask me (at the Egyptian Society) my opinion of the intent of the famous Sistrum; & why so great a regard was had to it; by the ancient Egyptians: particularly, why is Isis so frequently represented, with this instrument in her hand? to which I answer, to this effect.

Isis is the great guardian genius of the land of Egypt; what we christians, should call the guardian angel; commission'd for that purpose, from the Supreme Being. they chose to make her female, to show the fecundity of the country.
 she holds the Sistrum in her hand, as a prophylactic symbol, of her driving away all noxious, evil powers, from the land committed to her charge.

In most ancient times, when the patriarchs sacrific'd; they laid the slain animals on the altar, & waited, praying: till God was please to show his acceptance of their duty, by sending a fire from heaven, to consume the sacrifice. whilst they thus awaited the divine pleasure, they hold a Sistrum or rattle, to make an uncouth noise withal, to fright away the birds; that usually attended to snatch ~~away~~ the flesh from the altar. thus we read in Genesis XV. 11. when Abraham sacrific'd; he did so. whence the egyptians made it a religious instrument of so high account, to drive off evil.

The dissection of the table of Isis. TAB. II.

The principal deities worshiped in the Isis Mysteries were Isis, Osiris or Orus, & Hermes.
Their symbolic images were carried in procession by the priests, attended by those initiated.

great genius Aristotle, for this reason, held the world to be eternal. for tho' he acknowledged a God, yet he c<sup>d</sup>. not think, so glorious a Being c<sup>d</sup>. be unactive, for infinite ages. & he knew no other way, how he c<sup>d</sup>. act, but in producing Creation: having no knowledg of his producing his own likeness, or generation of the Son.

we must begin to explain this mystical table, from the center, which exhibits the fountain of all existence dispensing being, all around it, to the circumferences. His picture on the upper wall of This adylum <sup>ubi</sup> is a square of 12 cubits; as Solomons, of 20 cubits. They were cubes; scum scorum.
This is the Egyptian picture of the supreme, unoriginated origin of all things. represented as female, to show the immense fecundity of his nature: internal fecundity, as well as external. internal fecundity is the multiplying his own species; divine filiation, from him self; divine emanation from him & the son.
external fecundity is creation. this is in time; the former was preeternal: coeval with him self. for it could not be, that the father of being, should ever be barren, solo & inactive; or that ever there should have been a time, when goodness its self had not acted. therefore necessarily, from before all eternity of duration, he produced his own likeness, or begat his son; multiply'd himself personally; as the object of his love, & beneficence. creation must necessarily be in time: but filiation, producing his like must necessarily be eternal; for deity includes eternity of existence.

for want of this train of thinking, that great

This is the Egyptian picture of the second person in the deity, which they call Orus, the son of the Supreme, Isis. he has the horn on his temples, meaning the anointed, Messiah. the cuckoo headed staff in his hand shows him the creator of the infinite variety of beautiful productions, which adorn the material world. his tutulus is very extraordinary, above his head, meaning in general, his providing for all creatures. he sits on an invisible throne all white, denoting his unseen power & dominion. a lyon is painted comonly, under the throne of Orus, says Plutarch, Is. c. Os. <sup>which</sup> he has a black veil on, meaning somewhat mysterious. I take it to mean the sun, the deputy of Orus in continuing the form of the world, as he created it. the cat which is an imitation of the lyon, is the moon.

The kneeling figure under his seat, with the lotus plant in his hand, indicates Orus to be a divine person, & ought to be worshipped.

This is the Egyptian picture of the third person in the deity. The mask is of the sacred bird Ibis, or stork. He is Hermes, the interpreter & messenger of the Gods, Mercury of the Latins. Ptha, Thoth, & Tautus, agathodemon of the Egyptians. His staff has the head of Isis on it, showing his origin from the Supreme parent. The tutulus on his head has 2 flames of fire proceeding from it; & two hawk's feathers on the outside, to show the subtlety, power, & efficacy, & the sublimity of his operations. Two asps with circles over their heads mean life; & life divine, which he imparts to all. The great globe upon the shoaf shows his divinity.

his seat is choquord; meaning what Moses writes, the spirit of god moved upon the face of hylean matter, the elemental fund of creation. Thus Orphous of him, in his hymn.

Thou who holdest the reins of the world, shining on thy variegated seat; under his seat two crocodiles, emblem of the evil principle, which this deity subjugates.

So far the empyreal world, containing the three persons of the deity.

That genius before the altar with a goat, & the two attendant genij are the triad of capricorn, or of the south. the goat was the winter sacrifice, at the suns tropical entrance.

The next triad is of aries, which is picture'd above. the baboon underneath indicates the vernal equinox. the crescent on his head with an asp in it, is the new moon nearest that equinox, when they began the year; in imitation of the hebrews. the other person of this triad, see in tab. VIII. by the side of the door.

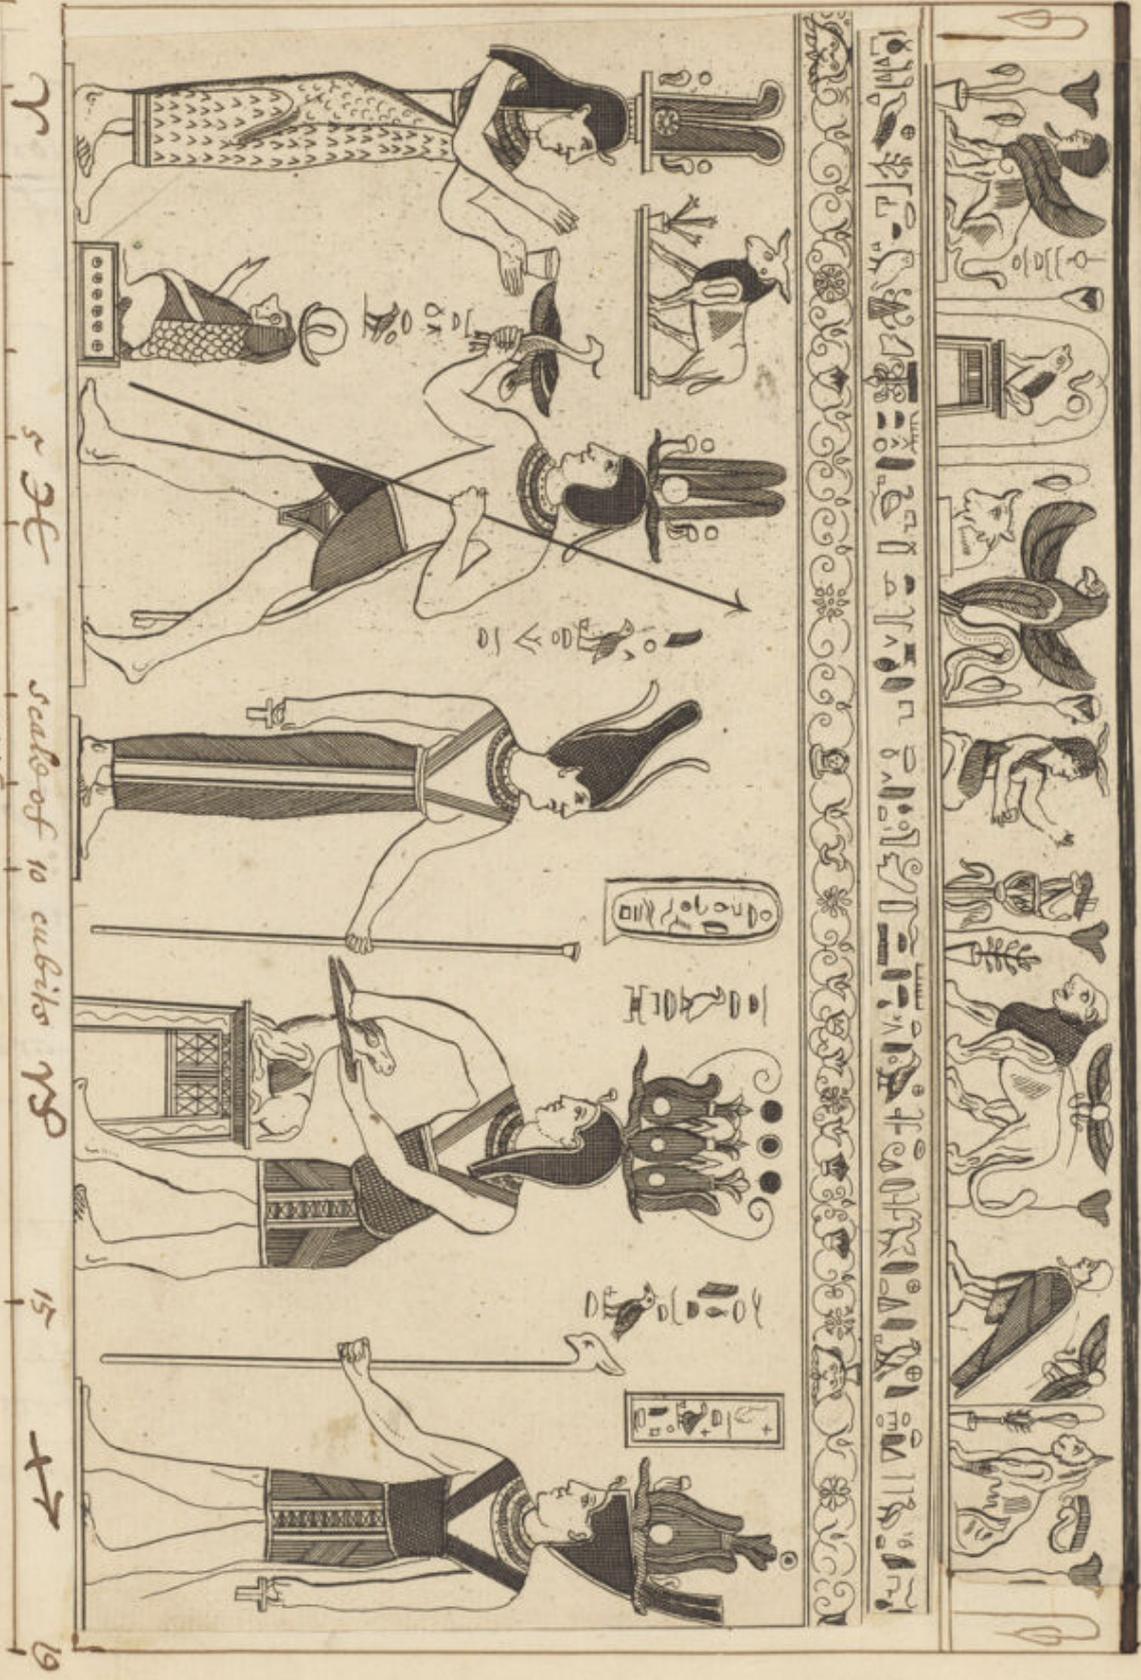

at this time of the year, the ram was the universal sacrifice.

These human figures 12 in number, which equal the 12 zodiacal houses, are divided into triads; in conformity to the supreme triad of the empyreal world: two looking toward one in the middle.

The goat to be sacrific'd is upon an altar in form of a gate; this gate is that of the tropic of  $\text{rs}$  the divine gate, thro' which only the gods can pass; according to Homer, in his description of the Antrum nympharum or cave of souls, analogous to the mystic temple before us.

This is the other longest side of the Temple, the sanctum; or place for the superior order of priests to officiate in. in that of Moses, & of Solomon, the show-bread table stood here, the candlestick & the altar of incense. the sanctum represents the sidereal world. this side comprehends the triad of the or northern tropic  $\odot$ . when the sun enters the flux of the Nile begins. one of the figures belonging to this triad is on the end of the sanctum, by the door, Tab. VIII. this tropic is here pictur'd by the hawk-headed hyon sitting; a crescent & black circle & vail on his head: all denoting the obscurity of that strange appearance, the overflowing of the Nile.

The genius behind him has the star Sirius over her head, denoting the rising of that star, when the flux begins.

The other 3 figures is the triad autumnal equinoctial; or of  $\text{♋}$ : to winter.

The figures are dispos'd male, & female: as those celestial signs of which they are the rectors, genii, angels, contribute toward generation & production in the terrestrial world.

This is the lower end of the sanctum; the door opening into the porch. The two figures belong to the triads adjoining, on the two sides of this place.

The figure with a thyrsus or crooked staff in her hand; an asp on her tutulus, or head dress, belongs to the triad of leo or ~~the~~ summer quarter; importing the excessive heat of the dog-days season. The star Sirius is in the head dress of the figure on the other side of leo, Tab. VII. to which this belongs.

The gonius on the other side the door, with a feather in one hand, a cup in the other, belongs to the triad of aries Tab. VI.

The bat over the door, means the regular conduct of Providence thro' the universe, in time; the orderly sailing of the magni machina mundi. The incomparable benefits we receive from the ox-kind made them constitute this animal for the symbol, & living representative of the beneficent deity; particularly, according to Alian, of the Supremo.

Porphyry in antro nympharum from Dionysius, gives this reason for these boats; because, says he, the prophet says, the spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters.

This plate is preparatory to the understanding the figure of Horus in the ensuing plate. 5. march 1741-2 at the Egyptian Society this net was produced, made of curious beads of different colors, wh<sup>ch</sup> D<sup>r</sup>. Perry took from off the breast of a mummy. the upper part went round its neck. it was in form of a sachel, or hunting bag; such as gunners put their fowl in. I soon discern'd it to be the net like sachel thrown over the shoulder of the Egyptian little images, found in the breasts of mummies: as pictured in Tab. X. tis one of the pastoral utensils, the bag, which they carry'd their provision in, whilst in the field attending their flocks.

The crook, the whip & this bag were pictur'd on the corpses of Jacob, & of Joseph, as belonging to their occupation, Shepherds. but when the Egyptians perceiv'd this people were the peculiar favorites of heaven; they took up the same method of embalming their bodies ordinarily; took these utensils into the number of their hieroglyphics; & constituted Joseph the god, or genius of resurrection. & hence these utensils obtain'd their prophylactic virtue; & were laid on the embalm'd bodies, in order to preserve them from all evil powers, from corruption, too much heat, or moisture; from Typhon or the devil. & for that purpose, was this find not put about the neck of this body.

Enter we from the sidereal world into the porch. This is a square;  $\square$  represents the material world, where we mortals dwell. Horus stands in the gate, dressed in a net-like garment: the reason is to be learnt from the preceding page: as also from that following. he is to be considered as the genius that conducts souls descending from the sidereal world into this, in order to life. therefore he is dressed like an infant, in swaddling clothes. hence in the Eleusinian mysteries, he was called Iacchus puer, & was produced as a newborn child. 2. he is the genius of resurrection, conducts souls back again, toward a future life, called regeneration. for which reason he is dressed in form of a mummy, or embalmed body. I saw a mummy bought by my fr. Mr Clark, thus dressed: now S<sup>r</sup>. H. Sloan has it.

Horus is the rex sacrorum, behold first at the entering of a novice. ask such a one, where stood the rex sacrorum? he answers in the east.

The architrave of the gate is adorned with circles variously divided between flowers; an ornament not without an important meaning. they are 52 in number designing the weeks in a year. nature's various process in the generation of animals is therein accomplished, by a determinate number of weeks. Providence stamping a character natural, as well as religious, on that division of time.

when Jacob ordered his body to be buried in the land of Canaan, it was necessary to embalm his body. & after Joseph was dead, his body was embalm'd, & kept in a coffin, till it was carryed many years after, into Canaan. This usage of the holy patriarchal family; with whom, the Egyptians observed, God was particularly present; gave the Egyptians the notion of embalming their bodies, & putting them into a coffin, as we see them, this day.

and this gave the Egyptians the strongest assurance of a future resurrection: not only of their immaterial part, but of the body also. whence we find in Job, who lived not far from Egypt, & not long after Jacob, that remarkable account of it. & tho' after " my skin, worms destroy this body, yet in my " flesh shall I see God; meaning a revivis-" cence even of his body.

This embalm'd body of Jacob had his pastorilial onsigns, the crook, the whip & the not. & hence the Egyptians borrow'd it to their Florus: among the hieroglyphics.

This is the triad painted on the side of the porch, facing the north. Isis terrestris sits. The seat is the northern terminus, the tropic of cancer, is made in chequer-work, white & black, to show her, the genius of the material world. it intimates too, the reciprocation, attraction & repulsion in the parts of matter; whence the motion, that preserves the world in a perpetual change; which is the basis of its continuance.

her garment is adorned with the seed-work of ideas, white, full of crosses bifurcate & meaning the redundant productions of this season of the year, for which reason, the pater or rex of this triad is female, importing fecundity. the bands below her seat, means the same connection of the parts of matter. the mons of this triad holds forth a young pigeon, the customary sacrifice of the summer solstice. on his head, a basket-form cap, a gourd, & jondril, all meaning plenty.

the poestas of this triad behind the seat has, on, a tunic made of paps, all nourishing providence! the great hierogram over his head, the circle & two asps seems to have given rise to the crab, in the colossal constellations; the midsummer sign, together with the pigeons heads.

This too is the gate of Proserpine, of Hades, of the mystic Temple; the outer gate, but the inner side of it: the great western gate of the world, toward the sun setting, which all must pass: what separates us between the present, & the next world.

The figure standing in it is Hecate, the moon, opposite to Orus, the sun. She has the face or mask of a cat. a cat is a diminutive lion. the lion is the symbol of the sun: therefore a cat is the symbol of the moon. She is the mo<sup>r</sup>. of generation of animals, & vegetables. She opens, & closes the door of the mystic temple.

We see a dog-headed icunculus before her. This is the watchful keeper of the door, the Corboras of the Greeks, janitor Orci.

The two other persons of the triad regard generation, initiation, regeneration. in the corner, is an icunculus of Orus. it means an infant to be introduced into the world; or a novice, who is to be initiated; or a regenerate to be transmitted into the other world.

Above, is a cat, with the fistrum, & may be called the rattle of the infants: or the sound of it is prophylactic, & drives off all evil powers. it likewise keeps off the profane. procul este profani.

So in imitation of this, our Egyptian temple

These ornaments mean to express the benignity

LIB. VIII

This is the covering of the floor of that part of our mystic temple, which represents the celestial world, the world of planets & stars, the heavenly bodies, as we call them: the heaven as the Scripture expresses it: the empyreal world is therein call'd, the heaven of heavens.

The Egyptians consider'd & pictur'd the Supreme being in regard to the places where his power is exerted, or what we call omnipresence, in this manner. his power under the earth they pictur'd by the head of hecat, the foster mother that nourishes & produces the vitality of the vegetable world. his power on earth they express'd by the ox, the animal that tills the ground & breeds out the corn. This is Apis or the father, Abroch as Josephs tiller was. & by Apis, Joseph is originally meant.

The Supreme deity, in quality of the superintendent of the sidereal world, they picture by the form of the hawk. as he presides, by his ministring spirits in the angelical world, he is drawn in the divine form of a man or a woman: for they mind not the sexes, in these metaphysical affairs. as the Supreme acts in his own kingdom, they picture him by a circle: which is the most simple figure.

These sublime powers are often express'd by different figures: & often are compounded & mixt, as we see in the table before us.

discern thus much, that all the figures are express'd precisely in the same posture: tho' their garment is drawn artfully over them: & over their feet are cover'd. They stand with their feet in a square.
They likewise express a square with their arms, the right arm laid horizontally over the breast in a right angle. the left arm hangs down perpendicular.

When one that was to be initiated was brought into the porch of the mystic temple, he was there instructed in the nature of the mysterious religion which he was going to profess: in the philosophy of the nature of the world, & in the sublimer principles of morality, which he was now to become acquainted withal.

When, as an infant, he enter'd thro' the gate of Glorus, into the temple its self, or the sanctum, wh is the action of regeneration, he beheld the priests standing on the carpet TAB. XV. all in the uniform posture here express'd. after initiation, our novice is set in the same posture. it means, that the highest perfection of our nature, is an uniform conformity to the supreme all perfect exemplar.

The porch of our mystic Temple represents the material world, our world, the earth. The number 4, & the Square, among the Egyptians meant the four elements, or the matter of which this world is composed. Their being chequered, black & white imports, that the conservation of the world depends on the perpetual change of these elements & their infinite mixtures.

ask a person who had been introduced hither, what it was paved withal? he would answer, with Squares.

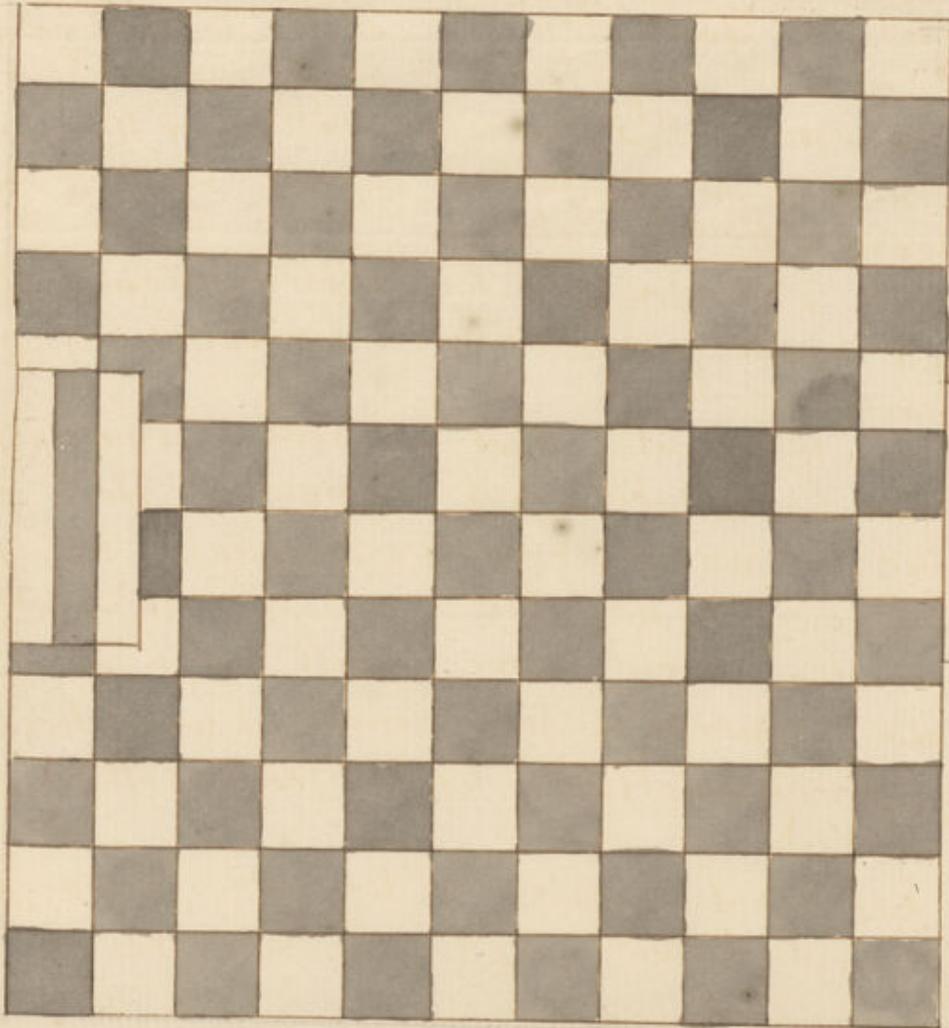

it is to be noted, that particular is not pictured in the Isiac table: but I formed it, from considering the matter carefully. the reason why this is not drawn in the table, is because it is not enough picturesque. it would have spoiled the beauty of the table. & perhaps, they thought it would have been too open & notorious: have discovered the purpose of the table, too much.

but the fabricators of the table, have given sufficient intimation of it, by thus adorning both the seats of the geni sitting in this porch. Tab. XI. & XII. hence the Pythagoreans call it the sacred Square: their oath: which they took, at initiation, kneeling on this square. here they knotted. in the celestial world they stood. in the adytum the high priest sat.

This is the more elegant way of the Greeks, in representing the Egyptian sculptures, & cloathing them after the Greek mode. as to the persons too, in the boat they are represented various. but in general, we may certainly conclude, they meant the regular & unison conduct, the moving hand of Providence, in the orderly government of the world.

We may further, very reasonably infer, that by placing three persons in this boat, they regarded the most ancient notion of the deity subsisting in different personalities: which, no doubt, was first revealed to the ancestors of mankind. & that necessarily: when they were to be made acquainted with the divine purpose of sending the Messiah to heal the mischiefs brought into the world, thro' the corruption of our nature. for they must be convinced, that the Messiah was a divine person, or he could not restore the golden age, our primitive purity, & cancel the guilt of the sins of the whole world.

This is the outward front or entrance into our Temple, inclosed in woods, in a secret recess: distant from a city or habitation: as all temples of old generally were. The dogs head knocker on the door. 3 knocks of which gave the mythologists the notion of Cerberus the three headed dog of hell. over the door is the boat of Jupiter Ammon: with two heads. by the boat they meant the smooth, unseen conduct of Providence guiding the regimen of the great machine of the world. by the two headed ram they understood the different personalities in the deity, as in general by all the figures of Janus, Coecrops &c. they are the first notions of religion represented in the first modes of idolatry.

in the most ancient covered temples, perhaps this figure of the ram was raised in basso relievo, that in solid gold. hence came the story of the Argonautic youths going to steal the golden ram from the temple of Colchos.

Curtius IV. 20. writes, that in the processions of Jupiter Ammon in Libya, when Alexander visited the place; they carried a golden boat on the shoulders of the priests, wherein was the figure of a ram. thus they varied the custom, of the Jews carrying the ark of the LORD.

Ifis the guardian genius of Egypt is here represented. kneeling as imploring power from the deity. the lotus plant on her head, shows, that she acts according to the divine architype or exemplar. she is dressed like the egyptian priests & priestesses in a pure, thin linnen garment.

she holds on her lap, a bier or barys, the emblem of resurrection. in it is the image of the patriarch Jacob, whose body was embalmed & carryed to be deposited, in his grandfathers tomb in the land of Canaan. this gave the Egyptians the notion of embalming their bodies, to preserve them against the resurrection, when they were to be reunited to their souls.

Jacob has on his head the priestly diadem, the tiara. for the Egyptians took him for a priest. for he blessed Pharaoh twice. Gen. XLVII. 7. & 10. he has the whip, the crook, the shepherds pouch, as being a shepherd. Gen. XLVII. 3. he is represented as a body embalmed: & put into a barys, the very egyptian word in the hebrew original.

This statue was set at the tomb of some of their kings or great men: to testify their faith in a future state. to protect the body from all Typhonian power, corruption, too much heat or moisture.

Diodor. Sic. says, tis the image of truth, that hangs about the neck of the high priest.

for the most part, these hieroglyphics are well explain'd by Kircher, who is elaborate upon them.

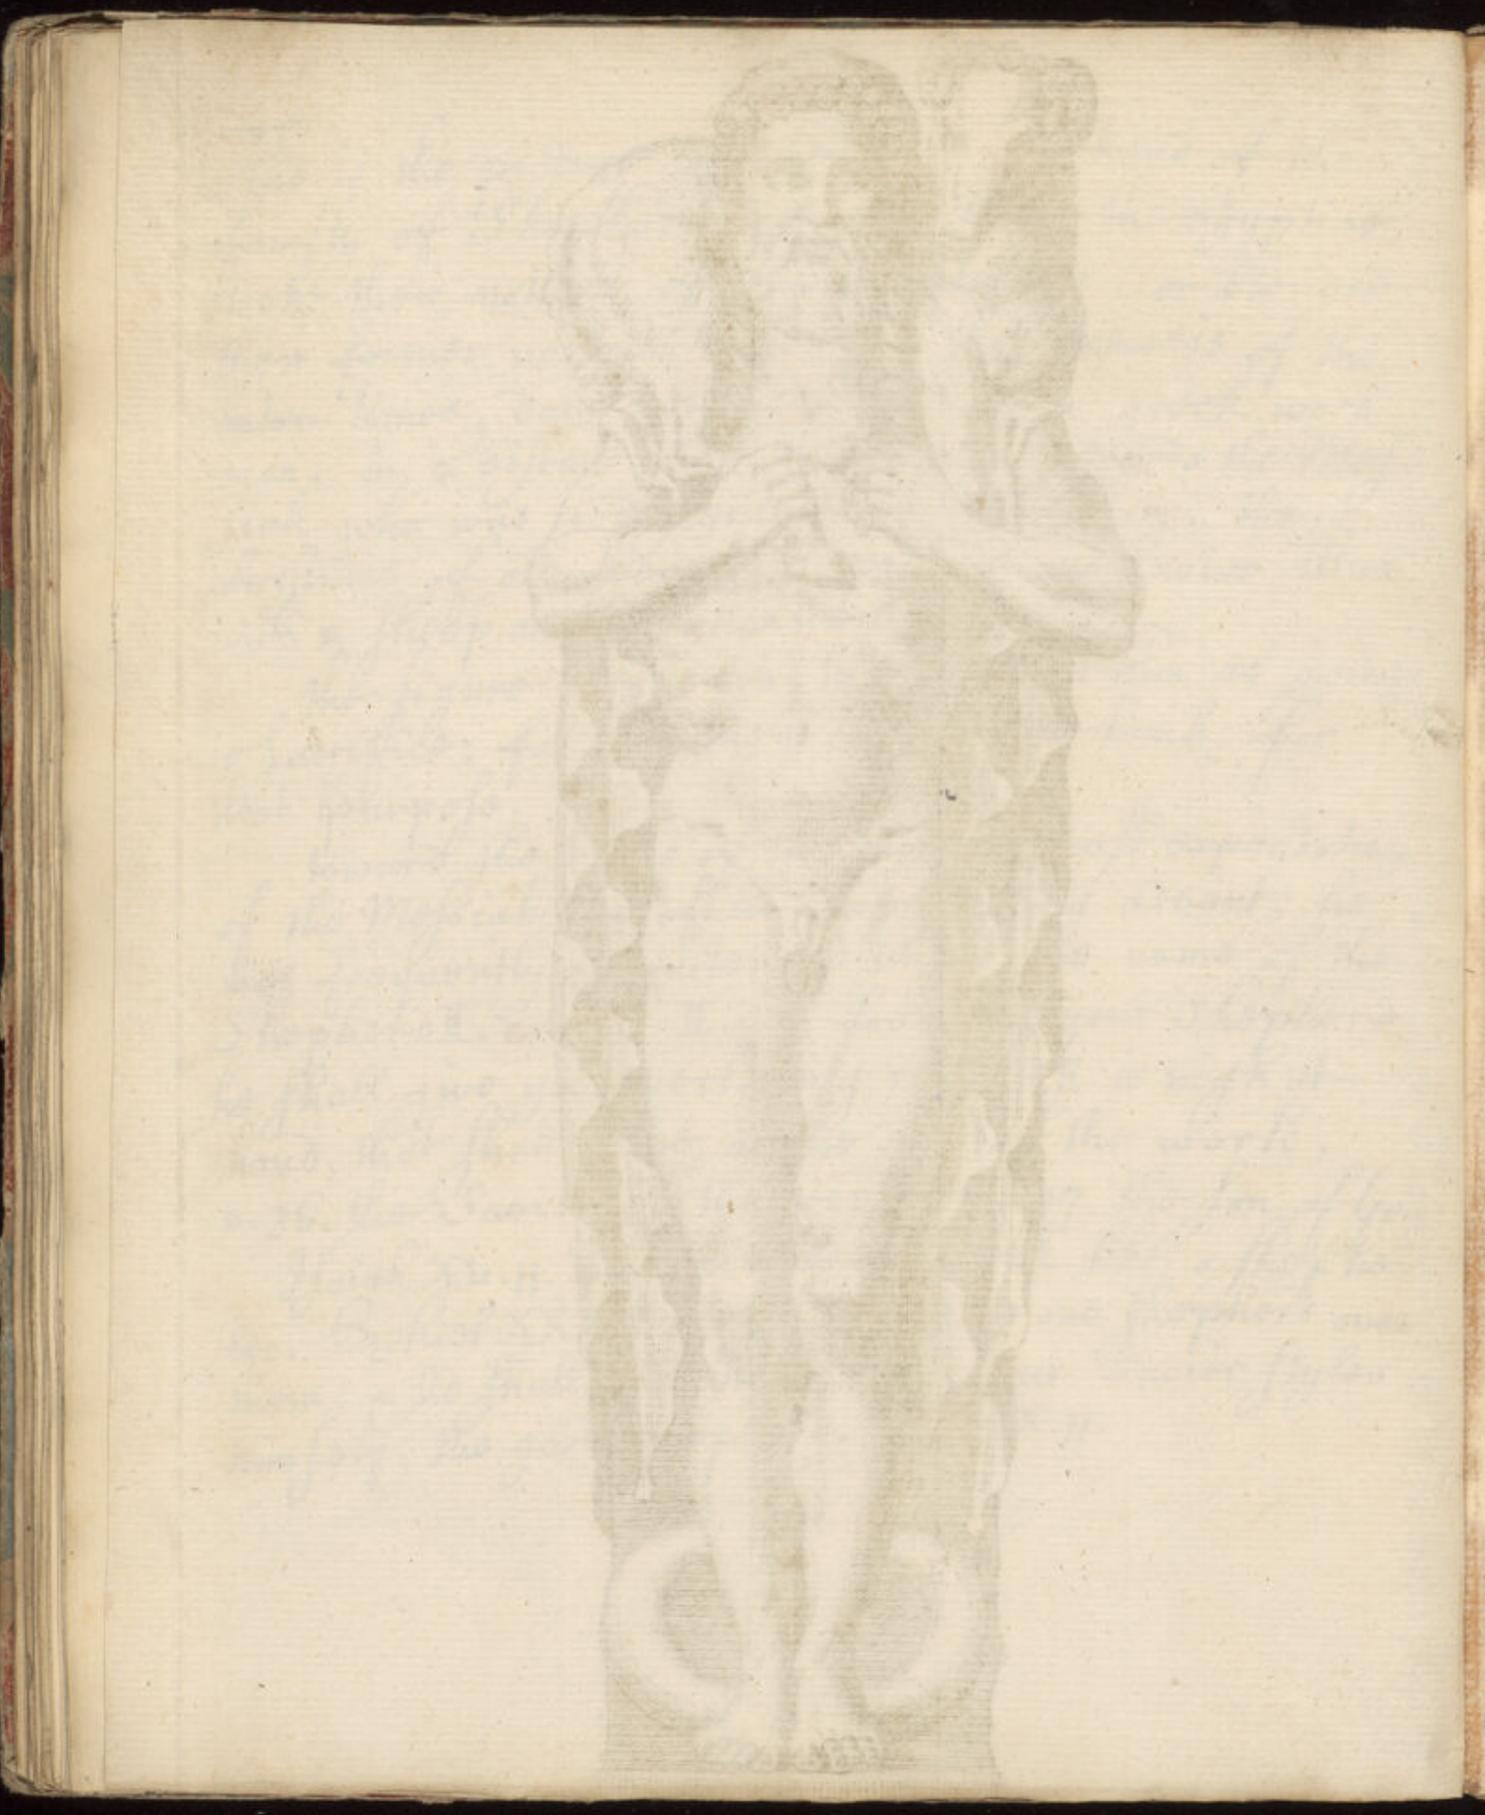

This is the picture of Abraham, the head of the family of Shepherds. from hence the Egyptians took their notions of Jupiter Ammon; or blended their former notions therewith. The statue is of the later times, done with delicacy by a Greek workman. in a distant view it likewise regards the Messiah who was to descend from Abraham. The Christians of old frequently pictured our Savior thus with a sheep on his shoulders.

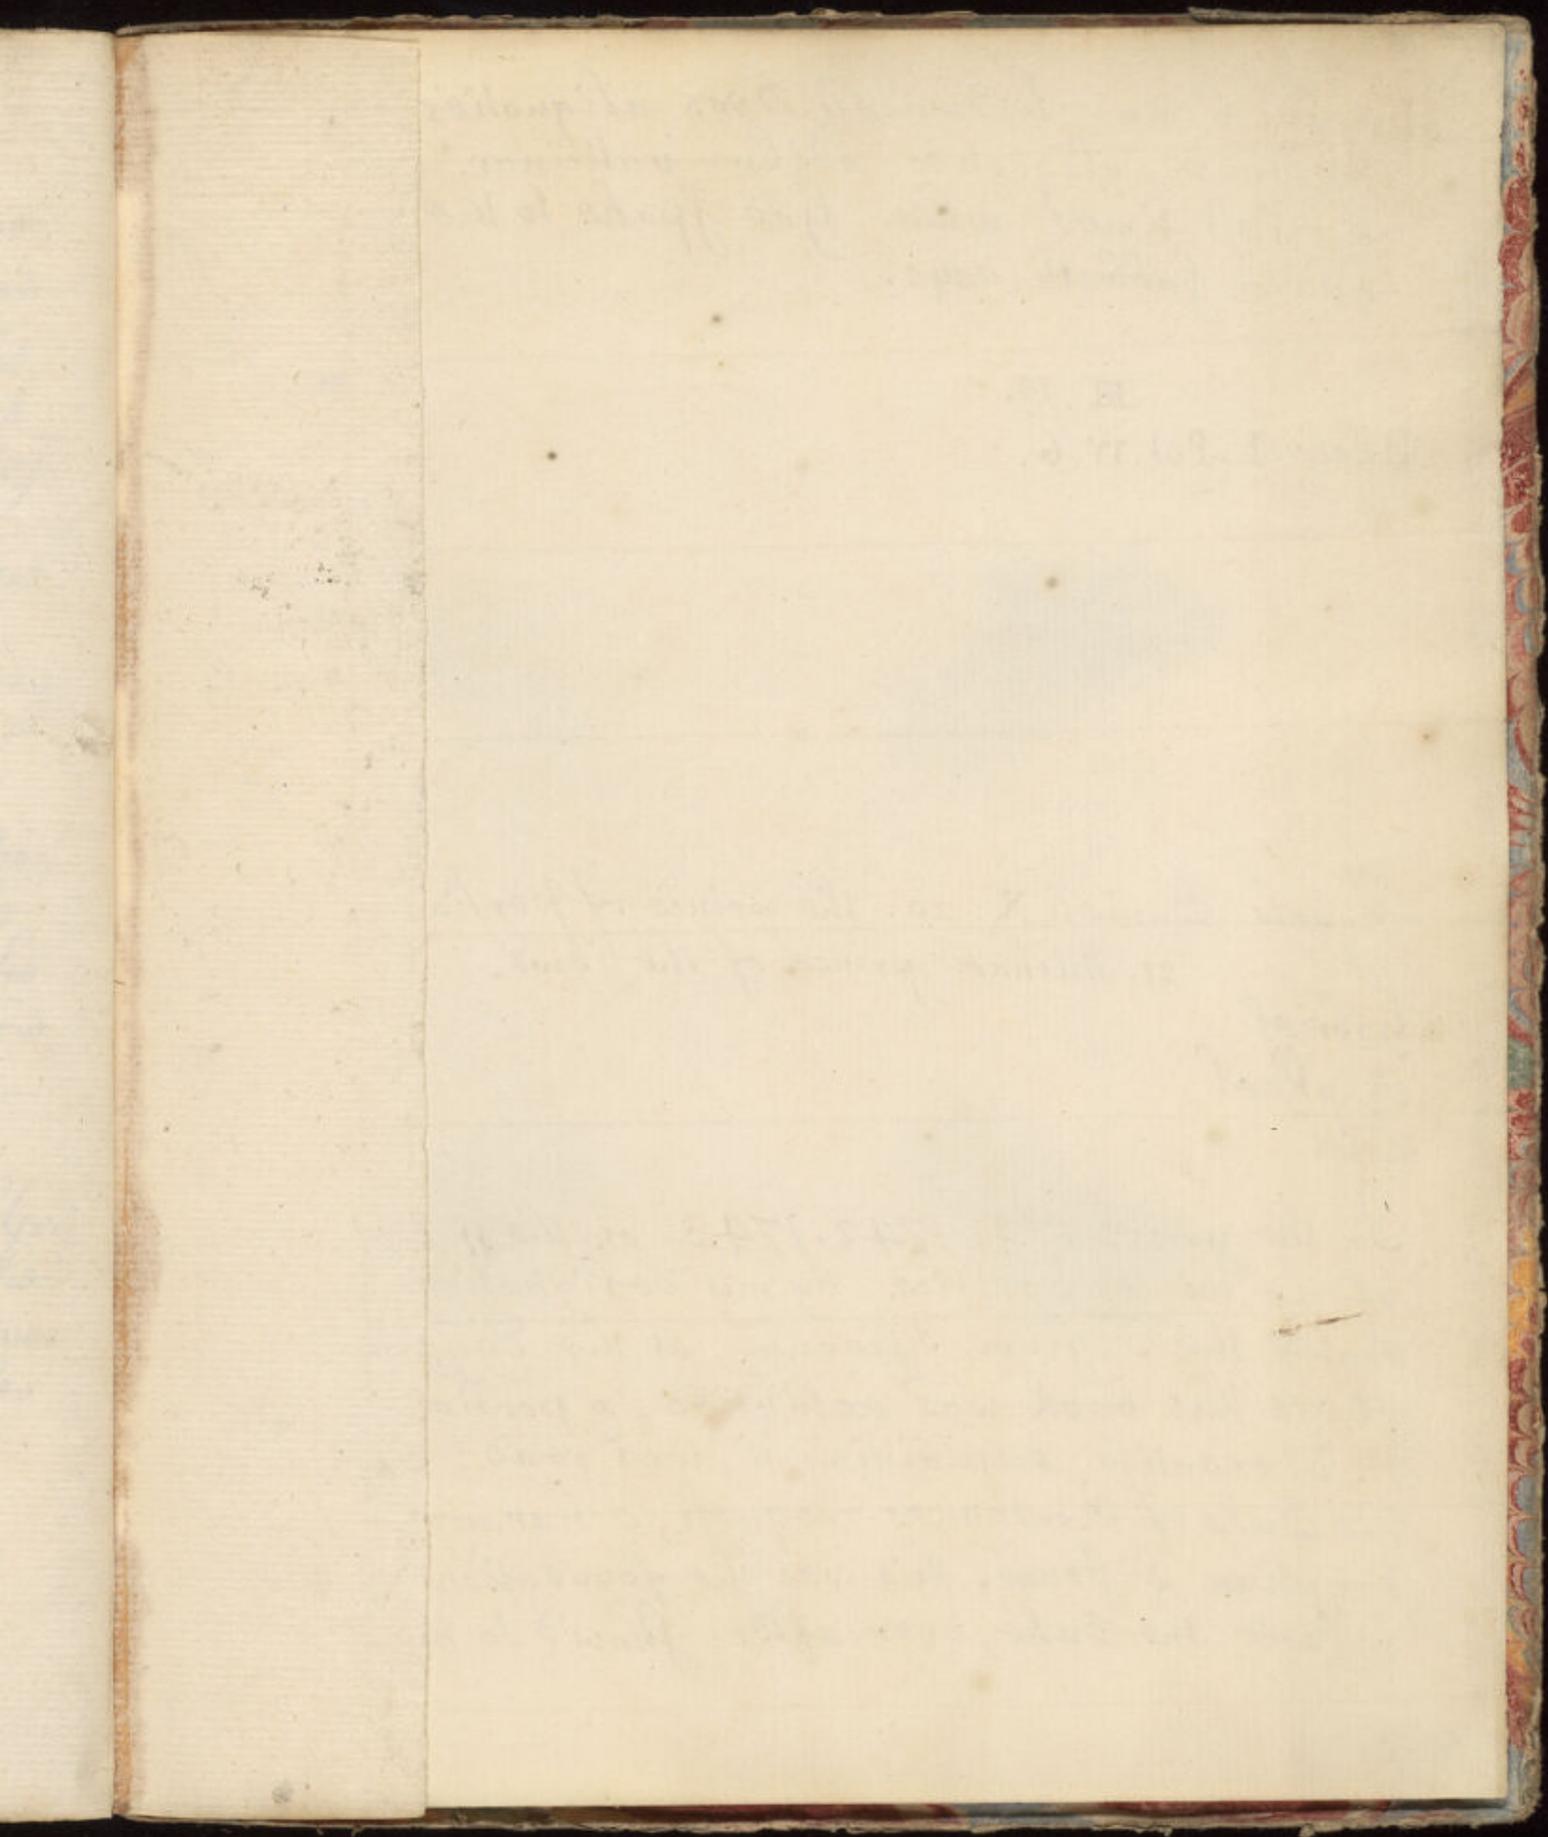

The figure means too to represent him as going to sacrifice: for thus they carryed the lamb, for that purpose.

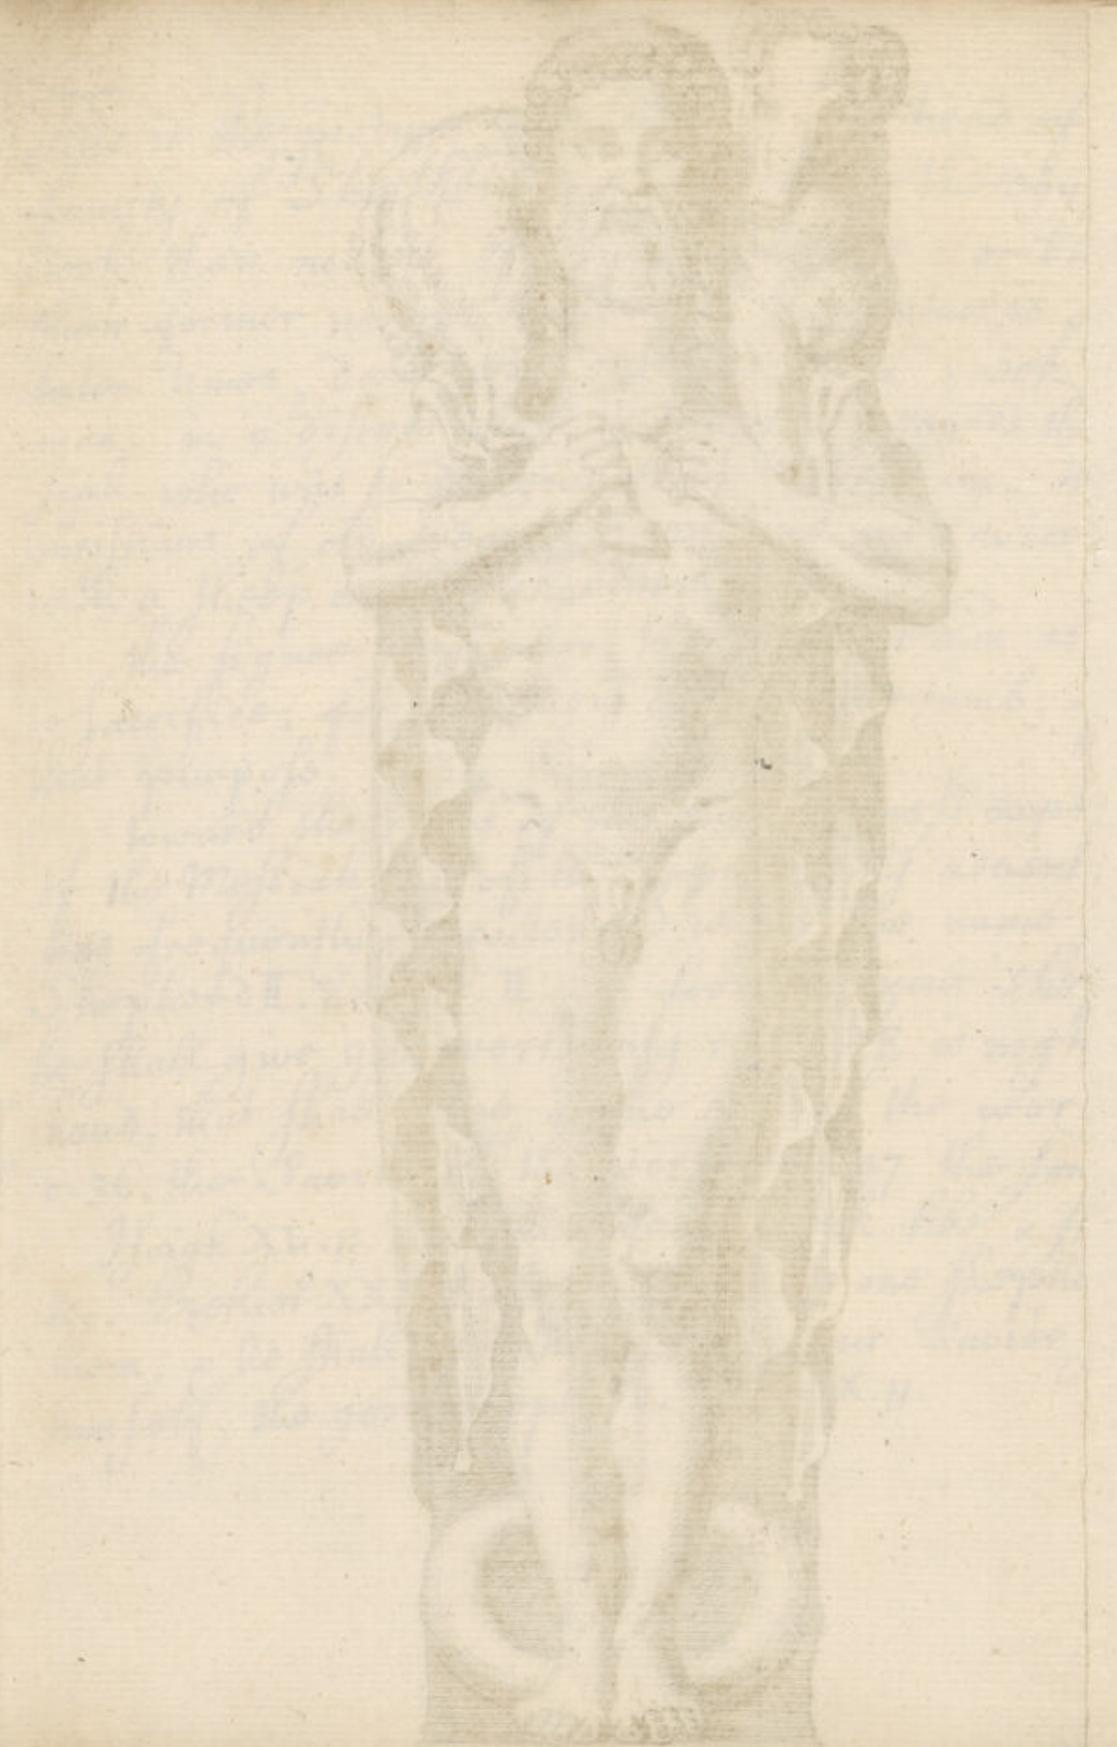

toward the times of the more earnest expectation of the Messiah, & of his approaching advent; he was frequently characteriz'd under the name of the Shepherd II. Esdras II. 34. look for your shepherd, he shall give you everlasting rest. HE is nigh at hand, that shall come at the end of the world. v. 36. the Savior of the world. v. 47. the son of God. Isaiah XL. 11. HE shall feed his flock like a shepherd. &c. Ezekiel XXXIV. 23. I will set up one shepherd over them, & he shall feed them, &c. our Savior styles himself, the good shepherd. John X. 11.

opinion of the intent of the famous System; which he great a regard was had to it; by the said System: particularly, what is the

I waited, perceiving: the God was pleased to show his acceptance of their duty, by sending a fire from heaven, to consume the sacrifices. which they then waited the divine pleasure, they laid a system or rather to make an uncorrupt noise with as to flight away the birds; that usually attended to scatter the flesh from the altar. This was said in Genesis XVII. 11. when Abraham sacrificed;
we do so. whereas the Egyptians made it a religion
