For Mr. Benjamin Jones 23
C-2 wife June 91

The first page of the manuscript, folio 2A, contains a large, dark ink blot at the top left corner. The text is written in a cursive script, likely from the 17th century. It begins with "The first page of the manuscript" and continues with several lines of text, including "The second page of the manuscript" and "The third page of the manuscript". The handwriting is somewhat faded and difficult to decipher in some places due to the age and condition of the document.

Quercus & c. are more common in the low-lying areas than in the high places. The latter are often very dry & barren. The forest is composed of oaks, pines, & poplars. The soil is sandy & light-colored. It is very fertile and produces much grain.

Masters are already too much in the power of their Servants, and if they charge their Masters with Adultery, Felony and even Treason, it is not in the power of the Master to defend himself against down right Swearing; Servants having those opportunities of the knowledge of times and places and Company, which cannot be denied or avoided, and which others have not, and many times being of ill Principles and desperate Fortunes, and of tempers very Revengeful, so that whoever turns away a Servant, he is in his power for his Estate, Honour and even Life it self. And therefore for the safety and freedom of Families in other Countryes, they are not permitted to be Evidence against their Masters, in any matter criminal whatsoever.

A more particular account of this matter is given by Magna Carta

the Duke had his then desired Advantages.

That after the execution of these Articles, the Dutchess sent for one Negus the Dukes principal Gentleman, and expressed herself very sensibly of the misfortunes of the Duke and her self, and desired Mr. Negus to tell the Duke, that she would avoid all company that should give him any offence, and that she would not so much as pay a visit, but where he liked; which Mr. Negus lately testified before the Lords, and that he acquainted the Duke with it, as also that she had several times told him, if she dyed first, she would leave the Duke her Estate.

 Lordships of the Witennesses, and what was Sworn by them, the 17th of February, they were pleased to reject the Bill without a second reading.

Notwithstanding which the Duke was again prevailed on the 22th December 1692 to exhibit a Second Bill in the House of Peers, to the same effect with his First, which after several debates was the 2d of January following again rejected.

Sometime after this, and for accomodating all differences between them, Proposals were made to the Dutchess, which after long agitation on 28th April 1694 were reduced into Writing, and executed by the Duke and Dutchess:
 The preamble of which Articles is in the words following. Whereas diverse Controversies, Debates, Demands, and Suites of several natures have for some time since been agitated, and continued between the said Duke and the said Dutchess his Wife, &c. unto all which it is at last held fitting (it being conducive to their respective quiet and ease) to have an end put, and the like for the future prevented. It is therefore hereby and by the Parties to these presents, declared and agreed in manner following; Whereby the Dutchess conveyed to the Duke's use the Mannor of Castle Ryding &c. And also the said Dutchess and her Trustees, Assigned their Interest in a Considerable Part of the Mannor of Sheffield in Yorkshire to the Duke, and that Deed Executed there-

Masters are already too much in the power of their Servants, and if they charge their Masters with Adultery, Felony and even Treason, it is not in the power of the Master to defend himself against down right Swearing; Servants having those opportunities of the knowledge of times and places and Company, which cannot be denied or avoided, and which others have not, and many times being of ill Principles and desperate Fortunes, and of tempers very Revengeful, so that whoever turns away a Servant, he is in his power for his Estate, Honour and even Life it self. And therefore for the safety and freedom of Families in other Countryes, they are not permitted to be Evidence against their Masters, in any matter criminal whatsoever.

Note also the Dutche's thinks, She as an English Subject has by Magna Carta the same Liberty of Justice as the Twenty years; besides very rich jewels, raiment, and other things of great value, which the Dutchess brought with her into the Duke's Family: And great Debts having been contracted, for the support of the Duke's Honour and his Service while he cohabited with the Dutchess, she hath since his Separation from her paid out of her own Estate.

That by the evil and malicious insinuations of the Dutchess's enemies, the Duke was prevailed on, to carry her then a Protestant into France, and to put her into a Monastery (where she could not be admitted without changing her Religion) and left her there on great assurances of sending for her home in a short time, and so parted with great expressions of Kindness.

That a considerable time after by the Dukes consent, she returned into England, and lived retiredly at Drayton in Northamptonshire, and at the time of the Revolution she again retired to France, where she continued till she heard of her Father's Imprisonment in the Tower, and then came back to England and lived privately till her Father obtained his Liberty, when she came home to him.

That the 8th of January 1691 the Duke was prevailed on by the instigation of her Enemies, to exhibit a Bill in the House of Peers, to the same effect with the Bill now depending, and diverse Witnesses were examined on both

England one Precedent, of a Bill exhibited in Parliament to dissolve a Marriage at the first instance, without any previous proceedings in the Ecclesiastical Courts;

(which in these Cases is the Law of the Land) and not above Five or Six Bills, in above 600 years to dissolve Marriages, or make Second Marriages good, after there had been a divorce in the Spiritual Courts, and those Bills too in Cases generally where the Husbands were men of known virtue.

The Duke should have endeavour'd a Divorce at Law, before he had attempted a Bill to dissolve the Marriage. For any Application to the Legislature, in matters of Private right is improper, because there are proper Judicatures, that give that remedy the Law allows.

To ask any thing of the Legislature beyond what the known Laws in force give, seems to be improper, because,

1. It is to make a Law in one persons Case, which without great difficulty will not be allowed in anothers.

2. It is to retrospect actions, and after the Fact to Augment or alter the Penalty. Our Laws are certain, and known to be antecedent to Facts, that persons may conform their actions to them.

3. The Courts and forms of Law are equally the Subjects right, and the application to the Legislature, takes away all that right Form and cergroups of the Witnesses, and what was Sworn by them, the 17th of February, they were pleased to reject the Bill without a second reading.

Notwithstanding which the Duke was again prevailed on the 22th December 1692 to exhibit a Second Bill in the House of Peers, to the same effect with his First, which after several debates was the 2d of January following again rejected.

Sometime after this, and for accomodating all differences between them, Proposals were made to the Dutchess, which after long agitation, on 28th April 1694 were reduced into Writing, and executed by the Duke and Dutchess: The Preamble of which Articles is in the words following. Whereas diverse Controversies, Debates, Demands, and Suites of several natures have for some time since been agitated, and continued between the said Duke and the said Dutchess his Wife, &c. unto all which it is at last held sitting (it being conducive to their respective quiet and ease) to have an end put, and the like for the future prevented. It is therefore hereby and by the Parties to these presents, declared and agreed in manner following; Whereby the Dutchess convey'd to the Duke's use the Mannor of Castle Ryssing &c. And also the said Dutchess and her Trustees, Assigned their Interest in a Considerable Part of the Mannor of Sheffield in Yorkshire to the use of the said Duke. So that by these Articles and that Deed Executed there

I wenty years; besides very rich jewels, Plate, and other things of great value, which the Dutche have bought.

Twenty years; denues very rich jewels, Plate, and other things of great value, which the Dutchess brought with her into the Duke's Family: And great Debts having been contracted, for the support of the Duke's Honour and his Service while he cohabited with the Dutchess, she hath since his Separation from her paid out of her own Estate.

That by the evil and malicious insinuations of the Dutchess's enemies, the Duke was prevailed on, to carry her then a Protestant into France, and to put her into a Monastery (where she could not be admitted without changing her Religion) and left her there on great assurances of sending for her home in a short time, and so parted with great expressions of Kindness.

That a considerable time after by the Dukes consent, she returned into England, and lived retiredly at Drayton in Northamptonshire; and at the time of the Revolution she again retired to France, where she continued till she heard of her Father's Imprisonment in the Tower, and then came back to England and lived privately till her Father obtained his Liberty, when she came home to him.

That the 8th of January 1691 the Duke was prevailed on by the instigation of her Enemies, to exhibit a Bill in the House of Peers, to the same effect with the Bill now depending, and diverse Witnesses were examined on both sides, after which and a long solemn debate, and due consideration tainty of Charge, time to Answer, exceptions to Witnesses, and other Legal defences, which in the most ordinary Cases cannot be denied the meanest Subject.

The consequence that short and summary ways of proceedings, as is in Cases before the Legislature, may have in the Settlements of Estates and Families, may be very dangerous, and though the Duke of Norfolk's Bill passed the House of Peers, yet great number of the Peers both Spiritual and Temporal entered their Protest against its Passing, and gave their reasons for it.

Now since this Bill of the Dukes is brought in at the end of a Session, it looks as if the enemies of the Dutchess had a mind to leave nothing unattempted to do her a Mischief, and screen their pretences under the mask of the Dukes having a Protestant Heir. Which by a Bill now passed both Houses, and ready to be turned into a Law; will in all probability leave a Protestant Heir at the head of that Noble Family; which tho' he should die without Issue of his Body is not wanting in the Norfolk Family, or if it were, who ever succeeds the Duke in his Honours and Estates, must by the late Act be a Protestant; so that the fancy of the Dukes agents care for a Protestant Heir, is only to amuse and draw a mischief on the Dutchess, upon a pretence that has nothing in it.

the same right to a Trial in the Legal and ordinary way or justice, as the rest of the Kings Subjects, especially considering that there never yet was in England one Precedent, of a Bill exhibited in Parliament to dissolve a Marriage at the first instance, without any previous proceedings in the Ecclesiastical Courts; (which in these Cases is the Law of the Land) and not above Five or Six Bills, in above 600 years to dissolve Marriages, or make Second Marriages good, after there had been a divorce in the Spiritual Courts, and those Bills too in Cases generally where the Husbands were men of known virtue.

The Duke should have endeavoured a Divorce at Law, before he had attempted a Bill to dissolve the Marriage. For any Application to the Legislature, in matters of Private right is improper, because there are proper Judicatures, that give that remedy the Law allows.

To ask any thing of the Legislature beyond what the known Laws in force give, seems to be improper, because,

1. It is to make a Law in one persons Case, which without great difficulty will not be allowed in anothers.
2. It is to retrospect actions, and after the Fact to Augment or alter the Penalty. Our Laws are certain, and known to be antecedent to Facts, that persons may conform their actions to them.

3. The Courts and forms of Law are equally the Subjects right, and the application to the Legislature, takes away all that right Form and Legal taint of Charge, time to Answer, exceptions to Witnesses, and other Legal defences, which in the most ordinary Cases cannot be denied the meanest Subject.

The consequence that short and summary ways of proceedings, as is in Cases before the Legislature, may have in the Settlements of Estates and Families, may be very dangerous, and though the Duke of Norfolk's Bill passed the House of Peers, yet great number of the Peers both Spiritual and Temporal entered their Protest against its Passing, and gave their reasons for it.

Now since this Bill of the Dukes is brought in at the end of a Session, it looks as if the enemies of the Dutchess had a mind to leave nothing unattempted to do her a Mischief, and skreen their pretences under the mask of the Dukes having a Protestant Heir. Which by a Bill now passed both Houses, and ready to be turned into a Law; will in all probability leave a Protestant Heir at the head of that Noble Family; which tho' he should die without Issue of his Body is not wanting in the Norfolk Family, or if it were, who ever succeeds the Duke in his Honours and Estates, must by the late Act be a Protestant Heir, is so that the fancy of the Dukes agents care for a Protestant Heir, has

The C A S E of Mary Dutchess of Norfolk.

UPon the Marriage of the Dutchess with the now Duke of Norfolk, in the year 1677, her Father the late Earl of Peterborough, paid as part of her Portion 10000*l*, and Setled on that Marriage Lands of near 1000*l*. per annum, the Remainder of which was limited to the now Duke and his Heirs for ever; and after his and his Lady's death the Furniture of Brayton worth 10000*l*. more, and also by Agreement 1000*l*. per annum for Twenty years; besides very rich jewels, Plate, and other things of great value, which the Dutchess brought with her into the Duke's Family: And great Debts having been contracted, for the support of the Duke's Honour and his Service while he cohabited with the Dutchess, she hath since his Separation from her paid out of her own Estate.

That by the evil and malicious insinuations of the Dutchess's enemies, the Duke was prevailed on, to carry her then a Protestant into France, and to put her into a Monastery (where she could not be admitted without changing her Religion) and left her there on great assurances of sending for her home in a short time, and so parted with great expressions of Kindness.

That a considerable time after by the Dukes consent, she returned into England, and lived retiredly at Drayton in Northamptonshire, and at the time of the Revolution she again retired to France, where she continued till she heard of her Father's Imprisonment in the Tower, and then came back to England and lived privately till her Father obtained his Liberty, when she came home to him.

That the 8th of January 1691 the Duke was prevailed on by the instigation of her Enemies, to exhibit a Bill in the House of Peers, to the same effect with the Bill now depending, and diverse Witnesses were examined on both sides, after which and a long solemn debate and due consideration had by their Lordships of the Witnesses, and what was Sworn by them, the 17th of February, they were pleased to reject the Bill without a second reading.

Notwithstanding which the Duke was again prevailed on the 22th December 1692 to exhibit a Second Bill in the House of Peers, to the same effect with his First, which after several debates was the 2d of January following again rejected.

Sometime after this, and for accomodating all differences between them, Proposals were made to the Dutchess, which after long agitation on 28th April 1694 were reduced into Writing, and executed by the Duke and Dutchess: The preamble of which Articles is in the words following. Whereas diverse Controversies, Debates, Demands, and Suites of several natures have for some time since been agitated, and continued between the said Duke and the said Dutchess his Wife, &c. unto all which it is at last held fitting (it being conduccable to their respective quiet and ease) to have an end put, and the like for the future prevented. It is therefore hereby and by the Parties to these presents, declared and agreed in manner following; Whereby the Dutchess convey'd to the Duke's use the Mannor of Castle Ryfing &c. And also the said Dutchess and her Trustees, Assigned their Interest in a Considerable Part of the Mannor of Sheffield in Torkshire to the use of the said Duke. So that by these Articles and that Deed Executed thereupon, the Duke had his then desired Advantages.

That after the execution of these Articles, the Dutchess sent for one Negus the Dukes principal Gentleman, and expressed herself very sensibly of the misfortunes of the Duke and her self, and desired Mr. Negus to tell the Duke, that she would avoid all company that should give him any offence, and that she would not so much as pay a visit, but where he liked; which Mr. Negus lately testified before the Lords, and that he acquainted the Duke with it, as also that she had several times told him, if she Dyed first, she would leave the Duke her Estate.

That

Masters are already too much in the power of their Servants, and if they charge their Masters with Adultery, Felony and even Treason, it is not in the power of the Master to defend himself against down right Swearing; Servants having those opportunities of the knowledge of times and places and Company, which cannot be denied or avoided, and which others have not, and many times being of ill Principles and desperate Fortunes, and of tempers very Revengeful, so that whoever turns away a Servant, he is in his power for his Estate, Honour and even Life it self. And therefore for the safety and freedom of Families in other Countrys, they are not permitted to be Evidence against their Masters, in any matter criminal whatsoever.

Note also the Dutchess thinks, She as an English Subject has by Magna Carta the same right to a Tryal in the Legal and ordinary way of Justice, as the rest of the Kings Subjects, especially considering that there never yet was in England one Precedent, of a Bill exhibited in Parliament to dissolve a Marriage at the first instance, without any previous proceedings in the Ecclesiastical Courts; (which in these Cases is the Law of the Land) and not above Five or Six Bills, in above 600 years to dissolve Marriages, or make Second Marriages good, after there had been a divorce in the Spiritual Courts, and those Bills too in Cases generally where the Husbands were men of known virtue.

The Duke should have endeavoured a Divorce at Law, before he had attempted a Bill to dissolve the Marriage. For any Application to the Legislature, in matters of Private right is improper, because there are proper Judicatures, that give that remedy the Law allows.

To ask any thing of the Legislature beyond what the known Laws in force give, seems to be improper, because,

1. It is to make a Law in one persons Case, which without great difficulty will not be allowed in anothers.
2. It is to retrospect actions, and after the Fact to Augment or alter the Penalty. Our Laws are certain, and known to be antecedent to Facts, that persons may conform their actions to them.
3. The Courts and forms of Law are equally the Subjects right, and the application to the Legislature, takes away all that right Form and certainty of Charge, time to Answer, exceptions to Witnesses, and other Legal defences, which in the most ordinary Cases cannot be denied the meanest Subject.

The consequence that short and summary ways of proceedings, as is in Cases before the Legislature, may have in the Settlements of Estates and Families, may be very dangerous, and though the Duke of Norfolk's Bill passed the House of Peers, yet great number of the Peers both Spiritual and Temporal entred their Protest against its Passing, and gave their reasons for it.

Now since this Bill of the Dukes is brought in at the end of a Session, it looks as if the enemies of the Dutchess had a mind to leave nothing unattempted to do her a Mischief, and skreen their pretences under the mask of the Dukes having a Protestant Heir. Which by a Bill now passed both Houses, and ready to be turned into a Law; will in all probability leave a Protestant Heir at the head of that Noble Family; which tho' he should die without Issue of his Body is not wanting in the Norfolk Family, or if it were, who ever succeeds the Duke in his Honours and Estates, must by the late Act be a Protestant; so that the fancy of the Dukes agents care for a Protestant Heir, is only to amuse and draw a mischief on the Dutchess, upon a pretence that has nothing in it.
