Commandant, R.A.M. College.

The attached book from Lt.-Colonel D. G. Milne of A.M.D.5. would appear to be a catalogue of prints probably in the Mess as many of the names are familiar. the notes after the index, the writer implies possession and may have been a donor?

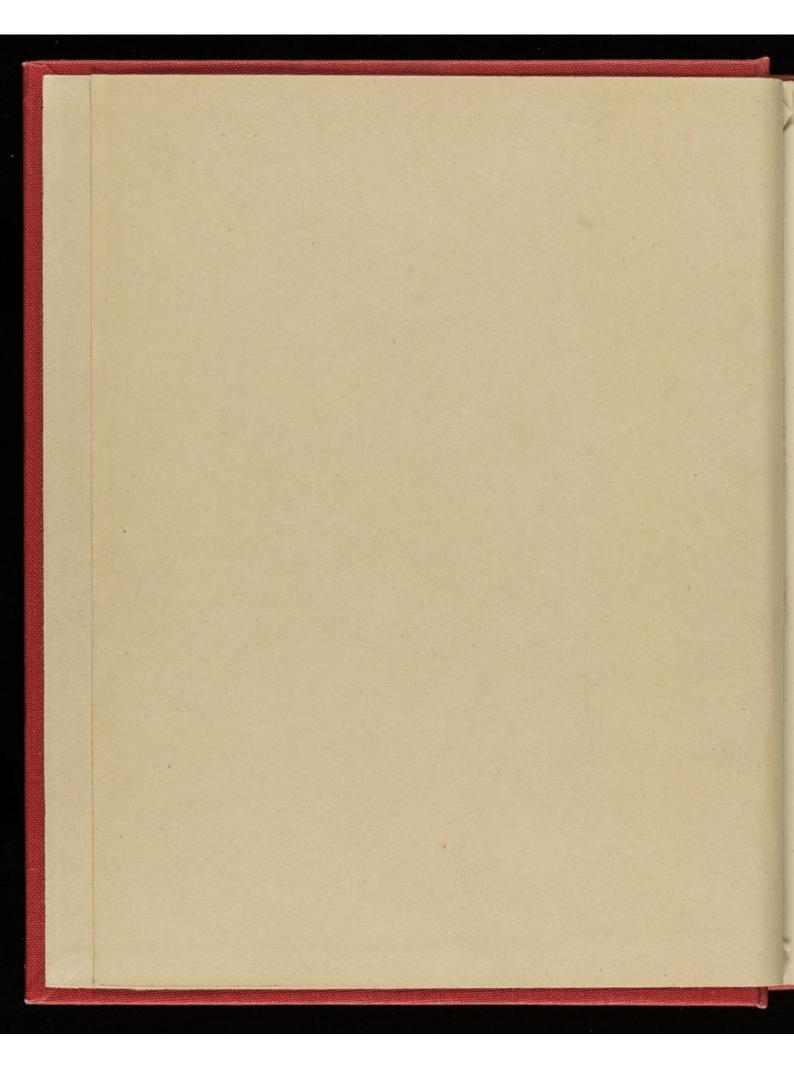

Would you please clarify the position as regards mess possession and suggest a home or disposal for the book.

ECHOES OF THE PAST.

NOTES ON SOME ENGRAVED PORTRAITS OF EARLY
ARMY MEDICAL OFFICERS.

The writer has been fortunate enough to collect during the last few years a small number of portrait prints of Military doctors of the past; and in doing so, has been struck by the number of names well known in Medicine and Literature, of whose intimate connection with the Army Medical Service he had, up to comparatively late years, been ignorant.

while he should be sorry to assume that his ignorance was shared by a large number of his brother officers, it is possible that to a certain number the facts may not be familiar, and he ventures to give what little information he has at his disposal, as to the originals of these portraits, to the members of his former Service, making his collection the peg on which to hang his remarks.

By the very nature of things the number of Army Medical officers who reach the dignity of having their portraits painted must be a relatively small one.

A very large number of our distinguished predecessors were probably never painted at all; of those that were, the majority would be done for purely family purposes, and a still smaller number would possess sufficient general interest to call for engravings from their Portraits.

Such engravings too as were made, in the course of years tend to a great extent to disappear, and copies became yearly more difficult to obtain.

No high artistic value is claimed for the collection which still falls far short of what it might be. "First and from leafur leafur."

States" are conspicuous by their absence. Margins in some cases are lacking, but on the other hand several of the impressions are of considerable merit, and the prints are, with perhaps one exception contemporary with the originals, and may be presumed to give a faithful rendering of them, in their habits as they lived, or at least as the limner saw them.

The Collector has observed, and not without anxiety that whereas when he first began his quest for these prints, he was pleased to get any authentic representation of a former notability of his service, irrespective of the quality of the plate, and its artistic value, his tendency latterly has been to look for, and even obtain, the earlier and finer impressions. He now congratulates himself on the cases where the temptation was yielded to and the better impression chosen - and ventures to advise any one of like mind, to choose the best copy obtainable of any print he desires. A really good impression is so much more satisfactory than the next best, and will almost certainly retain if not augment its value.

Volumes might of course be written about our famous predecessors, and it is worthy of note how interest in our past worthies has been stimulated, since we have had a Journal of our own, and a number of valuable and interest ing researches published on the personal history of early Members of our Service.

In the present ease only the briefest notes in each case are proposed, and little or no originality claimed for them.

It may be mentioned that where the dates of the respective commissions differ from those given in the usual authorities, those given here are taken from the Commission Registers themselves in the Public Record Office.

The Notes are arranged chronologically as regards date of commission, and the Chief authorities consulted have been the Dictionary of National Biography, Munk's Pettigrew's Medical Gallery Roll of the College of Physicians, various Encyclopaedias of Literature, contemporary Magazines and of course the works of the men themselves.

Lat the end of 1919 the collection consisted of the prints of 27 individuals.

1. (6) GIDEON HARVEY, M.D. Physician to the Army in Flanders
1659. Half length line Engraving by Pierre Philippe 92 x 7" shows him in early life, with flowing hair, wearing a small velvet cap - and holding a skull in his left hand.

The inscription reads: "Gideon Harvaeus, utriusque "Med. et Phil. Doctor Apud Londinensis practicus, et Colleg "Med. Hagiens, quondam Socius. Hagie Comitis. Anno 1663."

Born 1637, he was educated on the Continent and at Exeter College, Oxford. Practised on the continent where he was Physician in ordinary to Charles II, then in Exile. Afterwards he was Physician to the Troops in Flanders and later settled in England.

He was a Voluminous writer on Medical subjects. His "Family Physician and House Apothecary" is a Collection of complicated recipes for combinations of drugs, which would certainly try the skill of the modern Housewife severely, and the internal organisation of those on whom she experimented.

"His "Conclave of Physicians" was described by himself as showing forth their "Intrigues, Frauds and Plots against their Patients."

It is understood his popularity among his brother leaches was not very marked among his but her leaches

He wrote also on Venereal disease, Plague, Consumption and other matters.

He was probably the father of the Gideon Harvey who was appointed Physician to the Troops - Tower of London in 1702, and held the appointment till his death in 1754 or 1755.

He is understood to have got this appointment in the first instance through his sickly appearance.

The two favourites for the post were so equally balanced in the matter of their several interests, that Harvey was put in to avoid disputes at the time in the fond belief a vacancy would again shortly occur.

Needless to say he saw cut his rivals, and many of their successors.

SIR WILLIAM PETTY. Physician General to Forces, Lefous 1654.

Ireland. Political Economist and Mathematician. Oval quarter length line engraving $9\frac{1}{8}$ x $6\frac{3}{4}$ - by Sandys after Closterman, 1683, within laurel Wreath, and with arms and name under portrait. He is shewn wearing a dark peruke and lace tie.

Born at Romsey 1623, he studied medicine on the continent, graduating Doctor of Physic at Leyden in 1649. He had a somewhat adventurous life for some years, but eventually found favour with Henry Cromwell and was appointed Physician General for Ireland. He found Military Medical matters in a sad state of confusion and set himself to remedy this and to stop the waste then going on.

Shortly after this he was also entrusted, in his capacity as Mathematician, with the Survey of Ireland, partly in consequence of his protests against the manner in which the existing Survey was then being carried out.

Such a survey was specially called for at that time, that the confiscated lands might be properly mapped out for distribution and sale.

His own grants of land seem to have been generous and he greatly added to them by judicious purchase as occasion served, more especially in Kerry. He had many bitter enemies, and had to defend himself frequently against attacks in private and in public.

He was an ingenious inventor and a famous Mathematician from his early days, and wrote many treatises on the subjects which interested him.

One of the stories told of him is that when challenged to a duel, he, as the challenged party with the right to choose the weapons and the place, chose hatchets in a dark cellar. His sight was very bad, and his argument was that only under such circumstances could he find himself on equal terms with his opponent. There is no reason to believe that his conditions were accepted.

He died in 1687, and his Irish property, passing, by the marriage of his daughter, into the Fitzmaurice family, formsthe main portion of the Landsowne Estates in Kerry.

Other prints of him are a mezzotint by John Smith after Closterman and an etching by Wilson after the same.

after Ant. Schoonian - showing him a burly heavy featured man with long ill arranged hair and generally untidy look.

The only information obtained about him is from the in scription on the print itself which runs as follows.

"Charles Peter. Surgeon. Served King Charles ye 2nd. in ye Dutch Warrs. Surgeon of ye Horse Guards to King James and Surgeon of the Household to King William daily prepares his cordial Tincture and Pills which have cured Thousands of ye collick, Stone, Gravell, Scurvie and Dropsy, etc. Gives advice to the Poor as well as rich at his House in St. Martin's Lane near Longacre, where he has lived between 30 and 40 years. Laus Dec. 1705. Aetat 57."

Born in 1642; he was 46 when first commissioned. His contributions to medical literature consist of a couple of pamphlets on Venereal Disease, from the title pages of which one would imagine he was going to make public the ingredients of his famous anti-Venereal pills, for the common good. However, although he enters into a short history of the disease so far as then known, the pamphlets consist but of a bold advertisement of the aforesaid pill. This same pill seems to have been a good all round sort of pill, as pills go, expelling the disease if not by a fork, yet via the fork as its action took place by the bowels, the kidneys, the lungs and the skin, and apparently simultaneously.

He describes himself on the title page as "Chyrurgeon

and Practitioner" and gives the same address as on the print, mentioning also that he kept all suitable baths for the diseases treated of He seems to have died soon after 1705.

[This Charles Peter must not be confused with the Charles Peters who was Physician General to the Land Force 1739, who also wrote on Venereal diseases, editing a Batin Poem on Syphilis: He died in 1746.]

Born 1675, he was educated at Westminster and Christchurch Oxford. He was early distinguished for his Scholarship and while still an undergraduate published learned editions of Greek authors with Latin translation and notes.

He went to Spain with the troops under Lord Peterborough in 1705 as Physician to the Army, spending about two years in that Capacity, and subsequently on his return to England defending his General against the attacks of his critics.

he settled in London about 1713, where he entered into the Medical and Literary discussions of the day with some gusto. Later he was elected M.P. for Launceston, as a Tory, and distinguished himself by some able speeches.

In August 1722 Bishop Atterbury was committed to the Tower for High Treason, and in March 1723 Freind followed him for supposed participation in the same plot. Atterbury was banished in June 1723 and Freind, along with sundry others also implicated, was released at the end of November of the same year.

He turned his confinement to some use in writing a lengthy Latin letter to his friend the great Dr. Mead, on "Various forms of Variola", and laid the foundation of his principal work "The History of Physick"

V. Sir SAMUEL GARTH M.D., Physician General to the Forces 1714-1719. A notable Physician, Litterateur and Bon Vivant of his time.

Half length Mezzotint 13"x10" by Faber after Kneller 1733, showing him in flowing peruke and Velvet Coat. A fine print of an interesting personality [ho.3o in kitcat Series]

Garth was one of those whose association with the army came late in his carreer, and after he had attained distinction in his profession and in letters.

He was more notable as a fashionable Physician, man of letters and members of the Kitcat Club than as a medical Administrator in the Army. Although in his best known poem "The Dispensary" he published some severe strictures on some of his medical Contemporaries, he was held in high estimation by Society in general and his own profession.

Born in 1659 he studied at Peterhouse, Cambridge, and at Leyden, practised in London, became Physician in ordinary to George I. and died in 1719.

"The Dispensary" was written in support of the College of Physicians which was then (1699) waging war, with the apothecaries as to the right of the latter to prescribe as well as to compound Medicines

The College triumphed at the time, only to see a few years later, the House of Lords decide in favour of the Apothecaries.

The poem is in Mock heroic strain, and has six Cantos, but while running readily enough lacks anything of the divine Afflatus - Much of its satire has now lost its point and interest.

In the first Canto, referring to the golden globe on the dome of the then College of Physicians, he calls it "a gilded pill" - possibly the earliest use of an expression sufficiently common afterwards.

He puts into the mouth of "Colocynthus," one of the Apothecaries the following disparaging gibe.

"Could thou propose that we, the friends of Fates
Who fill Churchyards and who unpeople States etc."

A definition of death given by the same Cologynthus is worth noting.

"To die, is landing on some distant shore

"Where billows never break, nor tempests roar,

"Ere well we feel the friendly stroke 'tis o'er.

"It eases lovers, sets the Captive free

"And though a tyrant, offers liberty.

Half length oval Mezzotint. 112" x 93" by Faber after Murray, showing him apparently in Middle life; A pleasant featured man, wearing the usual flowing peruke and long lace tie.

He was born in 1660, studied in France, and graduated at Orange University in 1683.

Indies, spending some time there, making many observations in Natural History, to be used later in his chief work, on the Natural History of Jamaica. He also made important collections at this time, inthe same subject. He was indeed all his life an inveterate Collector in many departments of science and art. Pictures, books, coins, precious stones etc. his collection ranged over many subjects and indeed formed the nucleus of the British Museum.

On returning from Jamaica he settled in London and speedily attained success, eventually reaching quite the top of the tree in his profession; was secretary to the Royal Society, and later still President. (He amassed a large fortune which he used freely in public and private charities.) He was the first Medical Baronet. Buring his life he founded the botanic Gardens at Chelsea vesting them in the Apothecaries Company. Pope refers kindly to him more than once, although Young speaks slightingly of him as "foremost toymaker of his day."

His memory is kept green in London by the names of certain well known streets in the West End.

By his will he left all his collection to the nation in consideration of a comparatively small sum of money to be paid to his heirs, and round these has been gathered the remarkable assemblage of Valuables we know as the British Museum.

another very small print is also found by wary, said to be from an original drawing by the same - but it looks rather like a bad copy of the larger print - some peculiarities in the dress being identical.

Half length stipple engraving 6" x 32" by Cook after Richardson. Shewn wearing a handkerchief or small pugri round his head. He was one of those whose association with Military Medicine came late in life, unless indeed he were the William Cheselden who was commissioned Surgeon to Pocock's Regiment of Foot in 1717. When appointed to Chelsea he was at the very height of his fame - and about 49 years of age, having been born in 1688.

By the time he was 23, he was lecturing on anatomy, as successor to Cowper, whose pupil he had been.

He became famous all over Europe for his operation of lateral lithotomy, first performed by him in 1727, followed shortly afterwards by the first operation for artificial pupil. His chief anatomical works were "The Anatomy of the Human Body" which passed through numerous editions and Osteographia, his "GETOGRAPHIE," with very fine plates and brief letterpress. He was a friend of Pope, Richardson the painter, Sir Isaac Newton, whom he attended on his death bed, and Sir Hans Sloane, and was one of the last Warders of the Barber Surgeons Company, just before the Surgeons separated.

He was a patron of boxing, of a genial disposition (which his portrait does not belie) and a general favourite. He died in 1752.

He was born at Granton 1716.

His regiment, known as Paget's Foot when he joined, and later as Offarrell's was then in Minorca, remaining there until 1749, when it went to Dublin.

During his stay in the Mediterranean, he made many and valuable observations on the local diseases and on the effect of climate in modifying disease generally. These he published later under the title of "Observations on the Epidemical Diseases in Minorca from 1744 to 1749."

It would appear the model on an enlarged scale on which the official ideal report was founded. Leaving the army while in Dublin he settled there and lectured on anatomy, apparently at first unofficially. Later he was lecturer to the University and later still Professor, the first in Dublin.

(144) 22. MESSEMGER MONSEY. Physician to Chelsea Hospital 1742-1788.

A small half length line engraving 5" x 4" by Bromley from a sketch by Forster - from the European Magazine - This shows him in his old age, mouth half open, face deeply lined, giving a somewhat unkindly impression of the man. He wears a full bottomed wig and a broad brimmed hat. The only engraving known.

Born in 1693 and coming to London to practise after failing as a country doctor at Eury, he by chance acquired the favour of the then Earl of Godolphin who introduced him to influential friends in town and obtained the Chelsea appointment for him. Here he mixed with polite and literary society, having among his friends Walpole, Chesterfield, Eath and Garrick. At the time he seems to have been a witty conversationalist, somewhat outspoken and rough in manners, but as age came on he became more and more eccentric, misanthropic, and boorish in manners and at last assumed a hermitlike habit of life in his quarters at Chelsea, where he died in 1788, having held his appointment for 46 years.

A small octavo volume by an anonymous author was published the year after his death under the title of "A Sketch of the Life and Character of Dr. Monsey," and gives many details and anecdotes concerning him. From this one gathers rather a higher idea of the man than that usually accepted. He was sincere to the verge of rudeness, sacrificing nothing to Truth, under any circumstances, and came to be looked on as a cynic. It would appear however as long as he lived with his friend Godolphin, as he was specially permitted to do, and his life conditions were easy and comfortable, his peculiarities were kept considerably under restraint - although eccentricity was growing on him with age. He seems to have been appreciated in general society, although he apparently modelled his manners somewhat on those of Swift.

When Godolphin died, and Monsey had to remove from his luxurious home in his friend's town house to his very different quarters in the Royal Hospital, he appears to have degenerated in every way.

his quarrel with his friend Garrick was very bitter on both sides, terminating only with the actor's death. With John Ranby too, the Surgeon at the Royal Hospital he was on bad terms, not perhaps all his own fault as Ranby was a churlish ill mannered fellow himself.

Monsey was stated to be the originator of that remarkable method of drawing teeth, which one has usually associated with the more modern "Wild and woolly West" viz: by tieing a strong Catgut round the tooth, fixing the catgut to a perforated bullet, and firing it out of a pistol. This is told in all seriousness by the anonymous author, as the many amusing anecdotes find a place in this short however arguelle brochure but they are not fitted for repetition. His writings appear to have been of an ephemeral nature and none have survived him beyond some fragmentary verses of a bitterly satirical description of Garrick's last illness, written before a fatal result was expected, and destroyed when that result was known.

While still Professor there, was appointed Physician to Army 1742, and served on the continent, his lectures being delivered by deputy during his absence. Was present at Dettingen 1743. Made Physician Gen. Flanders 1744. Served in Scotland in the '45 with the Duke of Cumberland. And again went to the Continent, serving as Physician General until 1748, when he returned to London, when began practice, and was eminently successful, receiving nearly every honour open to a medical man. He was P.R.S. 1772.

His book on Military Medicine, "Observations on Military Diseases" was epoch making and earned him great fame. He was the first to write on Military Diseases specially. And he and Brocklesley, who followed him, were the first to put Military Medicine and Sanitation on a sound and scientific foundation, so far as science went at the time. And many improvements in the well being and treatment of both sick and healthy soldiers date from his time.

He died in 1782, and is buried in St. James Church Piccadilly.

The dates given above for his Military service are those mentioned in the various authorities available, but the present writer confesses that a careful search, in the Public Record Office for the commissions has been fruitless.

The "Assistant" Surgeoncy to the Coldstream may of herland Surgeon's Mate, have been really an "acting" Surgeoncy, as the "title "Assistant Surgeon" was not then in use officially, and the appointment as Surgeon's mate would, as was usual he made by the commanding officer, and may never have been confirmed. The facts as given however seem accepted by all authorities. He saw service at Mastricht and at Flushing.

Born at Stirling 1729 or 1730 , he studied medicine at Glasgow, and was apprenticed to that Mr. Gordon, to whom Smollett had been indentured a few years before.

When with Argyll's Regiment in 1747 he must have been a very youthful Mate.

After Flushing he travelled a good deal abroad, spending two years in Paris continuing his medical Studies

There he was accompanied by William, afterwards
Sir William, Fordyce, who like himself was a Military Surgeon, being Surgeon to the 3rd. Foot Guards from 1755 to 1770.

Returning to Glasgow in or about 1751, he there practised for some years very successfully, taking his M.D. in 1770. Soon after that date he went to the Continent with the Duke of Hamilton, spending about five years in France, Switzerland, Germany and Italy.

He returned to England about 1778, and settled in London, where he remained, with brief intervals of foreign travel until his death at Richmond, Surrey, in 1802.

His earlier writings consisted of two volumes of "Sketches of Life and Manners" on the Continent, published and in 1779 and 1781, Medical Sketches 1785, all of which had considerable vogue.

In 1786 he published the novel for which he was best known, "Zelucco" a tale with a high moral purpose, showing how misery always follows vice!

He continued to issue records of his foreign journeys including sketches during the French Revolution, and then another Novel called "Edward" the converse of "Zelucco" showing how Virtue is followed by success and happiness!!

He corresponded for some years with Robert Burns and among the published letters of the Poet are several lengthy expresses his great admiration for his writings and more especially of "Zelucco". He puts Fielding and Moore in the same category as possessing the power to depict the human heart, above all novelists whom he had read.

It was to Dr. Moore that the Poet addressed that very interesting piece of autobiography, so well known, in which he analyses in the frankest manner, his own character and actions as a young man, i.e. up to the time of his going to Edinburgh to bring out the 2nd. Edition of his poems.

Other prints in the collection are, one by Lizars from the picture by Gavin Hamilton, and another small one by Bromley after Drummond, for the European Magazine 1790.

Dr. Moore's eldest son was General Sir John Moore of Peninsular fame.

Other prints are by Daniel after Dance and by Keating after Lawrence - Mezzotint.

RICHARD BROCKLESERY M.D. Physician to the Forces
1758-1765. Physician General to ordnance 1794-1797.

Small half length in stipple 4" x 5" by Ridley after Copley showing him in the wig, a full faced genial looking person resembling but little the sharp featured individual of the perhaps better known profile drawing by George Dance, a copy of which appeared in the R.A.M.C.

Journal for Aug. 1911.

A very full and interesting account of Brocklestey's life and writings by Major H.A.L.Howell R.A.M.C. having appeared in the Journal of the date mentioned, it is unnecessary here to give more than the briefest details concerning him.

Born in 1722 in Somersetshire, though of an Irish Quaker family, he studied in Edinburgh and at Leyden and began a successful practice in London about 1745 or 1746

In 1758 however he accepted a commission as Physician in the Army and served in Germany during part of the Seven Years War, went on half pay in 1765 and resumed his practice writing largely on Medical Veterinary and Musical Subjects.

In his chief work "Oeconomical and Medical Observations" on Military matters, he made admirable and original use of his experiences in the army, and may be looked on with Pringle as the originator of the principles which should guide Military Sanitation and Hospital Management in a Modern sense.

He died in 1797 and is buried in St. Clements Dane in the Strand.

No other prints than the two mentioned are known.

Born circa 1709. He studied Medicine in Edinburgh Mgraduating in 1732, and started practice in London. His first poem "The Economy of Love" was too broad even for that outspoken age, and no doubt did him harm professionally.

As a practising Physician he never succeeded.

In 1744 he produced his most lasting work. "The art of Preserving health," a didactic poem of some length, in blank verse, divided into four books, on Air, Diet, Exercise, and the Bassions.

It is not given to everyone to drop with ease into poetry over stomachic disorders due to vinous excess etc. or a recommendation as to where to choose a residence, but he gets nearer to it than most. His verse is perhaps somewhat turgid, but shows imagination and vigour.

His description of the effects of Wine on the system is reported to be akin to truth and may be shortly quoted

The secondary effects are described fully and feelingly but need not be quoted; numerous poetic images however and classical similes, in the fashion of the day, enriching the verses.

He also discusses the climate of England of which he evidently had the very poorest opinion.

"Steeped in continual rain or with raw fogs bedewed" is one of his characteristic lines - and he contrasts the weather he experienced, with the lovely balmy, weather his progenitors had, by their own accounts, enjoyed. A similar tendency is not wholly unknown to the present age.

In his description of the "Sweating Sickness" he gives a powerful picture of a rapid, very acute fever, but without giving any clinical signs which would guide us in recognising the specific fever described.

Zescribing the last stage of the Fever;

To quote a few lines "With incessant toil

"Desperate of ease, impatient in their pain

"They turned from side to side."

"A ponderous sleep

"wrapt all their senses up; they slept and died."
Similar striking pieces of description occur frequently through the book.

He wrote many essays under the pseudonym of "Lancelot Temple."

In Thomson's "Castle of Indelence" his portrait occurs, from which he would appear to have been an intensely shy, silent man, who loved to wander alone in country places, and whose one occasion of rejoicing was when he could say another day was done. This is probably exaggerated, as others make him out a kindly man of a retiring nature who wrote chiefly for his own amusement.

He was appointed Physician to the Forces in Germany in 1760 retiring on half pay in 1764, from which modest competence he managed to save a considerable sum before his death in 1779.

The inscription on the print runs, below his name in Roman letters:

Quarter length line engraving $5\frac{1}{2}$ " x $4\frac{3}{4}$ " engraver unknown - evidently a portion of the well known portrait by Reynolds ahowing him holding his hand to his chin.

This distinguished Anatomist born in Lanark in 1728, was teaching in London about 1760, when on account of a break down in health (a curious reason for undertaking Military service) he was appointed Staff Surgeon to the Army, in 1761.

He served in the Belleisle expedition and afterwards in Portugal spending about 5 years with the Army, and acquiring a practical knowledge of gunshot wounds which he afterwards made use of in his works, especially in his investigation into Inflammation.

It is of course as an Anatomist and not a Military Surgeon he is famous.

He died in 1793.

Other prints are by Sharp, by Adcock, by Cooper, by Egan, by Page and Son, by S.W.Reynolds, by Wright, by Corner by Josi by Stewart all after Reynolds and a lithograph by Maguire after Dance.

a small oval line engraving, artist and engraver unknown, but probably after Opie, whom he discovered and introduced to London. The print is of the size and style usually associated with the illustrations in the "European Magazine" and similar publications of the period, showing a handsome if somewhat sullen man in the high collared coat and lace frill of the period.

The admission of the curious personality to our list is perhaps open to question. There seems no doubt that he held the appointment mentioned above, but efforts to trace his commission in the Public Record Office have failed. It is probable therefore that his was but a Colonial and acting appointment.

Educated as a Medical man he accompanied Sir William Trelawnay, Governor of Jamaica, when he went there in 1767, as his personal Physician, where he no doubt also obtained the Military appointment.

Having a desire to occupy his time more fully than his Military duties necessitated, still a characteristic of the Military Surgeon, he turned his thoughts to the Church and obtained a living in the Island, being ordained subsequently

Whether he carried on his Medical and Clerical duties together is not clear, but there seems no reason why he should not have done so his clerical duties lying lightly on his shoulders, and his congregation gradually disappearing.

The death of his patron the Governor, and the lack of any chance of further promotion in the Church locally, caused his return to England where he practised Medicine, at first in Cornwall, and later in London.

Satirical verses by the score were produced by him during this period, against all and sundry who in any way offended his susceptibilities. He attacked the Royal Academicians, Boswell, George III. Sir Joseph Banks and many others. A mordant wit pervaded most of his writings, and he became a political factor of some importance. He was reckless in what he said and implied and was frequently in trouble. Nothing pleased him more than to turn into ridicule the sayings and doings of George III, not a very difficult thing.

Perhaps the piece best known now of all his many effusions, is the humourous account of the two pilgrims ordered to walk to the Shrine at Loretto, with peas in their shoes. This they both did, one using them au naturel, the other boiling his first. It begins

"A brace of sinners for no good

"Were ordered to the Virgin Mary's shrine etc.

And this, in an earlier generation than the present found place among the pieces collected for the use of budding elocutionists and still may serve that purpose. He lost his sight as he grew old, dying in 1819 at the age of 81. He is buried in St. Pauls Church, Covent Garden.

Other prints are Mezzotint by Hedges, Stipple by Mackenzie; line by Corner, all after Opie; an etching by Barlow after Collings; another by Warren after Smith; and a large dezzotint by an unknown hand.

JOHN HEAVISIDE. Surgeon. 1 Horse Grenadier Guards 29 Nev. 1771 to 1789, when the Regiment was disbanded.

Mezzetint, half length 12 x 10 in. by SAY after BEECHEY R.A. dated 1803.

Bern 1748, the sen of John Heaviside, Surgeon, of Hatfield, he was apprenticed to Mr. Dance, Apothecary of Hatfield, from whom he ran away, to be discovered by his father in a slum in Lenden. He then spent four years with Petts, of St. Barthelomews.

Later he purchased for £1600, a commission as Surgeon in the Horse Grenadier Guards, with whom he served until the Regiment was disbanded, but he continued to draw his pay, £146 a year, for the rest of his life i.e. for 57 years in all, not a bad return for his original investment.

He established a large and lucrative practice, but in 1802 was committed to Newgare for his share in a fatar duel between Col. Mentgemery and Capt. Macnamara, on which occasion he was present professionally.

However after some weeks in prison, the matter blew ever and he was released.

He died at Hampstead on 30 Sept. 1828.

In the Gentleman's Magazine of that year, he is described as "the celebrated Surgeon of Gewer Street and of Geddens near Hatfield, Herts."

Another print is also found, Mezzetint 17% x 14 in. by Earlem after Zoffany.

Born 1742 he studied in London and Paris. He went to Jamaica as a young man, and practised there successfully, accumulating a considerable fortune, Returning to England about 1783 he graduated M.D. at St. Andrews 1784 and settled in London. He attained considerable reputation, especially in the treatment of Tropical diseases on which he had published a treatise. He wrote also on Coffee, Sugar, Cowpox, Hydrophobia and Vaccination, to the last of which he was a determined and bitter opponent to the last.

It is to be feared he rather outlived his reputation, and perhaps not without some reason, when it is noted that he claimed an intimate relation in cause and effect between the phases of the moon and.... Haemoptysis

Born 1756 at Hull, the son of Robert Boyne Home Surgeon to 16th. Dragoons, he was educated at Westminster and Trinity College Cambridge, then went to John Hunter as pupil. About 1778 he had a commission as Surgeon in the Navy, serving at Plymouth. Later he left the navy for the Army, and went to Jamaica as Staff Surgeon to the Forces. Went on Half pay 1784 when he rejoined Hunter.

He was pupil, Assistant, brother-in-law, successor and executor to Hunter who left all his valuable manuscript notes and observations in his charge, and there seems little doubt that after turning these to his own use without acknowledgement, he burned the greater portion, to the indignation of the profession. He was Sergeant Surgeon to the King 1808 and received a Baronetcy 1813.

Born at Cromdale 1771. Educated at Aberdeen. Studied medicine Aberdeen and Edinburgh. Became Surgeon 88th. Foot (de Burgh's Rgt.) by purchase, as above. Served much abroad, Flanders, West Indies, Greneda, Bombay, Ceylon and Egypt, seeing service in most places. He held an ordinary Infantry commission from the H.E.I.C. while in Egypt for disciplinary purposes with Indian Contingent Embarked for Walcheren Exped. 1809, but was wrecked and does not seem to have reached the army at that time.

He had a most stimulating effect on the Medical Service where ever he was, and effected many and great improvements in the administration of Medical matters. In the Peninsula he was chief of Wellington's Medical Staff and earned the esteem and respect of his General to a marked degree. He became F.R.S. 1816 and numerous Universities and learned

The statements are naturally ex parte, and the personal note of self satisfaction and approval is well marked, but in spite of this there seems no doubt, from the concrete examples given, that he found matters in connection with the Transport of Troops over sea, and with the Hespital Service on shere, in many ways extraordinarily lax, and that he initiated changes of the first importance, very g greatly to the advantage of the service at large, and the individual Soldier in particular and this in the face of continued opposition both passive and active, on the part of the Medical Authorities in Lendon and at the Ports of Embarkation.

Fitzpatrick received his appointment direct from Civil life. He was formerly in a large general practice in Ireland, in Kildare and the neighbouring counties, making he states from £1200 to £1500 a year.

Taking an interest in Prison administration he was in the habit of visiting such Gaels as were in his district. Stirred by the abuses and misery he found he extended his observation to other Prisons at home and abread, wrote about them, gave evidence before a Commission on the Subject, was appointed Inspector of Prisons [for Ireland] date unknown and retired from practice. While helding this appointment he heard when in the North of Ireland, of a serious outbreak of illness and less of life in a troopship lying at Queenstewn.

KB 1982

General there, explaining his views on the matter, and was given charge of the arrangements without consultation with military the Medical Authorities there or elsewhere. The measures he took were successful, and he was shortly after appointed Inspector of Health, ever the heads, or behind the backs of the Medical Beard.

His letter of Instructions, which is to be found also in the Public Record Office, laid down his duties very fully. These were in the main to Superintend Embarkations of Treeps, advise the authorities as to sites of Camps and Hospitals, inspect existing Hospitals, and improve the conditions under

were in all these arrangements, evidently took anything but kindly to the new conditions, and did little to help Sir Jeremiah, who however, backed by the Generals at Cork and Plymouth, was able to carry out his system and to institute many marked imprevements in the transport of men by Sea.

The chief points on which he insisted in the matter of Sea Transport, points which are the veriest A.B.C. of such work, were, ample ventilation, fumigation, plain good feed, such as the men had been accustomed to, suitable fittings for the comfort of the men, and good reliable drugs, but above all, a careful examination of all troops before embarkation, as to their fitness to stand a sea veyage, and a punctilious weeding out of all diseased and unhealthy men.

These precautions, bare common sense as they appear to us, seem to have been generally neglected at this period, with, as he points out, distressingly fatal results in many cases.

He gives many concrete instances of Regiments embarked without his precautions, or "inventions" as he terms them, where the results were disastrous, and compares them with parallel cases superintended by him, with most marked imprevement. Such was certainly only to be expected, were the conditions of things as he describes, before he interfered.

Among the instances of gross mismanagement he gives, is the moving of 1400 sick and wounded down the Rhine to Helvoet, on one occasion, where the sick were placed in 24 Scows, and were sent off by themselves, while the decters, the food, and the drugs, with all the Medical attendants were sent off seperately in two other scews, which during the whole journey never were in teuch with the other boats. No one seems to have been hanged, but many hundreds of the unfortunate invalids he states died of neglect and starvation before reaching their destination.

He also reports the condition of affairs in the Military Hospitals at home to have been of a distressing nature from neglect, especially at Plymouth, under the semewhat notorious Dr. Boone. He there brought several cases to public notice and even to trial.

In 1802 however in spite of what seems to have been a successful period of useful work, whether through the influence of the Medical Board as he suggests or by the Military Authorities themselves, he was placed on half pay.

He was in the midst of his trooping duties when news reached him that he had been retired about six weeks previously. The pay for this intervening period was never given to him, though he represented the position of af-

He would appear to have been a courageous and earnest refermer of whatever appeared to him wrong, and his ideas about Embarkation sound and theroughly medern.

what he points out about Ventilation, space and fumigation on Troopships is much on the lines that Brocklesby had laid down many years before, which had seemingly been forgetten, or at least neglected.

It seems likely that Fitzpatrick's management of his very delicate position relative to the Military Medical Authorities, was not everything it might have been, and that he did not try to take them with them him in his referming career, ignoring them in fact, and posing rather as an adversary than anything else.

However they seem to have proved too strong for him in the end, possibly to the temperary detriment of the Service.

The fellewing inscription on the print shows how he was regarded by his contemporaries entside Military Medical circles.

JOHN RUSH. Inspr. Gen. of Regimental Hespitals. 15 Feb. 1798.

Stipple Vignette 3/8x 2/2in. by Brooks from an original drawing. Plate size 8 x 7 in.

He does not seem to have left any writings behind him, and is not mentioned in the D.N.B.

In the Gentleman's Magizine Vel 71. p. 1158 he is stated to have had a commission in the "Guards" in N. America- from which he was promoted Apothecary to the General Hespital there 14 May 1782.

In the Lenden Gazette however of 16 July 1782, his premetion is given "From the Brigade of Guards" What this means I cannot make out, as at that time no one of the name appears in any capacity in the "Brigade of Guards", and no Battn. of the Guards was in America. It is possibly a clerical error, and the "Guards" referred to may have been some Provincial Corps in N. America, as he appears to have been in America of for some years before 1782 and in some Military Medical Capacity.

On the conclusion of peace in 1782 he came home on h. pay and was appointed Surgeon to the 2nd. Herse Grenadier Guards 14 June 1782 i.e. just a month after his appointment as Apothecary in America.

When this Regiment was reduced in 1788, he continued to draw his full pay apparently to the time of his death.

For the 10 years between 1788 and his being appointed Inspr. Gen. he practiced in London as a Surgeon with success.

He died in London, 26 Dec. 1801. No other print is known to exist.

GEORGE JAMES GUTHRIE. Assistant Surgeon 29th. Foot 1801.

Half length Mezzotint $13\frac{1}{2} \times 10\frac{1}{2}$ " by Walker after Rooms. Private plate.

Born in London of an old Scottish family, in 1785, he qualified as M.R.C.S. in 1801 when only 16 years old. Very shortly after, he was appointed to the 29th Foot, serving for five years with the Regiment in Canada and another six in the Peninsula, where the Duke of Wellington held him in especial regard, and he did much excellent Surgical and administrative work. Went on half pay 1811, and devoted himself to the study and practice of Surgery making many improvements and introducing sundry new operations. Perhaps the more notable of these were amputation at the hip. Tying the main artery in the calf of the leg, and removing a bullet from a man's bladder. He also by 12thotrity removed a stone from the bladder for the first time.

He wrote on Gun shot wounds, Diseases of the Eye and of the Arteries, and is one of the Fathers of Military Surgery.

He died in 1856.

One other print is known, a lithograph by D'Orsay after D'Orsay.

The main source of information about the life of this very popular and successful medical man is apposthumous memoir in the British Museum, written by a very candid friend men, and admirer- published in 1796.

According to this, he was the son of a doctor in Ireland line.

and set up in practice for himself in Dublin.

Becoming involved in an intrigue with a married woman, he had to leave his native shore somewhat abruptly, and set out for England.

On the road from Holyhead to London he met a "Lady of Fashion" whose carriage had broken down. His assistance and his charming manners so pleased this lady, a wealthy widow, that she introduced him into Society when they reached London, where his personality, and no doubt his professional skill, vice set him on the high road to success.

Sw. 8

He met at a dance, Lady Caroline Keppel, daughter of the Earl of Albemarle.

It was a case of love at first sight on both sides, and, in spite of strong objections on the part of the lady's family, all obstacles were eventually overcome, and they were married.

From this time his success socially and professionally was still more marked. He got Military Appointments and, as stated above, finished as Surgeon General to the Forces. He was for long known in London as The Fortunate Irishman.

His wife, presumably during the courtship and before the objections had been overcome, wrote the well known Song "Robin Adair".

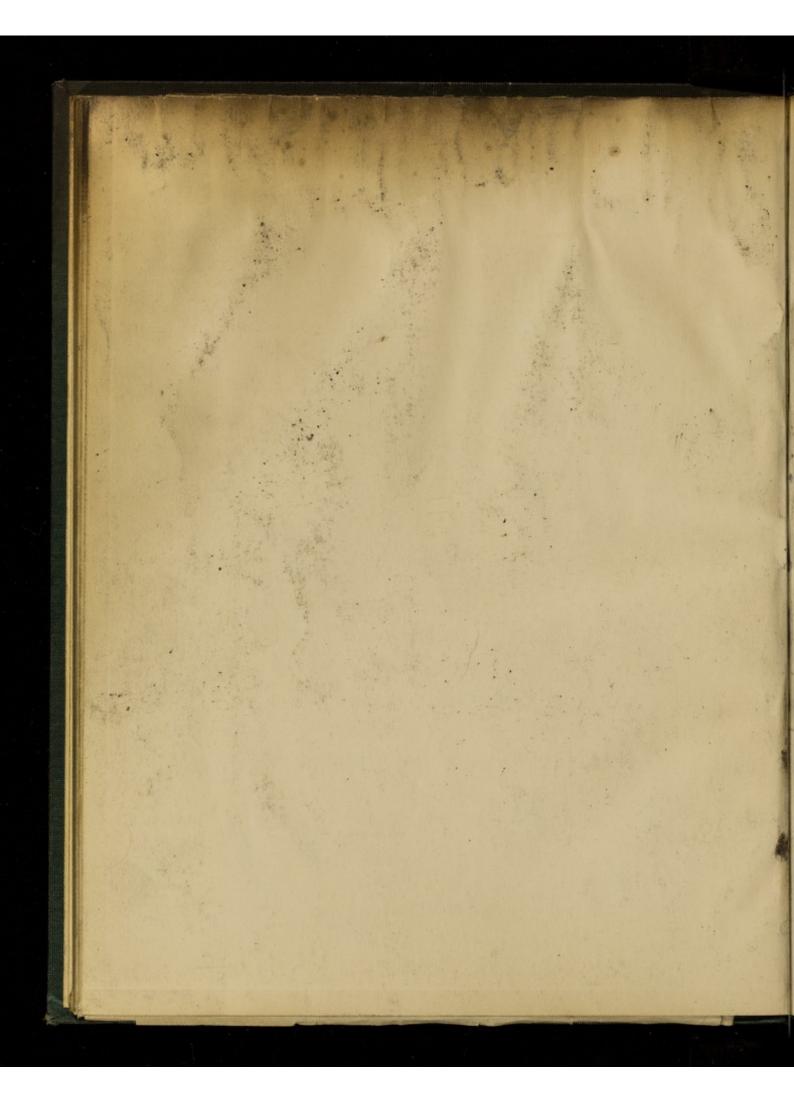

While expatiating on his charming personality and generosity to himself as well as to other young military men, the writer of the memoir gives some quaint details of his successes with the other sex after the death of Lady Caroline. For particulars of these, anyone interested is referred to the Anonymous Memoir mentioned.

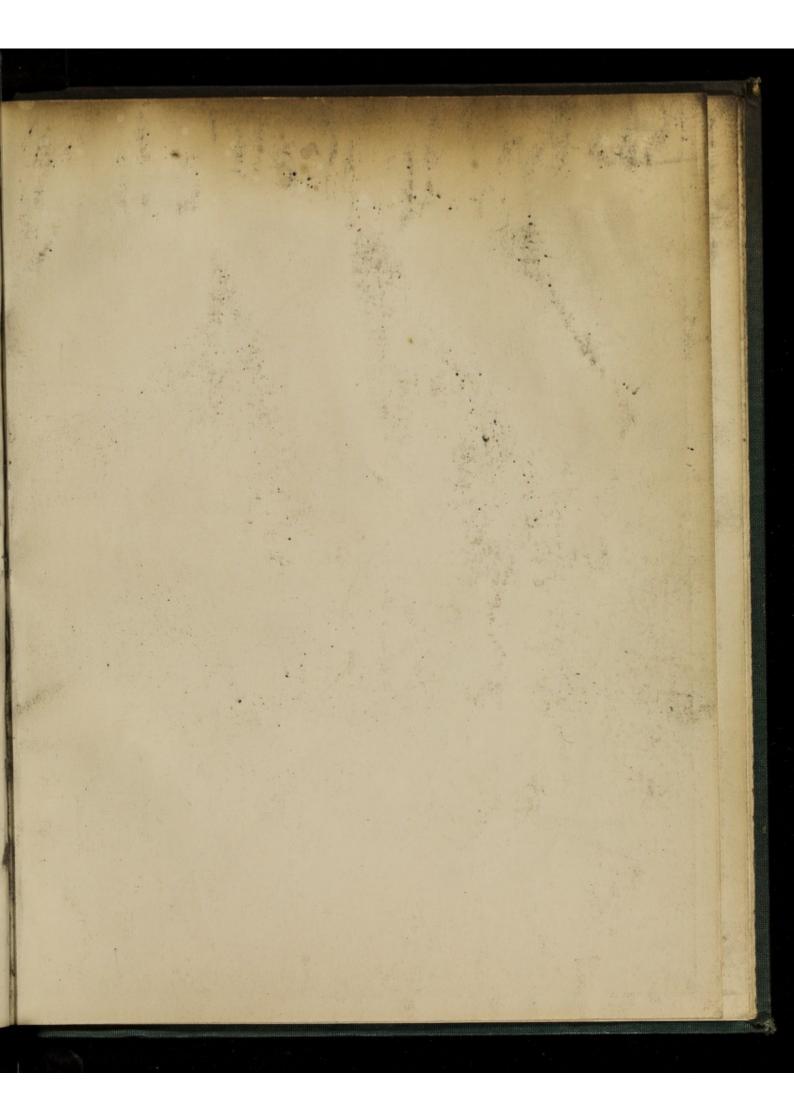

He was a great favourite of George III and his brothers.

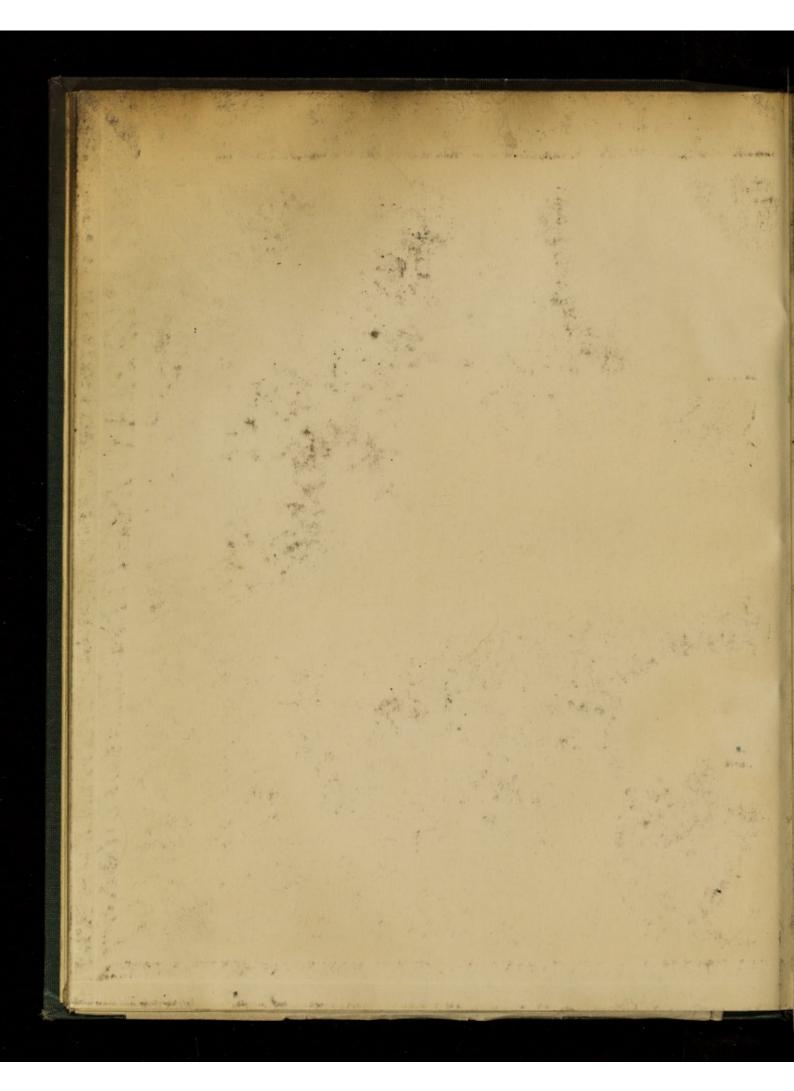

No writings on Medical or other subjects have been traced to him.

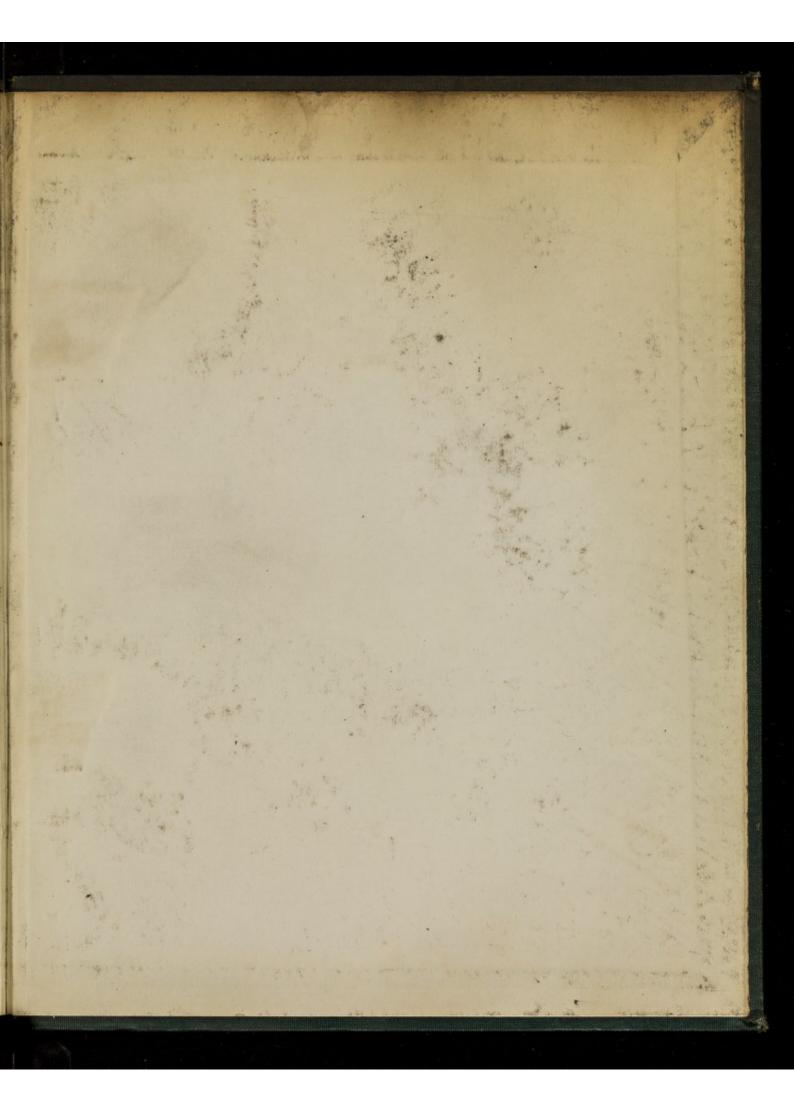

He frequently assisted from his pocket young officers when in trouble, and was a genial and greatly loved member of his profession.

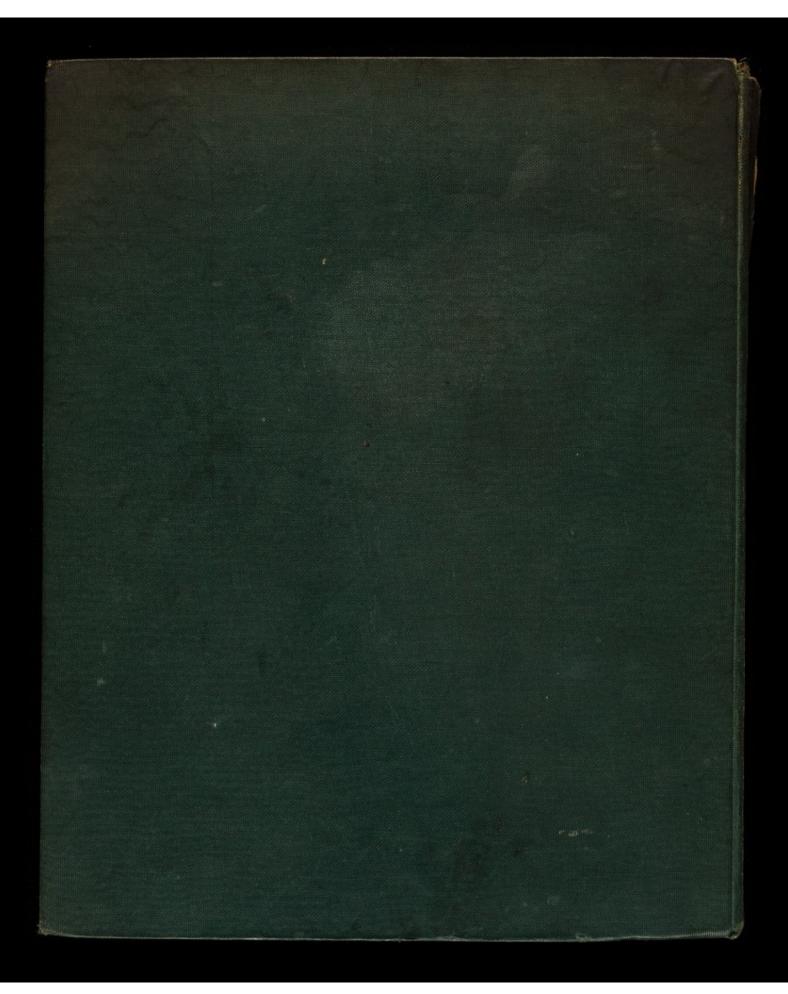

His son, also Sir Robert Adair, entered the diplomatic service and rose to eminence.

The designation of the regiments are equally suggestive as they retained the names of the noblemen and others who raised them. Many were disbanded, such as the King's Own Scottish Horse, commanded by Graham, of Claverhouse, which was disbanded on the outbreak of the Scottish Rebellion in 1689. In other cases Colonel Peterkin adds to the interest of the list by noting the numerical designation, which was subsequently given, and under which the regiments became famous in later years.

Scarcely any of the names of the medical officers have gone down to history. One only, Sir Theodore Colladen, who was physician to the Chelsea Hospital from 1694 to 1702, was knighted. He was a native of Belgium and a Walloon, But there were two baronets, Sir Edmund Carnuel Garth, physician to the land forces and physician-in-ordinary to George I, and the famous Sir Hans Sloane, whose name decorates to-day more than one fashionable London street. He also was Physician-General to the land forces, became President of the Royal Society and initiated the British Museum. Amongst other interesting names on the list is that of Dr. Thomas Lawrence, who held many appointments in the army and was the only brother of Henry Lawrence, Lord President of the Council to Oliver Cromwell. Another is that of Thomas Gibson, who married the casualty clearing station came into being during the South African war. The history of its origin is clearly recorded in the first chapter of the first volume of the "Official General History of the Medical Services during the Great War." It was not until 1907 that its introduction into War Establishments was considered by the War Office.

But these defects in Sir Andrew Macphail's history do not detract from the great interest which every reader must feel in the literary excellence of the volume and the vigour and force of his denunciation of political and personal interference with medical services. An attack on the medical services by personalities and politicians in time of war is not an uncommon experience. Indeed, an abortive attempt was made in March, 1916, in Parliament to vilify those in high responsible positions in connexion with the British Medical Services in France. In Canada a similar and farreaching attack was made on the administration of the Canadian Medical Services. Sir Andrew Macphail does not spare those who originated it and carried it on, and, in so doing, he adds a new record to the long list in past history of the manner in which medical services are marked out as the objects of "surmise, suspicion, and inuendo," and as a "temptation for the mingled motives of pride, chagrin, or malice." His opening chapter, to which he gives the title of "The General Theme," develops his views regarding the conflict between the military and the civilian element and the way in which the latter failed in Canada to appreciate the requirements of the former and undertook its control with disastrous results. He devotes many subsequent pages to the controversy that arose commences with the year 1727, but a standing army was created in 1660 on the restoration of Charles II to the throne. It was at first a small army of 5,000 men to which medical officers were commissioned as surgeons with warrant officers as surgeon's mates. Colonel Peterkin has consequently supplemented Colonel Johnston's roll by compiling a list of those who received commissions from the date of the creation of a standing army to the date of the commencement of Colonel Johnston's roll. In doing so he has undertaken a task of considerable magnitude and has produced a document of much historical interest. The names of the officers in his list and of the regiments to which they belonged excite the imagination to an unusual degree in compilations of this nature. The period, too, covers the time of the Royalist wars, with the Battle of Sedgemoor, the Scottish Rebellion, with the Battle of Killiecrankie, and Marlborough's campaigns, with the Battles of Blenheim, Ramillies, Oudenarde and Malplaquet. During much of that time it is interesting to find in Colonel Peterkin's list a large number of medical officers with foreign, chiefly French, names. The very first on the list is James Des Fontaines, who was Surgeon-General to the Forces in Ireland, and there are also names such as Choques, Hubin, Coudroy, Brullehan,

A LIST OF MEDICAL OFFICERS OF THE ARMY, 1660 to 1727. Compiled by Colonel Alfred Peterkin, C.B., M.A., M.B. Aberdeen: The University Press, 1925. Pp. viii + 38. Price 10s. 6d. Colonel Johnston's monumental Roll of Officers of the Medical Service

Another is that of Thomas Gibson, who married the daughter of Richard Cromwell. Two medical officers, Sackville Whittle and Thorowgood Meautys, are noted as having been buried in Westminster Abbey. One, Dr. John Hutton, was made a Fellow of the Royal Society in 1697. A surgeon of the 2nd Life Guards, Charles Peter, wrote pamphlets on venereal disease and on his own anti-venereal pill. Only one officer is noted as having been killed in action-John Whitfield, of Colonel Stanley's (16th) Foot, at Blenheim, but another. Thomas Wilson, is described as having died in 1711 "from barbarous usage of enemy when a prisoner." These are only a few of the notes that add to the interest of Colonel Peterkin's list.

The list is probably not complete. We would have expected to see the name of Richard Wiseman in it. Sir Thomas Longmore published a biographical study of his life in 1891. He accompanied Prince Charles after the defeat of the Royalists, was attached to the Guards, and was appointed principal surgeon and serjeant-surgeon in 1671 or 1672. The only other criticism we would venture to make of this able compilation is that it would have been less open to remark if the footnote on p. 16, "King William killed, March 8, 1702" indicated that he was killed by a fall from his horse. We recommend the book as one of historical interest. not only to the Royal Army Medical Corps, but also to all those interested in military and military medical history.

A LIST OF MEDICAL OFFICERS OF THE ARMY, 1660 TO 1727.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "JOURNAL OF THE ROYAL ARMY MEDICAL CORPS."

DEAR SIR,—With reference to your kindly notice of my Roll of early Army Medical Officers in the April number of the Journal, may I point out that Richard Wiseman was never entered in the Commission or Notification Books, from which the names and dates in the Roll in question were compiled.

In fact, he does not appear to have done any military duty after the Battle of Worcester in 1651.

There must have been many doctors attached to but not commissioned in the Army before and after the date of the beginning of the Standing Army in 1660, but their records call for research on somewhat different lines to those I have used in this case.

It was Sir Samuel and not Sir Edmund Garth who was Physician General to the Land Forces and Physician in Ordinary to George I.

Shortly afterwards another letter on the same subject appeared in the Corps' Journal from a very senior officer, who, as far as I can remember, severely castigated the writer of the original letter, and said that he considered all medical officers should make a habit of writing out their prescriptions themselves, and not trust to stock mixtures. There apparently the matter ended; possibly the war prevented the appearance of the hoped-for booklet. I should like, however, to bring forward the subject again. We all know that for routine medical work, both military and civilian, the use of well-tried and approved stock mixtures is essential and largely utilized by even the highest members of the medical profession. The present position is chaotic, every military hospital has its own little list of approved mixtures, changed at intervals by the vagaries of medical officers. It is most disconcerting for a medical officer in his frequent changes of station to find that the commonest remedies in the medical inspection room have a composition different from those to which he has previously been accustomed. A military pharmacopæia could have so much useful information in it, apart from the purely drug in fact he a military modice

BISMUTH ACETYLAMINO-OXYPHENYLARSENITE.

Levaditi, in a paper on the chemotherapy of syphilis, which appeared in The Lancet for January 30, 1926, reported favourably on a new compound containing bismuth and arsenic, namely, basic acetyloxyaminopheny arsenate of bismuth.

Fournier and Schwartz, writing in Comptes Rendus de l'Académie des Sciences, June 22, 1925, report that this drug is tolerated perfectly well, and has none of the disadvantages met with in the use of the ordinary bismuth compounds. It is said to cause the disappearance of the treponema from the tissues and the healing of specific lesions as rapidly as the best of the antisyphilitic remedies, and no relapses are recorded. The bloodtests are stated to be negative after a single series of twelve injections. In experimental trypanosomiasis of the mouse and rabbit, and in fowl spirillosis the compound is said to have a trypanicide and spirillicide effect in vivo.

Bismuth acetylamino-oxyphenylarsenite is manufactured and put on the market under the trade name "Bistovol" by May and Baker, Ltd. It is supplied in ampoules, each ampoule containing three cubic centimetres of a ten per cent suspension of the drug in oil. The dose for adults is two and a half to three cubic centimetres administered by deep intramuscular injection at intervals of four to five days.

EDITORIAL NOTICES.

The Editor will be glad to receive original communications upon professional subjects, travel, and personal experiences, etc. He will also be glad to receive items of news and information regarding matters of interest to the Corps from the various garrisons, districts, and commands at home and abroad.

All such Communications or Articles accepted and published in the "Journal of the Royal Army Medical Corps" will (unless the Author notified at the time of submission that he reserves the copyright of the Article to himself) become the property of the Library and Journal Committee, who will exercise full copyright powers concerning such Articles.

A free issue of twenty-five reprints will be made to contributors of Original Communications, and of twenty-five excerpts of Lectures, Travels, Clinical and other Notes, and Echoes of the Past.

Any demand for reprints, additional to the above, or for excerpts must be forwarded at the time of submission of the article for publication.

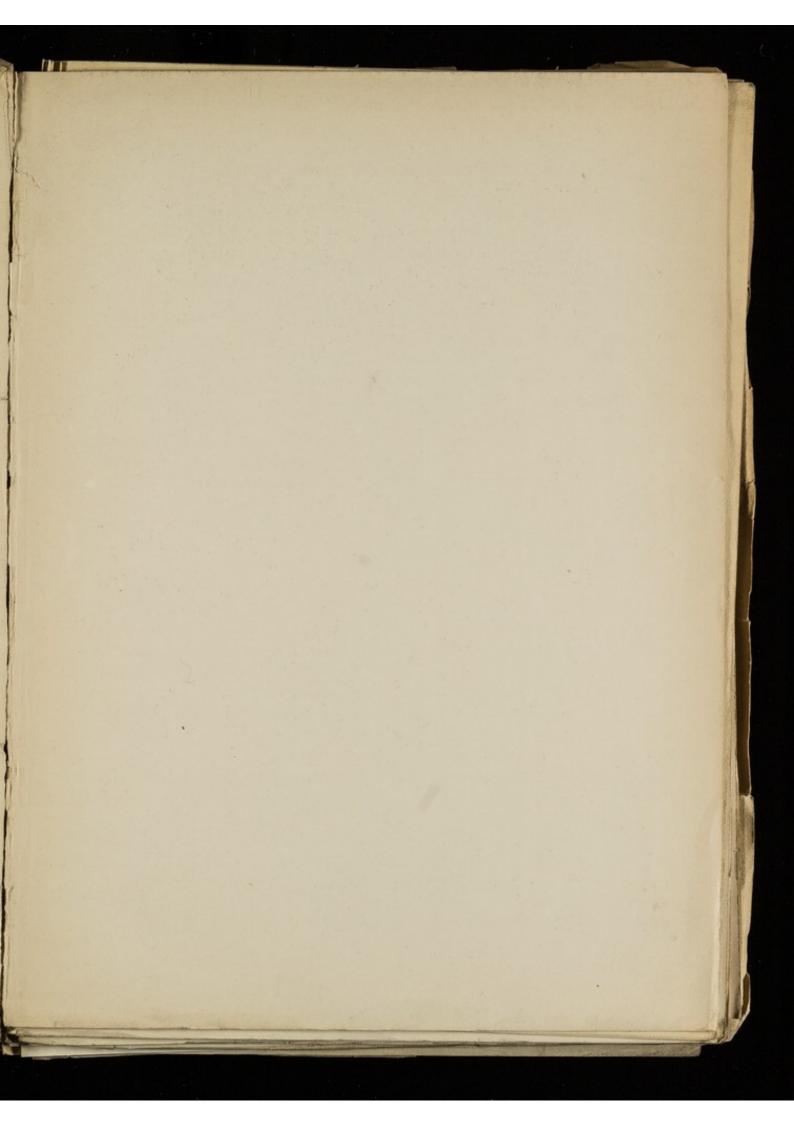

Matter intended for the Corps News should reach the Editor not later than the 15th of each month for the following month's issue. Notices of Births, Marriages, and Deaths are inserted free of charge to subscribers. All these communications should be written upon one side of the paper only; they should by preference be typewritten; but, if not, all proper names should be written in capital letters (or printed) to avoid mistakes, and be addressed: The Editor, "JOURNAL OF THE ROYAL ARMY MEDICAL CORPS." War Office, Whitehall, S.W.1.

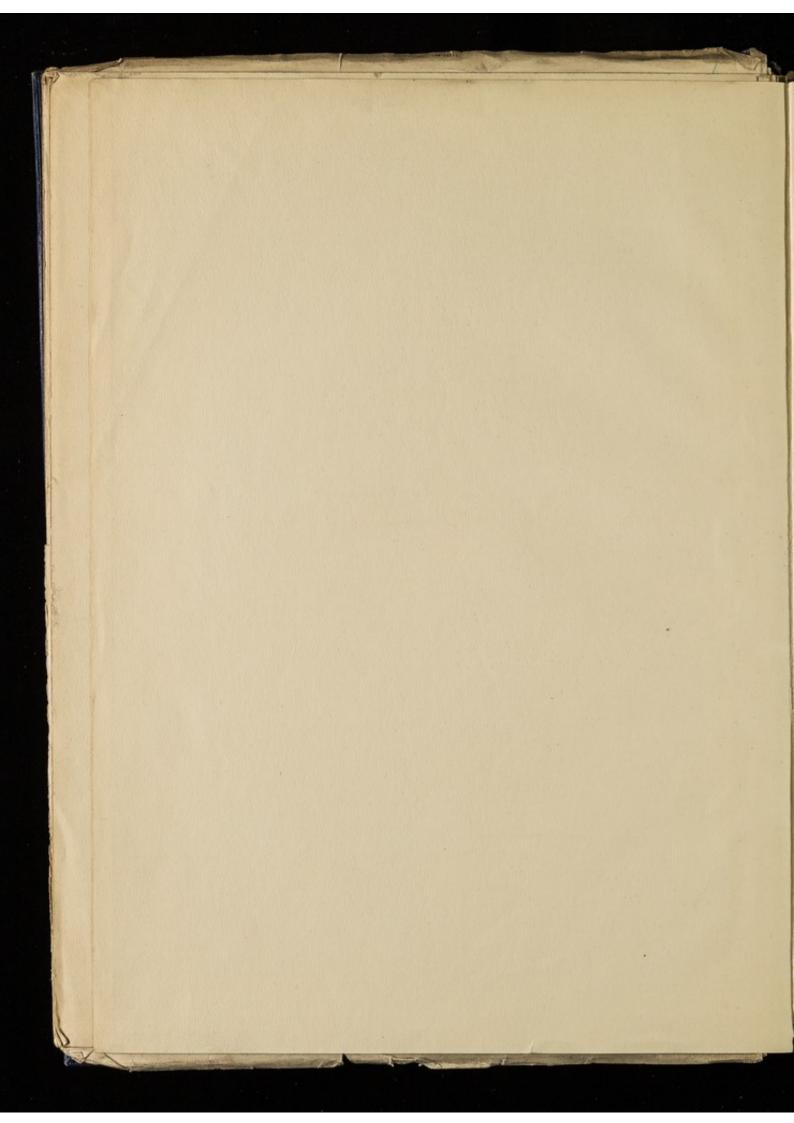

The Committee has sanctioned the publication of correspondence on matters of interest to the Corps, and of articles of a non-scientific character under a nom-de-plume. These communications must, however, be approved by the Editor before publication.

Cheques or Postal Orders for Subscriptions, etc., should be made payable to the "Hon. Manager, Journal R.A.M.C." and crossed "Holt & Co."

All communications should be addressed to The Hon. Manager, "Journal of the Royal Army Medical Corps," War Office, Whitehall, S.W. 1.

All Applications for Advertisements to be made to— G. STREET & CO., Lad., 8, Serle Street, London, W.C. 2.

FOREWORD.

As Colonel Wm. Johnston's monumental Roll of the Medical Services of the Army begins in 1727 when George II. ascended the Throne, I have thought that as complementary to that, a Roll of Army Medical Officers from the origin of the standing Army in the time of Charles II. up to 1727 would be an interesting addition to the history of the R.A.M.C., and beg herewith to submit such to my brother officers and others interested.

NOTES.

Disbanded (without date) = date of disbandment not known precisely.

(Renewal) = date of first commission not known.

"In" a given Regiment at a certain time points to date of original Commission not being precisely known.

H.P. = date of going on half-pay.

"On" h.p. at a certain time points to date of going on h.p. not being precisely known.

The nos. in square brackets after a Regiment give the modern numbers of the Regiment.

From considerations of space the present Territorial designations are not used.

When no number is given after the Regiment the particular corps has not been identified with one of the existing R giments, or is one that has been disbanded at a date not precisely known. As a rule the latter is the case.

CHARLES PETER. Surgeon to 2nd Troop Life Guards 1688. Half length line engraving 63"x6" by Jos Nutting after Ant. Schoonian - showing him a burly heavy featured man with long ill arranged hair and generally untidy look. The only information obtained about him is from the inscription on the print itself which runs as follows.

"Charles Peter. Surgeon. Served King Charles ye 2nd. in ye Dutch Warrs. Surgeon of ye Horse Guards to King James and Surgeon of the Household to King William daily prepares his cordial Tincture and Pills which have cured Thousands of ye collick, Stone, Gravell, Scurvie and Dropsy, etc. Gives advice to the Poor as well as rich at his House in St. Martin's Lane near Longacre, where he has lived between 30 and 40 years. Laus Dec. 1705. Aetat 57."

Born in 1642; he was 46 when first commissioned. His contributions to medical literature consist of a couple of pamphlets on Venereal Disease, from the title pages of which one would imagine he was going to make public the ingredients of his famous anti-Venereal pills, for the common good. However, although he enters into a short history of the disease so far as then known, the pamphlets consist but of a bold advertisement of the aforesaid pill. This same pill seems to have been a good all round sort of pill, as pills go, expelling the disease if not by a fork, yet via the fork, as its action took place by the bowels, the kidneys, the lungs and the skin, and apparently simultaneously.

Laus Dec. 1705. Aetat 57."

Born in 1642; he was 46 when first commissioned. His contributions to medical literature consist of a couple of pamphlets on Venereal Disease, from the title pages of which one would imagine he was going to make public the ingredients of his famous anti-Venereal pills, for the common good. However, although he enters into a short history of the disease so far as then known, the camphlets consist but of a bold advertisement of the aforesaid pill. This same pill seems to have been a good all round sort of pill, as pills go, expelling the disease if not by a fork, yet via the fork, as its action took place by the bowels, the kidneys, the lungs and the skin, and apparently cimultaneously.

He describes himself on the title page as "Chyrurgeon

and Practitioner" and gives the same address as on the print, mentioning also that he kept all suitable baths for the diseases treated of . Resears to have died Soonafter 1705.

[This Charles Peter must not be confused with the Charles Peters who was Physician General to the Land Forces 1739, who also wrote on Venereal diseases, editing a Eatin Poem on Syphilis: He died in 1746.

GIDEON HARVEY, M.D. Physician to the Army in Flanders 1659. Half length line Engraving by Pierre Philippe 92 x 7" shows him in early life, with flowing hair, wearing a small velvet cap - and holding a skull in his left hand.

The inscription reads: Gideon Harvaeus, utriusque Med. et Phil. Doctor Apud Londinensis practicus, et Colleg Med. Hagiens, quondam Socius. Hagie Comitis. Anno 1663.

Exeter College, Oxford. Practised on the continent and at Exeter College, Oxford. Practised on the continent, where he was Physician in ordinary to Charles II, then in Exile. Afterwards he was Physician to the Troops in Flanders and later settled in England.

He was a Voluminous writer on Medical subjects. His "Family Physician and House Apothecary" is a Collection of complicated recipes for combinations of drugs, which would certainly try the skill of the modern Housewife severely, and the internal organisation of those on whom she experimented.

"His "Conclave of Physicians" was described by himself as showing forth their "Intrigues, Frauds and Plots against their Patients."

It is understood his popularity among his brother leeches was not very marked.

The inscription reads: Gideon Haruseus, utriusque Med. et Phil. Doctor apud Londinensis practicus, et Colleg Med. Hagiens, quondam Socius. Hagie Comitis. Anno 1665.

Born 1637, he was educated on the Continent and at Exeter College, Oxford. Practised on the continent, where he was Physician in ordinary to Charles II, then in Exile. Afterwards he was Physician to the Troops in Flanders and later settled in England.

He was a Voluminous writer on Medical subjects. His "Family Physician and House Apothecary" is a Collection of complicated recipes for combinations of drugs, which would certainly try the skill of the modern Housewife severely, and the internal organisation of those on whom she experimented.

"His "Conclave of Physicians" was described by himself as showing forth their "Intrigues, Frauds and Plots against their Patients."

It is understood his popularity among his brether leeches was not very marked.

He wrote also on Venereal disease, Plague, Consumption and other matters.

He was probably the father of the Gideon Harvey who was appointed Physician to the Troops - Tower of London in 1702, and held the appointment till his death in 1754 or 1755.

He is understood to have got this appointment in the first instance through his sickly appearance.

The two favourites for the post were so equally balanced in the matter of their several interests, that Harvey was put in to avoid disputes at the time, in the fond belief a vacancy would again shortly occur.

Needless to say he saw out his rivals, and many of their successors.

Sir SAMUEL GARTH M.D., Physician General to the Forces 1714-1719. A notable Physician, Litterateur and Bon Vivant of his time.

Half length Mezzotint 13"x10" by Faber after Kneller 1733, showing him in flowing peruke and Velvet Coat. A fine print of an interesting personality. [no.30 in Kiteat South

Garth was one of those whose association with the army came late in his cafreer, and after he had tained distinction in his profession and in letters.

He was more notable as a fashionable Physician, man of letters and member of the Kitcat Club than as a medical Administrator in the army. Although in his best known poem "The Dispensary" he published some severe strictures on some of his medical Contemporaries, he was held in high estimation by Society in general and his own profession.

Born in 1659, he studied at Peterhouse, Cambridge, and at Leyden, practised in London, became Physician in ordinary to George I. and died in 1719.

"The Dispensary" was written in support of the College of Physicians which was then (1699) waging war, with the apothecaries as to the right of the latter to prescribe as well as to compound Medicines

The College triumphed at the time, only to see a few years later, the House of Lords decide in favour of the Apothecaries.

"The Dispensary" was written in support of the College of Physicians which was then (1699) waging war, with the apothecaries as to the right of the latter to prescribe as well as to compound medicines

The College triumphed at the time, only to see a You years later, the House of Lords decide in favour of the Apothecaries.

The poem is in Mock heroic strain, and has six Cantos, but while running readily enough lacks anything of the divine Afflatus - Much of its satire has now lost its point and interest.

In the first Canto, referring to the golden globe on the dome of the then College of Physicians, he calls it "a gilded pill" - possibly the earliest use of an expression sufficiently common afterwards.

He puts into the mouth of "Colocynthus," one of the Apothecaries the following disparaging gibe.

"Could thou propose that we, the friends of Fates
Who fill Churchyards and who unpeople States etc."

A definition of death given by the same Colocynthus is worth noting.

"To die, is landing on some distant shore

"Where billows never break, nor tempests roar,

"Ere well we feel the friendly stroke 'tis o'er.

"It eases lovers, sets the Captive free "And though a tyrant, offers liberty.

He was also a Classical Scholar of course and edited Cvid's Metamorphoses.

WILLIAM CHESELDEN. Surgeon to Chelsea Hospital 1737.

The famous Surgeon and anatomist. 2 Pacasis Fact. 1717.

Half length stipple engraving 6" x 3½" by Cook after Richardson. Shewn wearing a handkerchief or small pugri round his head. He was one of those whose association with Military Medicine came late in life, unless indeed he were the William Cheselden who was commissioned Surgeon to Pocock's Regiment of Foot in 1717. When appointed to Chelsea he was at the very height of his fame - and about 49 years of age, having been born in 1688.

By the time he was 23, he was lecturing on anatomy, as successor to Cowper, whose pupil he had been.

He became famous all over Europe for his operation of lateral lithotomy, first performed by him in 1727, followed shortly afterwards by the first operation for artificial pupil. His chief anatomical works were "The Anatomy of the Human Body" which passed through numerous editions and "Osteographia" his "CANCORDENCE NICE," with very fine plates and brief letterpress. He was a friend of Pope, Richardson the painter, Sir Isaac Newton, whem he attended on his death bed, and Sir Hans Sloane, and was one of the last Wardens of the Barber Surgeons Company, just before the Surgeons separated.

He was a patron of boxing, of a genial disposition which his portrait does not belie, and a general favourite. He died in 1752.

Half length oval Mezzotint. 112" x 93" by Faber after Murray, showing him apparently in Middle life, A pleasant featured man, wearing the usual flowing peruke and long lace tie.

He was born in 1660, studied in France, and graduated at Orange University in 1683.

He accompanied the Duke of Albermarle, to the West Indies, spending some time there, making many observations in Natural History, to be used later in his chief work, on the Natural History of Jamaica. He also made important collections at this time, inthe same subject. He was indeed all his life an inveterate Collector in many departments of science and art. Pictures, books, coins, precious stones etc. his collection ranged over many subjects and indeed formed the nucleus of the British Museum.

On returning from Jamaica he settled in London and speedily attained success, eventually reaching quite the top of the tree in his profession; was secretary to the Royal Society, and later still President. He amassed a large fortune which he used freely in public and private charities. He was the first medical Baronet. Buring his life he founded the botanic Gardens at Chelsea vesting

Dear Colonel Peterkin,

Please accept my thanks for your letter of the 7th inst. I am sending to-day advertisement for the R.A.M.C. Journal, and have asked for a voucher copy which I will send you when it comes.

I note you are sending a copy to Mrs. Johnston.

I also note that you are returning the copies of the vol. keeping a small quantity beside you.

I enclose a page of the British Medical Journal received to-day containing the advertisement which appeared on Sept. 26th.

Yours faithfully,

Dear Sir,

We duly received your letter of the 8th inst., as also the MS. of "Early Commissioned Officers of the Army Medical Service" in two volumes with Index.

Now that we have gone over the complete copy we find it will make 4 pages more than we estimated, and for 50 copies the cost would amount to £37:5/- (thirtyseven pounds, five shilling In addition to this amount we would advertise the volume in two of the Medical Journals and look after and despatch all orders received for the sum of £6 (six pounds).

There were about 77 copies of Colonel Johnston 's book sold.

Of course the cost of production on such a small number as 50 copies is very great as you could get a larger number printed for very little more. We suggest that you charge £1:1/- per copy plus postage but at the same time it seems a big price for a small volume, and that is due to the small number you propose to print as already mentioned above.

Dear Colonel Peterkin,

I have received your letter of the 3rd inst., for which I am obliged. I find by mistake that all the copies have been sent to you instead of lying here for us to attend to the despatch of all copies that may be ordered. In the circumstances I think probably you had better retain a few copies for your own use, sending back, at our expense, the remaining copies in order that we may be ready to despatch copies the moment they are ordered.

I enclose a copy of the Lancet containing the advertisement but I have not seen a copy of the British Medical Journal so I have written for a copy when I shall have it sent on to you.

The Journal of the R.A.M.C. has evidently seen the advertisement for they have written us suggesting an advertisement in their paper, the cost of which they say would be £1:15/- for ‡ page. This is the Journal you wrote me about and I should be glad to hear from you regarding same.

Mrs. Johnston still resides on deeside, and her address is, Newton Dee, Murtle, Aberdeenshire.

Yours sincerely.

Dear Colonel Peterkin,

I have received your letter of 12th inst., for which please accept my thanks. I was just a little afraid the binding might not be to your liking, so I have had another copy done up and hope, now that your name has been deleted, that you will approve of the cover. Kindly let me know in order that the work may be finished.

As requested, I have looked up No. 308 and now enclose the page to you.

Colonel A. Peterkin, Dunbarney, Putney Common, LONDON, S. W.

Dear Sir,

We are sending a complete bound copy of your LIST OF COMM-ISSIONED MEDICAL OFFICERS for your approval. As previously arranged, we took the get-up and lettering from Colonel Johnston's "Roll of Army Medical Officers." We trust you will be quite satisfied with the book and the lettering on the cover, as, unfortunately, through a mistake of the binder the whole 50 copies have been bound up without first submitting a specimen to you and having your approval of same. However, should the cover and lettering not fall in with your ideas we will have them put right, as, of course, the mistake is entirely due to us.

On hearing from you we will proceed to advertise the book in S. LID Q. R. Swherland the "Lancet" and "British Medical Journal."

Colonel A. Peterkin, Dunbarney, Putney Common, L O N D O N. S. W.. Estimate No. 326

Dear Sir,

We duly received your letter of the 1st inst., for which please accept our thanks.

You say the copy would represent 617 names and we estimate that it would make a pamphlet of 36 pages set like Col. Johnston's List of Officers for which 500 copies would cost £26:8:3 (twentysix pounds, eight shillings & threepence) exclusive of binding.

We hope the price will enable you to send us the order which should have our careful attention.

Yours faithfully,
