SYMPTOMS OF RABIES IN DOGS.

Change in the manner and habits of the dog, which becomes unusually affectionate at times, but at other times shows a disposition to snap at persons to whom it was formerly attached. Avoiding light by hiding in dark places. Gnawing and eating indigestible substances. Alteration of voice, the ordinary bark being replaced by a peculiar howl. Difficulty of swallowing, but no dread of water. Sometimes ropy saliva will be hanging from the mouth.

In the furious form, these premonitory symptoms are followed by paroxysms of excitement on the part of the dog, with a tendency to attack any animals or persons approaching it. Frequently the dog seeks every opportunity to escape from its home, wanders about snapping at any object which comes directly in the way, continuing its march until it finally drops and dies from exhaustion.

In dumb rabies the lower jaw drops. The dog remains quiet in some dark place, paralysis of the hind limbs soon sets in, followed by death.

Dogs showing any of these symptoms should be at once isolated till a Veterinary Surgeon can be called in.

Any person having or having had in his possession or under his charge any dog affected with or suspected of rabies is liable to a penalty under the Diseases of Animals Acts if he fails to give notice thereof with all practicable speed to a police constable of the district.
