IN AID OF THE
Wounded Women and Girls
Who are in Hospital.

JT was on the fifth of December,
They'll never forget that night—
Their sad hearts will remember
That grim and tragic sight.

The girls were working gaily,
Never dreaming danger was near:
It was work they had done daily,
And they never had any fear.

Then suddenly there came a crash—
A deadly, sickening sound—
Which made the walls and windows smash,
And all go flying round.

It was for their King and Country
Their lives they nobly gave:
For they had worked both day and night
Our brave lads' lives to save.

And amongst their relations and friends
Will be many a broken heart,
To think from those they loved so well
They had so soon to part.

'Twas a terrible experience
For our brave lasses to withstand,
But they have done their part nobly,
And God will give them their reward.

May we all try to help
This wicked war to win,
To show the German Kaiser
That we are British still.
