

Copy of a printed microscope image referenced as "Electron micrograph of parts of 2 cells and fibers from 6 day old culture"

Contributors

Randall, J. T. (John Turton), 1905-1984

Publication/Creation

November 1952

Persistent URL

<https://wellcomecollection.org/works/csazqnxx>

License and attribution

You have permission to make copies of this work under a Creative Commons, Attribution, Non-commercial license.

Non-commercial use includes private study, academic research, teaching, and other activities that are not primarily intended for, or directed towards, commercial advantage or private monetary compensation. See the Legal Code for further information.

Image source should be attributed as specified in the full catalogue record. If no source is given the image should be attributed to Wellcome Collection.

Wellcome Collection
183 Euston Road
London NW1 2BE UK
T +44 (0)20 7611 8722
E library@wellcomecollection.org
<https://wellcomecollection.org>

Lansing: Did you attach significance to that transformation?

Porter: Yes, it is doubtless related to the observation we will make in a moment: that the fibers are forming at the surface of the cell, and that in these more completely differentiated units of old culture a large part of the cell surface is transforming into fibers.

FIGURE 56. Electron micrograph of parts of 2 cells and fibers from 6-day-old culture. Mag.  $\times 4,500$ .