Composite Portraits

made by successively throwing the images of many different portraits for a short time, on the same portion of the same photographic plate. Features common to all appear in full strength; individual peculiarities leave too faint an impression to be seen; thus a typical or averaged figure is the result.

by Francis Galton, F.R.S.

HOME OFFICE,
WHITEHALL, S.W.

10 May 1877.

Dear Mr. Galton,

I enclose a hundred duplicates (gratis) of the Millbank photographs.

I have not yet got the remainder of the Deentonville copies.

Yours very truly,

Francis Galton Esq. M.P. C. Sponph.

u . u . b . .

the composite, here exhibit are made from the portraits of criminals, convicted of murder, manslaughter or robbery accompanied by violence. They shew the types of feature prevalent among such persons.

The number of component portraits that were combined to make each composite is annexed to it.

The actual portraits whence the composites in the lower row of frames were made, are placed below them.

A full description of the process is given in "Nature" May 23rd and is thence reprinted both in the "Photographic News" and in the "British Journal of Photography".
