The blind woman's appeal.

Contributors

Francis A. Countway Library of Medicine

Publication/Creation

[Place of publication not identified]: [publisher not identified], [1850-1880?]

Persistent URL

https://wellcomecollection.org/works/k2xs6r5f

License and attribution

This material has been provided by This material has been provided by the Francis A. Countway Library of Medicine, through the Medical Heritage Library. The original may be consulted at the Francis A. Countway Library of Medicine, Harvard Medical School. where the originals may be consulted. This work has been identified as being free of known restrictions under copyright law, including all related and neighbouring rights and is being made available under the Creative Commons, Public Domain Mark.

You can copy, modify, distribute and perform the work, even for commercial purposes, without asking permission.

The bearer, having lost her eyesight, and having a family to support, and not wishing to become a burden to the public, takes this means of gaining a livelihood for herself and family, and most respectfully asks your assistance. PLEASE BUY MY SONG. PRICE-What you wish to give. THE BLIND WOMAN'S APPEAL. O, ye whose eyes are open to The glorious light of day, Consider how the darkness falls Upon the blind woman's way And let compassion's finger strike Upon your heart's pure strings, That Hope may o'er her darkened life Throw her protecting wings. Ah, me! Ah, me! the Blind one's lot Is freighted deep with woe The thorns that throng their daily path, NONE BUT THE SIGHTLESS KNOW Then, O let Mercy's gentle voice Soft o'er your senses steal, And listen with kind Charity To this-My SAD APPEAL! My fate is hard-I cannot work As in the days gone by; Yet still must I my home support, And all their wants supply God knows I would not shrink from work, Nor hardships would I mind; But. ah. alas! Hope's star is sunk; I'M BLIND-I'M BLIND-I'M BLIND. As one by one the evening Stars Forth from their chambers creep, And twinkle in their rolling waves Of ocean's waters deep, There many glittering beauties rare, Are not for such as me: O God, my heart is crushed with grief, Thy works I cannot see! I hear my children's sweet, gentle voices, But cannot meet their eyes I feel the pressure of their loving kiss, Then turn away to sigh. O think of this, ye happy ones, In palace or in cot, And drop a tear of pity for My hard and wretched lot ! Then, oh, turn not away from this My sorrowing Appeal, And let the voice of Mercy, sweet, Soft o'er your heart-strings steal And this pure truth, from Holy Writ, Shall be your sweet reward-That whosoever helps the poor BUT LENDETH TO THE LORD. O, when you read the Book of Life. This lesson bear in mind-That God the Saviour restored sight Unto the helpless blind. And He has left His followers here To carry out his will; To say unto the Blind one's woes, I bid you to be still. Remember to that if on earth You cast your blessings 'round, They will yield rich and precious fruit, In God's own Heavenly ground; And, O how great will be the joy That unto you is given, When the blind woman shall SEE and bless Your entrance into HEAVEN:

It is only in a villag that the whole of hua Here every Lan live revealed. Here the virtues are the open. constantly exhibited they excite no attention. They are expected. Here the vices are pilloried They are odious. Erastus Pearl, lived over sixty years of his life in Hamilton, as clerk, merchant, neighbor, and church warden. It is only now that he is dead that we can observe that during all these long years, he lived a blameless life. He was gentle, considerate of others, slow to take offense, without malice, and full of the charity that "Thinketh no evil." It was impossible for him to suspect, or look for the false or the wrong. If the plain proof of evil was offered him, he simply dropped the subject. suffered wrong more than once, but he entertained no resentment. He preferred to be defrauded rather than harbor suspicion, or forestall the injury. To doubt the intentions of any man was to humiliate himself.

He g sion haye requi

T

deat

citize He i some ered pneu born wher spen Octo Miss survi to pl mula tinct bitic the itate belie him man clear ager: comp to m mad the Pres Pres can Com a ki frier deep ily Mal Fun St. A.

HARVARD MEDICAL LIBRARY

Francis A.Countway
Library of Medicine

the company of his neighbors of his own age grow smaller he was the more attached to the few remaining. The memory of the gracious offices of that little multitude, who in the last days came silently into the old house to do the thousand things needed to be done, gives infinite comfort to his widow and his only child. It is in the village that he loved, that neighbors in time of sorrow forgot their own household duties, and unwearyingly give service by night and day, until the darkest hour is over. It is in Hamilton that woman like Mrs. Hull Gardiner, Mrs. C.T. Alvord, Mrs. Manchester and Mrs. E. B. Gaskill, make their neighbor's burdens and griefs their own. It is here too, unlike any other place in the world, where such neighbors as Mr. and Mrs. David Mott, empty their hearts and give up their

Maxwried of the Mrs. Rev. ... Baptis which diate The g dry se & Son the Circles Taber tra for Mrs. ... evenlivisit be at Seym

PN 1083.86 18643