INTRODUCTION.

FROM the Report of the PROVOST MARSHAL GENERAL, made in 1864, are quoted the following statements to convey some idea of the extreme care bestowed in the selection of these officers, and the commendably zealous spirit of exaction displayed by the War Department in their appointment :

“ Officers desiring admission, are required to produce recommendations from the officers under whom they have served in the field, and to pass a thorough examination as to their fitness in all respects for the positions which they seek.”

“ The discipline and instruction are good.”

“ Many of the officers, including some detached from their regiments for special service, are filling with ability and usefulness positions of honor and responsibility.”
