Oldest Man Alive.

WHO'E'R thou art, of whatsoever station,
Kindly accept this humble Dedication;
And may You long the envy'd boon enjoy,
Pure Nature's choicest gift, without alloy!—
But while to You I dedicate my Page,
O, might THEY listen—THEY of Younger Age!
Who careless now, beneath the morning beam,
Glide swiftly down Corruption's fatal stream.
May THEY peruse, with profitable care,
My Book—and learn, from each example there,
To follow Nature, in her frugal plan,
And thus to lengthen out their little span!
Not Galen's skill, or Æsculapian rules,
The pride of learning, or the boast of schools;
But Temp'rance, Exercise, and all the train
Of sober virtues, chase disease and pain:—
So shall my humble labours merit praise,
And future PARRS be blest with honor'd days!

THE SILENT PARTNER

W H O E R thou art, of whatever station,
 Kindly accept this humble dedication,
 And may You long the rays of dawn enjoy,
 Pure Nature's choicest gift, with you I pray—
 But while to You I dedicate my part,
 O, might you listen—try to understand,
 Who carrels now, beneath the morning beam,
 Glide swiftly down—Corruption's fatal stream,
 May turn pearls, with profitable care,
 My Book—and learn, from each example there,
 To follow Nature, in her bright plan,
 And thus to keep, on out their hills' plan,
 Not Galen's bill, or Aesculapian staff,
 The gods of Learning, or the host of books;
 But Time's race, Health's, and all the train
 Of labor, stress, and pain, and pain—
 So shall my double labour merit praise,
 And future Fame be best with honor'd days!

PREFACE.

HAVING frequently observed some Long-Livers particularly noticed in large Works, as well as many Enquiries and Observations by the Learned, relative to Longevity, in various Publications; it occurred to me, that a Catalogue of Persons, of the age of a Century and upwards, from an early period
to

to the present time, would not be unacceptable; especially as but few Compilations of that nature have hitherto appeared; which, notwithstanding they contained very miscellaneous matter, and comprised ages so low as eighty years, were sought after with avidity, and are, consequently, now become scarce.

To the candour of the Public, therefore, I submit this Volume, containing the Names of 1712 Persons, who passed the age of one hundred years, collected, partly, from the M.S. of a Gentleman deceased; and, partly, from my own Researches; searches; in which the Reader will meet with many curious and interesting Anecdotes of the most remarkable Long-Livers, which have been drawn from various and authentic sources.

INTRODUCTION.

THE varieties of climate, and modes of living, make but little difference, as to the period of our existence, it being nearly the same with the European, as with the Negro: it will, however, be seen, by the perusal of the following sheets, that the more a man follows Nature, and is obedient to her laws, the longer he will live; and that the further he deviates from these, the shorter will be his existence.

It is not the rich and great, not those who depend on medicines, who become old; but such as use much exercise, are exposed exposed to the fresh air, and whose food is plain and moderate, as farmers, gardeners, fishermen, labourers, soldiers, &c.; and such men, as perhaps never employed their thoughts on the means which have been used to promote Longevity. It is amongst these people, chiefly, that the most astonishing instances of it are to be observed. Sometimes, in these situations, man still attains to the amazing age of one hundred and fifty years, and upwards. And here I cannot deny myself the pleasure of giving a more particular account of some of these instances; for, in cases of this kind, the most trifling circumstance is often interesting, and may be of importance.

The singular case of Henry Jenkins, of Ellerton-upon-Swale, Yorkshire, who died in the year 1670, at the very advanced age of one hundred and sixty-nine years, as recorded in the Philosophical Transactions, ought to be more generally known than it is. A few years before his death, he appeared peared as an evidence in a cause, and had an oath administered to him, which is proved by an entry in the King's Remembrancer-office in the Exchequer; the truth of which cannot, therefore, be controverted.

Another Englishman, the well-known Thomas Parr, of Winnington, Shropshire, who died in the year 1635, at the age of one hundred and fifty-two years, is likewise recorded in the Philosophical Transactions. His death is a corroborating circumstance, that the life of man, by attention to the laws of Nature, might, probably, be extended to the term of two hundred years; for, on his body being opened by Dr. Harvey, it was found to be in the most perfect state, the only cause of his death being a mere plethora, brought on by more luxurious living in London, than he had been accustomed to in his native county, where his food was very plain and homely; hence there are strong grounds for asserting, that the organization and vital vital powers of many men are capable of supporting a duration and activity of two hundred years.

“Nature is frugal, and her wants are few.”

There are also many other similar proofs in this Collection, (as may be seen under the respective dates) of which the few following instances will perhaps suffice:

Lywarch Hên, died in the year 500, aged 150 years.

Countess of Desmond, in 1612, aged 145.

Thomas Damme, in 1648, aged 154.

Peter Torton, in 1724, aged 185.

Margaret Patten, in 1739, aged 137.

John Rovin, and his Wife, in 1741, the former aged 172, the latter 164.

St. Mongah, in 1781, aged 185.

As several Authors have, in support of various systems, and for different purposes, made deductions of the number of men living at different ages beyond the common period, I have subjoined two of the most remarkable, and, as appeared to me, the most correct.

The

The following statement of the relative duration of human existence is taken from Hufeland :

Of a hundred Men who are born,

50	die before the 10th year,
20	between the 10th and the 20th.
10	———— 20th and the 30th.
6	———— 30th and the 40th.
5	———— 40th and the 50th.
3	———— 50th and the 60th.

therefore, fix only live to be above the age of sixty.

Haller, who collected the greatest number of instances respecting the age of man, found the relative duration of life to be in the following proportion :

Of Men who lived from 100 to 110 years, the instances have been 1000

from 110 to 120	————	60
———— 120 to 130	————	29
———— 130 to 140	————	15
———— 140 to 150	————	6
———— 169	————	1

But

But as this Volume, probably, contains a much more extensive Collection of Long-Livers, than any preceding work on the subject, I cannot deny myself the satisfaction of compiling from it the following Table, similar to Haller's :

Of Males and Females, who lived from 100 to 110 years (both inclusive) the instances have been

	—	—	1310
above 110 to 120	—	—	277
— 120 to 130	—	—	84
— 130 to 140	—	—	26
— 140 to 150	—	—	7

Having most scrupulously refused admittance to every account, of the authenticity of which I had the smallest doubt; I have not included the following very extraordinary Character in my Collection.

How-

However, as it is derived from two respectable Authors, I have, from the singularity of the circumstance, thought it advisable to give it a place, leaving the Reader to form his own opinion respecting it.

MAFFEUS, a Portuguese Author, who wrote The History of the Indies, which has always been a model of veracity, as well as elegant composition, mentions a man of the name of Numas de Cugna, a native of Bengal, who died in the year 1566, at the incredible age of three hundred and seventy years:

“ He was a person of great simplicity,
“ and quite illiterate; but of so extensive
“ a memory, that he was a kind of living “ chronicle, relating, distinctly and exact“ ly, what had happened within his know“ ledge in the compass of his very long “ life, together with all the circumstances “ attending it. He had four new sets of “ teeth; and the colour of his hair and b “ beard

“ beard had been very frequently changed “ from black to grey, and from grey to “ black. He asserted, that in the course “ of his life he had seven hundred wives,
“ some of whom died, and the others he “ had put away. The first century of his “ life passed in idolatry, from which he “ was converted to Mahometanism, which “ he continued to profess to his death.”—
This account is also confirmed by another Portuguese Author, Ferdinand Lopez Cas-tegeda, who was historiographer royal.

The man, who has reached the farthest extent of mortal existence, may be considered as a pattern of human nature, in its utmost perfection, and as an instance of what is possible to be attained under favourable circumstances. The expectation of a long life may be founded on such natural consequences as can never fail. It is next to impossible, that he who leads a regular and sober life should fall sick, or die a natural death before the time that Nature has pre-prescribed; for distempers cannot be produced without a cause; and if there be no bad one reigning, there can be no fatal effect, or violent death. Thus a regular life puts at a distance the sad hour of death, while every kind of excess has a contrary effect.

From country villages, and not from crowded cities, have the majority of the instances of Longevity herein recorded, been chiefly supplied. And it appears from the London bills of mortality, during a period of thirty years, viz. from the year 1728 to 1758, that the sum of the deaths amounted to 750,322, and that, in all this prodigious number, only two hundred and forty-two persons survived the hundredth year of their age! This overgrown metropolis is computed, by Dr. Price, to contain a ninth part of the inhabitants of England, and to consume annually seven thousand persons, who remove into it from the country every year, without increasing it. He moreover observes, that the number of inhabitants in England and Wales has diminished, about one fourth part, since the revolution, and so rapidly of late, that, in eleven years, near 200,000 of our common people have been lost! If the calculation be just, however alarming it may appear in a national view, there is this consolation, when considered in a philosophical light, that without partial evil, there can be no general good; and that, what a nation loses in the scale of population at one period, it gains at another; and thus, probably, the average number of inhabitants, on the surface of the globe continues, at all times, nearly the same. By this medium the world is neither overstocked with inhabitants, nor kept too thin, but life and death keep a tolerably equal pace. The inhabitants of this island, comparatively speaking, are but as the dust of the balance; yet, instead of being diminished, we are assured by other writers, writers, that they are, of late years, greatly increased.

I have already observed, that fresh air is more immediately necessary to life than food; for a man may live two or three days without the latter, but not many minutes without the former. The vivifying principle contained in the atmosphere, so essential to the support of flame, as well as animal life, concerning which authors have proposed so many conjectures, appears now to be nothing else but that pure dephlogisticated fluid, discovered by that ingenious philosopher, Dr. Priestley. The common atmosphere may well be supposed to be more or less healthy, in proportion as it abounds with this animating principle. As this exhales, in copious streams, from the green leaves of all kinds of vegetables, even from those of the most poisonous kind, may we not, in some measure, account why instances of Longevity are so much more frequent in the country than in

in great cities, where the air, instead of partaking of this salutary impregnation, is daily contaminated with noxious animal effluvia, and phlogiston?

With respect to climate, various observations conspire to prove, that those regions, which lie within the temperate zones, are best calculated to promote long life. Hence, perhaps, may be explained, why Islands in general are more salutary than Continents: and, it is a pleasing circumstance, that our own Island appears, from the following sheets, (notwithstanding the sudden vicissitudes to which it is liable) to contain far more instances of Longevity than could well be imagined. The ingenious Mr. WHITEHURST, in his Enquiry into the Original State and Formation of the Earth, assures us, from certain facts, that Englishmen are, in general, longer lived than North Americans; and that a British constitution will last longer, even in that climate, than a native one.

But

But it must be allowed, in general, that the human constitution is adapted to the peculiar state and temperature of each respective climate; so that no part of the habitable globe can be pronounced too hot, or too cold, for its natural inhabitants. Yet, in order to promote a friendly intercourse between the most remote regions, the Author of Nature has wisely enabled the inhabitants to endure great and surprising changes of temperature with impunity.

From the light which history affords us, as well as from many instances in the following Collection, there is much reason to believe, that Longevity is, in a great measure, hereditary; and that healthy, long-lived parents would commonly transmit the same blessings to their children, were it not for the frequent irregularities in meat, drink, and exercise, which so evidently tend to the abbreviation of human life.

Whence is it, but from these causes, and
the

the unnatural modes of living, that, of all the children which are born in the capital cities of Europe, nearly one-half die in early infancy? To what else can we attribute this extraordinary mortality? Such an amazing proportion of premature deaths is a circumstance unheard of among savage nations, or among the young of other animals! In the earliest ages of the world, we are informed, that human life was protracted to a very extraordinary length; yet how few persons, in these latter times, arrive at that period which nature seems to have designed! Man is, by nature, a field-animal, and seems destined to rise with the sun, and to spend a large portion of his time in the open air, to inure his body to robust exercises, and the inclemency of the seasons, and to make a plain homely repast, only when hunger dictates. But Art has studiously defeated the kind intentions of Nature; and by enslaving him to all the blandishments of sense, has left him, alas! an easy victim to folly and caprice! To enu-

enumerate the various abuses, which take place from the earliest infancy, and which are continued through the succeeding stages of modish life, would exceed my limits. Suffice it to observe, that they prevail more particularly among people, who are the most highly polished and refined.— To compare their artificial mode of life with that of nature, or even with the Long-Livers in this Work, would, probably, afford a very striking contrast; and, at the same time, supply an additional reason, why, in very large cities, instances of Longevity are so very rare. Of late years, the increasing luxury and dissipation of the age, no longer confined to the metropolis, have spread their contagion far and wide into the country, so as to afford the sage Divine, and speculative Moralist, a more melancholy prospect of the apparent degeneracy of the human race, than perhaps was ever before exhibited!

It is worthy of remark, that the greater part

part of mankind, who have become very old, were married more than once, and generally at a very late period of life. There is scarce an instance of a batchelor having attained to a great age. This observation is as applicable to the female, as to the male sex.

In the first half of man's age, an active, even a fatiguing life, is conducive to Longevity; but in the last half, a life that is peaceful and uniform. No instance can be found of an idler having attained to a remarkably great age.

Buffon observes, "the duration of life may, in some measure, be computed by the time occupied in growth. A plant or an animal that acquires maturity in a short time, perishes much sooner than those which are longer in arriving at that period.

"Every object in nature must change and

and decay. No sooner do the bodies of men arrive at full maturity, than they instantly begin to decline. The waste is at first insensible; several years frequently revolve before we perceive any considerable alteration,

“ If the constitution be found, life may, doubtless, be prolonged for many years, by moderating the passions, and by temperance. If it should be asked, why the first races of men, as recorded in the Holy Scriptures, lived upwards of nine hundred years? perhaps a satisfactory answer may be given. The productions of the earth were then of a different nature. The surface of the globe was, in the first ages of the world, less solid and compact. The period of man's existence, therefore, may have gradually diminished, in proportion as the surface of the earth acquired more solidity by the constant action of gravity. It is probable, that the period from the Creation, to the days of David, was sufficient to give the earth all the density it was capable of receiving from the influence of gravitation; and, consequently, that the surface of the earth has ever since remained in the same state, and that the terms of growth in the productions of the earth, as well as the duration of life, have been invariably fixed from that period.

“ Death is common to vegetables, as well as animals. An oak only perishes, because the oldest parts of the wood, which are in the centre, become so hard and compact, that they can receive no further nourishment. The moisture they contain being deprived of circulation, and not replaced by fresh sap, ferments, corrupts, and gradually reduces the fibres of the wood into powder.

“ Thus it is with old men, who are subject to natural infirmities that originate solely from the decay of the different parts of the body. The head shakes, the hands trem-tremble, the legs totter, the sensibility of the nerves decreases, and every sense is blunted. At about the age of seventy years, decrepitude commences, and continues to augment, till eighty or ninety, when death commonly puts a period to the existence of those few, who have been so fortunate as to wade through such length of life, without being taken off its stage by the innumerable host of diseases, and casual accidents, to which the human frame is subject; and which openly and secretly prey upon our lives."

"That so complicated a machine, as the human body," says our worthy countryman, Fothergill, "so delicate in its texture, and so exquisitely formed in all its parts, should continue, for so many years, to perform its various functions, even under the most prudent conduct, is not a little surprising: but that it should ever hold out to any advanced period, under all the rude shocks it so often meets with from riot and intemintemperance, which lay it open to all the various "ills that flesh is heir to," is still more truly miraculous! But here, perhaps, it may be observed, that all the Long-Livers did not pursue one uniform, regular course of life, since it will be seen, that a few of the most noted ones were sometimes guilty of great deviations from strict temperance and regularity. Let not this, however, encourage the giddy libertines of the present age, to hope to render their continued scenes of intemperance and debauchery compatible with Health and Longevity. The duties and occupations of life will not, indeed, permit the generality of mankind to live by rule, and subject themselves to a precise regimen. Fortunately, this is not necessary; for the divine Architect has, with infinite wisdom, rendered the human frame so ductile, as to admit of a very considerable latitude of health; yet this has its bounds, which none can long transgress with impunity. For if Old Parr, notwithstanding some excesses and irregularities, arrived at so astonishing an age, yet we have reason to suppose that these were far from being habitual; and may also conclude, that had it not been for these abuses, his life might have been still considerably protracted.

with-

“ On the whole, though some few exceptions may occur to what has been already advanced, yet it will be found, in general, that all extremes are unfriendly to Health and Longevity. Excessive heat enervates the body; extreme cold renders it torpid: sloth and inactivity clog the necessary movements of the machine; incessant labour soon wears it out. On the other hand, a temperate climate, moderate exercise, pure country air, and strict temperance, together with a prudent regulation of the passions, will prove the most efficacious means of protracting life to its utmost limits. Now if any of these require more peculiar attention than the rest, it is, undoubtedly, the last:

last: for the social passions, like gentle gales, fan the brittle vessel calmly along the ocean of life, while, on the other hand, rough, turbulent ones dash it upon rocks and quicksands. Hence, perhaps, it may be explained, why the cultivation of philosophy, music, and the fine arts, all which manifestly tend to humanize the soul, and to calm the rougher passions, are so highly conducive to Longevity. And, finally, why there is no sure method of securing that habitual calmness and serenity of mind, which constitute true happiness, and which are, at the same time, so essential to health and long life, without virtue."

HUMAN

HUMAN LONGEVITY.

Obiit A. D. 66.

Marcus Androgeneus—Ætat. 107.

HE was slain in battle in the reign of the Emperor Nero, as appears from an ancient inscription on a stone at Lower-Kibworth, Leicestershire.

95.

Apollonius—130.

Of Tyana, in Cappadocia; a Pythagorean philosopher. At the age of sixteen years, he became a strict observer of the rules of Pythagoras, renouncing wine, women, and all sorts of flesh; not wearing shoes, letting his hair grow, and wearing nothing but linen. He soon after set up for a reformer of mankind, and chose for his habitation the temple of Æsculapius, where he is said to have performed many miraculous cures. Philostratus has written the Life of Apollonius, in which there are numberless fabulous stories recounted of him. We are told that he went five years without speaking, and yet, during this time, that he stopped many seditions in Cilicia and Pamphylia: that he travelled, and set up for a legislator; and that he gave out that he understood all languages, without having ever learned them; that he could tell the thoughts of men, and understood the oracles, which birds gave by their singing. The heathens were fond of opposing the pretended miracles of this man to those of our Saviour: and by a treatise which Eusebius wrote against one Hierocles, we find, that the drift of the latter, in the treatise which Eusebius refutes, had been to draw a parallel betwixt Jesus Christ and Apollonius, in which he gives the preference to this philosopher.

356.

St. Anthony the Great—105.

Of the village of Coma, in Egypt. He was institutor of the monastic life. Having heard these words of the " Gospel, Yet lackest thou
 " one thing, sell all that thou hast, and distri" bute

“bute unto the poor, and thou shalt have “treasure in Heaven,” he resolved to retire from the world. He sold his goods, distributed the money to the poor, and buried himself in solitude. His fame attracted such a number of disciples that he was obliged to cause several monasteries to be built in the desert. His body remained hidden two centuries, from the fidelity of two of his disciples, whom he had requested to inter him secretly.

491.

St. Patrick—122.

The first bishop in Ireland. He was carried a captive thither from Scotland at the age of sixteen years.

500.

Attila—124.

King of the Huns. Hearty and strong at such great age, he led to the altar of Hymen, as a second wife, one of the most beautiful princesses of the age, and the next day died of excess.

Lywarch Hén—150.

A Welsh bard; contemporary with King
Arthur. He had twenty-four sons, who all fell resist-resisting the Saxons. His Elegy on Old Age, and their Deaths, is still remaining.

B 2

618.

St. Coemgene—120.

Commonly called St. Keiven the Founder. He was both bishop and abbot of Gleandalock, or the seven churches in Wicklow, in Ireland. He abdicated his bishoprick, and contented himself with his abbacy, and lived a solitary life in the above place.

861.

Piaſtus—120.

King of Poland. He was raised from a mean state to the throne in 824, and gained immortal glory amongst his countrymen, by his prudent government.

1499.

Agnes Skuner—119.

Of Camberwell, Surry. She was wife of Richard Skuner, who died Jan. 1407, as appears by a very ancient Latin inscription on a monument in Camberwell church. The antiquity of the monument is very deserving the attention of

of the curious; but when the extraordinary age of the wife is properly considered, who survived her husband ninety-two years, it must appear to be one of the most remarkable inscriptions in this, or any other country.

1566.

Lewis Cornaro—104.

Of Padua; a Venetian nobleman. About the age of thirty-six, his life was endangered by his excesses. Being sensible of his folly, he resolved to lead a life of the strictest temperance; and though at seventy, he was overthrown in his coach, whereby his head was broken, and a leg and arm dislocated, he recovered without any other application than a simple bandage. At the age of ninety-five, this extraordinary person wrote a treatise on the Birth and Death of Man.

1612.

The Countess of Desmond—145.

Of Ireland. She was married in the reign of King Edward IV., was in England the same reign, and danced with the Duke of York, the King's brother. Upon the ruin of the house of Desmond, she was obliged, at the great age of one hundred hundred and forty, to travel from Bristol to London, to solicit relief from the Court, being reduced to poverty. Lord Bacon says, she renewed her teeth twice or thrice. This remarkable lady was a subject for the pens of a variety of authors. She retained her vigour to the last.

In the reign of King James I., (about this period) a morris-dance was exhibited in Herefordshire, consisting of twelve persons, whose age each, on an average, amounted to one hundred years.

1635.

Thomas Parr—152.

Of Winnington, Shropshire, a poor countryman. At the age of eighty-eight, he married his first wife, by whom he had two children, who died young. At the age of one hundred and two, he fell in love with Catharine Milton, whom he got with child, and for which he did penance in the church. At the age of one hundred and twenty, he married a widow woman; and at the very advanced age of one hundred and thirty, he was able to do any husbandry work, even the threshing of corn. He frequently eat

eat by night, as well as by day; was contented with skimmed cheefe, milk, coarse bread, small beer, and whey; and, what is remarkable, he eat at midnight, a little before he died. He had seen ten kings and queens of England. A few years before his death, he was brought to London by Thomas, Earl of Arundell, who presented him to King Charles I.; and about that time the Countess of Arundell presented a midwife to the queen, who was one hundred and twenty-three years old, and who exercised her profession but two years before. Parr was now a domestic in the family of the Earl of Arundell, fed high, and drank plentifully of the best wines, by which, after a constant, plain, and homely diet, the natural functions of the parts of his body were overcharged, his lungs obstructed, and the habit of the whole body quite disordered; in consequence, there could not but speedily ensue a dissolution. If he had not changed his diet, he might possibly have lived many years longer. His body being opened after death, it was found to be very fleshy: his heart was thick and fat; his viscera very sound and strong, especially the stomach; his kidneys were covered with fat, and pretty sound, as were also the several members of his body.

1648.

Thomas Damme—154.

Of Leighton, near Minshul, in the palatinate of Chester, as may be seen by his gravestone, on which his age is cut (to prevent mistakes) in words at length. The church register is signed by the Rev. T. Holdford, vicar; and T. Kennerly and J. Warburton, church-wardens.

1650.

Mr. Hastings—100.

He was son, brother, and uncle to the Earl of Huntingdon, and was an original character. In the year 1638, he resided at Woodlands, in the county of Dorset. The mansion-house stood in the middle of the park surrounded with deer, fish-ponds, and plenty of hares and rabbits. Mr. H. kept all sorts of hounds for buck, fox, otter, hare, and badger; long and short-winged hawks. The great hall was filled with all kinds of dogs and cats in great plenty; game-keepers' and hunters' poles; with a vast number of hawks, perchers, terriers, hounds, spaniels, and marrow-bones. The walls of the house were covered with the skins of foxes and polecats. The great great parlour windows were filled with cross-bows, stone-bows, and arrows. His old green hats were full of pheasants' eggs, and litters of young cats. Tables, dice, cards, and books were not wanting. The pulpit in the chapel was well stored with gammons of bacon, roast beef, venison-pasties, and large apple-pies. His cellar, in which was plenty of excellent strong beer, was always open to his neighbours. He dived into the secrets of a great majority of the maids, wives, and widows in his neighbourhood. His pulpit door was always open, which made him much caressed. He was very temperate at meals, when he only drank one pint of small beer stirred with rosemary, and one or two glasses of wine with syrup of gilliflowers. His dress was always green cloth, with a green hat. He eat oysters twice a day throughout the year; and rode to the death of a stag when near ninety years of age.

Frances Woodworth—102.

Of Carlton, in Craven. She left a son aged sixty-nine years.

1668.

1668.

Mary Allison—108.

Of Thorlby, in the parish of Skipton. She was able to spin two years before her death.

John Sagar—112.

Of Burnley, Lancashire.

1670.

Henry Jenkins—169.

Of Ellerton Upon Swale, Yorkshire. He remembered the battle of Plowden-Field, which was fought Sept. 9, 1513, when he was about twelve years old. He was then sent to Northallerton with a cart-load of arrows, but an older boy was sent to the army with them, bows and arrows being then in use. At this time King Henry VIII. was at Tournay, in France. At Ellerton there were also living, at the same time, four or five old men, reputed to be one hundred years each, and they observed that Jenkins was an elderly man, when they first knew him, for he was born in another parish, and before church registers were in use. Jenkins was once butler to Lord Conyers; he perfectly well remembered the Abbot of Fountain'stain's-Abbey, before the dissolution of the monasteries: and was the oldest man born upon the ruins of this postdiluvian world. In the last century of his life, he was a fisherman, and often swam in the rivers after he had attained the age of one hundred years. His diet was coarse and sour. In the King's remembrancer-office, in the Exchequer, there is a record of a deposition in a cause by English Bill, between Anthony Clark and Smirkson, taken, April 1665, at Kettering, Yorkshire, where Henry Jenkins, of Ellerton-upon-Swale, labourer, aged one hundred and fifty-seven years, was produced and deposed as a witness. He was buried at Belton, Yorkshire. In 1743, a monument, with a suitable epitaph inscribed, was erected to his memory.

Thomas Wiggin—108.

Of Carlton, in Craven. He was able to walk till near the time of his death, and was a very fair corpse.

Dr. Glysson—100.

Physician to Queen Elizabeth. His aspect was venerable and engaging, and his hair very much resembled snow.

1671.

1671.

Robert Montgomery—127.

Of Skipton, in Craven. He was born in Scotland; the oldest inhabitant of Skipton never knew him otherwise than as an old man. He latterly obtained his living by begging, which he was able to do the year preceding his death.

1685.

Gustavus Holme—132.

A Dover pilot; was buried at Stoke, near Canterbury.

1687.

Stephen Rumbold—105.

Of Brightwell, Oxfordshire. On his tomb in the church-yard of that place, is the following inscription:

“ He lived one hundred and five “ Sanguine and strong;

“ An hundred to five

“ You live not so long.”

1691.

Mrs. Eckleston—143.

Of Phillip's-town, King's County, in Ireland.

1698.

1698.

John Moorze—104.

Of Lymington, Hants, a pedling ironmonger. He was remarkably fresh and lively to the last, and could bear the severest weather.

1706.

John Bayles—126.

Of Northampton.

1710.

The Sieur Castra—111.

Of Bourdeaux, a celebrated advocate.

Rachel de Bichois—107.

Of Rochelle. During the siege of that town in 1628, by Cardinal Richlieu's persuasions, she turned Roman Catholic; and Louis XIII. to do her honour, dined twice with her at her pleasure-house, six miles from the town, into which the inconveniencies of the siege had obliged her to retire. She was mother of twenty-two children.

1711.

1711.

Jane Scrimshaw—127.

She was born in the parish of Bow, and died in Rosemary-lane work-house, London.

1714.

William Wakeley—124.

A native of Shiffnal, Shropshire. He lived in the reigns of eight kings and queens, and was buried at Adbaston, which is recorded on a small board affixed to a pillar opposite the pulpit in Shiffnal church.

1724.

Peter Torton—185.

Of Temeswar, in Hungary, a peasant. The remarkable longevity of this man exceeds the age of Isaac, five years; of Abraham, ten; falls short of Terah's, Abraham's father, twenty; and exceeds that of Nahor, Abraham's grandfather, thirty-seven.

1731.

Robert Bristow—105.

Of Stamford, Lincolnshire. He had lost his hearing, but enjoyed his sight, and other senses, to the last.

Duchess

Duchess of Tyrconnel—104.

Of Dublin. She was sister to the Duchess Dowager of Marlborough.

Timothy Coward—114.

Of Kendal, Lancashire.

Mr. Eaton—107.

Of Salisbury-court, London.

William Edie—120.

Of Canongate, in Edinburgh, bellman. He had buried the inhabitants of Canongate thrice. He was ninety years a freeman, and married a second wife after he was one hundred years of age.

James Anderson—108.

Of Stonehive, in Scotland.

1732.

Isaac Finch—104.

Of Watford, Hertfordshire, leather-feller.

Mrs. Simpson—106.

Wife of Mr. Simpson, keeper of Busby Park.

Mrs.

Mrs. Herriman—115.

Of St. Martin's Le Grand.

Ann Ross—118.

Of Leith, in Scotland.

Mr. Cotsworth—100.

Of St. Dunstan's in the West, London, watch-maker. He was the oldest inhabitant of the parish.

Susannah Beberns—106.

Of Sherbourn-lane. Her mother was one hundred and eight years old.

Catharine Bayles—102.

Of Northampton. Her father was one hundred and twenty-six.

William Leland—140.

Of Lisneskea, in Ireland. Though he lived to such great age, he never was sick, or lost the use of any of his faculties till the hour of his death.

1733.

William Haseling—112.

Of Chelsea College, in which he was the oldest oldest pensioner. He served in the parliament army, at Edgehill; under King William, in Ireland; and the Duke of Marlborough, in Flanders. He married and buried two wives, after he was one hundred; and the third, who survived him, he married at the age of one hundred and ten. Besides his pension from the college, he was allowed a crown a week from the Duke of Richmond and Sir Robert Walpole.

Anne Kerney—110.

Of Red-Lion-square, London; a maiden lady.

Mr. Gundy—116.

Of Hyde-Park-corner, London; a gentleman of large fortune.

Mrs. Harrison—104.

Of Hampstead, Middlesex.

Mrs. Malton—105.

Of Reading, Berks; a maiden lady.

Mr. Truss—112.

Of Clayhill, near Enfield, Middlesex. He was a soldier in the army of Oliver Cromwell.

1734.

Sir John Harmon Whitfield—101.

Of Buckland, Dorset. In 1700 he changed his name from Harmon to Whitfield, by act of parliament, on account of a large estate left him by John Whitfield, of Yorkshire, Esq.

Barton de Cuney, Esq.—100.

Formerly an assistant clerk of the Treasury.

William Thurmond, Esq.—105.

Resided near Carlisle. In 1645, he was in the battle of Naseby, and lost an arm by a musket-ball.

John Rousey, Esq.—138.

Of the island of Distrey, in Scotland. At the age of one hundred years, his son was born, who afterwards inherited his estate.

Sir John Lewis—104.]

Of Northamptonshire.

Thomas Simpson—100.

Keeper of Bushy-park above sixty years. His wife died in 1732, aged one hundred and six years.

John

John Burnet—109.

Of Broadwater, Suffex. He married six wives, three of them after he was one hundred years old; and died in the same house in which he was born.

1735.

Mary Dennis—106.

Pensioner in St. George's work-house.

Captain Joseph Stanley—102.

He was forty-five years in the West-India service.

Of the royal navy; formerly commander of the Boyne man of war.

Mrs. Pimm—105.

Of Soho, London. She died without any seeming impair of her senses.

Mrs. Eyre—104.

A relation of the late Lord Chief Justice Eyre.

Margaret Finch—109.

She was one of the wandering fraternity of Gypsies, of whom she was called Queen, and was a singular character. Her manner of life was was the same as is usual with those people. Towards the close of her existence, she took up her residence at Norwood, a place famed for the resort of her vagabond subjects.

1741.

John Rovin—172.

His Wife—164.

Of the Bannat of Temeswar, in Hungary. Both died the same year, in the one hundred and forty-eighth year of their marriage, leaving two sons and two daughters, besides many grandchildren. Their youngest son was one hundred and sixteen years of age.

Ann Grindall—104.

Of Crockware, Gloucestershire.

1742.

John Phillips—117.

Of Thorn, near Leeds, Yorkshire. He lived under eight crowned heads, and was able to walk till within a few days of his death. His teeth were good, and his sight and hearing tolerable. At about the age of twenty-eight, being constable of his parish, he, upon some disorders, committed two of Oliver Cromwell's soldiers

foldiers in the town-stocks; who, far from resenting it, wished that every one of his men had but half his courage.

William Hodges—102.

Of Maidstone.

James Littlejohn—118.

Of the parish of Mochrum, Gallowayshire, in Scotland. He had seen King Charles I. and Oliver Cromwell, in Scotland, and described them very justly. He retained all his faculties to the time of his decease.

1743.

Lady Nevil—100.

Relict of Sir James Nevil, Bart.

Agnes Milborne—106.

Of St. Luke's workhouse, London. She had twenty-nine sons, and one daughter, by one husband, twenty of whom frequently followed her to church, but survived all her children and grandchildren, except one grandson.

1746.

James Stroud—107.

Of Carshalton, Surry, farmer. He left fifteen children, and enjoyed the perfect use of his senses till a few days previous to his death.

Sir Henry Featherstone, Bart.—100.

Near Bloomsbury-square, London; a gentleman of vast wealth.

1747.

1747.

John Cuppage—104.

Formerly steward to Sir W. Pennington, Bart. of Mancafter-hall, Drigg, Cumberland. He had four wives, and only four daughters, each of which had fourteen children, so at his death he was grandfather to fifty-six, great grandfather to nineteen, great great grandfather to eleven, and great great great grandfather to four. He retained his faculties in a remarkable degree, and expressed a wish to see an end to the rebellion, having been very active against the rebels, in 1715.

Ann Welding—113.

Of Northall, in the parish of Eddleborough, Bucks.

William Catanack—119.

Of Pluscardin, parish of Elgin, in the north of Scotland.

Bernard le Bovier de Fontenelle—100.

Son of François le Bovier de Fontenelle, advocate in the parliament of Rouen, and of Martha Corneille, sister to the great dramatic poet, Corneille, was born at Rouen, Feb. 11, 1657; and though so weak at his birth that his life was not expected, yet he lived to the above great age. He was the first that introduced elegance into the sciences. If he should be sometimes thought to have interwoven more beauties than the nature of the subject would admit, we must regard his composition as a plentiful crop, where flowers grow naturally among the corn. His natural talents were assisted by a knowledge of the languages and history; and he certainly surpasses all men of learning, who have not had the gift of inven-invention. His conversation was lively, though placid, and his politeness was equal to his wit.

This great author died, without ever having had any violent disorder, or felt any of the maladies of age, till he was turned of ninety; after which he was a little deaf, and his eyes, in some degree, failed. The tranquil ease of his temper is thought to have contributed to extend his life to this unusual period.

He was dean of the French academy, and fellow of the Royal Society of London, and of the Royal Academy of Berlin.

Margaret Krasowna—108.

Of the village of Koninia, in Poland. At the age of ninety-four, she married her third husband, Gaspard Raykott, of the village of Ciwoufzin, then aged one hundred and five; during the fourteen years they lived together, they had two boys and one girl; and what is very remarkable, these three children bore evident marks of the old age of their father and mother, their hair being grey, and a vacuity in their gums like that which appears after the loss of the teeth, though they never had any; they had not strength enough to chew solid food, but lived on bread and vegetables; they were a proper size for their age, but their backs were bent, their complexions were fallow, and they had all the other symptoms of decrepitude. Though most of these particulars may appear fabulous, they are certified by the parish registers: the village of Ciwoufzin is in the district of Stenzick, in the palatinate of Sandomir. Gaspard Raykott, the father, died soon after, aged one hundred and nineteen.

In this year, when Christian VI. King of Sweden, and his Queen, Sophia Magdalena, visited their Norwegian dominions, they resided at

at the house of lieutenant-colonel Colbiornson, in Friderickshall, who was desirous of diverting his royal guests with what is called a jubilee wedding, which was performed in the garden, under tents pitched for that purpose. There were four couples married, being country people invited from the adjacent parts, each of whom was one hundred years of age. Such an instance of longevity, in eight persons met together, probably before was never equalled, nor ever may be again. Their names were:

Torrefson Sologsteen, and his wife Kelje.

Jern Oer, and his wife Inger.

Ole Bessabar, and his wife N—.

Hans Forlasken, who brought with him, as his partner, Joran Gallen; she was not his wife, but being one hundred years of age, he had borrowed her for this very extraordinary ceremony.

These eight people made themselves extremely merry at this jubilee-wedding; the women, according to the custom of the country, danced with green wreaths on their heads, which, in Norway, are always worn by brides on their wedding-day. They had each a genteel present, to defray their expences home.

Fluellyn Pryce—101.

Of Glamorgan. His organs had been so little injured by the weight of years, that within three years of his death, he directed a village choir in some variations for the Sunday. He never used spectacles, till within fifteen months of his dissolution, and possessed a great flow of spirits, attended with sound health and activity; which blessings were the result of his abstemious manner of living. Herb teas were his breakfast; meat plainly dressed, his dinner; and, instead of a supper, he refreshed himself with smoking a pipe of tobacco. With a slender education, this man had a strong natural genius; and his passion for the Muses produced a poem, entitled, Carmenta; predicting, with great humour, the events of the administration of the Duke of Newcastle, and the juncture of that period.

Catha-

Catharine Hales—109.

Of Gourton, in the parish of Laffwade, in Scotland.

A Man at Fladund, in Germany, aged one hundred. The year before his death, he did not appear to be more than seventy years of age, when he travelled from Fladund, the distance of sixty miles, and performed the journey, on foot, in two days. His reason for undertaking this journey, at his very advanced time of life, was to present a petition to the Prince Bishop of Osnaburgh, praying that he would be pleased to give to one of his sons the mastership of a school at Fladund, which was then vacant. The Bishop, pleased with a sight of a person, so venerable and old, yet strong and vigorous, yielded to his request, and gave orders that his son should have the grant of the place immediately. The Bishop entertained him many days in his palace, and gave him a new suit of clothes. He dined with him daily, had the old man's picture drawn by Mr. Tefel, painter to his Highness; and, on dismissing him, presented him with a considerable sum of money, and settled a pension on him for life. The Bishop did not suffer him to return again on foot to Fladund, but sent him home in one of his own coaches.

Mr. Tasker—103.

Near Peterham, Surry, farmer.

Edward

Edward Drinker—103.

82
Of Philadelphia. He lived on very solid food, drank tea in the afternoon, but eat no supper. He was an amiable character, uniformly chearful and kind to every body: his religious principles were as steady, as his morals were pure. He was four times married, and had eighteen children, all by his first wife: lost his teeth thirty years before he died, by drawing extremely hot tobacco.

The life of this man was marked with several circumstances, which have seldom occurred in the life of an individual. He saw the same spot of earth covered with wood, and a receptacle for beasts and birds of prey, afterwards become the seat of a city, not only the first in wealth and arts in the new, but rivalling in both, many of the first cities in the old world. He saw regular streets, where he once pursued a hare; churches rising upon morasses, where he had often heard the croaking of frogs; wharfs and warehouses, where he had often seen Indian savages draw fish from the river for daily subsistence; ships of every size and use in those streams, where he had often seen nothing but Indian canoes; a stately edifice, filled with legislators, astonishing the world with their wisdom and virtue, virtue, on the same spot, probably, where he had seen an Indian council-fire. He saw the first treaty ratified between the newly-confederated powers of America, and the ancient monarchy of France, with all the formalities of parchment and seals, where he had seen William Penn ratify his first and last treaty with the Indians, without the formalities of pen, ink, and paper; he witnessed all the intermediate stages through which a people pass, from the lowest to the highest degree of civilization; the beginning and the end of the empire of Great Britain in Pennsylvania. He had been the subject of crowned heads, and afterwards died a citizen of the newly-created republic of America. He embraced the liberties and independence of America, and triumphed in the last years of his life in the salvation of his country.

" I was

“ I was young, I find myself young now I am “ old. I led a sober, studious, but not a lazy, or “ sedentary life. My diet was sparing, though “ delicate; my liquors, the best wines of Xerez
“ and La Mancha, of which I never exceeded a “ pint at any meal, except in cold weather, when “ I allowed myself a third more. I rode or “ walked every day, except in rainy weather,
“ when I exercised for a couple of hours. So “ far I took care for the body: and, as to the “ mind, I endeavoured to preserve it in due tem“ per, by a scrupulous obedience to the divine “ commands, and keeping (as the Apostle directs)
“ a conscience void of offence, towards God and “ man. By these innocent means I have arrived “ at the age of a patriarch, with less injury to my “ health and constitution, than many experience
“ at forty. I am now, like the ripe corn, ready “ for the sickle of death; and, by the mercy of “ my Redeemer, have strong hopes of being “ translated into his garner.” “ Glorious old “ age!” said the King of Spain: “ Would to “ Heaven he had appointed a successor! for the “ people of Seville have been so long used to “ excellence, they will never be satisfied with the “ best prelate I can send them.” The Cardinal was of a noble house, in the province of Andalusia, and the last surviving son of Don Antonio de Salis, historiographer to Philip IV. and author of The Conquest of Mexico.

Of Peterburgh; brigadier in the Ruffian army.

Mrs. Mansell—105.

Of Ballyfimon, near Limerick, in Ireland.

William Riddell—116.

Of Selkirk, in Scotland. This man, who, in the early part of his life was a considerable smuggler, and remarkable for his love of brandy, which he drank in very large quantities, was always so fond of good ale, that he never drank a draught of pure water. He was not a drunkard, but had frequent paroxysms of drinking, which continued several successive days. After his ninetieth year, he at one time drank for a fortnight together, with only a few intervals of sleep in his chair. He was three times married: when he married his third wife, he was ninety-five years of age. He retained his memory, and other faculties, to his death. For the last two years of his life, his chief subsistence was a little bread infused in spirits and ale.

Of Galston. When she was about ninety years of age, she had a new set of teeth, and her eye-sight was so clear, that she could read the smallest print. A short time before her death, she walked to Irvine, a distance of thirteen miles from her place of residence, and returned the next day.

Patrick Flannagan—104.

Of Waterford, in Ireland, lime-burner.

Catharine Phelan—126.

Of Borris, Queen's-county, in Ireland.

John Price—100.

Of Coventry, Warwickshire.

Anthony Van Rysell—100.

Of Zwoll, in Holland. His wife died the year before, aged one hundred; they had been married seventy-five years.

John Salgado—112.

Of Quimbres, near Coimbra, in Portugal. He was never sick, till within a few days of his death; never lost a tooth; and his intellectual faculties never suffered decay, till within eight days of his death.

Sarah Jones—102.

Of Dublin, childbed-linen-maker. She was an inhabitant of St. Werburgh's parish upwards of sixty years, and was the most eminent of her profession the greater part of that time. She was active and healthy, and likely to live much longer, had she not, some short time before her death, received a fall, which bruised and injured her very much. Her eye-sight never failed her, nor did she ever use spectacles.

Frances

Frances Barton—107.

Of Horsley, Derbyshire, midwife. She followed her profession upwards of eighty years. She well remembered the revolution in 1688, and danced at a merry-making on that glorious occasion. Her husband had been sexton of the parish-church seventy years; and this ancient pair frequently boasted, that she had twice brought into the world, and he, had twice buried, the whole parish.

Edward Mac Menemon—109.

Of Bellault, in Donoughmore, Donegal.

1790.

William Troughton—102.

Of Welcome Nook, in the parish of Corney, Cumberland.

Mary Jackson—104.

Of Cropton, near Pickering, Yorkshire.

Michael Moet—101.

Of the Hague. He was a pensioned serjeant, and had been in his country's service, from the year 1728. He left a widow, aged eighty-nine, to whom he had been married seventy-three years.

Hannah Jenk—103.

Of Sutton, near Bingham, Nottinghamshire, widow.

Mrs. Dick—105.

Of Braid's Burn, near Edinburgh.

Jane Monks—104.

Of Leigh, Lancaster. She retained all her faculties till within a few hours of her death; and, except for the last five years, earned her maintenance by winding yarn.

Alexander Deane, Esq.—100.

Of Ipswich, Suffolk.

Bridget Seaver—108.

Of Redmond's Hill, Dublin.

Anthony Noble—115.

Of Miltown, near Dublin, gardener to Henry Bevan, Esq. This very old man worked in his garden till within a few days of his death.

Mary Rose—101.

Of Kingswood, near Bath. She never knew a day's illness, and was gathering herbs two hours before her death.

Rev.

Rev. Patrick Curtin—101.

Of Dyfart, in Ireland.

John Buchanan—103.

Of Fintry Mill, Edinburgh.

Mr. Cross—105.

A domestic in the service of H. Berens, Esq. at St. Mary Cray, Kent. When — Onflow, Esq. sold the estate, he delivered Old Cross, with his jack-ass, to draw water, and stipulated with the purchaser that he should maintain him for life.

James Peters—107.

Of Dundee; a travelling packman. Although he often slept in the fields and shades, he enjoyed an uninterrupted state of good health; and, until the last year of his life, retained his memory. His strongest beverage was small beer.

Madame Brolard—101.

Of Roche chouart, in Poictou. She was a great florist, and formerly noted for her display of powers on the hydraulic organ.

James Swarberick—102.

Of Nateby, near Garstang, Lancashire.

Moses

Moses Rodez—103.

Of Pignigni, in Picardy. He was a learned Polish Jew.

Margaret M'Carthy—103.

Of Cork. She lived abstemiously, and was very regular at her meals.

Mrs. Todd—105.

Of Richmond, Yorkshire. She always enjoyed good health; and her fight to the last was so strong, that she never had occasion for glasses.

John Coomer—102.

Near Havant, Hants, farmer. He retained his senses till within a week of his death, and took an account of the quantity of wheat then grown in each field, in the time of harvest, as it was bound and carted.

James Quanbrough—102.

Of Bourn, Lincolnshire. He was upwards of forty years collector of the tolls of that place. He lived alone in the most parsimonious manner, and was found dead in his bed. Upwards of three hundred pounds were discovered in holes and corners of his room, which he had not quitted for the last seven years.

Thomas

Thomas James, Esq.—100.

Of Carnew, county of Wicklow, in Ireland.

Joseph Peale—107.

Of Maryport, Cumberland. This extraordinary person, who resigned his breath in the same cottage he received it, was apprentice to a ropemaker in Whitehaven, in the reign of Queen Anne, from whence being impressed, he served in the wars during her reign. He afterwards married, and had twelve children by one wife, who died several years before him; and he never suffered himself to be shaved after that period. His chief attendant, for many years past, was a maiden daughter, who, at his death, was eighty years of age.

Mary Tench—100.

Of Crumlin, in Ireland. Her father lived to the age of one hundred and four years, her mother to that of ninety-six, and her uncle to the age of one hundred and ten. She left two sisters, whose ages added together make one hundred and seventy years.

Francis Nenez—119.

Of Caldas, in Portugal; a mechanic.

Anne

Anne Bannerman—105.

Of Aberdeen. She latterly subsisted on vegetables, and small beverage.

John Plover—108.

Of Witnall, near Coventry. Was usually known by the appellation of Old Blue-skin. He lived a servant in the Beauwater family near fifty years, and afterwards built himself a cottage at Winall, near the turnpike road, where he lived to see the trees he planted round it become large timber. He had several of his teeth when he died, and retained his memory to the last. He obtained the name of Blue-skin, from having frequently, when a young man, been beaten black and blue: for, being a hardy fellow, and having a good deal of spirit, his body was seldom without bearing the marks of his adversaries' blows, as he had himself acknowledged. He received relief from the parish; but his life was rendered as comfortable as possible, by the kind attention of Lord Craven, and some other friends, who supplied him with every thing he wished for. He was handsomely buried at Coventry, at the expence of Edward Inge, Esq. of the Charter-house, near that city.

Isaac

Isaac Hyde—102.

Of Ashley, Lancashire. He left behind him eleven children, forty-three grand-children, and forty-one great grand-children.

Dorothy Fletcher—102.

Of Alderwasley, Derbyshire. The summer before her death she got her subsistence by daily labour in the fields, and continued in her usual health, till within a few hours of her death.

James Cree—107.

Near Donaghadee, in Ireland, farmer.

William Marshall—117.

Of Pillnear, near Newton Stewart, Cumberland, a travelling tinker. He followed his business the year before he died, and was more active than most men at sixty. He had an unusual flow of spirits, and frequently entertained his friends with a song, but a few weeks before his death, when he expressed his hopes of living twenty years longer.

William Troughton—102.

Of Welcome Nook, in the parish of Corney, Cumberland, farmer.

Hon.

Hon. Mrs. Watkins—110.

Of Glamorganshire. This lady was amongst the most extraordinary instances of longevity in her time, being more remarkable than either Old Macklin, or Lord Mansfield. The year before her death, she undertook a journey from Glamorgan to London. The cause of it was almost as extraordinary, as the thing itself: it was to see Mrs. Siddons; and she saw her act nine times. This old lady was happy in equal activity of mind and body. One morning, after sitting for her portrait, and dispatching some business in the city, she mounted, though with some difficulty, to the whispering-gallery of St. Paul's. A few days after, she left London, and, with her three grandchildren, returned, with no particular precautions, to Glamorgan. She was remarkable for regularity and moderation. For the last thirty years, she subsisted entirely on potatoes.

Hugh Llewellyn—115.

Of Lean Cadwaller, in North-Wales. He was well known in the neighbouring counties for his musical skill, and was much celebrated by his performance on the Welch harp; on which instrument few have excelled him, and on which he performed till within a fortnight of his death.

Mr.

Mr. Macleod—102.

Of Inverness, in Scotland. At the age of one hundred, he performed a journey from the place of his residence to London on foot, which is five hundred and fifty miles, in nineteen days, without the least relief on the road. His object was, to solicit an increase of his pension, in consequence of his having married a second wife, by whom he had a son. He was remarkably stout, of a florid complexion, and his hair perfectly white. He first enlisted in the army, two years previous to Queen Anne's ascending the throne, and served in Germany, under the great Duke of Marlborough, in all that queen's wars.

Elizabeth Gibbon—100.

Of Port-royal, Jamaica; of which place she was a native.

Mary Burke—105.

Of Stewart's Rents, Drury-lane, London.

Annas Bristo—102.

Of Moss Dale, in the parish of Calbeck, Cumberland. She was one of the people called Quakers.

John

John Jacob—128.

The celebrated patriarch of Mount Jura; from the inhabitants of which place (who were formerly in a state of vassalage) he was sent, in 1789, as a deputy to the National Assembly of France, to return thanks, in the name of his countrymen, for the blessings of liberty diffused amongst them, by the abolition of the feudal system. This venerable old man, at the age of one hundred and twenty-seven, was led into the hall by his daughter; and, after having been introduced to the assembly, was seated opposite to the president. He was received with that respect which all wise nations pay to age, for on his entrance all the members stood up, and he was desired to sit covered, which he accordingly did, with the patriotic cockade in his hat. A subscription was immediately made for his support, and the king granted him a pension. After being a spectator of the greatest part of the reign of Louis XIV., and of all that of Louis XV., by a singular destiny, he had been conducted to the presence of Louis XVI. The committee of his district, in conformity with the respect shewn by the king, and the national assembly, followed the hearse at his funeral, which was uncommonly pompous and solemn.

Rev.

Rev. Mr. Davies—105.

Of Hereford; rector of Staunton-upon-Wye, and vicar of All Saints, Hereford. The last thirty-five years, he never used any other exercise than that of slipping his feet one before the other, from room to room; and they never were after that time raised up, but to go down or up stairs. His breakfast was hearty, of hot rolls and butter. His dinner was substantial, and consisted of a variety of dishes, at least during the carnival every summer, at Lord Bateman's seat at Shobden Court. At his supper he generally eat roast meat, and always drank moderately of wine. He had neither gout, stone, or cholic; lived beloved by all who knew him, and died without possessing those disagreeable infirmities, which generally attend old age. He was, as most long-livers are, very short.—What will the advocates for exercise and temperance say to this?

John Pride—100.

Of Coventry.

Mrs. Loder—102.

Mother to Mr. Loder, of the Ordnance-office.

Anthony Deane, Esq.—100.

Of Clifton; late of Whittington, Worcestershire.

Mary

Mary Lacey—102.

Of the Horseferry-road, Westminster. She was born in the same house she died, as were her mother and grand-mother. The grand-mother died in it, at the time the great fire raged in the year 1666. Mary Lacey (well known by the name of Molly Moore) was in full possession of all her faculties to the last. She was a dealer in vegetables, which she fetched herself but a short time previous to her death.

John Michiel—101.

Of the Hague; a great and regular smoaker of tobacco.

Anne Pilcher—103.

Of Boxley, Kent.

Maurice Supple—114.

Of Kerry, in Ireland.

Mrs. Barry—103.

Of Doctors' Commons, London.

Sarah Sherdley—105.

Of Maghull. She was an idiot from her birth.

Alex-

Alexander Clugston—105.

Of the parish of Irongray, in Scotland, farmer.

Isaac Hibbits—100.

Of the county of Gallway, in Ireland, labourer. He had seven wives, in the last thirty years of his life, and by each of them had children.

Mrs. Cradock—102.

Relict of the Rev. W. Cradock, formerly rector of Rickinghall Superior, Suffolk.

1791.

Mrs. Magee—102.

Mary Clements—105.

Of the parish of St. George, Gloucestershire. She was many years a pauper, and was in full possession of her senses to the last hour of her life.

Mary Smith—100.

Of Wood Ditton, near Newmarket, widow. She celebrated her century but the Sunday before her death.

Sarah

Sarah Gunston—103.

Of the parish of St. Giles, in the suburbs of the city of Oxford. She had been a widow upwards of half a century.

Archibald Cameron—122.

Of Keith, in the Highlands of Scotland. He died without pain, groan, or previous sickness. This post-diluvian patriarch had served seven lords of the isle in the employment of domestic piper, during the course of ninety-four years, but his fingers at length failing, he subsisted on a small pension allowed him by the family.

Mrs. Poor—101.

Of an alms-house in Salisbury, widow.

Bartholomew Rymer—100.

Of Rippon, Yorkshire; a man of good health, and great activity. He was game-keeper to Sir Bellingham Graham, Bart. of Norton Conyers, and shot game flying in his ninety-ninth year.

Mrs. M'Intosh—120.

Of Ashintully, Perthshire. This venerable lady bore her first child before the revolution in 1688, and her last after the rebellion in 1715.

Mr.

Mr. Macdonald—101.

Of the Highlands of Scotland. He was a great pedestrian; and the year before he died, at the age of one hundred, undertook, for a wager, to walk ten miles in two hours and a half, which he performed. He was accordingly presented to the king at Windsor, when his majesty expressed his surprize at such an exertion in a man upwards of one hundred years of age; and, with his wonted goodness and condescension, gave him the contents of his purse—nine guineas and a half.

Jane Gosnal—104.

Of Liverpool.

Jonathan Hartop—138.

Of the village of Aldborough, near Borough-bridge, Yorkshire. His father and mother died of the plague, in their house in the Minories, in 1666; and he perfectly well remembered the great fire of London. He was short in stature; had been married five times; and left seven children, twenty-six grand-children, seventy-four great grand-children, and one hundred and forty great great grand-children. He could read to the last without spectacles, and play at cribbage with the most perfect recollection. On Christmas-day, 1789, he walked nine miles, to dine with one of his great grand-children. He remembered King Charles II. and once travelled from London to York with the facetious Killebrew. He eat but little, and his only beverage was milk. He enjoyed an uninterrupted flow of spirits. The third wife of this very extraordinary old man, was an illegitimate daughter of Oliver Cromwell, who gave with her a portion, amounting to about five hundred pounds. He possessed a fine portrait of the usurper, by Cooper, for which a Mr. Hollis offered him three hundred pounds, but was refused. Mr. Hartop lent the great Milton fifty pounds, soon after the restoration, which the bard returned him with honour, though not without much difficulty, as his circumstances were very low. Mr. Hartop would have declined receiving it, but the pride of the poet was equal to his genius, and he sent the money with an angry letter, which was found among the curious possessions of that venerable old man.

Catherine Harvey—104.

Of Little Onn, Stafford. She left a sister living, in the same parish, aged one hundred and two years.

Mary

Mary Halmshaw—102.

Of Wakefield, Yorkshire. She had been a widow upwards of fifty years, and her faculties were unimpaired to the last. Such was her health and activity, that, when in her seventy-seventh year, she walked from Wakefield to London, a distance of one hundred and eighty-four miles, and returned again on foot.

Mary Cousen—103.

Of Wakefield, Yorkshire.

William Billings—102.

Of Fairfield, near Langnor, Stafford. He was formerly a soldier in Queen Anne's wars; and was the last private, in England, who had served under the great Duke of Marlborough.

Henrietta Martiel—104.

Near Dumfries, in the back settlements of Virginia; a native of Hanover. She lived in the service of King George I. fifteen years, in Hanover twelve, in England three, in Jamaica twenty-three, and in Virginia fifty-three. She had ten children, twenty five grand-children, and forty-three great grand-children.

Frances Crossley—109.

Of Rochdale, Lancaster, widow.

William Brown—108.

Of Glasgow, in Scotland.

Mr. Winterton—101.

Of Coventry, Warwickshire, weaver.

Bridget Player—102.

Of St. Luke's work-house, London.

Rebecca Joseph—100.

Of Malpas, near Newport, Monmouth, widow. She retained all her faculties to the hour of her decease, and, till within about three years previous thereto, could walk, without the help of a stick. She was not known to have a fit of illness, from her infancy, sufficient to confine her to her bed, till within about a month of her death. She lived a very temperate life, though she had kept a little public house for seventy years. Her chief sustenance, for the last two years, was brown sugar and cold water.

Mrs. Blake—100.

Of Stratford, near Old Sarum.

Anne

Anne Thomas—105.

Of Bayvil, Pembrokehire. She knitted a pair of neat ribbed stockings, with great judgment, a few days before her dissolution; and retained her faculties to the last moment of her existence.

Anne Waters—104.

Of Broughton, Lancashire. Six months previous to her death, she broke her arm, which was set and healed in a very short time. One hundred and fifty persons attended the funeral dinner, according to the custom of that place.

Don Carlos Felix O'Neale—110.

Of Madrid. He was an old lieutenant-general in the Spanish service, a great favourite of the monarch's, and had formerly been governor of the Havannah. He was the son of the celebrated Sir Neil O'Neale, of the province of Ulster, in Ireland, who lost his life at the battle of the Boyne, fighting for his favourite Monarch, James II. For this purpose he raised a brigade upon his own estate, which was confiscated, and his posterity obliged to seek fortunes in different parts of the globe.

Paschal

Paschal Seria—111.

Of Valentia. He subsisted, towards the latter part of his life, principally on vegetables, and frequently smoked tobacco.

Anne Young—102.

Of Newcastle.

Mrs. Wharton—103.

Of Thirsk, Yorkshire. She was possessed of very extensive landed property.

John Strachan—105.

Of Edinburgh, flesh-cadie. He retained his senses to nearly the time of his death, and seldom had any complaint. He recollected the time when no butcher would venture to kill any beast till all the different parts were bespoke, meat being then an unfaleable article.

Sarah Price—103.

Of an alms-house, in Monmouth. When about fifty years old, she could not see without the help of glasses; but, as she further advanced in years, she recovered her sight to such a degree, as to be able to thread the smallest needle, till within a few days of her decease.

Mrs.

Mrs. Cooba—110.

Of St. Elizabeth's Island; a negro.

Mrs. Askham—101.

Of York.

Mrs. Rbeam—101.

Of Copmanthorpe.

Abraham Fishpool—102.

Of the parish of Henbury, Gloucestershire. He enjoyed so uninterrupted a state of health, that, till within the last six months, he constantly attended the gate between Kingweston and Henbury.

John Campbell—120.

Of Dungannon, in Ireland; was a native of Scotland, and formerly a marine. He was in the fleet when the boom was broken at Londonderry, in 1689; and was with Admiral Rooke, at the taking of Gibraltar. He was of low stature, had an aquiline nose, and had lost eye.

Thomas Wimms—117.

Near Tuam, in Ireland; was formerly a soldier, and fought at the battle of Londonderry, in 1701.

James

James Sampler—103.

Of Osbaldwick, near York. He left a widow, to whom he had been married upwards of seventy years; and had never been confined a day to his bed, till that of his death.

Mary Bealey—102.

Of Great Boughton, Chester.

Alexander Dickie—101.

Of the lands of Auchluchries, in the parish of Cruden. He retained the use of all his senses to the last, and never had, during his whole life, as he was wont to express it himself, a sore head, or sick heart. His first wife died about fifteen years before him, in the one hundred and fifth year of her age. He married a second wife, in his eighty-fifth year, who survived him.

1792.

Judith Scott—102.

Of Islington.

Archibald Nesbitt—103.

Of Aughtyfarnale, county of Lanark, in Ireland.

Fre-

Frederick Harpe—120.

Of Fish-hill, Cumberland.

Matthew Tait—123.

Of Auchinleck, Ayrshire; was formerly a soldier, and was at the taking of Gibraltar by the British, in 1704.

Blanch Littleton—101.

Of the parish of Llanlivery, near Lloftwithiel. Her death was occasioned, it is supposed, by a fit, being found on the fire, burnt in a shocking manner, having fallen from the chair in which she usually sat. Her grand-daughter had left the room but a few minutes.

Mary Bate—105.

Of Beighton, Derbyshire; a pauper on the parish for thirty years.

Janet Towns—101.

Of Glasgow.

Mrs. Lowdisdon—103.

Of Boston, Lincolnshire, widow.

Mrs. Mawhood—100.

Of Pontefract, Yorkshire.

Anne

Anne Froste—111.

Of West-Raifin, Lincolnshire. She was the wife of a labourer, had been married three times, and left a daughter ninety years of age. She was married to her last husband in her ninety-third year. For many years past she had lived on milk and tea diet.

John Aldebort—105.

Of the state of Massachusett's, in America. He was a native of Poland, and boasted a lineal descent from Aldebort, Archbishop of Oresna, who converted the Poles from Paganism to Christianity.

Mary Annett—103.

Of Sawford, Worcestershire.

Samuel Paudames—105.

Of Yeddington, near Malton, Yorkshire.

Joan Harrington—101.

Of Redruth, Cornwall. She was a native of Ireland; and had resided at Redruth about forty years. She retained her understanding to the last, but lost her sight about five years previous to her decease.

John

John Roberts—103.

Of Digbeth, near Birmingham. He married three wives, by whom he had twenty-eight children; was nearly eighty when he married his last, by whom he had six of the children.

William Marshall—120.

Of Kirkcudbright, in Scotland, tinker. He was a native of the parish of Kirkmichael, in the shire of Ayr. He retained his senses almost to the last hour of his life; and remembered distinctly to have seen King William's fleet, when on their way to Ireland, riding at anchor in the Solway Frith, close by the bay of Kirkcudbright, and the transports lying in the harbour. He was present at the siege of Derry, where having lost his uncle, who commanded a king's frigate, he returned home, enlisted into the Dutch service, went to Holland, and soon after came back to his native country. A great concourse of people, of all ranks, attended his burial, and paid due respect to his age. The Countess of Selkirk, who, for a course of years, had liberally contributed to his support, on this occasion, agreeably to her wonted benevolence and compassion, discharged the expence of his funeral.

Mrs.

Mrs. Johnson—120.

Of Deritend, Birmingham.

Mr. Hammond—107.

Of Senern-hall, Salop. He attained that great age, without experiencing the slightest illness.

Elizabeth Dowling—106.

Of Greenham-heath, Berks.

William Troy—120.

Near Waterford, farmer. A short time before his death, he read very small print without spectacles, and daily walked about his farm without support.

William Ritchie—106.

Of Long Dalmahoy, in the parish of Ratho, in Scotland. He had been twice married, and had twenty-two children, alternately sons and daughters; and enjoyed tolerable health till within three months of his death, when he became very feeble, but retained his senses to the last.

Mrs. Clarke—102.

1793.

Richard Brent—110.

Of Bristol, commonly called Tom Thumb; which appellation he acquired from selling Histories of that little hero's life and adventures.

Mr. Robertson—137.

Of Edinburgh. This modern patriarch had always lived in the family of the lords of that place, whom he served in the capacity of inspector of the lead works for four complete generations, besides the time elapsed since the birth of the present possessor. His funeral was celebrated with a decency that did honour to his noble patron, who erected an elegant monument, with an inscription, celebrating the zeal and fidelity of so old and worthy a servant during the space of one hundred and twenty years.

Goodwife Mack—101.

Of Thurgaton. She was of a strong, athletic constitution, and, until within a few weeks of her death, would occasionally exercise herself in some of those labours of the field and farm-yard, which are usually allotted to men.

Michael

Michael M' Narvan—104.

Of the parish of Dalry, in Scotland, baron officer to Lord Galloway.

John Craig—111.

Of Kilmarnock. He served as a soldier in the North British dragoons, and was at the battle of Sheriffmuir, in 1715. He was never married, nor ever had any sickness, but worked, as a day labourer, till within a few days of his death, and retained his memory and senses to the last. There were found in his possession, secreted in an old chest, a number of crown and half-crown pieces, and other smaller coin.

Thomas Garrick—108.

Of Colleslie, in Fifeshire. A few months before he died, he was in the habit of walking a mile a day, and in his ninety-ninth year married a third wife.

Dennis O'Grady—106.

Of Thurles, county of Tipperary, in Ireland, farmer. He never experienced any very severe illness from his childhood, and retained his senses to the last. He left a wife aged ninety-nine years.

John

John Minniken—112.

Of Maryport, Cumberland. Towards the latter part of his long life, he became rather feeble. He however retained his sight and memory to the last; though his hearing became very defective. He often related the following curious anecdote of himself, at which he seldom failed to laugh heartily, as well as his friends: About thirty years preceding his death, he sold his head of hair to a person in a neighbouring town, for a penny-loaf per day, during the remainder of his life: the hair was cut off, and a note given for the performance of the covenant on the part of the purchaser, who failed soon after. It is further worthy of remark, that more than twenty wigs were made of the hair of this singular personage, and that he possessed, but a short time before his death, such an abundance, as few people can boast of, even, in the vigour of youth.

Mrs. Pape—102.

Of Lincoln, widow.

Robert Williams—102.

Of Kingwood, Bucks.

Hannah Cooke—100.

Of the Morledge, Derby.

Michael

Michael Fellerfon—104.

Of the state of Massachusetts. With a very trifling education, he had most industriously explored the operations of nature, and had written a very instructive tract on The Law of Animal Growth.

Duncan M'Cullum—104.

Of the Milton of Buchanan, in Scotland, weaver. He was remarkably active and strong; and, but a few weeks before his death, he could walk with ease twenty miles a day.

William Nicholls—101.

Of Lench, Worcestershire, labourer. He was descended from Richard Nugent, student of Magdalen-college, Oxford, in the reign of King James I. and one of the distinguished poets of that period.

Mrs. Burkin—101.

Of Mortlake, Surry.

Jahn Burgh—100.

Of Spalding, Lincolnshire.

Mrs. Boardman—103.

Of Manchester, widow.

William

William Billings—114.

Of Fairfield-head, near Longnor, Staffordshire; formerly a soldier. He travelled through this extensive length of time free from sickness, and at last expired without a groan. He was the only surviving private in England, who had served under the great Duke of Marlborough. His life and death were equally extraordinary: he was born under a hedge, in the year 1679, not an hundred yards from the cottage where he died.

Matthew Champion—111.

Of Great Yarmouth; a very industrious man. At the decline of his life he was supported by a weekly payment from some of his benefactors, and the casual gifts of others. He was born in French Flanders, in 1682, and came over to England with King William, in 1688. His father was a farrier in the King's army.

Rachel Huddy—100.

Of Hatch Beauchamp, Somerset, midwife. She was blind the last eleven years; but, notwithstanding her great age, and visual infirmity, she pursued her profession, to the satisfaction of her employers, the last of whom she delivered about seven weeks before her death.

Henry Smalwood—104.

Of Tenterden poor-house, Kent. He could read without spectacles to the day of his death; only two days before which, he walked ten miles.

Sarah Haynes—103.

Of Winford, Somersfet. Till within a year of her decease, she had been accustomed to knit stockings, of the finest texture. She had been the mother of eleven children, two of whom she left living, a son aged seventy, and a daughter aged sixty-seven, who were both deaf and dumb.

Mrs. Freeman—118.

Of Falmouth. Her sight was not so quick, but her intellects were quite perfect to the last.

1794.

Owen O'Neill—102.

Of Dublin.

James Neil—107.

Of Brondy, near Langholm. He was a native of Bamffshire, and was at the battle of Sheriffmuir, in 1714, in Glenbucket's regiment of horse.

Patrick

Patrick Stewart, Esq.—102.

Of Tophead, in Scotland. He was formerly a captain in the army.

Andrew Gammels—105.

Of Roxburgh, near Newton. He was a dragoon in Queen Anne's wars.

Francis Bone—104.

Of Tinker-row, near Ravensdale, Northumberland.

Mr. Sherwood—105.

Of Stokesley, in Cleveland. By using much exercise, and by temperate living, he enjoyed an unusual share of good health.

John Prichard—101.

Of Frankwell, Shropshire, linen-draper. He had ten children by his first wife, and twenty-two by the second, whom he left a widow.

Joshua Crewman—123.

A pensioner of Chelsea-hospital. He served as a soldier in the reigns of Kings George I. and II. and was discharged in the seventy-fourth year of his age.

Edward Lewis—104.

Of Hereford.

Edward Jones—100.

Of Alderbury, near Shrewsbury. He left a widow, aged ninety-nine years.

Martha Willard—100.

Of Grafton, in the state of Massachusetts, in America. She was relict of Major Joseph Willard. Her posterity consisted of twelve children, ninety grand-children, two hundred and six great grand-children, and forty-five of the fifth generation: amounting to three hundred and fifty-three.

Henry Wells—109.

Of Whitby, Yorkshire. He was born four years before the landing of the Prince of Orange; he therefore, had seen the reigns of eight British monarchs. He enjoyed a sound state of health till a short time before his death; but became almost blind, and was led through the streets by a poor woman, carrying on his shoulders a sample of mats for sale, of his own manufacture.

Agnes Melvin—104.

Of New Machar, in Scotland.

Mrs.

Mrs. Middleham—101.

Of Holbeck, near Leeds, widow.

Mrs. Cope—100.

Of Culland, near Brailford, Derby.

Mr. Evans—101.

Of Fore-street, near Moorfields, London, silversmith.

William Clayton—100.

Of Livesey, near Blackburn, Lancaster. The summer before his death, he was able to join in the labours of the harvest; about which time he had a visit from a venerable old man of the same age, who then lived about ten miles distant, and who said he had walked the whole way, through a curiosity he had to see him.

Elizabeth Hayes—110.

Of Park-lane, Liverpool.

Mrs. Seal—101.

Of an alms-house in Bury. In the former part of her life, she was remarkable for her industry, but had been many years bed-ridden, and supported principally by parish relief.

Mrs.

Mrs. Warren—112.

Of Tollagh, county of Dublin. She had a grand-son and grand-daughter, who were grand-father and grand-mother to children upwards of twenty years of age. Her brother died two years before, at the age of one hundred and twenty: he ploughed the east-side of Grafton-street, and sowed wheat in it. This land he held for two shillings and six-pence per acre, and had six or seven hundred acres at the same rent. He was, on the day of the battle of the Boyne, conducting some farm-carts of his father's, which were impressed by the army of King William, to carry luggage into the camp.

Mrs. King—100.

Of Glynd, near Lewes, Suffex. She was mother of Mr. King, gardener to Lord Hampden.

Richard Brown—108.

Of Peter-church, Hereford. By the parish register of Byford it appears, he was baptized June 26, 1687; but, from the prevalent custom of keeping children for some time, before they are carried to be baptized, and other corroborating circumstances, it is probable that he was somewhat older. He was bred to the farming ing

ing business, from which he retired many years, with what he had conceived a competency for the remainder of his days: but his life proved longer than he expected, for he outlived his fortune, and became dependant on the bounty of his friends for subsistence. In the instance of this old man, the assertion that smoking tobacco is prejudicial to health, is completely refuted, as he was seldom seen without the pipe in his mouth, and took his last whiff a short time before his death. He had lived in the reigns of six sovereigns, and was so little enfeebled by age, as to walk out to the hay-makers, during the harvest preceding his dissolution.

1795.

Richard Gough—101.

Of Ford's-Heath, near Shrewsbury.

Grizel Pettigrew—104.

Of Glasgow, widow. She retained the full exercise of reason to the end of her life.

Barbara Stirling—101.

Of Edinburgh. She was daughter of Lieutenant-colonel Stirling, of the family of Keir.

Mrs.

Mrs. Fitzgerald—111.

Of West-Horsley, Surry.

Mrs. Whitehouse—109.

Of Mickleover, near Derby.

Mrs. Hunter—115.

Of Liverpool.

Anne Gardener—101.

Of Exeter.

John Baugh—103.

Of Calwell, near Malvern, Worcestershire, farmer; which occupation he followed sixty-four years, and all, except three, in the above parish.

Thomas Seville—103.

Of Bell Broughton. He retained his faculties in a remarkable degree; could read the smallest print without spectacles till the day of his death; and, what is equally extraordinary, he had a full set of teeth, and not an unsound one in his head. He was a remarkably hearty, cheerful man.

Joseph Brindley—109.

Of Huntington, in the parish of Cannock.

Rebecca

Rebecca Poney—106.

Of the poor-house, in Norton Falgate liberty, where she had long been resident. She was born Nov. 5, 1688, the day on which King William landed in England. The expressions of joy on that occasion frightened her mother so much (who was there to witness the event), that she was obliged to be put into a coach, in which she was delivered of the subject of this article, who enjoyed an uninterrupted state of health from her birth. She cut two new teeth at the age of one hundred and two, and had all perfect, except two, at her death. Not a wrinkle was to be seen in her countenance, and she kept her bed but three days previous to her decease.

Francis Tait—109.

Of the island of Strouna. He was an useful member of the state, having left twenty-four sons, who were in the service of their country, there being eighteen of them in the navy, and six in the army.

Roger Pye—102.

Of Liverpool.

John Wilson—100.

Of East-row, near Whitby.

John

John Smith—101.

Of the parish of Douglas, in Scotland, labourer.

Mrs. Beresford—103.

Of Dublin. She was grand-aunt to the Marquis of Waterford.

Marion Muir—103.

Of the parish of Carsphairn, in Scotland. She had three sisters, one of whom lived to the age of one hundred and one, another to ninety-five, and the third died at the age of ninety-eight.

Maria Katharina Kries—104.

Of Sonnenburg, in the canton of Lucern. She was remarkable for the cheerfulness of her disposition, had always laboured hard, and was mother of several children.

Mrs. Ogden—106.

Of Holbeck, near Leeds.

Dr. Jean Borranstone—100.

Of Lambeth; an emigrant priest, and formerly chaplain to the archbishop of Paris for a series of forty years.

Moses

Moses Phillips—103.

Of Bromyard, Hereford, basket-maker. Early in life he enlisted for a soldier, and served in the army during the reigns of Kings George I., II., and III. He was remarkably upright, and quick in his walk, retaining all his faculties and fight till within a few months, when a bad humour broke out in his eyes. He carried on his business till within the last two or three years. He left a widow, aged eighty-five, and a son in the army.

1796.

Nanny M'Daniel—106.

Of St. Patrick's-hospital, Dublin. This woman, when young, married a soldier, and attended his fortune in the field, where, on the plains of Fontenoy, he fought for honour, and fell, and left her a widow with two children. The humanity of her late husband's colonel enabled her with her children to reach Ireland: another soldier was her lot, who fell at the battle of Preston-Pans, where she was present, and had a son also killed in the field, whose wife and child were in the camp. On her return to Dublin, she was appointed by the governors a servant in the foun-

foundation of Dean Swift, and was the first person that ever slept in that hospital, where she remained till her death. The governors had superannuated her for some years, and supported her with decency and comfort to her death.

Mrs. Smith—101.

Of Abingdon, Berks.

William Gibson—102.

Of Hutton-Bushel, York, farmer.

Mrs. Kelly—105.

Of Proudfoot's-town, near Lowth, county of Meath, in Ireland. Till within the last six months, she walked to chapel every Sunday.

Susan Mills—102.

She resided in a house called the Ship-meadow Lock-house, on the Bungay navigation. Her husband was manager at the locks for Sir John Dalling's grand-father, in the year 1715, who was then proprietor of that navigation. This instance of longevity seems to contradict the generally received opinion of the unwholesomeness of low, marshy situations, her residence being mostly surrounded by floods throughout the winter.

Joseph

Joseph Durham—101.

Of Sunneside, Durham; formerly a soldier.

John Gill—114.

Of Stratford-upon-Avon, Warwick.

Benjamin Gibbs—104.

Of Great Saxham, farmer. He enjoyed remarkably good health through life, and was at length taken off after only two day's illness.

William Stephenson—103.

Of Kirkwhelpington, Northumberland.

Anne Bickersteth—103.

Of Burton, in Kendal, widow of Mr. Bickersteth, surgeon of that place. She retained her bodily and mental faculties till her death, and walked down stairs from her bed-chamber to her parlour the day she died. She always went to bed and rose very early.

John Wizzal—103.

Of Ripley, Derbyshire. He enlisted for a soldier in his sixteenth year, and continued in the service till he was honourably discharged, on account of his age.

Samuel Pinnock—125.

Of Kingston, in Jamaica; a negro man. Till within the two last years, the faculties of this very old man were perfectly sound, and his memory remarkably retentive. Of the dreadful earthquake, which, in 1692, nearly destroyed Port-Royal, he had a perfect recollection; and was on board a ship lying near Fort Augusta, when the catastrophe took place; and has frequently narrated the melancholy business with a minuteness of detail, which none but an eye-witness could have given.

Elizabeth Hunt—100.

Of Worcester. She never was indisposed till the day of her death, which was almost sudden. Her mother lived to be one hundred and eight.

Charles Roberts—116.

Of Berkeley county, in Virginia. He was a native of Oxfordshire, in England, but had resided in America nearly eighty years. Two years before his death, he rode to church alone: during his long life he knew not sickness, and his death was not preceded by indisposition; being sudden, as he was eating his supper.

Thomas

Thomas Taylor—103.

Of Birmingham, cobbler; was able to work at his trade till within a week of his death.

William Windness—110.

Of Garstang, Lancashire.

Ann Keighly—100.

Of Hundet, near Leeds. She was mother, grand-mother, and great grand-mother to two hundred and fifty-three children. She was carried to church by twelve grand-children, and nearly one hundred of her progeny attended her funeral.

Jane Collins—102.

Of Little Berkhamstead, Herts; a poor, industrious widow. A few days before her decease, she walked more than four miles, carrying a basket of vegetables under her arm.

David Caldwell—107.

Of Bridgnorth. He was born in the army, in the shire of Ayr, in Scotland, and served as a drummer in the reign of King William, and many years a soldier in the reign of Queen Anne. He resided at Bridgnorth for the last seventy years.

Anne

Anne Watkins—107.

Of Dublin, wife of Mr. Watkins, state-trumpeter.

Mrs. Holmes—103.

Of Quare-common, near Derby.

Jeremiah Atkins—102.

Of the Scar, near Brom-yard, Herefordshire. He was a foldier at the taking of the Havannah and Martinico, and very near being scalped by the Indians, from whom he was rescued at the moment they were about to perform the operation. He was likewise at the taking of Crown Point, in America; and in the battle of Fontenoy with the Duke of Cumberland; and fought against the rebels in Scotland. He was at the taking of Quebec, when General Wolfe was killed; and afterwards at the battle of Tournay, in Flanders. This extraordinary man retained all his faculties, but that of hearing, to the period of his dissolution.

Thomas Jackson—105.

Of Ulpha, Cumberland, farmer. He could walk about within a few days of his death; and, what is remarkable, he held the plough when in his hundredth year.

Mrs.

Mrs. Thompson—135.

Near Dublin. She was very active; and by a regular mode of living, together with much exercise, attained so great an age.

1797.

Charles Macklin, Esq.—107.

Of James-street, Covent-garden, London; an eminent dramatic writer, and celebrated comedian of Covent-garden Theatre; the veteran father of the stage. He had long been in a state of natural decay; but, although incapable of quitting his bed, for several weeks previous to his dissolution, his spirits did not forsake him, till within a few minutes of his final exit from the stage of life. After a severe struggle against the invincible force of Death, he passed quietly into eternity, without a groan.

In the former part of his life, till about the age of forty, he lived very intemperately, and irregularly, by sitting up late, hard drinking, and violent exercise; subsequent thereto, he determined to proceed by rule, which he scrupulously observed. It was his frequent custom to promote perspiration, and then change his linen, particularly as he advanced in life; and if, on occasion, he drank a glass or two of wine too much, he always took a Scotch-pill at night going to bed, which prevented the head-ache next morning. He was moderate at his meals, but no ways abstemious, and eat fish, flesh, &c. till the age of seventy; when, finding that tea did not agree with him, he used, as a substitute, milk, with a little bread boiled in it, sweetened with brown sugar. About the year 1764, he lost all his teeth, and was thereby obliged to subsist principally on fish, eggs, puddings, and spoon food, which, however, he was very fond of, as also custards, jellies, &c. For the last forty years, his principal beverage was white wine and water, pretty sweet. In the year 1770, he was attacked with a severe fit of the rheumatism, and in consequence, to avoid it, discontinued the use of sheets, and slept in blankets. It was his custom not to sleep on a feather bed, but on a mattress, which was on a couch, without curtains, placed in the center of the room, and on which he reposed whenever he found himself sleepy. He usually lay with his head high, but, for the last twenty years, never took off his clothes, unless to change them, or his linen, or to be rubbed all over with warm brandy or gin; a custom he often repeated, and occasionally steeped his feet in warm water. He strictly observed the dictates of nature; ate when hunhungry, drank when thirsty, and slept when sleepy.—Vid. Memoirs of his Life, 2 vols. 8vo.

ways

Jonas Surington—159.

He resided in a small village near Bergen, in Norway; and retained the perfect use of his faculties to the last hour of his very extraordinary long life. The day before he died, he assembled his family, and divided his property amongst them. He had been several times married, and left behind him a young widow, and several children, his eldest son being one hundred and three, and his youngest nine years of age.—This man is mentioned in the year 1747, but having since the printing of that sheet received a fuller account of him, it is here inserted.

Thomas Wigmore—102.

Of Maresfield work-house, Suffex. It is not unworthy of remark, that at the age of eighty-two, with as much resolution as rashness, he cut off his right hand.

Anne Prigg—104.

Of Bury, Lancashire.

Jeremiah Stowers—101.

Of Burgate, farmer.

Mrs. Church—109.

Of Stanton, Gloucestershire. In recently calling to recollection the earliest public events within her memory, she well remembered the rejoicings at the accession of Queen Anne to the crown of these realms. Under the same roof lived the old lady, her daughter, her grand-daughter, and her grand-daughter's children, making four generations in one house! Her death was hastened by a fall down stairs a few weeks before.

Mary Reynolds—109.

Of Stenton, near Coleford.

Mary Davis—105.

Of Llangarren, Hereford, widow.

Joyce Pearce—105.

Of the house of industry, at Worcester. He retained to the last the full possession of an excellent memory.

Winifred Foxon—104.

Of Messingham, Lincoln. She was born at Boston; was a very industrious woman, and supported herself by hard labour till within two years of her death.

Hannah

Hannah Sturges—106.

Of Ashby-de-la-Zouch. She well remembered the rejoicings on the peace of Utrecht, in 1713, when she was only nineteen years old, and that booths were erected in the town, and barrels of ale wheeled about, and distributed to the poor inhabitants. An elder brother died, two years before, at Clifton, near Ashbourn, aged one hundred and nine; and another sister, at Ashby, about twenty years before, aged eighty: so that the united ages of a brother and two sisters were two hundred and ninety-five years.

Mrs. Crossman—106.

Of Weymouth.

Henry Gray—102.

Of Bamburgh, Northumberland, inn-keeper.

William Birkhead—100.

Of Brork-house, near Cleckheaton, York.

Anne Gray—100.

Of Skipton, near Market-Weighton. She had lived upwards of sixty years in a small cottage at Torpe-in-the-Street; and, till within a few years of her death, earned her own livelihood.

Alice

Alice Pilcher—104.

Of Sheldwich Lees, Kent, widow. Her remains were interred near those of her two husbands, by whom she had nine children; whose children and grand-children have increased to upwards of one hundred and forty in number. Till within two years of her death, she could read without spectacles.

William Giseman—109.

Of Killintown, near Multifarnam, farmer. He was married to his fifth wife, who brought him two fine boys, about eighteen months before his death.

Catharine Richardson—109.

Of Maples, Cheshire. She had breathed the salubrious air of that healthful and elevated situation about eighty years, during the whole of that length of time she enjoyed a singular state of good health.

John Knowles—109.

Of Birmingham work-house.

Catharine Duckett—106.

Of Cumley, in the parish of Cardington, Shropshire.

Anne

Anne Fulford—101.

Of Salisbury; a poor, but honest and industrious widow. She was formerly a domestic servant of Charles, Duke of Somerset, and of the old Earl of Westmoreland, but latterly of General Bathurst, of Clarendon-park. She retained her senses to the last hour of her life, with a memory, uncommon at her age. She perfectly recollected all the circumstances of the great storm in 1703, which happened when she was living with her grand-mother, at a village near Pomfret, being then seven years of age.

Jane Stephenson—117.

Of Poulton, in the Fylde, Lancaster.

Margaret Woods—100.

Of Great-Waltham, Essex. She and her ancestors had been servants in the same family upwards of four hundred years.

Anne Pickering—110.

Near Atherston, Warwickshire. She retained her faculties till a short time previous to her death; and, though at such advanced age, she was accustomed to attend and lead one of her sons (who was incapable of taking care of himself) wherever he had an inclination to go.

Mary

Mary Chilcott—101.

Of Poughill, Devon.

David Claybrook—100.

Of the parish of Studley. Such was the strength of this man, that he walked every Sunday two miles to church, till within a few weeks of his death; and, about a year before, chimed three of the church-bells, without any assistance, ringing being his favourite exercise.

1798.

Mr. Ingleby—117.

Of Battle-abbey. He had been upwards of ninety-five years a domestic in the family of Lady Webster. The following narration of this remarkable man is by a gentleman, who travelled sixty miles in snow, from Barbican, in Nov. 1797, to pay his respects to him:

“ To my great surprife, I found Mr. Ingleby,
 “ in a fituation very far removed from the luxuries “ of life, or the place which might be deemed “ neceffary for his years. He was in an antique “ out-building, near the Castle-gate, where his “ table was fpread under an arched roof; the “ whole of the building being nearly filled with “ billet“ billet-wood, and scarcely affording room for the “ oaken bench, on which this wonder of longe“ vity was reclining by the fire. His whole ap“ pearance immediately reminded me of the latter “ days of Dr. Johnson: his dress was precisely “ that of the sage; a full-bottomed wig; a full-“ dressed chocolate suit with yellow buttons.

“ But the most striking similarity was found in “ the pensive solemnity of his air and demeanour, “ tristis severitas vultus, which characterised the “ great Moralist of England. There was nothing “ in his look which impressed on the mind the “ idea of a person more than fourscore years old, “ except a falling of the under jaw, which be“ spoke his more advanced age. We were in“ troduced to him, in form, by a matron, who “ seemed to take it as a high dignity, that she “ was supposed to be his daughter, but who “ served as a sort of interpreter between us, Mr.
“ Ingleby's extreme deafness not permitting any “ regular conversation. When the nurse ex“ plained our errand, in a very distinct, but hol“ low voice, he said, ‘ I am much obliged to “ them for the favour they do me; but I am not “ well, and unable to converse with them.’ “ He “ then turned his face toward the high part of “ the bench on which he reclined, and was silent.
“ In each of his withered hands he held a short,
“ rude,

“rude, beechen walking-stick, about three feet “high, by the help of which he was accustomed,
“not only to walk about the extensive premises
“in which he passed his life, but to take his little “rambles about the town; and once (for the old “Gentleman was irascible) he actually set out on “a pedestrian excursion to Hastings, to enquire
“for another situation in service, because his pa“trons desired him to be more attentive to “personal neatness. It is but justice to the lady “alluded to, to add, that the uncouth abode of “Mr. Ingleby was the only one in which he “could be persuaded to dwell, and which long “familiarity had rendered dear to him. The “choice appeared very extraordinary; but every “thing belonging to the history of Mr. Ingleby “was beyond the fixed and settled rules, by which “human life is, in general, regulated.

“One thing it is but justice to Mr. Ingleby to “add; he had a very strong sense of religious “duty. Till within a very short time, he was in “the habits of reading prayers twice a day to his “attendant, and others, whom curiosity (or from “better motives) led to form his congregation;
“and, when the fatigue of this exertion was more “than he could encounter, he still, once in the “day, performed his public devotions.” A portrait of him has been lately published.

John

John M'Gregor—108.

Of Barcaldine, in Scotland. He ended his days on the anniversary of his birth, Christmas-day, old-style. He was at the battle of Sheriffmuir, and afterwards served in the Scots brigade in Holland. He had been in the service of the family of Barcaldine upwards of fifty years.

George Angus—106.

Of Aberdeen. He had been a labourer in that neighbourhood upwards of fifty years, and continued to work till within a few weeks of his decease.

Thomas Jackson—103.

Of Norton, Derby.

Edward Farral—108.

Of Dublin.

Richard Hamer—102.

Of Hunt Fold, Lancaster.

Isidore Lottin—101.

Of Paris; formerly "Scelleur hereditaire de France." He was a native of Brienne, in the ci-devant province of Champagne, and never had the least illness till a short time before his death.

Eliza-

Elizabeth Patrick—100.

Of Yarkhill, Hereford.

Martha Gillet—100.

Of Edmonton work-house. She was a native of Caithness, in North-Britain. Her first sweetheart was killed in the rebellion of 1717; her second was a rebel in 1745, with whom she marched to Derby, but he fell in the battle of Culloden. After this she married Thomas Gillet, a private in Duke William's army, with whom she went to Germany, and remained there during the campaign. They then returned to England, (about the year 1750) where he drove several stages on the Northern road, particularly to Hertford, Edmonton, &c.; and she spun thread for the shoemakers till about the year 1792, when her husband died, and her sight began to fail her; after which she was supported by generous neighbours, till, totally deprived of sight, she was obliged to take refuge in the work-house, where she was esteemed till life may be said to have fallen asleep in the arms of death.

Susannah Reynolds—107.

Of Pentonville.

William

William Hyde—106.

Of Hopton-Waters, Shropshire. He enjoyed to the last moment the full use of every faculty. Within a few weeks of his death, he could walk two or three miles at a time: in 1797, when on the verge of one hundred and five years, he attended Worcester races, and walked daily to and from the ground, a distance of near five miles!

In his cottage, on the side of the Clee-hills, he passed his long and peaceful life. The same parish which gave him birth (with very few exceptions) has been his bourne. Once, indeed, after the age of seventy, he wandered into Wiltshire to see his sons, and walked on the first day of his journey from his home to Newport, in Gloucestershire, a distance of nearly fifty miles. With a mind neither debauched nor distracted by vicious or violent passions, nor highly elevated in the pursuits of exalted virtues, he calmly glided down this long stream of life, with few circumstances to ruffle it. Perhaps, in these dissolute times, the most remarkable circumstance is, that he lived sixty-eight years with one wife.

Joan Oyl—107.

Of Great Torrington, Devon.

Mary Climment—102.

Of Clovelly, Devon.

1798.

John Weeks—114.

Of New London, Connecticut. He married his tenth wife, when one hundred and six years of age, she being only sixteen! His grey hairs had fallen off, which were renewed by a dark head of hair; and several new teeth had made their appearance. A few hours previous to his decease, he ate three pounds of pork, two or three pounds of bread, and drank nearly a pint of wine!

Elizabeth Brown—124.

Of Port-Royal, Jamaica; a negro woman.

Lewis Bisset—109.

He was a native of Inverness, and followed his profession of baker and brewer there, and at Tain, till about twelve years previous to his death, when he removed to Edinburgh, where, for the most part, his dependance was on the public. He afterwards removed to Broughton-Loan, where he died.

Jean Petrie—113.

Of Peterhead, in Scotland.

John Yerbury—100.

Of Belvidere, Lansdown-road, Bath.

William

William Rolfe, Esq.—101.

Of Bury, Suffolk.

William Westmoreland—100.

Of Harrowgate.

John Hastie—100.

Of Edinburgh; a Chelsea pensioner; was at the battle of Sheriffmuir. For the last thirty years he worked as a day-labourer.

Elizabeth Reid—106.

Of Spanish-Town; a negro woman.

Reverend Bellingham Swan—102.

Of Dyfart, in Ireland. He was curate to the celebrated Dean Swift.

John Evans—101.

Of Campsie, in Scotland. He was formerly a foldier, and was in the memorable battle of Dettingen, &c. under the Earl of Stair.

William Watt—102.

Of Leith, in Scotland, porter.

Priscilla Wragg—121.

Of St. Jago de la Vega; a free negro woman.

John

1799.

John Saunders—106.

Of Stratford, near Old Sarum, dealer in bacon and cheese. He was through life very active and laborious. When the weather would permit it, he usually attended Sunday service at his parish-church, near a mile from his home: occasionally he would walk to New Sarum, and back again, nearly three miles; and to Old-Castle house, to drink a cup of ale, and smoke his pipe; and, being perfectly upright and straight, used no stick to assist him. But a few years previous to his death, he was able to cleave wood; and, a short time before he died, was seen to run, in order to avoid a carriage in a narrow part of the road.

Anne Day—108.

A well-known gipsy. Bent almost double, and nearly blind, she travelled the country on an ass, attended by two or three of her fraternity, and was well known in most parts. She had not slept in a bed for seventy years; and for the last forty years she had not a tooth in her head, nor sight but by one eye. She lost three of her toes, about twelve years before, by the frost, and at the same same time lost the use of one of her arms. She died under a hedge near Henlow, Bedfordshire, and was buried at Arlsey, near that town. Her funeral was attended by a vast concourse of people from the neighbouring villages, but by only two of the people to which she belonged, who called themselves her son and daughter, the former eighty-two, and the latter eighty-five years of age, each having great grand-children.

Frances Rodd—100.

Of Hereford; a maiden lady.

Mrs. Owen—107.

Of Liverpool.

Mary Austin—100.

Of Ely, Cambridgeshire, widow.

Mrs. Tilsley—102.

Of Winchenford, Worcestershire.

Simeon Ellerton—104.

Of Craike, Durham. He was a noted pedestrian, and in that capacity had been often employed by gentlemen in the neighbourhood on commissions to the South, which he executed with fidelity and diligence.

John Jackson—117.

Of Burnew-castle, gunner. He boasted much of having served under the great Duke of Marlborough, and of having since been engaged in nineteen different actions.

Jane Yanson—102.

Of Lerwick, North-Britain. She was married sixty-three years, and had carefully preserved her wedding shift to be her shroud. She left her husband, aged ninety-seven years.

John Wilson—100.

Of Sosgill, Cumberland. He was formerly a blacksmith, which profession he followed for near sixty years; in all which time his beverage was milk or water, with the exception of two glasses of ale, and one glass of spirituous liquor.

James Dyce—107.

In Kirktown, of Daviot, Aberdeenshire. He retained his senses to the last, and kept his bed only three days before his death. His mother died at the age of one hundred and twelve years.

George Brooks—101.

Of Glastonbury.

Mrs.

Mrs. Battey—104.

Of Merrow-Common, near Guildford, Surry. She had been several years confined to her bed, but was perfectly sensible to the last. She was born at Effingham, in that county, April 19, 1696; and buried with her husband, in Merrow church-yard.

Nathan Moses—108.

A Jew. He was interred in the Jews' Burial Ground, Mile-end Road, and was attended to the grave by a vast number of Jews. He was the oldest member of the Dutch Jew Synagogue.

Sarah Cartmale—103.

Of Litchfield. She left one daughter, and about forty grand and great grand-children.

John King—103.

Of Athlone. His sister was one hundred years of age.

Lazarus Levi—105.

Of Leeds; a Jew. He was a vender of spectacles, and various kinds of hardware.

John M'Kee—100.

Of Liverpool, joiner.

Agnes

Agnes Bayne—106.

Of Baillie's Ward, near Huntley, widow.

Marguerite Corbie—102.

Of Lisle; of which place she was a native. She resided in that city when taken by the Duke of Marlborough, in 1709, being then in her twelfth year.

John Sayer—110.

Of Caister, near Norwich, butcher. He retained the perfect use of his faculties to the last hour of his life, with a memory very unusual at his age.

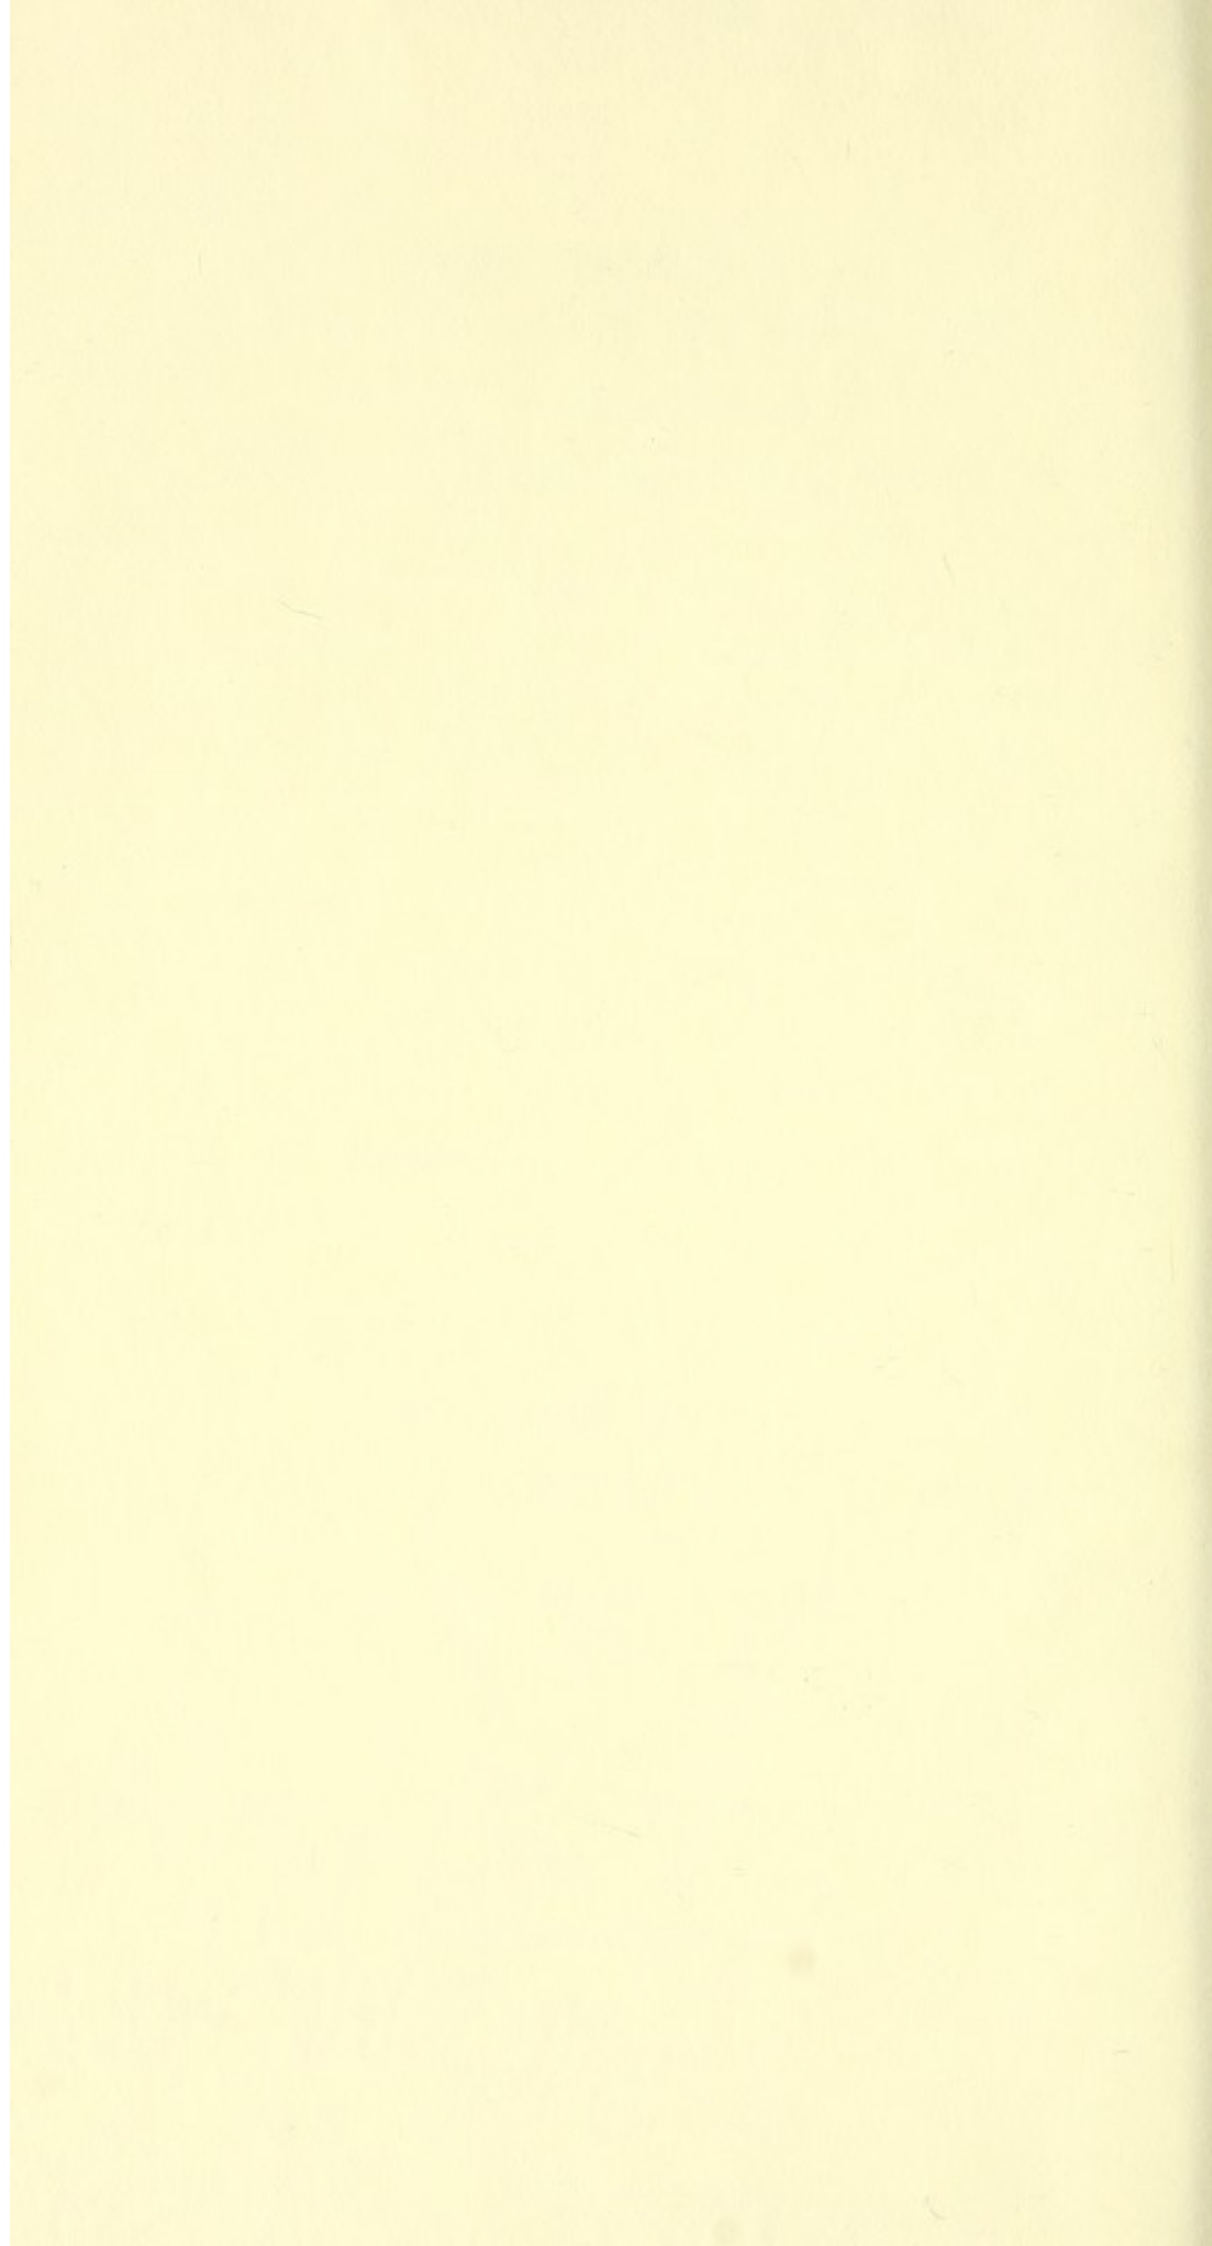

Mary Jones—105.

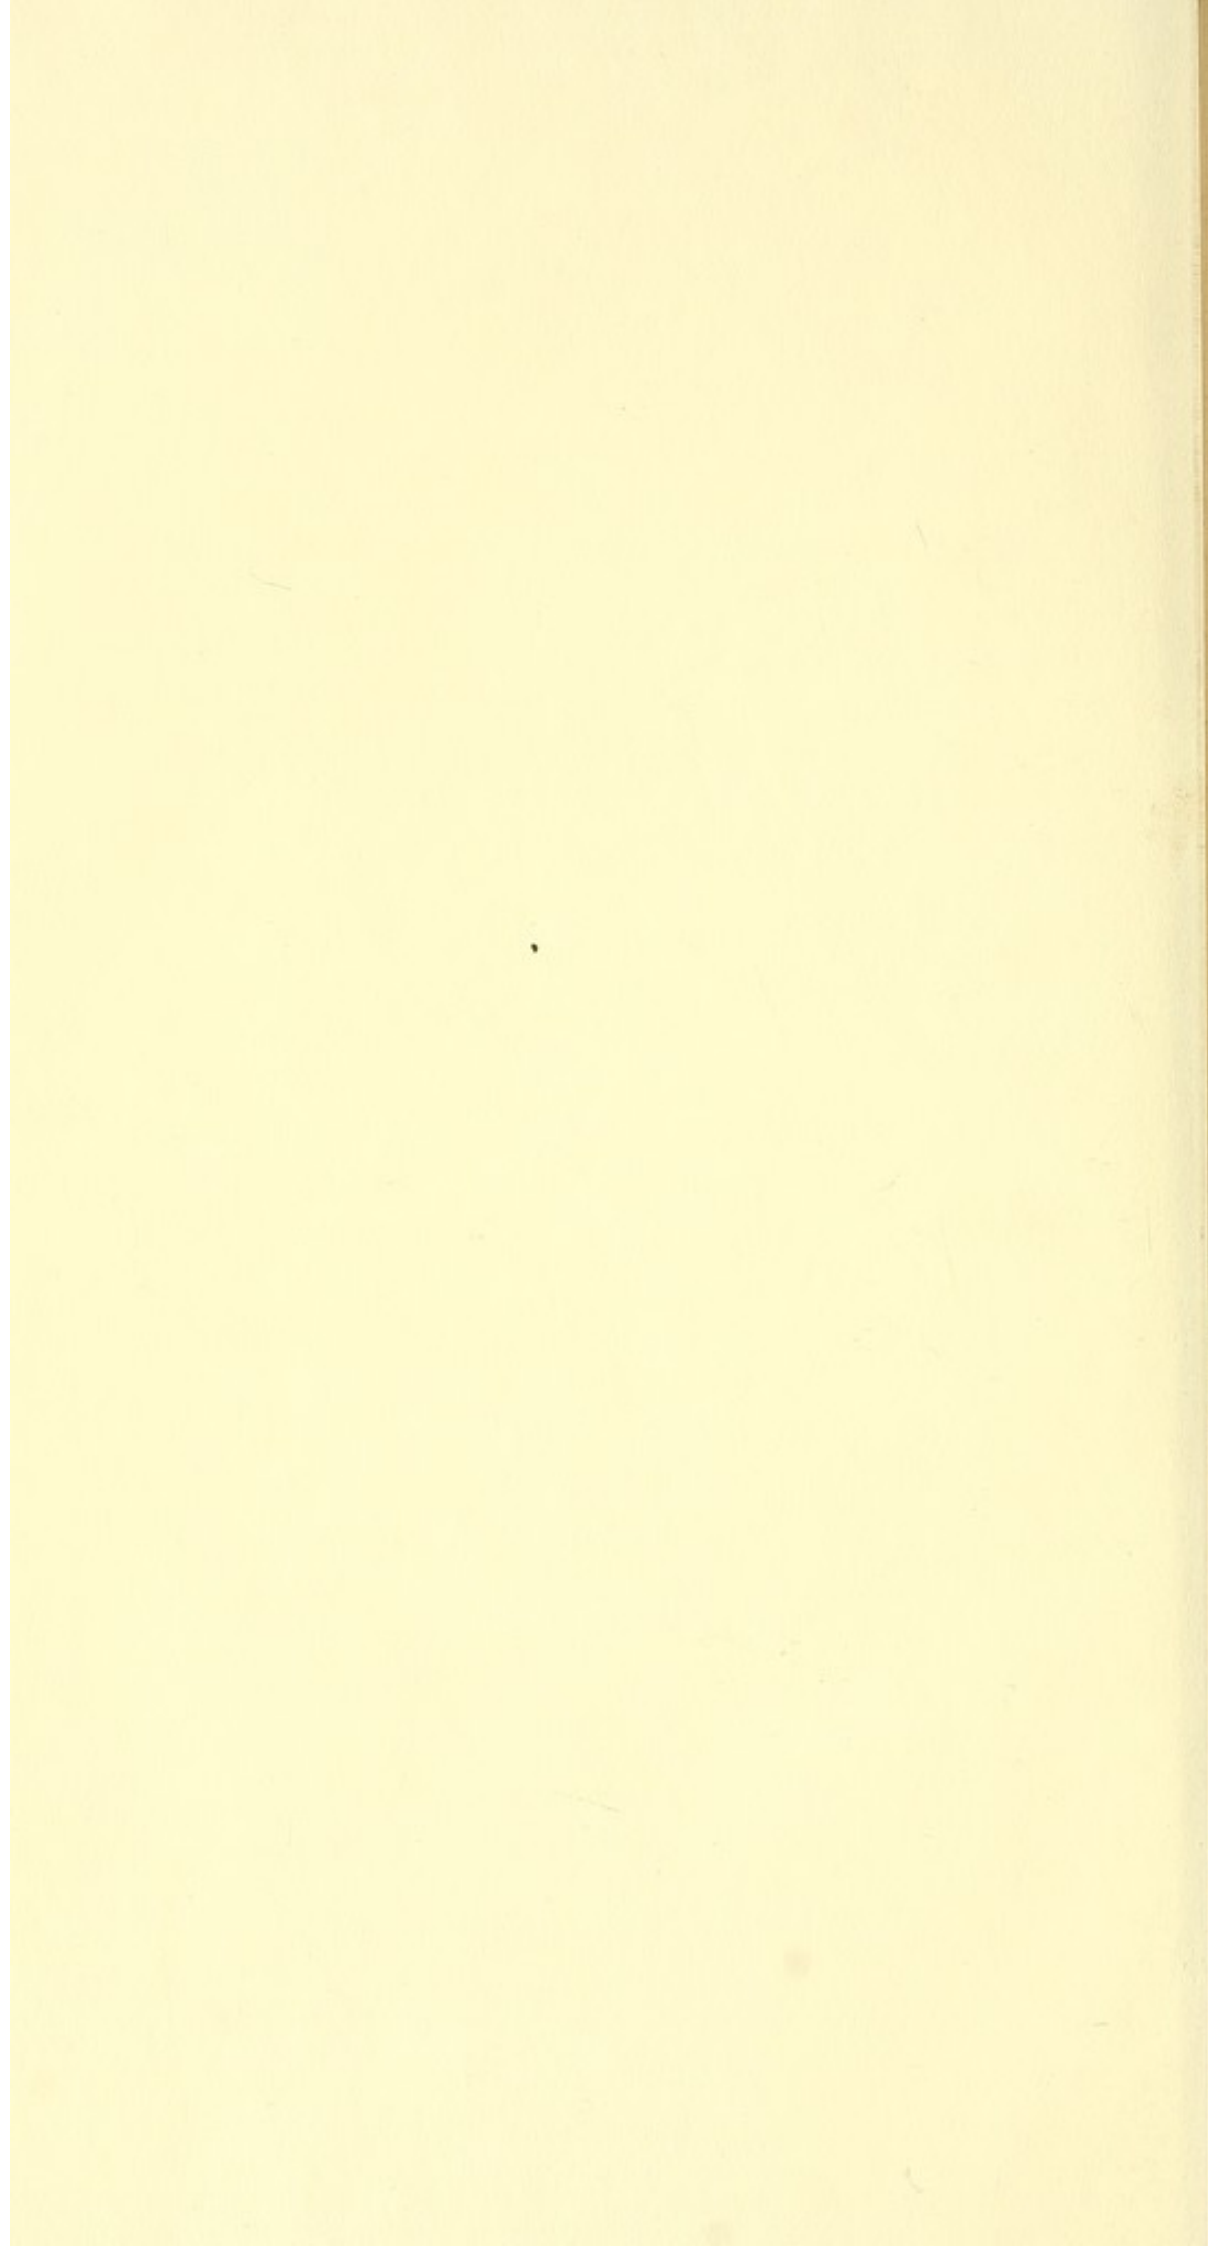

Of Liverpool work-house.

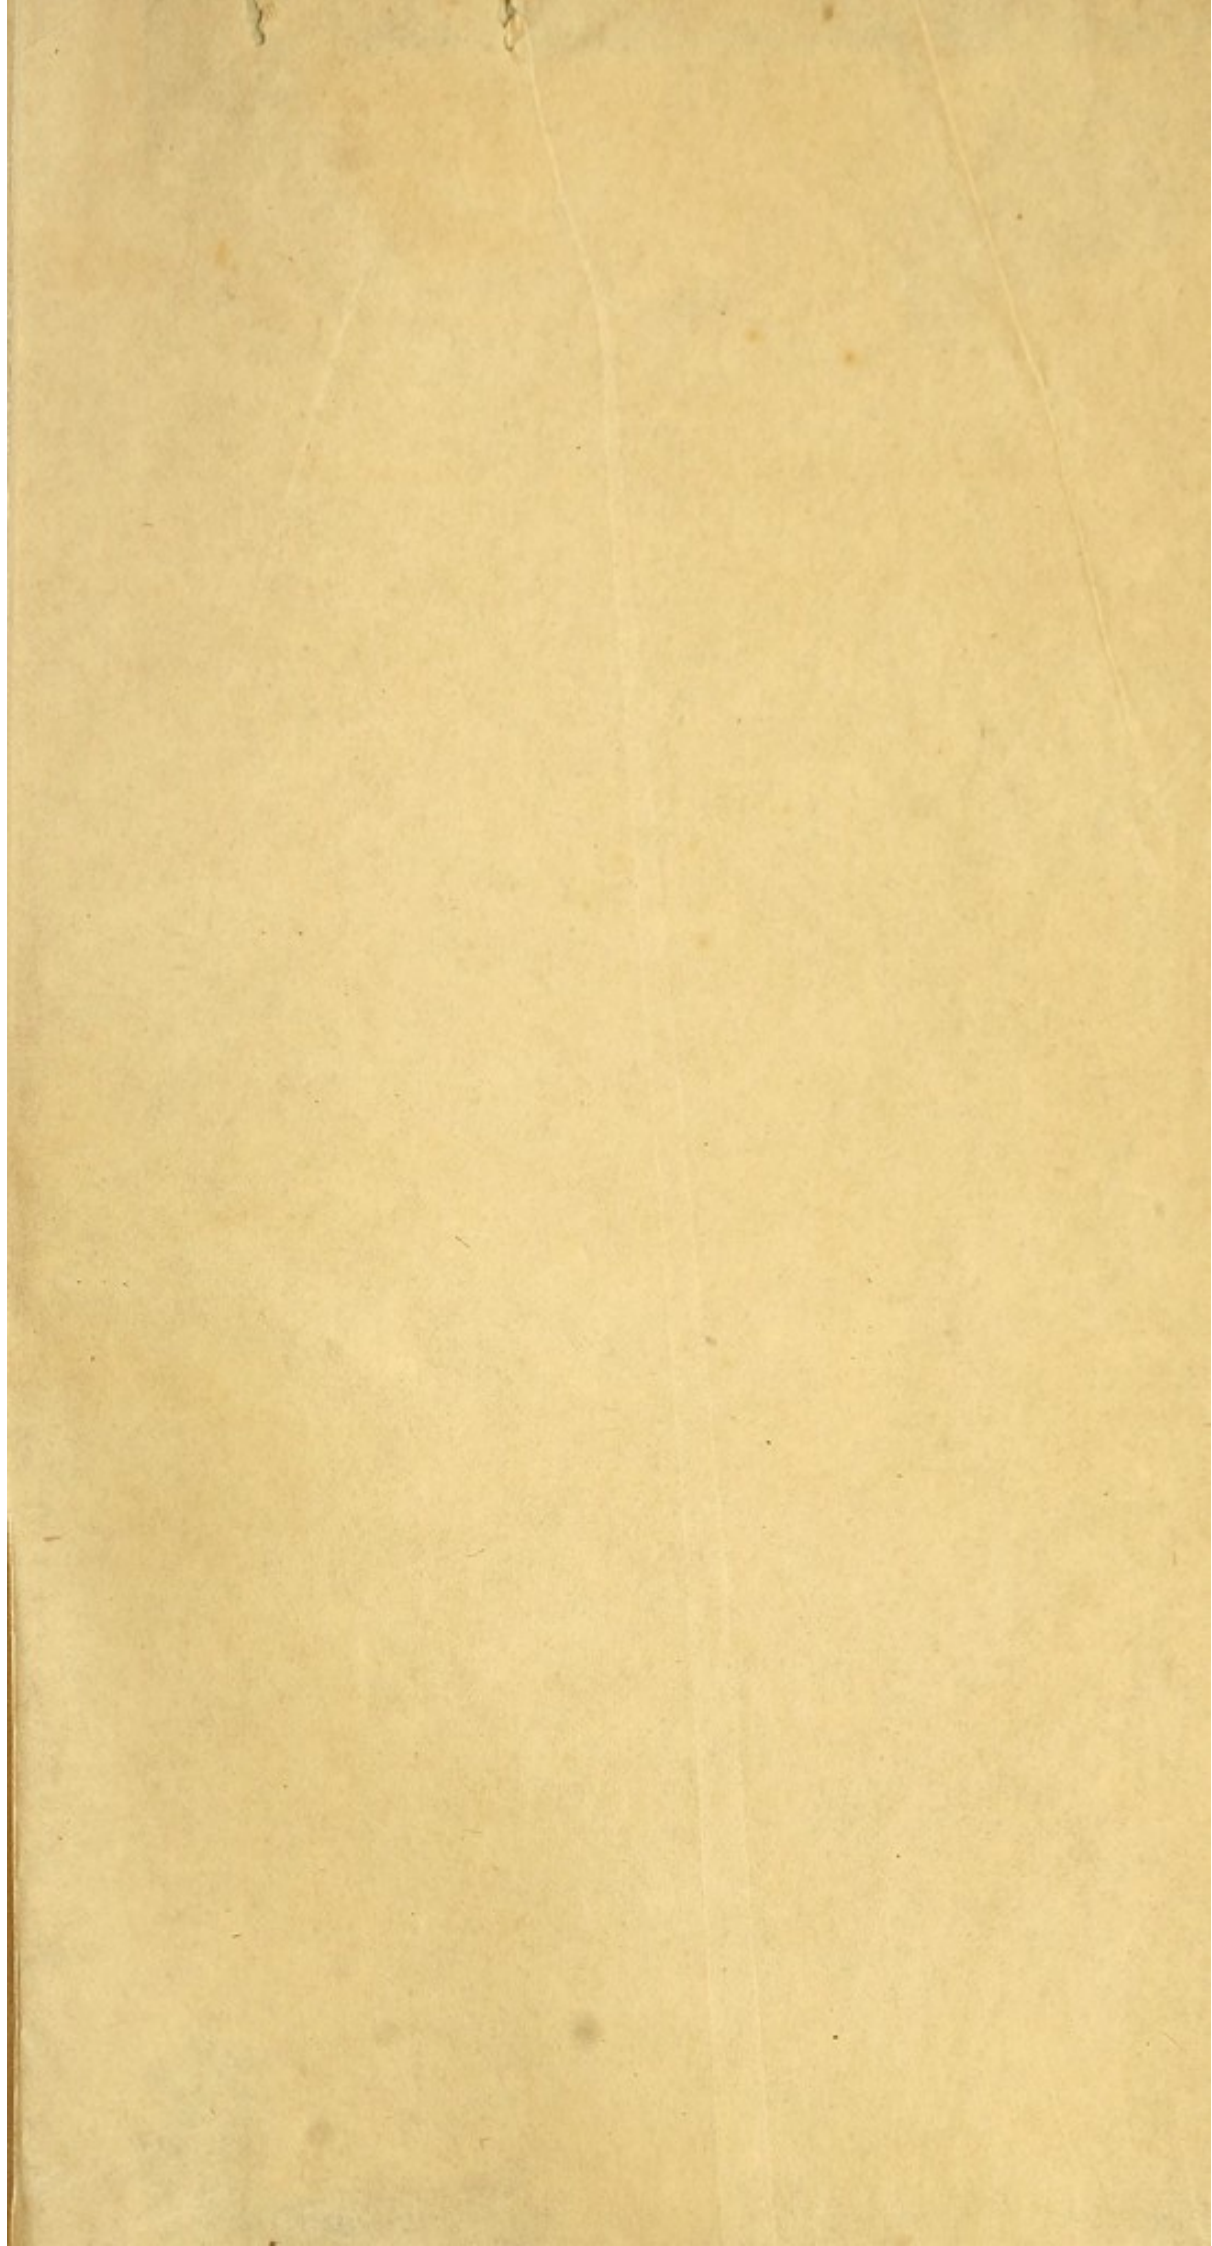

Mr. Humphries—102.

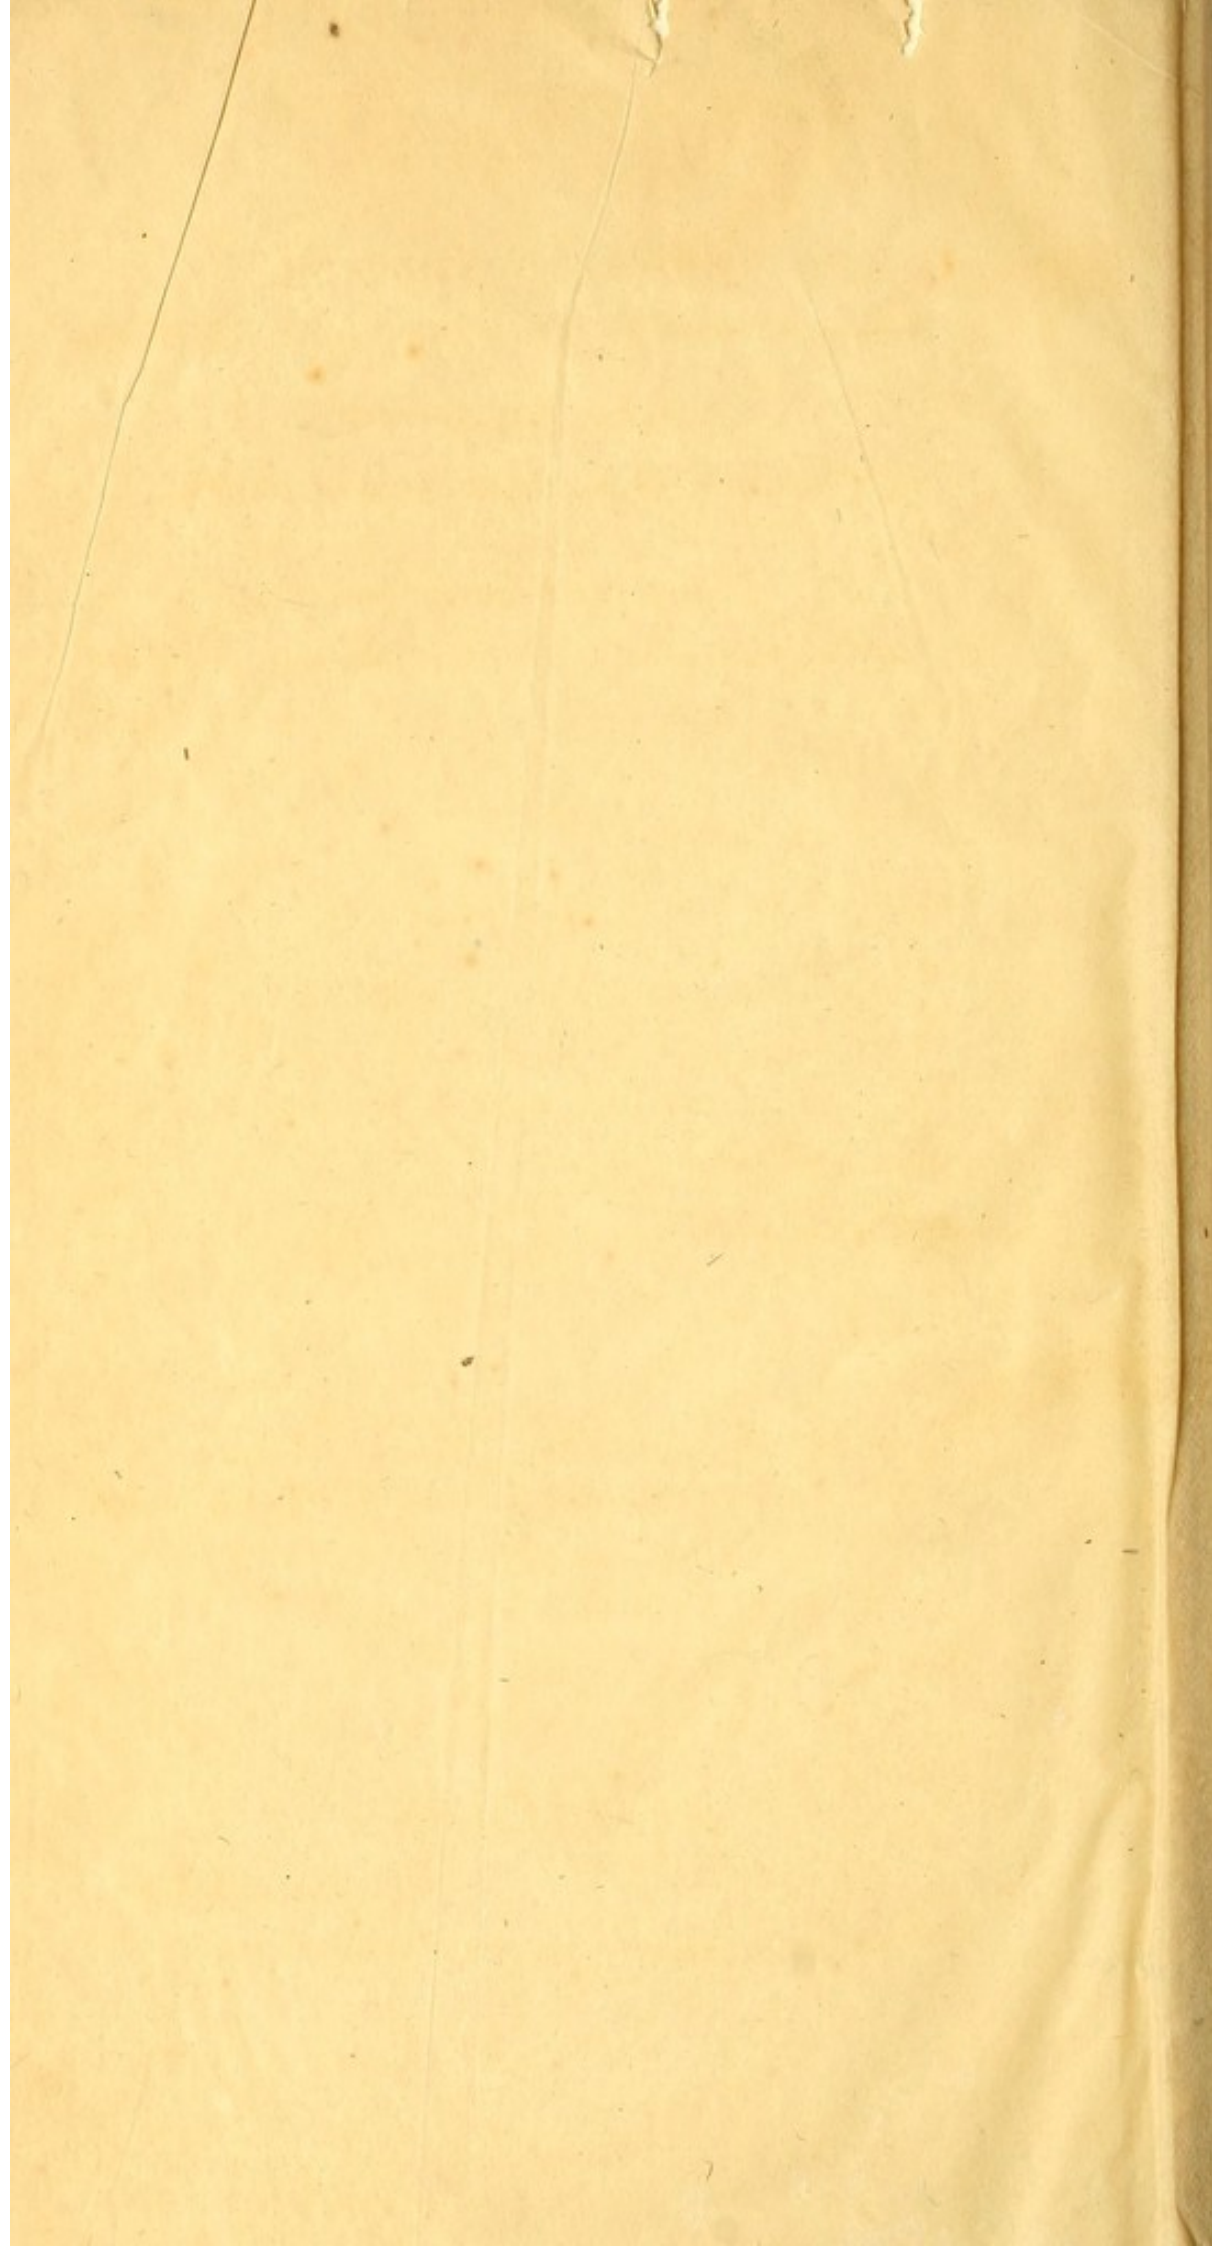

Of Newington, near London, carpenter. He was so devoid of curiosity that he never was a mile distant from the house in which he was born.
