OMOPLATE, n. f. (anat.) omoplate; scapula; (shoulder-blade; (blade-bone).

ON, pr. (indefinite) sing. m. f. 1. one, sing.; people, pl.; they, pl.; * men; we, pl.; (you, sing., pl.; 2. some one; somebody, sing.

1. — nait pour mourir, one is born to die, people, men, we are born to die; — le dit, people, they say so; it is said; — n'aime pas le faire, you do not like to do it. Si l'— me croit, if I am believed; qu'—, que l'— m'écoute, let me be listened to; qu'— l'écoute, let him be listened to; que l'— consente à cela ou non, let them consent to that or not; en parle-t-—? is that spoken of; en parla-t-—, was that spoken of; 2. — sonne à la porte, some one, somebody is ringing at the door.

[ON is often translated into English by the passive form of the verb (V. Ex. 1). This is sometimes elegant. On after words such as et, ou, où, que, qui, quoi, si, etc., that would form with it a hiatus or such as would produce any other dissonance, frequently becomes for euphony l'on (V. Ex. 1), except the on is immediately followed by le, la, les, lui or other words beginning with l (V. Ex. 1). In interrogations when on would follow a verb ending in a or e a t preceded and followed by a hyphen (-t-) is placed between them for the sake of euphony.]
