The topography of all the known vineyards; containing a description of the kind and quality of their products, and a classification / Translated from the French, and abridged. [Anon].

Contributors

Jullien, A. 1766-1832.

Publication/Creation

London: G. and W.B. Whittaker, 1824.

Persistent URL

https://wellcomecollection.org/works/rpsvna3j

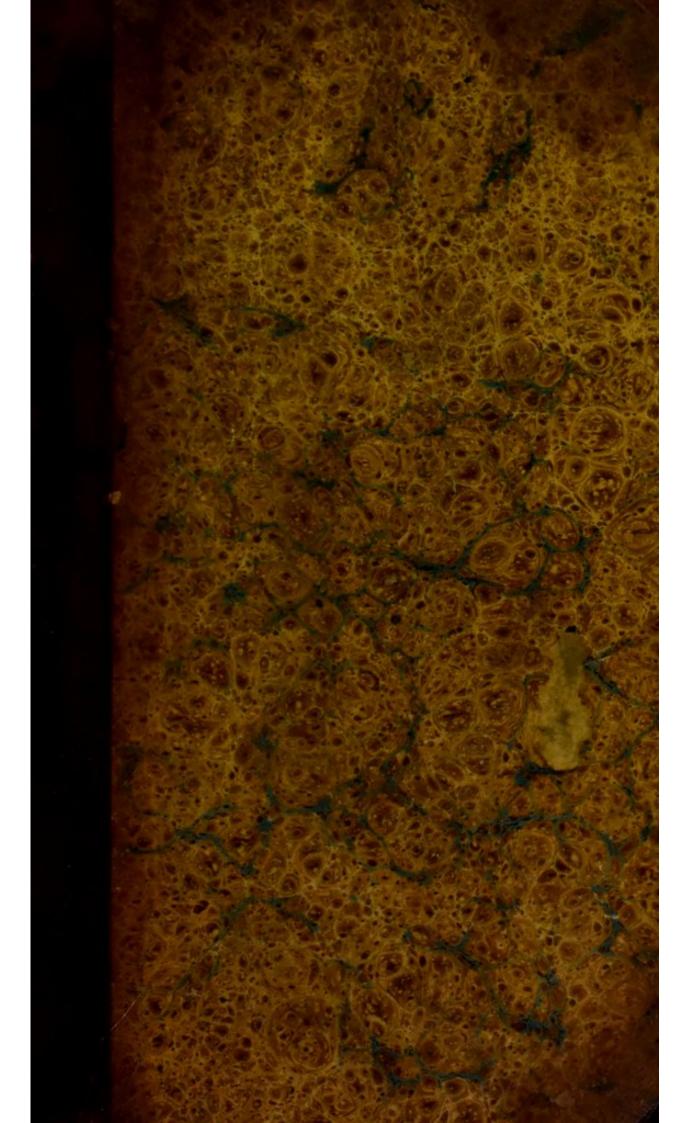

License and attribution

This work has been identified as being free of known restrictions under copyright law, including all related and neighbouring rights and is being made available under the Creative Commons, Public Domain Mark.

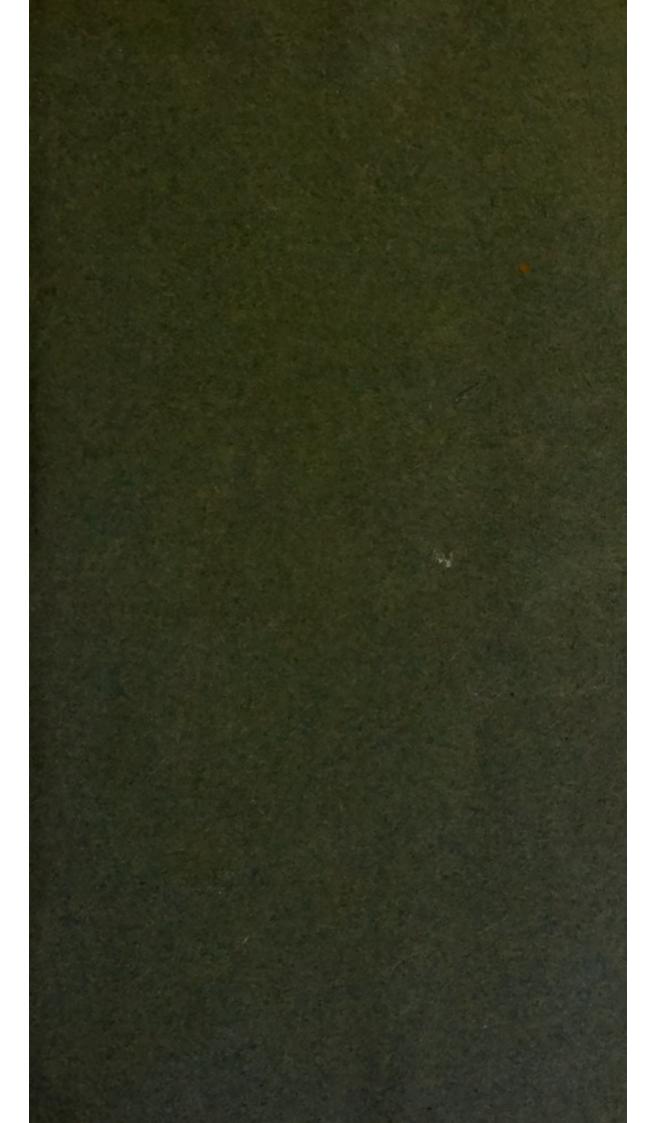

You can copy, modify, distribute and perform the work, even for commercial purposes, without asking permission.

Wellcome Collection 183 Euston Road London NW1 2BE UK T +44 (0)20 7611 8722 E library@wellcomecollection.org https://wellcomecollection.org

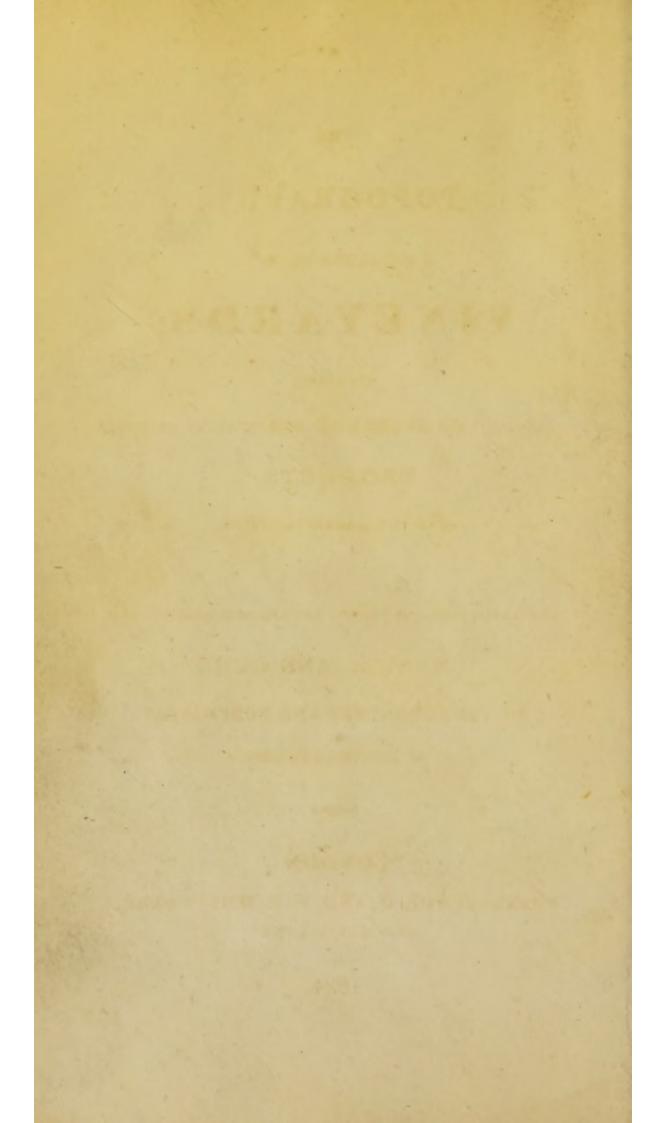

30748/A An abridge Wansletten By André Jullien

JULLIEN, A.

THE TOPOGRAPHY

OF ALL THE KNOWN

VINEYARDS;

CONTAINING

A DESCRIPTION OF THE KIND AND QUALITY OF THEIR PRODUCTS,

AND A CLASSIFICATION.

TRANSLATED FROM THE FRENCH, AND ABRIDGED SO AS TO FORM

A MANUAL AND GUIDE

TO ALL IMPORTERS AND PURCHASERS

IN THE CHOICE OF WINES.

LONDON:

PRINTED FOR G. AND W. B. WHITTAKER, AVE-MARIA-LANE.

1824.

VIPHEF ACEDS

I an French WER WER Which the present soundered Translations insulated the present soundered Translation of bring the only one of its soul Mary inside the bring the only one of its on its state. Mary inside the present that the present and on its section with the fill the present and section of West West West West West the fill the present and section of Versyngia manuscriberalisms in their taken.

The Author has child he pains in obtain-

Printed by R. Gilbert St. John's Square, London.

32 h

PREFACE.

THE French Work, from which the present abridged Translation is made, has the peculiar recommendation of being the only one of its kind. Many treatises have been written upon the general History of Wine, both ancient and modern, and the various modes of their fabrication; but hitherto no topographical description of Vineyards, nor classification of their products has been attempted.

The Author has spared no pains in obtaining information, and in respect to France has succeeded, by having visited, in person, the different crus; but as to other countries, being obliged to depend upon statements from Books and Travellers, he cannot vouch equally for their accuracy.

The leading features of wines are, 1st, their colour, red and white, every shade, from the deepest to the lightest of each, being included.

- 2. Their consistence, which occasions a triple division of them into vins de liqueur, or sweet wines; vins secs, dry or acid; and vins moelleux (to which no English term corresponds), wines which form the mean between the two others, such as Port, Burgundy, &c.
- 3. Their qualities divide them into vins fins, d'ordinaire, et communs, which admit of various distinctions, in proportion to their possessing the agremens of flavour and perfume in a greater or less degree.

In this work the wines are detailed and arranged, first in reference to each particular department; and in the second classification, according to their rank in the scale of wines in general. It has been found necessary to abridge and curtail the original work in a very great degree, but an ample detail has been preserved of all those wines which are in the greatest vogue and estimation, such as Champagne, Burgundy, &c.

The Work cannot fail of being an useful guide both to merchants and individuals, in making their purchases. It will likewise tend to rectify the false arrangements now universally existing in the lists of wines, whether en gros or en detail; and put an end to the errors and imposition in respect to the terms Imperial Tokay, Romanèe Conti, Hermitage, (of which the Almanac de Gourmands doubts the existence of one bottle of the first quality in Paris) and other wines equally scarce and dear, which at present tend to enhance the price of some substituted liquor, putting to shame the vendor and soi disant connoisseur, by exposing the fraud of the one and the ignorance of the other.

Not that the charge of ignorance is to be confined to the latter class, for, in fact, before the appearance of this work, even the French were unacquainted with their own vineyards, and the comparative state of their products; and with the exception of Bordeaux wines, the English, at this time, have only a superficial knowledge of the names of certain vineyards. To this ignorance may, in a great measure, be attributed the continual disappointments experienced by the importer of French wines. It is notorious, that a bottle of good Burgundy or Hermitage, is seldom to be met with, however dearly purchased; the fault is immediately laid upon the change of temperature and the carriage; but these are not the only causes.

Few persons are aware, that the most famous vineyards do not produce a liquor of equal quality throughout, but owe their celebrity to certain favoured crus or spots; such is the case with the Clos de Vougeot, which gained its fame from a particular mode of collecting the grapes, and from certain parts by the Monks; whereas Mr. Tortoni Ravel, their successor, followed a direct contrary practice, gathering the whole produce indiscriminately, and selling it all at the same price, six francs per bottle, each sealed with his name; thus, as the people of the country accuse him, sacrificing the quality to the quantity. Again, the best grapes produce juices of different qualities according to the different pressings, from the best to the very lowest, all which are kept separate, and used according to the will and discretion of the wine-maker. In both the above cases the wine may be the real produce of the vineyard quoted, and yet bad; but in addition to these, the importer lies at the mercy of the merchant, in respect to the wine being really from the vineyard mentioned, and not from some one adjoining. The ignorance of his correspondent is well known to him, and the temptation great.

Although these causes cannot be entirely removed, yet the reader will be put upon his guard, and should he visit the vineyards in person, or send an agent, he will be prepared, in a great degree, to counteract imposition, by knowing what qualities each wine ought to have. Without this previous knowledge he can only pronounce them agreeable or disagreeable, in respect to his own palate, which is, in fact, no judgment, as tastes differ even to a proverb, and habit will render, what is at first nauseous, most pleasant and relishing.

The work will be found, as before-mentioned, most perfect, and therefore most useful, in respect to French wines. The Author is apprehensive that errors, both of omission and description, may be found, by those who have visited the other countries; still, with all its defects, it will be found of great merit, as conveying much information upon a subject so imperfectly known.

A faithful translation was made of the original, but by the advice of experienced persons, lest it should be tedious and too expensive, it was reduced to its present size.

The French technical terms are retained, with an Explanatory Table, as corresponding words were not to be found in English. The Import Duties are added, and the Measures of different countries.

OR, EXPLANATION OF THE THRMS DEED IN THIS over oil dictions become recommends being the tra-of a direct winds of The Author is the disk about the printing out I will be the Smile of their material They are Wille Sant as arreon terms to design based of the state of the water darden control a disagreeable sensu-frome-Serviceexe-Theperfung discrigaged from sparetuotes begannes at the time of tashing secording to the particular a continues to be four

SAME A STATE OF THE PARTY OF TH

Concret-The agreeable odour which ext

PREPAGE

A VOCABULARY,

OR, EXPLANATION OF THE TERMS USED IN THIS WORK TO EXPRESS THE DIFFERENT QUALITIES OF THE WINES.

Acerbe—The quality of wine made with grapes produced by bad plants, or not having reached their maturity. They are at the same time harsh, rough, and sharp.

Apre—This word characterises wines, which, by their roughness, cause a disagreeable sensation to the palate.

Arome-Spiritueux—The perfume disengaged from spirituous liquors at the time of tasting; according to its strength it continues to be perceived a longer or shorter time. In many vine-yards it is called sève.

Bouquet-The agreeable odour which exhales when the liquor is exposed to the air. The connoisseurs give it the name of bouquet, because it appears composed of a collection of several different odours; it is the characteristic sign of the vins fins. The vins d'ordinaire have it in a weak degree; but the vins communs are entirely void of it.

Bourru vin Bourru—Wine which comes from the vat or press, and thick from a great quantity of lees.

Chais—A magazine situate upon the ground-floor, or a little sunk in the earth.

Charnu—This quality is applied to wine which has a certain consistence; it may be so without having much spirit, which distinguishes it from the vins corsés.

Corps, Vin qui a du Corps, Vin Corsé—Expressions employed to mark those wines which have a certain consistence, a marked taste, a vinous strength, the substance of which is charnu, which fills the mouth; in short, the contrary to a wine light, dry, cold, and aqueous.

Cru Crudite—Wine too young, not sufficiently ripe, which has an acidity unpleasant. Cru—The land upon which the vine grows. A wine is called of such a cru, meaning a circumscribed spot in a vineyard; it is also used in a more extensive sense, as the cru of such a district, &c.

Cuvée—Signifies, in its most general sense, the contents of a cellar. Also the different products by pressure of one vine, which fill many vats. Also the same as cru.

Delicat—A wine delicate, is little charged with tartar and colouring matters. It is neither harsh nor sharp, and may have spirit, body and even du grain; but it is necessary that these should be well combined, and that none predominate.

Droit en Gout-Wine which has no taste foreign to its own.

Dur-New wine, whose rough taste is disagreeable to the palate.

Event—Dead, the wines contract this flavour from leaving open the barrel or bottles.

Ferme—A wine, uniting a great deal of body, of strength, du nerf du mordant; or that which not having acquired maturity still keeps its harshness.

Fin, Finesse—A wine is fine which is light and delicate.

Finir bien—Is said of those wines which keep, gain quality in growing old, and are less subject than others to undergo a complete degeneracy.

Fort—A wine having much spirit, body, and taste settled.

Franc de Gout—Wines which have no other flavour than that, which the fruit ought to give.

Franc de qualité—Wines which have undergone no alteration.

Fumeux—Wines which, from being spirituous, quickly mount to the head.

Grain—A sort of harshness, which, without being disagreeable, is tasted, more or less, in the vins secs et molleux, when not very old and have not been mixed.

Grossier—Wine, having a roughness, a clammy taste, heavy, thick, and without agreeable flavour. Many good crus produce this sort of wine, which improves by age. The vins d'ordinaire, which have only this defect, are improved by mixture with light wines, particularly white.

Mache—A wine thick and clammy, which fills the mouth, and appears capable of being chewed.

Moelleux—Wine, which is between the vins Piquans and the Vins de Liqueur; such as Port wine, &c, Montant—Wine, which rises quickly to the head from the disengagement of the carbonic acid, as the wines mousseux of Champagne.

Mordant-A qualification in wine of communicating its taste to others when mixed.

Moustille—A wine, which not having completed its fermentation, keeps a sweetness, mixed with a slight sharpness, by means of the carbonic acid; it does not mousse, but continues to ferment.

Muet—Wine, whose fermentation is stopped by sulphur.

Muter-The action of preparing the wine Muet.

Nerf-Nerveaux—Wine, which uniting sufficient body, spirit, and strength, preserves its quality a long time at the same degree; is capable of transportation, and resists the change of seasons.

Pâteux-Wine of thick consistence, which is clammy to the mouth, and particles of which seem to adhere to the palate.

Plat—Wines which have no body, flavour, or spirit.

Pousse Echauffe—A bad taste in wines newly made, from being suffered to ferment too much or too long.

Sève—A term in use at Bourdeaux, and other vineyards, to signify the aromatic flavour produced at the time of tasting, which embalms the mouth, and is tasted after the swallowing the liquor. It differs from the bouquet, which is the perfume exhaling upon the contact of air with the wine, and applied to the smelling only.

Soyeux—Wines causing an agreeable sensation without harshness.

Veloutè—Wine with a good colour and body. Vif—Wines which have little of the moelleux, but without being sharp; light and diuretique.

Chaud-Wines with much spirit, used to give heat to cold and weak wines.

Viner—To give to wine a vinous or spirituous quality. Small wines mixed with stronger. To mix with brandy or spirits of wine.

SECTION I.

FRANCE.

France, situated almost in the centre of Europe, is, by its position and the nature of its soil, the country richest in vines. According to the documents collected by the minister of the interior, it contained, in 1815, about 1,734,000 hectares of vines, which produced, upon an average crop, 31,000,000 hectolitres. Since that time considerable plantations have been made; 1,900,000 hectares now appropriated to this purpose, produce about 34,000,000 hectolitres of wine In the provinces unfavourable to the vines about 7,000,000 hectolitres of beer, and 10,000,000 hectolitres of cider are annually fabricated.

CHAPTER I.

FLANDRE, HAINAUT, CAMBRESIS, PICARDIE ET UNE PARTIE DE L'ISLE DE FRANCE ET DE LA BRIE.

These provinces form the departments of the North, the Pas de Calais, de la Somme, et de l'Aisne.

DEPARTEMENT DU NORD.

La Flandre, Hainaut, et Cambresis. Six districts; Lisle, Avesnes, Cambrai, Douai, Dunherque, Hazebruck.

This department produceth neither wine nor cider. Nevertheless it carries on a large commerce in the wines of Burgundy, Champagne, and in general with all the good vineyards of France. As this liquor is not in daily use, the cellars are filled with none but good wines, and proportionably a stock of better liquor is to be found here than in Paris. The Flemings generally purchase whenever the vintage is good, and keep the wine until mellowed by age.

PAS DE CALAIS.

Arras, St. Omer, Saint Pol, Montreuil, Boulogne, Bethune.

This department produces no wine; the wines are brought by sea from Bordeaux, and other vineyards of the south; likewise they draw them from Bourgogne, Macon, Orleans.

DEPARTEMENT DE LA SOMME.

Amiens, Abbeville, Doulens, Montdidier, Peronne.

The vine is only cultivated in nine communes in the district of Montdidier upon 34 hectares. The average crop 1200 hectolitres, of the worst quality. Cagny, a village near Amiens, has some vines; the produce is consumed in the town.

DE L'AISNE.

Laon, St. Quentin, Vervins, Soissons, Château Thierry.

The districts of St. Quentin and Vervins have no vines.

RED WINES.

Cussy, Bellevue, Pargnant, Craonnelle, Craonne, Jumigny, Vassogne, four leagues and a half from Laon, produce wines superior to all the others; they are light, delicate, sufficiently spirituous, and of an agreeable taste.

Roucy, six leagues from Laon, wine bearing comparison with that of Craonne.

Laon is situate upon a hill, and surrounded with vines. The vines on the south side are the best.

Crépsy, Bièvres, Orgeval, Mont Chalons, Vourcienne, Ployard, and Arancy, two or three leagues from Laon, produce wines of a good quality, but inferior in delicacy and spirit to those above mentioned.

Chateau Thierry produces, upon the sides of the Marne, wines tolerably delicate, but without body or spirit.

Vailly, three leagues from Soissons, furnishes the best wines of the district, pleasant, but cold, without strength, and inferior to those of Laon. The wines of the other vineyards are all of inferior quality.

WHITE WINES.

Pargnant, Cussy, Château Thierry, and Charly are surrounded by vineyards, in which much white wine is made, weak in quality, but of good flavour.

NORMANDY, ET UNE PARTIE DU PERCHE.

These provinces, under the 48th and 49th degree of latitude, form five departments, de l'Eure, de la Manche, de l'Orne, du Calvados, et de la Seine inferieure. The first alone contains some vineyards, but of little importance. Cider is the drink of the inhabitants, amounting to 617,000 hectolitres. The Normans purchase large quantities of wine from Burgundy and Champagne.

DE LA MANCHE, DE L'ORNE, DU CALVUDOS, DE LA SEINE INFERIEURE.

These departments have no other vineyards than those which grow above the village d'Argence, three leagues from Caen. They produce little wine, and that of the worst quality.

De l'Eure, named Vexin Normand, Partie du Perche, D'ouche, Lieuvain, and Roumois. Evreux, les Andelys, Bernay, Louviers, Pont Audemer.

About 1,845 hectares of vines, produce on an average 60,900 hectolitres of wine, which are consumed by the inhabitants.

The wines of this country are all, more or less, harsh, and without quality.

L'ISLE DE FRANCE ET BRIE.

These provinces form four departments, de l'Oise, de la Seine, de Seine et Oise, et de Seine et Marne, which contain 45,200 hectares of vines, producing yearly 1,453,000 hectolitres of common wines, of which some produced from the best exposures and good plants are consumed as vins d'ordinaire: the greater part of inferior quality.

DE L'OISE.

Beauvais, Clermont, Senlis, Compiegne.
3500 hectares of vines produce annually
124,000 hectolitres; bad wine, which does not bear carriage.

RED WINES.

They reckon as the best those which are produced near Clermont: their sole merit is that of being less bad than the others.

Those of Beauvais are inferior, but the inhabitants find them good, and consume the whole crop. Those of Compiegne and Senlis are rough, cold, and below mediocrity.

WHITE WINES.

Mouchy St. Eloy, canton of Liancourt, produces a wine, which, in good years, has an agreeable flavour, and keeps a long time.

DE LA SEINE.

La Ville de Paris, St. Denis, et Sceaux.

About 4,800 hectares of vines produce, on an average, 143,000 hectolitres of wines of the worst quality, consumed by the cultivators themselves, or sold in detail for the gingettes of the environs of the capital. The merchants of Paris buy very little, and that only in time of scarcity, because of their acid taste, which the mixture of good wines imperfectly corrects, and only for a short time.

DE SEINE ET OISE.

Versailles, Corbeil, Etampes, Mantes, Pontoise, Rambouillet.

About 20,000 hectares of vines produce 672,000 hectolitres of common wines, of which 400,000 are consumed in the country; the surplus exported.

RED WINES.

Mantes sur Seine produces tolerably good vins d'ordinaire; amongst which, they mention with praise that de la Côte des Célestins. Athis, three leagues from Corbeil and Paris; the close belonging to the Château, produces wine light and agreeable.

The other vines of this commune furnish tolerable good vins communs, but inferior.

Mons, three leagues from Corbeil, produces wines esteemed in the country.

Andresy, a league from Poissy, wines light, with little spirit, but pleasant.

Deuil and Montmorency make wines with body, colour, and a good taste, although coarse and with little spirit.

Argenteuil, canton de Versailles, two leagues from Paris, is surrounded by a considerable vine-yard, which produces much wine of an inferior quality, and the greatest part with a disagree-able taste of the soil, and a very unpleasant smell, arising from the manure la Poudrette, (night soil.) The Vignerons, who are sure of selling the whole of their crops, care little about any thing, but the rendering the produce abundant. Some proprietors, more careful, obtain a liquor weak in quality, but not at all unpleasant.

WHITE WINES.

Mignaux, three-quarters of a league from Versailles, produces wines tolerably good, light, and agreeable. The author of the Almanach des Gourmands, compares them with the best tisanes of Champagne.

Andresy produces some small wine, esteemed in the country.

SEINE ET MARNE.

Melun, Coulommiers, Fontainebleau, Meaux, and Provins, produce, on an average, 514,000 hectolitres of wine of a low quality; of which 245,000 are consumed in the country; the rest exported.

The plants generally cultivated are le Pineau, le Mélier, le Meunier, le Tresseau, le Saumoiseau, le Fromenton, le Rochelle, le Gamé, et le Gouais.

RED WINES.

The district of Fontainebleau has some vines, the wines of which are esteemed as vins communs. The vineyard de la Grand Paroisse, and some neighbouring ones, furnish wines which have a good colour, body, un assez franc goût, and much firmness.

Sablons and Moret, near Fontainebleau, although much inferior, may be ameliorated by mixture of good wines.

The district of Melun produces, in good seasons, some wines of a good colour, and tolerable flavour, but generally with little spirit.

Those of Chartrettes, Boissise, d'Hericy, et Fericy, are the best. Those on the side des Vallées are preferred. The wines of the districts of Provins and Coulommiers, are flat and grossiers The red is harsh and disagreeable when not mixed with the white, and this turns a la graisse quickly by itself.

Saint Girex and d'Orly, on the confines de la Brie, produce wines less bad than the others.

The district of Meaux makes only small wines, little coloured, dry, verts, cold, and spiritless, incapable of amelioration by mixture with good wines.

Lagny is surrounded by vineyards, producing only small wines.

WHITE WINES.

The vineyards produce very few: those on the side des Vallées, at Chartrettes, are tolerably good.

CHAMPAGNE.

This province, sixty-five leagues long, and forty-five broad, under the 47th, 48th, and 49th degrees of latitude, is divided into four departments, des Ardennes, de la Marne, de l'Aube, and de la Haute Marne; contains 63,600 hectares of vines, and produces, on an average, 1,768,000 hectolitres.

The wines of Champagne are too well known to require any eulogy. The vineyards of the departement de la Marne are those only which furnish the famous wine. Some crus of the department de l'Aube produce red wines justly esteemed; those of Haute Marne are less exported. The wines of the department des Ardennes are of inferior quality, and do not leave the country.

DES ARDENNES.

Mezieres, Rethel, Rocroz, Sedan, Vouziers.

The vine is only cultivated in the districts of Rethel, Sedan, and Vouziers. About 2500 hectares produce 80,000 hectolitres de vins communs, consumed in the country.

DE LA MARNE.

The wines are the principal riches of this department, and the object of considerable commerce with all France and foreign countries. The vineyards occupy about 20,600 hectares of land, and furnish, upon an average, 636,300 hectolitres of wines, of which 250,000 are consumed by the inhabitants. The vine is cultivated in the five districts, but it is in those of Reims and Epernay that the celebrated vineyards are found. The white wines particularly have contributed to this reputation, by their delicacy, their agreeable flavour, and perhaps still more, by that sparkling mousse which they preserve even in extreme age, and which, if not so highly esteemed by connoisseurs, is at least most sought after by the generality of its consumers. The red wines are also distinguished by much fineness, delicacy, and agreeableness.

The plants most generally cultivated are, red; les Morillons, les Pineaux, les Meuniers, et les Fromentés; these two last kinds are met with most commonly in the vines of the Vignerons proprietors. White; les Plants dorés et les Epinettes alone fill the best crus, but the Vignerons frequently plant the Gouais white, which they called Marmot, and the fruit of which they employ only for wines for their own use. Those who cultivate vineyards in repute never sell the produce of these grapes, lest they compromise the honour of their vineyard. The raisins, white and black, are cultivated indiscriminately in the vineyards intended to furnish white wines. This mixture contributes to the perfection of wines of this kind, and particularly to the mousseux. The last resist best the frost and rains frequent at the season of the vintage; they ripen more readily, which is very advantageous when the weather is cold; but in the hot seasons the excess of ripeness makes the colouring matters susceptible of dissolution

The wines drawn from these grapes preserve better their limpidness and whiteness; they are more corses, plus fins, and possess more sève, than those made with the white. They have likewise more spirit, and consequently less fit to become mousseux. The white raisins on the contrary, producing light wines, which mousse very strongly, it results that the best wines are made with the red and white grapes, mixed in different proportions. However, there are cantons where few black grapes are found, and yet the wines are much esteemed.

In making the white wine, without tinge, from black grapes, much precaution is used; not only the ripest and soundest bunches are chosen, but also all the dry berries are picked off, and the unripe and rotten. They are placed in large baskets, which are carried on horse-back to the press, and carefully covered with a cloth, in order to weaken the action of the sun, and avoid fermentation. The operation of pressing is made with all possible celerity, and this only two or three times, as long as the liquor preserves its sweetness and clearness, or until it acquires more firmness and strength, or until it takes a tinge. The produce of these first pressings give the choicest wine; those subsequent furnish the wines known in the country by the name of vins de taille, which are slightly coloured, of a good flavour, and more spirituous than the first. They generally in a tenth or twelfth proportion enter into the vins mousseux, drawn from the vineyards of the fourth class. The wines obtained from the last pressings, without being precisely red, are sufficiently coloured so as not to be considered as white; they are used advantageously to give strength and quality to the common red wines.

The raisins intended for making the vin rose are gathered with the same precaution as for the white, and are treated in the same manner at the press; but previous to the carrying them thither, they are stripped from the branch, and pressed slightly in the vessels appropriated to this use, and remain there a sufficient time for the commencement of a fermentation, which, by dissolving the colouring particles, gives to the rest the rosy tint which is desired. Sometimes for this purpose a liquor is used, known by the name of the vin de Fismes; it is drawn from elder berries, boiled with cream of tartar. A few drops of this liquor suffice to tinge with a rose colour a bottle of white wine, without altering its flavour or wholesomeness: the colour is more beautiful, and keeps a longer time than that obtained from wine suffered to ferment.

The high price of the vins mousseux comes not only from the quality of the wines chosen to make them, and the infinite pains required before they are finished, but also from the considerable losses, to which the proprietors and dealers are exposed in this kind of speculation, and the strange phænomena which determine or destroy the qualitè mousseuse. As to losses, the owners count in general upon fifteen or twenty bottles broken in a hundred, sometimes even thirty or forty. To this must be added, the diminution which takes place; as the wine is separated from its deposits by decanting, an operation which is performed at least twice.

The phænomena which cause or destroy the quality mousseux are so surprising, that they cannot be explained. The same wine drawn the same day into bottles from the same glass house, put down in the same cellar, and placed in the same heap, mousse to such a height, and in such a division, whilst it mousses much less or not at all in another position, near such a door, or under such an air hole. Wines also, which have moussed perfectly, lose this upon the change of season. All these accidents together cause the dearness of the vins mousseux; they are so varied and extraordinary, that the most experienced dealers cannot foresee, nor prevent them always.

The quality of the bottles, or perhaps the degree of fire which they undergo, contribute to diminish or preserve the mousse; we are assured that this phænomenon extends even to the drinking glasses, and that in some all the fermentation is instantly lost, whilst it is preserved in others filled at the same time.

The wines intended for the mousse should be bottled in the March following the vintage; the fermentation generally begins in the month of May, and continues all the summer; it is particularly strong in June during the flowering of the vine, and in August, when the fruit begins to ripen. At these times the greatest loss in the bursting of bottles takes place, and it is not safe to pass through a cellar without being guarded with a mask of iron wire. The workmen are severely wounded by the splinters of bottles who neglect this precaution. The fermentation diminishes in autumn, and seldom any heavy losses happen in the second year. Amongst the wines prepared for la mousse, there are some which take only a slight fermentation: these are called cremans, drive out the cork with less force, and sparkle less in the glass. Their mousse forms a scum of froth, which covers the liquor, and disperses in a few moments. They have the advantage over the vins grand mousseux in preserving more vinous qualities, and being less sharp. Their price is higher, as being sought for by many connoisseurs, and owing their quality only to one of the strange phænomena in the wines of Champagne, they cannot be obtained in a great quantity.

The best red wines are produced upon the north side of the declivities of the Marne, which are called the Montagnes de Rheims.

The vines, although exposed to the north and east, furnish well flavoured wines: they are divided, according to their quality, into vins de la Montagne, de la basse Montagne, et de la Terre de Saint Thierry; these wines are in general fit to be bottled at the end of one year; those of a good quality keep well from six to twelve years.

RED WINES.

Class 1.

Verzy, Verzenay, Mailly, Saint Basle, near Rheims, produce the best wines, called de la Montagne; they have a good colour, body, spirit, and moreover much fineness, sève, and bouquet.

Bouzy, at the extremity of the chain of hills, furnishes wines which have all the qualities of the preceding, and distinguished by their delicacy.

Le Clos de Saint Thierry, one league northwest from Rheims, wines which unite the colour and bouquet of the wines of Burgundy to the lightness of those of Champagne.

Class 2.

Hautvilliers, Mareuil, Disy, Pierry, Epernay, upon the declivities of the Marne, are more celebrated for white than red wine.

Taissy, Ludes, Chigny, Rilly, Villers Amand, upon the mountain, from one league to three leagues and three quarters from Rheims, furnish wines partaking of all the qualities of the first class.

Cumieres, near Epernay, upon the slopes called de la Riviere Marne, is reputed for red wines more fine and delicate than those of the mountain of Rheims, but less body; and so forward, that in a hot season they come so soon to their maturity as seldom to keep above three or four years.

Class 3.

Villedemange, Ecueil, Chameny, amongst the vineyards de la Basse Montagne, give wines of a very good quality, which keep ten or twelve years.

Saint Thierry, Irigny, Chenay, Douillion, Villefrancqueux, Hernonville, and some other crus of that part, called the lands of Saint Thierry, produce red wines much sought after, of a deep colour, and very pleasant flavour.

Avenay, Champillon, and Damery, produce also good red wines, but inferior to the preceding.

Class 4.

Vertus, three leagues and a half south of Epernay, wines of a good colour, body, spirit, and very good flavour; not firm during the first year, but gain much by age, and keep long.

Mardeuil, Montelon, Moussy, Vinay, Chaveau, Mancy, two leagues from Epernay, give wines more delicate, more agreeable, and forward than those of Vertus.

Chamery and Pargny, two leagues from Rheims, furnish wines of the same kind as the preceding.

Vanteuil, Reuil, and Fleury la Riviere, two leagues and a quarter from Epernay, wines resembling those of Montelon, but lighter.

Amongst the vineyards which produce the vins communs, they mention those of Châtillon, Romery, Vincelles, Cormoyeux, Villers, Auilly, Vandieres, Verneuil, Troissy, as giving the best.

The vineyards of Sezanne, and all those of the districts of Chalons and Vetry sur Marne, produce only wines of a low quality.

WHITE WINES.

Class 1.

Sillery, canton of Verzy, two leagues from Rheims, produceth the most esteemed wine. It has an amber colour and a dry taste, its characteristics; body, spirit, a charming bouquet. It has the property of keeping the mouth fresh, and can be drank in a large quantity without harm; it is generally served iced, (frappè de glace.)

Sillery itself, being in a plain, contains but few vines; they grow on the side of Verzenay, which is contiguous; it is there where the best wines called Sillery are produced. Before the revolution, the Seigneur of this domain possessed upon the declivities of Verzenay, Mailly, and de Ludes, a great extent of excellent vines, furnishing wine of the same kind, and of equal reputation with those of Sillery. The most part of these has been sold to rich proprietors, who still cultivate them with the same care. The wine of Sillery is less sought after in France than in foreign countries; it is particularly esteemed in England.

Ay, five leagues south of Rheims, the first of the vineyards called de la Riviere de Marne, furnishes the best vins mousseux. They are fine, spirituous, sparkling, and have a beautiful bouquet, more light and more moelleux than those of Sillery. In France they are often preferred, although they have neither the colour nor the flavour, neither are they so spirituous or stomachic.

Mareuil, near Ay, produces wines not differing from the last, and pass, in commerce, as vins d'Ay.

Hautvilliers, four leagues from Rheims, furnished, formerly, wines which equalled or surpassed those of Ay; but many of the vineyards having fallen into the hands of persons who do not cultivate them with the same care, their produce, though good, is now placed only in the second class.

Pierry, three-quarters of a league from Epernay, has wines little inferior to those of Ay; they are drier, keep a longer time, and are distinguished by a marked taste de Pierre à fusil.

Dezy makes wines which partake of all the qualities and character of those of Ay.

The wines of Epernay are in general inferior to those of Ay; however, some wines, and particularly those called du Closet, produce some equal in quality.

Class 2.

The vineyards of Cramant, Avise, Oger, and Le Menil, from one to three leagues from Epernay, are in general planted with white grapes, which succeed better there than red. Their wines are sweet, very fine, light, and agreeable; mixed with those of Ay, and others of the first class, they furnish vins mousseux, possessing all their qualities. This mixture is necessary in hot seasons, because the wines of the first crus de la Marne, being made with black grapes are less apt to mousse than those from white; and these latter ensure the fermentation. The wines called Ptysannes, are principally found amongst these four crus, which are so much esteemed as aperitives, and ordered by physicians in diseases of the bladder. They are bottled at the end of the year, after the vintage. Wines of the same name are made in the vineyards of Ay, Pierry, Mareuil, and Sillery; but this Ptysanne has more body and spirit, is drank iced like the wines of Sillery, and is in high estimation.

Classes 3 and 4.

The sloping hills, well exposed to the sun, with good plants, and carefully cultivated, generally produce very good wines. The others are of an inferior quality, and must be reckoned in the fifth class.

Class 5.

Chouilly, Monthelon, Grauves, Mancy, Molins, Maugrimaud, near Epernay, Beaumont, and Villers aux Næucs, near Rheims, produce wines light and agreeable, but weak, which only last a year. When the season is very hot, the best are used in the preparation of vins mousseux of the third class, by adding about a tenth of vin de taille d'Ay or Mareuil, which, giving them body, makes them keep better.

The environs of Ancerville, Vitry sur Marne, and Sézanne, produce wines small, secs, verts et plats, which will not keep, and are all consumed in the country.

The principal commerce of Champagne wines is made at Rheims, Avise, and Epernay. This last town is advantageously placed in the midst of the vineyards, on soil favourable for good cellars; they are hollowed in a limestone rock, are large, and well calculated for the keeping of wine. Those of M. Moët are particularly remarkable for their extent; they form a kind of labyrinth, which requires a guide; the walls are covered, (tapissées) to the height of six feet, with bottles artfully arranged, (400,000 bottles.) Few travellers pass without visiting them, and even sovereigns have had the curiosity of going so see them.

DE LA HAUTE MARNE.

Chaumont, Langres, Vassy.

RED WINES.

Class 1.

Aubigny, a canton of Prauthoy, five leagues from Langres, produces wines of a light red colour, much delicacy, and a very pleasant bouquet.

Mont Saugeon, five leagues from Langres; its wines keep well, and only differ from the preceding in a little less delicacy.

Class 2.

Vaux, Rivière-les, Fosses, Prautoy, and many other communes, make wines of good quality.

The vineyards of Joinville, four leagues from Vassy, St. Urbin, and some slopes of the vineyards of Château Vilain, of Creancey and Esscy-les-Ponts in the district of Chaumont, furnish a small quantity of wines, light, and agreeable; but which have neither the value nor bouquet of those of the first class. The environs of Saint Dizier produce a great quantity of small wines; the proprietors are accused of increasing their colour by black wines and elder-berries, and archil, called brinbelles.

DE L'AUBE.

The vine occupies 30,000 hectares of land, and produces, on an average, 617,000 hectolitres; the half of which is consumed in the country. The plants generally cultivated are, le Pineau rouge et blane, le Fromenteau violet et blane, le Gouais et le Gamet.

RED WINES.

Les Riceys, composed of three hamlets, are situate in a narrow valley, three leagues from Bar-sur-Seine, and surrounded by slopes, which produce very good wines. The vineyards of the three are of equal reputation. The wines are brisk, very spirituous, and well flavoured, with un joli bouquet and much sève; they require to be kept two years in cask to arrive at maturity. The best slopes are la Foret, les Roties Tronchoit, Boudier, Rotier, Foiseul, and Chênepestor.

Balnot-sur-Laigne, near the Riceys, produces similar wines; amongst which those of the side called Vaux are the best.

Avirey and Bagneux-la-Fosse, in the same canton, produce wines which approach near to those of Riceys. The most celebrated vine-yard is called Val-des-Riceys, at Avirey.

The wines from these vineyards are generally sent into Flanders, Picardy, and Normandy.

Class 2.

Bar-sur-Aube, Bar-sur-Seine, Bouilly, Laine aux Bois, and Javernan, produce vins d'ordinaire very pleasant, but incapable of exportation.

Gyè, Neuville, Landreville, district of Barsur-Seine, produce a great quantity of vins communs and grossiers, of a deep colour, and bearing exportation. On the side called Gravilliers, at Neuville, the plant Pineau is cultivated, and produces wines little inferior to those of the Riceys.

Villenoxe, near Nogent-sur-Scine, is surrounded by large vineyards, which produce much common wine.

WHITE WINES.

Riceys, already cited for red wine, produces white, much esteemed, lively, sparkling, very spirituous, and well flavoured.

Bar-sur-Aube; the wines in this district are good, though with little spirit, and keep well.

Rigny le Teron, district of Troyes, produces small white wines, tolerably good, and bearing exportation.

LORRAINE.

Under the 40th and 49th degree of latitude forms the departments de la Meuse, des Vosges, de la Moselle, et de la Meurthe.

LA MOSELLE.

Metz, Thionville, Sarguemines, Briey.

The plants generally cultivated are red grapes, le gros et petit Noir, le gros et petit Pi-neau; white, l'auxerrois, le bouquet, la patte de mouche, le gros vert, and la grosse race. Part of the five kinds being destroyed in 1789 by frosts, they have been replaced by coarse plants, which resist better the intemperate seasons, and produce much wine of an inferior quality.

RED WINES.

The vineyards of Scy, Jussy, Saint Ruffine and Dole, upon the sloping sides of the left bank of the Moselle, give the best wines, of a good colour and agreeable flavour; ripe in two years, and may be kept ten. Some communes of Sarguemines, produce tolerable good wines; the others are of moderate quality.

WHITE WINES.

These, for the most part, are light and agreeable, but of short duration, and do not go out the country.

DE LA MEUSE.

Bar le Duc, Commercy, Montmedy, Verdun.
The plants cultivated are, le Pineau noir et blanc; le Bourgnignon, l'Aubain, le vertplant et la grosse race; the produce of the last is abundant, and of good quality. One hectare planted with the grosse race, can produce 200 hectolitres; the same with the Pineau, only 65.

RED WINES.

Bar le Duc and Bussy la Côte produce wines light, delicate, and very pleasant vins d'ordinaire de premiere qualité.

Sorgeville, Savonniere devant Bar, Ligny Naives devant Bar, Behogne, Chardanar, Varney Rambercourt, Loisey and Anceville, produce wines of the same kind.

St. Michel, near Verdun, furnishes wines esteemed equal to those of Barr, which keep a long time.

Creuë produces red wines much esteemed.

Class 2.

The vineyards d'Apremont, Loupmont, Warneville, Lionville, Saint Julien, Champougny, Vaucourleurs, Vignot, Sampigny, St. Michel, Dampcevrin, Buxieres, Buxerules, Montsec, Vigneules, and Hatton Chatel, produce wines of a good flavour, briskness, body, and sufficiently spirited.

The country called les Rochelles and les Allouveaux produce tolerable good wine.

WHITE WINE.

Creuë produces the best white wines, also Boncourt.

LA MEURTHE.

The plants generally cultivated are the Pineau noir et blanc, l'Ericé noir, called also liverdun, and preferred here to the Pineau, l'Ericé blanc, le gamme, le facan et la grosse race.

RED WINES.

Thiaucourt, Pagny sous Pressy, Arnaville, Bayonville, Charrey, Essey, Villers sous Pérni, and Wandelainville, furnish the best wines; a good colour, delicacy, and an agreeable flavour; place them amongst wines d'ordinaire de seconde qualité.

Toul, Bruley, Dom Germain, Pannes, Envezin, Jaulnay, Rambercourt, Ecrouves, and Lucey, produce wines of the same kind, but less delicate.

Bondonville, Côtié Rôtie, Pixerecourt, near Nancy, Rouville and Neuviller, district of Laneville, Vic and Achain, furnish vins d'ordinaire tolerably good.

WHITE WINES.

Bruley, near Foul, produces the best; they are pleasant, and keep a long time.

VOSGES.

Epinal, Mirecourt, Neufchâteau, Remiremont, Saint Die.

RED WINES.

The vineyards of Charmes, Xaronval, and Ubexy, furnish wines of an agreeable flavour.

ALSACE.

Under 47th and 78th degrees of latitude form the departments of the Upper and Lower Rhin.

The red grapes do not thrive in this province. On the contrary the white are highly esteemed; but although the wine possesses bouquet and other good qualities, it is not pleasing to those accustomed to the wines of Burgundy and Champagne, and is in greater vogue in Germany and Switzerland.

BAS RHIN.

Strasbourg, Saverne, Schelestadt, Wissembourg.

RED WINE.

Very little produced, of an inferior quality, not exported.

WHITE WINES.

Molsheim produces white wines called, Finkenwein, of excellent flavour, seve and bouquet.

Wolkheim gives the wines, called Riesling, like the preceding, and equal to the vins gentils of the Haut Rhin.

Class 2.

Mutzig wines, like those of Molsheim, but inferior.

Neuviller and Erndlsheim, white wines, highly esteemed.

Imbozheim, good wines, but keep only three or four years.

Kentzheim and the vins clairettes of Thieffenthal, are praised.

HAUT RHIN.

Colmar, Altkirch, Befort, Delemont.

RED WINES.

Of inferior quality and little made.

The vineyards deserving notice are Riquewir, Rebauville, Ammerschwir, Riensheim, Kaiserberg, du Chateau Obviller, and a few others. Geisbourg, near Kaisarbourg.

WHITE WINES.

Guebuiller, near Colmar; vins secs, which have du corps, du spiritueux, de la sève, and a taste of nuts, called eschgriese.

Furcheim, near Colmar, wines of the same kind and quality: they are called, brand.

Riquewir and Ribauville, renowned for their wines, called gentils. The best wines of Riquewin are the Schonerburgn, and at Ribauville, the Trottacker, and Zahnacker, they keep twenty years, and improve by age and carriage.

Than, near Befort, a wine, called rangen; it attacks the nerves violently, and causes paralysis.

Begholtzelt, Rufach, Pfaffenheim, Enguisheim, Inguersheim, Mittelweyer, Hunnevyr, Katzenthal, Amerscheyr, Kaiserberg, Keintzheim, Sigolzeim, Babelsheim, produce wines of a very good quality.

The wines, called gentils, come from a fine grape, called riesling, which is called gentil raisin, to distinguish it from the common, called burger. The proprietors having of late years mixed brandy with this wine, and added common wines, have much injured its reputation.

Class 2.

Rixheim and Habsheim, wines esteemed in the country, but inferior in quality.

VINS DE LIQUEUR.

When the season is favourable they make at Colmar, Oliwiller, Kientzheim, Kaiserberg, and Ammerschwir, the vins de paille; so called because the grapes were originally dried on straw. They are now hung up on strings in a room, with the windows open whilst there is no danger of frost, and are visited every week in order to take away any rotten berries; they are suffered to dry until March, when the wine is made. The quantity then is about a tenth part of the juice at the time of the vintage. When kept six or eight years it resembles To-kay; and sells at six francs a bottle, and often higher. At Requewir and Kebauville, muscat wines are made.

BRETAGNE.

This province is under the 47th and 48th degrees of latitude.

FINISTERRE AND DES COTES DU NORD.

Finisterre cultivates no vines.

ILE ET VILAINE.

306 hectares produce 7000 hectolitres—inferior in quality, the least bad is upon the territory of Redon.

LOIRE INFERIEURE.

WHITE WINES.

Varades, Montrelais, and la Chapelle, give the best, the produce of the Pineau.

Valet, near Nantes, la Chapelle-Hulin, la Haye, le Loroux, le Paleet, Maisdon, Saint Fiácre, Saint Gèreòn, Saint Herblon, and Riaillé, produce wines, sweet, light, and agreeable.

This department produces much wine with a disagreeable flavour of the soil. A great quantity is sent to Paris to be mixed with the deep red wines: they are inferior to those of Anjou, and are only used for wines sold in detail. The wines of the plant, called grosplant, are harsh, but make brandy.

ANJOU ET MAINE.

These provinces, under the 47th and 48th degrees of latitude, contain 45,940 hectares of vines, producing 773,000 hectolitres of vins d'ordinaire and vins communs.

MAYENNE.

590 hectares of vines, 12,000 hectolitres. Of so bad a quality, that the proprietors every year dig up their vines and replace them with apple-trees.

SARTHE.

10,350 hectares; 161,000 hectolitres of wine.

The wines are in general of a low quality. The only crus which produces good wine is the Clos de Jasnieres.

The other crus of any reputation are those of Bazouges and Gazoufiere, for the red: and for the white, those of la Flotte, la Chatre, Sainte Cécile, Marçon et Château du Loir, Mareil, St. Benoist, St. George's, and Champagne.

MAINE ET LOIRE.

35,000 hectares produce 600,000 hectolitres of wine; 120,000 consumed in the country, the rest exported or made into brandy and vinaigre, called vinaigre de Saumur.

The shores on the sides of the rivers furnish the best vineyards.

RED WINES.

These are in less estimation than the white. Champignè-le-Sec, wines corsés, deep colour, good taste, and tres genereux: require four or five years keeping. Le Clos des Cordeliers most esteemed.

Dampierre, Varranis, Chassé, Sait Cyr-en-Bourg et Brêzé, wines of the same kind, but a little inferior to those of Champigny.

Le Cru Bellai, the same wines.

Saumur, wines of the same kind.

Neuillé, wines of a deep colour. The rest of the wines communs, grossiers, and with a bad taste of soil.

WHITE WINES.

The slopes, near Saumur, produce wines corsés, very spirited, bear transport by sea; they have finesse, du gout, and un peu de bouquet, but affect the head.

Vineyards, les Rotissans, la Perrière, le grand et petit Morin et des Poilleux.

Parnay, Dampierre, Souzé et Turquan-Martigné-Briant, Thouarce, Foy, Rablay, Beaulieu, Saint Luygne; Savenieres, wines of the same kind.

Class 2.

Chaintre, Varrains, Chassé, St. Cyr en Bourg, Brezé, Courchamp le Mihervé, and Saumousset, wines good but inferior in quality; great exportation is made to Belgium and Holland.

Class 3.

The vineyards of Trelazé, St. Barthelemy, and Brain sur l'Authion, give good wines, but inferior.

Distré, Antoigné, Bas Nueil, and Brion, wines sweet, agreeable, and free from taste of soil, generally sent to Paris.

The other wines have a disagreeable taste of soil, called gout de tuf.

The wines of Anjou are in general spirituous, and have a good effect in the mixtures with the vins grossiers.

TOURAINE.

Situate under the 49th degree of latitude. The wines of this province are most celebrated for their mixture with other wines.

The red wines have a deep colour, beaucoup de nerf, de mordant et de corps. The white are sent to Flanders and Holland, and some to Paris.

INDRE ET LOIRE.

36,000 hectares, 700,000 hectolitres, 300,000 consumption in the country.

Plants, le gros et menu pineau blanc, l'Orleans, la Malvoisie.

RED WINES.

Class 1.

Joué, wines, called les nobles, good colour, body, spirituous, an agreeable flavour. Tres franc. They gain by age.

St. Nicholas de Bourgueil, nine leagues from Tours. Wines, of a deep colour, good body, and spiritueux, gain by keeping, and in taste and perfume resemble the wines of Bordeaux, as to the raspberry flavour. The other crus give wines, high coloured, lourds et froids.

Class 2.

Which produces wines, called du Cher; of a deep colour, good flavour, body, spiritueux and mordant, good to give colour and body to weak wines, for which they are much sought after. In a good season, well chosen, they keep well, and improve, and resemble the vins d'ordinaire du Bordelais.

The best vineyards are at Chisseaux, Civray, la Croix de Bléré, Ahee, et Azay sur Cher.

Chenonceau, et Diere. Epeigné, Francueil et Veretz.

Saint Cyr sur-Loire, Saint Avertin et Balan.

Chinon, near Tours, vineyards of considerable size, wines of good colour, assez corsés, spiritueux.

Luynes et Fondettes, near Tours, Langeais et St. Marc.

Amboise has in its neighbourhood the vineyards de Pocé, St. Ouen, and St. Denis, which produce wines en premiere cuvee, less coloured, moins corsés, but more pleasant than those of du Cher.

Chargey et Limeray, Mones, Souvigny et Chargé; wines light colour, but agreeable; a great quantity of vins communs, verts, secs, but good for mixing with other wines.

Loches, only inferior wines.

WHITE WINES.

Class 1.

Vouvray, two leagues from Tours; wines of good quality, sweet and liquoreux the first year; by age they become spiritueux, then moelleux, with a very pleasant flavour, and very capiteux. The vins de choix are above the vins d'ordinaire. Those of the finest quality seldom come to Paris, but are sent to Holland and Flanders.

Class 2.

Rochecorbon and Vernou, of the same kind, but inferior.

St. George, Nazelles et Norzay, Lussault et Saint Martin le Beau, Rougny et Chancay, agreeable wines, less spirited.

Langeais, wines, tres communs, and subject to turn yellow.

All the white wines de la Touraine, take the name of Vouvray, which hurts their reputation.

ORLEANAIS, BLAISOIS, BEAUCE, UNE PARTIE DU PERCHE ET DU GÂTINAIS.

These provinces are under the 47th and 48th degrees of latitude.

EURE ET LOIRE.

The best vineyards are, Séche Côte, le Monceau, Chavanne, Roussiere et Saint Piat, de Croiselles, Malsausseux, du Luat-Clairet, Varenne, Machelon, Champdé.

LOIRET.

30,000 hectares of vines, 100,000 hectolitres; 25,000 consumed by the inhabitants, the rest exported under the name of vins d'Orleans.

RED WINES.

Class 1.

Guignes, 6 leagues from Orleans, wines well bodied, good colour, excellent flavour, assez spiritueux, un bouquet prononcé.

St. Jean de Bray, wine of good colour, body, de la finesse, good flavour, keeps well. Le Clos Sainte Marie, gives the best wine.

La Chapelle, Saint Gy, Saint Ay et Fourneaux, wines equal to the preceding.

Beaugency, Beaule et Beaulette, agreeable wines, sooner ripe, but keep well.

Mafen, wines resembing those of Beaugency. Sandillon, wines of a good colour, assez spiritueux, good flavour, and very firm.

Saint Denis en Val, wines delicate agreeable, of good colour.

Combleuse, wines which resemble those of Saint Jean de Bray, but inferior in quality.

Class 2.

Saint Denis de Jargeau, en premiere cuvée, good wines d'ordinaire.

Jargeau, wines inferior to the preceding.

Bon et Mardié, wines tolerably pleasant, but weak.

Olivet, Saint Mesmin, Saint André et Clery, wines, high coloured, grossiers, harsh, and with little spirit, which comes from the vine, named Gascon; not pleasant to drink, but good in mixture.

Saint Privé Saint Paterne, Sarang, Gedy, Ingré, Saint Marc, Fleury Senoy, Saint Marceau, produce vins communs tolerably good.

The districts of Montargis and Pithiviers, vins communs, under the name of vins du Gâtinais.

The vineyards Saint Loup, Montbarois, Auxy, Egry, and Bois commun, give wines of the first quality in this country; of good colour, and though grossiers, their taste not unpleasant.

It is asserted, that in the time of Philip Augustus and St. Louis, the vins du Gâtinais were drank at the king's table; at present not even good vin d'ordinaire is to be found.

WHITE WINES.

Marigny and Retrechien, wines in great quantity, some of which are agreeable, and keep their whiteness.

Saint Mesmin, has still some vignes en auvernat blanc, whence wines of good quality; but in general this vineyard has lost its reputation, because the proprietors have rooted out this plant to make room for others more productive.

Loury, and other vineyards of this district, wines of bad quality, used to make le vinaigre d'Orleans.

LOIR ET CHER.

28,000 hectares give 850,000 hectolitres, 140,000 consumed in the country.

PLANTS.

Red, l'Auvernal franc, le Lignage, le Meunier, le Gros Noir; white, le Blancheton; l'Herbois, le Gouais.

The vineyards de la côte du Cher, are entirely planted with the red vine, called Cahors.

Three different kinds of wines are made at Blois; Vins Noirs, Rouges et Blancs.

VINS NOIRS.

These wines from the Gros Noir, are thick and of so deep a red, that they appear black. New, their flavour is âpre and unpleasant, grown old, they lose their colour and vinous taste. Their merit is in their uniting with all the wines, pale or white, which require to be deeper coloured without altering their flavour.

VINS ROUGES.

Class 1.

Blois, produces wines, when new, well coloured and firm, but by age their colour diminishes, and they acquire spirit, an agreeable taste, and a little perfume.

The communes upon the Cher, produce wines named, Vins du Cher.

The best are at Thesée and Monthon sur Cher; the second at Bouré, Montrichard, Pouille, et Chissai, and those of Mareuil, Pouillé, Angé, Faverolle, St. George, et Lusillé.

Chambon, wines similar to those of the Grouets, but less spirituous.

Class 2.

Onzain, upon the Loir, wines of a good colour, but less spirituous, and capable of being kept than those des Grouets.

Mer-la-Ville, and the vineyards situate on the frontier towards Beaugency, make wines well flavoured and spirituous, drinkable in one year, they do not keep well.

Chaumont, wines of the same kind but colder.

The district of Vendome contains few vineyards, and produces only vins communs, however of a good colour and flavour. Pezon, Ville-Aux-Clercs, and those of Selles, are named.

VINS BLANCS.

The country, called Sologne, produces a considerable quantity, which, in good years, have much sweetness and flavour. The most esteemed cru is Murblin. Vimeuil, Saint Claude, Moret, et Mostelivant, were planted entirely with the Auvernat and Melier, producing vins tres francs de gout, spiritueux, and vifs, but the proprietors have rooted these up and planted the Blancheton, a greater bearer, but inferior in quality.

Mer la Ville, and other vineyards, vins blancs communs, well flavoured. The cru Suevies is preferred.

Troo, Artuis et Montoire, furnish wines made into brandy.

BURGUNDY ET BEAUJOLAIS.

Burgundy, under the 46th and 47th degrees of latitude, sixty leagues in length, and thirty wide; forms three departments, de l'Yonne, de la Cote d'Or, et de Saône et Loire.

Le Beaujolais, under the 45th and 46th degrees of latitude, ten leagues long, eight wide.

The vineyards cover 103,000 hectares, the produce, on an average, 2,550,000 hectolitres of wine; 700,000 are consumed in the country. The vineyards have increased very much since the revolution; many land-owners have converted into vineyards low and marshy lands, others have introduced manures, or carried new earth upon the old to increase the crop. Others have substituted young for the old plants, and even common plants for the fine. This has caused a degeneracy in the wines in the opinion of the purchaser, but notwithstanding this increase in low and common wines, the number of good vineyards have likewise increased.

The wines of Burgundy are ranked under three different names, distinguished by marks peculiar to each. Vins de basse Bourgogne, less spirituous, less sève et bouquet than those of the Côte d'Or. They are brisker, and keep for a long time, a weak portion de l'âpreté of the Bourdeaux wines. Les vins de Haute Bourgognes possess all the qualities of perfect wine. In these the body does not injure the delicacy, La Moelle does not render them pateux ni fades. Their lightness does not arise from want of strength, warmth, and flavour, and the spirit does not render them too intoxicating.

Vins de Macon, differ in having less perfume, their moelle is more epaisse and less delicate, without being Pateusse: they have what is termed de la Mache; this, however, is esteemed, and announces the presence of qualities, which develope themselves by age.

DE L'YONNE.

The vine is very old in this country, and particularly in Auxerre; some plants are above 100 years old. It was known when the Romans entered Gaul. History states, that in the ninety-second year of Christ, a famine determined Domitian to order the rooting up the vines, and forbid the planting new ones; 36,000 hectares produce, upon an average, 900,000 hectolitres of wine, of which 250,000 are consumed in the country.

The plants generally cultivated are, le Pineau, black and white, le Tresseau, le Ronçain, et le Gammé, this last is a great bearer, but spoils all the wine. It would be well if the order of Charles IX. forbidding the planting the infame Gammé, was revived. In the district of Sens and Gorgny, they also cultivate le Saumoreau, le Melier, et le Gros.

RED WINES.

Class 1.

Danemoine, near Tonnerre; here is situated the famous spot, called des Olivotes; wines of a good colour, much body, and particularly spirituous, are at the same time fins and delicats. They have also séve, and bouquet. They should be bottled after three years, and will keep a long time.

The country of Tonnerre has many distinguished crus, as those of Pitoy, de Perriere, et des Preaux.

Auxerre; the best vineyards are upon the mountain, called la Grande Côte d'Auxerre; it is covered with vines, and planted with the Pineau Noir. Les Clos de la Chainette, et de Migrenne, hold the first rank. The first produces wines genereux, fins, and delicats, avec un séve, and un bouquet. The second wines moins delicats, but with more de corps and de spiritueux. They are reported to bear exportation beyond sea better than any other, and to have been frequently sent to England, and always into Italy, without suffering a change.

Class 2.

La Cuvée Clairion, produces wines possessing the qualities of those de la Chainette.

La Cuvée Boivin, wines comparable with those of Migrenne.

Les Cuvées Judas, Pied de Rat, Rosoir, et Quêtard, occupy the first rank.

Epineuil, wines little differing from those of Tonnerre.

Les Coteaux, called la Poche, la Haute Perrière, le Buisson Bridenne, et Chausoin, are particularly distinguished. Wines, of a pale colour, are made, called Vin Gris, fins, delicats, legers, but capiteux.

Irancy, a canton of Coulange, produces wines of a good colour, corsés, and genereux.

Palotte is distinguished. The Benedictines found so much quality in the vin de la Palotte, that they mixed it with the wine de la Chainette, to put it into a state to bear exportation.

Les Crus, called du Paradis, de Bergere, de Vaux Chassés, et des Cailles, are inferior to la Palotte, but give excellent wines.

Danemoine, has also des Cuvees, called les Marguerites, et les Corbèmoreau.

Coulanges-la-Vineuse, has still vineyards of reputation. The most esteemed is that Du Seigneur; the owner has kept the ancient plant, le Franc Pineau. Few others have followed his example, and by rooting out this vine, and substituting others more productive, have destroyed the reputation of the wines.

Class 3.

Vincelotte, near Irancy, wines of the same kind as those of Irancy, but inferior.

Auxerre again appears as furnishing wines of the second cuvée de la Grande Cote, and in the choice from other slopes in its district, vins corses and genereux, but less delicate than the first.

The best are the vines du Tureau, du Montardoin, de Sainte Nitace.

Avalon: many good wines are here produced, amongst which are distinguished those de la Côte d'Annay, et de Rouvre et du Veau; particularly the vineyard, called le Champ Gachot.

Vezelay and Givry, produce wines of a good quality, the best in the vineyards, called le Clos at Vezeley, et la Girande a Givry. These wines are stated to bear particularly well the passage by sea. They become sometimes thick and of a bad flavour, but suffered to rest three or four months they recover their clearness and quality.

In this class also may be reckoned the vineyards de la Belle Fille a Jussy, St. Jacques a Joigny, du Chateau a Tronchoit, et la Veille Plante a Pontigny.

Class 4.

Cheney, Volichere, Tronchoil, Molosme, near Tonnerre, and some other vineyards, give good wines.

Cravant, canton of Vermanton, wines of deep colour, du corps et du fort bon goût.

Jussy, wines of the kind of Coulanges, la cote-de-la belle fille.

Vermanton, wines light, agreeable, and soon ripe. The vineyards de Bertry, la Vaux Moine, Naudigion, les Plantes Hautes et la grande côte, bear the highest reputation.

Joigny, the wines are light, delicate, and very pleasant, but are accused of attacking quickly the head. La Côte Saint Jacques, those of Migraine, and St. Michel, are the best.

Saint Bris, the vineyards called la Poire, les Chaussans, la Chaise, les Perprauts, et la Voie Blanche et Blamoy, furnish wines of a good colour, corsés, and of a good flavour.

Arcy sur Cure en premiere Cuvée, wines like those of Coulanges, and near in quality.

Pontigny, three leagues from Auxerre; the produce in general is only vins communs, but one vine, called la Veille Plante, furnishes wine which unites la Séve and le Bouquet du Bordeaux, with the other qualities of the Burgundy.

Véginnes, Juney, Saint Martin, Commissay, and some other vineyards, give wines of a good colour, good flavour, and very firm.

Ville Neuve sur Yonne, Saint Julien du Sault, and many communes of Joigny, produce good wines, which when well chosen, and in a good season, keep well and improve.

Paron, near Sens, has the only vineyard of any reputation.

Veron, produces wines of a good colour and soon ripe. The other wines are grossiers, more or less common, and are only sent to Paris.

WHITE WINES.

Class 1.

Tonnerre, les Cotes de Vaumorillon et des Grisées, give wines full of body, de finesse, and de spiritueux.

Chablis, four leagus from Auxerre, produces wines much esteemed, the best of which are ranked amongst the second in the kingdom.

Above all other wines they keep their transparent whiteness. They are spirited without being heady, have du corps de la finesse, et un parfum. The cuvees most in request are,

- 1. Le Clos, this wine, strong in spirit, is a little harsh the first year, but becomes very agreeable, and keeps well.
- 2. Les Cuvees de Valmur et de Grenolles; these wines have more sweetness and delicacy than those of le Clos, but having lost the quality, called moustille, they are less spirited, and do not keep.
- 3. Vaudesir, Bougueraux, et Mont de Milieu, give wines very fine, and of the most perfect transparency. In order to come to their highest degree of quality, these wines should be kept two years in cask, and one in bottles; they will keep many years.

Class 2.

Many vineyards of the canton of Chablis produced wines which differ little from those above, viz. la Cote Delchet, la Fourchaume, Part des Cotes de Tröene, de Vaucompin, de Blanchot et de Fontenay.

Tonnerre has some crus, which may figure here. Les Charloups, les Bridaines, les Bou-toirs, et la Maison Rouge. These wines are sparkling and agreeable, preserve a long time the moustille, and become spiritueux by age, and always finissent bien.

Chablis; the second cuvees of this vineyard, amongst which are distinguished le Chapelot, Vauvilion, part de Bouguereau et de la Preusse, Vaulovent Vossegros, le bas du Clos, &c. give agreeable wines when not mixed with those of the lowest crus.

Champs and St. Bris, give good wines, particularly les Cuvees de la Poire, de Blamoy, de la Voie Blanche, et des Chaussans, these take an amber colour by age.

Class 3.

Vivier, Béra et Hey, agreeable vins d'ordinaire.

Rossy, Serigny, Tissey, Vegannes, Bernoud Die, Tanlay, &c. furnishes wines of good flavour, which keep well.

Milly, Maligny, Poinchy, Villy, Chiche, Ligny Chatel, Poily, Chemilly, Courgy, &c. furnish vins d'ordinaire and vins communs, of which some are good.

COTE D'OR.

This department owes its name to the chain of little montagnes which reach from Dijon, through Nuits, Beaune, and Châlons sur Saône, to Macon, called Côte d'Or, on account of the richness of their produce. Between Dijon and Châlons, and in the districts of Beaune and Dijon, the wines, called les vins fins de Haute Bourgogne, are produced. In good seasons these wines unite all the qualities of perfect wine. They want no mixture nor preparation to reach the highest degree of perfection. The operations, which in other countries are called soins, qui aident la Qualité, are hurtful to the wines of the Côte d'Or. They have their peculiar bouquet, which is not brought out under three or four years. The introduction of Aromatics, or other wines, changes them. Even the mixture of two wines of the first class destroys the bouquet, and reduces them to the second class, and even to the third. The red wines join to a beautiful colour much perfume and a delicious tase, they are at the same time corsés, fins, delicats, et spiritueux, without being too heady. The white possess the same qualities, they are moelleux, and grown old of an amber colour.

25,000 hectares in the department of the Cote d'Or, and 10,000 in the district of Châlons sur Saône, together 35,000, produce 800,000 hectolitres. The inhabitants consume 320,000, the rest exported.

The plants in cultivation are, red grapes, le Noirien et le Pineau, which last alone grows in the vineyards, which produce the finest wines.

Le Gibaudot, le Melon noir, et le Gammé, which produce the vins d'ordinaire and vins communs.

The white are le Chaudenay, which makes the best wines.

Le Melon blanc, Le Narbonne ou Chasselas et le Gammé, as in red, this last produces only inferior wines;

The vineyards are considered in the country as divided into three Cotes; la Cote de Nuits, comprising all the vineyards in the canton of Nuits, and some of the district of Dijon, La Cote de Beaume, comprising all the district of Beaune, with the exception of the canton of Nuits; lastly, la Côte Chalonnaise, containing all the vineyards of the district of Châlons sur Saône.

RED WINES.

Class 1.

The crus forming this first class are, excepting le Chambertin, situated in the canton of Nuits, three leagues north-west from Beaune; they are ranked in the following order.

La Romanée, Conti, Territoire de Vosne, three quarters of a league from Nuits, four leagues from Dijon; the wine is remarkable for its fine colour, son arôme, spiritueux, sa delicatesse, et la finesse de son goût delicieux.

The real wine is seldom procurable, as the vineyard consists of only one hundred and seventy-two ares of ground, producing on an average, not more than ten or twelve pieces, or demi queues.

Le Chambertin, two leagues and a half from Dijon, occupies twenty-five hectares, and produces yearly from 130 to 150 pieces of excellent wine, which joins to a fine colour, much séve and moelleux, de la finesse, un goût parfait, et le bouquet most sweet.

Le Richebourg, Territoire de Vosne, differs from the Romanée Conti, in being a little more coloured, less fin and delicat, it is distinguished by a great deal of séve and bouquet.

Le Clos Vougeot, three leagues from Dijon, produces wines very like the preceding, but more spiritueux. The products of different parts of this clos vary in quality. The higher parts give a wine, très fin et très delicat, the low, and those which border upon the road, a much inferior.

La Romanée de Saint Vivant; so called as having belonged to a convent of that name, furnishes wines of the same kind as that of the Romanée de Conti, but inferior in quality.

La Tâche, its wines are nearly similar to the preceding, perhaps superior, and moreover can be kept a long time.

Le Saint Georges, at Nuits; its wine much like the Chamberlin. It is, however, inferior in quality; it has more colour, flavour, body, and even moelleux, than those I have cited, but they are preferred for their finesse and delicatesse.

Corton d'Aloxe, canton of Beaune, its wine is of the same kind as that of St. Georges; it has a little more de moelleux, but less agrement; it is very high coloured, corsé, and strong, and keeps a long time, and bears a sea voyage well, acquiring by age much séve and bouquet.

Besides these crus celebrated, there are other vineyards whose wines approach the quality of the above: namely, le Clos de Premeau, Le Porets, at Nuits; le Musigny, les Bonnes Mares, et les Veroilles, Chambolle: le Clos du Tart, et le Clos-à-la-Roche a Morey, le Clos Morjot et la Matroie, le Clos Saint Jean, a Chassagne, la Perrière a Fixin; these being little known sell for less, although comparable in quality.

The wines which bear exportation by sea, the best are le Corton, le Chambertin, le Saint Georges, and la Perriere, when produced in a good season.

Class 2.

After those above mentioned comes Vosne, three leagues from Nuits, the wines of this vineyard are in general the finest and most delicate de la Cote Nuitonne. The premieres Cuvees are those called Echojeaux et la Grande Rue. They follow immediately those of la Tache et Romanee St. Vivant.

Nuits, three leagues north of Beaune; after the Clos de St. Georges, all the wines of the premieres cuvees of Nuits, are of equal merit, and in commerce go under the name of vins de Nuits, de premiere qualite. They cannot be drank until the third or fourth year, but support well carriage by land or sea.

Premau, near Nuits, already mentioned, has moreover some wines which rank with those of les premieres cuvees of Nuits.

Chambolle, a league from Nuits. This vineyard is surnamed the Volnay de la Cote de Nuits. Its wines have a little more corps and spritueux than le Volnay, and keep better. Volnay, half a league south-west from Beaune, produces le plus fin, and most agreeable wine de la cote de Beaune, and even of all France. It has moreover de la séve and un charmant bouquet. Les Crus most distinguished are les Caillerets, les Champans, la Chapelle, and Chevrey.

Pomard, three-fourths of a league from Beaune; the quality of its wines differ little from those of the preceding, only they have more colour and body. Le Clos de la Comarenne, la Vigne, called la Rugien, and that des Epeneaux, are the best.

Beaune, the grounds around this town furnishes the most wines, both of the first and second quality, they differ little from the Volnay and Pomard, some even rival the best of these vineyards. The wines of la Cote de Beaune, have the reputation of being the most Francs de Gout of all Burgundy. The crus most in repute are les Grêves, les Feves, le Clos de Mouches, le Clos du Roy et les Cros.

Morey, a league and a half from Nuits; the wines of this commune are not very inferior to a great part of those of Nuits, some are superior, as before cited. Le Clos de Tart, le Clos à la Roche.

Savigny, near Beaune; in this very extensive vineyard much wine is produced, the major part of the third and fourth classes.

There are some coteaux privilegiés whose products are little inferior to the premieres Cuvees of Beaune: as la Dominode, les Vorgelesses, les Marconney et les Jarrons.

Meursault produces in its vineyards les Santenots et les Petures, wines like those of les Caillerets, but with more body, and keep better.

The wine, called les Cras, have all the fine qualities of those of Volnay.

Class 3.

Gevrey, two leagues from Dijon, or la Côte de Nuits, its crus, the most esteemed after those of Chambertin, are St. Jacques, de la Chapelle, des Veroilles et des Mazey. They approach those of Nuits in quality.

Chassagne, wines agreeable and fins, but their taste less franc. Some crus privilegiés produce wines scarce inferior to those of the first class. Such as le Morjot, and particularly its clos et la Maltroie, et le Clos St. Jean.

Aloxe, a league from Beaune, wines corses, fins, spiritueux, and with some bouquet. The best vineyards are les Pougets, la Charlemagne, et les Bressantes; they are little inferior to the vin de Corton.

Savigny, near Beaune, furnishes wines which are of the kind and quality of the second cuvees of Beaune; also vins d'ordinaire, of the first quality, are made, but they do not keep.

Blagny, upon the territory of Puligny, gives wines fins, and of good quality.

Santenay, canton of Nolay, near Beaune. This vineyard produceth wines of good flavour which keep a long time. Les Cuvees, called les Gravieres et le Clos de Tavanne, close the list of vins fins; they resemble the second cuveés of Beaune, Pomard, and Volnay.

Chenove, near Dijon, the crus which can appear in this class, are le Clos du Roi et le Chapitre; their wines have a good flavour, very firm, and acquire by age much quality and a pleasant bouquet.

The wines, called de Seconde Cuvée, produced upon the lands of Vosne, de Nuits, de Volnay, de Pomard, de Beaune, de Chambolle, et de Morey, ought to appear in this class as wines demi fins. The same vineyards also furnish vins d'ordinaire de premiere and de seconde quality, which are often sent out as vins fins, in the countries where those des premieres cuveés are not properly appreciated.

Class 4.

Mercurey, canton of Touches. Under the vins de Mercurey, are included les vins de Touches, d'Estroy, et du Bourgneuf; they are distinguished amongst the wines de la Cote Chalonnaise, by their pleasant flavour, lightness, and perfume; they are the most Franc de gout of all this côte, and keep a long time. The best are the most esteemed amongst the vins d'ordinaire of the first quality. All the wines of the Cote Chalonnaise have little of the moelleux, but a dry flavour, which distinguishes them from those of Beaune, under which name they often appear in commerce.

Givry, two leagues from Châlons, has des

Crus privilégiés, superior to the first cuvees of Mercurey, viz. Les Boichevaux, le Clos Salomon, le Cellier, la Baraude et les Vins Rouges; the wines are tres corsés, spiritueux et de bon gout. The other crus furnish some vins d'ordinaire, de premiere qualité, and many others of the second and third.

The territory of Dijon contains some esteemed vineyards. In the first rank are those of Marcs d'Or, as vins d'ordinaire de premiere qualité. Le Cru les Ponneaux, wines like the above, but inferior in quality.

Monthelie, canton of Meursault sur la Cote de Beaune. This vineyard has some slopes which produce wines of the kind and quality as the second cuvées of Volnay; amongst the others many good vins d'ordinaire of the first and second quality are found.

Meursault, the wines of this Finage, called Passetous Grains*, are sound, tres corsés, and fit to re-establish weakened wines. When old, three or four years in the cask, and some months in bottles, they are very good as vins d'ordinaire, some of the first, some of the second quality.

^{*} The wines made from the Noirien et Gamme, mixed in various proportions, are so called.

Fixin, Fixey, et Brochon, district of Dijon, produce very good wines d'ordinaire, for the most part rather of the first than second quality.

La Perriere, produces vins, fins, corsés, and tres solides.

Saint Martin, near Châlons; the wines are corsés, and keep long. They are deteriorated by introducing bad plants. Les Chassieres, wines d'ordinaire de premiere qualité.

Pully, three leagues from Chalons, wines d'ordinaire de premiere quality.

Monbogre, two leagues from Chalons; wines of a deep colour, which gain much by age. Their merit is their strengthening weak wines, and from this they are called les Medicins de la Côte Chalonnaise.

Class 5.

The wines composing this class are, 1. The second, third, and fourth cuvées of all the four first classes. 2. All vineyards which only give vins d'ordinaire inferior to those cited.

Montagny, Chenove, Buxey, Saint Vallerin, et Saules, are known as the Vignobles de la Côte de Buxey.

Jambles, canton de Givry, St. Jean de Vaux, et Saint Marc, produce much common wine, high-coloured and of good body; but without spirit, and harsh and coarse.

The vineyards of the district de Châtillon sur Seine, only produce des vins communs; Semur, des vins d'ordinaire, of the second and third quality, amongst which those of Flavigny are quoted as good.

WHITE WINES. Class 1.

Puligny, canton of Nolay. Upon this land the Mont Rachet is situated, producing the superior wines, called, under three denominations, according to their excellence, le Vin de Mont Rachet aîné, le Chevalier Mont Rachet, le Batard Mont Rachet. The first is a perfect wine, uniting all qualities, the others partake of these, but not in the same degrees.

Class 2.

Meursault, produces wines of great repute, and often sold for the Mont Rachet. The Coteau la Perriére, is renowned. The vineyards la Combette, la Goutte d'Or, la Genevrière, et les Charmes, produce wines of the same kind.

Class 3.

The vineyard Rougeot, and many others of Meursault, give wines, called de premiere cuvée, which only differ by slight shades.

The farm of Blagny, upon the territory of Puligny, gives wines which sell as high as the premieres cuvées of Meursault.

Note.—The white wines of Haute Bourgogne, are fit to be bottled at the end of a year or eighteen months. As they grow old, they take an amber colour, without altering their quality or clearness. From this colour the Goutte d'Or of Meursault is named. When bottled they become thick and troubled, but suffered to rest, they recover their clearness, bouquet, and good flavour.

Class 4.

The second cuvées of Meursault, amongst which la Barre is distinguished.

Class 5.

The third cuvées of Meursault take the first rank.

Montagny, Chenove, Buxy, Saint Vallenu, et Saules, furnish light, sparkling, well-flavoured wines, which keep a long time their liqueur, and if bottled in March, mousse like Champagne.

Bougeron, canton de Chagny; wines nearly similar to the third cuvées of Meursault.

Givry, in the part of its vineyards, called le Champ Poureau, a like wine, but less light and spirituous. The other vineyards produce vins communs, drunk in the Cabarets of the country, or mixed with inferior red wines.

The vessels in use are the demi queues, containing 30 veltes, or 228 litres. The wine is sold by the queue. For the vins fins, quarters of a queue, called feulliettes, 15 veltes, 114 litres; les demiqueues of Chalons, contain only 29 veltes, 220 litres.

1 DEPARTMENT DE SAÔNE ET LOIRE.

2 THE PART OF DEPARTMENT OF THE RHONE, CALLED BEAUJOLAIS.

These districts have 32,000 hectares of vines, producing 850,000 hectolitres; 140,000 consumed by the inhabitants.

The wines of the Maconnais and Beaujolais, are known in commerce by the name of Vins de Macon. They are rather good vins d'ordinaire than fine. The plants in general cultivated are in red, le Bourguignon, producing the best wines; les Chanay, excellent, but a small bearer, and la Bronde; in white, le Chardonnay, whence the good wine of Pouilly, le Bourgignon, et lé Gammé, from which few white wines are made, but it is mixed with red grapes to form more delicate wines.

VINS ROUGES.

Class 1.

Le Moulin à Vent, Cru du Hameau de Torins; its wines the finest and most delicate in the country.

The other crus of Torins produce wines of the same kind, and, with small differences, of the same quality; particularly les Carquelines, et la Laborie. They may be bottled in eighteen months.

Chenas, adjoining Tourins, wines of a good colour, more corsés et spiritueux than the preceding. The wines of the hamlets de la Rochelle, des Vrillats, de la Tour du Bief, des Michelous, des Michelous, du Bief, et de la Cave, are distinguished.

The wines of Torins are finer and riper than those of Chenas, which have more body. The mixture of the two which spoils the wines of other vineyards, forms with these a perfect wine. They will keep ten years.

Class 2.

Fleury, good wines, light, fine, delicate, du Bouquet, séve et gout most agreeable. Those of the Hameaux de Mœuriers, du Vivier, des Garans, des Charmilles, de Poncier, des Deduits et de la Chapelle des Bois, are fine wines of the third class. Les Chafongeons, le Bourg, les Raclées, Grandprè, les Labourons, et Arpayé, vins d'ordinaire de premiere qualité.

La Chapelle-Guinchey, wines light, spiritueux, and agreeable. The best are produced on the Hameaux les Bocarts, Deschamps, les Gandelins, Jean-Lorons, les Daroux, et les Blémonts.

Romanèche, besides the Moulin-á-Vent, et Torins, contains other crus of like qualities, but less delicate. Les Hameaux de la Pierre, des Gimarets, de Brennet, des Pérelles, des Maison Neuves, des Guillattes, de la Riviere et des Fargets.

Class 3.

Lancié, produces wines like those of Fleury, in the Hameaux, called Châteaux Gaillard, la Mere Latière, le Moulin Mézia et les Peloux Brouilly, wines little inferior to those of Chénas, particularly on the Hameaux of Lironde.

Odenas et Saint-Lager, canton de Belleville, make wines of good colour, body, and spirit. The most esteemed grow upon the hill of Brouilly. Les Hameaux de Pierreux, give wines little inferior to those of Brouilly.

Jullienas, canton of Beaujeu, three leagues from Mâcon, wines coloured, corsés, spiritueux, and very firm; they gain by age. The best in the Hameaux les Mouilles, le Bourg, le Bois-de-la-Salle et Rizières.

Cheroublés, wines corsés, spiritueux, tres solides.

Morgon, upon the mountain du Pic, en premiere cuvée, wines corsés, spiritueux, et bon gout.

Saint-Etienne-la-Varenne, canton de Belleville, en première cuvée: wines full of body and spirit. They prefer the Hameaux la Carat, Néty, les Daroux, la Carelle et le Belouzard.

Juilly et Emeringe, canton de Beaujeu, wines little differing from those of Jullienas.

Duvayé, wines high coloured, corsés et durs the first years, after five or six they improve and become good wines d'ordinaire, particularly those of the Hameaux du Bourg.

Class 4.

The territory of Chassagne produces wines of several kinds. Those of the clos are like those Jullienas, and are more firm; they keep in cask twelve or fifteen years, and in bottles twenty-five or thirty years.

Villiers, Regnier, Lantegnier Quinçie, Marchand, Durette et les Etoux, Cercié, le haut de St. Jean-Dardieres, les Hameaux de Pizay de Jasseron, de Vadoux et les Hauts de Belleville, furnish wines light and agreeable, which may be drunk the second year.

Montmélas Saint Forlin, produces en premiere cuvée wines light, which keep well.

Charentay, canton of Belleville; the wines of the Hameaux de Vurils, des Chênes, de Monternat, des Combes et de Garanche, have du corps, assez de spiritueux, et un bon gout.

Charnay near Mâcon, et Prissé, give wines well coloured and firm, which must be kept four years before being bottled.

At Charnay, those of the Hameaux de Franclieu et de Levigny, at Prissé la Côte de Cologne.

Vaurenard, canton de Beaujeu, wines partaking of the quality of those Jullienas.

Saint Amour, agreeable wines, particularly those near the church and the Hameaux de la Ville et de la Salle.

Chevagny, Chasnes, Laines et Saint Verand, produce wines corsés et de bon gout as vins d'ordinaire. La Côte de Creuse-Noire gives the best wine.

Lochè, Vinelles, Hurigny, Sancé, Sénece, et Saint-Jean-de-Prêche, near Mâcon, Saint Gengoux-le-Royal; Blacé, Saint Julien, Sâle, Denicé et Lacenas, vins communs tolerably good.

Bussieres, Domange, Saint Fortain, Azé, Pierreclod, Verdze, Ige, St. Gengoux-de-Chissey, Clessé, Viré, Lezé, and Péronne, district of Macon, produce only vins communs, but good and keep well.

The lands of Tournus, Lacrost, Grattay, Boyet, Plottes, Ozenay, Le Villars, Lugny, Crusille, &c. furnish only vins communs, grossiers et peu spiritueux.

The vineyards of Autun, Charolles, et Louhans, only produce vins grossiers.

WHITE WINES.

Class 1.

Pouilly, two leagues from Macon. These wines are much esteemed, and appear with credit in the third class of wines. They are moelleux, fins, corsés, agreables, and have du bouquet. They are accused, with reason, of being too fumeux.

Fuissey, wines like the preceding, but less spiritueux.

Class 2.

Cheintré produces wines possessing de la douceur, du corps et un gout, very pleasant.

Solutrée, wines more secs than those of Pouilly.

Davayé, wines more moelleux than the preceding, but with less spirit.

Class 3.

Vergisson, wines of the kind of those of Solutrée, inferior in quality, and subject to a yellow tinge.

Vinzelles, Loché, et Charnay, wines of the same kind as Cheintré, but inferior in quality.

Les Certaux, Saint Verand, Pierreclod, Bussieres, Saint Martin, produce wines de bon gout; other vineyards, vins communs, which are mixed with the red when too much coloured and durs, to give more lightness and flavour.

The vessels in use are called pieces, and contain 28 veltes, or 213 litres. The wine sells a la botte, composed of two pieces.

FRANCHE COMTE.

This province is situated under the 46th and 47th degrees of latitude.

Vineyards 36,000 hectares, produce 770,000 hectolitres.

DEPARTEMENT DE LA HAUTE SAONE.

Vesoul, Gray, Lure.

Ray, seven leagues from Gray, produces the best wines, delicate, keep long, and acquire quality and bouquet.

The vineyards of Charicy, Navenne, et Quincey, in the district of Vesoul, Gy et Champlitte-le Chateau in that of Gray, in the first cuvée, give wines of a good colour, body, and taste, and which keep well.

DEPARTEMENT DU DUOBS.

Besançon, Pontarlier, Beaume les Dames, Montbelliard.

RED WINES.

Besançon, les Trois Chalets, et les Emingaux, wines of a good colour and body, which become pleasant after three or four years.

Byans, Mouthier, Lombard, Leisle, et Lavans, wines of the same kind, but little inferior.

Jallerange, Pouilly les Vignes, Beurre, Chatillon le Duc, Chouzelot, et Pointvilliers, vins d'ordinaire, of good quality.

WHITE WINES.

Milerey, district of Besançon, wines mousseux, like the second quality of Arbois.

DEPARTEMENT DU JURA.

Louis le Saulnier, Dôle, Poligny, St. Claude.

RED WINES.

Class 1.

Salins, four leagues from Poligny, wines, light red, very fine, agreeable and spirituous.

Les Arsurs, Marnoz, Aig-le Pierre, Arbois, wines like the preceding.

Class 2.

Voiteur, Menetru, Blandars, near Louis le Saulnier, and the slopes between Voiteur and Poligny, wines, light, delicate, and pleasant.

Saint Lothair, near Poligny, wines esteemed for body and firmness.

Gerange et Saint Laurent, wines of a good quality.

Poligny, wines justly esteemed.

WHITE WINES.

Château Châlons, wines which formerly, after twenty years keeping, were equal to the most celebrated. The abbey being destroyed, and the vineyard sold in portions, the wines have degenerated from want of the same care. They are still very excellent.

Arbois, very superior wines; new, they are sweet, sparkle, and froth, like Champagne; old, they resemble the ancient wine of Château Châlons.

Pupillin, near Arbois, wines of the same quality, and sold as vins d'Arbois. These wines, with proper management, would hold the highest rank.

Class 2.

L'Etoile et Quintignil, wines a little inferior to those of Arbois; preferred for common use as less intoxicating.

Montigny, wines of the same kind.

BRESSY, BUGEY ET PAYS DE GEX.

Situate under 45 and 46 degrees of latitude. 18,000 hectares, 300,000 hectolitres.

RED WINES.

Seyssel, wines of a good colour and pleasant taste.

Champagne, Machurat, Talissieux, Culoz, Anglefort, Grorleê, Saint Benoît, wines a little inferior.

The communes Saint Rambert, Torcieux,

&c. of the same district, wines d'ordinaire of the third quality.

Montmerle, Thrissey, Montagneux, district of Trevoux, common wines, which keep well.

WHITE WINES.

Seyssel, wines of good quality, from a vine called Roussette. The fruit is left on the vine until it begins to rot; the wine is sweet for a long time, and froths like Champagne.

Pont de Verle, and several vineyards, produce wines weak, but of an agreeable flavour.

POITOU ET SAINTONGE.

46th degree of latitude; 16th, 17th, 18th of longitude.

LA VENDEE.

The whole produce is consumed in the country.

Lucon, Fay Moreau, Loge Fougerouse, Sigournay, les Herbiers, Talmont, produce red and white wines, tolerably good, as vins d'ordinaire of the third quality.

DEPARTMENT DES DEUX SÉVRES.

Niort, Bressuire, Melle, Parthenay.

RED WINES.

Mont en Saint-Martin-de-Sauzaire et Bouillé Loretz, Rochenard, La Foye-Mongeault, Airvault, wines of a good colour and taste; the rest are high-coloured, flat, and with un mauvais gout de Terroir.

The white wines are made into brandy.

DEPARTEMENT DE LA VIENNE.

Poitiers, Châtellerault, Civray, Loudun, Montmorillon.

RED WINES.

Champigny, Saint Georges-les-Bailleraux, Couture, Jaulnais, Dissais, in the district of Poitiers, wines of a good colour, spirituous, and good flavour; kept in cask four or five years, and then bottled, become good wines d'ordinaire of the second quality.

Chavigny, Saint-Martin-la-Riviere, et Villemort, district of Montmorillon, Saint Romain et Vaux, near Châtellerault, wines esteemed in the country. Neuville et Mirabeau, inferior wines.

WHITE WINES. .

The vineyards of Loudun and Troismoutiers, wines spirituous and tolerably good; great part generally made into brandy.

BERRY, NIVERNAIS, BOURBONNAIS.

53,000 hectares, 1,110,000 hectolitres.

DEPARTEMENT DE L'INDRE.

Châteauroux, Issondun, le Blanc, la Châtre.
The vineyards of Vie-la-Moustiere, of Veuil, et Latour-du-Breuil, district of Châteauroux, Concremiers, Saint Hilaire, near le Blanc, produce red wines tolerably good.

Chabris et Reuilly, district of Issondon, white wines of a pleasant flavour.

DEPARTEMENT DU CHER.

Bourges, Saint Amand, Sancerre.

RED WINES.

Chavignole, near Sancerre, light-coloured wines, spirituous, of a very pleasant taste, comparable to the second class of Joigny.

Sancerre, surrounded by vineyards; produce of good colour, spirituous, good flavour.

The districts of Bourges et St. Amand have several spots planted with the Pineau; wines good, particularly Vasselay et Fusey, near Bourges.

WHITE WINES.

Sancerre produces the best in the vineyards Chavignole et Saint-Satur; new they are sweet and of an agreeable sharpness, (Pointe) called Moustille; old, their whiteness remains. In a good season they are equal to the first quality of St. Bris.

DEPARTEMENT DE LA NIEVRE.

Nevers, Château Chinon, Clamecy, Cosne.

RED WINE.

Poully sur Loire, a small quantity, of a good flavour, and spirituous.

WHITE WINES.

Pouilly sur Loire, wines with body, spirit, and a slight perfume of the Pierre à fusil, particularly the vineyard Laprée.

The other vineyards produce wines of the same kind; known in Commerce by the name of vins de Pouilly, though inferior.

DEPARTEMENT DE L'ALLIER.

Moulins, Gannat, La palisse, Mont Luçon.

RED WINES.

The wines of this district have no reputation, and are drinkable only by being mixed with better wines, except some vineyards of Garenne du Sel, which are wines d'ordinaire of the second or third quality.

WHITE WINES.

Saint Pourçain et La Chaise, district of Gannat, produce the best, without spirit, but of a good flavour, and are esteemed for mixing with red wines too high coloured.

Some vineyards of the communes Creuzur-le-Vieux et Creuzur-le-Neuf, wines like the preceding, vins d'ordinaire third quality.

AUNIS, SAINTTONGE, ANGOUMOIS.

45 and 46 degrees latitude.

The wines of these provinces are little used for the table, but made into brandy.

DEPARTEMENT DE LA CHARENTE INFERIEURE.

Wines in general inferior; those on the right bank of the Charente alone have any merit as vins d'ordinaire of the third quality.

RED WINES.

Saint Romain, Saujon, le Gûa, wines of deep colour, body, and spirit, and a good flavour.

Saintes, wines less coloured, and of more agreeable flavour, particularly Chaniers.

Saint Jean d'Angely, wines like the preceding. Marennes, St. Juste, inferior, high coloured.

La Rochelle, bad, with a disagreeable taste of earth; except Chauche, a wine so called from the plant.

L'Isle d'Oleron, wines with the same bad taste of soil.

L'Isle de Re, wines similar or inferior to the preceding.

L'Isle d'Aix, wines rather better.

WHITE WINES.

Surgeres, five leagues from Rochefort, wines spirituous and good flavour.

Some vineyards de Saintes et Saint Jean d'Angely, wines of same quality.

DEPARTEMENT DE LA CHARENTE.

Angouleme, Barbezieux, Cognac, Confolens, Ruffee.

The wines of this department have no repute for the table; but in return they furnish the best brandy in Europe, under the name of Eaux de Vie de Cognac. The fruit which produces this liquor is called la Folle Blanche white.

RED WINES.

The vineyards which furnish the best, are Saint Saturnin, Asnieres, Saint Genis, Linais, de Moulidard, and several other communes of Angouleme et Cognac, producing wines d'ordinaire of the second and third quality.

WHITE WINES.

The above vineyards produce wines of good flavour; Champagne, near Cognac, good flavoured and spirituous wines.

A vin de liqueur, called Grandes Borderies, is made near Cognac, from the plant called colombar; the fruit is left on until the first frost.

LIMOSIN ET MARCHE.

45 and 46 degrees latitude.

DEPARTEMENT DE LA CORREZE.

Tulle, Brires, et Ussel.

The wines of this country have no reputation. Some vineyards are mentioned as producing good wines d'ordinaire of the second quality, only on the side of Alassac, Saillant et Syneix, &c.

AUVGERGNE, VELAY, FOREZ.

45 degrees latitude.

The wines are of little repute, their principal merit is to mix with other wines.

DEPARTEMENT DU PUY DE DOME.

Clermont-Ferrand, Aubert, Yssoire, Thiers.

RED WINE.

Chanturgue, close to Clermont, a light, delicate and well-flavoured wine; after three years, equal to Bourdeaux wine of the third class; three francs the bottle.

Class 2.

Chateldon, near Thiers, wines of a pale colour, called Vin Gris; gain in a bottle a quality equal to the second quality of Joigny.

Ris, district of Chateldon, wines of the same kind.

Class 3.

Mariol, wines like the preceding, but inferior.

Lachaux, near Mariol, Calville, and other vineyards near Thiers, wines nearly the same.

Lachaux, near Clermont, and other vineyards, deep-coloured wines, but thick and clammy, mixed with those of Anjou, or wines, pleasant cins d'ordinaire, and if those of Languedoc and Cahors are added, they resemble the vins d'ordinaire of the second quality of Macon.

WHITE WINES.

Corent, three leagues from Clermont, good wines, spirituous, and flavoured; bottled in March, the mousse like Champagne.

Chauriat, near Clermont, wines inferior, made from red grapes.

DEPARTEMENT DE LA LOIRE.

Montbrison, Roanne, Saint Etienne.

RED WINES.

Class 1.

Luppé, Chuynes, Chavenay, Saint Michel, Saint Pierre de Beuf, district of Pelussin; Boen, sixteen leagues from Montbrion; wines of good colour, body, spirituous, and an agreeable bouquet; vins d'ordinaire of the first quality. The major part is sent to Lyons.

Class 2.

The above vineyards produce also wines of the second class.

Renaison, two leagues from Roane, deep-coloured wines, of good flavour, but thick.

Saint Andre d'Apehon, Saint-Haon-de-Chatel, &c. produce like wines, called, in commerce, vins de Renaison; in an abundant season, they are sent to Paris, and are mixed with other common wines, and give a flavour much admired.

Charlieu, its wines are likewise sent to Paris.

WHITE WINES.

Le Chateau Grillet, an insulated vineyard, half a league from Condrieux on the Rhone, a lively, spirited, and very agreeably-flavoured wine, with a good séve and pleasant bouquet. It is, of its kind, one of the best in France. The wine, when made, is sweet, and remains so one or two years; after this, it becomes dry.

Saint Michel sous Condrieux, district of Pelussin, wines like the preceding, but inferior. The other vineyards, wines more or less like.

DAUPHINE ET LYONNAIS.

45th degrees of latitude.
67,000 hectares, 1,170,000 hectolitres.

The wines of Dauphiny, and particularly those near Vienne, were renowned in the times of the Romans.

DEPARTEMENT DU RHONE.

Lyonnais.

RED WINES.

Cote Rôtie seven leagues from Lyon; the wines produced upon the two sides called Cote Rôtie Brune, and Cote Rôtie Blonde, possess body, spirit, and fineness, a very pleasant flavour and perfume. They should remain in cask five or six years; then bottled, they improve for many years.

Class 2.

Verinay, between Saint Colombe and Ampuis, wines of the same kind as the Cote Rôtie, but of the second quality, and are sold under the same name.

Class 3.

Sainte Foy, Yrigny one league, and two from Lyons, Millery, and the district of Givois, wines lighter, less bodied, spirituous and pleasant flavour.

Charly, and in general all the vineyards on the Rhone, produce wine of a good colour, spirituous, and good flavour.

Baroles and Cougon, two leagues from Lyons, the slopes on the sides of the Saône produce many and very good wines, if kept.

WHITE WINES.

Condrieux, wines of a very good flavour, body, and spirit, séve and bouquet; keep a long time, and become amber-coloured. Many wines in the neighbourhood are put off for the wines of Condrieux.

DEPARTMENT DE L'ISERE.

Grenoble, Saint Marcellin, la Tour du Pin, Vienne.

RED WINES.

La Porte du Lion, situate on the hill round Vienne, wines well bodied, spirituous, and good flavour.

. Class 2.

Revantin, wine of the same kind, but inferior.

Seyssuel, wines the same, with a slight odour of violet.

Les Roches, and other vineyards of the district of Vienne, vins d'ordinaire, of good qualities, which improve by keeping and bear exportation.

The communes Lamblin, Crolles, et Terrasse, five and six leagues from Grenoble, on the right; those of Grignon et St. Maximin, on the left side of the river, produce the best wines; new they are coarse and harsh, by age they lose these defects, and are good vins d'ordinaire.

Marinais, Bessins, Pont en Royans, Saint André, near Saint Marcellin, wines of various qualities.

WHITE WINES.

These are generally used in mixing up with the red.

La Cote Saint André, seven leagues from Vienne, light, sparkling, and agreeably flavoured wines. The village of this name furnishes liqueurs much esteemed, under the name of Eaux de la Côte.

DEPARTMENT DE LA DROME.

RED WINES.

Tain, four leagues from Valence, possesses the famous Hermitage vineyard. This hill rises about eighty toises above the Rhone, and is formed into several slopes, called Mas, in the country, and which are placed in amphitheatre. The southern slope, on which the vines are planted, is sufficiently steep to require the support of walls for its earth, placed at distances according to the inclination of the soil. The whole is exposed to the sun the whole day, and sheltered from the north; but hollows are left into which the sun does not penetrate for so long a time, and their lower part, called sabot, is loaded with earth washed down by the rains, these cause a difference in the wines, although the vines are the same, viz. for the red, the great and small Siras grapes; for the white, the Marsane et Roussane.

The best wines are produced in the Mas, called Meal, Grefieux, Beaume, Raucoule, Muret, Guiognieres, les Bessas, les Burges, et les Lands. The soil of these is composed of gres and flints, except that of Bessas, which is of granite, and is very thin: these, in the order above, produce wines of a good colour, much spirit, body, mellowness, free, and delicate, with a high flavour, and bouquet. The wine of Bessas differs particularly from the others as being of a deeper colour with less fineness and perfume, but it keeps longer, and is more abundant, and on account of its colour is sought for by the merchants for mixture with other wines.

Class 2.

Crozes, Merceurol Gervant, bordering upon the Hermitage, wines of like quality, but inferior. In favourable seasons the wines of Crozes differ from the Hermitage in nothing but fineness and le moelleux.

Class 3.

Saillans, three leagues from Die. Vercheny, near Die, wines deep coloured, well bodied, spirituous, which improve by age.

Donzere, Roussas, Château-neuf-du-Rhône, Alon, la Garde, Ad Hemar et Montelgar, near Montelimar, wines like the preceding.

Class 4.

Saint Maurice, two leagues from Nyons, Etoile, Lison, and Saint Paul, near Valence, &c. produce common wines.

WHITE WINES.

The different mas of the Hermitage, produce these wines of the first quality, well bodied, spirituous, fine, pleasant, well flavoured and perfumed; they are bottled four years old, keep well, and improve by age. Those of the Mas Raucoule are the best.

Class 2.

Merecurol, wines something like but much inferior to those of the Hermitage.

Die, wines, called Clarette de Die, pleasant flavoured; they mousse like Champagne, but lose this quality after two years.

Chanos Curson, canton of Tain, wines sweet, weak, but of pleasant flavour.

VINS DE LIQUEUR.

A wine is made upon the Hermitage, called Vin de Paille, much prized. The colour of gold, and of a delicious perfume and flavour. The grapes are either laid upon straw, (paille) or suspended on poles, six weeks or two months; when partly dry, they are stripped from the bunches and pressed; the juice is very thick and viscous, but becomes fine by fermentation; it is drawn off into vessels, and kept several years before it is bottled.

The environs of Die produce red and white Muscat wines of tolerable good quality.

The annual produce in red and white wines of the Hermitage is reckoned at 1200 barriques, or 2520 hectolitres.

The Bordeaux merchants buy a large quantity to mix with their wines; the rest is sent to the north of Europe and America; little is consumed in France.

DEPARTMENT DES HAUTES ALPES.

Gap, Briançon, Embrum.

The vineyards near the Durance, are Roche de Jarjaie, Letret, Chateauneuf-de-Chabre et de la Cote de Nefles; their reputation does not pass beyond the department.

The white wine, called la Clarette de la Saulee, is much praised near Gap.

GUIENNE ET GASCOGNE.

43, 44, 45 degrees of latitude.

DEPARTMENT ET LA GIRONDE.

110,000 hectares of land, above 2,200,000 hectolitres of wine.

The plants most generally cultivated are, red, le Muscat noir et le gris, le Malaga noir et le gris, le grand et la petite Vidure, le Carmenet, la Cârmanere, le Malbek, le gros et le petit Verdot, la Pétouille, l'Alicante ou teintuner, le Manein, le Balouzet le tarnex, le ciotats et le Chasselas.

White, le Muscat Blanc, le Muscat d'Alexandrie, le Malaga, le Sauvignon, le Semilion, le Malvoisie, la Blanquette, l'Auba, le Corinthe, la folle Blanche ouenrageat, l'Œil de Perdrix ou perdrigon, la Muscadelle et la Chalosse.

Le Carmenet, la Carmanere le Malbek et le verdot, alone fill the vineyards of Medoc, which furnish the wines of the first quality.

The good wines of St. Emilion, are produced by the plants les Vidures, et le Malbek.

The white wines of Barsac, Preignac, et Sauterne, are produced by a mixture of the Sauvignon, Semilion blanc, Auba, &c.

The same plants, with the addition of la Chalosse, et l'Œil de Perdrix, occupy the vineyards of Langon.

The excellent wines of Graves are made with the Sauvignon, le blanc doux, le Semilion, le Cruchinet, la Verdelette, et la Chalosse. Those of Pontac, with le Blanquette, le Sauvignor, le Semilion, le Rousselet de la Malvoisie, and the folle Blanche.

The inferior wines of Bordeaux, are exported to America and the interior of France; those of the first quality to India, Russia, and England.

The difference in price between the first and inferior wines is very great. Those of the four first vineyards sell generally the first year at from 2 to 3000 francs the tonneau, and rise to 5 or 6000, and even higher in a very favourable vintage. On the contrary, the vins communs fetch only from 100 to 120 francs, and seldom rise to more than 2 or 300.

The wine of the first quality at its point of maturity, ought to have a beautiful colour, much fineness, a very agreeable bouquet, and a flavour which embalms the mouth. Strength without intoxicating, and body without harshness. The Bordeaux wines are, contrary to the generality of French wines, improved by a sea voyage, and wines of the second and third quality, after a voyage, have equalled those of the first.

The English houses at Bordeaux, immediately after the vintage, purchase a large quantity of the wines of all the best vineyards, in order that they may undergo la travaille a l'Anglaise. This operation consists in putting into fermentation part of the wines during the following summer, by mixing in each barrel, from thirteen to eighteen pots of Alicant or Benicarlo, or the wines of the Hermitage, Cahors, Languedoc, and others; one pot of white wine, called Muet, (wine whose fermention has been stopped by the fumes of sulphur) and one bottle of spirits of wine. The wine is drawn off in December, and then laid up in the chais (cellars) for some years. By this operation the wines are rendered more spirituous and very strong, they acquire a good flavour, but are intoxicating. The price likewise is encreased.

The age of wine at Bordeaux is counted par feuilles, that is the number of times the vine has been in leaf since the vintage. The years which the wines require to be kept vary, but those of this department do not reach perfection before the fifth or sixth.

The Bordeaux wines are divided into vins de Medoc, des Graves, des Palus des Côtes, de Terre Forte, et vins d'entre deux Mers.

The vineyards of Medoc, occupy a territory of twenty leagues in length by one in breadth, and furnish the best wines. It is divided into the high and low Medoc; the latter is much inferior.

Les Graves, are gravelly lands, reaching from Bordeaux to about three leagues from the town.

Les Palus, are alluvial lands, between the Garonne and Dordogne. The wine is very deep coloured, full bodied, harsh and coarse in the first years, but improves and becomes excellent by keeping. They are called cargo wines, because they are preferred for long voyages.

Les Côtes, are hills which border upon the Garonne et la Gironde, from Langon to Blaye. Their wines have a good body and colour.

Les Terres Fortes, are those of Medoc, where there is no gravel. They call the part, entre deux Mers, which is between the Garonne and Dordogne. The wines are of low quality.

RED WINES.

Class 1.

The vineyard La Fitte, produces wines light, very fine, very smooth (soyeux) full of flavour (séve) and bouquet.

Latour, between Pauillac et St. Lambert, produces wines which have more body and substance (etoffe) much flavour and bouquet, but are less fine and soyeux.

Le Chateau Margaux, five leagues from Bordeaux, furnishes wines distinguished for much lightness and fineness, a fine bouquet, and very soyeux, but their séve is less aromatic than those of Lafitte.

Le Haut Brion, in the Graves: its wines have more etoffe, body, and spirit, than the preceding, a séve more aromatic, but less bouquet. They require being kept six or seven years in cask. La séve, or flavour, in the wines of the first quality, is compared to the odour of the best sealing-wax when burning; and the bouquet partakes of the smell of the violet or raspberry.

Class 2.

Rozan, wine of the same quality as the Chateau Margaux, but not so perfect.

Gorce, wines like those of Lafitte, but sold at one-eighth less.

Leoville et Larose, wines abounding with flavour and bouquet.

Brane Mouton, separated from Lafitte only by a path, wines light, fine and silky, resembling those of Lafitte.

Pichon Longueville, wines very light, spirituous and fine, but not so rich in flavour.

Calon, wines well bodied, and possessing flavour and bouquet.

Class 3.

Pauillac, Margaux, Pesac, Saint Julien de Regnac, St. Estephe, whose best vineyards are quoted above in the first and second class, furnish also wines partaking of the qualities of all the first classes.

At Pessac, la Mission et le Pape Clement, are distinguished.

St. Julien, famous for the flavour and bou-quet: St. Estephe, for its aromatic perfume which partakes of the violet.

Castelnau de Medoc, wines partaking of the qualities of Margaux, but inferior.

Cantenac, wines of a good colour, full bodied, spirituous, with flavour and bouquet.

Talance, good firm wines, with much of the quality of Haut Brion, particularly le Haut Talance.

Merignax, some wines like the preceding.

Le Côte de Canon, wines light, fine, spirituous: not so sharp as those of Medoc, equal in price to those of St. Estephe.

Class 4.

The above vineyards furnish also wines which are called in the country vins des quatrièmes crus du Haut Medoc.

At Paris they frequently figure as wines of the first quality.

Labarde, Cassac, Blanquefort, Macau, Saint Surin de Cadourne, wines of a good quality, improvable by keeping.

St. Emilion, near Libourne, wines of a good colour, body, and flavour.

The wines du Bas Medoc in general rank lower, except a few.

Laujac is distinguished.

Queyries, Montserrant, Basseus, are the best vineyards amongst those called des Palus. The wines are deep coloured and full bodied; gain by age and transport; and those of Queyries fetch the same price as the third class of Medoc.

Class 5.

The same vineyards furnish these wines, and those which only rank as vins d'ordinare de seconde qualité and below it. Their number and shades of difference are sufficient to form many subdivisions.

The vineyards of Ambes, Laissouys, Bouliac, Bacatan, Gilet, St. Gervais, Asque, Latresne, Quinsac, Saint Loubez, Valenton, Macau, Boutiran, Izon, Cadausac, et Baurech, are called the vins de cargaison, (cargo) because they are in general sent to foreign countries, and improve by the voyage.

Bourg, le Tourne, Langoiran, wines with body and spirit; gaining by age flavour and bouquet.

Saint Macaire, deep coloured, but spiritless wines.

Le vins communs are those de l'Isle St. Georges, Petits Palus, de-Libourne, d'Arveynes, de Blaye, de Fronsac; they become tolerably agreeable by age, but are seldom exported, except for the marine.

WHITE WINES.

The white wines are of two kinds, those of the Graves, which are dry, and a bouquet partaking of the odour of cloves and Pierre à fusil.

Those on the left bank as Sauternes, Barsac, &c. are firm bodied, or rather semi-liquoreux and spirited. The difference arises from the maturity of the grapes. Those of the Graves are gathered at once, whilst those of Sauternes, &c. are gathered at different times, as they become pourris, or quite ripe, and the skin sticks to the fingers.

In the country called les Graves, are the crus Saint Bris et Carbonnieux, the most esteemed vins secs, with an aromatic bouquet.

Pontac ou Dulamon unites all the qualities of the Grave, but are without the taste de Pierre à fusil; keep well, and improve.

The vineyards producing the wines semiliquoreux, are Sauternes, a district of Langon; wines very firm, fine, spirituous, an aromatic flavour, and charming bouquet. Duroy, Yquem-Salus, et le Filiol, are the most distinguished vineyards. The connoisseurs arrange them in this order.

Barsac, district of Podensac; these wines, and particularly those of Haut Barsac, are of equal value with those of Sauternes; they differ by a little less fineness, flavour, and bouquet; but are more spirituous, insomuch that, in a very favourable season, they burn like brandy. By age they become amber-coloured.

The cru Filiol is the first.

Preignac, wines partaking of the qualities of Barsac et Sauternes; but different by less flavour than the last, and less spirit than the first.

Beaumes, possessing the qualities and flavour of the above.

Class 2.

Langon; these wines were formerly the best of the province; they are of the same kind as those of Barsac et Sauternes when new, but do not improve by age. The frosts in 1788 and 1795 having destroyed the Vignes, the proprietors of many vineyards substituted the Chalosse, which resists better the cold, but is of a bad quality.

Cerons in the Graves, wines rather inferior; of the same price with those of Langon.

To these may be added the second quality of the vineyards of the first class.

Class 3.

Pujols, Ilats, Landiras, Virelade in the Graves, vins secs like, but a little inferior to those of Cerons.

St. Croix du Mont et Loupiac, wines which keep a long time their liqueur, (sweetness); fine and with a peculiarly agreeable flavour, particularly those of St. Croix.

Class 4.

Langoiran, Rioms, Cadillac, good first-rate vins d'ordinaire.

Cambes, Quinsac, Camblanes, on the Garonne, wines like those of Langoiran, but inferior.

Class 5.

Cubsac, Tronsac, Blaye, Bourg, and the vineyards called d'Entre-deux-Mers; in general dry wines, with little spirit; in a good season they become good vins d'ordinaire of the second and third quality.

Castillon, near Lebourne, et Saint Foy la Grande, common white wines. These last cited wines are in general made into Eau de vie.

DEPARTEMENT DE LA DORDOGNE.

Perigueux, Bergerac, Nontron, Riberac, Sarlat.

RED WINES.

La Terrasse, Pécharmont, les Farcies, Campréal, Sainte Foy des Vignes, upon the right bank of the Dordogne, produce wines much esteemed; with a bouquet rather weak, but lively, fine, light.

Class 2.

Domme, Saint Cyprien, Thonac, Saint Leay, wines deep-coloured, much body, and good flavour; require four years keeping.

Chancelade, near Perigueux, wines spirituous and well-flavoured, particularly Salgourde.

Douzilhac, Celles, Brantôme, Bourdeilles, St. Pantaly, St. Orse, district of Perigueux; Varreins, Villetoureux, St. Victor Brassac, Gouts, Vertillac, district of Riberac, wines of a good colour and tolerably spirituous.

Mareuil, near Nontron, good vins d'ordinaire.

WHITE WINES.

Montbasillac, St. Nessans, Sancé, in the district of Bergerac, wines known under the title of vins de Bergerac, with much sweetness, and may be considered vins de liqueur; well flavoured, very spirituous, and with a good bouquet. There are many inferior vineyards.

DEPARTEMENT DES LANDES.

Mont de Marsan, St. Sever, Dax.

RED WINES.

Cap Breton, Soustons, Messange, Vieux Boa-ceau, along the Gulph of Gascony, wines of good colour, body, spirit, flavour, and bouquet.

Class 2.

La Chalosse produces a large quantity of wines, similar to those of Bearn, but lighter.

Gamardes, et Montfort near Dax, Castelnau near St. Sever, vins d'ordinaire of the first quality.

DEPARTEMENT LOT ET GARONNE.

Agen, Marmande, Nèrac, Villeneuve d'Agen.

RED WINES.

Thesac, et Pericard, canton of Tournon, wines of a good colour, vins d'ordinaire, second quality.

Buzel, canton of Damazan, wines with fine perfume and delicacy.

Castel Moron, Sommenzac, la Chapelle, in the district of Marmande, deep-coloured, thick, heady wines.

Notre Dame de Rech, Marsac, and several other communes of Agen, produce wines esteemed in the country.

WHITE WINES.

Clairac, near Tonneins, Buzet, district of Marmande, wines esteemed under the name of Vins Pourris; vide Sauterne.

The vineyards of Marmande et Sommenzac have the same wines; they are sent to Bordeaux, and rank as second rate wines with those of Langon.

DEPARTEMENT DE GERS.

Auch, Condom, Lectoure, Loubez, Mirande.

RED WINES.

Verlus, canton of Riscle; Mazeres, canton of Auch; wines with deep-colour, body, and good taste.

Viella, same canton; Gouts, canton of Plaisance; Lussan, three leagues from Auch; wines similar, but inferior.

Ville Contat, Mielan, Beaumarchez, Plaisance, district of Mirande; Vic Pessensac, Valence, Miradoux; tolerable good wines, of the second quality d'ordinaire.

DEPARTEMENT DE LOT.

Cahors, Figeac et Gourdon.

VINS NOIRS.

These wines are made from a grape called Auxerrois; they are very deep-coloured, of good flavour, and spirituous: they are not used to drink, but to give colour to other wines. In order to increase the quality of the wine, part of the vintage is roasted, (grillèe) or the whole boiled in cauldrons. Brandy likewise is added. The best wines are made in the communes of Savanac, Mel la Garde, Saint Henry, Parnach, Saint Vincent, Pistoule, Camy, Luzech, Lebas, Praissac, Premiac; all in the district of Cahors. Other cantons might make the same wines, but they prefer the mixing them with white grapes, in order to make wines called vin rouge dans tout son corps, lighter coloured and well flavoured.

VIN ROSÉ

Is made from white grapes and red, not the Auxerrois, but the liquor is made to pass through the marc of this, as soon as the Vin Noir is drawn off.

LANGUEDOC.

42d and 45th degrees of latitude. 337,100 hectares, 4,548,000 hectolitres.

DEPARTEMENT DE L'ARDECHE.

Privos, d'Argentiere, Tournon.

RED WINES.

Cornas, canton of St. Peray, near Tournon, wines rich in colour, much body and firmness. In favourable years with a flavour of ratafia. They equal the second-rate wines of the Hermitage; keep to twenty-five years, and are much purchased by the Bordeaux merchants to make up their wines.

St. Joseph, near Tournon, like the above, but inferior, are ripe in two years; after the fifth year they decline.

Class 2.

Mauve, near Tournon, wines high coloured, well-flavoured, but without spirit; good for mixtures.

Limony, canton of Serrieres, wines fine, spirituous, and well flavoured, equal vin d'ordinaire of the first quality. They are considered Vins Chauds on account of their high degree of spirit.

Sara et Vion, wines at first liquoreux, but lose this by age.

Aubenas, common wines good.

WHITE WINES.

Saint Peray, near Valence, wines of great delicacy, spirit, and an agreeable flavour peculiar to them, and partaking of the violet. Bottled in the spring, they mousse like Champagne. The best are produced in the vineyard Gaillard, and on the slope Hongrie.

Saint Jean produces a small quantity of a light, delicate, well flavoured wine, called Vin de Cotillon; it froths like St. Peray.

Guilherand, wines ranking with those of the second and third quality of the country.

DEPARTEMENT DU GARD.

Nismes, Alais, Uzès, le Vigan.

Thirty-one different species of grapes are found in this country: ten black, seven red, fourteen white.

RED WINES.

Class 1.

Chuzclan, two leagues from Pont St. Esprit, wines light coloured, fine, light, and agreeable; keep long.

Tavel, near Roquemaire, wines not so firm as the above, and less light; very fine and spirituous, they gain by age.

Lirac, wines of the same kind, but firmer.

Saint Geniez, wines like those of Chuzclan.

Ledénon; its first wines have a good colour, body, spirit, and flavour.

St. Laurent-des-Arbres, wines higher coloured, and with less spirit than those of Tavel.

All the above wines bear carriage by land or sea well, and are confounded in commerce under the title Vins de Languedoc fins.

Beaucare, wines called Canteperdrix; good.

Class 2.

Roquemaire, district of Uzés, two and a half leagues from Avignon, good wines en premiere cuvée.

Saint Gilles-les-Boucheries, chief place of the canton, good wines, which bear carriage well. The best vineyards are l'Aube, la Cassagne, la Petite Cassagne, St. André, Perouse.

Bagnols, wines higher coloured and fuller bodied.

Class 3.

Lacostieres, adjoining Saint Gilles, wines inferior.

Jonquieres, wines with good flavour, less coloured and firm than those of St. Gilles.

Pugeault, wines assez francs de gout, and like the lowest wines of Roquemaire.

Laudun, canton of Roquemaire; wines with an earthy taste, disagreeable.

Langlade, wines similar to those of Jonquieres; in good years much is sent to Holland.

WHITE WINES.

Laudun, wines light, sparkling, good flavour. Calvoisson, canton of Sommieres, wines light, pleasant; called Clarette.

DEPARTEMENT DE TARN ET GARONNE.

Mautauban, Moissac et Castel Sarrasin.

Fau, Aussac, Auvillar, Saint Loup, Campsas, et La Villedieu, wines of a good colour, spirit, and flavour.

Some white wines are made, which do not go out of the country.

DEPARTEMENT DE TARN.

Alby, Castres, Gaillac, Levaur.

RED WINES.

Class 1.

Cunac, Caissaguet, Saint Juery, Saint Amarans, wines light, delicate, firm, and perfumed; similar to the good vins d'ordinaire of Macon and Burgundy.

Gaillac, wines of a deep colour, much body, and good flavour; improved by the voyage by sea. Holland imports much. Paris, likewise, to mix with weak wines.

Class 2.

Les communes de Meilhart, la Roque, Florentin, Lagrave, Técon, Rabastiens, wines of the same kind.

All the above wines are bought for exportation, in order to mix with white wines, and give them a colour et la mâche.

WHITE WINES.

Gaillac, wines sweet, well flavoured, well bodied, and bear exportation; much sent to Belgium and Holland.

DEPARTEMENT DE L'HERAULT.

Montpellier, Beziers, Lodève, Saint-Pons-de-Tomiers.

RED WINES.

St. George d'Orques, wine of a free and agreeable flavour; after three years, good vins d'ordinaire, equal to those called Passe-tonsgrains, in Upper Burgundy, but stronger.

Verargues, Saint Christol, wine higher coloured and more firm.

Saint Drézery, Saint Geniez, Cartries, wine with less body and colour than those of St. George, but dry and pleasant.

The above wines are generally used to strengthen weaker wine.

Class 2.

Garrigues, Perols, Villeveyrac, Bouzigues, Frontignan, Poussan, produce wines, called de Montagne, good colour, body, and spirit.

Class 3.

Loupian et Mèze, in the district of Montpellier, Pezenas, Agde, Béziers, wines which are exported under the name de Montagne, or Cargaison.

WHITE AND MUSCAT WINES.

Frontignan, next to those of Rivesaltes, the best in France. They improve by age and bear carriage by land or sea.

Lunel, the best are equally esteemed with those of Frontignan, but they have less body, and do not keep so long.

Class 2.

Marseillan et de Pommerols, wines called de Picardan, the name of the grape; liquoreux without being muscat; a very good flavour and bouquet. They keep long and bear carriage; they are used to give flavour to wines which fail in this. They become dry by age.

The must of this grape is used to make the wine Muet, or wine whose fermentation is stopped by sulphur. A vin de liqueur, called Vin de Colabre, is made by pouring in brandy.

Also some like those of Rota, Alicant, &c.

Class 3.

Maraussan, muscat wine red and white. Cazouls les Bessiers et Bassan; muscat wines, good body, but inferior.

Montbasin, muscat wines, called Muscatelles; unless drunk within three or four years, they lose their flavour and sweetness.

3

DEPARTEMENT DE LA HAUTE GARONNE.

Toulouse, Maret, Saint Gaudens, Ville-franche.

RED WINES.

Villaudric, canton of Fronton, wines fine, delicate, and well flavoured.

Fronton, wines with good body, spirit, and flavour, keep well, and bear carriage.

Montesquieu-de-Volvestre, et Cappens, wine of the same kind.

Buzet; wines delicate, as vins d'ordinaire.

Cugnaux, much wine, well bodied and coloured, but with less spirit; they gain by age.

DEPARTEMENT DE L'AUDE.

Carcassone, Castelnaudary, Limoux, et Narbonne.

RED WINES.

Narbonne; the wines of this district are called Vins de Narbonne; of a good colour, not harsh, much body, firmness, spirit, and good flavour; the best are produced at Sijean. They are classed in the following order:

1. Fiton, 2. Leucate, 3. Tralles, 4. Portet, lastly Narbonne.

La Grasse; wines resembling the above, but inferior.

Aleth; wine agreeable, but does not bear carriage.

WHITE WINES.

Limoux; wines, called Blanquette, sweet, light, and with a fine bouquet.

Magrie, wine of the same kind and quality.

PROVENCE, AVIGNON, ORANGE.

43d and 44th degrees of latitude.

No province of France has such a variety of grapes as Provence, which mixture leaves no decided taste to the wine.

123,000 hectares, 1,863,000 hectolitres.

DEPARTEMENT DU VAR.

Dragainan, Brignoles, Grasse, Toulon.

RED WINES.

La Gaude, two leagues from Grasse, wines at first high coloured and heady, after five or six years very pleasant.

Saint Laurent, Cagnes, Saint Paul, et Villeneuve, wines similar.

La Malgue, at Toulon; wine good, keeps well, and improves by age.

Class 2.

Bandol, la Casdiere, Saint Nazaire, le Castelet, Saint-Cyr, le Beausset, near Toulon; wines deep coloured, spirituous, keep long, and improve by age and carriage, sold under the name of vins de Bandol.

Ollioules, Cuers, Hyeres, la Craux, Soliés, Pierrefeu; wines of a good colour, but less spirituous, and do not keep so well; called vins de la Cote de Toulon.

Lorguez, near Draguignan, and other communes, produce inferior wines.

WHITE WINES.

Little made; consumed in the country. Some red and white Muscat wines, but inferior.

DEPARTEMENT DE VAUCLUSE.

Avignon, Apt, Carpentras, Orange.

Avignon, upon the vineyard le Coteau brûlé; of twelve hectares, very good wine.

Chateauneuf, four leagues from Orange, upon the vineyards la Nerthe et Saint Patrice; the wines are very good at three or four years old.

Sorgues, wines with more body, fire, and strength, which keep longer but less delicate.

Class 2.

Chateauneuf de Gadagne; wines delicate and pleasant, but inferior.

VINS MUSCATS.

Beaumes, near Carpentras, very pleasant wines.

DEPARTEMENT DES BOUCHES DU RHONE.

Marseille, Aix, et Arles.

RED WINES.

Class 1.

Marseille, many vineyards, producing wines of good colour, body, spirit, and good flavour. They improve by keeping, after six or seven years they fail.

Arles, Chateau Renard, Eguilles, Orgon, les Saintes Maries, Tarascon, wines similar but inferior to those of St. Gilles.

Class 2.

Aubogne, Gemenos, Roquevaire, Allauch, la Ciotat, Marignane, from three to six leagues from Marseille; wines deep coloured, bodied, spirituous, firm, which bear carriage well, and are improved by it.

Gardane, two leagues from Aix; wines like the preceding, less coloured, and solid.

L'Isle de Camargue; common wines, deep coloured, good flavour.

WHITE WINES.

Cossis, three leagues from Marseille; wines sweet, good flavour, body, and spirit.

Marseille, Gemenos, Aubogne, Allauch, et Plant de Cugne; white wines like the above, but inferior.

The white wines of this country are much exported to Holland.

VINS DE LIQUEUR.

Rouquevaire, four leagues from Marseille; the best Muscat wines, red and white, with a fine perfume.

Cassis et Ciotat, a small quantity of the same kind, inferior.

Malmsey wines are likewise made from red grapes, suffered to become nearly dry.

VIN CUIT OR BOILED.

These wines are made upon most of the vineyards, they have been compared with Tokay, and passed off as such.

BEARN, BIGORRE, NAVARRE, CONSÉRANS, COMTÉ DE FOIX, ROUSSILLON.

43d and 44th degrees of latitude. 73,940 hectares, 898,000 hectolitres.

DEPARTEMENT DES BASSES PYRENEES.

Pau, Bayonne, Montléon, Oleron, Orthes.

RED WINES.

Jurançon, one league and a half from Pau, wines, red and pale, of great repute. The red have a good colour, body, spirit, flavour, and fine bouquet.

The pale, formed by a mixture of red and white grapes, are very light, fine, delicate, and of a very pleasant flavour.

Gan, a vineyard adjoining, wine of the same kind, but more bodied and firm; keep well.

Class 2.

Monein, three leagues from Oleron, wines of the same kind, but little inferior.

Aubertin, good wines, some crus are superior to those of Monein.

Class 3.

La Lasseuble, la Hourcade, Saut de Navailles, Cucuron, Luc, in the environs of Oleron, the cantons of Lagor, Navarrins, Sauveterre, three leagues from Oleron; more white than red wines.

WHITE WINES.

Jurançon, white wines distinguished by a taste and a perfume like that of a Trufle, keep well and improve.

Gan, wines less delicate, but better bodied.

The vineyards of the second class of red produce also white wines.

Anglet, near Bayonne, wines light and with a pleasant sugary taste; must be drank the first year.

DEPARTEMENT DES HAUTES PYRENEES.

Tarbes, Argelles, Bagnéres.

RED WINE.

Madiran, eight leagues from Tarbes, its land produces wines rich in colour, and of a sweet taste the two first years; keep well in cask eight or ten years; may be bottled in five years: the wine of a favourable season and long bottled, bears comparison with the first wines. The vineyards Anguis, Lastecheneres, most famous.

Castelnau, wines similar.

Saint Faux, Soublecauze, Lascazères, near Castelnau, wines equal.

All these wines are known and are sold under the name of Vins de Madiran.

WHITE WINES.

The communes Bouilth, Pereuilli, Castelvicilli, Periguieres, in the district of Tarbes, pleasant wines, keep long in bottle, and gain a flavour of the pierre à fusil.

DEPARTEMENT DES PYRENEES-ORIENTALES.

Perpignan, Céret, Prades.

RED WINES.

Class 1.

Balinols, wines of a very deep colour, full of body and spirit, firm, and very good flavour. By age they gain fineness, and a bouquet; after ten years their colour is that of gold, and from their taste they are called rancio, as resembling the wines so called in Spain; they improve up to thirty years, and keep to fifty.

Cosperon, wines of the same kind and quality.

Callioure, wines a little more fine, with less body, but gain by age all the same qualities.

Tarentila et Terrats, wines fine, and generally consist of those, called Rancio, with dry and pleasant perfume.

Class 2.

Rivesaltes, Baixas, Corneilla-de-la-Ribera, wines of a good colour, body and spirit, but much inferior, called vins de la plaine.

St. Jean, de la Cella, Bagnouls-des-Apres, Argeles, Sorède, wines similar.

Salces, Espira de la Gly, Pisilla, wines similar, but inferior.

St. Estephe, Villeneuve de la Riviere, a great quantity of common wines.

The common wines are used for mixture with other wines.

The best wines are more drank as tonics than used as table wines.

WHITE AND WINES DE LIQUEUR.

Rivesaltes, two leagues from Perpignan. This wine is esteemed the best vin de liqueur in France; by some, the best in Europe.

Bagnols Cosperon, Collioure, produce vins de liqueur, called de Grenache, from the name of the grape. They are red, but their colour becomes paler as they grow old.

Rodez, in a small quantity, wine de Grenache.
Salces, a white wine, called from the grape,
Maccabec, resembling Tokay.

Saint André et Prepouille de Salces, dry wines much esteemed.

CORSICA.

The vineyards most distinguished are those of Ajaccio, Sari, Peri et Vico, Bastrá, Pietra Nigra, Cap Corso, Bassanese, Maccaticcia, Calvi Callenzone, Corse Fallano, Bonifacio, Porto Vecchio.

These wines, both red and white, have delicacy, body, and a pleasant flavour.

CLASSIFICATION GENÉRALÉ DES VINS DE FRANCE.

§ I. VINS ROUGES.

Première Classe.

Les premiers crus de la Bourgogne sont: la Romanée-Conti, le Chambertin, le Richebourg, le clos Vougeot, la Romanée-de-Saint-Vivant, la Tâche, le clos Saint-Georges et le Corton, département de la Côte-d'Or. Des vins supérieurs à ceux de la seconde classe, le clos de Prémeau, le Musigni, le clos du Tart, les Bonnes-Marres, le clos à la Roche, les Veroilles, le clos Morjot, le clos Saint-Jean et la Perrière, même département.

Bordelais les clos dits de Lafitte, de Latour, du château-Margaux et du Haut-Brion, département de la Gironde.

Les vins de première qualité, des crus Méal, Gréfieux, Beaume, Racoule, Muret, Guionière, les Bessas, les Burges et les Lauds, sur le territoire de l'Hermitage, départment de la Drôme, les plus estimés de tous ceux du Dauphiné.

Deuxième Classe.

En Champagne, Verzy, Verzenay, Mailly, Saint-Basle, Bouzy et le clos de Saint-Thierry, département de la Marne.

En Bourgogne, Vosne, Nuits, Chambolle, Volnay, Pomard, Beaune, Morey, Savigny et Meursault, département de la Côte-d'Or; les côtes des Olivotes, de Pitoy, de Perrière et des Préaux, à Tonnerre; les clos de la Chaînette et de Migrenne, à Auxerre, département de l'Yonne; le Moulin-à-Vent, les Torins et Chénas, dans le Beaujolais et le Mâconnais, départemens de Saône-et-Loire et du Rhône.

Dauphiné; les vins de seconde qualité des crus de l'Hermitage.

Dans le Lyonnais, la Côte-Rôtie, département du Rhône.

Dans le Bordelais, les clos Rozan, Gorse, Léoville, Larose, Brane-Mouton, Pichon-Longueville et Calon, département de la Gironde.

Le comtat d'Avignon le Côteau-Brûlé.

Le Béarn, les vins de Jurançon et de Gan, département des Basses-Pyrénées.

Le Roussillon, Bagnols, Cosperon, Collioure, Torémila et Terrats, département des Pyrénées-Orientales.

Troisième Classe.

La Champagne, les vins rouges de Hautvillier, Mareuil, Disy, Pierry, Epernay, Taisy, Ludes, Chigny, Villers-Allerand et Cumières, département de la Marne; et des Riceys, de Balnot-sur-Laigne, d'Avirey et de Bagneux-la-Fosse, département de l'Aube.

La Bourgogne, Gevrey, Chassagne, Alox, Savigny-sous-Beaune, Blagny, Santenay et Chenove, département de la Côte-d'Or; les vignes Clairion et Bonvin à Auxerre, département de l'Yonne; Fleury, la Chapelle-Guinchey et Romanéche, dans le Mâconnais et le Beaujolais, département de Saône-et-Loire.

L'Auvergne, de le petit coteau de Chanturgues, près Clermont-Ferrand, département du Puy-de-Dôme.

Le Dauphiné, Crozes, Merceurol et Gervant, département de la Drôme; Seyssuel, Revantin et Vienne, département de l'Isère.

Le Lyonnais, les vins de Vérinay, département du Rhône.

Le Bordelais, Pauillac, Margaux, Pessac, Saint-Estephe, Saint-Julien, Castelnau-de-Médoc, Cantenac, Talence, Mérignac et la côte de Canon, département de la Gironde.

Le Périgord, les la Terrasse, Pécharmont, les Farcies, Campréal et Sainte-Foy-des-Vignes, département de la Dordogne.

La Guienne proprement dite, les vins du Cap-Breton, de Soustons, de Messange et de Vieux-Bouceau, département des Landes.

Le Languedoc, Chuzelan, Tavel, Saint-Geniez, Lirac, Ledenon, Saint-Laurent-des-Arbres et les vins dits de Cante-Perdrix, à Beaucaire, département du Gard; Cornas et Saint-Joseph, département de l'Ardèche.

Le comtat d'Avignon, les clos de la Nerthe et de Saint-Patrice, à Châteauneuf, et du territoire de Sorgues, département de Vaucluse.

En Champagne, Villedemange, Ecueil, Chamery, Saint-Thierry, Damery, Champillon et Avenay, département de la Marne; Aubigny et Montsaujon, dans celui de la Haute-Marne.

En Lorraine, Bar-le-Duc, Bussy-la-Côte, Longeville, Savonnière, Ligny, Naives, Rosières, Behonne, Chardogne, Varnay, Rambrecourt, Loissey, Ancerville, Creuë et la Côte Saint-Michel, département de la Meuse; Scy, Jussy, Saint-Ruffine et Dôle, département de la Moselle.

En Alsace, Riquewir, Ribauvillé, Ammerschwir, Kiensheim, Kaisersberg et le château d'Olwiller: département du Haut-Rhin.

En Anjou, Champigné-le-Sec, département de Maine-et-Loire.

En Touraine, les vins de Joué et ceux du clos de Saint-Nicholas-de-Bourgueil, département d'Indre et Loire.

L'Orléanais et le Blaisois les vins de Guignes et de Saint-Jean-de-Bray, département du Loiret, et de la côte des Grouets, département de Loir et Cher.

La Bourgogne et le Beaujolais, ceux de Mercurey, Givry, Dijon, Monthelie, Meursault, Fixin, Fixet, Brochon, Saint-Martin, Rully et Monbogre, dans le département de la Côted'Or et l'arrondissement de Châlons-sur-Saône, les vignes dites Judas, Pied-de-Rat, Rosoir et Quetard; plusieurs crus d'Epineuil, Irancy, Danemoine, Coulanges-la-Vineuse, Auxerre, Avalon, Vézelay, Givry, etc., département de l'Yonne; Lancie, Brouilly, Odenas, Saint-Lager, la Chapelle-Guinchey, Jullienas, Cheroubles, Margon, Saint-Etienne-la-Varenne, Juilly, Emeringe et Davayé, dans le département de Saône et Loire, et l'arrondissement de Ville-franche, département du Rhône.

La Franche-Comté, Salins et les Arsures, département du Jura.

Le Bugey, Seyssel, département de l'Ain.

L'Auvergne, Chateldon et Ris, département du Puy-de-Dôme.

Le Forez, Luppé, Chuynes, Saint-Michel, Saint-Pierre-de-Bœuf et Boen, département de la Loire.

Le Dauphiné, Saillans, Vercheny, Die, Donzère, Roussas, Châteauneuf-du-Rhône, Alan, la Garde-Adhémar, Montségur et Montelimart, département de la Drôme: la Portedu-Lyon, Revantin et Seyssuel, département de l'Isère.

Le Lyonnais, Sainte-Foi, Irigny, Millery, et la Galée, département du Rhône.

Le Bordelais, les quatrièmes crus du Médoc, Labarde, Cussac, Blanquefort, Macau, Saint-Surin-de-Cadourne, Saint-Emilion, quelques crus du bas Médoc, Queyries, Montferrant et Bassens, département de la Gironde.

Le Périgord, Domme, Saint-Cyprien, Thonac, Saint-Leai et Chancelade, département de la Dordogne.

La Guyenne proprement dite, Gamardes, Montfort et Castelnau, dans la contrée nommée la Chalosse, département des Landes.

Le Quercy, Savanac, Mel-la-Garde, Saint-Henry, Parnac, Saint-Vincent, la Pistoule, Camy, Luzech, Lebas, Praissac et Prémiac, département du Lot, les meilleurs vins noirs.

Le Languedoc, Roquemaure, Saint-Gillesles-Boucheries et Bagnols, département du Gard; Saint-Georges-d'Orques, Verargues, Saint-Christol, Saint-Drézery, Saint-Geniez et Castries, département de l'Hérault; Cunac, Caisaguet, Saint-Juery, Saint-Amarans et Gaillac, département du Tarn; et Narbonne, département de l'Aude.

Le comtat d'Avignon, Châteauneuf-de-Gadagne, département de Vaucluse.

La Provence, Mées, département des Basses-Alpes, Séon-Saint-Henry, Séon-Saint-André et Saint-Louis, département du Var.

Le Béarn et la Navarre, Monein et Aubertin, département des Basses-Pyrénées.

Le Bigorre, Madiran, Castelnau-de-Rivière-Basse, Saint-Laune, Soublecauze et Lascazères, département des Hautes-Pyrénées.

Le Roussillon, Rivesaltes, Baixas, Corneillade-la-Ribera, Saint-Jean-de-la-Ceilla, Bagnouls-des-Apres, Argeles et Sorrede, département des Pyrénées-Orientales.

L'Isle de Corse; quelques cantons.

La Picardie les crus de Cussy, Bellevue, Pargnan, Craonnelle, Craonne, Jumigny, Vassogne, Roucy et Laon, département de l'Aisne. L'Ile-de-France, le clos d'Athis, département de Seine-et-Oise; et la côte des Vallées, à Chartrettes, département de Seine et Marne.

La Champagne, Vertus, Mardeuil, Montelon, Moussy, Vinay, Chaveau, Mancy, Chamery, Pargny, Vanteuil, Reuil et Fleury-la-Rivière, département de la Marne; Vaux, Rivières-les-Fosses et Prautoy, département de la Haute-Marne; Bar-sur-Aube, Bar-sur-Seine, Laineaux-Bois et Javernan, département de l'Aube.

La Lorraine, les vignobles d'Apremont, Loupmont, Warneville, Liouville, Saint-Julien, Champougny, Vaucouleurs, Vignot, Sampigny, Saint-Mihiel, Dampcevrin, Buxières, Buxerules, Mont-sec, Vigneules et Hatton-Chàtel, département de la Meuse; Thiancourt, Pagny, Ornaville, Bayonville, Chârrey, Essey, Villers-sous-Prény et Wandelainville, département de la Meurthe; Charmes, Xaronval, Ubexi et Neufchâteau, département des Vosges.

L'Anjou et le Maine, Dampierre, Varrains, Chacé, Saint-Cyr, Brézé, Saumur et Neuillé, département de Maine-et-Loire; et le clos des Jasnières, département de la Sarthe. La Touraine, Chisseaux, Civray, la Croixde-Bléré, Bléré, Athée, Chenonceau, Dierre, Epeigné, Franceuil, Veretz, Azay-sur-Cher, Saint-Cyr-sur-Loire, Saint-Avertin et Balan, département d'Indre-et-Loire.

L'Orléanais, la Chapelle, Saint-Gy, Saint-Ay, Fourneaux, Saint-Jean-le-Blanc, Beaugency, Beaule, Beaulette, Meun, Sandillon, Saint-Denis-en-Val et Combleux, département du Loiret.

Le Blaisois, Thésée, Monthon-sur-Cher, Bouré, Montrichard, Chissey, Mareuil, Pouillé, Angé, Faverolle, Saint-Georges, Lusillé et Chambon, département de Loir et Cher.

La Bourgogne et le Beaujolais, Montagny, Chenove, Buxy, Saint-Vallerin et Saules, dans l'arrondissement de Châlons-sur-Saône; quelques crus du département de la Côte-d'Or; Cheney, Volichère, Tronchoit, Molosme, Cravant, Jussy, Vermanton, Joigny, Saint-Bris, Arcy-sur-Cure et Pourly, département de l'Yonne; la Chassagne, Villiers, Regnier, Lantegnier, Quincié, Marchand, Duret, les Etoux Cercié, Saint-Jean-Dardières, Pizay, Jasseron, Vadoux, Belleville, Montmélas-Saint-Forlin, Charentay, Charnay, Prissé, Vaurenard, Saint-Amour, Chevagny, Chasnes, Laines et Saint-Vérand, dans le département de Saône et Loire, et l'arrondissement de Villefranche, département du Rhône.

La Franche-Comté, le clos du Château, à Ray, département de la Haute-Saône; Voiteur, Menetru, Blandans, Saint-Lothain, Gérage, Saint-Laurent, Arbois et Polygny, département du Jura; Besançon, Byans, Mouthier, Lombard, Leisle et Lavans, département du Doubs.

La Bresse, le Bugey, et le pays de Gex, Seyssel, Champagne, Machurat, Talissieux, Culoz, Anglefort, Groslée et Saint-Benoît, département de l'Ain.

Le Poitou, Champigny, Saint-Georges-les-Bailleraux, Coutures, Jaulnais et Dissais, département de la Vienne.

Le Berry, le Nivernais et le Bourbonnais, Chavignole et Sancerre, département du Cher; la Garenne-du-Sel, département de l'Allier, et Pouilly, département de la Nièvre.

L'Aunis, l'Angoumois, et une partie de la Saintonge. Chaniers et quelques autres crus du département de la Charente-Inférieure; Saint-Saturnin, département de la Charente.

Le Limosin, les côtes d'Allassac, du Saillant et de Syneix, département de la Corrèze.

L'Auvergne, le Velay et le Forez, Mariol, la Chaux, Calville, les Martres, Authezat, Monton, Montperroux, Vic-le-Comte et Coudes, département du Puy-de-Dôme; Renaison, département de la Loire.

Le Lyonnais, Charly, Baroles et Couzon, département du Rhône.

Le Dauphiné, les Roches et Vienne, département de l'Isère; Saillans et les autres vignobles du département de la Drôme.

Le Bordelais, Ambes, Lassouys, Bouliac, Bacalan, Gilet, Saint-Gervais, Asque, Latresnes, Quinsac, Saint-Loubez, Valenton, Macau, Boutiran, Izon, Cadaujac, Baurech, Bourg, Letourne, Langoiran, et quelques autres crus du département de la Gironde.

Le Périgord, Mareuil, Douzilhac, Celles, Brantôme, Bourdeilles, Saint-Pantaly et Saint-Orse, département de la Dordogne.

La Guienne proprement dite, Roquefort, Gabaret et Villeneuve, département des Landes. La Gascogne, Verlus, Mazères, Viella, Gouts et Lussan, département du Gers.

L'Agenois, Thésac, Péricard et Buzet, département de Lot et Garonne.

Le Quercy, le vin dit vin rouge dans tout son corps.

Le Languedoc, Mauve, Limony, Sara, Vion, Aubenas et Largentière, département de l'Ardèche; Lacostières, Jonquières et Pugeault, département du Gard; Fau, Aussac, Auvillar, Saint-Loup, Campsas, la Villedieu et Montbartier, département de Tarn et Garonne; Meilhart, la Roque, Lagrave, Técon et Rabastiens, département du Tarn; Garrigues, Perols, Villeveyrac, Bouzigues, Frontignan et Poussan, département de l'Héraut; Villaudric et Fronton, département de la Haute-Garonne; Fiton, Leucate, Treilles, Portet et Narbonne, département de l'Aude.

La Provence, Bandol, la Cadière, Saint-Nazaire, le Castelet, Saint-Cyr et le Beausset, département du Var; Aubagne, Gemenos, Roquevaire, Allauch, la Ciotat et Marignane, département des Bouches-du-Rhône.

Le Béarn et la Navarre, Lasseube, la Hour-cade, Aubertin, Saut-de-Navailles, Cucuron, Luc, Lagor, Navarreins et Sauveterre, département des Basses-Pyrénées.

Le Roussillon, Salces, Espira-de-la-Gly, Pisilla, Saint-Estève, Villeneuve-la-Rivière et plusieurs autres vignobles du département des Pyrénées-Orientales.

L'île de Corse a des crus dont les vins entrent dans cette classe.

" SECOND SECTION.

"All the remaining wines of France are comprised under this class; their number and varieties are so great that they would fill several pages, but as the enumeration would be merely for the purpose of guarding the reader against their purchase, as being of a very base and inferior quality, whether arising from the worst cuvées, or vineyards naturally bad, this end will be fully answered by notice, that all wines from the best even to those tolerably good, are to be found in the preceding list, and that all the others not mentioned are to be avoided."

§ II. VINS BLANCS.

Première Classe.

La Champagne, des crus de Sillery, d'Ay, de Mareuil, d'Hautviller, de Pierry, de Dissy, et des vignes dites le Clozet, à Epernay, département de la Marne.

La Bourgogne. Les célèbres vins de Montrachet, département de la Côte-d'Or.

Le Bordelais, les vins secs de Saint-Bris, de Carbonnieux et de Pontac, avec les vins moelleux, pleins de séve et de parfum, de Sauternes, Barsac, Preignac et Beaumes, département de la Gironde.

Le Forez. Les excellens vins de Château-Grillet, département de la Loire.

Le Dauphiné. Ceux de l'Hermitage, qui brillent par beaucoup de corps, de spiritueux et de parfum.

Deuxième Classe.

La Champagne; les crus de Cramant, Avise, Oger et le Ménil, département de la Marne.

L'Alsace, ceux de Guebwillers, Turkeim, Riquewir, Ribauvillé, Thann, Bergholtzell, Rufach, Pfaffenheim, Enguisheim, Inguersheim, Mittelweyer, Hunneveyr, Katzenthal, Amerschvyr, Kaisersberg, Kientzheim, Sigolzheim et Babelheim, département du Haut-Rhin; Molsheim et Wolxheim, département du Bas-Rhin, qui produisent des vins secs fort estimés.

La Bourgogne, les vignes dites la Perrière, la Combotte, la Goutte-d'Or, la Genevrière et les Charmes, à Meursault, département de la Côte-d'Or.

La Franche-Comté, Château-Châlons, Arbois et Pupillin, département du Jura.

Le Lyonnais, les vins de Condrieux, département du Rhône.

Le Bordelais, Langon et Cérons, département de la Gironde.

Le Périgord, les côtes de Monbasillac, de Saint-Nessans et de Sancé, département de la Dordogne.

L'Agenois, Clairac et Buzet, département de Lot-et-Garonne.

Le Languedoc, Saint-Peray et Saint-Jean, département de l'Ardèche, vins mousseux et non mousseux.

Le Béarn, Jurançon, département des Basses-Pyrénées.

Troisième Classe.

La Bourgogne et le Beaujolais: la vigne dite le Rougeot, à Meursault, et les vins dits de première cuvée, département de la Côte-d'Or; les côtes de Vaumorillon et des Grisées, territoire de Tonnerre, et les vignes dites le Clos, Valmure, Grenouille, Vaudesir, Bouguereau et Mont-de-Milieu, à Chablis, département de de l'Yonne; ensin Pouilly et Fuissey, département de Saône-et-Loire.

La Franche-Comté, l'Etoile et Quintignil, département de Jura.

Le Bordelais, Pujols, Ilats, Landiras, Virelade, Sainte-Croix-du-Mont et Loupiac, département de la Girode.

Le Forez, Saint-Michel-sous-Condrieux, departement de la Loire.

Quatrième Classe.

La Champagne les vins blancs des Riceys, département de l'Aube.

L'Alsace, ceux de Mutzig, de Neuviller et d'Ernolsheim, département du Bas-Rhin, et ceux de Rixheim et d'Habsheim, département du Haut-Rhin.

L'Anjou et le Maine, les vins des coteaux de Saumur, Parnay, Dampierre, Souzé, Turquant, Martigné-Briant, Foy, Rablay, Beaulieu, Saint-Luygne et Savenières, département de Maineet-Loire.

La Touraine, Vouvray, département d'Indreet-Loire.

La Bourgogne, la cuvée dite de la Barre, à Meursault, les vins blancs dits de seconde cuvée, département de la Côte-d'Or; la côte Delchet, à Milly; la Fourchaume, à Maligny; une partie des côtes de Troëne, à Poinchy; de Vaucompin, à Chiché; de Blanchot, à Fiey, et de celle de Fontenay; les coteaux nommés les Charloups, les Bridennes, les Boutois et la Maison-Rouge, à Tonnerre ; les vignes dites le Chapelot, Vauvillien, la Preusse, Vaulovent, Vossegros, les bas du Clos et plusieurs autres, à Chablis; celles de la Poire, de Blamoy, de la Voie-Blanche et des Chaussans, à Saint-Bris et à Champ, département de l'Yonne; Cheintré, Solutrée et Davayé, département de Saôneet-Loire.

La Franche-Comté, Montigny, département du Jura, et Millery, département du Doubs.

Le Berry, Chavignol et Saint-Satur, département du Cher.

L'Auvergne, Corent, département du Puyde-Dôme.

Le Dauphiné, les vins de Merceurol et ceux nommés clarette, à Die, département de la Drôme; les meilleurs vins blancs de Vienne et de la côote Saint-André, département de l'Isère; enfin la clarette de la Saulce, département des Hautes-Alpes.

Le Bordelais, les vignobles de Langoiran, Rioms, Cadillac, Cambes, Quinsac et Camblannes, département de la Gironde.

L'Agenois, Marmande et Sommensac, département de Lot-et-Garonne.

Le Languedoc, Guillerand, département de l'Ardèche; Limoux et Magrie, département de l'Aude; Laudun et Calvisson, département du Gard; et Gaillac, département du Tarn.

La Provence; les vins de Cassis, département des Bouches-du-Rhône.

Le Roussillon, Saint-André et Prépouille-de-Salces, département des Pyrénées-Orientales. Le Bigorre, Bouilh, Pereuil, Castel-Vieilh et Périguières, département des Hautes-Pyrénées.

L'île de Corse; on y fait quelques vins blancs qui peuvent être rangés dans cette classe.

Cinquième Classe.

Première Section.

Champagne, Chouilly, Montelon, Grauves, Mancy, Molins, Beaumont, Villers-aux-Noends et Maugrimaud, département de la Marne.

Lorraine, Bruley, département de la Meurthe; et Creuë, département de la Meuse.

Alsace, les vignobles de l'arrondissement de Wissembourg de celui de Schlestadt, département du Bas-Rhin.

Bretagne, Varades, Montrelais, Valet, la Chapelle-Hullin, la Haye, le Loroux, le Palet, Maisdon, Saint-Fiacre, Saint-Géréon, Saint-Herblon et Riaillé, département de la Loire-Inférieure.

Anjou et Maine, le clos des Jasnières, département de la Sarthe; Chaintré, Varrains, Chassé, Saint-Cyr-en-Bourg, Brézé, Courchamp, le Mihervé et Saumousset, département de Maine-et-Loire.

Touraine. Rochecorbon, Vernon, Montlouis, et Saint-Georges, département d'Indreet-Loire.

Blaisois. La contrée nommée Sologne; Vimeuil, Saint-Claude, Moret et Montelivaut, département de Loir-et-Cher.

Bourgogne, les troisièmes cuvées de Meursault, département de la Côte-d'Or; Montagny, Chenove, Buxy, Saint-Vallerin, Saules, Bouzeron et Givry, dans l'arrondissement de Châlons-sur-Saône; Vivier, Béru et Fley, département de l'Yonne; Vergisson, Vinzelle, Loché et Charnay, département de Saône et Loire.

Franche-Comté, Poligny et Lons-le-Saulnier, département du Jura.

Nivernais, Pouilly-sur-Loire, département de la Nièvre.

Aunis, Saintonge, et Angoumois, Surgères, département de la Charente-Inférieure, et la Champagne, département de la Charente.

Bordelais, les vignobles cités dans la précédente classe font beaucoup de vins qui ne doivent entrer que dans celle-ci.

Provence. Marseilles, Gemenos, Aubagne, Allauch, et le Plant-de-Cugne, département des Bouches du Rhône.

Deuxième Section.

Picardie et Ile de France, Pargnant, Cussy, Château-Thierry et Charly, département de l'Aisne; Mouchy-Saint-Eloy, département de l'Oise, Mignaux et Andresy, département de Seine-et-Oise; la Côte des Vallées, à Chartrettes, département de Seine et Marne.

Champagne, les environs d'Ancerville, de Vitry-sur-Marne et de Sézanne, département de la Marne; Bar-sur-Aube et Rigny-le-Féron, département de l'Aube.

Lorraine, quelques crus du département de la Moselle.

Alsace, les vins de treille, des environs de Strasbourg, département du Bas-Rhin; et les vignes les moins exposés du département du Haut-Rhin. Bretagne, la plus forte partie du produit des vignobles du département de la Loire-Inférieure, cités dans la première section de cette classe.

Anjou, Trelazé, Saint-Barthélemy, Brainsur-l'Authion, Distré, Antigné, le Bas-Nueil, Brion et tous les crus des arrondissements de Segré et de Baugé, département de Maine et Loire; la Flotte, la Châtre, Sainte-Cécile, Marçon, Château-du-Loir, Mareil, Saint-Benoist, Saint-Georges et Champagne, département de la Sarthe.

Touraine, Nazelles, Noizay, Lussault, Saint-Martin-le-Beau, Reugny, Chançay et Langeais, département d'Indre-et-Loire.

Orléanais, Marigny, Rebrechien, Saint-Mesmin, Loury, et quelques autres crus du département du Loiret.

Blaisois, Mer-la-Ville, Troo, Artuis, et Montoire, département de Loir-et-Cher.

Bourgogne, Givry et quelques autres crus de l'arrondissement de Châlons-sur-Saône; Roffé, Sérigny, Tissé, Vezanne, Barnouille, Dié, Toulay, Milly, Maligny, Poinchy, Villy, Chiché, Ligny-le-Châtel, Poily, Chemilly, Courgy et plusieurs autres du département de l'Yonne; les Certaux, Saint-Vérand, Pierreclod, Bussière, Saint-Martin, et quelques autres du département de Saône-et-Loire.

Franche-Comté, plusieurs crus des départemens du Doubs et du Jura.

Bresse, Bugey et pays de Gex. Pont-de-Veyle et Bourg, departement de l'Ain.

Poitou, Loudun, Trois-Moutiers et Châtellerault; département de la Vienne.

Berry et Nivernais, Saint-Amant et Bourges, département du Cher; plusieurs crus du département de la Nièvre; Saint-Pourçain, la Chaise et les Creuziers, département de l'Allier; Chabris et Reuilly, département de l'Indre.

Aunis et Saintonge, Surgères et Saint-Jeand'Angély, département de la Charente-Inférieure; Cognac, etc. département de la Charente, poduisent des vins propres à la fabrication des eaux-de-vie.

Auvergne, Chauriat, département du Puyde-Dôme.

Bordelais et autres provinces comprises dans le gouvernement de la Guienne, Cubsac, Fronsac, Blaye, Bourg, Castillon, Saint-Foy-la-Grande, et le pays d'Entre-deux-Mers, département de la Gironde; plusieurs crus des départemens de la Dordogne, des Landes, de Lot et Garonne, du Gers et du Lot.

§ III. VINS DE LIQUEUR.

Première Classe.

Roussillon. Le vin muscat de Rivesaltes, département des Pyrénées-Orientales.

Alsace. Les meilleurs vins dits de paille, à Colmar, à Kaisersberg, à Ammerschwir, à Olwillers, à Kientzheim et dans quelques autres vignobles du département du Haut-Rhin.

Dauphiné. Le vin de Paille vignobles de l'Hermitage.

Deuxième Classe.

Le Languedoc, ceux de Frontignan et de Lunel, département de l'Hérault.

Le Roussillon, les vins rouges de Grenache, à Bagnols, à Cosperon, à Collioure et à Rodès, et ceux dits maccabec, à Salces, département des Pyrénées-Orientales.

Troisième Classe.

Le Languedoc, les muscats des seconds crus de Frontignan et de Lunel, et ceux de Maraussan, les vins dits de Picardan à Marseillan et à Pommerols, enfin ceux dits de Calabre, de Malaga, de Madère, etc., que l'on prépare dans plusieurs vignobles du département de l'Hérault.

La Provence, les muscats, rouges et blancs, de Roquevaire, de Cassis et de la Ciotat, le malvoisie de Roquevaire, et les meilleurs vins cuits du département des Bouches-du-Rhône.

Quatrième Classe.

Languedoc. Cazouls-les-Béziers, Bassan, Béziers et Montbazin, département de l'Hérault, beaucoup de vins muscats, dont quelques rouges.

Provence. Barbantane et Saint-Laurent, département des Bouches-du-Rhône, et plusieurs crus des départemens des Basses-Alpes et du Var.

Le Comtat d'Avignon a les muscats de Beaumes, département de Vaucluse.

deputtement dos di material-dibose, et pla-

PART II.

SPAIN.

In all the provinces of this country a considerable quantity of wines of different kinds is made, which form the base of a great commerce. The wines de Liqueur differ from the French not only from the quality of the plants and the heat of the climate, but still more in the manner of their preparation. The grapes are suffered to become quite ripe, and part of the must is moreover concentrated by boiling it in large cauldrons for forty-four hours, care being taken to remove the scum from the surface, until reduced to a quarter of its original quantity. The sirop obtained serves to colour the wine and give it the strength necessary for keeping. The must which has not been boiled is passed through a strainer in order to separate the stones and husks; the requisite quantity of the above-mentioned sirop is added, and the whole is suffered to ferment in vats. The fermentation ceases before the dissolution of the saccharine particles. It requires a length of time to acquire the flavour and perfume.

The variety of vines in Spain is very considerable, above 500.

D. Simon-Roxas-Clemente, describes 120 species in Andalusia and Grenada. The variety esteemed the best is called Ximenez. It is reported to have been a native of the Canaries and Madeira, and transplanted to the Rhine, and brought from thence by Cardinal Don Pedro Ximenes, whose name it bears; but it came more probably from Malvoisie, in the Morea. This vine gives the name to the Malaga wine, called Pedro Ximenez; and enters more or less into all the wines of Paxarete, Xeres, San Lucar, and several others.

GALICIA.

The wines of this province are mostly consumed in the country. The best are produced at Ribadavia, and tolerably good in the district of Tuy.

BISCAY.

The wines are in general harsh and bad; the best at Vittoria, called Pedro Ximenez.

NAVARRE.

Considerable vineyards, good vins d'ordinaire, at Tudela. Peralta, near Pampeluna, is famed for two kinds, the one called Rancio, the other a wine de liqueur. Little is exported.

ARRAGON

Produces much wine, particularly the Grenache, so called from the grape upon vineyards at Sabayes and Carignena.

Borja, near Tarragona, produces a white wine, liquoreux, and very agreeable.

CATALONIA

Abounds in vineyards. The Malvoisie wines made at Sitges, are particularly esteemed.

LEON.

Little exported, the best upon the vineyards of Medina del Campo.

OLD CASTILE.

No exportation; vineyards near Tierra del Campo, in the province of Rioxa; and at Cabezon, near Valladolid.

NEW CASTILE.

The best wines in the environs of Valdepenas, next those of Manzanares et Albacète. The only wine of liqueur comes from Fuençaral.

VALENCE

Abounds in wines; near Alicant, the famous red wine, called Tinto, is produced; in growing old it contracts a sharp taste, and is called Fondellol, to distinguish it from the new. Vins d'ordinaire de la Torre, du Santo Domingo, Perales et Segorbe. Benicarlo et Vinaroz, upon the coast, produce wines high coloured, with body and spirit, which are much used for giving body, colour, and strength to weak wines.

ESTREMADURA.

Many vineyards, but the produce consumed by the inhabitants. At Olivencia, a wine, called Tinto, very excellent, and the only one in Spain comparable with those of the second class in France.

ANDALOUSIE.

The most fertile in Spain. At Rota, five leagues from Cadiz, a celebrated red wine, called Tintilla, from the plant, also tinto di Rota.

Xeres de la Frontera, seven leagues from Cadiz, is surrounded by vineyards. The three most esteemed kinds of white wines, are, 1. Paxarète; liquoreux, and highly flavoured; 2. Vino seco, dry and bitter, with a good bouquet; 3. Abocado, in quality between the other two.

A muscat wine, called Pedro Ximenez, superior to the Malaga.

Paxarète, an ancient monastery, one league and a half from Xeres, possesses in its enclosures the same white wines under the same names, but more highly esteemed.

Moguer in Niebla; wines called Moger.

San Lucar di Barameda, nineteen leagues from Seville, vins muscats, of superior quality; and red wine, called Tintilla; also those called Zalogne et Carlon, are esteemed. The merchants of Xeres use a large quantity of the San Lucar wines to mix with their own.

Cordova, good wines, particularly that of Montilla; dry, of good flavour and bouquet.

The wine, called Negro Rancio, is made at Rota et Xeres, &c.

MURCIA.

The wines in general are vins de liqueur; the best near Carthagena.

GRENADA.

The best wines come from the mountains, and are so called in England.

The 1st, is called Pedro Ximenez, from the name of the grape.

2. The sweet wines, called of colour, new, of an amber colour, and very sweet; grown old, they lose this sweetness, and acquire fineness, body, and spirit; they keep a very long time. Their price varies according to their age, new 150 francs the cask of 440 litres. The oldest frequently 5000 francs and more.

- 3. Vins Muscats, of two kinds; one, called de Malaga, the other de Larmes.
- 4. The wine of Cherries, in which black cherries being infused, give it this flavour.
- 5. A white dry wine, like that of Xeres, under which name it is sold.
- 6. A Malmsey wine, like that of Sitges: not exported.
- 7. A red wine, called Tinto; very high coloured, sweet and sharp at the same time; seldom exported.

Velez Malaga, about five leagues from Malaga, surrounded by vineyards, produces much wine; sold under the name of Malaga.

MAJORCA

Abounds in wines; the most celebrated is the Malmsey, made at Pollentia.

MINORCA.

The vine much cultivated; Aleyor, a vineyard, at the foot of Mount Taurus, produces an excellent red wine, but it does not bear exportation, although tried in large and small quantities.

Alba Flora, is a white wine much sought after, it resembles the wines of the Rhine, but not so dry.

PORTUGAL.

Situate between the 8th and 11th degrees of longitude, and 37th and 42d of latitude. Vine-yards abound in all its provinces, the wines are reckoned inferior to the Spanish, and less spirituous, thence requiring a mixture of brandy.

The species of plants are numerous, sixty-seven have been counted in the same vineyard. But the wine, called Port, is the produce of one grape, black, with leaves deeply insected, and very rough.

ENTRE DOURO ET MINHO.

The vines which border the Minho, grow high, and are situated in the plains; on the contrary, those upon the Douro are low, and, as in France, upon espaliers; here the best wines are made.

A company, under the sanction of the government, called the company of the Upper Douro, has the exclusive commerce of the wines of this part; its members are bound to take the wine of each cultivator at a fixed price, who cannot sell to any other person but through the company, who receive a toll of six per cent. upon the value of the sale.

The country is divided into districts, one of which furnishes the wines, called of the Factory (Vinhos de Feitoria); the other, those of the Branch (de Ramo). The first are the better; they ferment a longer time in the vat, and when barrelled, one-twelfth part of strong brandy is added. These wines at first are very high coloured, firm, and too spirited, but when matured by keeping in cask and bottles, the brandy ceases to be tasted, their colour weakens, they become fine, delicate, and have spirit and flavour. They are compared with the best of the second rate of the French wines, and resemble those of Côte Rotie.

The wines of the Branch, amongst which some are very good, ferment a shorter time, and are less brandied, some even have none. These wines are reckoned inferior, and form the common drink of the country. The company of the factory is supposed to use them to fill up their casks.

Pezo da Regua, in the Upper Douro, produces the best wine of the factory.

Amongst those of the Branch some are very good, particularly those of Villarinho des Freires, Alvacoès do-Corgo, d'Hormida, Abassas, Guials, Galafura, Covelinhas, et Gorvaens.

The white wines are not of equal repute, and seldom exported.

TRA LOS MONTES.

There are many vineyards in this province, but rarely any exportation.

BEIRA.

The wine of this province is but of moderate quality; much is made near Coimbra. The plants always grow high. The environs of Lamego, twenty leagues south-west from Oporto, produce good wines; no brandy is intermixed.

ESTRAMADURA.

The vine much cultivated; very good wines.

Between Œiras et Carcavellos, vins de liqueur, red and white, the last most esteemed, called Lisbon wines in England, in Germany Portugal wines, in the country, wines of Carcavellos.

Setuval, excellent wines, particularly the white; two kinds, the one called dry, the other muscat.

Bucellas, six leagues from Lisbon; white wines, pure, they resemble those of Barsac but are stronger, they are preferred to the dry of Setuval for exportation: brandy is used.

Colares, the best common wines of the country.

Santarin, fifteen leagues from Lisbon, much common wine, sent to Lisbon.

SWITZERLAND:

The country does not produce sufficient wine for the inhabitants.

The canton of Schaffhausen produces good red wines, and in abundance.

Bâle; the wines, called de l'Hopital et le Cemetiere St. Jacques, are named in the country Le Sang des Suisses.

Berne; the best wines the Erlach.

Grisons, much good common wines. At Chiavenna, a wine, called Aromatique; a white wine from red grapes.

The Valteline; good red wines, keep remarkably well.

Neuchâtel; good wines, particularly near the Lake; the red equal to the third quality of Burgundy wine. The best are those of Boudry et Cortaillods, of a good colour and agreeable flavour. The canton of Vaud alone produces as much wine as all the rest. The best are those of Cully, et Désalés, between Lausanne and Vevay; next la Côte, from Lausanne to Coppet. They are dry like those of the Rhine, and keep well.

Geneva; its best vineyards are those of Frangy et Monnetier.

Le Valais; the best wines la Marque et Coquempin, district of Martigny, red and white; also some Malmsey.

Brigg; tolerable good wines.

St. Gall; good wines, particularly those of Bernang.

ITALY.

THE KINGDOM OF SARDINIA.

SAVOY.

RED WINES.

Class 1.

The most esteemed are in the environs of Montmélian et St. Alban, from the declivities of Mount Termino et St. Jean de la Porte.

They are of two kinds, the one, called Clairets, of a light colour, from being fermented only two or three days, the other higher coloured from a fermentation of eight days.

The principal vineyards in the district of St. Jean de Maurienne, are de Bonne-Nouvelle, d'Aiton, de Sain Jean, Saint Julien, St. Martin de la Porte, and particularly de Princens et d'Echaillon

Class 2.

The wines of la Chantagne, upon the sides of the Rhone, and from the valley la Rochette.

The Vins des Abymes, so called from des Abymes de Myans, are of low quality; and consumed at Chamberry.

The district of Annecy contains many vineyards, well kept, and producing good wine; the best at Designy, district of Rumilly.

WHITE WINES ET VINS DE LIQUEUR.

The best is found upon the slope, called Altesse, upon the Rhone, near Chamberry. The vine came from Cyprus.

Maretel, and some crus of St. Innocent, near Chamberry.

At Lasseraz, a wine from the Malmsey plant, good and frothing like Champagne.

NICE.

The principal vineyards are in the district of Puget-Thénieres, the only wine of repute is produced upon the vineyard Bellet; it is red, delicate and agreeable, and keeps well.

PIEMONT ET MONTFERRAT.

The wines of Piemont, are at the same time sharp and sweet, of a deep colour, the best are produced, both red and white, at Asti, near Marengo; in the vineyards of Chaumont, near Suza, and in those in the environs of Albe.

Gatinara Masserano, Biella, near Verceil, red wines, of good flavour and body.

VINS DE LIQUEUR.

The produce of the plants, called Passaretta, Malvasia Nebiolo, near Asti.

Barbara et Bonorde, near Casal.

The Nebiolo has the perfume of the raspberry.

Canelli, vins muscats.

Chambare, near Aoste, vins muscats.

Montferrat, department of Marengo, produces good wines; the white most esteemed, the red, deep coloured and intoxicating.

GENOA.

All its cantons produce good vins d'ordinaire et muscats. The best in the districts of Tor-tose, Novi, Voghera. Those in the canton of Genoa are of low quality, and change quickly. The most esteemed wines of Montenotte, come from Ronagemalda, near Acqui; from Roascio, Clavezana, and Castelleno, near Ceva; San Remo, Albisole, et Quegniano, near Savona.

ISLE OF SARDINIA.

The wines are so abundant, that in some years the fruit is left upon the vines for want of vessels.

Bosa, Alghier, Sassari, Ogliostra, produce good vins d'ordinaire et vins de liqueur, particularly the Vin Nasco; of an amber colour, and next the red wine called Giro.

Also the Malmsey, made at Sorso, Bosa, et Alghier.

Those called de Caunonao, de Monaca, et de Garnaccia, are highly esteemed, and exported to Holland, Denmark, and Russia.

BRESCIA.

The vineyards to the east of Brescia, in the country called La Riviere, produce good red wines.

Toscolano, a wine which will keep above twenty years, and esteemed a remedy for the fevers of the country.

Raffa, near Salo.

San Felice, Polpenesse, Padenghe, et Manesba.

The produce from I. Ronchi et la Santissima, near Brescia.

At Castiglione and Lonato, five leagues east of Brescia, is prepared the celebrated Vino Santo, of a golden colour, perfect after three or four years keeping. It is compared to Tokay, and superior to Cyprus.

VERONESE.

Vino Morto, so called from want of spirit.

Vino Santo is likewise made, and Vin Muscat.

The hills of Soave produce good red and Vino Santo.

MILAN.

Much and good vins d'ordinaire. The hills

Montedi-Brianza, produce light coloured, lively, and well flavoured wines.

Bellagio, upon the Lake Como, wines of a good colour and spirit.

The environs of Pavia much, but inferior, except a white wine, dry and mousseux, like Champagne.

MANTUA.

An agreeable wine, called Labusca, from the plant.

MODENA.

Sufficient wine for the inhabitants, generally good; the best at Ratrera and Sapolo.

PARMA ET PLACENTIA.

The best vineyards are those of Panocchia, Vigatto, Traversetolo, Casola, Avola, Azano, district of Parma.

Vallee-Irdone, Bottola, Ponté d'Allolio, Verdetto, Sala del Christo Creta, district of Plaisance.

Santo Pretasso, Frescale, Caselle, Lassurasco, Rugarlo, Castellina, Salso-Maggiore, Villa-Chiara, Claretto, Pazola, district of Borgo, San Domino. Vins de liqueur are also made in some of these vineyards, but unpleasant to strangers from their taste of honey.

TUSCANY.

The plain of Pisa contains some considerable vineyards, but the wines are weak; those of Buti are the best.

The department of the Arno good wines, particularly those of Chianti, Carmignano, Artiminio, Tizzana, Montale, Lamporecchio, Monte Spertoli, Poncino, Glogoli, Antella, les Roses; but the most celebrated is the Aleatico; it resembles the Tinto of Alicante in colour and perfume.

The department of Ombrone; good vins d'ordinaire; those of Sienna are praised.

The vins de liqueur are Monte Pulcino, Montalcino, Rimeneze, Pont-Ecole, et Santo Stefano; the first of these is the most esteemed.

ELBA.

Little red wine, but very good; the white inferior.

The hermitage of Monte-Serrato good wine. The environs of Rio, vins muscats.

The most extraordinary wines are the Vermut and Aleatico. The Vermut is a preparation of the best white wine, with wormwood and other aromatic herbs; it has body, bitterness, and an agreeable perfume, and is renowned in France for rousing the appetite when flagging, (if taken in the middle of dinner) to a second dinner.

The Aleatico is a red muscat wine, it is compared to the Monte Pulcino, and Monte Catini, when they have lost their inebriating odours.

ROMAN STATE.

It contains ten small provinces, all of which produce much and good vins d'ordinaire, vins communs, and some vins fins et de liqueur, which are esteemed in Italy, but do not bear exportation.

The plants producing the wines of high and low quality, grow promiscuously.

The vins de liqueur, called Moscatello, Aleatico, Vernaccia, Græco, et Vino Santo, are prepared from the plants which produce the common wines. Each proprietor has his own mode of making them, which causes a great dissimilarity.

Vins de Liqueur.

Albano, in the campagna of Rome, produces the best of these wines; the most esteemed next to the Lacryma Christi.

Monte Fiascone, upon a mountain near the Lake Bolsena, vin muscat, with a strong aromatic flavour, and inebriating.

Orvièto is surrounded by vineyards producing red wines much valued, which keep well and improve. Also white wine muscats, famous for their flavour and perfume, but they do not keep long.

Farnese, two leagues from Castro, vins muscats.

Terni, six leagues from Spoleto, carries on a great commerce in wines, and some of them very good.

Vins d'Ordinaire.

Viterbo, fourteen leagues from Rome, produces the best.

La Riccia, excellent wine, but in small quantity.

The vineyards near Rome, formerly in estimation, have lost much of their reputation.

Saint Marin, very delicate wines, which keep well in cool cellars.

Imola, in the Romana, eight leagues from Bologna, many white wines, which are boiled (cotti) in order to preserve them; those not boiled, are pleasant and mousse, like champagne.

The Ferrarese, vins d'ordinaire et communs; likewise vins de liqueur.

Spoleto, good vins d'ordinaire.
Genzano, vins d'ordinaire tolerably good.

NAPLES.

Mount Vesuvius famed for its wines; three kinds superior; Lacryma Christi is the best.

The quantity is very little, and seldom an article of commerce. It is liquoreux, fin, of a red colour, exquisite flavour, and fine perfume. Second, the vin muscat, amber coloured, delicate, and highly perfumed. Third, the vino Greco, so called from the plant being brought from Greece.

The hills around Lake Averno, and the mountains surrounding the village Sainte Marie de Capoua, are covered with vines producing red and white wines so near in qualities to the preceding, that they can scarce be distinguished.

Carigliano, vins muscats, with a flavour of Fennell.

Bari and Tarento, vins muscats et vins d'ordinaire.

Reggio; these wines vary according to the mode of their fabrication, the same grape producing wine like Burgundy, and vins de liqueur.

Les Champs Elysees, near Baia, good wines, red and white.

Gierace, thirteen leagues from Reggio, wine distinguished by uniting the lightness of French wine with the vino cotto.

Fundi, good vins d'ordinaire.

La Campagna, from which the Romans drew their best wines, has lost its reputation. A white wine mousseux is quoted, and is called Asprino, from a slight sharpness.

Caprea, Ischia, and Procida, islands in the Gulf of Naples, produce good wines; Caprea the best.

SICILY.

Mascoli, in the inferior region of Etna, furnishes the best wines of the province; they are red, which is a rarity in Sicily. The vineyards of La Sciarra, of Macchia, and San Giovanni, are quoted as being very good.

Catana; the best vins d'ordinaire in Sicily, strong, bear water well, and have a slight taste of pitch.

The environs of Taormina, and the vineyards of Faro, produce good red wines.

The district of Messina also furnishes much for exportation.

Syracuse is famous for its vins de liqueur, both red and white.

The Val di Mazara furnishes good wines. The vineyards of Mazara, Castel Veterano, Coriglione, Termini, and Girgenti, are reputed the best.

Sicily produces many others, as vins d'ordinaire et communs.

LIPARI ISLES.

Lipari abounds in wine. The Malmsey is most esteemed. The vins d'ordinaire are good.

Stromboli; the inhabitants draw their principal riches from the sale of their Malmsey wine.

GERMANY.

The wines of Germany have a peculiar character; they are drier than those of France, and have an acidity which is unpleasant to most persons at the first.

DEPARTMENT DE LE SARRE.

The wines from the vineyards of Braunenburg, Graach, Piesport, Wehlen, and Zeltingen, in the district of Treves, are reckoned the best of the Moselle.

Those from Rinsport, canton of Witlich, and Becherbach, canton of Grumbach, are in the second rank.

La Montagne Verte, district of Treves, good wines; those of Cusel and Valdrach, the same canton, are deemed a specific for the gravel.

DEPARTMENT RHIN ET MOSELLE.

Grapes, the Riessling and Kleinberger. The first is harsh, and requires hot seasons; but acquires, by keeping, a fine bouquet. The second ripens more easily, and gives more wine, but inferior.

RED WINES.

Altenahr, Dernau, Mayschof, Rech, Ahrweiler, Bruch, Creutzberg, Höhnningen, Kesseling, produce good wines.

WHITE WINES.

Walporzheim, upon the river Ahr, the most esteemed wines, which require eight or ten years keeping; they are called vins de l'Ahr.

Rutz, upon the Moselle, equal to the preceding, called vins de Moselle.

Steeg, near Bacherach; nearly the same quality, called vin du Rhin.

Montzingen, vins du Rhin, rather inferior.

2d Quality.

Bodendorf, near Bonn; Affenbourg Hamen, near Coblentz; Strang, Elzenburg, Alzenburg, near Neider-Breisig; Lutz, near Treiss; Maas and Huhn, near Nieder Heimbach; Stugerboeg, are celebrated as vins du Rhin.

Engehohe, Neiderborg, Leinenborn, Bangert, Rosenhech, as vins de la Nahe.

Rengsberg, a Tarbach, Wurzgarten, near Tarben; Amfuhr, at Burg; produce the best vins de Moselle, next to Rutz above mentioned.

MONT TONNERRE.

The wine forms the greatest branch of commerce in this district, under the name of vins du Rhin; a great quantity is sent to England.

The price of the new wine varies from one franc fifty cents, to five francs fifty cents the maas or double litre, (two bottles English) in the best vineyards; in the inferior vineyards, sometimes as low as three francs the hecto-litre. As the wine will keep even to a hundred years, the price increases to twelve and even to twenty-four francs per bottle.

RED WINES.

Few; the vineyards of Keinigsbach some of the best.

WHITE WINES.

Deidesheim, the best wine of the palatinate. The merchants of Frankfort, in good seasons, purchase the whole produce.

The vineyards of Roth, Koenigsbach, Hocheim, Weinheim, Forst, Ungstein, district of Spire; of Neirenstein, Laubenheim, Bodenheim, Oppenheim, Nackenheim, and Gaubischeim, in the district of Mayence, give the first rate wines.

The wines called Scharlach, upon the Mount Scharlachberg; the Liebfrauenmitch, made at Worms; the Kæsterich, at Mayence, fetch high prices.

There are many vins d'ordinaire et communs.

BERG.

Rudesheim, six leagues from Mentz, produces the best wines of Germany, having more body, strength, and bouquet, than those on the left bank; and sold from two to four florins the bottle when old.

The ancient Chateau of Johannisberg, produces wines equal in quality. The best vines growing upon the subterraneous vaults of the castle, were near being blown up by General Hoche, but saved by Mareschal Le Febvre.

Lints, good red wine, called Blischert.

HESSE DARMSTADT.

Wisbaden, good wines, particularly at Schierstein and Narden. Epstein, six leagues from Frankfort, similar wines.

Neuwied, red wines called Blischert.

Philippsech, a Chateau upon a mountain, good wines.

Reichenberg and Wildenstein, county of Erbach; the quality like that of the vins du Rhin.

The duchies of Nassau Weslburg and Nassau Usingen, also good wines.

BADE.

The signiory of Badenweiler, four leagues from Friburg, produces the most famous wines, particularly those of Fènerbach and Laufen.

Kleingenberg, noted for its good wines.

Heidelberg, famous for its great ton,* out of which strangers drink in a fine cup, called Wiederkom, wine called 120 years old. It is, however, well known, that the quantity is replaced every year.

The environs of Bade abound with good wines, particularly the vineyards of Cretzingen, Berghausen, and Stellingen.

Meresbourg and Uberlingen, near the Lake Constance, and the isle of Reichenau, in the middle of the Lake, good wines.

WURTEMBURG.

The plants are taken from the best vineyards of France, the Valteline, Hungary, and even from Cyprus and Persia, which grow well.

The wines are known in England under the name of vins du Necker.

^{* 240} fuder, 2,192 hectolitres, are its contents...

The best are produced in the vineyards of Bessingheim, near Lauffen; colour light red, spirituous, d'un fort bon goût, de la sève, et un bouquet tres suave.

BAVARIA.

Not favourable to the vine; the best vineyards are at Bering feld and Zeil; Schweinfurt upon the Maine, is surrounded with vineyards.

Lindau and Ravenspurg produce much.

Wangen, red wines, esteemed in the country.

WURTZBURG.

The most famous wines are those of Leist and Stein. The first are produced near the fortress, upon the Mount St. Nicholas; the second upon a mountain called Stein. Part of the vineyard belongs to the hospital of Wurtz-burg, who sell its produce very dear, in sealed bottles, under the name of Vin du Saint Esprit.

Laharpe, adjoining the Stein, wines inferior, but sold under the same name.

Escherndorf and Schalhsburg, wines of the same kind.

In Franconia, vins de Paille, like those of Alsace, but more aromatic.

FRANKFORT.

The best vineyards near Hanau; Bischof-sheim most famous.

Upon the Rock of Trieffenstein, near Aschaffenbourg, a vin de liqueur, called Calmus, is made, much esteemed and like the sweet wines of Hungary.

SAXONY,

More famous for its quantity than its quality of wines.

Meissen, six leagues from Dresden, tolerably good wines.

Naumbourg, surrounded by vineyards producing vins Agrelets, similar to the inferior wines of Burgundy.

Basse Lusace, vineyards producing better wines than could be expected under the 52nd degree of latitude. Those of Guben are the best in Saxony.

RUSSIA.

The northern provinces are unfavourable to the vine; it is cultivated only in a few provinces to any degree of importance.

CAUCASUS.

The first vines from Persia were planted at Astracan, 1613. Twenty different sorts are now cultivated from the best in Europe. In October, the vine is cut, and the (ceps) branches are covered with earth and hay for the winter. To increase the size of the fruits in the spring and summer, daily waterings are used, which give them a superb appearance, but weaken their juice for wine.

Wines equal and similar to those of the Moselle are produced near Astracan; likewise some resembling the Lacryma Christi and the vins mousseux of Champagne.

At Kisliar, an isle in the Caspian sea, good wines, but soon spoiled. On the borders of the Kuma likewise.

The Tavlinstes, or Tartars of the mountains, bring down to Kisliar wines, and to increase their inebriating powers, add the heads of poppies during the fermentation.

GEORGIA

Has very good wines from vines growing wild. The principal place of commerce is Teflis.

CRIMEA.

The culture of the vine was known in the time of Strabo: with care, sufficient wine might be produced to supply half Russia. Every variety of wine can be produced.

Near Kaffa, wines compared to Champagne. Sudagh, wines with the sweetness of the Hungarian, and like the wine of Roquemaure, in France; but they will not keep above two years.

The valley of Koos, good wines; Bostaandschi-Oglu is the most esteemed vineyard.

DON.

The Cosaques are much given to the culture of the vine, and have brought it to great perfection. The white wine of Rasdorof and Zymlansk like the red Italian, sell dear at Moscow.

Tangarog exports much wine, but disagreeable.

SARATOF.

Sarepta, between the Don and Wolga, produces excellent wines, both white and red.

The inhabitants of Kamschatka intoxicate themselves with the juice of a champignon.

In the colony of Galka, a German has brought the vine to great perfection.

THE EMPIRE OF AUSTRIA.

BOHEMIA.

The principal vineyards are in the circle of Leutmeritz and Bunzlaw; 1st. The red wines called Podskalski, which must be drunken the first year; 2nd. Those of Melnick, in the circle of Bunzlaw. The plants were taken from Burgundy.

MORAVIA.

Poleschowitz, and some cantons of Brunn, produce the best.

AUSTRIA.

The best vineyards are upon Mount Calenberg. In the quarter called Steinfeld, the most esteemed wines grow upon the lands of Hoeflein, Unter Kutzendorf, Kloster Newbourg, Kaplen-burg, Misdorf, Saltnendorf, &c. and in the environs of Lichtenstein.

These wines are stronger than those of the Rhin, have a greenish colour, and are soon drinkable. Those which come from the south of Vienna, called Giberwein, (mountain) keep for thirty years. Those from the north, called vins de Danube, keep but for a short time.

Spitz, a chateau, produces good wine.

STYRIA, CARINTHIA, CARNIOLA, AND ISTRIA.

The principal vineyards are in lower Styria; the Luttenberg wines rank amongst the first of Germany. Next, those of Radkersbourg, Arnfels, Windisch, Gonowitz, Kerchenberg. The wines of Sansal, Leitschach, Pickerne, Stadlberg, Pulsgau, Sauritsch, Raen, Rast, Peittersburg, and Wiesel, are very pleasant.

Carinthia produces good wines, particularly in the environs of Moettling, Freyenthurn, Weinitz, Tscheremble, Marzamin, and Wipach. They resemble the good wines of Italy.

Istria, much good wine. In the environs of Prosecco, Antignana, Saint Serf, and Trieste, both red and white, sparkling, well flavoured, and wholesome. Berschetz, upon a rock on the borders of the Adriatic, a red wine, very sweet and deep coloured.

Vins de liqueur are also made; the best are those called St. Patronio, Picoli, Petit Tokai, St. Thomas, &c.; at Capo d'Istria, Pirano, Citta Nova.

At Pola, a white wine much esteemed.

Frioul, much good wine. The wine of Corregliano is much sought after at Venise. Vins de liqueur are also made; amongst which one called Picoli, equal to the Vino Santo.

Good wines are produced in the Tyrol and Trentine, but not exported.

HUNGARY.

Sixty varieties of grapes are to be found in this country, amongst which are those called Formint and Hars-levilii, from which is drawn the famous liquor called essence of Tokay.

Tokay is in high Hungary, and in the county of Zemplin.* Upon the Mount Tokay are produced the famous wines; the side on which the vines grow is about 9000 paces long; but the part called Mezes-Malé, (Crayon de Miel) is not more than 600. This vineyard produces the best; those of Tokay and Mada are nearly equal to it. Those of Tallya have more body; of Zombor, more strength. The wines of Szeghi and Tsadany have a more aromatic perfume. Those of Tolesva and Erdo Benye keep better, and bear exporting.

^{*} In the county of Zemplin are 36 different kinds of wines, according to Zirmayde Zirma; Notitia Topographica comitatús Zempliniensis.

The gathering does not take place until November, when the frosty nights appear, and the grapes become brown and nearly dry. The best are chosen, and all rotten or unripe ones being carefully picked out, are placed upon tables hollowed in the middle, with an orifice, through which the juice runs after a very slight pressure, into earthen jars, and is called the essence. The mare is then moistened with juice from grapes not dried, and usually pressed in bags trodden under foot. This produces the Mazlas or second wine. This is mixed with the first in various proportions.

The wine, called Ausbruch, contains 61 parts of essence, 84 of wine.

That called Maszlas, 169 of wine, 61 of essence.

The wine of the cru, called Mezes Malé, is not sold, but destined to the Emperor and a few Magnats, who have vines upon it. What is sold as Tokay, even in Hungary, is only that called Ausbruch and Maszlas; which is prepared upon all vineyards.

Gyængyæsch, at the foot of Mount Matra, red and white wines, much esteemed.

Edenbourg possesses the best vineyards of Lower Hungary; particularly at Rust.

Menes, county of Arad, red wines, with much spirit and sweetness, also the best Ausbruch, next to that of Tokay.

Also like wines at Glodova, Menos, Gyordk, Paulis.

Erlau, excellent red and white wines, and Ausbruch.

Presbourg, many good wines. The St. George resembling the wine of Burgundy. Modeon, Katschdorf, Grunau, Obernusdorf, produce excellent wines.

Neustoed, Zschelhæ, Ssætæsch, Kosrad, Etsey, Jobbagy; Wersitz, in the Bannat, and the mountains near Buda, produce wines similar to those of Burgundy and Bordeaux.

The counties of Zips, Arva, and Liplaw, and the Bannat of Temeswar, have considerable vineyards. The red wines of Weisskirchen are particularly mentioned.

SCLAVONIA.

Its vineyards were planted by the Emperor Probus, A.D. 276. The best are in the county of Syrmia and Posega. They are red and white, with an agreeable flavour and much spirit.

The environs of Carlowitz, Peterwaradion, and Semlin, furnish much wine. Those of Carlowitz are particularly valued; they are red.

CROATIA.

Its wines are chiefly white. The most esteemed are in the vineyards of Buokwetz, Vinitza, and Tæplitz. Red wines are made at Mosyvina, like those of Burgundy.

TRANSYLVANIA.

Many vineyards. The best wines are made in the environs of Birthalmen. The Ausbruch is also made, resembling the Tokay.

VENETIAN DALMATIA.

The wines are good but not of a quality to induce exportation. A wine, called Maras-china, is made at Sebenico; much praised.

Zara exports an excellent liqueur, called Maraschino di Zara, made from cherries.

Many isles upon the coast, as Cherso, Veglia, and Lesina, commerce in wines.

MOLDAVIA.

Its principal vineyards are between Cotnar and the Danube. The wine of Cotnar is of a green colour, which becomes deeper by age; it is nearly as strong as brandy, without being very intoxicating, ranks among the best wines, and preferred by some to Tokay. Moldavia sends much wine to Russia.

WALLACHIA.

The vine is much cultivated. The wines are light, but well flavoured and wholesome. Those of Piatra are the best, rivalling the Tokay.

RAGUSA.

The sloping hills are covered with vines, producing good wines. Those in the environs of Gravosa are the best.

BULGARIA.

Wines of poor quality, except that from the rocks near Prawadi.

ROMANIA.

Between Philippolis and Adrianople, the slopes produce good wines, and in abundance.

MACEDONIA.

The monks of Mount Athos cultivate many vineyards. The environs of Janina abound in wines.

ALBANIA

Produces good wines, the best upon the land of Valona.

LIVADIA.

Its best vineyards are in the environs of Lepanto, Cheronea, Megara, and the slope of the mountain Polioguna.

MOREA.

This province is covered with vines. The wines most valued are those of Sparta (Misitra) and Napoli di Malvasia, called vins de Malvoisie, or Malmsey. These vineyards have given the name to all the wines so called in the different countries, by supplying the plant.

IONIAN ISLES.

CORFU.

Wines very spirited, but not much esteemed. A liquor, called Rosolio, is made from the dry raisins.

ST. MAURA

Is fertile in good wines.

CEPHALONIA

Produces good red wines of ordinary quality, and a white muscat, much valued.

ZANTE.

At Zante, a liquor called Jenorodi is made, resembling Tokay: it surpasses all the other vins de liqueur in the Levant.

CERIGO.

Few vines, but producing an excellent red wine.

CANDIA.

Its wines retain their ancient reputation. The Caloyers (Greek Monks), make a vin de liqueur, equal in perfume and delicacy to any known wine. The Malmsey, at the foot of Mount Ida, is also esteemed.

The environs of Kissanos produce good wines, Clairets.

The province of Rethymo furnishes a great quantity. The Jews of Rethymo make an excellent white wine, called Vin de Loi.

RHODES.

Its wines maintain their ancient repute.

SAMOS.

The ancients found every thing good but the wine, the contrary is now the case; its Muscat wines are equal to those of Cyprus.

SCIO.

The ancients highly valued its wines. They are still good and of two sorts; the one is made by mixing the black grape with a certain white one; the other, called Nectar, is made by using a grape somewhat styptic, which makes it difficult to swallow. Whether the taste of strangers has changed, or the wine requires a passage over sea, it does not please.

The ancients drew their Nectar from the vineyards of Mesta.

TENEDOS.

The vine makes the riches of the Isle. The raisins are so saccharine that a certain quantity of water is added to the must to hasten the fermentation: notwithstanding this the vins d'ordinaire keep well in bottles, and are like the Bordeaux wines. The Muscats, red and white, yield to none; they are unmixed with water.

SANTORIN.

Its wines, when new, are sulphurous, very sweet and agreeable, and improve by age. The Vino Santo is particularly esteemed. The ordinary wines are sweet, and quickly become acid.

MICONI.

Its wines have a high character, but on account of the water used for increasing the quantity, not much sought for.

CYPRUS.

The vineyard, called La Commanderie, from belonging to the Knights of Malta, produces the best wine. It is very red when new, at the end of the year it becomes yellow, and gets lighter by age. It surpasses all the Muscats of the Archipelago.

Next, a Muscat, surpassing all the same kind in Italy, it is white, but increases in colour and thickness by age; after sixty years it is as thick as jalep.

The other wines are very good. The Greeks in Cyprus, at the birth of a child, bury a jar of wine in the earth, which they dig up at the marriage of the same child: this wine is called Vin de Famille; it is exquisite. The surplus, which is not used, is sold to the Europeans.

The wine is carried in pitched skins, which give a disagreeable flavour at first, but it ceases by keeping.

ANATOLIA.

Isruc, thirty leagues from Constantinople, has many vines.

Trebizonde, exports wines to Russia.

SYRIA.

Produces wines, red and white, like those of Bordeaux.

In the canton, called le Kesroan, and upon Mount Libanus, are found the best wines. The must is generally boiled, except the vin d'or.

Palestine was formerly famous for its wines; the environs of Jerusalem still produce good white.

ARABIA.

The vine is cultivated, although the use of wine is forbidden; but it is to be found amongst the Christians and Jews.

At Sana, the Jews make good wine.

PERSIA.

Shamaki, capital of Shirvan, many vineyards, producing wines like the good Bordeaux, in quality and perfume.

Mingrelia; the vines are of an enormous size, very productive, and the produce good *.

Tauris has sixty-five different species of vines producing much wine.

Ispahan, famous for its wines, particularly the white.

Schiraz, is surrounded by vineyards. The celebrated wine is made from a grape, called Damas. Its colour is red, with much body and spirit, and high flavour. It seldom pleases at first, and even tastes harsh, but when drunken several times is preferred to all others. It keeps only three years, bears the voyage well; it is not intoxicating. The manner of fabrication is very simple; the grapes are placed in a vat pierced with holes, then trodden upon, and the juice runs into varnished jars, and remains therein to ferment, they are placed then in cellars. In order to export the wine it is put into bottles of unequal sizes, coated with platted straw, and stopped with cotton and wax. At Schiraz, another wine is made, with the must of grapes, suffered to hang long on the trees, it is liquoreux, sweet, spiritueux, parfume, and is compared with Malmsey Madeira.

^{*} Both red and white, the bunches weigh from twelve to thirty pounds.

In the vally of Cachemere, are wines like those of Madeira.

The Schiraz wine in England is white; but the accounts of ancient travellers, and lately Kotzebue, in the Embassy of General Yermaloff, agree with the above description; he compares it to a light Port wine. It was sent by the King of Persia as a present, and the Embassy could never purchase the same. He supposes the wine so called in Europe to be from Ispahan.

INDOSTAN.

The vine is little cultivated; at Lahor, wine is made, much esteemed.

CHINA.

The vine has undergone various revolutions, sometimes it has been grubbed up to make room for grain, so that the inhabitants have substituted in general other drinks, and forgotten the use of wine, of which a small quantity is made. The name of wine is given to tea and fermented liquors, made from a particular kind of rice. They have likewise a wine unknown in Europe, called Vin d'Agneau, made from the flesh of lamb; very strong, but with a most disagreeable taste. A spirit is likewise made from mutton fermented, which, in spite of its bad flavour, appears at the Emperor's table.

EGYPT,

Once famous for its Mareotic wine, has ceased to be so, and the vine is only cultivated for its shade and raisins.

CAPE OF GOOD HOPE.

The small vineyard of Constance, divided into two parts, called the high and low, produces the famous wine. The plant came from Schiraz, in Persia; at the Cape it is called Henapop. Its produce is about 900 hectolitres; it is therefore difficult to procure the genuine. The Muscat wines are very good. The best are from the vineyards Becher and Herdric. The proprietors, by certain preparations, render them so like the real Vin de Constance, as to impose even upon the inhabitants.

The third kind of wine at the Cape is called Vin de Pierre, resembling the Vins de Grave, from the cantons of Perle, Dragestein, and Stellenbosch. Also red wines, called Rota, from their resemblance to that wine.

ISLES DE FRANCE ET DE BOURBON.

Some good wines, principally white, are to be found in both these islands.

CANARY ISLANDS.

Canary; the vine flourishes here, and furnishes wines of the Malmsey kind, but not so well bodied as those of Teneriffe.

TENERIFFE.

The Malmsey wine, produce of the plant from the Morea, though small in quantity, is highly esteemed. The other wine, called Vidonia, is made with raisins before they are ripe, whence their harshness and dryness. They improve much by age, and become similar to Madeira wine, particularly when imported into warm climates.

GOMERE,

Wines in abundance; white, limpid as water, little spirit, sharp; but after two years gain a flavour as agreeable as the best wines of Madeira.

PALMA.

Good wine, particularly in the east; they differ in flavour from those of Teneriffe. The dry wines are yellow, and of little strength. The Malmsey have less body than those of Teneriffe, but after three or four years they acquire a bouquet resembling a ripe pine apple.

MADEIRA.

The wines upon the south side are excellent; those from the north are of inferior quality.

The grapes from which the wines are made, are

White;

- 1. The Malmsey, brought from the isle of Candia.
- 2. The Vidogne, which produces the dry wine.
- 3. The Bagoual, the wine of which is sweeter, but less spirited than the Vidogne.
- 4. The Cerciâl, called Esganuação; the plant is scarce.
 - 5. The Muscatel.

Red;

- 1. Le Batard, from which white wines only are made.
 - 2. La Tinta, ou Negramole.

VINS DE LIQUEUR.

The Malmsey ranks the first; it keeps well and improves. During the late wars, France having ceased to take this wine, many proprietors have grubbed up the plant. In the making, the wine of the first pressure is kept separate, and called Pingo; that of the subsequent is called Mosto. By some the whole is mixed together; others keep them separate, to obtain wine of different qualities.

The wine from the grape called Muscatel is excellent, but not to be met with in commerce.

DRY WHITE.

This wine is from several plants, but the principal the Vidogne, and its flavour in proportion to the quantity of this grape. It is a wine drier than the white Burgundy, but not so sharp as the Rhenish.

Some proprietors make wine from the Cerciâl alone. This wine is very fine and delicate, of a light bitterness; has a bouquet perceptible upon opening the bottle, and sparkles in the glass.

RED WINE.

The wine made from the Tinta is very generous, perfumed, and agreeable; a strong astringent, and used against the dysentery.

The vineyard called La Fagaa-do-Pereira, is esteemed the best.

The others in repute are, La Calheta, Arco de Calheta, Ponta-do-Sol, Ribeira, Brava, Cama de Lobos, Esbreto de Cama de Lebos, Santo Martinhoo, Santo Antonio.

Within these twenty years, large stoves have been erected, in which a high degree of temperature has been kept. The pipes of wine placed therein, after a few months gain the same colour and perfume as from a voyage or six years keeping; but the quality is not so good as the vins de Roda or of voyage.

Another method is to plunge the bottles, well corked, in a trench filled with hot horsedung, and in six months or a year the maturity, &c. of a voyage is gained.

AZORES.

ST. MICHAEL

Produces about 5000 pipes.

TERCERE,

Good wines.

PICO,

Much wine; the two best are, the Vino Passado, a kind of Malmsey, and the Vino Seco.

FAYAL.

Its wines are reputed very good.

ST. GEORGE'S.

Some of its wines are reckoned superior to those of the other islands, but in a small quantity.

AMERICA.

The accounts obtained of the character and qualities of the wines in this Continent, are not sufficient to assign the rank to which they belong. However, the wines of Passo del Norte, in New Mexico, and of Paras, in New Biscay, may be ranked in the second class; those of St. Louis de la Paz de Zelaya in the third.

The wines of San Diego, San Juan, Capristano, San Gabriel, San Buonaventura, Santa-Barba, San Luis-Obispo, Santa-Clara, and San Jose, in California. The numerous vineyards in Lima, de la Plata, and Chili, in South America, have all the shades of the third, fourth, and fifth class.

The red wines from New Madrid, in Louisiana, and Philadelphia, in the United States, are to be reckoned in the fifth class.

CLASSIFICATION GENÉRALÉ DES VINS ETRANGERS.

§ I. VINS DE LIQUEUR ROUGES ET BLANCS.

Première Classe *.

L'Italie; the red wine Lacryma Christing, kingdom of Naples; and the red Muscats, at Syracuse, in Sicily.

La Haut-Hongrie, le vin dit de Tokai, à Tarczal, Tokay, Szeghi, Zadany, Tolesva, et Erdo-Benye, dans le comté de Zemplin.

La Turquie-d'Europe et d'Asie, les vins verts de Cotnar en Moldavie, et ceux de la Commanderie, dans l'île de Chypre.

L'Afrique méridionale, les vins rouges et blancs des deux clos de Constance, au cap de Bonne-Espérance.

^{*} The genuine wines of this first class are scarcely to be purchased, being kept for the Sovereigns and certain grandees.

Deuxième Classe.

Espagne. Alicante, dans le royaume de Valence; Rota, Paxarète, Xérès, Zalogne et Carlon, en Andalusie; Malaga, Velez-Malaga, royaume de Grenade; Fuencaral, dans la Nouvelle-Castille; les vins dits de Grenache, à Sabayes et à Carignena, dans l'Arragon; et les vins de Pollenzia, dans l'île de Majorque.

Portugal. Sétuval, Carcavellos et Bucellas, dans l'Estramadure.

Italie. Les environs du Vésuve et du lac Averne, dans le royaume de Naples; Syracuse, en Sicile; les îles Lipari; Albano et Monte-Fiascone, dans l'Etat-Romain; Monte-Pulciano, Montalcino, Riminese, Ponte-Cole et Santo-Stephano, en Toscane: et le vin nommé aleatico.

Empire d'Autriche. Plusieurs vignobles du comté de Zemplin.

Turquie d'Europe et d'Asie. Piatra, en Valachie; Malvasia, en Morée; la Canée et le mont Ida, dans l'île de Candie; les îles de Scio, de Ténédos et de Santorin, dans l'Archipel; celle de Chypre; le Kesroan, en Syrie.

Perse. Schiraz.

Afrique. Les vins muscats du Cap, et ceux dits rota, dans le district de Stellenbosch.

Iles de l'Ocean Atlantique. Madère, Ténériffe, Canarie, Gomère et Palme.

Amérique. Passo-del-Norte, dans le Nouveau-Mexique, at Paras, dans la Nouvelle-Biscaye.

Troisième Classe.

Espagne. Les vins blancs d'Alicante et ceux de seconde qualité des vignobles cités.

Suisse. Le vin aromatique de Chiavenne, canton des Grisons, et celui dit de Malvoisie, dans le Valais.

Italie. Les environs de Chambéry, en Savoie; Asti, Canelli et Chambave, en Piémont; Chianti, Carmignano, Artiminio, Tizanna, Montale, Lamporechio, Monte-Spertoli, Poncino, Antella et les Roses, en Toscane; Sorso, Bosa et Alghier, dans l'île de Sardaigne; Monte-Serrato et Rio, dans l'île d'Elbe; Brescia, en Lombardie; Orvieto, Castro, Viterbe, La Riccia, Bologne et plusieurs autres de l'Etat-Romain; Carigliano, Bari, Tarente, Gierace, etc. etc. royaume de Naples; et ceux de seconde qualité de la Sicile et des îles Lipari.

Allemagne. Les vins dits de paille, dans le grand-duché de Wurtzbourg, et celui nomme calmus, à Aschaffenbourg.

Empire d'Autriche. Ausaig, en Bohème; Conegliano, dans le Frioul; Karlowitz et le comté de Syrmie, dans l'Esclavonie; et Sébenico, dans la Dalmatie.

Turquie d'Europe et d'Aise. Les îles de Candie, Samos, Sainte-Maure, Céphalonie, Rhodes, etc.

Asie. La vallée de Cachemire, dans l'empire des Afghans, et plusieurs vignobles de la Perse.

Amérique. Saint-Louis-de-la-Paz et Zelaya, dans le Méchoacan.

§ II. VINS MOELLEUX ET VINS SECS, ROUGES ET BLANCS.

Deuxième* Classe.

Espagne. Les vins rouges d'Olivencia, dans l'Estramadure, les vins blancs secs de Xérès et de Paxarète.

Portugal. Pezo-da-Regua et plusieurs au-

^{*} The French author allows no first class to the Vins Etrangers, as being inferior in the necessary qualities to those of that class in France.

tres vignobles de la province d'Entre-Douro-e-Minho, pour les vins rouges de Porto; Sétuval et Bucellas, dans l'Estramadura, pour les vins blancs secs.

Allemagne. Les vins secs de Braunenberg, Graach, Wehlen et Zeltingen, département dé de la Sarre; Roth, Kænigsbach, Hocheim, Weinheim, Forst, Ungstein, Nierstein, Laubenheim, Bodenheim, Oppenheim, Nackenheim et Gaubischeim, département du Mont-Tonnerre; Wisbaden, Schierstein et Narden, grand duché de Hesse-Darmstadt.

Empire d'Autriche. Rust, dans le comté d'Ædenbourg; Ménes, dans le comté d'Arad, quelques autres vignobles de la Basse-Hongrie; Karlowitz, en Esclavonie, et Luttenberg en Styrie.

Troisième Classe.

L'Espagne. Valdepenas dans la Nouvelle-Castille, et en blanc, le vin rancio de Peralta et de Tudela, dans la Navarre; les vins secs de Montilla, dans l'Andalousie, et ceux de Malaga, dans le royaume de Grenade. Portugal. Les vins blancs de Lamalonga, dans la provence de Tra-los-Montes.

Suisse. Les vins rouges de Cortaillods et de Boudry, principauté de Neuchâtel.

Italie. Montmélian, Saint-Alban, Saint-Jean-de-la-Porte, Bonne-Nouvelle, Aiton, Saint-Jean, Saint-Julien, Sain-Martin-de-la-Porte, Prinssens et Echalion, en Savoie; Bellet, comté de Nice; plusieurs crus du Frioul, du Vicentin et du duché de Milan; Viterbe, la Riccia, Saint-Marin et Bologne, dans l'Etat-Romain; quelques vignobles du royaume de Naples; Mascoli, Catane, Taormina, Milazzo, Mazara, Castel-Veterano, Coriglione, Termini et Girgenti, en Sicile.

Allemagne. Piesport, Rinsport, Bech-er-bach, Walporzheim, Rutz, Steeg, Monzingen, le mont Scharlachberg, Liebfrauenmilch, Worms, Kæsterich et Mayence, sur la rive gauche du rhin; Klingenberg, Heidelberg, Cretzingen, Berghausen et Sellingen, grand duché de Bade; Epstein, duché de Hesse-Darmstadt; Bessigheim, royaume de Wurtemberg, et Laharpe, grand duché du Wurtzbourg.

Russie. Les vins blancs de Rasdorof, les rouges de Zymslansk, dans le pays des Cosaques du Don, et les meilleurs de la Géorgie.

Empire d'Autriche. Plusieurs crus de la Bohème, Moettling, Freyenthurn, Weinitz, Tschernemble, Marzamin, Wipach, en Carniole; Saint-Georges, Modern, Katschdorf, Grunau, Ober-Nusdorf, Neustoed, Zschelhoe, Ssoetoesch, Kosd-Rad, Etsey, Jobbagy, Devetscher, Wesprin, Wersitz et Bude, dans la basse-Hongrie; Proseco, Antignana, Saint-Serf et Trieste, en Istrie; le comté de Posega et Karlowitz, en Esclavonie; Bukowetz, Vinitza, Tæplitz et Mosivina, en Croatie.

Perse. Shamaki, dans la province de Shirvan.

Afrique meridionale. Les vins blancs secs du cap Saint-Bernard, île Bourbon.

Amérique. San-Diégo, San-Juan, San-Gabriel, San-Buonaventura, Santa-Barba, San-Luis-Obispo, Santa-Clara et San-Jose, en Californie; les nombreux vignobles des royaumes de Lima, de la Plata et du Chili, dans l'Amérique méridionale.

Quatrième Classe.

Espagne. Les vins rouges de Cardone, en Catalogne; de Tierra-del-Campo, Rioxa, Miranda-de-Ebro et Cabezon, dans la Vieille-Castille; de Manzanarès, d'Albacète et de Ciudad-Real, dans la Nouvelle-Castille; les meilleurs de Bénicarlo et de Vinaroz, dans le royaume de Valence; ceux de Moguer et de Cordoue, dans l'Andalusie; et ceux d'Alayor, dans l'île de Minorque; les vins blancs secs de Mansanilla, en Andalousie.

Portugal. Villarenho-des-Freires, Alvacoes-do-Corgo, Hormida, Abassas, Guiaès, Gala-fura, Convelinhas, Goivaës et plusieurs autres vignobles de la province d'Entre-Douro-e-Minho; quelques crus de celle de Tra-los-Montes; Colares et Santarem, en Estramadure; Tavira, etc. dans les Algarves.

Suisse. Erlach, canton de Bern; Cully et Roll, canton de Vaud; Frangy et Monnetier, dans celui, de Genève; Bernang, canton de Saint-Gall, et quelques crus de la Valteline.

Italie. La plus grande partie des vins que produisent les vignobles que j'ai cités dans la troisième classe, ne doivent entrer que dans celle-ci.

Allemagne. La montagne Verte, Cassel, Valdrach, Bodendorf, Affenbourg, Hamen, Strang, Elzenberg, Alsenberg, Lutz, Maas, Huhn, Stugerboeg, Engehoé, Niederberg, Leinenborn, Bungert, Rosenheck, Rengsberg Wurzgarten, Amfuhr et Wittengen, sur la rive gauche du Rhin; Mersebourg et Uberlingen, grand duché de Bade; Béringfeld et Zeil, e Bavière; Escherndorf et Schalksberg, grandduché de Wurtzbourg, et Bitschofsheim, dans le comté de Hanau.

Russie. Les Meilleurs crus de la Crimée, du gouvernement d'Astracan et de celui de Saratof.

Empire d'Autriche. Une partie des vignobles cités dans la troisième classe; Melnik, en Bohème; Poleschowitz et Brunn, en Moravie; le mont Calemberg et les crus situés au dessus de la forêt de Vienne, en Autriche; Radkersbourg et plusieurs autres crus de la Styrie; Proseco, Antignana, Saint-Serf et Trieste, dans l'Istrie Turquie d'Europe et d'Asie. Les vins rouges de Cérigo et de Ténédos, dans l'Archipel, et les vins blancs de Jerusalem, en Palestine.

Asie. Les vins blancs d'Ispahan et de la Mingrelie, en Perse, et ceux de Lahor, dans l'Indoustan.

Afrique méridionale. Les vins blancs des cantons de la Perle, de Dragenstein et de Stellenbosch, au cap de Bonne-Espérance, et les vins blancs secs du quartier Saint-Paul, l'île-Bourbon.

Iles de l'Océan Atlantique. Les vins rouges de Madère; ceux dits vidogne, à Ténériffe; les vins secs de Palme et les meilleurs des Açores.

Amerique. Les vignobles nommés dans la précédente classe, et plusieurs de ceux des royaumes de Lima, de la Plata et du Chili.

MEASURES.

FRENCH.

LAND.

Are, a square decametre; a decametre is about 30 feet.

Hectare, 100 ares, about 21 acres English measure.

LIQUIDS.

Litre, is the cube of the decimetre, 1 pint and the decimetre, 1 pint and a paris pint; about one quart English wine measure.

Hectolitre, 100 litres; about 261 gallons English.

BURGUNDY.

La Queue, 60 veltes, 456 litres. Feuillette, 15 veltes, 114 litres.

HERMITAGE.

La Barrique, 120 litres.

BORDEAUX.

Le Tonneau, 4 barriques; Le Barrique, 108 pots de vin, 30 veltes, 128 litres, 24 gallons English.

SPAIN.

Moyo, 65 gallons English.

Aroba, 15 litres 14/100.

La Botta, 28 arobas.

12 Arobas, 1 cargas.

4 Cargas, 1 pipe, 137 English gallons at Barcelona.

ALICANT.

Tonnelada, 2 pipes, 100 cantaros.
1 Cantaro, 3 English wine gallons.

PORTUGAL.

1 Pipe, 31 almudas, 140 English wine gallons.

NAPLES.

The Pipe, 32 veltes, 132 English gallons.

GERMANY.

The Auhm, which differs much :-

ANTWERP.

Auhm or Ohm; 50 stoops, 100 pots, 137 litres.
42 English wine gallons.

CASSEL. Auhm 43 gallons. HEIDELBERG. Auhm 29 gallons. COLOGNE. Auhm 41 gallons. AIX-LA-CHAPELLE. Auhm 35 gallons. UPPER HUNGARY. The Eimer $19\frac{3}{4}$ wine gallons. LOWER HUNGARY. Eimer $14\frac{3}{4}$ gallons. LEIPSIC. Eimer 20 gallons. DRESDEN. Eimer 18 gallons. All the wine measures in Germany differ in the different States.

CUSTOMS AND EXCISE WINE TABLE.

DUTY ON IMPORTATION.
	BRITISH SHIPS.							FOREIGN SRIPS.
anotten 84	PerTun of 252 Galls.			PerGallon			Per Bottle glass in- cluded.	Tun.			Gallon.
French. { Customs	66 78	3 4	0	0	56	3 21/2	0 30 per doz.	70 78	7 4	0	0	56	7 21/4
	144	7	6	0	11	51/2	1 16 0	148	11	6	0	11	914
Rhenish, German, Hungarian. Customs	66 52	3 10	9	0	54	3 2		70 52	7 10	0	0	5 4	7 2
	118	18	0	0	9	5		122	17	0	0	9	9
Madeira. { Customs	44 52	2 10	0	0	3 4	6 2			5 10			3 4	9 2
	96	12	0	0	7	8		99	15	0	0	7	11
Cape of Good Customs Hope. Excise	14 17	7 10	0	0	-	1% 4%			8				2%
Portugal, Spa- nish, and all other wines not enu- merated. Customs Excise		17	0	0	2	61/3		32	18	0	0	2	71/2
		10										3
A Mon took	95	10	0	0	7	7		98	14	0	0	7	10

Wines in bottles could not be imported in a less quantity than in cases of six dozen, until 1823, when by the 4th of George IV. cases of three dozen quarts, or six dozen pints, were allowed, upon paying the Duties as French wines.

No wines can be imported in bottles, except French, Turkey, Italian, and Levant wines.

German and Hungarian wines can only be imported from Germany,
French from France, Spanish from Spain, &c. viz. each from their own country.

The hogshead varies much in respect to quantity, viz :-

AND DESCRIPTION OF THE PARTY OF	Cauton	10+
Burgundy .	49
Claret	52	49
Nice		Hogshead.
Malaga	60	Troganeau.
Port	64	THE PARTY

Printed by R. Gilbert, St. John's Square, London.

