THE STATE OF STREET STREET, ST

DISSERTATION ON HORSES,

&c. &c.

Of their Origin and Dispersion.

ALMOST every quarter of the earth (America excepted) possessed originally a very small breed of Horses, indigenous to its mountains, like the Cornish and Welch pony, the Irish hobby, or the Scotch Sholtee or galloway! which evinces, that America was not peopled from Asia, for the emigrants would hardly have left so useful an animal behind them, and there were no Horses sound there by Cortez or Pizarro.

In the mountains of China, Tartary, and Hungary, the pony is usually pye-balled or motled. In Pegu, Malacca, and the Polynesia of India, this dwarf species rise to somewhat a taller size, and are admirably calculated for a light draft. From Java, Sumatra, and Manilla, they are transported to Indostan, to Zelon, and particularly to the Cape of Good Hope, where they are employed to the most useful purposes in Caravans, Coaches, Chariots, and Chaises. In the Caravans, the coachmen of the Cape often drive twelve of these little tractable creatures coupled in hand, and eight in common; but they govern them more by word than by the rein. Two men, on such occasions, sit on the box, one of whom holds the reins, and the other a long chambriere.

B

All Horses of a superior kind are said, and with evident probability, to have proceeded primarily from Khandahar, Cabul, Multan (the antient Bactria and Sogdiana) and more particularly from Punje-Awb, a tract fo denominated because it is fituated between five streams, which form the great river Indus, or Scind, that runs into the Persian Sea; just as Mesopotamia was stiled by the Greeks, μέσο Ποταμος, "Interamnas" from being in the midst of two rivers; and the same extent by the Persians Doo-Awb, two waters, from its position between the Tigris and Euphrates. Punje-Awb is celebrated for its luxuriant pastures, which have reared for many ages, a confiderable number of fine Horses. The foals graze in large herds, following one that has a bell, for that purpose, hung round his neck. Dealers from the Turkuman, Usbeg, and Calmuck Tartars, as well as from every part of Persia, and India, repair to Lahor and its confines, for the purchase of colts, and also of young camels and dromedaries, which they carry off, lightly laden with fruits, shawls, and furs, in numerous caravans. A toll being exacted for every Horse, on the frontier of every province through which they pais, the price of them, before they reach their destined markets, is rendered dearer (if not more unreasonable) than they are in England. Afiatic dealers possess all the artifices and tricks practiced by dealers in Europe to fet off their blemished Horses, and a purchaser must be cautious in his examination to prevent being imposed upon.

One species of toll, levied on their road, is exceedingly prejudicial; for the finest young stallions of the caravans are constrained, by the chiefs of the several districts, to cover their mares, instead of paying a pecuniary impost.

From the Countries above-mentioned, this paramount breed of Horses, spread, in process of time, eastward, to India and China; northward, to Tartary; westward, to Persia, Syria, and Asia-Minor; and southward, to Arabia, Egypt, Abyssinia, Ethiopia, Lybia, Numidia, and Mauritania. From the northern coasts of Africa, the Moors transplanted them into Spain; and from thence they were introduced, by degrees, into every part of Europe.

Climate, affortment of food, exuberance of herbage, daintiness or coarseness of fodder, and training or management, create the difference observable in the bulk, shape, and quality of Horses. From the rank grass upon which they seed feed in Holstein, Freisland, and the Netherlands, the Flemish, Dutch, and Jutland Horses, become of an extraordinary corpulence and stature. Such were formerly fashionable in England, for the equipage of courtly Dames, under the designation of Flanders Mares; but are now solely, and properly, confined to the dray.

Natural Description.

A PERFECT Horse, says Camerarius, is an assemblage of the excellencies of many animals. He should possess three parts like a Woman; an expanded chest, protuberant hips, and a long mane. In three things he should resemble a Lion; in ferocity of countenance, in fortitude, and irresistible impetuosity. He must have three things appertaining to a Sheep; the nose, gentleness, and patience. Three of a Mule; strength, perseverance, and sureness of soot. Three of a Deer; head, legs, and skin. Three of a Wolf; throat, neck, and hearing. Three of a Fox; ears, tail, and rate, or trot. Three of a Serpent; memory, sight, and slexibility; and three of a Hare; running, walking, and pertinacity. The walking of a Partridge would have been a more apt similitude, being in its air and gait the most stately and graceful of all animals.

The Horse is, in temperament, generous and proud; in frame, vigorous and powerful. He is a gregarious and focial animal. When they affemble in herds of five or fix hundred, whilst grazing or sleeping, they have constantly a sentinel on the watch. When this vedette perceives a human figure, he approaches confidently, both to examine and to intimidate him. If the man advances, he fnorts, as a fignal of alarm, upon which the herd instantly escape; the vigilant fentinel bringing up the rear, and biting those which are hindmost. He calls by neighing, and fights by kicking and biting. The wild ass is his inveterate foe. He rolls when he sweats. He eats grass closer than the ox, and in dunging, diffeminates the feeds that remain undigested; he never vomits. He is more peculiarly hurt, externally, by a stroke upon the ear, or on the stifle; by being caught by the nofe in barnacles, and by rubbing his teeth with greafe. He is injured, internally, by the herbs Padus, Phalandria, Cruculio, Cruculio, and Canops; but devours Hemlock without annoyance. The mare goes with foal three hundred and thirty-feven days. The longer animals are in gestation, and vegetables in their progress to maturity, the more noble is their kind. A rapid growth, in animals, or vegetables, makes no provision for solidity or duration.

Non enim potest in eo esse succus diuturnus, quod nimis celeriter est maturitatem assecutum. Cicero de Oratore.

Round hoofed, short jointed, setlocks shag and long, Broad breast, sull eyes, small head, and nostrils wide, High crest, short ears, strait legs, and passing strong, Thin mane, thick tail, broad buttocks, tender hide.

Shakespeare's Horse of Adonis.

The stag necked Horse has something in the make of his body, much resembling the stag itself; the neck is large, and scarcely bowed in the middle; he carries his head high. They are racers and hunters, being particularly adapted for swiftness by the make of their body.

Lavater.

The hog necked has the neck above and below alike broad; the head hanging downwards; the middle of the nose is concave in profile; the ears are long, thick, and hanging; the eyes small and ugly; the nostrils small; the mouth large; the whole body round, and the coat long and rough. These Horses are intractable, slow, and vicious, and will run their rider against a wall, stone, or tree. When held in, they rear, and endeavour to throw the rider. Blows or coaxing are frequently alike inessectual, they continue obstinate and restif.

Lavater.

If we examine the different heads of Horses, we shall find, that all cheerful, high-spirited, capricious, courageous Horses, have the nose-bone of the profile convex; and that most of the vicious, restif, and idle, have the same bone slat, or concave.

Lavater.

The grey is the tenderest of Horses; and we may here add, that people with light hair, if not effeminate, are yet, it is well known, of tender formation and constitution. The chesnut, and iron grey, the black, and bay, are hardy; the forrel are the most hardy, and yet the most subject to disease. The forrel, whether well or ill formed, is treacherous. All treacherous treacherous Horses lay their ears in the neck; they stare and stop, and lay down their ears alternately.

When a Horse has broad, long, widely separated, hanging ears, we are well affured, he is bad and fluggish. If he lays down his ears alternately, he is fearful, and apt to start. * Thin pointed and projecting ears, on the contrary, denote a Horse of good disposition.

We never find that the thick, hog necked Horse, is fufficiently tractable for a riding Horse; or that he is of a strong nature, when the tail shakes like the tail of a dog. We may be certain that a Horse, with large cheerful eyes, and a fine shining coat, if we have no other tokens, is of a good conftitution and understanding. Lavater.

Poetical Description.

Epic, Lyric, as well as didactic authors of every civilized nation, are diffusive in their description of this noble animal. A few, that more immediately recur to recollection, are here inferted.

In the book of Job (certainly a metrical composition) the Horse is thus sublimely pourtrayed.

" Hast thou given the Horse strength? hast thou clothed his neck with thunder? Canst thou make him afraid as a grashopper? the glory of his nostrils is terrible.

He paweth in the valley, and rejoiceth in his strength; he goeth on to meet the armed men.

He mocketh at fear, and is not affrighted; neither turneth he back from the fword.

The quiver rattleth against him, the glittering spear and the fhield."

[With how much less elevation of language and of imagery has Horace described this animal:

> " Jam Fulgor armorum fugaces Terret Equos."

" He swalloweth the ground with fierceness and rage:

neither believeth he that it is the found of the trumpet.

He faith among the trumpets, ha! ha! and he smelleth the battle afar off, the thunder of the captains and the shouting." Terræg urbesque recedunt, says Virgil. The same image is thus expressed in Pope's Windsor Forest:

And earth rolls back beneath the flying fleed.

And Pope thus again finely delineates him: Th' impatient courfer pants in every vein, And pawing, feems to beat the distant plain; Hills, dales, and floods appear already crost, And 'ere he starts, a thousand steps are lost.

Windsor Forest.

Which last thought is an imitation from Virgil, or from Silius Italicus.

Pereunt vestigia mille Ante fugam.

Virgil, Georgic III.

Campumque volatur
Cum rapuere—pedum vestigia quæras.

Silius Italicus.

Nor is the following passage from Virgil less beautifully imagined.

Continuo pecoris generosi pullus in arvis Altiùs ingreditur, et mollia crura reponit. Primus et ire viam, et sluvios tentare minaces Audet, et ignoto sese committere ponti. Nec vanos horret strepitus— Luxuriatque toris animosum pectus.

Tum si qua sonum procul arma dedere, Stare loco nescit, micat auribus, et tremit artus; Collectumque premens volvit sub naribus ignem.

Virgil, Georgic III.

I saw young Harry with his beaver on,
His cuisses on his thighs, gallantly armed,
Rise from the ground like feathered Mercury.
As if an angel dropt down from the clouds,
To witch the world with noble Horsemanship.

Shakespeare's Henry IV. Part 1.

The times are wild, contention like a Horse Full of high feeding, madly hath broke loose, And bears down all before him.

Shakespeare's Henry IV. Part 2. Think

Think when we talk of Horses, that you see them, Printing their proud hoofs i' th' receiving earth. Chorus to Shakespeare's Henry V.

And Duncan's Horses (a thing most strange and certain) Beauteous and swift, the minions of their race, Turned wild in nature, broke their stalls, slung out, Contending 'gainst obedience, as they would Make war upon mankind.

Shakespeare's Macbeth.

Marcus. I have dogs my lord

Will rouze the proudest panther in the chace,

And climb the highest promontory top.

Titus. And I have Horse will fillow where the game Makes way, and run like swallows o'er the plain.

Shakespeare's Titus Andronicus.

Dauphin. I will not change my Horse for any that stands on four pasterns. Ca! ha! he bounds from the earth as if his entrails were hairs. "Le Cheval Volant." The Pegasus. "Qui a les narines de seu." When I bestride him, I soar. I am a lark. He trots the air. The earth sings when he touches it. The basest horn of his hoof is more musical than the pipe of Hermes.

Orleans. He is the colour of the nutmeg, and of the heat of ginger. It is a beaft for Perseus. He is pure air and fire, and the dull elements of earth and water never appear in him; but only patient stillness while his rider mounts him. He is indeed a Horse, and all other jades you may call beafts.

Shakespeare's Henry Vth.

The French can well on horseback, but this gallant Had witchcrast in it, he grew unto his seat, And to such wond'rous doing brought his Horse, As he had been incorpsed, and demy-natured With the brave beast.

From Shakespeare's Hamlet, AEt 4, Scene 7th.

The wanton courfer thus, with reins unbound, Breaks from his stall, and beats the trembling ground; Pamper'd and proud, he seeks the wonted tides, And laves, in height of blood, his shining sides,

His head now free'd, he tosses to the skies,
His mane dishevel'd, o'er his shoulders slies;
He snuffs the semales in the distant plain,
And springs exulting to his fields again.

Pope's Homer, B. 6. V. 652.

Three thousand mares, in spacious pastures bred,
Three thousand soals beside their mother sed;
Boreas, enamour'd of the sprightly train,
Conceal'd his godhead in a slowing mane;
With voice dissembled to his loves he neigh'd,
And cours'd the dappled beauties o'er the mead.
Hence sprang twelve others, of unrivall'd kind,
Swift as their mother mares, and father wind,
These lightly skimming, when they swept the plain,
Nor ply'd the grass, nor bent the tender grain.

Pope's Homer, B. 20. V. 262.

Qualis, ubi abruptis fugit præsepia vinclis,
Tandem liber equus, campoque potitus aperto,
Aut ille, in pastus, armentaque tendit equarum,
Aut assueus aquæ, perfundi slumine noto
Emicat, arrectisque fremit cervicibus altè,
Luxurians, luduntque jubæ per colla, per armos.

Virgil Æneid the 11th.

Of their Estimation.

Or the high confideration the Horse was held in by antient mythologists, numerous legendary, as well as poetical productions, sufficiently demonstrate.

By the aid of the Horse and the dog, human savages first subdued the still more savage brutes and serocious animals of the earth, which would otherwise have devoured, and extirpated them from the sace of the globe.

Aurora is represented in a golden chariot drawn by white-winged Horses, with the morning star on her forehead.

Hyperion, or the fun, is exhibited in a flaming car, drawn by four fiery courfers of ætherial race; and Diana, or the moon, by two of gentler nature, one black and the other white.

Four other Pagan deities are described, also, as conveyed by illustrious steeds, Pluto, Mars, Castor, and Pollux. The ebony chariot of the former was drawn by black Horses.

Sea-horses transported the car of Neptune.

On the dispute between Pallas and Neptune, which should give a name to Athens, Neptune struck the ground with his trident, and up started a Horse; and though the olive produced by Minerva, was deemed the preferable benefaction, yet the Horse was accounted the next best gift of a deity to the human race.

From Perseus was derived, probably, the Greek appellation of the Persians, the first horsemen known to the natives of Europe. The wings on the feet of Perseus denoted spurs.

The Hippogriff Pegasus sprang from the blood of Medusa, slain by Perseus. This winged Horse slew to Mount Helicon, the seat of the muses; where, with a stroke of his hoof, he opened the sountain Hippocrene, called by the Roman satirist, Caballinus, or the Horse's Spring.

Belerophon, becoming arrogant from prosperity, resolved, by the affishance of Pegasus, to ascend to heaven.

Cælum ipsum petimus stultitia. Horat.

To punish his presumption, Jupiter struck him blind, and he fell to the earth. Pegasus, however, continued to mount upwards, was translated to the skies, and ranked amongst the constellations.

In the Second Book of Kings, the ascension of Elijah is thus recounted. "And it came to pass, as Elijah and Elisha went on and talked, that, behold, there appeared a chariot of fire, and Horses of fire, and parted them both asunder; and Elijah went up by a whirlwind into heaven."

Four Horses are mentioned in the Apocalypse of St. John; a red one mounted by a warriour; a white, whose rider is a conqueror; a black surmounted by Justice; and the pale Horse of death, followed by all the tribes of hell.

Diomed and Ulysses, in the Tenth Book of the Iliad, covertly approach the Thracian camp, and carry off the chariot Horses of Rhesus.

There were no Horses, it is averred, either in Greece or Dardania at the æra of the Trojan war: for Homer composed his Iliad three hundred years subsequent to that event, terminating it soon after the death of Hector. The siction of the wooden Horse was a later invention of the poets, to conclude the story.

Horfes, besides, were neither natives of Greece, nor of the Lesser Asia. When the Greeks first beheld a man on Horseback (most probably a Persian) they were said to have mistaken the two objects for a single animal, and to have called it a Centaur; which indicates (by the bye) their total unskilfulness in the structure and anatomy of the human frame, as well as of the general animal economy. For their Centaur, having two bodies, must have been nourished by two kinds of food, either of which would have proved detrimental to one of the bodies; and must, to have been digested, have passed through two different stomachs and viscera, designed for two very different forts of provision, and very different operations.

Horses had not been brought into Greece long before the fiege of Troy. They were originally Eastern animals, and, if we find, at that period, fo great a number of them reckoned up in the wars of the Israelites, it is the less a wonder, confidering they came from Asia. The practice of riding them was fo little known in Greece a few years before, that they looked upon the Centaurs, who first used it, as monsters compounded of men and horses. Nestor, in the first Iliad, fays, he had feen these Centaurs in his youth, and Polypoetes, in the fecond, is faid to have been born on the day that his father expelled them from Pelion to the deferts of Æthica. They had no other use of Horses than to draw their chariots in battle; fo that whenever Homer speaks of fighting from an Horse, taming an Horse, or the like, it is certainly to be understood of fighting from a chariot, or taming Horses to that fervice. This (as we have faid) was a piece of decorum in the poet; for, in his own time, they were arrived to fuch a perfection in Horsemanship, that in the Fisteenth Iliad, V. 822, we have a fimile taken from an extraordinary feat of activity, where one man manages four Horses at once, and leaps from the back of one to another at full speed.

Pope's Homer, Vol. II. p. 53.

So when a Horseman, from the wat'ry mead, Skill'd in the manage of the bounding steed, Drives four fair coursers, practis'd to obey, To some great city thro' the public way; Safe in his art, as fide by fide they run,
He shifts his seat, and vaults from one to one,
And now to this, and now to that he slies;
Admiring numbers follow with their eyes.

Homer's Iliad, Book XV. Verfe 821.

If we confider in what high esteem, among warriours, these noble animals must have been at their first coming into Greece, we shall the less wonder at the frequent occasions Homer has taken to describe and celebrate them. It is not so strange to find them set almost upon a level with men, at a time when an Horse, in the prizes, was of equal value with a captive.

Riding, however, was practifed at the time when Homer wrote, as is manifest from his frequent allusions to equestrian skill, comparing the activity of Ajax to the vaulting of Horsemen, and the steadiness of Ulysses, astride a plank in the fea, to the stability of a good rider.

Homer no where represents cavalry, or trumpets, to have been used in the Trojan war, though they apparently were in his own time. It is not, therefore, impossible, but there may be found in his works, some deficiencies in the art of war, which are not to be imputed to his ignorance, but to his judgment,

Pope's Homer, Vol. II. p. 53.

The antient heroes never fought on Horseback; nor does their manner of fighting in chariots, seem to require less activity than on foot.

Samuel Johnson, in a Note to Troilus and Cressida.

The heroes of Homer never fought on Horseback; yet such of them as make their second appearance in the Æneid, appear to have had cavalry amongst them, as well as their antagonists, the Rutilians.

Steevens, ditto, ditto.

In the Seventeenth Book, the Horses of Achilles shed tears for the loss of Patroclus; and in the Nineteenth Book, one of his steeds addresses his master, prophesies his death, and deplores his impending sate. These incidents constitute some of the most admired passages in that immortal poem.

The uncommon endowments, possessed by the Horses of Cæsar and Alexander, are as renowned, as the abilities and accomplishments of their masters.

The spirit, as well as the appellation of chivalry, arose from the excellency of the Horse. The benevolent, protective effects, which that gallant spirit produced, in innumerable generous and valiant enterprises, have remained the admiration of every succeeding age.

Of the Arab Horfe.

Or the several classes of this paragon of animals, the Arab is held in chief estimation. When an Arabian gets possession of a fine Horse and Mare, he breeds from them alone, nor fuffers, on any account, the interference of any spurious generation, or the cross intermixture of any other kind whatever. For the preservation of this pure, generous, uncorrupted blood, authenticated pedigrees are registered, and preserved in the offices of the Cazis of Arabia (tracing their descent with the same accuracy, as the tables of genealogical lineage in the noble families of Europe) comprising the name or title, colour, and marks peculiar to each of the illustrious individuals of the first unadulterated race, so that the species is frequently recognized by mere inspection alone. For a male foal the pious Arab offers up the same sacrifice (the defart Arabs still retaining some relicks of the rights of Ishmael, from whom they are descended) as for the birth of a male child. It is rather a remarkable circumstance, that the best Arab Horses are produced, and nourished in the deepest recesses of Arabia Petrea, though that desart region be almost destitute of vegetation, and but ill supplied with water. This may account, however, for their enduring heat, thirst, and hunger, better and longer than any other horses. As foon as foaled, the colts and fillies are placed in a tent, amongst the children of the family, with whom they lie on the fame litter, roll about and play amongst them, which constitutes one reason, added to their generous blood, why Arab Horses are generally so ductile and gentle.

There are two casts or race of Arab Horses, the Kadiski, of unknown descent, and the Kochlani, whose written lineage has been preserved for two thousand years. The first are employed for draft, for burthen, and for common use; the other fine breed are reserved for riding only, and are said to be derived from the study of King Solyman. They endure great satigue, and can remain whole days without food. They evince uncommon courage against an enemy.

If the rider fall, the Horse stays by him, and neighs for assistance. They are not large, but amazingly swift, gentle, generous, and persevering. They are bred principally by the Bedouins (or wandering Arabs) between Bassorah, Merdin, and Syria. Kochlani Mares are never covered but in presence of Arabian witnesses. There is no instance of salse testimony in case of the pedigree of the Kochlani race. The witness must previously watch the Mare twenty days, to prevent all possibility of contamination, or degeneracy from intercourse with other Horses, and from even seeing Horse, or Ass, during that interval. At soaling the witness must be again present, in order to certify the legitimacy of the colt, by a notarial certificate before a Cazi.

From Nieubuhr's Travels in Arabia, Vol. II. p. 300, 301, 302. By never crossing the breed, Arab Horses seldom exceed fourteen hands and a half, or sisteen hands in height. They are, nevertheless, strong and indefatigable in travel, when not hurried. Accounts of their unwearied persistence on journies, even in Arabia, an unfavourable climate for exercise, being afferted almost beyond credibility. Only one animal in the world, called Goorcur, (a species of Zebra, of a dun colour instead of being striped, and mentioned in Scripture, under the name of "Wild Ass of the Mountains," a native of Guzerat, Berar, and the Afghân mountains, and sometimes met with in Persia) can vie with the Arab Horse in ability and endurance on journies.

The Goorcur, like all other of those quadrupeds, which partake more of the Ass than the Horse, bears the mark of a crofs along his back and shoulders.

The characteristic points of a genuine Arab are, a small flat forehead; full, wide, extended, and arched nostrils, displaying the crimson on their inside; a waving swan neck, the hair feathered along a slowing mane, and also upon the breast, and upon the slanks; the breast amply spread; an eye like an antelope; a round shaped barrel; legs slender, tapering, and muscular; a skin thin, with the veins of the neck and body swelling to the sight; the ears little, pointed, and well shaped, but dangling, and declining outwards too widely from each other; the loins terminating in a goose rump, with the tail set on too low, but the hair of it abundantly thick, bushy, and sloating. Flattery greatly excites their joy, and they will express their pride of heart by parading and prancing.

Of the Barb.

Barbs are the produce of Arab Horses, and African Mares brought from the mountains of the moon. From the Barb, and Mares generated in La Mancha, Andalusia, and Estramadura, is derived the Spanish Jennet, deemed the preferable Horse for attaining the graceful voltes and airs of the manege and for ladies' riding.

From the Godolphin blood, croffed with the offspring of the Barb, are faid to proceed the best English racers and hunters.

Of other Breeds.

THE Horses of Carinthia, are supposed to be amongst the strongest and most indefatigable in Europe.

Neapolitan Horses are esteemed for their losty mien, and elegant appearance in the coach. They exhibit a variety in colour, also, scarcely credible; amongst which, the cream coloured, glossy as sattin, and the shining silver white, are preferred.

The Horses of Sardinia are small, but so excellent, that a stallion has been known to travel 24 hours without drawing the bit.

From Arthur Young's Travels, P. 394. Vol. 1.

Amongst the Mahrattas, there is a fort of Horse very tall; a cross made, meagre, aquiline-nosed, restive creature, called Tazzeh; but strong, boney, and high mettled, which if imported into this country, would conduce, probably, still further to meliorate the English breed.

No person has contributed so much to advance the breed of English Horses, as the present Earl Grosvenor. His stud of racers is unparalleled. And from a superb creature called Mambrino, formerly appertaining to his lordship, the breed of Horses for the coach is brought nearly to persection.

Of the Godolphin Arabian.

There was somewhat of wonderful virtue and efficacy in the blood of a Horse, existing in England between forty and sifty years ago, called the Godolphin Arabian; although it be not perfectly ascertained that he was actually of Arabian extraction: but from whatever source it issued, it was his high mettled blood that communicated, to the English Horses, that vigour and energy of spirit, which distinguishes their intrinsic goodness, and renders them, next to the Arab, far superior to any other race. For the English, constantly crossing their own, with the breed of every other country, produce a kind, though by no means so beautiful as the Arab, yet always far surpassing him in strength, and generally in swiftness.

He was called fo from belonging to the Earl of Godolphin. He became a stallion as soon as he was landed from Normandy. He died at Hogmagog Hills, December, 1753, in the 29th year of his age. His celebrated soals were Lath, Dismal, Bajazet, Babraham, Phænix, Dormouse, Regulus, Skewball, Sultan, Blank, Cade, Slug, Noble, Tarquin, Blossom, Shepherdess, Amelia, and the Godolphin Gelding.

He was a Brown Horse, about fifteen hands high; first the property of Mr. Coke, and given by him to Mr. Roger Williams, keeper of the St. James's coffee-house, by whom he was presented to the Earl of Godolphin.

From almost every country, tradition has delivered to us accounts of some native, endued with uncommon force of body; and their principal proofs of these corporeal powers have been usually drawn, from the notorious prolific capacities of these their heroes. Hercules and Theseus, amongst the Greeks, are described, as thus excelling their cotemporaries in their generative faculties.

The common and most glorious legend, includes, says Mr. Gibbon, in a single night, the 50 victories of Hercules, over the daughters of Thefeus.

Sampson is the champion of the Israelites in similar qualifications.

But the feats in this sesquipedalian labour of an inconsiderable citizen of Paris, are recorded as going far beyond them all. Attend to the relation in the author's own words.

"Blunet etoit un petit Bourgeois de Paris, sans rang, sans fortune, sans credit, sans talens spirituels. Ce Blunet sit à sa femme vingt un ensans en sept sois de suite; or il n'yeut, peutetre, pas, dans toute l'antiquité, un exemple d'une sécundité si prodigieuse. C'est l'Hercule Parisien, que ce Blunet.

"Major in exiguo regnabat corpore virtus." Virgil.
Comme le public emerveillé, ne scavoit á qui, de sa semme, ou de lui, on en attribueroit l'honneur; Blunet coucha avec une servante, qu'il avoit, et la fille accoucha de trois enfans mâles. Blunet mourut en 1685."

Tableau de Paris.

Of this athletic race of men also, was one Thomas Topham, commonly called the Strong Man, who kept the sign of the Strong Man at Islington, about the year 1763; where he exhibited proofs of his prodigious strength, and uncommon prowess, in a great variety of seats; of which Dr. Desaguliers has given an account, in a paper communicated to the Royal Society, which is published in their memoirs.

He once pulled out the iron bars from a kitchen range, by bending them in the middle, and thus wrenched them from their rivets at each end. At another time, he, with his finger and thumb, squeezed together the sides of a common silver tankard.

When he was dead, feveral physical gentlemen went to examine the muscular parts of his body, and afterwards published some account of them.

Of the Descent of Childers.

This surprising Horse, almost the fleetest ever known in the world, was bred by Leonard Childers, Esq. of Yorkshire, and disposed of, when young, to the Duke of Devonshire. He was got by the Darley Arabian; his dam was Betty Leeds. Betty Leeds was got by the Marquis of Wharton's Careless; Careless by Spanker; Spanker by the D'Arcy Yellow Turk; his grand dam was got by the Leedes Arabian; his great grand dam by Spanker; his great grand dam by a natural Barb Horse.

It is remarkable, however, that scarcely any fleet coursers sprang from the celebrated Childers, though himself the swiftest Horse ever known; on the contrary, his race have proved eminently defective; declining, like our modern nobility, with an uncommon precipitation of degeneracy.

Of Equestrian Statues.

THE figure and symmetry of the Horse is no where more perfectly displayed, than in the Equestrian Statue of Charles the First, the most finished piece of workmanship of its kind, ever, perhaps, exhibited. That of Marcus Aurelius, or the two on the Monte Cavallo, or Quirino, at Rome, do not furpass it.

View the other Equestrian figures within the squares of London; how infinitely inferior they appear to that of Charing-cross? but none more so than that stuck up in Berkeley-square, which more resembles a Cart-horse, than the Charger of a Monarch. Continually, however, in our sight, the "Chef d'ouvre" of Charles is not only disregarded, but so scandalously neglected, that it will soon become, for want of common care and attention, either totally dissigured or destroyed.

Incolumen odimus, Sublatam ex oculis, quærimus invidi.

The four Horses of gilded bronze over the grand entrance to St. Mark's church at Venice, said to be the work of Lycippus, are esteemed much more admirable than the Horse of Marcus Aurelius, in the capital of Rome. They belonged to a chariot of the sun, erected on a triumphal arch, by Nero, to whom they were given by Tiridates, king of Armenia. Constantine transported them from Rome, to his celebrated hippodrome at Constantinople, from whence they were sent to Venice, by Henry Dandolo, after the capture of Constantinople by the French and Venetians, in 1204.

From Watkins's Travels in 1787-8-9.

Of their Powers.

THE structure of the spine determines what animals are best adapted for the carriage, and what for the draught. That of elephants, camels, busfalos, and oxen, are convex. Both in Asia and Africa, all those animals are employed to carry burthens. The spine of the Horse, on the contrary, is concave, which decides the draught to be his forte; and yet Pack-horses in Yorkshire carry, not unusually, loads of 420 pounds; and what is still more remarkable, there are Mill-horses, which have been known to carry thirteen measures, of each 70 pounds, or a weight of 910 pounds.

English Horses excel, in point of strength; for a London Dray-horse has been known to move, on a plane surface, for a short space, the weight of three tons, and to draw half that weight, a confiderable distance, with ease.

On the fandy plains of Africa, notwithstanding the narrowness of the Horse's hoof, and the breadth of the Ostrich's feet, this bird is pursued by the Horse, with the hunter on his back, and generally with success. The ostrich runs in circles, is exceedingly sleet, and more so when catching the wind by the elevation of his wings.

Hussars, Croats, Hulâns, and Pandours, slit the noses of their Horses, on a supposition that it assists their breathing.

In Quito, the small breed of mountain Horses is trained to pursue the wild ass. In full career, and with a slackened rein, the hunters urge them over rugged ground, and precipitate them down declivities in a wonderful manner, yet without danger of their falling.

Although Horses, as before observed, were not ab origines of America, they are now so abundant there, particularly about Buenos-ayres, and in Patagonia, that people are employed continually, in numerous parties, to hunt and to destroy them, for the sake of their skins only, which constitute an article of trade. On approaching within the proper distance of them, the hunter dexterously throws a cord, at the end of which is sastened a bullet, which twists round their necks, consuses them, and stops their slight. He then, with a sickle at the extremity of a light pole, hamstrings his prey, and leaves it to his followers on foot, to slay them.

The Horses of Andalusia, (says Mr. Peyron, in his travels through Spain) are naturally chaste, and there is nothing to apprehend in putting them near mares; but after they have once known them, they are very difficult to reduce to obedience.

"For young hot colts being raged do rage the more."

King Richard II. Act 2, Scene 1.

On a forced march, or fatiguing journey, the Mahrattas drench their Horses with an opiate, called Bang, composed of an infusion from the green fibres of hemp; by the aid of which, they proceed an unusual length of way. This juice, when inspissated, affords a narcotic still more potent.

Of the speed of one Arab, and of many English Horses, we have authentic documents. The samous Childers moved $82\frac{1}{2}$ feet in one second of time, which is nearly at the rate of one mile in one minute; for he ran round a course at Newmarket (little less than four miles) in six minutes and forty seconds, a degree of velocity which no Horse has been known to exceed.

" Vento gravidas ex prole putaris."

Another account avers, that he ran over another course at Newmarket (which is 380 yards more than four English miles) in $7\frac{1}{2}$ minutes; and over that course, which is less than four miles by 400 yards, in six minutes and forty seconds, which is forty-six feet nine inches in one second of time.

In general, the racers at Newmarket run round a four-mile course in about seven minutes and sifty seconds, or eight minutes, which gives forty four feet six inches in one second of time, and twenty-four English feet at every stretch.

Mr. de St. Bel pronounced, with the greatest probability, from his accurate computations, that the horse Eclipse, free from all weight, and galloping at liberty, with his greatest degree of swiftness, could cover an extent of ground of twenty-five feet, at every complete action, on the gallop; and that he could run nearly four miles in the space of fix minutes and two seconds.

A Horse, about the year 1727, belonging to Mr. Thomas Cross, numberer to Lincoln's-inn theatre, ran away with his D 2 chaise, chaife, with a woman in it, and leaped therewith over Whetstone turnpike. The Gentleman's Magazine for 1737, p. 767.

In February, 1736, a Horse, twelve hands and a half high, went one hundred miles, on Banstead Downs, in sisteen hours.

In April, 1745, Mr. Cooper Thornhill, keeper of the Bull Inn, at Stilton, set out from thence at sour o'clock in the morning, to ride to London, and came to the King's Arms, over against Shoreditch Church, ten minutes before eight. He returned back immediately for Stilton, and from thence, came again, in good spirits, to Shoreditch Church, by a quarter past four in the afternoon; the whole being 213 miles, in twelve hours and seventeen minutes; which he was to perform, with several horses, in sisteen hours, for a bet of five hundred pounds of his own money, and large sums laid by other gentlemen. He performed it in two hours and forty three minutes less than the time allowed. On the 4th also, he rode between London and Stilton, in three hours and fifty six minutes, and won by thirty-sour minutes.

N. B. This account is taken from under a print of the faid Cooper Thornhill, hanging in the room, at the inn, at Stilton.

In the month of November, of the year 1754, Mr. Jennison Shaftoe rode fifty miles, round one of the courses at Newmarket, in one hour, forty-nine minutes and ten seconds, on ten Horses: he was allowed two hours to perform it, and upon as many Horses as he chose.

Dodsley's Annual Register, Vol. I. p. 100.

In 1761, two Horses ran, for a wager of fifty pounds, from Colchester to Whitechapel Church. They ran the first forty miles in two hours and ten minutes, and the last ten miles in fifty-two minutes. The winning Horse carried it by about two hundred yards. Dodsley's Annual Register, 1761, p. 99.

On June 1st, 1761, was decided a wager of one thousand guineas, between Mr. Shaftoe and Mr. Meynell, that a man rode 2900 miles in twenty-nine days successively, which was performed without much difficulty.

Dodsley's Annual Register, 1761, p. 118.

A person in Leeds, rode his common hackney from thence to Hull, and back again, which is 130 miles, in nineteen hours and twenty-two minutes. He was allowed twenty hours. Dodfley's Annual Register, 1761, p. 142.

A Mare started from the Fox and Hounds, in Tottenham-court-road, to draw a single-horse chaise, with a person in it, to Lincoln, in twenty-sour hours, but personmed the journey with ease, in nineteen hours and a quarter. The distance is upwards of 130 miles. Dodsley's A. R. 1761, p. 147.

In the year 1791, a Mr. Wilde rode 127 miles in seven hours; he had nine hours to do it in.

In the year 1794, a gentleman set out from Oxford, to ride a match against time, to London, and back again, 108 miles in twelve hours, with change of horses, which he performed in eight hours and a quarter.

At a very early hour on Monday morning, a trotting match, against time, was decided on the road between Cambridge and Huntingdon, for one hundred guineas. The wager was made fome weeks back, between Mr. Dyfon, of Parklane, and Mr. Fagg, of Holborn; Mr. Dyson binding himself to produce a Horse, Mare, or Gelding, that should, within a given period, trot seventeen miles within the hour, on any ground to be chosen by himself, he giving forty-eight hours notice to Mr. Fagg. Yesterday, being the day appointed for the decision of the wager, vast numbers of persons, of every description, and particularly those of the sporting world, affembled, to witness this bold attempt. Very considerable bets were depending. A Mare, the property of Mr. Dyfon, was brought upon the ground; fhe was rode by a lad belonging to Mr. Marsden of Moorfields, but she lost the wager by one minute and four feconds.

From a Newspaper, of August 7, 1797.

Last week an officer of the Ayrshire Light Dragoons, rode fifteen miles, in an hour and nine minutes, on the road leading from Chelmsford to Dunmow, with his face to the Horse's tail. The bet was one hundred guineas, and he had an hour and a half allowed him.

From a Newspaper, of November 24, 1798.

A Mare.

The late four-mile race on the Beacon Course, was run exactly in seven minutes and a quarter; and the last stroke of Hambletonian, in passing the winning post, measured seven yards.

From a Newspaper, of March 25. 1799.

A Mare, belonging to James Craig, Esq. of Carricsergus, trotted, against time, from Carricsergus, eight miles and a quarter. She had forty-five minutes to perform it in, and won, having two or three minutes to spare.

Of their Docility.

To what degree of instruction Horses are susceptible, the annals of every country fufficiently announce. None more fo than the Manege of the late Sir Sidney Medowes, and the subsisting schools and feats of Astley, Hughes, Jones, Handy, Smith, and Croffman, most admirable, and wonderful to behold. No artificial lessons, however, can excel the graceful, spontaneous motions of the Horse himself, when first turned loose into a field, and of which, the curvets and caprioles of the schools are merely imitations. Not long fince, there was an Arab Horse, in the possession of Mr. Hughes, called Chillaby; 'till then, more ferocious than a tyger. In no long process, however, partly by diminution of his food, partly by keeping him from fleep, or working him in the night, and partly by lenient management, Mr. Hughes reduced him to that state of docility, as to fetch and carry, and perform divers other extraordinary feats, at command. Longeing Horses in the circle, and working them in the pillars, was first practifed, by the Sicilians, during the fiege of Syracuse, and by the Romans, under Camillus; for being confined within the limits of their walls, they had no fufficient space left to exercise their cavalry in any other manner.

It is owing to the docility of their Horses, that the Turks are enabled to throw up a spear, whilst their Horses are on a gallop, and to catch it before it falls; also, to strike a ball with a racket, and then strike it again into the air, in full career.

In Numidia, Horses were formerly, and I believe, are at present, broken in, and afterwards guided, by a switch, without the aid of any bridle. "Numidae Infranati" are mentioned by Virgil, and by other Roman writers.

Neither is their intelligence less conspicuous. When exercised in the longe, or between the pillars, and right in the

the performance of their motions, their mouths are then rubbed with falt, to make them remember, and it produces its effect.

Of all the prone creation, none display
A friendlier sense of man's superior sway:
Some, in the silent pomp of grief, complain
For the brave chief by doom of battle slain;
And, when young Peleus, in his rapid car
Rush'd on, to rouse the thunder of the war,
With human voice inspir'd, his steed deplor'd
The sate impending dreadful o'er his lord.

Oppian Cyneg: Lib. I.

Shakespeare, the most accurate observer of nature, records their propensity to music, in the following beautiful lines.

For do but note. (fays he) a wild and wanton herd,
Or race of youthful and unhandled colts,
Fetching mad bounds, bellowing, and neighing loud;
(Which is the hot condition of their blood)
If they, perchance, but hear a trumpet found,
Or any air of music touch their ears,
You shall perceive them make a mutual stand,
Their savage eyes turn'd to a modest gaze,
By the sweet power of music.

Merchant of Venice.

Then I beat my tabor,
At which, like unbacked colts, they pricked their ears,
Advanced their eye-lids, lifted up their nofes
As they smelt music; so I charm'd their ears.

Shakespeare's Tempest.

In the exhibition of feats of horsemanship, at the Royal Saloon and Circus, the Horses themselves move in cadence to the music.

Thorough bred hunters, if they hear the cry of the hounds, or found of the horn, whilst grazing, sometimes o'erleap all bounds, and surmount every obstacle of inclosure to follow the chace.

Before the fignal of the drum or trumpet is given on a field day, troop Horses are seen pawing, shuffling, and impatient to wheel, close, or rein back, &c. &c. and execute the several evolutions of themselves; for which reason awkaward recruits, at a review, are mounted upon the best dressed Horses.

Ut fremit acer equus, cum bellicus ære canoro Signa dedit tubicen, pugnæque assumit amorem.

Ovid's Met. Lib. 4. v. 704.

During the cold nights of a winter's campaign, troopers frequently lye close to the bodies of their Horses, in order to keep themselves warm; and the faithful creatures scarcely stir a limb, for sear of hurting their masters.

Should it chance to thunder, whilft veteran dragoon Horses are at grass, they have been known to array themselves immediately in file, and in their usual ranks, as if they heard the report of cannon.

A driver of a stage machine, in 1764, going to Newbury fell dead from his box, within three miles of that place; but was not missed by the passengers, till after their arrival; the Horses having brought them to their inn, without any stop or accident; a remarkable instance of the great sagacity and tractableness of that noble animal.

See the Annual Register, for 1764, Vol. 7, p. 23.

The fervant of Farmer Peters, of Wishingford, in Cornwall, having beaten a Horse with great cruelty, the beast seized him with his teeth, and shook him in the air, in such a manner, that he died two hours afterwards.

From the Gentleman's Magazine for 1769, V. 39, p. 211.

A man having castrated a Horse, the animal a sew days after seized on him, broke his arm with his teeth, threw him down, laid upon him, and could not be got off till he was shot.

From the Gentleman's Magazine for 1734, V. 4, p. 106.

Of their Equipment.

ALL nations, except the English, and their derivatives, endeavour to set off, and adorn their Horses, in a manner correspondent to the beauty of their shape. Some stain their bodies, their tails, and their seet of a Cærulean blue, or other vivid colours. Others caparison them with ornamental housings, tassels, and plumes of seathers; embroidered fumpter clothes, costly chains, trappings, and silvernet-work; and with saddles and bridles plated with gems: whilst the English study, at considerable pains and expence to disfigure their Horses, first by castration; next by docking their tails, manes, and ears; and lastly, by equipping them with leathern furniture, and iron, copper, and brass accoutrements; all as devoid of convenience, as they are destitute of elegance and taste. Not to avert to the savage misery of depriving so noble a creature, so gentle and serviceable, even to his barbarians, of those members which nature intended, as much for his health and protection, as for his personal decoration.

Of Racing.

FROM very early periods, Horses were trained to the course. But though Pindar alludes to matches won by single Horses, and Pausanias speaks of equestrian games instituted by Hercules, yet, by racing was generally understood a contest of chariots only.

In Italy, the Horses run races in a straight line, without riders. Two balls stuck full of spikes are thrown over their backs, which goad them as they run. But the true beauty of the Horse is preferably displayed in the airs of the Manége; as originally most completely taught by the celebrated Cavendish, Marquis of Newcastle, at his seat at Welbeck, in Nottinghamshire, and since his death from the rules published in his works on that subject.

Last week a match was run against time at Newmarket, by a Horse that was engaged to go twenty miles in one hour. Dutton's three-mile course was the ground fixed on; the first round of which he performed in eight minutes, sifty-two seconds; the second in eight minutes, thirty-two seconds; the fourth in eight minutes, thirty-three seconds; the fifth in eight minutes, forty-three seconds; the fixth in eight minutes, forty-five seconds; and the last two miles in fix minutes. In the whole, he was sifty-seven minutes, thirty-eight seconds, going the twenty miles. The bet was sixty to forty against the performance.

The long depending trotting match between Mr. Dixon and Mr. Bishop, on Sunbury common, was yesterday decided. It was eight miles, which was performed in twenty-seven minutes, ten seconds, in favour of Mr. Dixon.

From a Newspaper, July, 1799.

Of Foot Races.

A DROVER, that began on Monday last to walk, and was to go four hundred miles in fix days, at Holloway, for a wager of three hundred pounds, compleated it at fifty minutes after ten this evening.

From the Gentleman's Magazine, for 1737, Vol. VII. p. 71.

A foot race for one hundred pounds was run by the famous Pinwire, and an Irish footman, from Highgate to Barnet, and back again, thirteen miles, and won by the latter, performing it in one hour, nineteen minutes and a half.

From the Gentleman's Magazine for 1739, Vol. IX. p. 160.

A butcher at Wandsworth, lately walked forty-four miles in seven hours and fifty seven minutes.

Annual Register, Vol. V. p. 86, for 1762.

Some days ago, a man who fells Fish about Chelsea, Fulham, &c. undertook to run from Hyde-park Corner, to the seven mile stone at Brentford, in one hour, with fifty-six pounds of sish on his head; which he performed in forty-sive minutes with ease. This is reckoned the most extraordinary circumstance of the kind that has been performed for many years.

Annual Register for 1763, Vol. VI. p. 54.

One of the Gloucestershire militia, for a wager of three hundred pounds, having undertaken to walk from London to Bristol in twenty hours, set out at twelve at night, and arrived at Bristol the next evening, about thirty-five minutes after seven, having performed it with ease in nineteen hours and thirty-five minutes.

Annual Register for 1763, Vol. VI. p. 88.

At a foot race, on the Deptford road, by two tanners, the winner ran nine miles in an hour and four minutes.

Annual Register for 1764, Vol. VII. p. 74.

A foot match was run on Moulsey-hurst, by a shepherd against time. He was to run sisteen miles in an hour and a half, and performed it in an hour and twenty-eight minutes. From the Gentleman's Magazine for 1764, Vol. XXXIV. p. 614.

A meffenger

A messenger, who did not set out from London till the day before yesterday, at two in the asternoon, landed at eleven this night, at St. George's Quay, Dublin, a very extraordinary instance of quick travelling.

Annual Register for 1764, Vol. VII. p. 74.

A journeyman baker in Old-street, lately ran from Old-street turnpike to Shoreditch turnpike, and back again, which is reckoned a mile and a half, for a wager of twenty guineas, in seven minutes and a quarter. He had been allowed nine.

Annual Register for 1765, Vol. VIII. p. 110.

A few days ago a young woman, near Cockermouth, walked feventy-two miles in one day, viz. from Blencogo, to within two or three miles of Newcastle.

Annual Register for 1765, Vol. VIII. p. 113.

Mr. Mullins, a watch case maker in Shoreditch, near sifty years old, lately walked without shoes or stockings, from Shoreditch church to St. George's church in the Borough, and back again, being about sour miles, for a wager of six guineas, in the space of sorty-six minutes and a half, having had sifty allowed him.

Annual Register for 1765, Vol. VIII. p. 120.

A person for a wager, undertook to go from Cambridge to the Bull inn in Bishopsgate-street, and back again, in eight hours. He performed it in eight hours and two minutes, though one hundred and four miles. He was allowed to make use of what carriages and Horses he pleased.

The Gentleman's Magazine for 1770, Vol. IV. p. 388.

A labouring man, aged fifty-eight, walked from the one mile stone at Mile-end, to the eleven mile stone on the Essex road, for a wager of two hundred guineas. He was allowed four hours to do it in, but performed it in three hours and three quarters, being twenty-two miles.

The Gentleman's Magazine for 1772, Vol. XLII. p. 196.

But the most celebrated walker ever known in England was Mr. Powell, who on the 29th of November, 1773, walked from Old Hicks's-hall, in St. John's-street, Clerkenwell, to Micklegate-bar in York, a distance of four hundred and two miles, within six days. His first stop for rest was at Stilton, seventy-sive miles from town; his next at Doncaster, eighty-five miles beyond Stilton. He reached Micklegate-bar in York, on the third day at two o'clock; from which place, after some refreshment and rest, he set off at sive in the afternoon, and was twenty miles on his way back on the same evening. On the sixth day at two o'clock, he was at Hatsield, twenty miles from town, where he stayed a considerable time to refresh; and at Highgate he halted about half an hour. He came for the last twenty miles at the rate of sive miles an hour. He arrived as well-and cheerful as when he set off. On his return to old Hick's-hall, he rode home in a coach to Holloway, and returned in a sew hours afterwards to spend the evening in conviviality with his friends. He was a man of about sive feet ten inches high, spare and thin, but sinewy, and what is generally called cross made.

York

In December, 1798, a fervant of Sir Morton Eden, made a journey from Vienna, by way of Hamburgh, to England, in nine days, an expedition which, at this feafon of the year and through roads so bad as those of Germany, is most extraordinary.

From a Newspaper.

On Monday the 13th, a brick-maker, ran eight miles on the Whitechapel road in fifty-seven minutes, being three minutes less than the time allowed. He ran the first three miles in nineteen minutes.

From the Observer, (a Newspaper) May 19, 1799.

On Tuesday last, May 22, Mr. Shaw, Tryer of the Malton coursing meeting, rode on three successive horses sixty miles on Hambleton-plain, in two hours and sisty-one minutes, being nine minutes less than the time allowed.

He was allowed forty-two minutes, but performed it in forty-one minutes, five seconds.

From a Newspaper.

Jonathan Studholm, an inhabitant of the parish of Aikton, in Cumberland, who is in his seventy-eighth year, walked fixty miles in one day last week, without experiencing much statigue or inconvenience.

From ditto July, 1799.

A well and fingular contested race was run over Beam Heath, near Nantwich, between Mr Barrow Cliff, who rode his Welch horse Punch twice round the course, (two miles) and Mr. Yardley, of Nantwich, who ran on foot, with his hands tied behind his back, once round the course. The race was won by the Horseman, who beat the Pedestrian by four yards, which was performed in five minutes and fifty-six seconds.

From a Newspaper, of March, 1800.

of the Afs and Mule.

THE Goorcur of the Zebra species, or wild Ass of the mountains, has already been defcribed.

Afs, but they are weak and Ferocious to a great degree, when wild, the Asses in Quito are extraordinarily active and speedy; but after being caught, and carrying their first load, they become stupid and dull, losing all their celerity and ferocity.

Ulloa's Voyage, Vol. I. p. 301.

After once submitting, however reluctantly, to his burthen, the wild Ass, from that instant, becomes depressed, subdued, and humiliated, quite spiritless, and inanimate, as those born and bred domestically. The Ass is a great and deserved favourite of all natural historians, who speak of him with that commendation, his useful labours to mankind, and his calm, resigned, and patient endurance of them, unquestionably merit; and they universally observe, how much this poor acquiescent, depressed, scorned, yet diligent animal, would have been valued and caressed, had the Horse been wanting to their necessities, to their convenience, and to their pleasures.

The large Ass of Arabia, is of a high-spirited breed, and fitter for travelling than the Horse.

See the Gentleman's Magazine for 1761, p. 304.

An Ass went one hundred miles, in twenty-one hours, at Newmarket, about June, 1761. The odds were, that he did not perform it in twenty-four hours, 100 to 10.

When the first Duke of Cumberland commanded as Captain General in the Netherlands, all the Hanoverian houshold were in attendance on his person, with an equipage and apparatus suitable to his royal accommodation; for the conveyance of which, the Empress Queen, Maria Theresa, made him a most imperial present of above one hundred Spanish Spanish Mules, of uncommon size and comeliness, many of them measuring sixteen and seventeen hands in height. Their colours were principally grey, black and brown.

The best Mules are produced from the Spanish Ass, and the large muscular Mares of Andalusia. Some are indeed bred from a Stallion and the she Ass, but they are weak and washy.

But the most extraordinary kind of Mules is seen in Savoy, Lombardy, and other parts of Italy, generated from the mixture of the Horse and Cow, as of the Bull and Mare, said to be exceedingly useful in farming, for the draught of waggons, carts, and other carriages.
