Admitted Anthony Goehery last 56 (unnamed), A Labourer
1st March 1856 of quiet shrewd disposition & irrepressible deportment
He is altogether uneducated

2 No cause has been discovered of his Malady

3 His disease has proceeded by sleepless & violent efforts

4 So far as can be ascertained he has not been subject to any convulsive disease

5 He labours under Phrenomania

6 The external senses are acute the appetite irregular
The pulse & other functions unaffected

7 This is a second attack of alienation at least & was ushered in by restlessness & watchfulness for about a month before the appearance of the disease

8 The patient declares that he is the Lame of God & proud as to act in that character affecting to speak &
write in all languages & saying in a fantastic manner

9 There is no disposition to suicide

10 The patient is perfectly inoffensive but his morbid train of thought is excited by allusion to the Trinity or to the Virgin Mary

11 The relations of the patient do not reside in Scotland
& are unknown to the reporter

12 Perpetual regulations of diet & a lotion have constituted the medicinal treatment

13 Insanity has existed for about a fortnight It is reported that he was formerly confined in an Asylum in England

No 492

1 June 1856 The Theomania which had especially the prominent feature in the individual is now obscured and overborn by the disturbance of all the mental powers the Meprah the Impager from Heaven, the Avotes the exposure of truth is now a reality, Omnichevond Imparions (Mormon) to whom is attributed every accident & revolution of Fate which occurs & who is actually the author of many of these. His appetite for food is only exceeded by his Craving for Whores, which is often fulfilled as well as checked. He eclipses his native Irish by a jargon still used to supplants in the Comments. He lies in a Curragh deep he continues to tear his ^{under} clothing & although provided with a mattress on the floor depressed of firmness & left to solitude he lances & rages his limbs during the night as if engaged in furious combat. He labors at present under the Lunatic cur. Anodynes and Phosor bath of house been tried & are now tried but without the production of Composure or benefit. He has been ordered animal food every day.

1 June 1856 While each day may present a modification in the Combination or intensity of the symptoms in this case while the patient has been experimentally exposed in a cell while he has become thin or roused corpulent while he has been affrighted & the purpose of some of the facts the patienture of one day will fully & faithfully depict the features of the disease when visited in the morning. His room is found panned with the excrement he had from time destroyed or displaced the patient warning to & for in the work of disorder putting up & mending, pentacles of the demolished articles but with no intention to avoid the disclosure of his (mis)deeds which he treats as an ordinary & indifferent occurrence. When he rises & apperalls in his curragh sleep he dooves an enormous heap of, consumes what is left by the others, teases, taunts, torments those around, creeps under the table steals, secretes & sneaks & speaks & meddles & is ungenerous but withal according to his own conception of humor softens in his native Irish without the slightest apparent suspicion that his auditors are ignorant of every word that he utters. From some sally of wrath he passes to theology, expresses his scepticism of every creed and principle, offers to fight, dashes to the water closet in order to wash in the accumulated contents of the cistern or to perpetrate some act equally revolting. At dinner his appetite is so ravenous as before, and its gratification as unlimited were he not controlled. As the day advances his cry for tobacco becomes more clamorous, and it is affirmed that smoking soothes and subdues him. Again he is really mischievous, mendacious, and degraded, again he indulges largely in food, and retires to bed, vigilant and vigorous to commence at once the vigils of the night. There has been at long intervals mitigation of the symptoms but no approximation to convalescence. Morphine and hyoscyamus with hot bathing and double and triple diet with stimulants and purgatives have been exhibited, and for protracted periods but without discernible benefit.

1st April 1872.

A. G. is at present in the condition of a wild element. He has the hematometean ears, and muscles & his habits are now regular & industrious. He takes his food well & is a great lover of his beer & tobacco. He is however given to scheme work occasionally & this he does on a pretence of some feet. He is fond also of wheeling the lightest harrow & of putting a small quantity in it. But these shrewdness when his own corporeal efforts are concerned are the only characteristics of judgment, his ordinary is all confusion of ideas & assertion of relations in things where none subsist. His health is very fair.

- No 493. Jane Templeton. Admitted 21st March, 1856.
Aged 63. A widow. A tambourer. Of good disposition.
- 2 No cause can be assigned for her present condition.
 - 3 Discontent and sleeplessness preceded the appearance of actual alienation.
 - 4 She has not been subject to Epilepsy and has seldom required medical or surgical aid treatment as her health has been generally good.
 - 5 The patient's malady is the mania of fear (and) appears to be increasing.
 - 6 The external senses are stated to be little affected, and the other functions to be normal.
 - 7 This is the first attack, and was ushered in by depression.
 - 8 Her present delusion is that she is about to be taken to a dungeon in consequence of some crime committed by her: she is constantly under the influence of terror, and goes about during the night, rubbing her hands and moaning.
 - 9 She has not displayed any suicidal designs.
 - 10 She has contracted an antipathy to her neighbour upon the ground that reports were circulated by her that she had murdered her husband.
 - 11 Her friends are not known to have any predisposition to mental disease.
 - 12 She has not been subjected to treatment.
 - 13 She has been insane for two weeks and has never been an inmate of an asylum.

1st June, 1856. This haggard, pale, panic struck being is calculated to impart unbounded pity. She is not only about to be consigned to chains and removed to prison, but is loaded with guilt. She is waked during the night by the officers of the law who come to seize upon her: the horror which is ever present to her and the darkness which have suggested this agony are laid bare and quite conspicuous by the glare of innumerable lanterns which these frightful visitors hold up to her face in spite of all her efforts. She need not excite surprise that under such discipline she should be restless and sleepless. She shrinks from the approach under the gaze of the most friendly at noon: but her panic is aggravated during darkness. Crouching concealing her features she endeavours to escape observation, ^{and then} even the accents of sympathy carry terror in their sound. The application of all moral means inflicts additional suffering and she

stimulants being ordered in place of more direct agents. She is allowed animal food. As in all such cases of concentration the bracts are torpid and demand constant attention.

June 1st, 1857.

Widow Hempleton is kept miserable, deep apprehension, and able to engage in employment if permitted to pursue her vocation at a distance from and undisturbed by any of her associates. Her dread of visits from the police, her conviction that such domiciliary inspections were actually made, that she was the object and deserved to be the object of pursuit, have latterly occupied a subordinate place in her mind. It is conceived that her belief in the existence of such spirit causes for alarm and anxiety is shaken. But she continues to maintain adequate courses of annoyance by misinterpreting the conduct and conversation of her associates into insults, interferences, and calumnies, and is occasionally pained to defy and retaliate, and punish by physical force those attempts to persecute. Timid, suspicious, and irritable; noises, strangers, or changes distract and disturb:
but even when no external impressions reach her she is depressed, and melancholy, and discontented. Stimulants and opiates have been chiefly trusted to in the treatment of her case.

Act.

- 2 The disease is said to be hereditary, but the exciting cause is not mentioned.
- 3
- 4 She is not affected with epilepsy.
- 5 The malady appears to consist in fatuity.
- 6 The bodily health is satisfactory.
- 7 This is the first attack.
- 8 The patient is "weak minded and incoherent."
- 9 The patient is not disposed to suicide.
- 10 She is inoffensive.
- 11 Some of her relatives here are benighted, and a direct uncle was called "daft Dick Malone."
- 12
- 13 She has resided in Gartnavel for about two years.

June 1st, 1856.

The fatuity of this patient does not interfere with her good humour, habitual cheerfulness, or active industry. Although impaired in judgement, dulled and deadened in affection, and harbouring that delusion that her native parish and home are so overpopulated, so crowded that she could not be admitted, that no space remains for her. She is ever smiling and aiding the movement of the gallery in which she resides. She expresses perfect indifference towards her family, and seems now to be completely domesticated. She does not labour under any malady.

1st June, 1857

In this case of chronic fatuity no amelioration has been effected. The symptoms are stationary, and may be expected to continue so. She is an excellent housemaid but craves wages in snuff.

Act. 40. Unmarried. A worshiper of quiet disposition. She can read.

- 2 The disease is traced back to a rheumatic fever under which the patient laboured twenty-four years ago as a predisposing cause. She labours under Amenorrhoea.
- 3 No premonitory symptoms were observed except loquacity.
- 4 She has not been subject to epilepsy.
- 5 The disease appears to be maniacal in type, but improvement has taken place.
- 6 The patient's appetite is impaired. Bowels constipated. Catamania absent. Bowel secretion natural. Pulse feeble. Respiration natural.
- 7 This is the first attack.
- 8 The patient has been very noisy and talkative, speaking incoherently upon various topics: regarding her fellow patients as relatives. She now converses more sensibly but her mind is feeble and slow in its operations. She is sleepless.
- 9 The patient has not exhibited any suicidal tendencies.
- 10 She destroyed her clothes at the commencement of the attack.
- 11 Her friends do not acknowledge the existence of hereditary predisposition.
- 12 The treatment has consisted in the employment of laxatives, opiates, generous diet, and counter irritatives, and with benefit.
- 13 Slight symptoms of unsoundness of mind appeared six months since; the present condition has existed for a month. She has been an inmate of Gaitnaird for fourteen days.

June 1st, 1856.

The gaze of astonishment and perplexity, the perfect repose or apathy, the silence and retirement in manner of this patient suggested the existence of partial dementia. From the history of the case it was conceived that the ^{superior} impotence of mental activity might consist in the infatigability succeeding great excitement, rather than in impairment, and the only remedial arrangement determined upon was to place the patient in circumstances favourable to the preservation of composure, and at the same time conducive to the development of healthy activity. The companionship of the pious and conscientious, access to amusements, the stimulus of occupation, and especially the instruction in a new department of female industry have produced the desired effect, and V. H. is now intelligent, free from all doubt, and difficulty, and apprehension and in all respects an amiable and trustworthy inmate. She has been prescribed the Tincture Sanguiflorid of iron as much as a tonic as an emmenagogue.

July 10th, 1856.

After a brief but satisfactory probation V. H. has left the Institution manifesting perfect intelligence, and lively spirits.

 1856. Aet. 37. Married and has children, of irritable temper, moderate education, and inoffensive disposition.

- 1 The cause of the malady is not known.
- 2 Elevation of spirits preceded the patient's illness.
- 3 She has not suffered from bodily ailment.
- 4 The patient labours under mania, the disease is increasing.
- 5 The appetite and physical functions are natural.
- 6 This is the second attack at least, and is reported to have followed a brief interval containing several months.
- 7 Inherent insanity is adduced as the chief characteristic of the disease.
- 8 There appears to be no suicidal tendency.
- 9 The patient is irritable but inoffensive.
- 10 All hereditary tendency to mental disease is denied.
- 11 "Bleeding, blistering, and such like, is reported to have constituted the treatment.
- 12 The expression "about three years ago" returned as an answer to the interrogatory as to the duration and former management of the case seems to indicate residence in some other establishment.

June 1st, 1856

It is probable that this individual is never perfectly emancipated from mental disease, but there exist long periods during which she is calm, placible, active in occupation, and ^{conscious} aware or affects to be conscious of her intemperate language and conduct and desirous in protestations of attempted amendment. To the medical officers her scheme has never been fully manifested.

but the numbers of her own sex she is frequently vituperative, hysterically passionate, and altogether uncontrollable. She stamps, swears, threatens, and elicits during these paroxysms, and evidently loses all consciousness of her proceedings. Such ebullitions occur suddenly and without any appreciable cause, although she invariably attributes her indisposition to another party. The Matron is regarded by her with special suspicion, and is generally pointed out as proving or justifying in some inexplicable manner her excitement. The presence of her husband has determined the manifestation of these operations and at a time when it was obviously her object and interest to check and hide such proofs of derangement had it been in her power to do so. This is, when free from excitement, blooming in countenance, and pleasing in manner.

Aug. 1st, 1856.

A period of composure and self control of considerable duration induced the husband of the patient to try the influence of household duties and feelings.

Ad. 43. Widow of carrier, of quiet disposition, she can read and write a little.

- 2 The disease is hereditary, but no exciting cause is assigned for the present attack.
- 3 The disease seems to have occurred only two or three days after her return home.
- 4 She is not subject to insanity.
- 5 She is again suffering under melancholy.
- 6 Her physical condition is normal.
- 7 This is the third attack though it became developed only a few days after her arrival at home followed a lucid interval of six weeks duration.
- 8 High nervous excitement was followed by despondency and by terror as to her spiritual condition.
- 9 She has attempted and would again attempt suicide.
- 10 She is inoffensive.
- 11 The father and a brother of the patient died insane, another brother is eccentric.
- 12
- 13 She has been twice an inmate of the Crichton Institution.

1st June 1856

From her own version of the circumstances attending her present seclusion it would appear that the first vestige of insanity & delirium had been acted upon in removing her from home. It is certain however that intense despondency followed her admission. A severe attack of Conjunctivitis directed her attention from her mental suffering, and while active treatment was pursued to avert the menaced disorganisation of an eye she regained calm and resignation. There is now every prospect that vision will prove to be unimpaired & the necessity for avoiding all unnecessary exercise or fatigue of the organ constitutes the only obstacle to the resumption of her industrial habits and ordinary course of conduct.

21 November 1856 M^{rs} S. has been gradually becoming more impatient and importunate as the season advanced. Her appeals and solicitations are founded upon the knowledge that her restoration is admitted by the Medical officer & that the pretext for her detention is solely the desire to consolidate her mental health & the dread that the return to former associations may again as it has formerly induced depression & despair. For many months she has been sane, but is still pensive & deficient in energy. All persons interested in her welfare have consented to her discharge with reluctance & misgiving.

Vide Case

1. The disease is hereditary but excited into activity by indulgence in stimulants

4.

5. The patient exhibits symptoms of the mania

6. He appears to enjoy good bodily health.

7. This is the second attack and has occurred after a lucid interval of some months duration.

9. There does not appear to be any tendency to commit suicide.

10. He is not violent.

11. The disease is affirmed to be hereditary.

12.

13. Was formerly an inmate of the Southern Counties Asylum

1 June 1856. The letters transmitted by this individual to an inmate of most vibrational modes of the King, which at liberty demonstrates the vague mystical and excited love of his own mind, even when regarded as comparatively sane, and entrusted with all the privileges of independence. It would appear that he entertains some delusions as to his social position - conceives that he is endowed with special penetration into the secrets of Providence, and that he has been & is subjected to religious persecution. Except an violent conduct towards members of his family, appears to have and exclusion unavoidable. He does not display this peculiarities of opinion when Confined, but he is haughty proud, dull & suspicious. He has however after considerable reluctance joined the agriculturists.

19 May 1857.

This person may be said to have a morbid temperament. His temper is variable: he is prostrated by indolence or active and energetic. He conceives that he is always & describes an imaginary malady & rises unexpectedly from bed & engages in occupation Yet during these changes no incoherent sentence is uttered. No extraneous is committed. He is intelligent & acute and possesses many of the traces of a liberal, but neglected & misapplied education. of the elements of an agreeable companion He sings exquisitely, composes verses, writes beautifully. And performs every act with that neatness and taste & delicacy which are rarely relinquished by disease or disordered habits or by both as in this case. He affects deep religious impressions
- writes in a pious strain, & is much disposed to admonish & instruct those with whom he mingles as to what he regards as the truth. His conduct has for sometime been so respectful and apart from what may be regarded as vagaries of im-agination as legitimately, as errors of intellect that arrange-ments have again been made for his return to his friends although it remains very doubtful how far he can resist the influences of his profession, position & proclivity to excitement.

2. The disease is attributed to excess in study & disappointment his father's poverty rendering attendance at College impossible.

3. The disease was ushered in by great depression, by impairment of digestion, Constipation of bowels & irascibility of temper.

4. He has been subject to no Corysivian disease. His sleep was sometimes disturbed by night starting or panic.

5. The symptoms details would indicate the presence of mania, but all that is patent to notice belong to Intensity.

6. The physical health is reported to be good.

7. This is the first attack

8. The patient is restless during the night, but does not talk nor leave his bed. "He complains of people speaking in his ears."

9. He has no disposition to destroy himself.

10. He is described as having been unruly, passionate & irritable - as breaking windows and his father's clock: & as manifesting a disposition to assault those around.

11. His friends affirm that no hereditary predisposition exists in the family.

12.

13. He has been ill for eight months, but has never been placed in an Asylum.

1 June 1856. This case is an illustration of the frequent combination of mania or mania or Concentration with abnormal conditions of the muscular system, & of the tendency of one of these affections to merges into another. He is not only pale rather emaciated, milder & grotesque, but his movements are chaotic or only partially regulated by volition. His progression is a rapid shuffle. Every action is imperfectly adapted to the object in view. The act of rising up or sitting down is a contortion he fails to dress or undress him - it is with great difficulty that he takes food, and the awkwardness of all attempts indisposes him to leave his seat or to feed himself. In these efforts it is obvious that the left side is left powerful and left precise in its movements than the right. The left foot describes a semi-circle in walking. - The pallidity of the face, the coldness of the surface, the slow, sluggish pulse, the dilated pupil have suggested the employment of the Pil. alus & Ferri and a nutritious diet, while the fact that the enfeeblement of the intelligence succeeded mental exertion and disappointment seemed to justify the application of Galvanism to the Cerebro Spinal axis, as the most direct and at the same time the least exhausting stimulus. The patient is undoubtedly roused by for sometime subsequent to the use of the Galvanism, but as yet no permanent change has been observed.

21 May 1857. The remedial measures recorded above were persevered in for a long period. The application of Galvanism appeared at the time to rouse the system to greater activity and more complete coordination & regulation of movement. - But permanent benefit rather resulted from the repeated efforts to check irregular & extravagant muscular action to promote voluntary activity & to obviate the evils which must have flowed from indolence, abstinence & inattention to cleanliness or inability to perform the movements required. The amelioration however consists in nothing more than an capacity for sustained progression in the abrogation of the realization of the goal in the unobstructed discharge of many acts which involve not only volition but complex mental direction. His expression is highly intelligent and he appears to sustain a kind of intercourse with those around by the instrumentality of natural language but he has not yet articulated. His frame is robust.

1. Since 1854, no specific delusions can be detected in this individual upon the present occasion. It may be that he has from former experience, discovered the expediency, and acquired the tact of concealing opinions which are regarded as evidence of soundness
But

But the general simplicity and feebleness of his character forbids such an hypothesis. He appears to have forgotten or misapprehended the circumstances connected with his removal and describes the act as an unprovoked unjustifiable aggression. He is now calm, but impatient of his delusion, and although disposed to assist the attendants in their duties declines to apply himself to garden work. His aspect is rusty and weather beaten.

1st June 1857. A. B. is busied in working his delirance at present by means of written appeals to the Royal Corduroy Co. who have an office in an obscure alley in Dumfries. Visionary projects rather than hallucinations occupy his attention, although the mental condition which dictates such observations as that they told him, or he has means of information that a large supply of writing Paper belonging to him is deposited in the Institution is closely allied to the latter. He is florid & healthy but declines all active employment.

1st April 1852 A. B. has manifested no improvement since last report. His delusions now are not a prominent feature in his case, & it is even questionable if they exist. His manner is silent & depressed. He never speaks to any person, but will answer questions. He suffers much from chilblains during the winter. He will do no active work, but he walks daily in the grounds & has fair averaged health.

12 March 1853 Alex: Broadfoot enjoys fair health, except that in winter he suffers from chilblains which extend to ulceration. He makes no mention of having been kept here, but answers questions put to him with attention.

2. The patient is not naturally of strong mind, but no cause is assigned for his present condition
 3. The patient himself states that he has for a long time been anxious & apprehensive as to religious truths - Previous to the present attack he was sleepless and wandered into the fields.
 4. He has not been subject to Epilepsy
 5. The Patient labors under religious melancholia & is increasing
 6. I go all the other functions are normal.
 7. This is the first attack.
 8. He believes himself to be forsaken by the Almighty, and that Satan urges him to kill his wife, and then to destroy himself
 9. He threatened to destroy his wife & himself.
 10. The patient is inoffensive,
 11. It is not understood that the patient's friends are subject to hereditary taint.
 12. A planibo was exhibited, but no treatment was attempted.
 13. The patient has been insane for two weeks, but has never been confined.
- 1 June 1856. This patient labored less under religious melancholy than under a disposition to be embarrassed and obscure, his convictions by speculative inquiries into religion.
See

He dreaded the perplexity, the doubt & multifidiansing not which his discussions or rather his reveries led for he is an uneducated man. He suffered chiefly from the struggle to avoid the temptation to plunge deeper into mysteries, to restrain his mind within the limits of external impressions
 - His want of success induced apprehension, despair and sleeplessness. This wear is obtained from his own Convisions
 - The influence of the Sol & Luna Morph in soothing, in suggesting agreeable sensations it may be cogitated to the Conscience during the night - was all marked in S. M. So triumphant was the drug that the patient regarded with the feelings of the phant worshipper - He depended upon it petitioned for it - pled for it - Upon the restoration of sleep and the establishment of relief that it could be obtained at the will of the medical officer. The fears and forebodings of the patient were in a great measure dispelled - He saw and felt the possibility of hope and happiness & relinquished himself to the Convision
 His activity and zeal as a laborer are now proverbial.
 He is at present recovering from a severe attack of suppurated sore throat, but little or no depression resulted from the suffering and discomfort to which he must have been subjected - S. M. continued to the period of dismissal to exhibit unvariable propriety of demeanor and self control.

13. He has never been in confinement.

1st June 1856. This partial imbecile is cheerful and contented. A laugh greets every observation, and although conscious of his change of residence & position he is neither depressed

- 4. The patient is affected with paralysis.
- 5. The disease at present existing is Fatuity, and seems to be increasing.
- 6. Her physical health is reported to be satisfactory
- 7. This is the first attack.
- 8. The patient is represented as disposed to create disturbance and to destroy her wearing apparel.

- 10. She is somewhat pugnacious
- 11. No family pre disposition to disease is known to exist.
- 12. The patient has not been under treatment.
- 13. The mental disease is said to have been of only six or eight days duration

1 June 1856. It was hoped that as the period lengthened from the attack of paralysis the amount of dementia would decrease. The patient articulates indistinctly, walks with an inclination to fall backwards - is utterly incapable of attending to cleanliness or of performing any yet demanding combination of muscular force. There is however an exception to this proposition when excited and irritable. She destroys her own apparel - clutches that of her companions in order to destroy it.

death it to the same purpose, and inflat. severe bites when her intentions are frustrated. Increased vasillation in progression, the total abolition of language, & loss of appetite accompanied by somnolency suggested the apprehension of new attack of cerebral congestion. The patient was blistered on the nape of the neck, but although somewhat improved, she is obviously sinking into more profound fatuity & helpless senescence.

11 Jan'y 1857. This patient may be said to have been moribund for months before death. - Repeated attacks of cerebral congestion occurred which although not of severe character enabled the Asylum, despite all power of progression, and was succeeded by bed sores of great extent. The use of water cushions, the exhibition of Bark & wine & unremitting attention from time to time effected the cicatrization of these, imperfect temporary vigor & enabled the Patient to sit up for some hours in an invalids chair. For several months however she was confined constantly to bed. Sores again appeared ultimately wherever the body came into contact with the bed dress. gangrenous ulcers arose & the patient may be said to have died at the surface, while she was smiling serenely at the ministrations going on for her relief. There was sometimes restlessness & irritability but her prevailing moral characteristic was repose, resignation and good humour.

2. By cause of the malady, but it is conjectured that the blindness of the Patient may have aggravated her depression.

3. The Patient is described as always sanguine spirited, but was not unusually so before the invasion of the disease.

4. She has never been subject to epilepsy or other convulsive disease. She was once cut for scirrhus of the lip. She dates her mental suffering from the operation.

5. The patient labors under Melancholia.

6. The external senses are said to be "morbid" but in what respect is not stated. She labors under anorexia P. 90. A. normal.

7. This is the second attack. The first occurred about eight - ten months.

8. She considers herself spiritually lost.

9. She has meditated, but not attempted to commit suicide.

10. The patient is gentle and tractable.

11. The patient had a brother, who was for many years in - sane, and died in that state.

12. The disease has been combated by blistering, purgatives & Hyosciamus

13. Insanity has existed for about four months, but the patient has not been (been) secluded.

12 June 1856 The progress of amelioration is going on in this case, although the patient is not disposed to admit that she is better or happier. The features of disease which have lost their intensity intensity and influence are the fear and anxiety which prompted incessant movements, wringing the hands and plaintive murmurs; the obstinate agitation during which she sat up in bed or wandered through the room and that expression of extreme suffering which chiselled the countenance into deep furrows. She now exhibits traces of contentment. She remains quietly in repose although it is probable that her sleep is not profound nor long continued. She is constantly employed in knitting, and having been confided to the care of a kind and judicious attendant, she accompanied her associates in their promenade apart from the conviction that something was about to happen she has been rational and quiet during the whole of her illness: and has been able to describe the feelings of darkness and despair & oppression by which she was overpowered, the dread that happened was to be as blind as her eyes; the utter inability to do anything but suffer. She has been prescribed the Sinec. Cambr. Ind. & occasional laxatives.

30 July 1836 The fact that N. M. has recently been a lively dancer during the Visitations of the Patients would imply that her restoration to health and serenity is complete. She is not however altogether free from morbid feelings. She now fears that she is not so well as she appears to be, that she will not continue to retain the comparative peace she has attained. But a desire to return to her friends and their estimate of her amendment have led to her removal. - She leaves the establishment full of gratitude & love.

1 June 1856. R. H. is garrulous good tempered and absurd rather than sagacious in his opinions. Much of this extravagance is produced by attempts to excite laughter. He may have been an Italian village wit. His voice is loud, his style declamatory and demonstrative. His peroration ludicrous or intended to be ludicrous.
 Being vigilant he is disposed to watch the night with a cration his premises to abstain from an exercise of his powers which disturbs the dormitory ^{or} humours to his disease. He has lost flesh since admission.

1 June 1857. The manner of this man is quaint and eccentric as it has ever been. He is anxious to say brilliant or apposite or caustic observations. These sometimes consist in quotations from scripture in proverbs in platitudes or his own experiences humorously conveyed. His loquacity has given place to brief oracular sentences. His boldness and presumption to a desire for privacy and marked humility. His great present solicitude is to work in such manner & usefully as to discharge the obligations which he avers that he has incurred during his stay. Notwithstanding this he is willing to contract new debts in the shape of Tobacco. He deprecates the proposal (the) of discharge, but such an event is contemplated, as he is supposed to be in possession at present of his intellectual maximum.

16 Aug 1857. Longer observations confirmed the opinion that R. H. had been restored to that limited capacity & narrow eccentricity which constitute his normal condition. The authorities of his parish having adopted this view, the Patient was discharged. It is sometime he had desired to return to his native place.

13. He was confined for eleven days in the Glasgow Asylum

1st April

1 June 1856 S. A. L. and an air of astonishment are the chief characteristics that have been observed in this case. The patient very rarely speaks spontaneously. He never originates more than a brief question - When spoken to he manifests surprise, pauses a long time as if unwilling or unable to reply or as if the process of mentalization were slow & difficult. His articulation is distinct & precise.

1 June 1857 Hoops was at one time entertained that this individual was retaining intelligence & had acquired some conception of the real nature of his mental processes but these expectations have been dissipated by a sudden development of mania. The invasion was instantaneous. He was engaged in stone breaking & without word or signal or provocation he aimed a blow at a companions head with his hammer which might have been fatal. When interfered with in defiance ^{with violence} & a more struggle ensued during which it is affirmed he exerted every energy to destroy those who held and overpowered him. The man's rage was fugacious but the sneers & threats of revenge, the complaints of unjust & unmanly defeat, & the surly sanguinary look remained for days. He has now relapsed into the condition which preceded the temporary lucidity and which appears to be the permanent and essential phase of his malady. He is either silent and haughty or more generally affected by courtesy & complacency. He speaks rapidly & pompously & closes his paragraphs by a doggeril rhyme. His improvisations however bear no relation to incidents with those around. They are chanted as he walks along, chanted or muttered as he is at work & intermingled with every act he performs. These contemporaneous productions generally refer to rural affairs. It is however difficult to determine the theme as they are not only incoherent, but the necessity which equally obviates of bringing them to a close & metaphorically sets all meaning at defiance & this is still more observed by the copious infusion of oaths & profanities which either the poverty of other vocabularies or the copiousness of prohibited phrases determined. It is slow and strong.

1st April 1858 D. E. is now a very active workman in the usual occupation in the grounds. His intellectual powers are far being repaired & he is prone to attacks of dangerous excitement. He is in good health.

- 12th March 1873 David Edgar continues in good health. there is no change in his mental condition. He works steadily & well.
- 10th Decr 1873 D. E. now assists the Baker at his duties. He sometimes shows a suicidal disposition & knocks his head against the wall. His general health is not so robust.

- 12-1-85 For some days past it has been noticed that D.E. has had difficulty in passing urine & evidently had pain during the act although he denied it. He has been brought down to the Infirmary & a catheter was attempted to be passed but this failed the prostate being so much enlarged. At night he passed about 3viii voluntarily after standing for some considerable time. The stream was very small. He is much thinner than he was sometime ago & lately has been noticed to be falling off in his eating powers.

This man is of ~~healthy~~ sinister aspect. He avoids kind words or sympathy of society. He walks rapidly to & fro close to the wall in the gallery in which he is placed, gazing furtively from side to side, & on all around as if suspecting rather than dreading their motives. When addressed he smiles, mutters a few scarcely audible words, endeavoring to give significance to his observations by a peculiar shrug of the shoulders & then moves away. Careless and indifferent he is slovenly in dress and somewhat in appearance. He has been perfectly in-
-offensive to both sexes, although daily coming into contact with females.

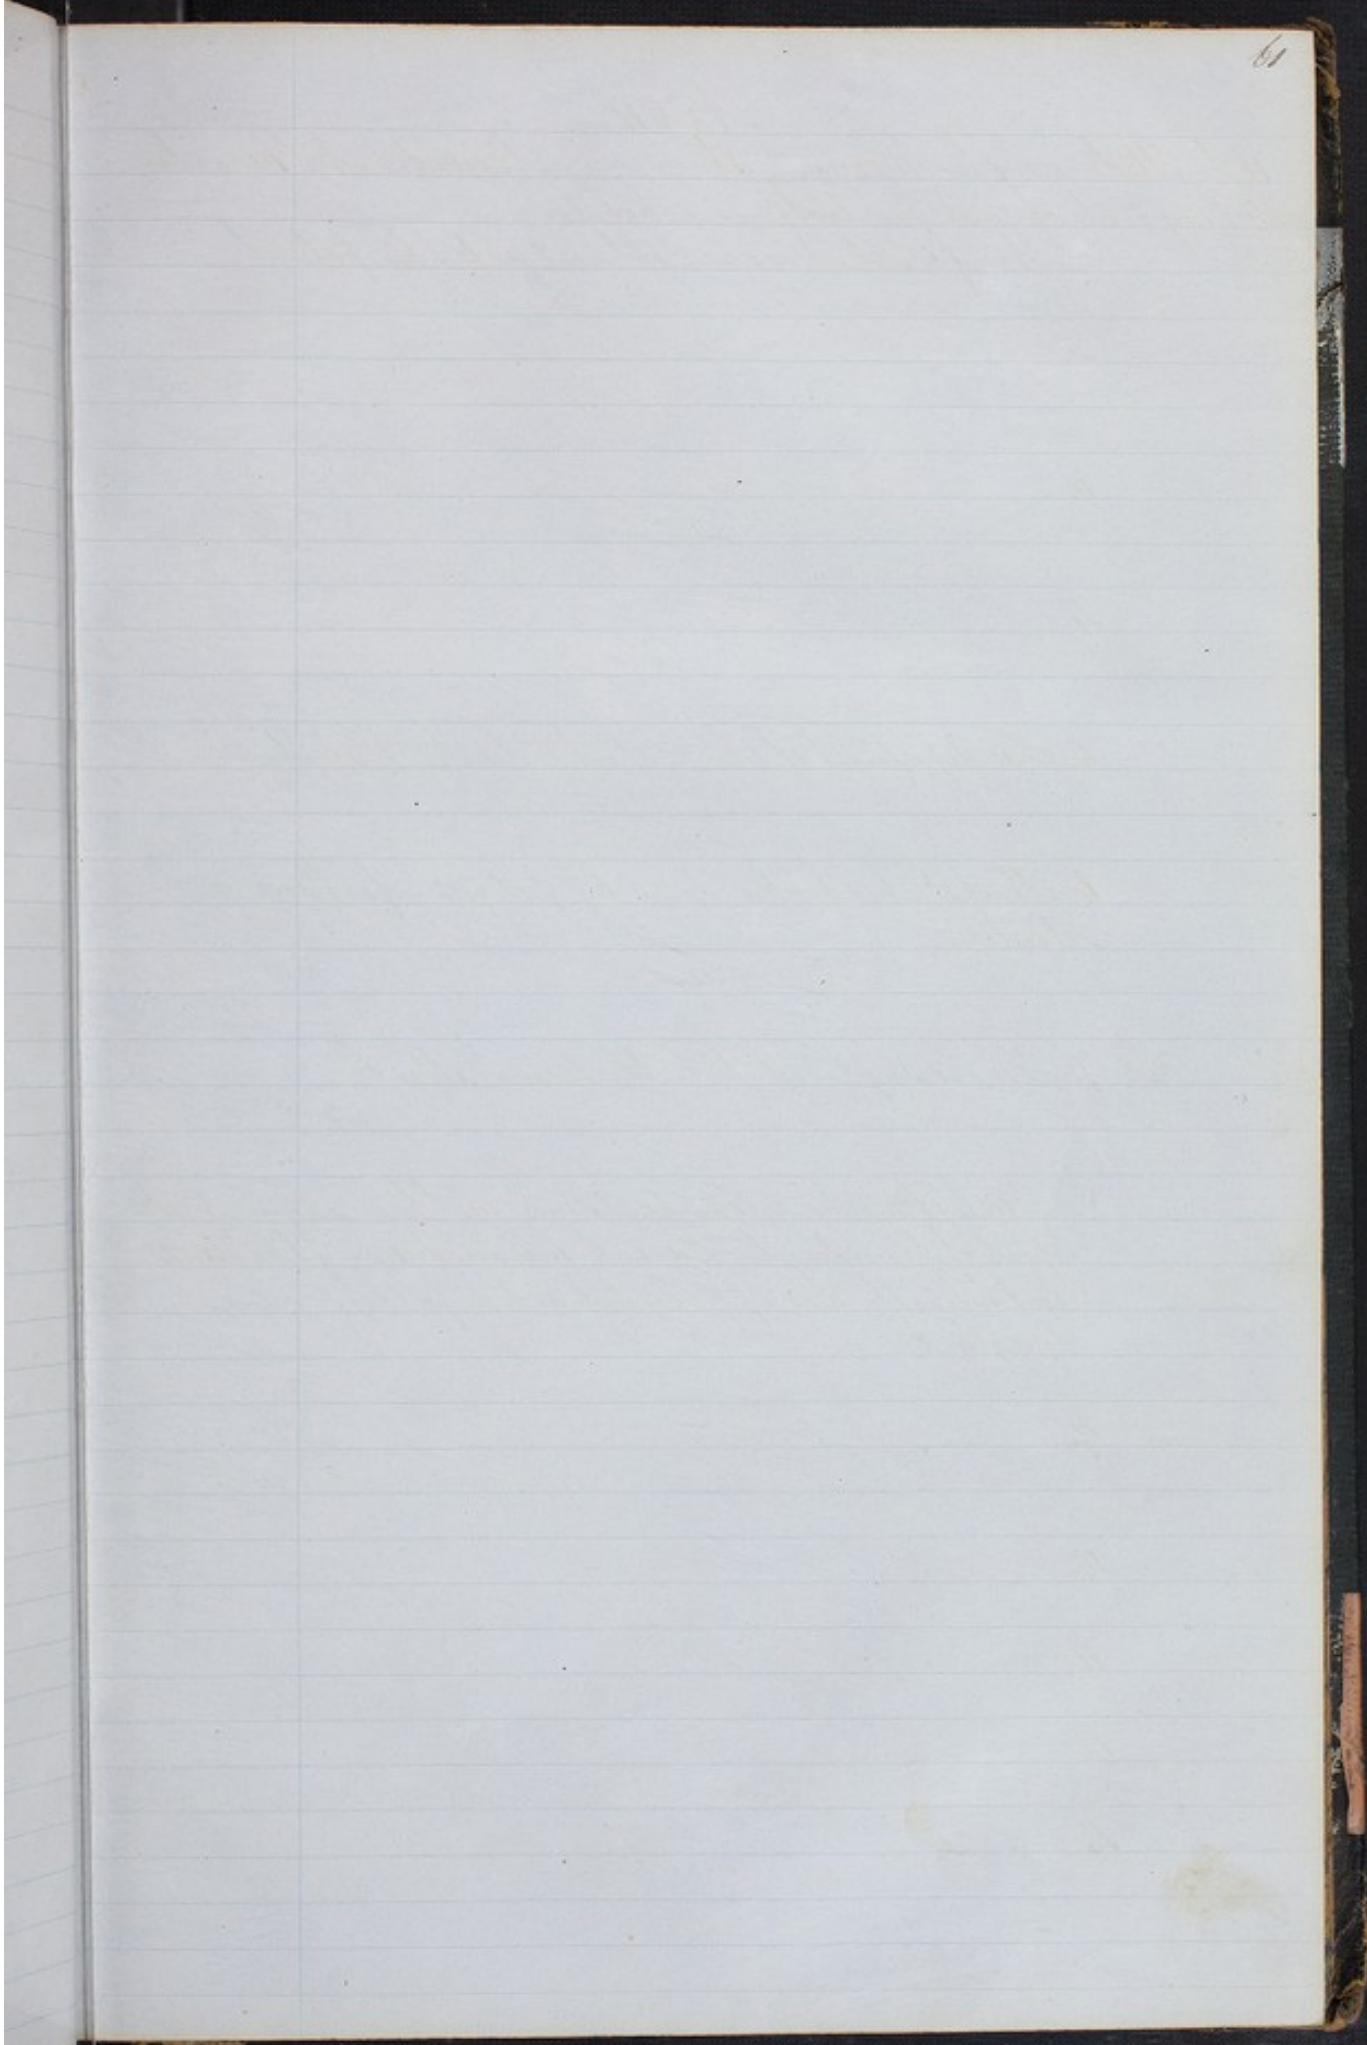

1 June 1857 Under the impression that this man was either a mastur-

1 June 1856. A yet this individual has passed his time slumbering upon the benches. His feet were denuded of skin on his arrival in consequence of wandering for days among the mountains situated between his home which he left clandestinely and the point of his destination. These sores requires rest and although ^{scarcely} nearly crested the repose which was enjoined as a precaution has become an agreeable habit. He is calm, silent, vacant and rapid. His condition may be the temporary fatuity which succeeds violent exertion, as well as intense emotion.

15 July 1856 The rest recommended at first to this patient was succeeded by exertion and activity. He speedily recovered his health, but is of weak intellect.

1 June 1856. When admitted S. H. labored under erythema of the ankle induced by perambulations on the beach with her children. Rest and fomentation have removed this, the slight excitement present has now subsided, and she is calm timid but incapable of occupation and sits dull abstracted and occasionally uttering allusions as to her children.

1 June 1857. With our brief exception S. H. has continued in a state of lucidity since her recovery from the effects of the restoration and immediate disruption of her family ties. While excited she presented the same features as during former attacks: was restless or motionless gazing around in a state of torpid stupor, incapable of performing a single office or act for herself (yet sometimes resort to vehement declamation, at the same time laboring under great tremor of the head and becoming rapidly thin. For many months she has been rational composed, and a useful knitter. Amiable disposition and ^{obedient} obedient as to her children, but evidently of weak though at present sound mind.

12 November 1836 This patient appears to regain his power of self control, his confidence and judgment whenever he comes within the precincts of an Asylum. But although again discharged as of sound mind, a greater amount of evidence has been obtained of an unhealthy nervous system during the present than during any former attack. Again there were periods of sudden & unaccountable panic. He was employed as an amanuensis by the House steward in copying the narratives of cases such as this is, but was obliged to desist at the painful incident! Symptoms recorded threatened in his own conviction to reduce him to a state similar to that described. He was in firm of purpose, lethargic, moody sometimes melancholy & declining all society and intercourse except what was necessary for the gratification of his own wishes. At present he appears to be in the full possession of reason.

13. He has been more or less in his present condition since 28 May 56. He has been in Prison under an accusation of Bigamy.

1 Sept 1856.

The following are the first reports of this case.

21 June, L.R. Two fits of epilepsy since admission - one in ten minutes after arrival. He shakes his head, half in heaviness, half in agitation, but as if threatened with P. agitant. He is said to have attempted suicide by strangulation while in Prison. He attributes his convulsive attacks originally to fear, having when a boy been pushed into a river. But after having suffered from these for two years they ceased, nor did they reappear for seven years, not indeed until about six weeks since when agitated by an accusation of Bigamy.

22. Another convulsive attack.

23. No convulsive attacks - walks better.

From this date the improvement of the patient was progressive but decided. His advance to Convalescence however was so gradual so imperceptible that simulation could not have entered into the process. He staggered, vacillated, walked with a shuffle, stumbled more rarely, exhibited fatigue & timidity in taking exercise, & ultimately moved as healthy, self-confident man more. The same evolution occurred in Language & Mind. - Twice he was betrayed into violent passion & strife & Hulleness. But the ebullition was brief & succeeded by sincere penitence & amendment. His demeanour throughout his residence was most exemplary & satisfactory.

5. The patient gives indications of Fatuity.

6. Her physical condition has latterly improved.

7. This is the first attack.

8. The patient is constantly speaking of her release and affirms that she craves it especially that she may resume her former occupation. She was found on the streets wandering to & fro, in a state of nudity.

9. It is believed that when apprehended she was on her way to the river to drown herself.

10. She is believed to be inoffensive.

11.

12. During the first stage of her phrenia she refused both medicine & nourishment, but both have latterly improved under mercurial alteratives.

13. She has been insane for ten days, but has not before been confined in an Asylum.

2 November. This patient was from the first plausible - so calm and 1856. reasonable that it was difficult to determine how far she believed what she said, or how far the hearer was called upon to believe it. She was extremely partial to a disguise upon the injury she was sustaining from her inability to make up her deceased husband's books, & that there not existed the previous knowledge of her abandoned conduct & of the destitution in which he died, it is possible that the narrative might have obtained credit. Its falsity suggested suspicion as to the authenticity of various others, and M^r No was regarded as a person devoid of principle & without scruples.

18th Oct 1856. This was a case of ~~brief~~ ^{paralytic} mania of brief duration. The patient was torn and lacerated by the mere desire to struggle without anger or hostility, or any other motive, without the power to regulate his passions, by the simple desire as it has been expressed to expend the superfluous of muscular force. During the first night of his seclusion he exhibited extreme ~~excitement~~ ^{excitement} - tore the stuffing from the sides of the padded bed, and would have committed great ravages had supervision been kept vigilant. On every succeeding day, increasing tranquillity & gentleness were observed until the 29th Inst, when it is recorded that "he was so calm and sensible that he was placed in a dormitory." His excitement was accompanied by a full pulse, but which was disposed to intermit. The volume being attributable to the exertions of the patient, the irregularity to the real debility which characterises mania. When the depression succeeded, the acute stage gave way to intercourse & cheerful society, he engaged in amputation, & was at once regarded as conval-

4. The only diseases for which the patient required treatment have been scrotitis & dysuria.
5. The patient labors under furious Mania characterized by violence, intemperance, profuseness. The symptoms are increasing.

7. The patient has had at least six attacks, separated by periods of various duration. The last attack occurred four years ago.
8. There is great incoherence, constant allusion to dogs, horses and field sports in which he is anxious to engage. He would engage in furious driving if permitted, & is disposed to wander from home. Vigilant & agitated both night & day.
9. His disposition to self destruction is supposed to exist.
10. He is excited by all opposition, has destroyed furniture & assaulted those around. His violence followed even during the existence of mental derangement.
11. His family does not labor under any hereditary taint. A paternal Cousin was an inmate of the Southern Counties Asylum.
12. No "regular" treatment has been attempted, yet from another source it would appear that the patient has been "cupped, blistered, and purged" without effect.
13. Mental unsoundness has existed at intervals for thirty years.

The present attack dates from 20 Mar. 1856. He has not been secluded.

11 Novemb. 1856. The violence or agitation of this man was extreme. It is probable that a portion of its intensity had been expended previous to admission. He arrived semi-nude, bound with ropes, so that his wrists were severely cut, exhausted & ragged: but still boasting of his prowess, denouncing the cruelty & cowardice of his capturers, to whom he attributed the cuts, contusions & injuries which he had sustained, when released from his bonds he became perfectly calm & although restless & in a great & audacious & outrageous or tendency to fury & ferocity, such as had marked the invasion of the disease occurred. The severity of a bruise upon the elbow, the suppuration of the wrists where his bonds had inflicted deep wounds, contributed to impose compulsory tranquillity, or to occupy attention. He was at once ordered Porter, and the Sol. Bismarck, Mar. at night. His more natural & coherent thoughts arose in the following order. Animosity towards his family for the manner of their interference & the assaults to which he had been subjected: the profligacy of overcoming him by numbers when he was unarmed by deception & the advantage taken of the insouciance of intoxication as a ground of accusing him of insanity: Confessions of his dissipated habits, determination of amendment, friendship with those around, a passionate desire for occupation & the application of his previous knowledge in the construction of mattresses. Two sequela appeared during Convalescence. 1. Diarrhoea which was counteracted by P. Powel. & adema of the ankles of feet, for which Blue Pill & Squill were employed. - He ultimately became a most shrewd & agreeable, but vain & garrulous inmate & left the Institution in robust health & grateful.

1st June 1857.

No change can be expected in this case. W. M. goes out daily into the gardens, and entertains ~~the~~ conviction that he is entrusted with the supervision of some of their number: he is satisfied that he is about to get better, & that it is duty to remain here and pursue the course which he is now doing until he does get better. He transmits long & well written but incoherent letters to his mother to the same effect: receives various indulgences & sweetmeats in reply which he is disposed to accumulate in the pocket of his pocket, & when he perceives that he is undervalued emits a peculiar plaintive howl, and this comprises his unvarnished course of conduct. It often appears as if his incoherent replies were so framed & designedly so framed as to defeat inquiry to evade the object of those addressing him. He is capricious & embarrassed by exposure.

2nd March 1859.

The condition of W. M. is now very similar to that noted above. He employs himself daily in an imaginary superintendence of a working party, & when he is spoken to his bearing is affable but often very abusive & impudent in his conversation, he orders the officers & attendants out of the room & threatens them with expellions. He is given to chew tobacco during the night & spit it out of his sheets, & he has several other habits of a similar nature from which it is impossible to reclaim him.

Upon the 16th the following record of the progress of the case exists. -

"6. No evacuation to day. It has been twice drawn off by "catheter to day, in fact she passes none naturally. Aspect un"changed, but has no muscular power. She must have sustain"ed an attack of cerebral congestion during the night."

"7. P. still torpid. Tinct aloe ordered. Fever in upper ex"tremities very defective. Face twisted to ^{right} side when attempt"ing to smile or laugh.

Frequent vomiting of bilious matter, chor. mov. of arms, difficult deglutition, torpidity of the intestinal canal, stupor & coma, marks the gradual advance of the disease.

To the close of life she greeted all who approached with a bland & joyous smile, & writhed & contorted the face, while the arms were tossing to & fro, in vain attempts to reply to interrogatories or to express her emotions.

William Mitchell. at 60. married & has a Family, who have left him on the ground that he could not maintain them. They were disreputable. The patient of the penitentiary department. A Weaver with some education.

2. His present condition is attributed to hunger & to fear as to his future maintenance. But he refers his malady to physical injuries.
3. He is described as having been more flighty, previous to the invasion of derangement.
4. Having been exposed to great muscular exertion, in raising a weight 140 years since, his back became & has since continued weak. He then was attacked by epilepsy which was partially removed by a Priest, whom he went to Ireland to consult. - He has likewise received severe injuries from his son: bears the scar of a wound on the posterior part of the head, inflicted by falling from a cart when a boy, followed by insensibility of several hours duration.
5. It would appear that the Patient labors under Mania.
6. He is haggard & emaciated.
7. This is the first attack.
8. Imagining that the consultations returned in consequence of taking Bacon broth, which the Priest Physician, had prohibited.
9. He is reported to cherish no suicidal designs.
10. He inspired his neighbours with fear, keeping a reaping hook under his pillow, threatened his daughter's life with a razor, dragged his wife out of bed by the hair, & attacked some one with a bludgeon.
11. His Grandmother & daughter were epileptics.
12. Alterations of Calomel, have been given & have been followed by improvement in the evacuations.

The

13. The Patient has become more excited & irritable for some days, but has long been of weak mind.

12. Novem 1856. The following particulars illustrate subsequent stages in the malady of this Patient.

12. July. Complaint of pain in epigastrium. Irregularity of Pulse walks with a stoop - Stupid - dreamy. Takes food when he is fed.

13. Slept the whole of the night. Fracture of sixth rib of left side discovered. It is probably of old standing. Attributed by him to an assault made by his son. No respiratory sound over posterior as part of lungs. Murmurs & vesicular sounds heard in same region of Lungs tend to intensity. Sputa thick tenacious purulent. Coughing and moving give pain. P. intermittent action of heart loud & irregular. B. not moved. W. Copious food taken. To be placed in padded bed. Plaster & roller to be applied to chest. Ry. Vin Sp. & Sr. Sty acuum.

14. W. no better & frequently forgets his sore. Remains quietly in bed, but has ^{no} moved Plaster & bandage.

25. July. The patient was out of bed & had a simulated Epileptic attack which was dispelled by aspers ion.

It is worthy of remark in the first place that a similar train of symptoms occurs & perhaps invariably occurs subsequent to a series of convulsive attacks; in the second place that while the mind is recovering from the Coma the Stupor which succeeds the Coma. W. is prone to describe imaginary ailments & to exaggerate trivial symptoms & even to simulate the fits to which he is really subject. For a considerable period he is actually debilitated & infirm, but his strength & boldness returns: his features become less coarse & more injected, he engages willingly in occupation, is civil, courteous even, fawning & suggests the idea of a weak, uneducated person, of animal nature who under discipline might be preserved from violence or crime or extravagance, but who under the influence of stimulants or passion or power or exacerbation of his constitutional malady might be precipitated into the most frightful excesses. In his most healthy & hopeful state, & after his family, who have hitherto been fruitless sources of dissension had been scattered, he was.

It is possible that this stage may have had its existence, & passed away previous to admission. She was from her quietude placed at once among the Convalescents, & was speedily entitled to be regarded as such. Her efforts to obtain emancipation were more early successful than what was perhaps prudent. She required no medication except the use of laxatives & of local applications for inflamed parts. The gentle unobtrusive elevation of this female did not prove intractable. Although predisposed to nervous disease, it is highly probable that her recent attacks had been induced by separation from her child, who had the claim of helplessness & infirmity as well as of consanguinity. His proximity, the opportunity of hearing of his progress, afforded consolation & her own selfish sorrows were ultimately swallowed up in sympathy & solicitude towards her charge. Intercourse proved for a time tri--furcious to both. But satisfied that he was comfortable & cared for she regained equanimity & hope, ceased to dread despair, & in misery did daily. Resolutely entered upon ^{female} employ-ment & recovered. She even left her son in the establish-

May 1837. The Convulsive attacks were exceedingly numerous immediately after the admission of the patient: and were followed by restlessness so incessant so irrefragable & dangerous that the Tussive loach was put in requisition when the patient immediately fell asleep & remained profoundly unconscious for many hours. As the frequency of the fits diminished he became peevish discontented and menacing. Interviews with his mother aggravated these morbid feelings and were interdicted. Greater calmness followed. & the patient was conceived to have attained to his highest range of intellect & greatest amount of health. Whether the marked diminution of the fits should be attributed to the effects of the Sarsaparilla or latterly of the Tinct. Scyrus & Sibir. cannot be affirmed, but these remedies appear to have contributed largely to his increased Constitutional vigor.

It was gradually diminished and Stimulant's substituted which she continued to take for six months - at only times it was conceived that Convalescence was established, but her cheerfulness and activity were of very brief duration, and although she is still able to engage in knitting and values the society of those around, she will not admit that she is sensible of the slightest alleviation in her sufferings. She becomes indignant should her progress be insisted upon, & declares most emphatically & sincerely that it is impossible she ever can or could get better. She gradually walks too & for wringing her hands & bemoaning in a murmur & by expression her lost innocence and wretched state. She associates with a fellow sufferer who although as desponding as herself must in her estimation secure hope & happiness while rather imperiously affirming her incurability. She rejects all sorts of support or consolation. She does not wish to see her son or other relatives. No evidence of the existence of any religious element could be detected in the manifestations of this patient. For the first portion of her seclusion she was taciturn, torpid, & unwilling to permit of any intercourse. This condition may have been fostered by remaining indeed to allow of the application of poultices to the scalp which was covered with a crust of scabs - when removed from the refractory ward in which she had been placed & detained for some time in consequence of a morose & menacing disposition and a repulsive manner. She for a time remained solitary amidst a crowd of what must have been congenial spirits, was from time to time seized with sudden paroxysms of violence of struggling during which it was necessary to place her upon the floor, & which terminated generally in loud hysterical screaming. In such circumstances brief although they were it was sometimes necessary to place her among the refractory patients for although her acts were blind, motivated they were as dangerous to herself & others as malicious or deliberate fury. abatement of the malady.
- 13 The patient has been insane for three or four weeks and has not been secluded.

1st June, 1857

The patient was regarded when admitted as presenting melancholia in its most aggravated form. She did not specify her insanity as misfortunes, but this magnitude was so written on her pallid and sunken features depicted painfully in her restless sleep and agitation. She sat weeping or moaning, unable to listen to those approaching her to tender sympathy or advice. She watched every opportunity to obtain solitude and means of self destruction, she adopted several ingenious modes to accomplish her purpose using a pocket cloth to produce strangulation and submerging her head when placed in a tub bath. She was at first ordered the Fine Strychnoid. Ferri, but having been subject to a suspension of boils, and subsequently to sporadic stimulants were substituted in conjunction with Morph. In these glycerine was afterwards added from its reputation as a nutrient in cachectic conditions. The famine was but the first of a series of indications of disease. The patient was attacked with diarrhoea of a protracted and most obstinate description resisting opiates, sulph. acid, these combined, extracts of lead, all being employed in conjunction with wine, jellies and an abundant fluid diet. It was suspected that the condition of the intestinal canal was protracted, nor is the suspicion altogether removed, by swallowing portions of cloth, and the relics of the dresses, caps, stockings which she destroyed by chewing and tearing. An attendant constantly overlooking the patient often failed in frustrating the ingenuity with which this suggestion of despair or expression of suffering was carried into effect. But soon alleviated the great prostration produced by the physical and mental exhaustion was sustained by going on, and confined the patient to bed for many months. She is only now recovering. The mental condition now approaches to sanity. There is still dejection, but is associated with degraded habits, with stolid indifference, with a voracious appetite, and with that seditious habit which of itself is often promotor of mental impairment and afflictions of the will.

 Married. Of good common education, respectable moral character but of irritable temper.

- 2 The cause of the disease was not discovered by the Reporter. Symptoms of mental disturbance were observed about two years ago when his insanity took place. He then manifested jealousy, but his wife was placed in such a position as to suggest if not to justify the suspicions which he entertained.
- 3
- 4 He had not laboured under any nervous disease.
- 5 The patient appears to labour under the monomania of suspicion and to harbour delusions dictated by the predominating feeling.
- 6 The senses of hearing and seeing have been perverted, and he complains of pain over the whole body but chiefly in the organs of generation.
- 7 The attack is the first and has been continuous but there has been an unequivocal increase of symptoms since he indulged freely in stimulants about two months ago.
- 8 He entertains confused ideas as to external impressions, and reasons upon them in a vague and morbid manner. He has alluded to poison but has not stated precisely whether he imagines that it has been administered or doubts that it may be so. He conceives that there are words written on the walls of his house which he connects with the Government Survey, and it is to be noted that a party of sappers lodged in his house at the commencement of his malady. He hears voices but they do not appear to articulate.
- 9 There is no disposition to commit suicide.
- 10 The patient has threatened his wife of whom he is jealous and who is apprehensive of his intentions. These morbid feelings are suggested when the sappers or pictures are alluded to.
- 11 His parents are free of all morbid or nervous disease.
- 12 The treatment has not been attended with success.
- 13 He has been ill for two years, but much more for two months, but has never been in seclusion.

Jan. 28th, 1857. This individual was treated for several months for atonic dyspepsia by the exhibition of gentle alteratives. He was at the same time impressed and affected of the groundleaps of his feelings and fears. His own testimony was the only mode of determining the fluctuations of these conditions, and as he was a conscientious person man devoutly believing that what he said was real and that he actually said what appeared to him to be visible, there existed a satisfactory guarantee of the accuracy of his reports. These consisted in intimations that the writings or hieroglyphics on the wall were less frequently observed, that they were all so numerous, that he saw no marks but a shadow passing. During much of the time that these changes were taking place the patient sat shyly apart and although perfectly acceptable and pleased by attention, and doubly disposed to privacy and cogitation when ordered to take exercise and to mingle more fully with his associates his mind received a new coloring and impulse, upon his own affirmation coinciding as it did with the other evidence.

He was discharged.

Agitation, sleeplessness, and restlessness again characterized the condition of the patient. They appear however to have been the closing phenomena of the attack which is understood to have been of unprecedented severity. Composure and healthy habits were speedily reestablished, and she resumed her seat in the workroom as if she had left it the day preceding. The death of her brother took place during her seclusion but did not affect her powerfully. Her attack must appear to be centered in plain family interests, and long existing associations rather than cherished ties.

A group of symptoms closely resembling those described in the former record of the patient's case followed his readmission but then attributed by him to the maltreatment of an attendant. Although the proof of such assaults as he described was somewhat defective the accused being under suspicion for other offences was discharged. The frequent return of convulsive attacks has rendered the patient infirm and feeble during winter but he is now strong and at the highest point of sanity that he ever attained. May 16th, 1857. The symptoms were originally those of Hysterical Mania. The patient was mute, torpid, or weeping and wailing in bed moving the arms hither and thither, but keeping the eye shut, or up working timidly in a corner to escape observation or some object of dread. In both states she seemed to be only partially conscious, paid no attention to her limbs, and failed to assist in the simplest act which was required for her comfort. When roused from lethargy she complained much of debility. At the time her pulse was 75 and of great strength. She appeared to be improved by the use of the hot bath and the administration of P. M. and A. Peppercorn followed by juncos. The first healthy phase in character was her breakfast, and a timid desire to be sewing. The second was told independence which while engaged in the kitchen demanded respect, the third was the removal of renewal of her domestic affections.

Mrs Scott's digestion has been protracted but not profound.
At first she met all inquiries by tears, moans, or the attitude of extinguished hope, and even now her expression is not buoyant or exulting, but she is calm, participates moderately in the cheering around, and is constantly employed. Her desire to return home is intense, and she is undoubtedly sane, but the consequence of liberation upon every former occasion was unhappiness and the overthrow of reason. Disease seemed to commence contemporaneously with her return to her district, contact with former friends and associations.

June 13th 1857. The first reports of this individual were as follows. Jan. 3. Took food & medicine after Dr. Clement had allayed his suspicions by telling them Bowels not moved. Wine passed in small quantities, and all passed with pain. Refuses to permit catheterism. 4. Slept profoundly today cheerful and confident, and has taken food and medicine with more abundance. Subsequently to this period the patient gradually presented indications of morose humors. It was observed however that although perfectly good humoured gentle and even cheerful he could not be induced to engage in occupation. Then succeeded a period of doubt and suspicion. He heard noises and his air expressed doubt and hesitation. Again these passed away, and confidence and returned. He joined the quiet labourers, and admitted not only the propriety but advantage of the arrangement. His resolution gave way in a few days, and he acknowledges the admission of doubt. Since this abortive attempt he has remained in the same mental condition, he expects immediate removal, that his friends are arrived or ^{are} about to arrive in order to accompany him home and affirms positively that he has obtained information to this effect. He is not communicative and it cannot be ascertained whether or to what extent or in what direction his suspicions continue. He can occasionally be prevailed upon to take laxatives. He has the hue and gait of ruddy health.

The original description of this patient "she refused to utter a single word, abstains wholly from food, mutilates herself by scratching and picking, and has attempted to destroy herself by poison and drowning" was not realized by the department subsequent to admission. She was taciturn but spoke in a whisper in a few hours after her arrival took food when offered in a spoon, and was docile and passive. In a short period spontaneity returned and she willed and acted in accordance with her will upon many occasions. Apathy and despondency continued for a longer period, but ultimately led to a seriousness and sobriety of manner which was conceived by her husband to be natural. She recovered while taking pills containing colomel and aloes.

1st June, 1857. The opinion formed of this case was that the origin of the mental alienation was strumous. That it proved one of a group of symptoms all proceeding from the same cause, that the physical condition was sustained and aggravated by imperfect assimilation, by incomplete digestion, and that the first effort should be directed towards the arrestment of vomiting and the introduction of a sufficient amount of nourishment. In carrying out the first principle there have been employed Sine. Nit. Bisulphate, and Hydrate and Croton Spirit, Sulph. Acid, an blistering, while all purges.

tives have been prohibited and the bowels relieved by enemata. There exists no doubt that vomiting is frequently induced by the introduction of the finger into the fauces. The patient confesses this but states in ex-tennation that the sense of declension and dyspnoea in the chest becomes intolerable and justifies any expedient for relief. The various remedies appear occasionally to alleviate, and it is certain that the patient is more robust than ^{she was} when admitted, in other respects she has not gained ground, she is miserable or convinced that she is not only the most diseased and despairing member in the community, but the most afflicted being that has ever existed. She has attempted suicide and concentrates her whole energy in suffering and in nourishing her painful convictions. She has been placed in the workroom.

1 Nov 1857 The cleanliness which is now compulsory, the diet which she denounces as execrable because it does not contain tea or tobacco, and perhaps the absence of stimulants have contributed to improve the appearance of this patient very much. She can scarcely be recognized as she is seen engaged in doll making to which she devotes her attention. But the amelioration has been confined to external appearance. The incessant moan, the fear, the perplexity have ceased to characterize her, she now sleeps soundly and occasions no disturbance to those around her although discontented, quarrelsome, and sometimes irritable, her complaints are deep not loud. These consist chiefly in the injustice of her detention, the deprivation of her property, and her separation from her ^{friends} family, and the withdrawal of her ^{to her} home which she declares grew on the green of our Savions and must therefore cure all evils. Her chief consolation is that she is in similar circumstances to Mary Queen of Scots and as yet not worse treated. She was ordered stimulants at first, and has latterly been taking purgatives.

An attempt was made to place her in the workroom but an attendant was required to sit constantly beside her to moderate her exuberance of merriment, and to direct her attention to her work, but she proved so serious a source of disturbance to the gravity and quietude of the party that she was removed. She has lost much of her corpulence and looks more vivacious and intelligent.

Jane Dickson admitted 19th March 1857. Aet. 40. Unmarried Domestic servant of quiet disposition. She can read and write. Rich Case.

- 2 She labours under severe bronchitis and has permanent curvature of the spine.
- 3 The patient was much depressed for some time previous to the development of insanity and had just recovered from a severe attack of spinal irritation and hysteria.
- 4 She has suffered from dyspepsia, constipation, hysteria, and various forms of Neuralgia for many years.
- 5 It would appear that ~~she~~ the patient has recently laboured under mania, but she is not dejected.
- 6
- 7 This is the second attack after an interval of ten or twelve years.
- 8 She sings much conceives that she that she has recently regained her reason and is anxious to drink her wine in order to complete the cure.
- 9 She is not suicidal.
- 10 She is inoffensive.
- 11
- 12 No treatment has been reported.
- 13 ~~73~~ She has been insane for four days and was an inmate of the Crickton Institution about ten years ago.

1st June 1857

It is very probable that the pulmonary affection to which this patient ^{has} ~~was~~ for some time been subject was the proximate and sustaining cause of the mental excitement. Since her admission there have been dejection, capriciousness, doubts of her strength, and various vague sensations to which she is liable but no delirium, nor extravagance. As the bronchitic symptoms declined her natural gentleness and submissiveness shone out and she is now an amiable and contented convalescent. The reestablishment of her physical health was slow and even now she goes into the open air unwillingly. She was at first ordered mucilagines and expectorants, and has had latterly an alterative.

3 July 1837

This patient had gradually regained her natural manner had acquired a reputation for industry and gentleness had been visited by her friends and pronounced to be perfectly well, and arrangements were in progress for her return home when death occurred. She retired to bed in good health or such health as she for a long time possessed and is supposed to have passed the night in sleep. The following entry records all that is recorded of the event. 3^d July. J. Dickson died suddenly on getting up. She had made water and spoken a few minutes before fell on the bed foamed at mouth and expired in a few minutes. There does not appear to have been any convulsive movements. Pulse good at time of seizure but gradually failed. Pupils dilated. The probability is that she died of rupture of a large vessel at base of brain.

William Stewart admitted 7th April 1857. Aet. 30 Unmarried a labourer and coachman of common education and quiet disposition. Vide Case.

- 2 The disease is attributed to religious impressions.
- 3 Previous to his present illness he became restless walked to and fro especially during the night engaged in reading the bible.
- 4 Peculiarity of manner observed for some time.
- 5 The mania is the form now assumed by his malady.
- 6 Pulse accelerated. External senses normal. Other functions normal.
- 7 This is the second attack after an interval of three years during which however he exhibited eccentricity.
- 8 He regards it as his duty to destroy the wicked, but he is quiet and inoffensive towards those whom he designates as Christians.
- 9 He has cut off a part of his nose in obedience to a command from heaven.
- 10 He supposes himself called upon to exterminate the reprobate.
- 11 His friends have manifested decided peculiarity and eccentricity if not insanity.
- 12 No treatment has been attempted.
- 13 He has been unequivocally insane and violent for three days. He was an inmate of the Crichton Institution from September 1852 to May 1856.

1st June, 1857. The daily reports of W. S.'s progress will convey the clearest view of his mental condition 8th April. Very violent during the night broke lid of stuffed bed and required the efforts of several men to restrain him from springing up, leaping over the window, forming a path his face. He has taken nothing but one mouthful of milk. Urine passed very turbid. No stool. Pulse full. S.C. Skin warm. Wound displays no activity. He refuses to allow cold or other any applications. 9th Laps vehement but still takes an opportunity to spring from bed P. rapid. Skin warm. T. rather dry. Urine passed but no stool. Croton oil given in food which has today been taken more readily. Now exhibits no activity. 10th. Abstinently refuses food. B. not evacuated. Water passed in bed. There is considerable restlessness and occasionally outbreaks of violence, Croton oil to be repeated when he will take any food. 14th. Abstinence, mute, fed. Croton oil forming part of meal Partook of a hearty meal afterwards. T. coated Has lost flesh to a considerable extent.

Elbows abraded by efforts to thrust arms through the openings in the lid of the bed. 18. In sitting room and gallery for a portion of the day, quiet and tractable but discontented. Food generally taken but sometimes capriciously refused. B. torpid. U. sufficient. U. Quiet but querulous asserting that he is a murdered man. Complaints of pain of stomach. Urine more abundant. 25. Thought the 'maniacal, abstinence, fed, portion of food vomited. Since this time the patient has continued suspicious, quarrelsome, mendacious, arrogating to himself vast properties, the affection of a lady of distinguished family, and spiritual privileges granted to him alone. He is frequently impressed with the belief that his relatives or acquaintances are resident in the Institution. There is latterly greater gentleness of manner. The wound has nearly cicatrized, and would have done so long since had it not been constantly denuded. His physical hopes have been retrieved.

1st April 1847. Mad. is now a very quiet humours & industrious inmate, knows very little about his antecedents & cares less, if the ordinary wants of nature, food & tobacco are supplied in due proportion, 12th March 1844 William Stewart is at present in good bodily health. His mental condition is one of advanced dementia. He works steadily, but does not now manifest any suicidal tendency. See Page 171.

 Married. A sailor of inoffensive manners. Irish Case.

- 2
- 3 It would appear that the patient has been for some time free of uncertain temper and eccentric habits.
- 4
- 5 He now labours under Mania.
- 6 He is pale, haggard, and excited in aspect.
- 7 This is the third or fourth attack after an interval of six or more years.
- 8 He is bold arrogant boyaious and declamatory.
- 9 He does not appear to think of suicide.
- 10
- 11
- 12 The patient has been under medical treatment but of what nature is not stated.

1 June 1857

The first notices as to this case are instructive, and reveal all the features so far as it has proceeded. 13 April. D. M. maniacal and much excited. He was formerly melancholic.
 While boisterous, bold, blustering indifferent to all that has happened to him or that may be in store, to the fate of his family, he is conscious of his real condition and appears to feel at home 14. D. M. much more calm and perfectly contented. 16. D. M. slept well from an anodyne given is more rational natural and respectful but feels exhausted and weak. There is nothing now to add to these details except that the patient has resumed work and is most indusvious 14 Augt. After a probation of two months D. S. was discharged apparently in sound mind and most ~~was~~ anxious to adopt all precautions to guard against relapse. The sudden eruption of excitement in this case whenever brought within the reach of discipline but before it could be savaged is an indication of how much that is attributed to medication may be due to moral influences, to faith in the system to be pursued, or to fear.

Discharged.

There is no special change in William Stewart's mental state. He works steadily and sometimes complains of Dyspepsia. He is otherwise in good health.

7th June 1874

Patient's condition bodily and mental remains unchanged.

10/3/75

Quiet, industrious, demented.

20/11/75

In statu quo.

25/6/76

Follows the same tenor of his way, in good bodily health.

10/12/76

Daily at work, never requiring special medical treatment, much demented, occasionally irritable.

20/6/77

No change to record.

June 6th 81

W. Stewart continues to be a quiet dement: he works industriously: there are no signs of any active ^{brain} disease.

July 10th 82

In statu quo.

Oct: 9th 82

Remains much the same.

March 30th 83

W.S. speaks little & takes little interest in his surroundings.

5 OCTOBER 1883.

The fire of acute insanity seems to have burnt out in this case & consumed the intellect of the man leaving little intelligence remaining. His bodily health is fair.

- 1 Anne Gibson, admitted 9th May, 1857. Act. Unmarried Engaged in a mill. She can read.
- 2 It is affirmed that her disease originated in a fit, but of what nature it cannot be conjectured.
- 3
- 4 The verbal report of the prison in which charge the Patient arrived would lead to the supposition that she had laboured under convulsions, and that recently she is lame in consequence of having leaped into the river at a shallow place.
- 5 She labours under the mania of suspicion and fear.
- 6 It is stated that she had refused food, but she partook of a meal immediately after admission.
- 7 This is at least the second attack.
- 8 She appears to dread some impending evil, but does not give her apprehensions a distinct form or embodiment.
- 9 The patient attempted to effect her own destruction by drowning.
- 10 She entertains a morbid antipathy to medical men, and rejects their interference.
- 11
- 12
- 13 She has been insane for a few days only and has never been confined in an Asylum.

1st June, 1857. Although described on admission as much better than she had hitherto been since the commencement of the attack, and although she slept soundly, and exhibited perfect composure of manner: evidence was speedily afforded of the nature of her mental condition. On the evening visit of the Medical Office, 10th May, she was found to be much excited, the terror being chiefly induced by the approach of the Doctor, and doubts of his purpose are projects. When thus agitated she sits herself up, covers herself with the bed clothes, and starts much. Such ebullition rarely occurs but when perfectly free from all signs of agitation or perturbation she expresses dread of some impending event, that she is about to be compelled to swim in seas of blood, that she is to be spoiled by bands of quacks and abandoned men whose steps she hears, whose figures flit about her, and who, she is conscious, are present even when her external senses give no evidence of the fact. Suspicious of its nature she declines medicine of every form. Rest has been enjoined, and the support of a bandage to the injured limb which is still swollen and slightly painful. She is using a crutch.

- 1 John Donohue. Admitted 20th Jan., 1857. A congenital idiot, incapable of instruction engaged in begging in support of himself and stepmother.
- 2
- 3
- 4 Has not required medical treatment for illness.
- 5 He labours under idiocy of the second degree.
- 6 He was brought to the Asylum in a miserable and filthy condition.
- 7
- 8 He used to wander about the country to beg.
- 9 There is no disposition to suicide.
- 10 He is tremulous and inoffensive.
- 11 Nothing is known of the Patient's relations.
- 12
- 13 He has never been secluded.

Sept 1872 J. D. is a harmless idiot of the second class. He works outside daily principally for the reward of being at the dances of Sunday nights. He is often excited & quarrelsome. Healthy food.

2nd March 1873. John Donohue enjoys good health and works daily. He has no special disease. Takes great pleasure in the weekly dances, and in all the amusements.

12th Decr 1873. There is no change in his mental condition. He suffered from boils a few weeks ago on the neck and legs. They were of an asthenic type, & he was much depressed during their presence.

- 27th June 1874 Patient is in good bodily health. There is no change in his mental condition.
- 10/3/75 In much the same mental and bodily condition.
- 20/11/75 In statu quo.
- 25/6/76 In fair bodily health and daily at work: joins with the most ardent zest in the Reels at the Weekly dances.
- 10/12/76 In much the same condition: happy and well pleased.
- 20/6/77 No change to report.
- June 6th 81 Enjoys a dance as much as ever and shows his displeasure if omitted by kicking the doors: Vocabulary very limited embracing only 3 or 4 intelligible words.
- Feby 10th 82 J.D. remains much the same.
- Oct: 9th 82 Nothing to record: patient does not now work but walks some of the other patient about during the spare hours.
- March 30th 83 J.D. is losing ground from advancing years: he is left to have a reddened condition of the skin with purulent discharge - between the scrotum & thigh.
- 8 Oct 1883 There is no change in J.D.'s mental state.

- 1 Robert Maxwell. Admitted 20th Nov. 1857. Aet. 29.
A worker of good disposition.
- 2 Depression of the frontal bone from a blow is stated to have been the cause of his present condition.
- 3
- 4 The disease is complicated with epilepsy.
- 5 The patient is subject periodically to furious mania which succeeds the convulsive attacks or occupies their place, and, at other times partially fatuous.
- 6 The functions are described as being all abnormal during attacks.
- 7 He has been insane for several years since he received a kick from a horse.
- 8
- 9 The patient does not entertain suicidal intentions.
- 10 When excited the patient is furious and brutally profligate.
- 11 An hereditary tendency to nervous disease is known to exist in the patient's family.
- 12 Laxatives and powerful purgatives have been employed and always with excellent effect.
- 13 He has been an inmate of the workhouse where restraint is necessary.

- 1 James McWhin. Admitted 27th June, 1857. Aet. 30. Married and has children. Farm Servant of limited education and quiet and kindly disposition.
- 2 No cause can be assigned for his malady.
- 3 No premonitory symptoms were observed.
- 4 The patient suffered from a severe attack of inflammation of the lungs about ten years ago. He is not subject to epilepsy.
- 5 He is labouring under melancholia.
- 6 His physical state is affirmed to be normal.
- 7 This is the first attack.
- 8 The dejection of the patient is described as religious but his chief delusion appears to be removed by officers of justice placed in a solitary cell and there confined for life.
- 9 He has spoken of committing suicide, but has no attempt as no opportunity was afforded to him.
- 10 He shows no disposition to injure any one or property, nor does he cherish any malicious designs, nor is he excited by any particular subject.
- 11 The patient paternal grandfather and a maternal aunt were for a considerable time under great mental excitement.
- 12 Purgatives and bleeding have been tried without benefit.
- 13 He has been insane for nearly 5 months but he never been confined.

- 7 This is the first attack & was introduced by excitement supposed to be induced by the misconduct of her son
- 8 The disease has been marked by a desire to leave her house chiefly at night to go she knew not whither she starts from sleep, believes that the house is on fire, strips herself naked and is desirous to go out in that state. She is said to exhibit ~~a strong~~ a strong desire to engage in work & to sleep soundly at night although she conceives that she does not
- 9 At the commencement of the malady she whispered to one of her friends that she was obliged to destroy herself but she has never attempted to do so.
- 10 She has several times spoken of burning her house, of being attempted to do so, to burn herself, to take the lives of several of her best friends.
- 11 There exists no hereditary tendencies to insanity in her family.
- 12 Aperients & change of air have been resorted to as remedies but without benefit.
- 13 She has been insane for about 3 months but has not been secluded until now.

2. The origin of the disease is supposed to be the engrossment of her mind by the loss of some silver spoons when it should have been directed to the sacrament & consequent remorse of conscience
3. Previous to the incursion of the disease the patient was uneasy, discontented, occasionally violent, and slept ill.
4. The patient was originally of a robust constitution & was not subject to any convulsive or nervous or any other affections. Of late years she has been regarded as flighty in character.
5. The patient labors under Melancholia
6. The special senses are normal. She often complains of the sensation of pricking along the course of the spine which is followed by a semiconvulsive movement of the legs & arms, whilst the head & neck are drawn backwards. Appetite & digestion normal but she suffers much from epigastric pain & abdominal distension which is occasionally much aggravated & the source of great mental annoyance. She suffers from a suffocative feeling in respiration.
7. This is the first attack
8. The Patient conceives that an evil spirit has obtained complete possession of her & that her sins are inexorable. She sits in bed or walks to & from unwilling to engage in occupation or to do anything except mourn over her unhappy state.
9. She at first made desperate attempts to commit suicide by hanging & drowning, but now affirms that she is afraid to die. She manifested the inclination to injure herself this morning when she learned that she was about to be removed.
10. Morbid trains of thought are excited by anything that tends to recall the circumstances connected with the origin of her complaint.
11. The Patient's Family is said to be free from hereditary tendencies to mental alienation.
12. She has been treated by leeching, Calomel, Purgatives, antispasmodics & sedatives & with partial & temporary success.
13. Mental derangement has existed for fourteen ~~days~~ weeks, but she has not been confined.

1. Of amiable disposition & active habits: has received a moderate education & prior to insanity of courteous, obliging, & correct deportment.
2. At fifteen years of age the Patient received a blow upon the back when she became hysterical & remained so until five years when her mother died & she then became the victim of various delusions. The mental affection has gradually become worse & she has latterly been violent & dangerous.
3. The patient labored under confirmed indigestion for eighteen months prior to the incursion of the mental disease.
4. She never labored under epilepsy nor convulsive affections: nor was she ever under medical treatment except for Dyspepsia.
5. The mental affection appears to be Mania of hypochondriacal merging in Insanity.
6. Her appetite & digestion are defective. Catamenia tolerably regular.
7. This is the first attack and has been continuous.
8. The prominent characteristics of the Patient are pride & extravagance. She is selfish and indolent & of luxurious habits so far as they have been indulged. She declines to work is unaware that she is a burden to her sister whom she fancies to be endowed with her strength & to work by its aid. She was seduced by a stranger & way farer since the incursion of insanity & bore a child.
9. She has no suicidal intentions.
10. She is very irascible and threatens violence if asked to work.
11. One relative was a Drunkard all others have been healthy in mind and correct in morals.
12. No treatment has been resorted to.

Janet Thouson, aged 36 years was admitted on the sixth day of November 1857 in a state of violent mania. She had been a domestic servant; was a "small, fair, nervous looking woman"

- 1.
2. No cause can be assigned for the malady.
3. No premonitory symptoms were observed.
4. The patient has never been under medical treatment.
5. She appears to labor under "Folium" but there are symptoms indicating the existence of Hysteria.
6. Voracity is the only abnormal manifestation which has fallen under observation.
7. This is the second attack: the first took place nine years ago and was attributed to some disorder of the uterine system. The form of the disease was on that occasion theomania. She has remained well for about eight years.
8. She is affirmed to entertain religious delusions: but the external manifestations are chiefly vagrancy, and taciturnity: but when she speaks it is to express a desire to return to the Isle of Man where he has for some time resided: and which she has attempted to do by force.
9. There is said to exist no suicidal designs.
10. She is harmless except when her wish to leave home is opposed.
11. The Patient's Family is strumous. Two uncles [paternal] died of Phthisis & one of inflammation of the lungs: two of her sisters likewise died of Phthisis one of marasmus & one of these was, for a time, insane and one informant writes, "some of her near relatives are so constituted mentally as almost to amount to imbecility."
12. No treatment has been attempted except the use of aperients.
13. When insane in 1848 she was placed in Bonsham Asylum, Gateshead, where she remained a short time & from which she was discharged as recovered.

4th April 1872. A. P. is at present a mild decent who assists the housemaid in her duties. She is very industrious but has many delusions, & is often very excited & frequently in tears about imaginary evils. Her is impaired, & though she is slender she seldom ails.

12th March 1873. Annie Porteous enjoys good health and is daily employed in assisting the housemaid. She is much given to talking to herself & has numerous delusions about several personages in high position being in love with. She often asks for sweets & then returns them to as sent to these persons. She is often excited and obstreperous.

1st Decr. 1873. Annie Porteous manifests no change in her bodily and mental state. She is still prone to excitement.

6th Octr. 1874 Patient is at present in a state of excitement, is very talkative and complains of being struck by every one approaching her. Her bodily health is good and she enjoys in work daily.

18/3/75 A. P. has for some time been quiet and well conducted, though in ~~constant~~ constant and lively conversation with herself: in fair bodily health though thin.

20/11/75 at present "high" - and occasionally rather noisy - still acts as under-housemaid.

25/6/76 Recently had an attack of hives: suffers from weak heart.

10/12/76 Exhibits the same alternations of excitement, and more normal quietude: at present pretty well

- 7/17/80 In bed suffering from bilious attacks has been quiet lately and very useful in the work room.
- June 6th 81 Assumes a rather listy air: she however works well & very useful.
- Feb, 10th 82 In fair bodily health; only requires an occasional aperient dose.
- Oct: 9th 82 In statu quo.
- March 30th 83 A.P. continues to be a good worker: she is usually pleasant & agreeable.
- 8 Oct^r 1883. There is no change to record in this case.

1. Gentle disposition, good education & correct behaviour.
2. No cause can be assigned for the patient's present condition except that subsequent to a severe illness, supposed to be an affection of the liver the mind gradually became affected. The catamenia suddenly ceased about that time.
- 3.
4. The patient has never been treated for any other disease than that referred to above.
5. The patient seems to be in a state of fatuity but the reporter of the case states during the paroxysms of excitement she is distrustful and suspicious of her friends: in the interval she is reserved. The symptoms have varied, at first she preferred solitude, but latterly she is apathetic & lethargic.
6. She is pale & languid the persons & objects before her sometimes appear distorted.
7. This is the first attack.
8. The patient sometimes declares that she is about to be married to a person of property & imagines that she is in the company of those of elevated rank: at other times she dreads poverty. She is fond of reading & sleeps soundly at night.
9. She has never attempted to commit suicide nor threatened to do so.
10. She has threatened those around her: and has occasionally broken dishes &c. but cherishes no malicious design against anyone.
11. A maternal aunt has suffered from mental disease and her mother is nervous.
12. The patient has never undergone any treatment.
13. She has been insane for three years but has never been in seclusion.

Has he been liable to previous attacks	Sanguhar
	Nearly two years insane

March 26, 1858 And C. Chalmers M.D. Thornhill, says: (1) For the last six months, while he has been an inmate of the Upper Skiddale Combination Poorhouse. He is firm to extravagant notions regarding scripture, &c. Has suspicions of people and is of very weak intellect. 2. Statements confirming the above.

March 29, 1858. W^m Kay, Surgeon, Sanguhar. says: Have known him for the last fifteen years to be flighty, inclined to wander during the night and was altogether of a restless disposition and continues so. 2. Notorious in the District.

1st April 1872. R.H. is subject to periods of excitement which last for two or three months. During this ^{period} he is demonstrative, singing & giving information in an incoherent manner, but he is perfectly harmless & free from mischief. After this excitement he gets well & is rather dull for some time & then breaks out again. He suffers from granular lids in the left eye & has good bodily health.

14 March 1873. R.H. suffers from granular lids which resist every attempt at treatment. He is subject to attacks of excitement, in which he shouts & sings, & addresses those persons whom he meets in an ostentatious manner. He turns his clothes, makes cords with his bedding, & is very dirty in habits. This condition may last for several months, & then he becomes quiet & seldom speaks.

12th Decr 1873 R.H. enjoys good average health. There is no change in his mental condition which at present is one of excitement, similar to what is stated above.

27th June 1874 Patient is in good bodily health. His mental condition continues the as recorded above.

10/3/75 Mr. H. from time to time has periods of excitement but they now take the form of depression instead of exaltation, - his pulse rises (recently to 100), he asserts that he is very ill - "deins", in fact, and takes his food badly: his habits at the same time become very depraved, and he is very restless.

20/11/75 In staturgord.

25/10/76 Slight progressive deterioration visible.

10/12/76 Has been steadily going down the hill for the last six months: weak circulation.

26/12/76 Found dead in bed when the attendant who slept in the same dormitory got up in the morning: quite cold, face and hands congested. Reported to the Probation Officer who viewed the body in situ, and declared himself satisfied that death arose from natural causes. On P.M. examination the Heart was found much hypertrophied, and the muscular tissue degenerated into fat, while the coronary arteries were converted into calcareous tubes.

March 26, 1858. And. C. Chalmer M. D. Morrahill, says: (1) For two years past while she has been an inmate of the Upper Withsdale Combination Poorhouse. She is subject to fits of violent temper, and is continually muttering and talking to herself, and gives very confused answers to questions and is quite silly in intellect. 2. Statements confirming the above.

March 29, 1858. W^m Day, Surgeon, Sanguhar, says: (1) She is very vain, subject to fits of violent temper, has suspicions of people continually annoying her, at other times she is listless and morose.

19th March 1872 This patient is now perfectly, she never speaks & has done so for some time past. She has a good appetite, & takes outdoor exercise daily. She appears not to be melancholic as she often smiles to herself.

12th March 1873. Sanct Moffat is in condition differing little from the previous note. She enjoys good health, is regular in her habits, never speaks, & never is excited. She, however, requires considerable attention paid to her from her inability to provide anything for her use.

12 Decr. 1873. Sanct Moffat is at present in a state which does not differ much from previous notice. Good general health. Mental state one of absolute fatuity and aphasia.

27th June 1874 No change since date of above entry.

10/3/75 No change to record.

20/11/75 In statu quo.

23/6/76 Speaks never: in fair health.

10/12/76 In statu quo.

20/6/77 No change to record: suffers from no ailment except the mental: she is quiet, happy (ergo?) demented.

2/10/80 Rather more very much depressed.

June 6th 81 Is quiet & demented: does a little work.

Feb 10th 82 No change to record

Oct: 9th 82 In statu quo.

March 30th 83 There is no change to record in Jm's condition: she still dawns: is very quiet & silent.

5 Oct 1883. Continues to live a life as uneventful as can well be imagined.

April 11, 1858 James Gilchrist M.D. Brighton Royal Institution, says: (1) Partial imbecility, incoherence and irritability. (2) Irritable, erratic, vigilant as stated by brother.

April 10, 1858. Robert Kuttnerford, Surgeon, Kirkmichael, says: (1) Her father states - that she pushed up the window got out and wandered the fields and struck the servant man - is very useless during the night.

4th April 1872 M.D. is now a stupid & good humored dement. She often smiles in her conversation, But it is devoid of intellectual power, as she nearly always answers your question in the same words repeating them in a low tone & smiling. She has good habits But will engage in no work.

12th March 1873 Mary Dobbie is at present in good general health. She is often noisy at night & sometimes filthy in her habits. She answers questions, but seldom speaks as her mental power is very feeble.

12th Decr. 1873. M.D. Mental powers - no improvement. She is gentle & kind in her manner, but exhibits little interest in anything around her. General health good.

27th June 1874 Bodily health fair. Mental condition unchanged.

10/3/75 Much the same: does not work.

30/11/75 In statu quo.

25/6/76 Continues in a state of not very troublesome chronic dementia, ailing nothing

- 10/12/76 In statu quo.
- 20/6/77 No change in record but that she grows older.
- June 6th 81 Is a quiet Dement: does a little needlework: occasionally has toothache with swelling of the face.
- Feby 18th 82 Remains much the same.
- Oct. 9th 82 No change to record.
- March 30th 83 M.D. has Heart Disease & she has accordingly been kept a good deal in bed this winter & oedema of the feet appeared: she is a quiet & almost silent dement.
- 8 OCT. 1883. Mary Dobbee still has oedema of the feet her mental condition is unchanged.
- 24 September 84 M. D. has made no improvement in the preceding year in her mental state. Her general health at present is fairly good & has been so all the time she has been staying at Maryfield.

17th May 1858. James Gilchrist M.D. Crichton Institution, Dumfries, says:
1. General excitement. (2) Restlessness and loud singing in church. Threatened violence to father and sister (brother)

May 18, 1858. Alex. Borthwick, M.D. Dumfries, says: (1) Incoherent and excited. (2) Her attendant states that she talks a great deal of nonsense and has delusions.

4th April, Dr Mc C. is stated in the register as being a case of her. Monomania of pride. She is very proud & will scarcely permit herself to be called by any other name than Lady McCroskey. She is reported to be. What is stated above which is still her usual character, to have been in love with a neighbouring Doctor, a widower, whose children she used to prostitute with Levitations. She suffers from enlargement of the ^{lymphatic} glands in the neck at the back of the sternum-mastoid, some of these being about the size of an egg. There is also cataract of the left eye & optic neuritis of the left. all of these are supposed to be of Syphilitic origin. She has been treated with Mercury & Iodide of Potash but neither of separately or combined had any effect. The use of Iodine and tincture is now being pursued with at least some benefit. The size of the glands being diminished, she is after very impudent & in a fine passion & in about two hours afterwards you may find her in unusual hysterical laughter. Her bodily health is very fair.

5th March 1873. Eliz. Mc. Crockerie shows no sign of making any progress towards mental convalescence. Her passion of pride & delusions of her personal importance even take deeper hold on her mental processes, habits, actions. She denounces her friends & those around, & is frequently so much overcome with this condition that she keeps silence for weeks, & merely shows the presence of her passion by rushing past me in a haughty & hasty manner & shaking her head ominously. Her general health is good.

12th Decr 1873. There is no change in her mental or bodily state from last note.

27th June 1874 Bodily and mental condition as previously noted.

10/3/75 In statu quo.

20/11/75 Mrs McClockey has recently been confined (or more properly confined herself) to bed for some time for an affection of the knee joint - she would not permit reporter to make a proper examination; but reporter feels constrained to say that the affection appeared to be one of the imagination rather than of the knee joint.

28/6/76 Recently suffered from ulceration of the mucous membrane of the mouth, which - adopting the idea of a syphilitic origin - was treated with R. D. - and successfully.

10/12/76 Irritable and often rather noisy; in fair bodily health.

20/6/77 In statu quo.

June 6th 81 Mrs McClockey is as peculiar as ever: has similar ideas of self-impotence: has frequently changing moods. Sometimes is affable frequently wont speak at all.

Feb 10th 82 Remains much the same
Oct: 9th 82 In statu quo.
March 30th 82 Mrs McClockey has had a cold cough during the latter part of the winter & consequently she has been very exacting as to attention. She has managed to prolong her indisposition. She continues peculiar & incoherent when excited.

9 Oct 83

Patent is ~~not~~ different bodily health. She often have oedema of the feet. She has not of late been so communicative.

1st April 1872. This man was a Sea Captain & was previously an inmate of the C. R. S. He is now in a state of fatuity. He is very irritable at all times when spoken to & threatens violence for your impertinence to him. When he is in his gallery, he walks quickly to & fro with his eyes shut, & strikes against any object that may be put in his way. His health is very fair & he is daily employed at the farm.

12th March 1873. His mental state is one of dementia with a tendency to excitement, & often to violence. His habits are in the House walking constantly & swinging his arms. He often does not take proper care of where he is going, & sometimes he gets his face hurt.

12th Dec^r 1873. General health, good. Mental state, no change from previous note.

2^{7th} June 1874. Bodily and mental condition as previously noted.

10/3/75. Still irritable and still addicted to rapidly passing up and down the gallery regardless of what may be in the way.

30/11/75. On status quo.

26/6/76. Some time ago had a Syncope attack - supposed to have arisen out of exhaustion from his perpetual walking: no change in his mental condition.

18/2/78. Condition remains much the same

June 9, 1858 Agnew R. Bogie M. D. says: (1) Extreme dejection, refuses to join in conversation. (2) Several attempts to commit suicide, according to his father's statement. Religion is the only topic that he will converse on.

June 9, 1858. Will^m Ewart, Surgeon, Annan. (1) Extreme dejection and taciturnity, and at times is obstinately refusing to take food or medicine. (2). Father and mother state his having made at least two attempts at self destruction.

4th April 1873 G. T. is one of the most industrious patients in the house. He works steadily & skilfully outside & when he is inside is willing to do an amount of gully work. But when he is not so engaged he spends his time in standing with his face to the wall & conversing with himself. It is not possible to get him to converse with you on such occasions. He will however sometimes converse & then he is amiable & well informed. His bodily health is very good.

12 March 1873. G. T.'s mental state varies much. He is very industrious & energetic. He seldom speaks, and may be seen standing with his face close to a wall for hours. His answers to questions are very monosyllabic, & lead one to the conclusion that his powers of mind are much impaired, without the special predominance of any faculty.

12 Dec^r 1873. G. T. is a most useful man. He suffers much from toothache, & entertains various delusions about his teeth. He is more versatile than at last report. But never shows any wish to depart.

27th June 1874 Quiet, industrious and content. Bodily health good.

- 10/3/75 In much the same condition.
- 20/11/75 In statu quo.
- 10/12/76 Quiet and inductive: writes a good deal: has a peculiar habit of jumping his seat when any one enters the room, whether as the result of delusion or not reported is unable to say.
- 20/6/77 In statu quo.
- June 6th 81 Continues to work well ~~state~~ has a pride in doing his work thoroughly and well: is quiet & affable: mental powers a good deal impaired -
no change to record.

June 12, 1858. William Marshall M.D. Buccleuch Street, Dumfries, says: (A) He is very angry about being confined and states that his being so is owing to the stupidity of those who recd. £20 for the purpose of having been released and had not moved in the matter and have also neglected to get an order (B). Much the same as above.

June 12, 1858. William Scott M.D. Dumfries, says: (A) He is under the impression that he has been shot at by several people, that a friend of his has been hanged by order of the sheriff - that a ~~great~~ number of people are present in his apartment. (B) Found on the street during the night in a state of incoherency.

1st April 1873. A.R. has now none of the above mentioned delusions. He is fast in a state of chronic & confirmed dementia. He is a very useful servant & goes through his routine with pleasure. He is very simple & childish in his manner, & is in very robust health.

3rd March 1873. A.R. is more degraded in his habits & more prone to dirt & tearing. He eats his food in the most uncouth way, talks loudly to himself in an incoherent manner. Never enters into conversation with any one. He possesses great strength of body.

12th Decr. 1873. A.R. Has begun work at the barrow a few days ago. He works steadily & well, but his mental condition & habits are as noted above.

27th June 1874 Bodily health good. Patient works daily. He is quite demented.

- 10/2/75 A. B. works in a very desultory way, putting down his burrow from time to time to indulge in various mystic postulations and uncerthainties.
- 20/11/75 In statu quo.
- 25/0/76 Too restless to be able to work; eats voraciously and indiscriminately.
- 14/12/76 In much the same condition.
- 25/0/77 Has again been set to work, but ~~is~~ describes wonderful pyramids and takes most intricate routes when proceeding with his burrow from one place to another. General mental condition much the same.
- June 6th 81 Although he is engaged in the same peculiar postulations, mutterings & desultory above, patient notices a good deal that is going on around him: still eats in the same fashion - a very powerful man who returns with interest any interference with him.
- Feb 10th 82 Very quiet unless irritated by some one
Oct. 9th 82 In statu quo.
- March 30th 83 A. B. eats voraciously, bolting his food & on one occasion was almost choked by a piece of meat: he has since been put on mince. He works with the burrow party as a first rate & active worker.

June 17, 1858. James Gilchrist M. D. Crichton Royal Institution, Dumfries, says: (1) Taciturnity - depression - loss of memory - stubbornness inability to appreciate his relation to persons and objects. (2) Threw himself before a Rail way train supposed with suicidal intentions.

07th June 1858 Alex. Borthwick M. D. Buccleuch Street, Dumfries, says: (1) Taciturnity, unwillingness to submit to medical examination an utter disregard of ordinary prudence in taking care of himself. (2) His mother states that he is taciturn, sullen, that he wanders about without any object in view and that he has attempted to destroy himself.

4th April 1872 W. L. is at present in the same condition as above mentioned. He is monac, sullen, & often irritable. He is also stupid & confused & his memory is deficient. He is fixed to masturbation. Had good health & is busy at work.

27th June 1874 Bodily health good. His mental condition and his habits have slightly improved.

10/3/75 Irritable and apt to strike on slight provocation: in good manner bodily health.

30/11/75 In stationary.

25/6/76 Continues in a state of chronic dementia: in fair bodily health.

10/12/76 In much the same condition.

21/2/77 Died. He had just ~~was~~ taken dinner when he was seized with an attack of vomiting: and this was suc-

ended by one epileptiform seizure. The vomited matter consisted entirely of his dinner. He was removed to the infirmary, but just passed out of one fit into another with little intermission for two hours, at the end of which time he died. On p.m. examination no marks nor injuries were found to exist anywhere, the alimentary canal was healthy, and contained only food in various stages of digestion; the brain was congested.

19th June 1858. James Canuthers, Surgeon, Kirkpatrick Fleming, says: (1) The appearance of the countenance. Her absurd conversation and ideas, alleging that the house was falling or running round and her unaccountable expression of malice or ill feeling towards some of her relations. (2). Strolling in the woods and fields at night to meet with persons whom she could not reasonably expect to meet with.

19th June 1858. William Young, Surgeon, Ecclefechan, says: (1) Her inclination towards both by day and night labouring under the delusion that her dwelling house will fall on her and that trees follow her and her threatenings of vengeance against her relations for imaginary injuries done her.

4th April 1872. P.G. is now in a state of dementia. She has many delusions about the world being destroyed & about spirits being attached to her own person. She also is excited occasionally. Her life is incontinent. She eats her food, sits & wanders & walks about, in the same routine without any mental change.

12 March 1873 Phillis Gordon has good health, but never performs any household duty. She never complains. her mental state is one of considerable impairment of all the faculties with incoherence.

12 Dec 1873 There is no change in mental or bodily state of Phillis Gordon since last report.

27th June 1874 Bodily and mental condition as previously noted.

The image displays a single page from an old ledger book, page number 578. The page is ruled with horizontal lines and vertical lines that create a grid of columns and rows. There are three vertical lines, which define four columns. The first column is the narrowest, followed by a wider column, a third column of similar width to the first, and a final wide column on the right. The grid is empty, with no data entered. The paper is aged and shows some staining, particularly near the top edge. The page is part of a bound volume, with the binding visible on the left.

12th July 1858. James Douglas Clermont M.D. L.R.C.S. Castle Douglas, says:
 (1) The delusions which he entertains. The suspicious and quarrelsome character which he sometimes shows. (2) His father. Dangerous and almost uncontrollable fury at times.

14 July, 1858. Patrick Anderson L.R.C.S. Edin, Castle Douglas, says: (1) The delusions on various subjects under which he labours. (2) His father states that he has occasionally been rather difficult to manage, and has on one or two occasions threatened to strike his brother.

4th April 1872. A.H. is a quiet industrious dement. He sometimes suffers from mental depression, & refuses his food but unless then. He enjoys good health though he is not robust.

3 March 1873 He. His mental state does not improve. He is sometimes very degraded and eats his own excrement, & drinks his urine. He answers questions readily, but the finer parts of his nature are completely obliterated.

12 Dec: 1873 There are no changes in H. Hogg's condition. He is at present suffering from erysipelas of the face which is becoming pretty extensive.

27th June 1874 Not quite so filthy in his habits. Bodily health good.

10/3/75 More correct in his habits: quiet and industrious.

20/11/75 In statu quo.

25/6/76 In much the same condition

10/12/76 Habits correct: quiet and industrious: much demented.

20/6/77 In State good.

June 6th 81 Is quiet: work well: a dement.

Feb 10th 82 History uneventful: neither physical nor physical disturbances.

Oct 9th 82 In State good.

March 30th 83 H.H. has heart disease (mitral) there is a well defined murmur with irregularity of the pulse: he is quiet & is now working.

8th Oct 1883 H.H. is a quiet man and a willing worker.

24 March 63. I hereby certify that I have examined Mr R. Graham and concur with Drs Weir and McLachlan that he is of unsound mind and imbecile. This I do on soul and conscience.
W. A. J. Brydone.

4th April 1872. R.G. is at present in the state above mentioned. He works very diligently & possesses an amount of intelligence not suspected at first sight. His labours under many delusions, one of the most prominent being that there are serpents in his inside & twisting about him. He is given to the exposure of his person in public & generally walks with his hands on his nates. This practice is no doubt due to his suffering from piles & occasionally prolapus ani.

2 April 1873 Robert Graham works steadily. He suffers from prolapse of the Rectum at intervals. He has his delusions about serpents being in his alimentary canal.

10 Dec: 1873 R. G. suffers from prolapse occasionally & pruritis of the anus. He manifests no change in his mental condition.

27th June 1874 Patient is in fair health and works daily. His mental condition has not improved.

10/3/75 R. G. has a peculiar habit of sleeping at night in a kneeling posture, the bed clothes being gathered round him: there is no change in his condition.

28/11/75 In stable yard.

25/6/76 Quiet and at work daily.

10/12/76 In statu quo.

20/6/77 In much the same condition: suffers from Hemorrhoids: has a habit of picking his skin over the face and ears, making it lacerated and raw, and giving rise to very disagreeable marks.

June 6th 81 R. Graham is demented: has the same habit of picking his face: he works well.

Feb 10th 82 Patient's delusions do not now obtrude themselves on ones notice.

Oct 9th 82 In statu quo.

March 30th 83 R. G. still has delusions about snakes tormenting him: an attempt has been made to prevent him picking himself.

1 Oct 1883. R. G. is less disfigured by his picking habit: his delusions still retain their hold of him and influence his conduct.

1st Nov. 1858. Census Macaulay M.D.C.S. & Eskbank, Canobie, says: (1) Vague, general appearance, great restlessness and disposition to wander. (2) Information obtained from her landlady Mrs Caruthers. Requires to be constantly watched in consequence of her wandering propensities.

2nd Nov 1858. W. J. Carlyle M.D. & Surgeon, Langholm, says: (1) From the conversation I had with her, I consider that her intellect is in a deranged state. There is considerable incoherence. If not watched leaves the house and wanders in a very unsettled state to a considerable distance without having any fixed idea where she is going. (2) The above mentioned facts have also been communicated to me by Mrs Caruthers (who has at present the charge of Helen Aitchison) as well as by her father.

1st April 1872 H.A. is at present imbecile & incoherent, she is often excited & requires to be removed from her usual gallery. She is in no best health.

2 April 1873 Helen Aitchison suffers from excitement in which she is dangerous to others. This however soon passes away. In the interval she is quiet and industrious and enjoys good health.

10 Decr 1873 There is no change in H.A.'s condition since last report. Her mental and bodily condition are in the same state.

7th June 1874 Periods of excitement recur at long intervals. Patient's bodily health is good and she enjoys in work.

10/3/75 In statu quo.

20/11/75 No change to record.

- 25/6/76 H. H. near rises to sympathy of excitement now, though excitable and rather noisily inclined sometimes.
- 12/12/76 In much the same condition
- 20/6/77 Little change: very far "lost"; bodily health good.
- June 6th 81 H. H. Catechism is usually quiet: sews well: she some times misses a meal or two and takes to bed for a few days
- July 16th 82 Is good natured and demented.
- Oct. 9th 82 Nothing to record.
- January 27th 83 H. A. has for some time been living at Mansfield: she today had an attack of palsy of the left side chiefly in the leg and face, less in the arm there was strabismus of the left eye upwards & inwards.
- Feb. 3rd 83 The reflex action in the left leg (to tickling of the sole) has improved somewhat.
- February 11th 83 H. A. Complains of much pain in the back especially on movement; she is restless and sleepless during the night & cries out: the appetite is also affected, a belladonna plaster was applied to a mixture containing Pot: Sod for 5 Pot Brom: gr 20 given three daily - with good effect.
- March 30th 83 H. A. Has now been getting up: there is still a very slight amount of strabismus & a little nystagmus which was omitted in mentioning the first symptoms: the power in the leg has quite returned.
- 8 Oct-1883. H. A. has recovered from the paralytic symptoms & much enfeeblement of the mind has been left by them. She has recently (for 6 weeks) had an enlargement of both breasts more especially the right. Her wife feared that she is declining in strength quickly.
- 23rd September 84 For some time past H. H. has been staying at Mansfield. She has a way of saying she can't see but she can distinguish things very well. Her general health at present is fair -

8th Dec. 1858. Alex. Borthwick. M.D. Dumfries, says: (1) She is depressed in spirits, unwilling to answer questions and peculiar in her deportment. (2). Mr Welsh, the Inspector of New Abbey informs me that she has been under restraint for a month past.

9th Dec 1858 John Chisholm. Buccleuch Street, Dumfries, says: (1) Lowness of spirits - Delusions - peculiarity of deportment - suspicious (2). Has been under restraint for a month past is unwilling to go to bed or take food - as informed by Mr. Welsh.

4th April 1873 Mr King's health at present is much impaired owing to her asthmatical attacks. She has many delusions regarding the cause of such. Chiefly accusing them to be caused by the male attendants & other persons about. She is often very excited. Abusive in her language

2 February 1873 J. D. or K. is sometimes much oppressed with Asthma, which she ascribes to various persons in the house causing her injury. Her delusions in this respect are numerous. Her general health is good.

10 Decem. 1873 There is no change in J. D. or K.'s condition since last report. She enjoys fair average health but often suffers from the Asthma previously alluded to.

27th June 1874 Frequently excited & abusive in her language. Often demands her liberty and declares she is oppressed and treated cruelly by the officers. Bodily health good.

10/3/75 In statu quo

30/11/75 J. D. or K. continues subject to attacks of excitement - more especially at the end of the quarters when other and recovered patients are being discharged: bodily health good, she has not had a regular asthmatic attack for a twelvemonth, though occasionally rather breathless in the height of her usual excitement.

25/6/76

Mrs H. continues much the same: has not suffered from an asthmatic attack since she has come under reporter's notice.

10/12/76

In statu quo.

20/5/77

Mrs H. had a rather severe asthmatic attack in the course of the winter, lasting for about ten days; since when she has been well; still excitable as formerly.

14/10/80

She has just recovered from an attack of Asthma which lasted about a week.

June 6th 81

Asthmatic attacks are more frequent than recorded above: she talks of "screws" being driven into her: thinks that the man in the cellar persecutes her: reasoning powers much impaired.

Feb'y 10th 82

Remains much as above.

Oct: 9th 82

Asthma frequent: delusions the same.

March 30th 83

Working still believes she is much victimised by the "Men" patients & some of the male attendants: Complains of "pilot" whatever they are: since last entry she was on one occasion in a condition of unreasoning insane passion.

F Oct: 1883.

Patient has the same fixed delusions: the mind is greatly enfeebled. The Asthmatic attacks continue and are believed by her to be the result of the "screws" &c.
