THE GREAT SCANDAL.
(Being a Letter from a Son of Tail to London
to a Friend in the Country).

— DGH/5/22/11
Of all the interesting things I ever read in my life
The excitement is certainly the late affair in High life.
All those what looks an intellectual talk have been in clover
In drawing-rooms and barbers' shop, a week and two days over.
When H.R.H. appeared in Court to give his private version
Of what occurred at Traby Croft, just like a common person.
And tell us whether or not he saw Sir William into the fall.
Then every neck in Court was stretched—you might have heard a pin fall.

He stated how the sad affair was brought to his attention.
And how they said the horrid facts they'd never,
never mention.
If the fact, would set his name to an unfortunate agreement
To confirm the awful secret to the breasts of two or three usenet.

"You'd better sign this here," they said, "and so prevent a scandal."
"What no more shilling points!" says he—"the game's not worth the candle."
"Think what the stir will say," they urged, "and what the Weekly Ship-ships."
"But you'll suppose that I've confessed," the Earl objects, "if I sign."

"It can't be helped," the Prince replied, "there's five to one agin you.
And if the Duke of Cambridge hears of this, my lad,
he'll skin you.
You wouldn't like the thing made known to common Jacks and Tommies." Says Cumming, then, "Give me the pen," and so he signs the promise.

Then Master Arthur Wilson, who had been to Cambridge College (A place where nobles go, I'm told, to get a taste of knowledge).
Explained his share in this affair before the excited Court.
With historic chick and wove (they call him Jack for short).

He saw Sir Gordon Cumming's game, and scarcely could believe it.
"Good! Good!" says he, "this here's too hot." — As how? — says Mr. Lovett.
"The chap said he's a cheating one!" Says t'other, most emphatic.
"Impossible!" — "Look for yourself," says Jack.
(Twas quite dramatic.)

After that they said no more and went no further for the present.
For there and then to have a quarrel wouldn't have been pleasant.
For this happened in the parlour, and the Prince was in the next room.
After on they talked the matter over, in the bedroom.

So, says Mr. L., exhausted with these intellectual labours.
Gordon Cumming, Baronet, caught cheating
his neighbours!

story of his arts and strong in his inner integrity." Although delivered by his wife, the defense may be said to be that of M. de Lesage himself, for he endowed every word of it. On reading it one cannot help thinking that the new was not quite so fresh in the Avenue Montaigne as it was professed to be. However, by the time of delivery can be entertained there. I must say that the general public approve of the production. This is no wonder, seeing the number of persons of all classes, but particularly the small tradesmen and thrifty workmen and women, who have treated their little fortunes in the canal and who hope that the prosecution will enable them, somehow or another, to get back at least a portion of what they have lost. The chance is poor, no doubt, but it is clung to all the same and who knows if the Government will not come to their aid after all?

"THE MISCHIEF MAKER."

Miss Edith Henderson had a very kindly and pleasant evening at the Globe Theatre yesterday afternoon. I was as generous and was "convinced." It had indeed almost the aspect of a family party, the British public (in the ordinary sense of the term) being apparently conspicuous by its absence. Miss Henderson, we believe, is a young lady of literary solutions, and this piece of hers, "The Mischief Maker," is, we suppose, her maiden dramatic effort. She is not, we should say, a very frequent attendant at the theatre. If she were, she would know that there is scarcely anything in her play which has not been seen and heard before over and over again. We do not know that the persistent use of a detective camera has hitherto been made characteristic of a stage personage, but the personage himself in this case a descendant of Marlow, while the scene of mistle on impression in the family room has its prototype in more than one recent farcical comedy. However, Miss Henderson's effort (in which Miss Mary Annell and a few other performers were seen to some advantage) had the great merit of being short, and she will do better we dare say, next time, when she should work collaboration with a practical dramatist. As it is, with regard to "The Mischief Maker," the trial of the author is over it all, and we trouble to think what would have happened to the innocent and ingenious production had it been submitted to a gathering of regular playgoers.

FISHING WITH CORMORANTS.

An Austrian paper contains an interesting article on the catching of fish in China by means of cormorants. The birds used are mostly large enough to hold three or four persons besides the birds. At the head stands the captain, who generally has a dozen trained cormorants under his charge. In the middle of the boat is stationed another fisherman, who has from four to six birds under him. Between these two men stands a third, armed with a long bamboo pole, with which he strikes and splashes the water in order to encourage the cormorants to work, while in the stern of the boat, sits the man who steers and propels it. The cormorants are mostly kept in the houses of the fishermen, and trained from the time they are very young. They remain idle for work till the time of 10 to 12 PM, and if well trained, have a market value of 10 to 25. They are fed on lean fish and fish. The birds are placed in the gurnals of the boat, and at a given signal, jump into the water, where they catch the fish and bring it back to the boat.

12 minutes had been given to the "public worse off." So down he plumped upon the bed—he had his clothes off.

Then Mr. Green and Mrs. Green, and other quality. Gave evidence to prove Sir Gordon. Cam immovably. Told how they watched him nightly, their suspense growing stronger. Until at last they simply couldn't stand it any longer. And Mr. Levett stated how he met the Bart. in London. Who said, "If you'll retract those words, this trouble may be undone. Why are you?" says the Baronet. "Why are you so dishonest?" (These chaps talk French, then; fancy that!) Says Levett, "That's all blarney."

But doubtless you have read the tale, so full of mislead warning. Since the papers told it all, most circumstantial, every morning. For sure they gave it so complete, 'twere useless to refuse on 'em. Ten columns in the Telegraph? I read 'em, every line on 'em.

I blush for our aristocrats, their utter deprecation. They inspire the British workman with a honest indignation. Their morals are the dickens, though their manners may be polished. And their haughtiness and wealth is such they ought to be abolished.

It is a "Temple" nearly by the side of the old building.
