Her talk is rambling & incoherent & her answers to questions are quite irrelevant. She is violent at times. She is neglectful of her personal appearance & cannot properly wash or dress herself. She is quite imbecile.

She is perfectly well & has been so: a little while ago she complained that the nurse had put a dead child into her bed & that she must not have been exposed to this or especially as she did not change her position. She is now in good health.

There is some degree of atrophy of the limbs & of the trunk. There is no evidence of violent disease.

When asked in what way he was badly treated he said that they declined to accompany him to Bond Street in the middle of the day although he entreated them to do so for three minutes. He said that he was unable to tell them why he wanted them to go there with him but stated the reason was nothing improper. He stated his requests were met by abuse and as a result of this cruelty he was driven to attempt suicide. He said he bore his sister no ill-will but when asked whether I should ask her to talk things over with him he said he did not wish to see her. He justified his refusal of a painting she sent him & denied that his feelings were hurt when he gave it away & did not even acknowledge it. He denied that he ever thought she was a bad character although the care book states that he used to think this. He further declined to communicate with any of his relatives.

re Miss Ann Senior

With reference to the complaint contained in the letter forwarded I have to report that Miss Senior tells me that the incident in question happened shortly after her first admission to the Retreat in 1868.

She tells me that a certain Nurse Wood was concerned in it, she can remember no others & she can give no particulars as to date. Nurse Wood left the Retreat to be married some years ago.

On referring to the Case Book I find that Miss Senior at that time was very frightened & nervous but it happens to be noted that she was calling out constantly for Nurse Wood whom she had seen in Hanover before she came.

She now says that Nurse Wood tried to be very kind to her subsequently. There is no note of any complaint made at the time & I do not recollect any complaint being made by her on this subject before.

thinks that things are done which have special mysterious meanings for him. He tells me that for about six months before he came here he never went out of the house; although he was in good health, twisted legs out, he was obliged to remain indoors by a higher power. He also said he was ashamed to show his face outside while his debts were unpaid though he had plenty of money to pay them. He talks mysteriously about his actions being all governed by Providence in some special way, although this is only what he has a right to expect: since Providence has deprived him of his parents, it is only right that the direction of his life should be taken off his shoulders. He talks mysteriously of his having come here "for a special purpose" but declines to say what that is. He is in good health. There is no sign of several diseases.

Handwritten text in cursive script, likely a letter or journal entry. The text is faint and mostly illegible due to fading. Some words are difficult to decipher but appear to include "I have", "a field", and "a small".

Handwritten text at the bottom of the page, possibly a signature or a closing. It appears to read "Very Yrs. [illegible]".
