From the statement on the opposite side it appears that there have been deaths from the commencement of the Institution to the present ~~but~~ end of June 1813.— The following table shows the number which are reported to have died in each year & also the number of patients in the house

Dec 30. 1813.

To the Editors of the York Chronicle.

A writer in the last Courant, who has ~~most unfortunately~~, assumed the title of "A Friend to Truth," has given the publick the following statements:—1st. "That there has died in the York Lunatic Asylum since its first establishment in 1777—216 persons." 2d. "That the average number of patients for great part of the time, has been 195." And 3d. As an inference from the foregoing, "that the number of deaths are greater in proportion at the Retreat, than they have been in the Asylum."

I beg to inform your readers, that these three statements are absolutely false, as will appear evident from the following annual account of the number of patients in the house in each year, and the number of deaths. This document has been extracted chiefly from the printed reports of the state of the institution published in the York Chronicle.

It is evident, from the preceding table, that the number of patients who had died in the Asylum, at the time of the last printed report, was 322; so much for the first statement of the Friend to Truth. In regard to the second, it appears that prior to the year 1810, the number of patients in the house at one time has never been 100; and that the average number from the commencement of the Asylum to the present year, has not been 53. The average annual number of deaths will be found to have been as nearly 9 as possible. Let us then examine the third statement of the letter writer. The average number of patients in the Retreat since its establishment, (a period of 36 years) has been 46; and in this time the number of deaths has been 26. A very simple arithmetical process will readily shew that the proportion of deaths in the Retreat to those of the Asylum, are about as 15 to 41.5th; or, in other words, had only the same mortality prevailed in the Asylum, as has been the case in the Retreat, instead of an average of nine deaths in one year, there would have been only seven in two years. I am aware that a variety of circumstances must be considered before any just inferences can be drawn from these comparative statements, and I should not have made them, had it not been necessary to correct the flagrant inaccuracies of this pretended Friend to Truth.

S. M. K.

I remain, with respect, &c.
A SEEKER OF TRUTH.
