PREFACE

NUMEROUS works have been consulted by the writer of the following pages. The leading authority, which, as it were, supplied the framework of the present book, is "Contributions to the History of Printing at Basle," published on the fourth centenary of the invention of printing, held in that city on the 24th June, 1840.<sup>1</sup> Its authors, Immanuel Stockmeyer and Balthasar Reber, members of the Historical Society of Basle, had special facilities for producing such a work, hence its value. Beside the typographical treasures, both in the public libraries of the town and in the houses of private collectors, placed at their disposal for their inspection, examination, and description, they had for their further guidance, not only the bibliographical works of Maittaire, Panzer, Braun, Laire, and others, but also two MSS. of exceptional interest to investigators such as they.

The first of these MSS. is a Collection of Biographical and Bibliographical Notes on the History of Printing at Basle, the work of John Schweighauser (d. 1806), the founder of the well-known firm of booksellers and publishers. The contents of the MS. were derived from archives, books, and personal inspection, but originally put down without order or system. The above-named authors had to arrange their material so as to utilize it.

The other MS. forms the fourth part of an unpublished work by Prof. John Christopher Beck (d. 1785), a learned Baslois, the title of which work is "The Annals of Basle"; and the said fourth part treats especially of the printers of Basle.

The first-named MS. is in the possession of the Schweighauser family. The second is deposited in the library of the Frey-Grynæus Institution, which was founded in the last century by Professors Frey and Grynæus for promoting the study of theology.

As the work of Stockmeyer and Reber had to be ready by the date of the centenary, there was unfortunately no time to render it complete, and hence a number of Basle printers, who flourished in the sixteenth century, are not even mentioned in the book, a circumstance regretted by the authors themselves. These deficiencies had to be made good from other sources, such as the "Autobiography of Thomas Platter," and editions thereof by Franz, Boos, and Heman; "Bilder aus der Geschichte von Basel" (Pictures from the History of Basle), by A. Burckhardt, 1877-8; "Beiträge zur vaterländischen Geschichte" (contributions to the History of our Country [Switzerland]), by the Historical Society of Basle, 1846; "Basler Taschenbuch" (Basle Pocket Annual), 1854-5 and 1863; "Basle New Year's Magazine," 1840; "Die Buchdruckerei zu Beromünster" (Printing at Beromünster), by Canon J. L. Aebi, 1870, and others. But of especial assistance was a work published in the course of last year at Strasbourg, and entitled, "Basler Büchermarken bis zum Anfang des 17. Jahrhunderts" (Basle Book-devices to the beginning of the 17th century), edited by Paul Heitz, with a Preliminary Essay on Basle Printers by Dr. C. C. Bernoulli, Chief Librarian at Basle, 1896, Large 4to. This work, to a great extent, supplements the above-named "Contributions," especially as regards the devices.

A still more recent publication, "Basle Book Illustration," by Dr. Werner, Weisbach, Strasbourg, 1896, 8vo, enables us, not only to reproduce some specimens of wood-engraving, as then applied to the illustration of books, but also to supply the title of a book hitherto unknown to bibliographers.

All the above-quoted works were written by experts—as experts only could or would write them—that is to say, by gentlemen of high literary training and attainments, and officially or by pursuit closely connected with the intellectual life of Basle, as I could testify were such testimony needed, from personal knowledge of some of them; and as they drew their information on the spot from the very origins of printing, their statements may be taken as authoritative; and as they all are subsequent to the "Contributions," the "Begetter of these ensuing" pages, they not only supplement the deficiencies of these, but furnish us with many additional details of considerable interest.

In speaking above of book illustrations, I have not referred to the most important, the most interesting of them, viz., the Printers' Devices, an almost complete reproduction of which is given in these pages. We have here the very Armorial of Intellect, the heraldic Insignia of Art, for that these Devices display both a depth of meaning and a conception and facility of æsthetic execution cannot be denied. Many of them, especially of later date, give us a high opinion of the symbolizing minds of those grand and imposing figures, the early Printers of Basle, pioneers and champions of human progress. And when we look at the hand-worked presses—so poor and mean compared with the monumental ten-feeder rotating machine of the present day—with which they produced so beautiful a work as Winter's "Pollucis Onomasticon," or Perna's "Rime del Petrarca," we must admit that those early printers were enterprizing, intellectual, and industrial giants. Basle may well be proud of them, and has shown that it is so, by assigning to the books printed by them in their public library a separate department, as they have to printers of other towns, so that, as the Athenæum of the 24th February, 1894, says, the library of Basle is now the most perfect library for the bibliographer to work in.

I cannot conclude without expressing gratitude—a feeling in which, I am certain, every reader will join—to the printers and publishers of this work for the typographical elegance and richness of illustration with which they have presented it to the public, a liberality all the more worth commemorating considering the restricted number of Bibliophiles. And, finally, I would add, in the words of honest old Maittaire: “Errata, quæ mea partim indiligentia, partim ignorantia præterivit, eruditum et candidum lectorem pro sua benevolentia condonaturum spero.”

CHAPTER I.

The First Printers of Basle—Bertoldus.

WHEN the Elector Adolphus II., in 1462, took the city of Mayence by storm, and allowed his soldiery to commit such outrages on the inhabitants as to compel the majority of them to fly, the workmen of Fust and Schöffer,<sup>1</sup> the printers, were scattered over Europe, and too readily considering themselves absolved from the oath they had taken on entering into that firm's employ, never to reveal the mysteries of the art of printing, they set up printing-offices of their own in various towns, such as Rome, Venice, Milan, and Augsburg. John von Stein, better known under his Latinized name of Johannes de Lapide, the famous doctor of theology of Paris, in 1470 sent for German printers to erect a printing establishment in that city. Then similar establishments were founded in Nuremberg, Cologne, Bologna, Speyer, Strasbourg, and Ulm. And in 1474, before London, Lyons, Geneva, or Leipsic were so provided, a printing press was at work at Basle.

But there is reason to assume that even before that year, viz., in 1472, one Bertoldus, known as Bertoldus de Basilea, was a printer at Basle. For in the "laudum inter Jac. et Joh. Faustus ex una, et Joh. Gutenbergium ex altera parte" of the year 1455, there is the following passage: "In this inquiry appeared Henry Chünser, preacher at St. Christopher's at Mayence, Henry Keffer, and Bertolff of Hanau, servant and workman of the said John Guttenberg." Now one Bertoldus was a printer at Basle in 1473, and in 1477 one Bertold Ruppel of Hanau, a printer, by purchase became a citizen of Basle. But as the early history of printing in this city knows of no printer named Ruppel, but knows of one called Bertoldus, it can scarcely be a matter of doubt that the Bertolff of Hanau, who was Guttenberg's servant, and the Bertoldus Ruppel of Hanau, who in 1477 became a citizen of Basle, were one and the same person. Sometimes this Bertoldus is given the cognomen of Rodt, the reason for which cannot now be ascertained.

Thus the question, what was the earliest book printed at Basle, is left in doubt. The age of these early books, when no date is given, and the omission thereof was unfortunately the rule, is usually inferred by their general appearance, and the type used, which is compared with that used in books the printers of which are known. Now to such comparison Bertoldus, and another of the first printers of Basle, Bernhard Richel, owe that there is attributed to them a very ancient edition of the Bible, a copy of which is in the public library of Basle. Bertoldus is said to have printed the first, and Richel the second part of this Bible. For the first part, consisting of 220 leaves, ending with the Proverbs of Solomon, is printed in gothic type, or what is now usually called "Black Letter," thick and unequal. The paper is white and strong, but somewhat rough. Every page has two columns, each comprising 50 lines. Punctuation is represented by points, colons, and marks of interrogation. Catchwords, signatures, and numbers of pages desunt. The initials are omitted in the printing, and painted in by the rubricator. Neither chapters nor entire books have any titles; abbreviations abound. Now the type of this first part is similar to that in which Bertoldus printed—the date is uncertain—at Basle the Repertorium of Conrad Thuricensis, presently to be described, whence it is concluded that he also printed the first part of the Bible above mentioned. The second part, containing the remaining books of the Old Testament, and the whole of the New, consists of 216 leaves; every page is divided into two columns of 48 lines each. As to paper, etc., this part resembles the first; catchwords, etc., also are absent. The type likewise is the larger gothic, but the letters differ from those of the former part, they are no longer so rough, and are of the same shape as those with which Bernhard Richel in 1476 printed the Decretum Gratiani, whence it is held to be certain that he printed the second part of the Bible at Basle. It cannot be denied that both parts form but one edition, since in all copies extant both parts are considered as forming one volume, being in some instances so bound together. Now it may be accepted as a fact that all experts agree in placing the printing of this Bible between the years 1460 and 1465, whence writers, anxious to secure for Basle the honour of so early a possession of a printing press, argue that this town actually did so possess one at that early date. But the very assumption of the great age of that Bible, and that Bertoldus and Richel printed it, confutes itself, for the greater the similarity of the letters of the Bible and those with which Richel printed in 1476, the less probable becomes the considerable difference of age; and the more the form of the letters justifies the assumption of such a difference, the more improbable becomes the identity of the printers. This applies to several old impressions, which, on account of the similarity of their letters with those of the Repertorium, are attributed to Bertoldus, and which have neither place, nor date, nor printer's name on them, namely :

1. S. Gregorii M. moralia in librum Job. Fol., mag., 421 leaves.<sup>1</sup>
2. Digestum novum s. Pandectarum juris civilis T. III. cum glossis. Fol. max. Supposed to have been printed before 1470.
3. Viola Sanctorum. Fol. 93 leaves. Panzer is doubtful whether this was not printed by Richel.
4. St. Thomæ Secunda Secundæ.
5. Meffret Sermones.
6. Wilhelmi Paraldus Episcopi Lugdunensis Summa de viciis. Fol. mentioned by Panzer.

But except the Repertorium Conradi, which we are about to describe, no work is known, to which Bertoldus has affixed his name, or that of the place, where it was printed. The Repertorium is in folio, and gothic type. Catchwords, signatures, and pagination are wanting. The pages are undivided, and contain 36 lines. The first page of the first leaf is left blank; on the second is the following title :

Repertorium vocabulorum equisitorum oratorie poeseos et historiarum cum fideli narratione earum rerum quæ ambiguitatem et hujusmodi vocabulis

<sup>1</sup> Since writing the above a passage in Mr. Gordon Duff's "Early Printed Books," has come under my notice. It is quoted from Franc-Xavier Laire's "Index Librorum ab inventa typographia ad annum 1500, 8vo, 2 vols., Senonis 1791," and is a MS. memorandum inserted in the copy in the possession of Laire, and therefore authentic, to this effect: "Hunc solvi anno MCCCCLXVIII., Joseph de Vergers Præbiter Ecclesiæ Sti Hylarii, Moguntini." Laire says that the book is printed ex caractere Bertholdi de Basilea. If this book was printed by Bertholdus at Basle, we have here irrefutable proof that the earliest printed book of Switzerland belongs to Basle and not to Beromünster. (See infra, pp. 4, 5.) Mr. Gordon Duff kindly informed me that the book in question was sold at Laire's sale for 45 francs, but where it is now is uncertain.

accipiunt, per quod fere omnes occultæ et difficultates et subtilitates in studiis humanitatis facile juxta alphabeti ordinem inveniuntur, editum a doctissimo literarum amatore Magistro Conrado Turicensis ecclesiæ Cantore<sup>1</sup> et completus anno Domini M<sup>o</sup>cclxxiij in vigilia assumptionis beatæ Mariæ virginis indictione prima incipit feliciter.

Then, some space being left, follow verses, of which we only quote those immediately connected with our subject, viz., typography :

Unde liber venerit præsens si forte requiras
 Quidque novi referat perlege quod sequitur.
Bertoldus nitide hunc impresserat in basilea
 Utque adeat doctos protinus ille jubet.

Here also no earlier date is given, but we obtain one from the Epistolæ Gasparini of Bergamo (d. 1428), printed by Michael Wenzler and Frederick Biel, who in the following distichs proclaim their names and the place of printing :

Quos legis unde tibi, si queras forte libelli
 Mittantur pressos dat basilea scias.
 . . . . .
 Pressores nostri percelebres faciunt
 Nomina si cupias Michahel cognomine Wenzler
 Huic operis socius Biel Fridericus erat.

These lines are on the second page of the first leaf, then follow the letters without titles, numbers, catchwords, signatures, or pagination. The gothic type is somewhat thin and irregular. The initials are omitted by the printers, but inserted afterwards by the rubricator. The paper is not smooth, but strong, and beautifully white.

True, even here we have no date, but in one of the three copies in the public library at Basle there are written, on the outside of the first leaf, in very antique letters the words : Mag. Jacobus Louber hunc emit librum Kal. Decembris anno dom. 1472 ; so that this book cannot have been printed later than the year 1472.

This, then, seems the earliest certain date of printing of Basle ; the honour of the first book known to have been printed in Switzerland belongs to the monastery of Beromünster,<sup>2</sup> in the canton of Lucerne, which can show a typographical production of the year 1470, namely, an edition of Marchesimus' Mommætractus or Mammotrectus,<sup>1</sup> an explanation of difficult words occurring in the Latin Bible, church hymns, old sermons, etc. At the end of this ancient book are the words: "Explicit mammotrectus sive primicerius arte imprimendi seu caracterizandi per Helyam helye<sup>2</sup> alias de Louffen Canonicum Ecclesiæ villæ Veronensis in pago Ergowie site absque calami exaracione: vigilia Sancti Martini Episcopi sub anno ab incarnatione domini Millesimo Quadringentesimo Septuagesimo. Deo laus et gloria per infinita secula seculorum. Amen."

<sup>2</sup> So named after its founder Bero, Count of Lenzburg. It has a fine church, and the specimens of early typography in its library are generally asserted to be the first printed in Switzerland.

But while we thus give Beromünster the honour of having produced the first book known to have been printed in Switzerland, we do not thereby exclude the possibility of others having been so printed before the one named. And, besides the support the MS. note in the Moralia in Job affords us, we have very telling facts to adduce in favour of our contention, that printing was carried on at Basle even before the year 1470, facts, the discovery of which is due to modern research in the archives of Basle, in law reports, tax-collecting lists, baptismal registers, private correspondence preserved in MS., and other local sources.

When we hear of a strike of workmen in any particular trade, we may safely assume that such trade is not one only recently established, but that it has been carried on for some time, for a year or two at least. Now by the records in the archives of Basle, it appears that a strike of printers' men took place in that city in the year 1471, which had to be adjudicated on and settled by the magistrates. Surely, printing must have been in active operation at Basle in 1470, if not earlier. From other authentic documents we further learn that between the years 1470 and 1480 no less than twenty-one printers were established at Basle. Possibly some of them were not masters, but journeymen; their number, however, shows how firm a footing printing had obtained in the town. Of many of them the addresses are given, so that even now the very houses in which they worked can be identified. From 1480 to 1490 we find seventeen, and from 1490 to 1500 twenty more new printers established at Basle.

And, to return once more to the Mammotrectus, it is a significant fact that Helyas de Laufen, its printer, in 1466 resided at Basle to defend,

<sup>1</sup> This barbarous term, invented by Helias, and intended to indicate the character of the book, is composed of "Mamma," the mother, the Bible being considered as the mother of all truth, which the Christian was to "trahere" draw, extract therefrom. Trectus, instead of tractus, was a concession to euphony. The book was reprinted at Strasbourg in 1494.

<sup>2</sup> This Helias Helie von Laufen may have been a member of the Laufen family of Basle, whose ancestral home was Laufen, on the Birs, between 7 and 8 miles from Basle.

as syndic of Beromünster, certain claims of the latter against the Order of St. John at Hohenrain. Just about that time some of the scattered workmen of Guttenburg may have found their way to Basle, especially as its university, though founded but a few years before, had quickly acquired a well-deserved reputation. Helyas, a man of inquiring mind, and favoured by official position and private wealth, would soon penetrate the mystery with which the art of printing was originally surrounded; and it may fairly be assumed that it was at Basle he acquired the knowledge, and obtained the workmen, which enabled him in 1470 to give forth the Mammotrectus.

But whether Basle was, or was not, the first Swiss town in which printing was practised, in no other did the art attain to such high perfection as to secure to it as it did to Basle, from the twenties of the sixteenth century, and for succeeding decades, the leading position in the European printing and book-selling mart. Several causes which led to this result may be mentioned. Firstly, the great care which from an early date was bestowed at Basle on the manufacture of paper. A paper mill existed in 1440 outside one of the gates of Little Basle (the Riehenthor); it belonged to Hans Halbysen; the deed of purchase is still in existence. The manufacture was greatly extended and improved by the two brothers Antonius and Michael, better known by their cognomen the Gallicions, who about 1470 came from Spain and settled at Basle. Whilst the production of durable and handsome material in the shape of paper thus assisted and promoted printing, the foundation of the Basle University in 1460 gave a mental impulse and support to the art. But most of all was it the personal influence of the first printers themselves which so ennobled the art in public estimation. They were not printers only, but learned editors and commentators of the classical works they printed and published, not on the advice of some ignorant and conceited "reader," on whom modern publishers, to their own damage, now rely, but upon their own examination and judgment. Scholars and artists were they, and they drew to their city and surrounded themselves with kindred spirits. It is through the close friendship of such men as Froben and Erasmus that printing may be said to have sprung Minerva-like, fully armed, upon the glorious pedestal it occupied as early as the beginning of the sixteenth century.

CHAPTER II.

Biel and Wenssler.

As mentioned above (p. 4) two printers, Wenssler and Biel. As regards the latter, it is not known how long he pursued the business of a printer at Basle, his name is found on no other work, beside the one already named, printed in that city; but later on, in the eighties, a printer acquired some distinction at Burgos in Spain, known as Fridericus Basiliensis, Fridericus de Basilea, Magister Fridericus, Frederigo Aleman, Maestre Fadrique Aleman; and it is generally assumed that this was Friedrich Biel, who, in order to escape the great competition he encountered at Basle, had emigrated to Spain. Several other old impressions, still supposed to have been printed at Basle by Biel, on account of their similarity to the above-named Epistles of Gasparini, Wenssler may have had a share in, wherefore we will quote them under the name of the latter.

Michael Wenssler (sometimes called Wensler, Wensel, Vrensler; Maittaire always calls him Wenkler), of Strasbourg, became a citizen of Basle in 1473, and printed there till 1490. We mention first:

I. Anonymous impressions which, on account of their type are thought to have proceeded from the press of Wenssler :

1. Joannis Calderini repertorium Juris. At the end are the words : divini ac humani juris res tam supernas quam subternas bene disponentis repertorium dissertissimi doctoris Calderini, per impressum primo ydus decembris MCCCCLXXIV. feliciter explicit.

2. Vocabularius utriusque Juris. Fol. max. Helmschrodt says that in a copy at Füssen (Bavaria) the date 1473 is inserted in very antique writing.

3. Bohecius de consolatione philosophiæ. Sm. fol. without catchwords, signatures, or pagination. 52 leaves.

4. Incipit expositio beati Augustini episcopi super symbolum. Sequitur sermo beati Augustini episc. super orat. domin. The copy in the public library at Basle is marked by the rubricator with the date 1474.

5. Expositio venerabilis magistri Henrici de Hassia super dominicam oracionem. Fol.

6. Expos. Henrici de Hassia super ave maria. 5 leaves. Fol.

7. S. Thomæ de Aquino ord. Præd. tertia pars summæ. Fol.

22. Gregorii IX. Pontif. Max. Decretalium nova compilatio una cum apparatu Bernhardi. Basileæ per Mich. Wenssler 1486. Fol.

23. Bonifacii VIII Liber Sextus Decretalium cum adparatu Johannis Andree. Fol. Signatures. Pagination, and at the end of leaf 139 : Basilee impressus per michaellem Wenssler. Anno salutis christiane milles. quadring. octuages. sexto.
24. Constitutiones Clementis Papæ V. una cum commentis Joh. Andree. Fol. Signatures and pagination. At the end of leaf 69 : Opus Clementinarum impensa atque industria Michaelis Wenssler Basilee impressum finit feliciter Anno salutis Milles. quadring. octuages. sexto. Here follow the Decretales extravagantes.
25. Andree Butterii Cerasini Grammatica ex Alexandri et aliorum præceptis contexta. Elaborata in officina Michaelis Wenssler Basilee. 1486. Fol.
1488. 26. Graduale. 4°. With the arms. At the end : Anno a partu virginis miles. quadring. octuages. octavo quarto idus Martii — Basilee finitum est hoc opus preclarum et in urbe prenominata impressum — per Mich. Wenssler et Jacobum Kilchen.
1491. 27. Armandus de Declaratione difficilium terminorum tam theologiæ quam philosophiæ ac logice. 8°. 15 leaves. With signatures and numbering of leaves, but the latter is here and there defective. At the end : Doctissimi . . . Armandi de bellovisu . . . Compendium . . . impensis Michaelis Wensler in urbe Basileorum diligentissime elaboratum finitum est foeliciter Anno christianissimi partus post miles. quaterque centes. nonagesimo primo Kalendis Aprilibus.
28. This same work had already been printed a month previous : this former edition agrees in all things with the above, but the numbers of the leaves are defective, nor does Wenssler name himself in the colophon, which runs thus : Doctissimi . . . fratris Armandi . . . Compendium . . . explicit foeliciter. Anno salutifere originalis partus MCCCCXCI. Prima marcii in insigni urbe Basileorum.

And it is doubtful with what plant Michael Wenssler printed these last two editions, since he had been obliged in 1490 to sell his own for the sum of 253 florins Rhenish to Jacob Steinacher, a merchant and citizen of Basle, of whom he had borrowed 200 florins. A house and garden of his, which were mortgaged, were also sold by auction in 1491. It would thus appear that Michael Wenssler did not prosper in his printing enterprises ; he left Basle in 1491, his family remaining behind in great poverty. We hear of him afterwards at Cluny and Macon ; in 1499, having apparently been successful away from home, he returned to Basle, to come to a settlement with his creditors.

CHAPTER III.

Bernard Richel.

ACCORDING to his own statement at the end of several of his impressions (e.g., in his Bible of 1477) he was a citizen of Basle, where, however, he seems to have printed books only until 1482; at any rate, no book of his is known printed by him after that year. His descendants carried on printing at Strasbourg. Wendelin Richel, in 1535, printed Luther's translation of the Bible, and in 1555 Sleidani commentarios; his heirs in 1556 Aristotelis Ethica. Josias Richel in 1599 issued a second edition of Sleidanus, and in partnership with his brother Theodosius, printed various books until the beginning of the seventeenth century.

From among the typographical productions of Richel we will first discuss his editions of the Vulgate, beginning with the latest, this being the only one to which Richel has affixed his name.

1477. It is the edition of 1477 in two vols. fol. Every page has two columns, each column 50 or 51 lines long. Catchwords, signatures, and pagination desunt. But here already we find in the New Testament parallel passages from the Old Testament indicated in the margin. The initial letters are cut in wood, but are not found in all copies. The Epistles of Hieronymus to Paulin, and the prologus in Pentat. precede the text. At the end of Revelation is the colophon: Impressum per me bernardum richel civem basileensem sub anno incarnationis dominice MCCCCLXXVII. VI. Ydus septembris. indictione vero decima. Underneath is Richel's symbol; on the following page is Menardi epistola seu introductio in lecturam et sensum scripture, and finally a translation of Hebrew names.

1475. 2. Both as regards type and general get-up a Latin Bible of the year 1475, without name of place or printer, agrees with the above. This edition consists of 460 leaves in fol., 226 in the first, and 234 in the second volume. Every page has 2 columns, and each column 48 lines. The initials are in wood, those of the books very large, those of the chapters smaller. Signatures, catchwords, and pagination desunt; the titles of the books and prefaces are red, those of the chapters black. Every column has for a headline the name of the book. On the upper edge of the very first column there is printed in red: prevacio. Lower down, also in red: Incipit epistola sancti iheronimi ad paulinum presbiterum de omnibus divine historie libris. This letter is followed on the 3rd column of the 3rd leaf by the prologus in Pentateuchum. At the end of the 4th column we read: Incipit liber bresith quem nos genesim dicimus. At the end of the Psalms, of which there are 171, and of which each has a heading, the words, "Et sic est finis" the end of the first volume. The second volume begins with the epistola S. Hieronymi ad Chromacium et Heliodorum de libris Salomonis. On the first column of the 133rd leaf the New Testament begins. At the margin of the Gospels the canons and parallel passages in other gospels are indicated in smaller type. At the end of Revelation is put: "et sic est finis, 1475." Then come the epistola Menardi ad Jacobum de Isenaco, and the following verses:

*Qui memor esse cupit librorum bibliothecae
 Discat opus presens si retinere velit
 Maxima de minimis ex partibus accipe totum
 Invenies quod amas si studiosus eris.
 Ecce ihesu criste claudo pietate libellum
 Sit benedictus deus et homo de virgine natus

The last two leaves contain the canons of Eusebius. This Bible is unanimously attributed to Bernhard Richel.

3. A third Latin Bible in folio, printed with Richel's types, and by all considered a product of his press, wants beside the indication of place and printer, also the date. A short description thereof will show its identity with the edition mentioned under 2. The whole work consists of 467 leaves; every page has 2 columns, each column 48 or 49 lines. The initials of the prefaces, books, and chapters, here larger, there smaller, are cut in wood. The headings of the prefaces and books are rubricated, those of the chapters black. On the 1st column of the 1st leaf (I)ncipit epistola sancti iheronimi ad pauli—the last lines of Revelation are :

46th line : Venio cito amen. Veni domine ihesu. gracio do.

47th line : mini nostri ihesu christi cum omnibus vobis amen.

Et sic est finis.

These are followed by six printed leaves, the first four of which contain Menander's letter to Jacob of Eisenach, with verses appended :

Qui memor esse cupit, etc., as in No. 2.

The last two contain the canons of the Gospels, and an index to all the biblical books, with an indication of the leaf on which every one commences. In this edition also the parallel passages from other Gospels are noted in the margin.

As to the year in which it was printed, nothing certain is known. It is undoubtedly older than No. 2, as appears from the fact that not only catchwords, signatures, and pagination are wanting, as in the other, but the printed headings of the columns, found in the edition of 1475, are also absent.

Thus, including the old Bible, of which Bertoldus is said to have printed the first, and Richel the second part, we find that Richel, even prior to 1478, issued four editions of the Vulgate, an achievement which, excepting Anton Koburger of Nuremberg, can be recorded of none of the old printers.

Other anonymous impressions attributed to Richel are,

a. Without date :

1. Johannis Astexani de Ast O. M. Summæ de casibus Conscientiæ. Fol. 432 leaves. Without signatures, catchwords, or pagination. On the first leaf, of the first column, black : Incipit summa fratris astexani de casibus ad honorem dei immortalis et diligentem exhortationem dni Joh'is Gaietani, dyaconi cardinalis sancti theodori compilata. Premittuntur in pmis Ire fris astexani. in quib precibus dni cardinalis obtemperare pollicetur, etc.

2. Viola sanctorum—this at the beginning. At the end : explicit viola sanctorum. Small Fol. 92 leaves.

3. Fortalitium fidei contra Judæos, Saracenos et alios christiani nominis hostes. The first column begins in red : Incipit prohemium, etc. Then a woodcut. The work fills 232, and an Appendix 8 leaves. Size, largest fol.

4. Venerabilis dni Alberti magni Ratisponensis epi de sacrosancto eukaristie sacramento sermones exquisitissimi Incipiunt feliciter. — Fol. The whole, with the Index, fills 54 leaves, and ends : Operis huius tabula finit feliciter.

5. Guilelmi Duranti rationale divinorum officiorum. Fol. At the end of the 206th leaf : Deo gratias. The column has 60 lines. Panzer is doubtful as to whether this book is to be attributed to Richel, or to Michael Wenssler.

6. In agreement with the above is Bartholomæi Anglici de proprietatibus rerum libri xix. Fol. In the first column : Incipit phemium de pprietatibus rerum fratris bartholomei anglici de ordine fratrum minorum.

7. Dr. Werner Weisbach (in his "Basle Book Illustrations of the XV. Century," Strasbourg, 1896), describes a work not mentioned by any previous bibliographer as printed by Richel without date :

Abenteuer des Johann von Monhavilla (Mandeville), translated into German by Otto von Diemeringen. Fol. It is illustrated with 148 woodcuts of various sizes, one of which is reproduced on the page opposite. The representation of the human form shows considerable progress ; notice especially the naked children, which show an advance in anatomical delineation.

b. With the date :

1477. 1. Nicolai de Tudeschis (usually called Abbas Siculus) Archiepiscopi Panormitani lectura super libros decretalium I. II. III. IV. et V. 5 vols. in folio. At the end of vol. i. : Explicit lectu. famosissimi utriusque iuris doctoris domini Abbatis siculi archyepi Panormitani super primum decretalium librum, que per optime emendata impressionem Basilee adepta est. Anno nativitatis Christi M.CCCC.LXXVII. At the end of the second vol. and at the end of the first part of vol. III. the date 1477 is again inserted. The fifth vol. closes with the words of the commentator : ad quam obedientiam christus crucifixus nos perducat. Amen.

1478. 2. Card. Hugonis postilla.

3. Exhortatio de celebratione misse per modum dialogi inter pontificem et sacerdotem. 4<sup>o</sup>. 9 numbered leaves. At the end : explicit exhortatio . . . anno Lxxxij. This impression is by Laire attributed to Richel, because the woodcut initials resemble those used by Richel in his Bibles.

With his name Richel has printed :

1474. I. DER SACHSENSPIEGEL. At the end: Explicit der sassen spiegel, den der erwidige in Got vater unde herre Theodoricus von Bockstorf, Bischoff zu Nüenburg seliger gecorrigirt hat. GEDRUCKT ZU BASEL DURCH BERNHART RICHEL IN DEME LXXiiij JARE. Fol.

This is the oldest edition of this celebrated law-book, which Eyke of Reggowe, a nobleman of Upper Saxony, between 1215 and 1230 wrote, first in Latin and then in German. Copies are very scarce. Panzer never met with one.

1475. 2. Roberti de Licio Quadragesimale. Printed in partnership with M. Wenssler, under whose name this work has already been mentioned. See No. 1.
1476. 3. Decretum Gratiani cum glossis Bartholom. Brix. At the end : Anno dominice incarnationis Millesimo quadring. septuag. sexto decima die Junii Sanctissimo in Christo patre ac dno dno Sixto Papa quarto pontifice maximo Graciani decretum una cum apparatu Bartho. Brixien. in suis distinctionibus causis et consecutionibus bene visum et correctum ad laudem omnipotentis dei per ingeniosum Bernhardum Richel civem in prefata urbe basilea laudibus et honore dignissima feliciter finit. With Richel's coat of arms. Larg. fol. 412 leaves. Pages in 2 columns. The glosses are printed on all sides round the text. The Distinctiones and Causæ on the upper margin in red. The initial letters of the Causæ are large woodcuts in black, those of the Distinctiones smaller in red. The paper is pretty white and very strong.
4. SPIEGEL MENSCHLICHER BEHALTNISSE. At the end : Getrucket durch Bernhart Richel zu Basel do man zalt von cristus geburt MCCCCLxxvj uf sant gilgen Obend. Fol. With Richel's arms.

This book is an independent re-casting of the speculum humanæ salvationis and the speculum sanctæ Mariæ. Added thereto are the evangelic and apostolic pericopes with glosses or legends. The text is printed in columns ; above every article there is a woodcut the size of a playing-card, the first represents the fall of Lucifer, the last the crowning of Mary.

1476. 5. Alberti de Ferrariis J.U.D. tabula où horas canonicas. 1476. Fol.
1478. 6. Petri de Bergamo tabula. On the first leaf in red : JHESUS. Religiosissimi viri fratris Petri de Bergamo ordinis pdicatorum eximii super omnia opera divini doctoris Thome aquinatis feliciter incipit. — At the end : Religiosissimi . . . — tabula feliciter finit. Impressum finitumque Basilee per me Bernhardum Richel civem Basilien. Anno . . . 1478 die veneris qui fuit quarta mensis decembris. With Richel's arms. 260 leaves. Fol.
1480. 7. Missale Basileense Gaspari de Rheno episcopi Basileensis. Basilee per Bernhardum Richel 1480 II. Kalend. Februarii. Fol.
1481. 8. Ein Bürdlin der zit. Small fol. At the end : gedruckt aber gerecht suber und rein durch Hermeyster Bernhart Richel Burger zu Basel alss mā zalt nocht der geburt christi Mcccc.lxxxj. ior pridie Kl' Septembris.

This is a translation of the Chronicle of the World, written by Werner Rolfink, Fasciculus temporum. Riederer, who took the trouble to compare this translation with the Latin original, gives some examples of the translator's conscientious adherence to verbal peculiarities. Thus, it is said of the Apostle Paul that he was a p̄tor, which stands for prædicator, SPIEG. D. MENSCHL. BEHALTN. 1476.—RICHEL.

but which the translator took for prætor, and the ecstasy referred to by the words raptu sublimis is translated "a signal robber," so that Paul is said to have been "a man of law and a signal robber."

This translation, however, is beautifully got up, and illustrated with woodcuts. The first column of the first leaf begins with an index, which occupies 13 leaves. From the 14th leaf the pages are no longer in columns. The Preface occupies 2 leaves. The first 15 leaves are not numbered; with the 16th leaf the numbering begins and is continued, as it is practised in commercial book-keeping. On the first page of the first leaf stands j, on the second jj; on the first page of the second leaf again jj, on the second jjj, and so on. On the last page stands cxxx; there are therefore 129 numbered leaves. In this impression there are but few abbreviations; of punctuation the point, or full-stop, only appears. There are neither catch-words nor signatures. Single names or important dates are enclosed in double circles. The first woodcut represents in detail the ark of Noah, wherein the engraver did not omit to assign to the lowest part of the ship, on one side "a receptacle for dung," and on the other "a receptacle for waste water."

1482. 9. Hugonis Cardin. postillæ super IV Evang. Fol. With signatures.

CHAPTER IV.

Flaccus, Achates, and Fromolt.

LACCUS, whose real name was Flach, and who is sometimes called Simus, though as early as 1472 he had become a citizen of Strasbourg, printed at Basle after that date, as appears from the public accounts of the year 1485, in which the Town Council of Basle paid him the sum of £33 6s. 8d. for printing 2,000 copies of the Indulgence granted to that city by the Pope. When he became a subject of Strasbourg, he, it is said, succeeded Ruschius, the son-in-law of Mentelin, who, as is well known, is one of the claimants to the honour of having invented printing. But in the MS. of Professor Beck it is pointed out that Flach, in the oldest impression known to be his, because he therein gives name and date (1475), calls himself a citizen of Basle, whilst, on the other hand, no book is extant before 1491, wherein he describes himself as a citizen of Strasbourg. But let this passage, or colophon, be examined more closely. It is at the end of Roderici Zamorensis speculum vitæ humanæ: "Finit liber dictus speculum vitæ humanæ etc. a Martino Flachen ex Basilea civi progenito. Arte impressoria in medium feliciter deditus feria tertia post festum beate Katherine virginis. Anno a partu virginis salutifero Milles. quadring. septuages. quinto." Now, even assuming that civi is the more unusual ablative of civis, the term progenitus seems distinctly to indicate that Basle is here meant to be put as the printer's birthplace, in contradistinction from his then place of residence. But civi, as an ablative of civis, looks awkward with the context, and evidently is an abbreviation of civitate, so that Flach here no longer calls himself a citizen of Basle, but only recalls that he was born there, which he might well do, though he had then been a citizen of Strasbourg for upwards of three years, since Frederick Biel, when long settled at Burgos, always called himself Fridericus de Basilea. Two impressions of the year 1477 are known, wherein Flach gives name and date, and the place as Strasbourg. But this is not the place for works printed at Strasbourg, where Flach pursued his trade till 1500, when he was succeeded by his son.

Leonardus Achates,

whose real name was Agtstein, was a native of Basle, but all his books were printed abroad—at Venice, where in 1472 he issued a Virgil in fol., with the following colophon :—

Urbs Basilea mihi, nomen est Leonardus Achates, Qui tua compressa carmina dive Maro.

Anno christi humanati MCCCCLXXII. Venet. Duce Nicol. Trono.

In the same year he printed, at Vicenza, Athanasius in Latin. Other works of his appeared at St. Urso and at Padua.

Eberhard Fromolt,

according to his own statement, was a native of Basle, and Joannis de Turrecremata materia aurea, etc., and Oldradi de laude consilia juridica, both dated 1481, are supposed to have been printed at Basle, but the statement on the title-page of the former work—Per E. Fromolt alemannum Basileensem—would seem to indicate that he printed in some part of Germany.

THE DEVICE OF JOHN AMERBACH.

CHAPTER V.

John Amerbach.

PRINTING was now everywhere carried on with great zeal ; but to render the invention really useful, it was necessary not only to print well, but to be careful in the selection of the works that were printed. Not clever business men only, who understood how to render their undertakings profitable, but friends of learning and science, were wanted. And in this respect Basle, more than any other city supplied the want. For even before the great Aldus of Venice had shown the way by his editions of Greek and Latin classics, John Amerbach had set up his press at Basle, and thence sent forth, as we shall see, works of the highest importance to human knowledge and culture.

John Amerbach was born at Reutlingen,<sup>1</sup> in Suabia, in 1434. He studied at Paris under the famous John von Stein, already mentioned, and had there been made a master of arts. He afterwards for some time was employed as corrector in the printing-office of Anton Koburger at Nuremberg, where twenty-four presses were constantly kept at work. With the experience thus gained he went to Basle, and circa 1476 established a printing business of his own. In 1483 he, by purchase, became a citizen of Basle. His first book was to show his interest in learning, and in the men devoted to it. There was then great need of a good Latin dictionary. Amerbach sought out the learned John Reuchlin, who afterwards was known as the <sup>1</sup> Reutlingen, though it gave one of the first and the most distinguished printers to the world, did not afterwards prove itself worthy of that honour, for the presses of that town sent forth innumerable pirated editions.

JOHN AMERBACH AND HIS FAMILY.

(1434-1602.)

JOHN AMERBACH = BARBARA ORTENBERG

b. 1434,
d. 1514.

Bonifaciolus

b. 1562, d. 4 months after birth, and with him the name of Amerbach became extinct; the Iselins consider themselves as the heirs of Amerbach's fame and merits. The Iselins are one of the oldest families of Basle, having been settled there upwards of 530 years.

greatest Greek, Latin, and Hebrew scholar in Germany, appointed him his corrector, and entrusted him with the preparation of the dictionary, which appeared in 1478, entitled, "Vocabularius latinus, breviloquus dictus."

Other works proceeded from Amerbach's printing works, especially in 1481, a Latin Bible; he then issued the works of St. Augustine. The cost and labour involved in this enterprise were great; the learned Augustine Dodo, canon of St. Leonard's, who assisted Amerbach in the work, had patiently to pick out the text from many a worm-eaten MS.; but the great-hearted printer minded no trouble and no expense to produce a complete restoration of St. Augustine's writings. "There are so many monks in the world," Erasmus wrote to the Archbishop of Toledo, "who at great expense are fed to go idle; there are a great many abbots with splendid revenues, who do nothing but build fine mansions, keep horses, and feast—they ought to have done what the layman did, sua sponte with his own means."

Whilst the printing of St. Augustine's work was still in hand, an edition of the writings of St. Ambrosius was preparing. This frequently led Amerbach with MSS. and proof-sheets to the Carthusian convent of St. Margaret in Little Basle (now the Basle Orphan Asylum), not far from his own dwelling, which was in the Rheingasse, though, when his business increased, he purchased the house, Zum Sessel (the Chair), in the Todtengässlein, which was henceforth called Froben's House, and is still in existence, to consult his old teacher, John Stein, or de Lapide (see ante pp. 1, 27), who greatly assisted him in amending and settling doubtful texts. Amerbach on many occasions proved his gratitude towards the monastery.<sup>1</sup> From its Cartularies it appears that Amerbach began as early as 1481 to give a copy of every work he printed to its library. On the birth or death of any of his children, and on other occasions, he made presents to the monastery of money, sugar, pepper, ginger, cloves, parchment, paper, etc.

In 1484 Amerbach married Barbara Ortenberg, by whom he had three sons and two daughters. Of the three sons Bruno died early; Basilius, the second, died in 1535; Bonifacius, the most distinguished, was professor of law at Basle, and syndic of that city. He was the intimate friend of Erasmus, who, on dying, left him his sole heir, but Bonifacius not only applied the whole legacy to founding charitable institutions, bearing the name of Erasmus, but added a considerable sum of his own thereto, so that his friend's memory should be kept in honourable remembrance. Bonifacius died in 1562. He left a son, Basilius, who died in 1591; the only child of this latter died in infancy, and thus the Amerbach family became extinct. Faustina, a daughter of Bonifacius, married first Ulrich Iselin, syndic and professor of law, who died in 1564; in 1566 she married John Oporinus, as we shall see further on.

John Amerbach himself, the head of the family, died on the 25th of December, 1514. He was buried in the cloisters of the Carthusian monastery. He was the first printer of Basle to make use of the Roman type instead of the Gothic or Italian. Of his works, which are anonymous, but attributed to him, the following is a list :

I. Without date :

1. Vincentius Bellovacensis liber gratiæ in IV partes distributus. Fol.
2. Ejusdem Speculi naturalis libri XXXIII in fol. max. Without catchwords, signatures, or pagination. Printed about 1483.
3. Tractatus de arte oratoria. 4°. Of this work Hupfauer (Printed books of the fifteenth century in the library of the canonry Beuerberg, Augsburg, 1794), gives the following description :—This title is printed in two lines, gothic type. The back is blank. The second leaf, signed a ij, begins thus : Compositio elegantissima de omni dicendi genere. Et primo quidem in genere deliberativo. From here the type is Roman; the initial letters are small. The whole consists of only eight leaves, which have the only signature a. There are neither catchwords, nor pagination, nor headlines. On the first page of the last leaf, after the 18th line we read :

Orator quicumque volus divertus haberi
Dogmata nostra legas : utere et ingenio.

The type is the same as that with which Amerbach, in 1486, printed the epistolare Marii Philelfi.

4. Reuchlini libri III de verbo mirifico. A letter from Conradus Leontorius to Jacob Wimpfeling is printed at the head of this work, in which the latter is requested to assign a place to John Reuchlin in the Trithemius catalogus script. eccles., which was to be printed at Basle by Amerbach, in 1494. (See II, 8, infra.) This letter is written at Speier, on the 21st of April, 1494, wherefore the book must have been printed in 1494 or 1495. And the type is exactly the same roman as that in the above-mentioned Catalogus Trithemii, whence it is wrong to assume that, because the letter was written at Speier, the work of Reuchlin was printed by Peter Drach, of Speier, who employed a totally different type.

5. Cursus optimarum questionum super Philosophiam Aristotelis, etc. Per Magistrum Thomam Bricot sacre Theologiæ professorem emendate. Fol. With signatures, but without catchwords or pagination.

VIEW OF BASLE IN THE XVI. CENTURY. [Facing p. 30.]

1. Cathedral.
2. St. Martin's Church.
3. St. Peter's Church.
4. Carthusian Monastery.
5. Saw Mill, still existing.

6. Epistolare Francisci Philelphi. Thus the superscription on the first column. 4°. The same type with which Amerbach in 1489 printed the Epistolare of Marius Philelphus.

7. S. Effrem Edisseni Libelli de Compunctione cordis, de judicio Dei et Resurrectione, de Beatitudine anime, de Poenitentia, de Luctamine spirituali, de die judicii. Gothic type, with signatures. 18 leaves. Fol. According to the catalogue of the Huber Library, printed by Amerbach, as also the following:

8. Rhetorica divina de oracione, domini Guilermi Parisien. The same gothic type; 58 leaves. Fol.

II. With the date:

The first to be mentioned is the anonymous dictionary Vocabularius latinus brevilocus dictus, which has been frequently reprinted. It is now generally assumed that Reuchlin was its author; a passage in the Preface to the London edition of 1735 of Robert Stephens' Thesaurus Linguae Latinae would seem to prove it. True, Melchior Adam in his Vita Joh. Reuchlini says, that Reuchlin was asked, in 1480, by the brothers Amerbach (?), to compile this dictionary; but this is refuted by the fact mentioned by Panzer, that an edition thereof existed already in 1478. Now assuming that Adam is correct as to the fact, and mistaken in the date only, and that this first edition was printed by Amerbach, we have:

1478. 1. Vocabularius latinus brevilocus dictus. First the Preface of the nameless author, followed by Guarini Veronens. opusc. de arte diphthongandi et punctandi, and Tractatus de accentu by the same. The Vocabularius begins on the 7th leaf. At the end: Finit vocab. etc. Impressus basilee. Anno dni MCCCCLXXVIII. Gothic type. With signatures. Fol.
1480. 2. The same work. At the end: Impressus Basilee anno dni MCCCCLXXX. Laus deo. The gothic type of Amerbach. Signatures. 330 leaves. Fol.
1481. 3. The same work. Same type. At the end: Basel, 1481.
1482. 4. The same work. Same type. At the end: Basel, 1482.
1485. 5. Cassianus de institutis cenobiorum, origine causis et remediis vitiorum. Collocationibus patrum. At the end: Expliciunt viginti quatuor collationes Sanctorum patrum conscripte ab johanne eremita qui et Cassianus dicitur. Impresse Basilee anno domini MCCCCLXXXV. Gothic type. Sign. 208 leaves. Fol.
1492. 6. Liber meditationum beati Bernardi. At the end: Explicit liber, etc. Anno MCCCXCII. Sm. 8vo. As the type is exactly the same as

- that of Amerbach's Consolator. Theol. by Joan. de Tambaco, Amerbach is held to have printed this Liber medit.
7. Tractatulus devotus de reformatione virium animæ Domini Gerhardi de Zutphania. Anno dom. MCCCCXCII. Gothic type. Sign. 8vo.
1494. 8. Liber (Joannis Trithemii) de scriptoribus ecclesiasticis. Fol. 6 unnumbered, and 140 numbered leaves. Without catchwords. Handsome roman type. The text is preceded by a letter from John de Lapide to John Amerbach, whence the latter's typographical authorship clearly appears. On the 2nd page of the 6th leaf of the sign. u we read: Explicitus est liber de script. eccles. disertissimi patris Joannis de Trittenheim abbatis Spanhemensis Basilee anno dom. milles. quadring. nonag. quarto. An appendix consists of a letter from the author to the minorite Albert Morderer, and 9 distichs by Sebastian Brant in praise of the author.
1500. 9. Gregorii pape IX Decretalium libri. Basilee 1500 4°. Per Joh. de Amerbach et Joh. Froben (Panzer).
1505. 10. Divi Augustini Libri de civitate Dei XXII. In eosdem Commentaria Thome Valois et Nicol. Triveth: cum additionibus Jacobi Passavantii. Et theologice veritates Francisci Maronis. At the end: Basileæ ex ædibus impressoriis. Anno M.D.V. die XV mensis Januarii quo die finiebatur hoc excellentiss. opus. Laus omnip. Deo. Fol.

We have now to consider an edition of the Vulgate, without name of printer or place, which, from 1479 to 1489, went through nine editions. Panzer maintains that neither printer nor place can be assigned to it. But the MS. in the library of the Frey-Grynæus Institute at Basle, written by Prof. John Christopher Beck (d. 1785), and treating, among other matters, of the printers of Basle, considers it beyond all doubt that this Bible was printed by John Amerbach, because in copies of two editions (those of 1479 and 1481), now in the public library at Basle, the Carthusian monks have inserted the memorandum that the books had been given to them by Amerbach the printer. This, it is true, is not proof positive, but means great probability. Experts have compared the type of this Bible with other works of Amerbach, and have found that the type of the Bible of 1481 is perfectly identical with the Opusc. theol. of Vincentius Bellovacensis, published with Amerbach's name in 1481. We may therefore safely assume that Beck was right.

To describe these Bibles more in detail:

We take that of 1479 to be the first edition. It is in fol., the type gothic; the pages are in two columns, each column has 47 lines; signatures a—y, A—Y, and at the last Arabic numbers, but neither catchwords nor pagination. Every book is preceded by the Prologue of Hieronymus. Genesis commences on the 2nd col. of the 4th leaf. The New Testament commences on the 3rd col. of the leaf sign. X3. Parallel passages from the New, as well as the Old Testament, are inserted in the margin. At the end of Revelation, on the 530th leaf, is the following metrical list of the biblical books:

Biblia quem retinet sequitur nunc metricus ordo :
Gignit. et exit. leviticus. numerique. deut. Jos.
Judex. ruth. reges. paralip. esdre. neemias.
Esdras. tobque. iudith. hester. iob. Psalque prove.
Eccles. cantica. Sap. Eccless. Ysai. Hieremias.
Threna. baruch. ezech. daniel. oseæ. Johelque.
Amos. Abdias. Jonas. Mich. naque. abacuchque.
Soph. agge. cachari. malachi. machabeaque bini.
Matth. mar. Lucque Johann. roman. corinth. galat. ephes.
Philipp. et colo. thessque timoth. titusque philemon.
Hebræos. actus. Jacoque. Petrus. Johannes
Judæque canonica finem tenet apocalypsis.

Then after a space :

Fontibus ex græcis hebræorum quoque libris
Emendata satis et decorata simul
Biblia sum præsens superos ego testor et astra
Est impressa nec in orbe mihi similis.
Singula quæque loca cum concordantiis exstant
Orthographia simul quam bene pressa manet.
M.CCCC.LXXIX.

This is followed by an Index to the Gospel lessons, at the end of which we read :

Marcus romanis sed Johannes asianis
Lucas achaiis matthæus scripsit hebræis.
Matthæus scripsit evangelium anno dni 39.
Marcus 43. Lucas 53. Joh. 83.
Finis. Deo gratias.

The edition of 1481 fully agrees with the above, except that there is further appended to it an explanation of Hebrew names on 33 leaves. The other differences are confined to occasional emendations, corrected errors of the press, abbreviations written out in full, additional parallel passages, and, which is the best, sharper type; that of the former edition, though exactly the same, seems already worn out.

The following editions contain no essential alterations; what characterises them are the metrical compositions above quoted at the end of Revelation. There is an edition of 1482, another of 1483, one of 1485, two of 1486, one of 1487, and another of 1489. All these nine Bibles evidently came from the same press; if, therefore, the above-mentioned inscription of the Carthusians is of any value as a witness, it has such value not only for the two editions in which it is found, but also for all the later ones.

Panzer, in referring to the edition of 1479, says that it is printed with the same gothic type as the work printed at Basle in 1481, entitled: Joannis Nider præceptorium seu expositio decem præceptorum. Impressum Basilee MCCCCLXXXI. If we have argued rightly above, it would follow, from this observation of Panzer, that this præceptorium also was printed by J. Amerbach.

II. Books with Amerbach's name :

a. Without date.

1. Libri artis logice Porphyrii et Aristotelis cum explanacione magistri Joannis de Lapide. Fol. Gothic type; according to Panzer, roman; larger in the text, smaller in the commentaries. At the end of the 2nd col. of the 8th leaf of sheet U we read: Porphèriana Aristotelàcaque logica cum explanacione magistri Joannis de lapide: per magistrum Joannem de Amerbach Lapidani quondam discipulum accuratissima Impressione apud Basileam; foeliciter finit.

2. Tractatus ejusdem—de propositionibus expensibilibus cum tractatu de arte solvendi importunas sophistarum argumentationes. 18 leaves, signed a, b. Preceded by a recommendatory elegy by Sebastian Brant.

3. Aeneæ Silvii Senensis Præcepta artis rhetorice. The prologue begins on the 2nd leaf. At the end :

*Silvius Aeneas hetruscæ gloria gentis
Artem rhetorices condidit hancce pius.
Quam modo de Amerbach duce te pressisse Johanne Vrbs Basilea quidem gaudeat usque velim.*

Roman type; signatures; 46 leaves in 4°.

4. Elegantiaæ minores Augustini Dati. At the end: Augustini Dati Senensis oratoris primarii Isogogicus libellus. Explicitus est. Impressusque

Basilee per magistrum Johannem de Amerbach. Rom. type. Sign. 24 leaves in 4°.

b. With the date :

1481. 1. Vincentii Bellovacensis opuscula. First a preface, then an index. At the end the following verses :

*Perlege divina vatumque volumina lector :
 Et simul hoc nostrum concelebrabis opus.
 Ingenium moresque viri pressoris et artem
 Regia commendat urbs Basilea satis.
 De Amerbach natus nomen sibi forte Johannes Finem operi imposuit, dum pia virgo parit.*

Bene Vale Lector.

Goth. type. No catchwords nor pagination. Fol.

1486. 2. Compendium octo partium orationis. Basilee per Johannem de Amerbach. 1486. 4°.
3. Marii Philelphi epistolare. At the end : Finit epistolare Marii philelphi elegantissimum Basilee per magistrum Joannem de Amerbach summa lucubratione impressum. Anno octoges. sexto supra milles. quaterque centesimum. Index. Rom. type. Signat. 4°.
1487. 4. Nicolai de Tudeschis Abbatis Siculi, libri secundi pars prima et secunda Decretalium. At the end : Explicita est lectura domini Nicolai siculi super — — — Impressa Basilee per Magistrum Joannem de Amerbach. Anno MCCCCLXXXVII. The other parts are of 1488. Goth. type. Signat. Fol.
1488. 5. Nicolai de Tudeschis Siculi Abbatis lectura super V libros decretalium. At the end of every part : Impressa Basilee per magistrum Joannem de Amerbach. Anno Domini MCCCCLXXXVIII.
1489. 6. Augustinus de Civitate Dei cum commento. On the 2nd leaf : Aurelii August. hipponensis episcop. in libros de civitate Dei. Argumentum operis totius ex libro retractationum.

*Hoc opus exactum divina arte Joannis

 Quo merito gaudet urbs Basilea decus.*

Anno salutiferi virginalis partus octogesimo nono supra milles. quaterque centes. Idibus Februariis. Gothic type. Signat. Fol.

The woodcut on the opposite page shows one of the illustrations of this book. The drawing, though very defective as to proportion and perspective, is an improvement on earlier woodcuts by the introduction and proper distribution of light and dark lines.

7. Augustinus de Trinitate. At end of last book : Aurelii Augustini de trinitate liber explicitus est. Anno domini MCCCCLXXXIX. Then the Index and 10 distichs, the last being :

*Numine sancte tuo pater o tueare Joannem
De Amerbach : presens qui tibi pressit opus.*

Goth. type. Signat. Fol.

8. S. Augustini Psalmorum explanatio. First on 14 leaves : Adnotatio principalium sententiarum. On the 15th leaf : Aurelii Augustini prima Quinquagena. At the end of the third Quinquagena : Post exactam diligentemque emendacionem. Auctore deo. perfectum est insigne atque præclarum hoc opus explanacionis psalmorum. Divi ac magni doctoris Augustini. Opus revera majori commendacione se dignum exhibens legentibus, quam quibusvis verbis explicari possit. ut ex præfacione et prologo ipsius evidenter colligi potest. Consummatum Basilee per magistrum Joannem de Amerbach Anno Domini MCCCCLXXXIX. Goth. type. Signatures. Fol.
9. Marii Philelphi epistolare, præmissis Præceptis Rhetorice seu scribendarum epistolarum generibus. At the end : Finit epistolare Marii Philelphi elegantissimum. Basilee per magistrum Joannem de Amerbach summa lucubratione impressum. Anno octoges. nono supra milles. quaterque centesimum. Rom. type. 4°.
1490. 10. S. Augustini de civitate Dei libri XXII. cum comment. Thom. de Valois et Nic. Triveth. Goth. type. Signatures. Fol.
11. S. Augustini de trinitate Libri XV. The same as last year's edit. with date altered.
1491. 12. Cassiodori clarissimi senatoris in Psalterium expositio. Thus title on 1st page of 1st leaf, on 2nd page letter from Johannes de Lapide to Joh. Amerbach. On 2nd leaf : Incipit notabilium dictorum et expositorum annotatio, 21 leaves. At end: Disertissimi atque dignissimi sancte ecclesie doctoris Cassiodori, romane urbis quondam Clarissimi senatoris. famatissima psalmodum expositio. post aliorum sanctorum patrum scripta exactissime digesta, dulcissimoque fonte purissime latinitatis irrigata, cum pervigilanti emendationis studio. arte impressoria perfecta est. per Magistrum Johannem de Amerbach preclare Basilien. urbis civem Anno domini MCCCCXCI. Goth. type, without catchwords or pagination. Fol.

AMERBACH, 1489. NO. 6, AUGUSTINUS DE CIVITATE DEI.

1492. 13. Joannis de Tambaco consolatorium theologicum. First on 8 leaves: adnotatio nobilium dictorum. — At end: explicit consolat. theol. præclarissimi viri: magistri Joannis de Tambaco. Basilee per Magistrum Johannem de Amerbach Anno Domini etc. XCII. Goth. type. Signatures and pagination. 8°.

14. Die Werke des heiligen Ambrosius in 3 parts. First leaf, 1st page, a woodcut representing Ambrosius (see p. 41), with the legend: Sanctus Ambrosius Mediolanen. ep. ecclesie. doctor celeberrimus. This, as well as "Auctor operum sequentium" in Goth. type. On 2nd leaf a letter from de Lapide to Amerbach. Then a table of contents of vol. i., followed by the 3 books de officiis. Rom. type; the rest of the 1st vol. in 2 cols., with gothic sign. The 1st vol. consists of 36 sheets, the 2nd vol.: Title-page and Index as in 1st vol., but goth. type throughout, 43 sheets. In the 3rd vol., consisting of 40 sheets, the Letters of Ambrosius form the commencement, in 14 sheets, with rom. type. At the end: Præclarissimum opus epistolarum disertissimi viri. sancti Ambrosii episcopi. elegantissimo stilo conscriptarum. ad laudem Dei in urbe Basiliensium per Magistrum Johannem de Amerbach impressum. Anno salutiferi virginalis partus nonages. secundo supra milles. quaterque centes. feliciter finitum est. The book is concluded by the sermones, which are followed by a similar colophon.

This, as Braun observes, is the first complete edition of the works of Ambrosius, which, however, contains much that is not genuine, whilst much that is genuine is omitted.

1493. 15. Liber epistolarum beati Augustini episcopi hipponensis ecclesie. At the end: Divi Aurelii Augustini Hipponensis episcopi. liber epistolarum. vigilantia accuratissimoque studio emendatarum et impressarum. Argumentorum quoque novorum prænotatione succincte et dilucide expositarum. atque opera magistri Joannis de Amerbach civis Basilien. perfectarum. Anno domini etc. XCIII feliciter explicit.

Part IV.: Isaiah, Jeremiah, Lamentations, and Baruch. Part V.: The rest of the Prophets and the two books of the Maccabees. Part VI.: The Four Gospels. Part VII.: The rest of the books of the New Testament.

To the first part is prefixed a letter of Amerbach to Anton Koburger, dated Basle, 29 Oct. MCCCXCVIII, whence it appears that Koburger provided the money for this edition of the Bible; then a letter from Amerbach to the reader, and the prologue of Hugo de S<sup>to</sup> Charo to his commentary on Genesis. At the end of the last part again are two letters of Amerbach's, the second to the reader, the first to Anton Koburger, dated 7 Nov., 1502. Thus this Bible was printed from 1498 to 1502.

1500. 28. Decretum Gratiani. 3 distichs. In 2nd col. epistola dedic. Seb. Brant ad Joannem Lutzenburgensem Vesontionis metropolis archiepiscopum. On the 2nd leaf, col. 2, the portrait of Seb. Brant in wood, with an epigram. At the end: Seb. Brant ad lectores: Habes 1506. 32. S. Augustini opera. Basileæ per Joannem Amerbachium, Joannem Petri et Joannem Frobenium MDVI. Fol.

This is the famous edition for which, regarding neither expense nor trouble, Amerbach procured MSS. from all parts, and from which Augustinus Dodo restored, as much as possible, the true text. The division is as follows:

1st part, the works which Augustine wrote as catechumen; 2nd, when baptised; 3rd, as presbyter; 4th to 8th, as bishop; 9th to 11th, those which in the Retractations are not reviewed.

Amerbachius, Jo. Peter et Joannes Frobenius Hamelburgensis cives Basilienses*, communi impensa Basileæ excuderunt. Mense Maio 1512. Julio II. Pont. max. Maximil. Aug. regn. Largest folio.

The Schweighauser MS. informs us that the sons of Amerbach after their father's death continued the printing business for some time ; but after the last-named work none is known to be extant on which their names appear as printers. That reference must probably be confined to the collected works of Hieronymus, the editing of which occupied old Amerbach's last days, and which remained as a legacy of work to be completed by his sons. To them this edition de luxe, finished in 1518, owed its learned character ; its typographical excellency is due to John Frobenius, under whose name it will hereafter be described.

We subjoin Amerbach's epitaph :

Amerbach, in the books printed by himself, made use of no device ; but in books printed in partnership with Petri and Froben we find the device shown on p. 26 ante, representing the arms of Basle, with their supporter, the basilisk.

CHAPTER VI.

Besicken.

HIS printer became a citizen of Basle in 1478. But only one work of his printed by him at Basle, is known: Tractatus de horis canonicis dicendis compendiosus per venerabilem viroem Joannem Maesch in ecclesia maiori Basileensi prædicatorem. At the end: Impressus est Basilee per providum virum artis impressoris expertum et probatum Johannem de besickein. Anno domini milles. quadring. octoges tercio circa medium quadragesima. Gothic type. 4<sup>o</sup>.

From the year 1493, he printed at Rome in partnership with Sigismund Mayr, as also with Martin of Amsterdam. Some of the books he printed at Rome are :

1493. 1. Hieroclis philosophi Stoici in aureos versus Pithagoræ opusculum religioni christianæ consentaneum.
1494. 2. Mirabilia Rome urbis. At the end (in German): Getrucket zu Rom durch Joh. Besicken und Sigismundum Mayr, in dem iar als man zalt MCCCC und xCiiij zu der zyt des pabst Alexanders des Vj. In sinem zweyden iar. 8vo.

Panzer speaks of this early edition as of a great rarity.

1500. 3. The same work in a later edition. Mirabilia Rome urbis. At the end: Getrucket zu Rom durch Joh. Besicken und Martinum Amsterdam: in dem iar als man zalt MCCCCC. Zu der zyt Alexanders des Vj. In sinem achten iar. Small 8vo. Neither paging, nor catchwords, nor signatures. The whole consists of 60 leaves. The two editions do not agree in all details.

With one copy of this edition is bound up: Die gebett der erlewchten heiligen sant Brigitta, die sie vor dem pilde des crucifixes unseres Herren Jesu christi teglich andechtiglich gesprochen hat. The frontispiece shows Brigitta kneeling before the crucifix. 8 leaves. Panzer assumes it to have come from the same press.

Peter Koellicker and John Meister.

They printed in partnership :

1484. Breviarum Cisteriense. Impressum Basileæ per Petrum Kollicker et Joan. Meister anno 1484.

Concerning John Meister nothing further is known, but K ollicker further printed on his sole account :

1485. Missale iussu Ottonis Constantiensis episcopi editum. At the end :
Accipe hos : diva cleri caterva : Libros non minus raros quam commodissimos, are Latrieque uniformis ; Constantiensis Matricis : veros indices. Quid enim Presul inclite, Otto pater reverende, in hac tua pastoralis ditione. melius efficere potuisses ? — — Ne vero tua gloriosa et reverenda paternitas. pr esul magnifice. silentio pr etereat. Magistrum Petrum Kollicker. cuius nomini et fame. hoc pariter presbyter quisque contribuat. Qui sua arte candidissima Litera. Omnibus ocellis innocua. et iunioribus nedum. verum senioribus Sacerdotibus characterem efficit paratiorem. Itaque pr efatus Magister Petrus Kollicker. hoc geniculatus ad tue Paternitatis pedes. redonat commissa fide exactum quarto Kalendas Junii Ex Basilea Anno Xpi MCCCC.LXXXV. — Fol.

Concerning the circumstances of this printer, the Schweighauser MS. has the following : Petrus K ollicker, master of the seven free arts, printer and citizen of Basle, was sued in 1490 for the sum of 100 florins, which had been advanced to him and his partner by the two sisters Elizabeth and Verena K ochin of Feldkirch, and which sum J org Pur, goldsmith and citizen of Feldkirch, the cousin and attorney of the said sisters, now insisted on being repaid by Elsi St or, the widow and heir of the above-named Peter K ollicker.

CHAPTER VII.

Nicolaus Kessler

F Battwar, became a citizen of Basle in 1480, in which city he acquired great honour and reputation. He is even supposed to have attained to the dignity of burgomaster, though this is doubtful.

He made considerable gifts to the Carthusian monastery, in whose Cartularies, among others, is the following entry: "Oretur pro Nicolao Kesler cive et impressore Basil. qui donavit Textum sententiarum impressum valentem 1 floren. etc."

He printed at Basle till 1509, having taken over Richel's printing office, and whose daughter he had married. It was supposed that he had also printed at Antwerp, but Panzer has shown this to be an error.

His typographical productions are the following :

I. Anonymous, but attributed to him :

a. Without date :

1. Concordantie Biblie et Canonum. The beginning, leaf 1, col. 1st, runs: Concordantie autoritatum sacre scripture iuxta ordinem librorum biblie : in quibus loci iuris canonici reperiantur per egregium virum dnm. Johannem decretorum doctorem digniss. Nivicellen. abbatem studiose collecte feliciter incipiunt. Goth. type. Signat. 2 col. 49 leaves. Folio.

2. Sermones Meffreth alias ortulus regine de tempore pars Hiemalis Estivalis et de Sanctis. "Char. goth. forte Nic. Kessleri, cum signatur. 2 col. fol." Panzer.

3. Clarissimi viri juriumque doctoris Felicis Hemmerlin cantoris quondam Turicen. varie oblectationis opuscula et tractatus. Thus on leaf 1, page 1. Then follows a woodcut, representing the author, surrounded by hornets, and underneath the verses :

Felicis si te iuvat indulsisse libellis
Malleoli : præsens dilige lector opus.
Illius ingenium variis scabronibus actum
Perspicias : et stimulos sustinuisse graves.
Casibus adversis (aurum vel igne) probatus.
Hostibus usque suis malleus acer erat.
Hinc sibi conveniens sortitus nomen : ut esset
Hemmerlin dictus : nomine : reque. statu.
At felix tandem : vicioque illesus ab omni

On the 2nd leaf is the commencement of a metrical dedication to the elector Hermann of Cologne, dated Basle, the 13 Aug., 1497. The work ends on the 181st leaf. Kessler's goth. type. Sign. Fol.

4. The Schweighauser MS. quotes from the catal. Bibl. Fr. Pacii : Alberti Magni Tractatus de secretis mulierum. (Sine loci et anni nota, typi vero similes sunt typis Nicolai Kesler). 4°.

14. Repertorium Milis alias Absenti. This title stands on the 1st page of the 1st leaf. This work is an alphabetical dictionary juris utriusque by John Miles Veronensis, J. U. D. ; it is called Absenti because it begins with this word. On the back of the 1st leaf are the following verses :

*Exuperat cunctas hec iuris practica milis.
 Ne modo materias invenit illa tibi.
 Sed leutrii firme et aliorum dicta resolvit.
 Hanc eme qui reliquis doctior esse cupis.
 Si mihi non credis : doctorum consule quemque.
 Consule : vel potius qui sapis ipse vide.*

On the 2nd leaf we read : Repertorium clarissimi viri domini Johannis Milis in utroque jure doctoris excellentissimi incipit. At the end :

*Noscere forte voles quis sculpserit hoc opus ere.
 Presserit has chartas quisve characteribus.
 Ne mirere : licet tersum mendisque solutum.
 Immune et viciis hoc opus invenias.
 Ille quidem Kesler Nicolaus : littore rheni.
 Urbs dedit insignem cui Basilea domum.
 Ille inquam impensis qui nunquam (crede) pepercit.
 Lector amice : dabit his liber ille fidem.
 Hic etenim etc.*

Kessler certainly knew how to sing his own praises !

CHAPTER VIII.

Jacob von Pfortzen.

ACOB VON PFORTZEN, sometimes called Jacobus Wolff de Pfortzheim, Phorczen, or Pforczen, was a native of Kempten (Suabia), but as a citizen of Basle printed in that city from 1488 to 1518, mostly alone, frequently assisted with the money of others. Wolfgang Lachner had many works printed by Pfortzen.

In the Cartularies of the Carthusians at Basle one D. Jacobus, printer and citizen of Basle, is often mentioned as a benefactor to the monastery by the gift of books, money, cloth, sugar, etc. His surname is not given, but it is mentioned that for some years he was the partner of John Amerbach. According to the dates of various presents, 1489 and 1492, this Jacobus might be Pfortzen. But as it is not known that he ever was in partnership with Amerbach, and the books which the Cartularies mention do not agree with those which proceeded from Pfortzen's presses, the identity of the two Jacobs cannot be established.

Without date, place, and printer's name, but showing his device is :

Pamphilus Gengenbach.

He is first mentioned as a journeyman printer at Basle in 1505 and 1507. He married in 1509. Having in the same year to answer a complaint of Nicholas Lamparter for a breach of the peace against the latter, he is styled a "printer and citizen of Basle." He frequently came in conflict with the police, and was imprisoned on various occasions for riotous conduct. He printed between 1513 and 1523. His office was at the "Little Red Lion," still so called, and No. 31, Freiétrasse. Though a man evidently of a violent character, he rendered good service in the promotion of reformatory principles at Basle, and he produced some fine works, as the title-page of one of them reproduced on the opposite page will show. His device, two shields, one with two flowers, and the other with the arms of Basle, is in the left and right hand corners at the bottom. The cut was designed by Ambrosius Holbein.

Apiarius, Father and Son.

Matthias Apiarius, a native of Nuremberg, was in Basle in 1525, pursuing the bookbinding business. In 1533 he had a printing-office at Strasbourg, and 1537 established himself at Berne, introducing printing into that town. His device was a bear, getting honey out of a hollow tree. The name Apiarius is his real name, Biener (bee-keeper) latinised.

His son Samuel continued the father's business at Berne, but was banished thence for ten years for publishing two songs, at which the Government of Lucerne took offence. From Berne he went to Soleure, and there established the first printing-press. In 1566 he permanently settled at Basle, where he printed for Oporinus, and also official notices for the authorities ; but his favourite publications were ballads and almanacks, which led to a curious complication. The people of Appenzell complained that those of St. Gall had disfigured their arms, representing "a he-bear, rampant, with red claws in a white field" by substituting a she-bear, and as supporter a bear with a red collar. A printer of St. Gall had so represented the arms, and alleged that he had received the forms from Basle. On inquiry it turned out that in the almanacks of Apiarius the arms of Appenzell were printed in the style objected to, and the magistrates of Basle ordered their citizen henceforth to print the bear without a collar!

Apiarius does not seem to have prospered at Basle, for in 1575 it was only by the assistance of some good-natured friends that he was able to satisfy the demands of a threatening creditor at Berne.

Siegfried, Samuel's brother, likewise pursued printing at Basle (circa 1564); and we find one David Apiarius, probably related to the family, printing at Basle in 1582.

Samuel slightly varied his father's device; thus in 1570 we find it in this form:

CHAPTER IX.

Leonhard Ysenhut.

CITIZEN of Basle, probably the son of one Henry Isenhut of Freiburg in Switzerland, who in 1482 acquired civic rights at Basle.

In the often-mentioned Cartularies of the Carthusian monastery we read concerning him : Oretur pro Leonardo Ysenhut de Basilea. Impressore qui dedit XXVIII. tractulos — — valent 3 floren. 1489.

But three works from his press have as yet become known. Of the one dated 1489, which is described by Seemiller, Panzer at first had but a vague idea ; he gave particulars of it only in the Supplement to the annals of older German literature.

1489. 1. Die Walfart oder bilgerschaft der aller seligisten Junggfowen. Marie inhaltend alle staat irs lebens. Thus on the first page of the first leaf. On the second page the Virgin is represented enclosing within her garment men of all conditions. Above her the image of the Saviour and of several saints. On the 2nd leaf commences : die vored in die walfart oder bilgrung der seligen jungfrowen und muetter gottes Marie uss latin zue tütsch gemacht. The initials are large and ornamental woodcuts, and scenes from the life of Jesus and Mary are inserted in the text. The woodcut on opposite page shows an attempt towards a correct perspective. The first page of every leaf has a superscription, e.g., the second part, the fourth part, etc. The leaves have the signatures from a-q. At the end of the first page of the fourth leaf of the double sheet signed q, we read : Gedruckt und vollendet die walfart oder bylgerung unser lieben frowen. durch Lenhart ysenhuet burger zu Basel. M.ccccl.xxxix. jar. The type is gothic ; the size sm. 8vo.

The second book without date, which is in the library at Göttingen, is mentioned in the Götting. gelehrte Anzeigen, 1773. The author of the Schweighauser MS. obtained through a friend, in 1791, the following description of the book :

Hie hept sich an das Buch und leben des Fabeldichters Esopi aus Kriechisch Zungen in latin Auch etlich ander fabel als Aviani, Doligami, Adelfonsi und etlicher schimpfreden Pogii, etc., von Doctore Heinricho steinhöwel schlecht und verstentlichen geteutschet nit wort auss wort, sunder syn auss syn umb merer leutrung wegen des textes oft mit wenig zugelegten oder abgebrochen Worten getzogen, ze lob und ere dem durchluchtigesten fürsten und hren hrn Sigmunden hertzogen zu österreich, etlich exgetzlichkeit darauss ze empfahen.

The book begins with an Introduction, occupying three pages ; this is followed by the life of Æsop ; on every page is a woodcut, occupying a third thereof ; this fills 29 leaves. On the 41st leaf the fables of Æsop commence, and end with the words :

Hie endet sich das vierd buch des hochberüimten fabeldichters und meisters esopi, und heben sich an die mit lauffenden alten fabeln die man zuschribet esopo.

These comprise 18 leaves and end thus :

Hie endent sich die mit lauffenden alten fabeln die man zuschribet esopo. Und vahend an die neuw geteutschten fabeln von Rimicio die auch zugeschryben werden Esopo.

These fill 8 leaves:—Und vahent an die fabeln Aviani; these occupy 15 leaves; then follow the gesammelt fabeln, which fill 30 leaves. There are many woodcuts, most of them of a filthy character; those belonging to Avianus agree most with the text, and are obscene. At the end are the words: Geendet selicklich von Lienhart yssenhut zu Basel.

To every author there is an index. The whole consists of 111 leaves in 4°, is printed in neat gothic type, without date. Probably it was printed at Basle between 1485 and 1490, or perhaps a little later.

The third work known to have been printed by Ysenhut is:

Defensorium inviolatæ perpetuæque virginitatis cartissimæ dei genetricis Mariæ. 4°.

The type the same as that of the Walfart. The author of the Defensorium was Franciscus de Retza. This appears to be a reprint of the black-book, printed by John Ysenhut in 1471, and a copy of which is in the British Museum Library, press mark C. 17 c.

CHAPTER X.

Michael Furter.

As a rule errors of the press are not beneficial to printers, but Michael Furter owes to such an error that for some time he was considered the first printer, not only of Basle, but of all printers, and thus conferred on his native city the fame of having been the birth-place of the art of printing. But this fame was based on an error only: in the Reformatorium vitæ morumque, etc. (see under II., b. No. 6), the date is given as MCCCCXLIII, whereas it should have been MCCCCXCIII. Such fame could not endure for long, and a native of Basle itself was the first to point out the error. Jacob Christopher Iselin, Dr. and Professor of Theology (d. 1737), in his Historical-Geographical Dictionary, under "Printing," demonstrated it irrefutably, so that Basle must renounce an honour to which it never had any claim.<sup>1</sup> Let us proceed to Furter's productions.

<sup>1</sup> Similar errors in dates are mentioned by Maittaire. In the library of the Sorbonne, says this author, there is a work in fol. at the end of which we read: Flores de diversis Sermonibus et Epistolis B. Bernardi per me Joann. Koelhof de Lubeck Coloniensem civem impressi an M.CCCC. feliciter finiunt. But Koelhof was not born in 1400, nor had printing been invented. In 1483, however, Koelhof printed at Cologne Gerson in fol.; the type is the same as that of the Flores; evidently lxxxij. should have followed M.CCCC. In the same library there is another work, Præceptorium Divinum de Gotschal Hollen, the colophon of which says: Impressum per me Joan. Guldenschaef. . . . anni Domini Octogesimi quarti; here evidently the words millesimi quadrigentesimi were omitted. In the Mazarine library Maittaire saw a Manipulus Curatorum, printed in Paris anno Domini millesimo CCCC. vicesimo tertio; in this case the fifth C must have dropped out.

I. Anonymous.

1. On account of the similarity of the type with that wherein Furter in 1490 printed Sebastian Brant's Expositiones omnium titulorum legalium, Hupfauer attributes to him the following three items :

a. Cura pastoralis pro ordinandorum tentamine collecta. 8vo. Paging and catchwords desunt. Woodcut on title page of pyx with two angels. Beginning immediately on next page : Cura ast (for est) onorosa atque sollicita custodia etc. On the front page of the 19th and last leaf after the 4th line : Finit feliciter. Underneath : Impressum Basilee.

b. Philalethes. 4°. At back of title-page : Maffei Vegii Laudensis ad Eustathium Prefatio. At back of 2nd leaf woodcut of two figures ; over the one is printed Philalethes, over the other Veritas. This latter is winged. The pages, with few exceptions, have 36 lines. On leaf 10, p. 2, after the 5th line : Finis. Then follows Tabula declarativa quorumdam terminorum, etc., in 2 columns.

c. Guilielmi Parisiensis Rhetorica divina. Fol. This impression is described by Seemiller thus :

On the first page about the middle is the title : Rhetorica Divina de Oracione domini Guilermi Parisien. On the 2nd page 10 distichs in praise of the book. On the 2nd leaf an index, filling 6 leaves, commences. On the 8th leaf : Commentatio præstantissimi et incomparabilis doctoris magistri Guilermi parisien. actoris sequentis libri. qui Rhetorica divina pretitulatur. On the back of this leaf an index of the several chapters. The work itself does not commence till the 9th leaf, in very neat gothic type in 2 columns, on very excellent paper. Catchwords and pagination wanting ; there are signatures. The whole comprises 58 leaves ; the colophon reads :

Explicit Retorica divina de oratione domini Guilermi pariensis.

2. Panzer, and also Denis, quote three anonymous impressions as printed with Furter's types :

a. Expositio beati Gregorii pape super Cantica Canticorum. At the end : Expositio — — feliciter explicit. Impressa Basileæ anno domini Milles. quadring. nonag. sexto. Die vero decimo tertio mensis martii. Laus deo. 2 columns. 4°.

b. Expositio beati Gregorii pape super Ezechielem omelias. At the end : Omeliarum beati Gregorii pape super Ezechielem liber secundus : finit feliciter Anno domini MCCCC.XCVI. 4°.

c. Pastorale beati Gregorii pape. At the end : Liber cure pastoralis insigni laude commendatus : diligenti studio emendatus — vigilantique cura in urbe Basiliensi arte impressoria perfectus : feliciter explicit. Sub anno domini Milles. quadring. nonag. sexto. die vero decimo quinto mensis Februarii. Laus deo. Goth. type. Sign. 4°.

II. Books to which Furter has affixed his name or device.

a. Without date :

1. Cato moralissimus latino germanicus. At the end Furter's device. 4°.

2. Compendium octo partium orationum. Under this title the emblems of the four evangelists ; in their midst the child Jesus, holding in the right hand the cross, and in the left other instruments of torture. Sign. a-n. Neither catchwords nor paging. At the end : Explicita est quinta pars et ultima. Then 11 distichs, in which the names of the printer (Furter) and of the place (Basle) are given. There is also Furter's device. 4°.

3. Hupfauer quotes Guillielmi Archiepiscopi Parisiensis Postilla super Evangelia de tempore et Sanctis. Goth. type. 4°. The text is in larger, and the commentary surrounding it in smaller, letters. Every Sunday gospel is accompanied by a woodcut. The leaves are numbered and have headlines. Sign., but no catchwords.

In the exposition of the second Evangelium de virginibus we read on the passage : "Moram autem faciente sponso dormitaverunt omnes et dormierunt," — Mora ista est occursum temporis ab ascensione christi usque et diem iudicii : quod tempus propter longitudinem vocatur mora jam enim duravit per mille quadringentos et quasi. xcvij annos. Seemiller, who describes several earlier editions of this work, thinks he can from the above passage deduce the year of printing. He points out that the year of the writing of the book cannot be meant, since that is distinctly stated to have been 1437. But we must not add the 33 years between Christ's birth and his ascension to that figure, or else the date would be too late for so old an impression; that figure, he argues, is the date of printing, reckoned from the birth of Christ, i.e., 1497. This book is printed with the same type as the above-mentioned Expositiones of S. Brant. Moreover, there is appended to this edition:

And under the colophon there is a device, which looks exactly like the original form of Furter's device.

There is, moreover, included in this, printed in the same type:

Passio domini nostri Jesu Christi Egregii magneque doctrine sacrorum eloquiorum interpretis perutilis passio sive sermo popularis pro libitu volentium meritorie in diebus parasceres vacare predicationi eleganter exaratus feliciter incipit. Immediately afterwards: Tractatus Beati Bernhardi de planctu beate Marie Virginis.

It is certain, Hupfauer concludes, that these three items (really four) came from the same press. And probably they were printed immediately after one another, and form together one entire work.

4. As one of the greatest rarities Panzer indicates:

Non sant meinrat ein hübsch lieplich lesen, was ellend und armut er erlitten hat usz den latinischen hystorien gezogen. Underneath a woodcut with the legend: Dis ist sant Meynratz brun, der noch hyt by tag zu einsidlen stet. Then: Getruckt zu Basel by Michel Furter. Underneath Furter's device. At the end of the last part: Hie mit hat das Buch ein end, gott unser aller Kummer wend, an anserm letzten end. Laus deo. The work is illustrated by 36 woodcuts, each occupying two-thirds of a page. The whole consists of 28 leaves. 4°. Sign.

b. With the date:

1490. 1. Sebastiani Brant Expositiones sive declarationes admodum necessarie ac perutiles omnium titulorum legalium exacta repetitaque opera ac diligentia interpretatorum. At the end: Impressum Basilee per Michaellem Furter opera et impensis prestantissimi viri doctoris Andree helmuth totius iuris monarche. Anno salutifere incarnationis Milles. quater. centes. nonagesimo Kalendis Octobribus. Goth. type. Sign. 4°.
2. Nicolai Siculi Abb. Panormit. Processus iudiciarius, Basilee per Michaellem Furter. 1490. 4°.

1493. 3. Der Ritter vom Turn von den Exempeln der Gotsforcht und erberkeit. At end: Der Spiegel der Tugend — jn tütsch transferiert und gezogen, zu Basel in dem jor nach Christi Geburt M.CCCC.xCiiij. jor gedruckt durch Micheln Furter endet sich selicklich. Amen. 1.4.9.3. Fol. Panzer says further: Without doubt, this is the first edition of this book. Under the above title, cut in wood, is represented a knight, talking with four persons. The second leaf is headed: Der Spiegel der Tugend und Ersamkeit, durch den hochberumten Ritter vom Turn mit schonen und kostlichen hystorien und Exempel, zu underwisung syner kind, jn französischer sprochen begriffen und durch den Edlen fürnemen unnd Strengen herren Marquart vom Stein Ritter und landvogt zu Montpellicart, jn tutsch transferiert und gezogen, fahet sich an selicklich. At the end the above heading of the Preface is repeated, and is followed by the printer's name. Under it appears: Nüt on. ursach. And under this: I.B.<sup>1</sup> The whole work fills 73 leaves. There are neither pagination nor catchwords.
1494. 4. Cursus librorum Philosophiæ naturalis secundum viam doctoris subtilis Scoti. At end: Expliciunt libri Ethicorum Basilee impressi per Michaellem Furter Anno incarnationis dni M.CCCC.XCIII. With woodcuts. 4<sup>o</sup>.
5. Summule philosophiæ rationalis: seu logica: excellentissimi artium et theologie professoris Mgri Nicolai: Dorbelli: secundum doctrinam subtilis Scoti. At the end a laudatory colophon, which ends: Impressumque Basilee per Michaellem Furter Anno domini MCCCCXCIII. Goth. type. Sign. 4<sup>o</sup>.
6. Reformatorium vite morumque et honestatis clericorum saluberrimum: cum fraterna quadam resipiscendi a viciis exhortatione et ad penitentiae portum applicandi admonitione, cum expressione quorundam signorum ruine et tribulationis ecclesie. At end: Explicit etc. In urbe Basilea per Michaellem Furter impressorem salubriter consummatum. Anno incarnationis dominice MCCCCXLIII—the famous error of the press instead of XCIII—in Kathedra Petri. Symbol. Goth. type. Sign. 8<sup>vo</sup>.

<sup>1</sup> This is curious. "Nüt on Ursach" (Nothing without a cause) was the motto of John Bergmann von Olpe, and in "I.B." we have plainly enough the initials of John Bergmann. In 1494—that is, one year after the appearance of the above work—that printing ecclesiastic published "The Ship of Fools," the first book printed by him. Did he try his hand a year previous in Furter's office, and, though No. 3 has Furter's name on it, did Bergmann by those initials endeavour to commemorate himself?

1495. 7. Quadragesimale novum editum ac predicatum a quodam fratre minore de observantia in inclita civitate Basilien. de filio prodigo et de angeli ipsius ammonitione salubri per sermones divisum. At end : Explicit etc. Impressum Basilee per Michaellem Furter. Civem Basilien. Anno — — MCCCCXCV. Printer's device. Then an alphabetical Index. Goth. type. Sign. 2 columns. 128 leaves. Prints. 8<sup>vo</sup>.
8. Divi Thomae de Aquino ordinis predicatorum commentaria in omnes epistolas beati Pauli Apostoli: Gloriosissimi gentium doctoris: profundiora theologie accurate dilucidantia. At end : Finit etc. caracteribus Michaelis furter Basilee impressa: ductu vero et expensis Wolfgangi Lachner studiosis in medium data feliciter Anno Milles. quadring. nonag. quinto. Goth. type. Sign. 2 columns. Fol.
1496. 9. Liber dialogorum Sancti Gregorii pape. At end : Libri dyalogorum — — feliciter expliciunt. Impressi ac diligentissime correcti Basilee per Michaellem Furter: sub anno domini Milles. quadring. nonag. sexto. Laus deo. Goth. type. Sign. 4<sup>o</sup>.
10. Grammatica antiquorum. Basilee per Michaellem Furter MCCCCXCVI. 12 Kal. Octobris. 4<sup>o</sup>.
11. Vita Sancti Meinradi Episcopi Einsidlens. 1496. 4<sup>o</sup>. That this book was printed at Basle by Furter appears from some verses at the end by S. Brant, who, Denis thinks, may have been its author.
1497. 12. Quadragesimale novum, etc. Reprint of No. 7, with some verses by S. Brant, corresponding colophon, and the date 1497.
13. Textus Sequentiarum cum optimo commento. Under the title a crucifix. 4<sup>o</sup>. Goth. type. Sign. Rom. paging. On the 110th leaf : Textus sequentiarum — explicit. Impressum Basilee sub anno domini Milles. quadring. nonag. sept. Underneath Furter's device. Appended thereto the following :
14. Hymnorum expositio cum notabili commento quod semper historias implicat. At the end : Explicit hymnarius — Impressum per Michaellem Furter : Anno incarnationis dnice M.CCCC.XCVII. Goth. type. Sign. Rom. pagin. 4<sup>o</sup>.
15. Breviarium Eystetense. Under the title the episcopal insignia. On the 2nd page it is stated that this breviarium was printed by order of Bishop Gabriel : Basilee per Michaellem Furter. Anno post natum xpm millesimo quadring. nonag. septimo. Goth. type. Sign. Octav.
1498. 16. Methodius primum olympiade: et postea Tyri civitatum episcopus. sub diocletiano Imperatore In Calcide civitate (que nigropontus appellatur ut divus scribit Hieronymus) martirio coronatur: qui studio in unum redacta continens. On the 2nd page the author's portrait, with a preface by the editor, Sebastian Brant. At the end : Reverendi peritissimique iuris consulti Juonis panormie carnotensis episcopi commendatissimi : de varia scripturarum distinctione (divina opitulante gratia) Expensis Michaelis Furter elaborata. Anno fructifere incarnationis. M.CCCC.XCIX. Mensis Marcii die sexta. Feliciter expliciunt. Device. Goth. type. Sign. and numbered leaves. 4°.

1499. 17. Liber decretorum sive Panormia Juonis accurato labore summoque

FURTER, 1498. NO. 16, METHODIUS PRIMUM OLYMPIADE.

18. Beati Gregorii Pape Dialogorum Libri IV. Basileæ per Michaellem Furter 1499. Goth. type. 4°.
19. Fundamentum Scholarium. Under title woodcut of symbols of four evangelists. Leaf 2, p. 2 : Regule Remigii emendate correcteque. In primum Scholarium fundamentum feliciter incipiunt. At end : Regule partium grammaticæ artis fundamentales. totum latinis fundamentum continentes feliciter finiunt. Impressum Basilee per Michaellem Furter. Anno nostre Salutis. M.CCCC.XCIX. Symbol. Goth. type. 36 leaves in quarto.
1500. 20. De modo studendi in utroque iure : cum nominibus omnium scribentium in iure, Interpretationes omnium titulorum legum et canonum. Thus on leaf 1, p. 1, p. 2. Sebast. Brant ad Arnoldum zum Lufft in Joh. Baptist. de Casalupis tractat. de modo studendi commendatio elegiaca. At end : Impressum Basilee per Michaellem Furter atque per Sebastianum Brant (licet perfunctorie) revisum. Anno salutifere incarnationis atque aurei iubilei Milles. quingent. Kal. Septembr. Goth. type. Sign. 4°.
21. Quadruplex Missalis expositio : litteralis scil. allegorica : tropologica et anagogica : etc. Symbol under title. At end : Impressum Basilee per Michaellem Furter. Anno salutif. incarn. milles. quingent. Goth. type. Sign. 84 leaves in quart.
22. Mich. Lochmaieri parochiale Curatorum. Basilee per Michaellem Furter. 1500. d. 14 Julii. 4°.
1502. 23. Expositiones sive declarationes omnium titulorum iuris tam civilis quam canonici per Sebastianum Brant collecte ac revise. 4°.

After the year 1500 Furter altered his device as shown on opposite page.

24. Psalterium cum apparatu vulgari firmiter appresso Lateinisch Psalter mit dem teutschen nutzbarlichen dabei getruckt. At end : Psalterium cum apparatu vulgari, pro more barbarico translatis Baselee impressum per Michaellem Furter. Anno domini. M.CCCCij. Hie endet der psalter mit dem teutschen : nutzberkayt der psalm sunderlichen. Getruckt zu Basel durch Michel Furter in dem Jar als man zalt. M.CCCC. und ij. iar. 4°. This is, as Panzer observes, the 3rd edition of the Latin-German Psalter. It occupies, exclusive of title, calendar, and index, 130 leaves.
1503. 25. The Psalter mentioned under the above number was reprinted in 1503 twice. The same title as above, but printed in red, and with printer's device introduced. Both editions, says Panzer, agree in the main points, though they differ as regards abbreviations and orthography.

26. Manuale Curatorum prædicandi præbens modum tam latino quam vulgari sermone practice illuminatum: cum certis aliis ad curam animarum pertinentibus: omnibus Curatis tam conducibilis quam salubris. 4°.
27. Remigii Regulæ grammaticales. 4°.
1504. 28. Reprint of No. 16, with somewhat altered title. It ends with the following words, which, in fact, constitute the title: De revelatione fasta Ab angelo beato Methodio in carcere detento. On the 29th leaf: Incipit tractatus super Methodium qui in se continebat quinque capitula quorum primum est de possessione terre sancte. At end: Tractatus — — — hic completur laboriosa cura et ingenio Wolfgangi Aytinger clerici ac incole Augustinen. vindelicorum magistri: nec non Juris utriusque promoti. — pro quo fideliter orate — Finit Basilee per Michaelem Furter opera et vigilantia Sebastiani Brant Anno M.CCCCC.IIIII. As No. 16, with woodcut.

29. Balth. Praspergii Merseburg. clarissima plene et choralis musice interpretatio, cum certissimis regulis exemplorum annotationibus et figuris multum splendidis. In alma Basileorum universitate exercitata. Device and colophon. 4°.

30. Expositio Sequentiarum et Hymnorum, cum Commento Historico de Sanctis. 4°.
31. A translation of No. 16, without date, but placed by Panzer in this year because here this new Latin edition, mentioned under No. 28, appeared with the same woodcuts. The treatise of Aytinger is wanting in the translation. The title is: Eyn biechlin sancti Methodii martners. und bischoff zu partinentz in krieckenland. in dem begriffen sind. göttlich offenbarungen von dem hailigen engel geschehen. von dem anfang der welt. und aussreutung menger reichumb. und des letsten künigs der römer geschicht. und künfftige überwindung. wider die Türken u. s. w. At end: Getruckt zu Basel durch Michael Furter. 4°.
1505. 32. Nos. 20 and 23 combined. The colophon, with suitable alterations, as in No. 20. 4°.
33. Joannis Bechofen Quadruplex missalis expositio litteralis scilicet: allegorica: tropologica et anagogica. 4°.
1506. 34. Alberti Magni Philosophia naturalis. 4°.
35. Reprint of No. 26. 4°.
1507. 36. Opus pulcherrimum de tribus christianorum actibus: oratione videlicet: ieiunio et eleemosyna: continens libros tredecim venerabilis Patris Guntheri ordinis divi Benedicti pro sermonibus et collationibus publice faciendis: non tam elegantissimum et latinissimum quam utilissimum diu absconditum sed nuper inventum et impressum. 4°.
37. Published also by Pfortzen in the same year: Vite ducentorum et triginta summorum pontificum: a beato petro apostolo usque ad Julium secund. modernum pontificem. Under this title the portrait of the last-named pope. The rest as in Pfortzen's edition, except that Furter inserts his name and the completion of the impression, instead of X Kal. Marcii, here is pridie Kal. Septemb. Size also 4°.

Concerning the just-mentioned John Schott the Schweighauser MS. says : John Schott (Johannes Scotus), Martini Typographi Argentinensis Filius, Friderici Sculptoris, Statuarii et Civis Argent. Nepos should not be classed with Basle printers, but with those of Strasbourg. His father Martinus had married a daughter of John Mentel, the famous Strasbourg printer. The above John, according to Schöpflin, first printed at Freiburg (Breisgau) in 1503, and afterwards, in 1508, at Basle, in partnership with Michael Furter. In 1510 he printed Symmachi Epistolas at Strasbourg, and thenceforth always in that city.

Schöpflin says that he twice printed Udalr. Hutteni Expostulationem cum Erasmo, about which Erasmus complained to the magistrates at Strasbourg, as appears by Erasmi spongia adversus Hutteni aspergines.

JOHN FROBEN AND HIS FAMILY.

1491-1600.

<sup>1</sup> Dr Bernoulli, in "Basler Buckermarken," by Paul Hertz, says that Hieronymus was a son by the first wife, but her name is not given.

CHAPTER XI.

John Froben.

HE was a native of Hammelburg, a small town in Franconia (now Bavaria), as, in fact, he calls himself on many of his title-pages. The year of his birth is uncertain; 1460 probably is nearly correct, since his activity as a printer began in 1491, and he died in 1527. Being a friend and countryman of John Petri, of Langendorf, the printer at Basle, he accompanied the latter's six-years-old nephew thither, with a view of attending university lectures, and with great success, for he certainly became one of the most learned printers on record.<sup>1</sup> Amerbach and Petri urged him to devote himself to printing; he first worked with the former as corrector of the press, and in 1491 began to print on his own account, his first book being a Bible, in very pretty small gothic type.

In 1490 he had been admitted a citizen of Basle, and in 1500 he married Gertrude, the daughter of Wolfgang Lachner, not only learned himself, but a great patron and promoter of learning in others.<sup>2</sup>

Amerbach still printed with the so-called antiqua, the gothic type of the

<sup>2</sup> He was a native of Neuburg, on the Danube; became a citizen of Basle in 1488, and died in 1517. He was buried in St. Peter's Church. His literary zeal is testified to by a letter of Glarean to Zwingli, dated October 19, 1516: "Just now Wolfgang Lachner, the father-in-law of our Frobenius, has sent for a whole waggon-load of classics, best Aldine edition, monks ; Frobenius adopted the type introduced by Aldus, of Venice, called the Italian, or italic type, wherefore he is sometimes styled the German Aldus. He took great care to have good paper, which he procured from Lorraine ; on one occasion, in consequence of war in that country, he was so short of paper that his presses were in danger of coming to a standstill. By the great attention he bestowed on his books Frobenius soon acquired a great reputation in Germany and France, and owed to it his friendship with Erasmus, the man who then was the head of the learned world. What led to the personal acquaintance of both was the fact that Frobenius in 1513 had printed the Adagia of Erasmus (see infra, No. 31), where, on the very title-page, without knowing Erasmus, he calls him Germaniæ decus ; and in the preface to Students he says that the Muse had granted Erasmus ore rotundo loqui, and of the work itself : Volumen quo nullum omnium eruditorum calculo abhinc mille annos luculentius in lucem prodiisse constat, quod rite quis omnis elegantiae seminarium appellaverit, etc. This induced Erasmus to seek the acquaintance of Frobenius ; the way he introduced himself was characteristic of the man. One day a stranger called on Froben, and handed him a letter from Erasmus, saying at the same time that he was an intimate friend of Erasmus, and had authority from him to treat with Frobenius with regard to the works he (Erasmus) wished to have printed, and that whatever he arranged with him (the stranger) would be as binding as if arranged with Erasmus himself. (See Frontispiece.) The stranger further said that he resembled Erasmus to such a degree that whoso saw him saw Erasmus. Then Froben laughed, seeing the deception—as Erasmus himself tells in a letter to Jac. Wimpfeling, dated Bas. XI. Calend. Oct. 1514 : “Is postea risit, intellecta fraude.”<sup>1</sup> Erasmus was retained as a guest in the house of Froben, and remained in it for years. Then began Froben’s most active period ; he kept four, and afterwards seven, presses going, from which issued more than 300, mostly very important works, whose beautifully white paper, elegant type, and fine title-pages, embellished with designs by Holbein, still excite the admiration of bibliophiles. But beside studying the external appearance of his books Froben was ever anxious that his texts should be distinguished by fulness and correctness ; his correctors were all men of learning, such as Lachner, Beatus Rhenanus, Oecolampadius, and Erasmus.

from Venice. If you want any, say so quickly, and send the cash. For as soon as such a cargo arrives, there are thirty for one, who only call out, What’s the price ? and have a scuffle over it (katzbalgen sich noch darum).”

And his printing-office from England to Bohemia enjoyed the reputation that never scurrilous or libellous works—though commercially the most profitable—had ever issued from it.<sup>1</sup> Erasmus certainly was a useful friend to Froben; of his Encomium Moriaë, printed by Froben in March, 1515, about 1,720 copies out of the 1,800 printed were sold by the following 17th of April. But the friendship shown by Erasmus for Froben excited the envy and ill-will of other printers. This induced Froben to add in several works printed by him, to his usual printer's device, as shown here, the emblem of calumny after a description by Lucian: a man with immense ears, surrounded by females representing ignorance, suspicion, and calumny. This emblem occurs in the 2nd edition of the New Testament of 1519, and in the Vellejus Paterculius of 1520; also in one of Froben's editions of Tacitus. Froben varied his device with various embellishments, as well be seen in the sequel. Occasionally the device is accompanied by the explanatory legend: "Be ye wise as serpents and harmless as doves."

But Frobenius had enemies who did him more substantial harm than traducers: pirates, who reprinted his books, and of course undersold him. But the friendship and influence of Erasmus here proved useful, and when

---

<sup>1</sup> But this needs some explanation. Froben's press obtained this encomium at the sacrifice of some independence. For what was then chiefly understood by scurrilous and libellous books were books by, or in favour of, Luther; and Erasmus would not allow Froben to print any such. But for all that, many a strong-seasoned libellus issued from Froben's press, and written by Erasmus too, as, for instance, his Hyperaspistes Diatribæ adv. Servum Arbitrium Mart. Lutheri.

Froben in 1523 printed his friend's Paraphras. in Evang. secundum Joannem it had on it the public notification: "Cum gratia et privilegio Cæsareo" (Charles V.).

But with all his energy and work Frobenius did not grow rich. He tells the readers of his books so himself, as, for instance, in his preface to Augustine's De civitate Dei, 1522. And Erasmus tells Herwagen in a letter written to the latter in 1531, that Frobenius benefits the public more than himself, and that he will leave his heirs more fame than money. For Froben spent enormous sums on the getting up of his impressions; even the title-pages were to excel in beauty of execution those of other printers; he employed Holbein, the painter, and Urs Graff, a then famous engraver, whom he paid liberally. The returns of his sales did not cover the cost of production.

Erasmus's intimacy with Frobenius was not confined to matters of learning, but extended to his domestic circle. He was the godfather of his youngest son, who therefore was christened John Erasmus; Beatus Rhenanus was the other godfather. Erasmus used to call him his Erasmiolus, and in 1524 addressed to him his Book of Dialogues. This son was born about 1517, but he seems to have had little to do with the printing business, though his name appears in a few books with that of Herwagen.

The two elder children were Hieronymus (b. 1501), who succeeded his father as a printer, and Justina (b. 1512), who married Ric. Episcopus, the printer.

The last important work which Frobenius undertook was a new edition of the complete works of St. Augustine's. Amerbach's edition no longer satisfied the learned. In Frobenius's latter days seven presses were constantly at work on this undertaking, to complete which was his most earnest and sole desire. But only the first two parts were ready when his hour arrived. He had never had any illness, but six years before his death he had fallen down a whole flight of stairs on the tiled floor below. He recovered, but some latent disease remained in his body, which he endeavoured to conceal, for he was ashamed of being ill. Five years afterwards he was seized with terrible pains in the heel of his right foot; the doctors only added to his sufferings, till a stranger procured him some alleviation. Twice yet he rode on horseback to the fair at Frankfurt. But then there came to the pain in the heel a numbness of two fingers of his right hand—a sign of approaching death. But Frobenius took no precautions, and one day, when he was trying to reach something high up on a shelf, he was suddenly seized with horrible pains, fell backwards, and seriously injured his skull. Two days after he died, in October, 1527. He was buried in the churchyard of St. Peter's. Erasmus, whose grief was intense at his friend's death, wrote the inscription on his tombstone in the three languages in which Frobenius printed : Hebrew, Greek, and Latin. The latter is as follows :

D. Opt. Max.

<sup>1</sup> Holbein amused himself one evening, and several following ones, by drawing sketches in the margin of the Encomium Moriæ till they amounted to 83. Among these one of them represented Erasmus writing at his desk. Erasmus was pleased with the sketch, but as a kind of repartee he turned over a leaf, and wrote under a sketch representing a toper kissing a girl: "Holbein." Now, as in the text an epicurean pig is mentioned, it is possible that this innocent joke may have fixed on the painter the rather frivolous character afterwards attributed to him. The book with the sketches is in the Public Library at Basle; the sketches themselves were published in Paul Mantz's Hans Holbein, Paris, 1879.

This is the conclusion of the works printed by Frobenius, though typographical annalists mention as his, after his death, works which are attributed to him; but they properly belong to his son Hieronymus and his partners. The fine sound which the name of John Froben carried with it was tempting enough to use it again; or, were they works left unfinished by the father and completed by his sons? One great work, already mentioned, though not strictly historically correct, must, as a tribute of piety, be attributed to him as one of his chief performances, though it did not appear till two years after his death. His genius still inspired his sons and encouraged them in printing the work; it was chiefly on account of the deceased father that Erasmus so powerfully assisted them in it; he says: "Non enim oportet bonorum virorum amicitiam vitæ spatio terminari" (Ep. 1084 to Alphons Fonseca, archbishop of Toledo, written at Freiburg (Breisgau) in 1529.

This work, as the reader knows, was Augustini Opera, whereof John Froben only saw the first two parts printed; his name justly is connected with it. Chevillier says of this Augustine: This is the S. Augustine of Erasmus of the year 1529 in 10 vols., generally called that with long lines, which once was drawn from the library of the Sorbonne, to confute the ministers at the Conference of Poissy, by an edition they could not reject.

The above-mentioned letter of Erasmus (No. 1084) is rich in information on this interesting edition of St. Augustine.

1529. 257. Aurelii Augustini Hippon. episcopi Omnium Operum Primus Tomus, summa vigilantia repurgatorum a mendis innumeris p. Erasm. ut optimo jure tantus ecclesiæ doctor renatus videri possit. Privil. Cæs. Majest. Bas. in off. Jo. Frobenii. The work consists of ten parts, most of which bear the name of J. Froben. To the first part is prefixed the above-mentioned letter of Erasmus to the Archbishop of Toledo.

The printer's device of John Froben was a staff held by two hands, two crowned serpents wind around it, and a dove rests on the top of it. Occasionally it is accompanied by the explanation: "Be ye wise as serpents, and without guile as doves." Four variations of the device are shown respectively on pp. 89, 101, 102, and 103. Portraits of Froben and Erasmus, painted by Holbein, may be seen at Hampton Court Palace. Our frontispiece, designed by Hieronymus Hess, the Swiss artist, gives excellent likenesses of the famous printer and his learned friend.

CHAPTER XII.

Hieronymus Froben.

HIERONYMUS, as we have seen, was the eldest son of John Froben and Gertrude Lachner,<sup>1</sup> born in 1501, as appears on his epitaph in the cathedral cloisters of Basle. Tonjola commits an error in saying he was born in 1507. Were there any doubt about the real year of his birth, a peculiar circumstance connected therewith would fix it to a certainty. In 1501 Basle was received into the Swiss Confederation, and Wursteisen, in his Chronicle of Basle, distinctly states that "Hieronymus Frobenius, the famous printer, was the first Swiss [Basle had till then belonged to the German Empire] child born at Basle, and was baptized to the sound of drums and fifes."

He began his actual work as a printer in 1528, after his father's death, though as early as 1520 two books appeared as printed by him, viz., Pharaphras. Erasmi in Eplis Pauli ad Rom. etc. and Aristotelis Rhetorica etc. They may be considered as attempts under his father's guidance. John Herwagen, who married the widow Gertrude, entered into partnership with his now stepson, and is, in fact, named with him as a printer on the above-mentioned Aristotelis of 1525. In 1529, Nicolaus Episcopus, who had married the sister of Hieronymus, joined the other two. This threefold partnership was partially dissolved in 1531, when Herwagen went out. The printing offices of Hieronymus were in the house called "Zum Luft" (now No. 18, Bäumleingasse).

The friendly relations which existed between Erasmus and Hieronymus have already been adverted to. After the first stormy years of the Reformation Erasmus returned from Freiburg to Basle, and lived, as formerly, with John, now with Hieronymus Froben, in whose garden in the Malzgasse (St. Alban's quarter) he delighted to walk. He died at seventy years of age in the house of Hieronymus, where he is kept in remembrance by a tablet with the following inscription :

Cubiculum
D. Erasmo Roterod.
Sacrum
MDXXXV.

Underneath the image of a Terminus (the boundary god) on a square pedestal, with the legend :

Mors Ultima Linea Rerum.
"Ορα Τέλος Μάκροϋ Βίου Concedo Nulli.

Hieronymus and Episcopius were his executors. The former had married Barbara Brand, the daughter of the burgomaster Brand. He had three children, two sons, Ambrosius and Aurelius, both printers, and a daughter, Anna, who afterwards married the town councillor, Louis Meyer, the son of burgomaster Adelberg Meyer ; the pair had fifteen children.

Hieronymus died in 1563, and is buried in the cathedral. Other works printed by him are :

1. Euripides. Tragœdiæ duæ Hecuba et Iphigenia in Aulide, Gr. et Lat. interprete Des ERASMO. 8vo.
2. Beati Rhenani Rerum Germanicarum lib. III. 1531. Fol.
3. Diogenes Laertius. De vitis decretis et responsis celebrium philosophorum libri X. 1533. 4<sup>o</sup>.
4. Erasmus. Opus Epistolarum. 1529. Fol.
5. Erasmus. De sarcienda ecclesiæ concordia. 1533.
6. Portius L. De sestertio, talentis, pecunijs, ponderibus, mensuris, stipendijs militaribus antiquis. 1530.

Beside his father's device in its simple state, Hieronymus used various combinations thereof in elaborate designs, similar to those shown on pages 102 and 103.

Michael Isengrin.

He was born in 1500. He first married a daughter of John Bebel, in partnership with whom he began printing in 1531. On his wife's death he married Elizabeth Linder, by whom he had a daughter, who married Guarinus, the printer. These intermarriages between printers' families, of which we have so many instances in these pages, are remarkable. Isengrin's office was at the "Falkenberg," now No. 51, Freiestrasse. He also owned the "Black Bear" on the Petersberg. His device was the same as that of John Bebel, a palm-tree, with a printer's platen in the branches.

Jacob Parcus or Kündig.

He was a native of Lyons, and was admitted a citizen of Basle in 1537. As far as known he printed, from 1546 to 1563, largely for Oporinus. He lived in a house called Tanneneck, on the Petersberg, which house still stands and bears the same name. His device was a plain shield, with the inscription, Nulla fors longa. So it appears in his Miscellanea theologica, printed in 1547. In Glareanus, Helvetiæ Descriptio, printed in 1553, it assumes the much more elaborate character, shown below.

CHAPTER XIII.

John Herwagen (Father).

HE was born in 1497, and first worked as a printer at Strasbourg from 1523 to 1528. In this latter year he acquired the citizenship of Basle, and married the widow of his deceased friend Frobenius, Gertrude Lachner. His connection with Hieronymus Froben and Nicolaus Episcopus has already been referred to. Erasmus calls him virum bonæ fidei, nec indoctum, and entertained special friendship towards him. His children were two sons, John the printer, and Caspar, an experienced doctor of laws and professor at Basle; and a daughter, Rachel, who married Bernhard Brand. He died between 1557 and 1559, as we must conclude from the epitaph of his wife Gertrude, who died in 1560. His device was a three-headed Hermes, for which there is no prototype in classic antiquity; possibly there may, in the design, be an allusion to the threefold Hecate. A list of the works printed by Herwagen after 1531 will be found on p. 123 infra.

Nicolaus Episcopus, the Father.

He was a native of Montdidier en Bresse, born in 1501, whence, on account of his religion, he fled to Basle.

Erasmus calls him juvenem mire candidum, and always remained his friend, as the directions in his will prove.

As the husband of Justina Frobenius he became the partner of Hieronymus and Herwagen, and remained that of the former to the end.

He left three sons and seven daughters; two of his sons, Nicolaus and Eusebius, became printers. The father died in 1563 of consumption, and in the following year his wife and four children of the plague. One grave at St. Peter's contains parents and children. The stone is by the side of that of John Frobenius.

CHAPTER XIV.

Nicolaus Episcopus the Son.

HE was the eldest son of Nicolaus Episcopus and of Justina Froben, born about 1531. Whilst his father, in partnership with Hieronymus Froben, seems to have carried on his printing business, Nicolaus, no doubt, commenced printing on his own account, probably in the house called "Zum Sessel," in the Todtengässlein (a lane adjoining the Offices of the Municipality, formerly the post-office), which justifies us to assume that this was the paternal house which came by inheritance to the son-in-law of John Froben when Hieronymus settled in the house called "Zum Luft." Nicolaus, in 1553, had married Bavara Peyer, of Schaffhausen, and had a son, Nicolaus, and three daughters. The son became the father of another Nicolaus, who afterwards distinguished himself as a statesman.

After printing several years on his own account, and then for two years in partnership with his brother Eusebius, death in the midst of his energetic activity snatched him away in 1566, when he was only thirty-five years old. Felix Platter, the famous physician of Basle, and Wursteisen, the chronicler, say that he died of the plague. His tomb is at St. Peter's. Eusebius for some time carried on the printing business for the benefit of the heirs of Nicolaus, and by the side of his name we see, from 1566, frequently the addition : et Nicolai fratris hæredes. Episcopus' device was a hand surrounded by clouds and holding a crosier, on which stands a crane, grasping a stone in his claw to prevent his falling asleep.

Eusebius Episcopus.

The younger brother of Nicolaus, born 1540. His name first appears on books by the side of that of his brother in 1565; from 1566 he printed alone, or in company with the heirs of his brother, and, since he soon after purchased the printing business of Herwagen, his books thenceforth bore also the imprint : ex officina Hervagiana. His wife was Agnes Meyer, by whom he had eleven children, seven of whom were alive after the mother's death in 1577. He died in 1599, and is buried at St. Peter's.

Nicolaus Episcopus, Son, and Eusebius Episcopus.

The former alone from 1553-65; both in partnership in 1565 and 1566; the latter alone from 1566. Most important works:

Device the same as that of Nicolaus Episcopus.

CHAPTER XV.

John Herwagen, the Son.

JOHN HERWAGEN, senr., was his father, Gertrude Lachner his mother; he was born about 1530. He married in 1554 Elizabeth Holzach, the daughter of the physician Eucharius Holzach. (The Holzachs are one of the most ancient families still existing at Basle; N. Holzach was burgomaster of Liestal in 1289.) John died in 1564 of the plague. His widow married the celebrated printer J. Oporinus, but died herself a few months after, whereupon, as mentioned, under Eusebius Episcopus, Herwagen's printing business was purchased by Episcopus. His most important impressions are:

- 1560. 1. Wolfgangi Musculi loci communes theologici.
- 1561. 2. Concordantiæ majores Bibl.
- 3. Wolfg. Musculi in Epist. ad Galatas et Ephes. comment.
- 1562. 4. Angeli Decembri Mediolanensis de Politia literaria lib. VII. 8vo.
- 5. Wolfg. Musculi in Ep. ad Rom.
- 6. Wolfg. Musculi in Matthæum.
- 1563. 7. Beda presbyteri opera tom. VIII.
- 8. Aristot. opera partib. quat.
- 1564. 9. Jac. Spiegelii Lexicon Juris Civilis auct. et recognitum. Fol.

1565. 10. Græcæ linguæ erotemata c. Prefatione Jo. Melanchthonis et nova prefatione.
 11. D. Basilii opera. Per Oporinum et Hæredes J. Hervagii. John Herwagen used his father's device.

Ambrosius and Aurelius Froben.

Sons of Hieronymus Frobenius and Barbara Brand; the former, born in 1537, married Salomea Rudin, the daughter of Jacob Rudin. Aurelius married Chrischona Burckhardt, the daughter of Christopher Burckhardt and Gertrude Brand. Both had children, Aurelius five sons and one daughter. He lived in his father's house Zum Luft; of Ambrosius Wursteisen, the chronicler, relates that he erected at Augst (Augusta Rauracorum) a splendid country-house.

The most important works printed by the two brothers are :

1564. 1. Dictionarium Hebraicum.
 1565. 2. Iustini martyr. opera.
 1566. 3. Basilii opera tomis quat.
 1571. 4. Theatri vitæ humanæ tomi 3.
 1574. 5. Guill. Durandi Speculum juris, additionib. Jo. Andreae, Baldi etc. Folio.
 1581. 6. Buxtorfi Concordantia hebr. Folio.
 1588. 7. Talmud hebr.
 1603. 8. M. Minucii Felicis Octavius et Cyprianus de idolorum vanitate; Jo. a Wower recensuit et notis illustravit. Ex bibliopolio Frobeniano. Octav.

The printing of the Talmud, mentioned above (No. 7), was accomplished under great difficulties. It was projected in 1579, but unexpected opposition arose. Froben had to petition government to allow his keeping a Jew in the city, since ordinary compositors were not versed in Hebrew, of which language a great deal had necessarily to be set up in the work. And Jews were greatly detested at Basle. The Emperor Rudolph II. objected to the printing, declaring the Talmud to be against the Christian religion and faith, and therefore he forbade its being printed. On its being represented to the Emperor that the work had passed the censorship, and that the university had permitted the printing, he ordered copies of Talmudic writings to be sent to him for his inspection. They were sent, though Ambrosius Froben thought his Majesty might easily have found some at Prague. To the parcel was added the humble request of the burgomaster and council of Basle to the Emperor, graciously to give his permission to print the work. But the reply was unfavourable ; the old prejudice against the book was as strong as ever ; papal bulls of 1239 and 1264 had ordered it to be burnt, and in the century of the invention of printing Cardinal Ximenes is said to have had some five thousand copies of it burnt. But Froben persevered ; further humble addresses were sent to the Emperor, and it was not till the year 1588 that the Basle Talmud saw the light, both parties having agreed to submit it to the censorship of the Inquisitor, Dr. Marcus Marinus, of Venice, who struck out five chapters because they contained reflections on Christianity.

CHAPTER XVI.

Johannes Bergmann von Olpe.

ONCERNING this printer we have only the following two particulars :

1. He was at one time archdeacon in the cathedral of Granfelden (Grandval), as appears from letters, which are prefixed to some of his impressions as dedications (see the editions of the Navis Stultifera of 1497 in 8vo and Reuchlini Scenica Progymnasmata, 1498). In the work: Varia Seb. Brant carmina of 1498 he on the 2nd page calls himself: Joh. Bergm. de Olpe Archidiaconus Grandisvallis.

2. The MS. : Analecta ad Histor. Bas. pertinentia autore Urstisio, which describes the cathedral and some of the chapels of Basle, when referring to the chapel of St. John by the cathedral, says : 1514. Joh. Bergmann von Olpe Decanus of St. John's Chapel.

His printed books are :

1494. 1. Sebastiani Brant utriusque Juris Doctoris in laudem Virginis Marie etc. carmina. Quart.
2. Caroli Verardi in laudem sereniss. Ferdinandi Hispaniarum Regis Bethicæ et regni Granatæ obsidio, Victoria et triumphus. Item Christophori Columbi epistola de insulis nuper in mari indico repertis ad M. D. Raphaelem Sanxio Ferdin. Regis Thesaurarium. Nihil sine causa. J. B. Goth. type. Quart.
3. Jacobi Vimphelingii de Conceptu et triplici Marie Virginis gloriosiss. Candore Carmen. J. B. With 2 distichs by Seb. Brant. At the end again J. B. and Nihil sine causa. Quart. Device as shown on the previous page.

CAROLI VERARDI IN LAUDEM FERDINANDI.

DE CONCEPTU ET TRIPLICI, ETC.

4. Das Narrenschiff. Underneath a woodcut, divided into two parts. The upper part shows a waggon, only half visible, in which some fools are arriving; the lower part contains a ship and two boats, full of fools; on one side we read: "ad narragoniam," on the other are a few notes with the text: "gaudeamus omnes." Between the two boats are the words: "har noch!" and under the whole woodcut: "Zuo schyff Brueder ess gat." Dispersed throughout the book are 114 woodcuts, carefully done and designed according to the taste of the time; these woodcuts represent the conduct of every one of the fools introduced into the poem. Every leaf, moreover, even if only text, is enclosed in two borders of foliage. At the end of the book: End des Narrenschiffs. Hie endet sich, das narrenschiff, So zuo nutz, heilsamer ler, ermanung, und ervolgung, der wissheit, vernunft, und guoter sytten, Och zuo verachtung, und strof der narrheyt, blintheit, Irrsal und Dorheit, aller städt und geschlecht der menschen, mit besundern Fliss, mueg, und arbeit, gesamlet ist, durch Sebastianum Brant. In beiden rechten Doctoren, Gedruckt zuo Basel uff die Vasenacht, die man der narren kirchweih nennet, Im jor nach Christi Geburt Tusent vierhundert vier und nüntzig. Then follows the printer's device, as shown on the previous page, with the year, 1494. Nüt on ursach. Jo. B. von Olpe. Then the index. Large 4°.

This undoubtedly is the first printed edition of this famous poem. Panzer has shown that some assertions as to an earlier impression, especially of a Latin translation, are without foundation.

This first edition was in the same year pirated by a printer at Nuremberg, and this pirated impression was again, in the same year, reprinted at Reutlingen. At Strasbourg also, not only a pirated edition, but even an extension of the Ship of Fools, appeared, entitled: "Das nūw schif von Narragonia," with all sorts of additions.

THEOLOGICA EMPHASIS.

1495. 5. Seb. Brant de origine et conservatione bonorum regum: et laude civitatis Hierosolymæ: cum exhortatione ejusdem recuperanda. 4°.
6. Das Narrenschif. 4°. At the end the same words as in the former edition, but with the year: tusent vierhundert fünf und nüntzig (1495). Then the device and name, but with the date 1494, which may be due to the fact that the device of the former year with all the indices thereon was reprinted without alteration.

1496. 7. Seb. Brant liber faceti docens mores Juvenum. 4°.
 8. Epithoma Rhetorices graphicum. a Jacobo Locher Philomuso.
Carmen ejusdem at divam Catharinam. At the end: Nihil sine causa. J. O. 4°.
 9. Theologica emphasis, sive Dialogus super eminentia quatuor doctorum ecclesie Gregorii, Hieronymi, Augustini, Ambrosii cum sexcentis versibus. Jac. Locher. 4°. Device as shown on page 135.

1497. NO. II. NAVIS STULTIFERA.

1497. 10. Germanorum veterum principium zelus et fervor in christianam religionem dei que ministros. The author is Lupoldus von Bebenburg, as appears from some distichs by S. Brant, and the concluding words: Finit libellus Nobilissimus Lupoldi Bebenburgen. de Veterum Principium etc. Nihil sine causa. J. B. Roman type. Sign. Fol.
 11. Stultifera Navis. Beneath a woodcut of the Ship of Fools

Then the advertisement: Narragonice profectionis nunquam satis laudata Navis: per Seb. Brant: vernacula vulgarique sermone et rhythmo, per cunctorum mortalium fatuitatis semitas effugere cupientium directione, speculo, commodoque et salute. proque inertis ignaveque stultitie perpetua infamia, execratione et confutatione, nuper fabricata: Atque jam pridem per Jacobum Locher cognomento Philomusum: Suevum: in latinum traducta eloquium. et per Seb. Brant. denuo seduloque revisa. felici exorditur principio. 1497. Nihil sine causa. At the end: Finis stultifere navis etc. Repeated indication of author, translator, and printer, with device, motto, year, index. Goth. type. Sign. Pages numbered. 8vo. One of the illustrations is reproduced on the opposite page in all its inartistic clumsiness.

12. Stultifera Navis etc. The same as the above, and printed in the same month of March, but with this difference: Latin type, figures, 4°, and pages not numbered.
13. Stultifera Navis as above, with additions in the advertisement: sedulo revisa, et nova quadam exactaque emendatione eliminata atque superadditis quibusdam novis, admirandisque fatuorum generibus suppleta. At end: Month of August. Latin type. Sign. Leaves numbered. Figures. Quart.
1498. 14. Stultifera Navis etc. Like the edition of August, 1497, to the end. Edition of March.
15. Varia Sebastiani Brant Carmina. Beneath the portrait of the author with the distichs:

*Que tibi diva miser christipara, carmina lusi
Celicolisque aliis: suscipe grata velim
Et mihi pro reliquis erratibus optima virgo
Exores veniam. criminibusque precor
Nam pro laude tui nati, superique tonantis
Cuncta hec concinui que liber iste tenet.*

1498.

Nihil sine causa. Olpe.

On the 2nd page of 1st leaf a letter of Joh. Bergmann de Olpe Archidiaconi Grandis vallis ad Wymmarum de Ercklens as dedication. Latin type. Sign. 4°.

16. Collatio (Oratio) habita in publico conventu Cluniacensium ordinis sancti Benedicti per prestantissimum sacre pagine professorem magistrum Joannem Ravlin parisiensem, Nunc vero professum

- monachum ejusdem monasterii: de perfecta religionis plantatione incremento et instauratione. Roman type. Sign. 4°.
17. Joh. Reuchlini Phorcensis Scenica Progymnasmata. Nihil sine causa. Olpe. Roman type. Sign. 4°.
1499. 18. Baptiste Mantuani Carmelite: de patientia aurei libri tres. Nihil sine causa. Olpe. A poem of Brant to Wymmarus. Roman type. Sign. 4°.
19. Venerabilis Thomæ De Kempis Hortulus Rosarum de Valle Lachrimarum. Nihil sine causa. Olpe. Then: Hugo de S. Victore de studio orandi et de Tribus Dietis. Lastly: In laudem virg. ex verbis Beati Bernardi Salutatio Sebastiani Brant. Nihil sine causa. Olpe. Octav.
20. Sebastiani Brant Liber Faceti de moribus Juvenum: noviter in vulgare translatus. A German metrical translation is added to the Latin text. Olpe's device. Brant's address ad studiose indolis pueros ending with:

Id modo precipuum de Olpe impressise Joannes Gaudet opus, multis nomina nota gerens. J. B.

Goth. type. 4°.

Beside the above, perhaps another work, printed at Basle in 1506, may be attributed to Olpe.

1506. Doctor Brants Narrenschiff. Date. Underneath: Nüt on Ursach. Then a woodcut of a ship full of fools, quite similar to the one on the title page of the Latin edition of 1497. At the end of the book the same words as those of the German editions of 1494 and '95, but with the date altered to 1506. The last is Olpe's device, the same as in the Latin editions, and with the date 1497.

But the peculiar features of this edition betray an endeavour to make it pass as proceeding from Olpe's press, and the very attempt apparently defeats its own purpose. Olpe had ceased printing for seven years, when this book was sent into the world under his name. There is another circumstance which gives an exceptional character to this edition. On the very first page, underneath the woodcut, commences a protestation by Brant against all kinds of falsification of his poem, as they are specially found in the Strasbourg edition of 1494, and in that of Augsburg of 1498. The Basle edition of 1509, printed by Nic. Lamparter, contains the same protest, and curiously enough the same woodcut as the one of the 1506 edition, as well as the date 1497, and under the title Olpe's motto : Nüt on Ursach. Might we from this similarity infer that Lamparter also printed this edition of 1506?

We append a few lines from Brant's scorching protest :

*Vor hab ichs narrenschiff gedicht
Mit grosser arbeyt uff gericht, etc.
Aber es ist darby nit bliben
Vil mancher hat noch sym geduncken
Nach dem villicht er hat getruncken
Nüw rymen wellen dar an hencken, etc.
Denen kunst, art und moss gebryst
Myn rymen sint vil abgeschnitten
Den synn verlürt man in der mitten, etc.
Darumb manch rym so übel stat
Das es mir jnn mym hertzen we Geton hat tusedt mol, und me, etc.
Aber ich will es gott befälen
Dann diss schiff fört jn synen nammen, etc.
Es kan nit yeder narren machen
Er heiss dann wie ich bin genannt
Der narr Sebastianus Brant.*

CHAPTER XVII.

The Petri Family—John Petri of Langendorf.

HE was born in this small town on the Saale in Franconia (now Bavaria) in 1441; he was thus a countryman of John Frobenius. Wursteisen, in his chronicle, says that the printers owe him much, because by his energy and skill he encouraged many, and also invented various improvements in printing. Frobenius admitted his obligations to him by calling him on the tombstone he erected to him his patron, and as to his other merits his friend further says: Cui informandorum librorum ars multos instrumentorum commoditates acceptas fert. In other respects he must have borne a very high character, for he is represented as vir raris virtutibus et incomparabili ingenio præditus.

He married Barbara Mellinger, and had three sons, who all died in infancy.

He died, according to Tonjola, in 1511; according to Wursteisen and Leu in 1512. Neither of these dates agrees with his last production, which is dated 1514.

The epitaph which Frobenius set on his tombstone in 1519 ends thus:

Jo. Frobenius ὁμοτεχνικός και ὁμοπατρίς
 Patrono h. m.
 Ponendum curavit.
 M.D.XIX.

He printed but little on his own account, most in partnership with Amerbach and Froben, some only with the latter. It therefore suffices, as to these partnership impressions, to refer to those printers.

CHAPTER XVIII.

Adam Petri of Langendorf.

HE was born at Langendorf in 1454, and, losing his father early, John Petri, his uncle, took him, when six years of age, to Basle. In 1507 he became a citizen of Basle, and on his uncle's death, continued the latter's printing business. He was not controlled by an Erasmus, and thus the Reformers, and chiefly Luther, became the heroes of his press. He reprinted the original works with extraordinary speed. Luther's German New Testament appeared at Wittenberg in September, 1522, and already in the following December Adam Petri had brought out an edition of his own. He seems to have grown rich thereby, differing in this from his friend Frobenius ; for Erasmus probably means him, when in a letter to Emsted he says : There are some who derive no little profit from controversial works. This is quite intelligible, for on Luther's appearance in the twenties of the sixteenth century, people would buy no writings but his. To illustrate his books Petri employed the clever designer, Hans Sch auffelin. With all his zeal for reformatory publications, Adam Petri seems to have been a good Catholic, for he presented many of his books to the Carthusian monastery in Little Basle, as appears from their own Cartularies ; they said masses for the giver. Or may we not thence infer, not Petri's Catholic tendencies, but a secret aim to sow the seeds of the Reformation in the monastery ? The Carthusians, indeed, politely tried to avoid this danger, for, though they gratefully received the gifts, they inserted warnings in some of the questionable books. Thus, for instance, into the above-mentioned New Testament, after praising Petri's liberality, they added : " But every one must carefully choose these matters, and not attempt to found thereon more than the Catholic Christian Church teaches and believes." Again, in the five books of Moses by Luther, also a present of Petri in 1523, we read: "You are to be careful not to trouble yourselves too much with such innovations, nor to put too much faith in glosses. Who knows what they mean? But what God teaches may not pass away."

He had married Anna Silber, the daughter of the notary Sixtus, who after his death married the learned Sebastian Münster. Of his two sons, Hieronymus and Henry, the latter became a printer, the former went to

ADAM PETRI'S DEVICE.

Nuremberg, and for this one the father printed some grammatical works, as is indicated on their titles. See, for instance, in the year 1527.

The year of his death is still more uncertain than that of his uncle; probably it was 1527. In this year there appeared under his name as printer the grammatical work Rhemnius Palæmon, with a lengthy letter to his son Hieronymus, with the date: Ex ædibus nostris, mense Aug. MDXXVII. Yea, in 1528, books were published under his name. His device was a boy, riding on a lion, and holding a flag in his hand. Occasionally he employed the arms of Basle for his device.

CHAPTER XIX.

Henry Petri.

HE son of Adam Petri, born in 1508. At first he studied medicine, and obtained the title of doctor ; but later on, and especially after his father's death, he continued the printing business with great zeal and success. According to his epitaph he visited the fair at Frankfurt 108 times. He was not only a distinguished printer, but a statesman, since, according to the same epitaph, he was a town-councillor and deputy of churches and schools, besides holding other offices. By his efforts the library of the convent of preachers was incorporated with the university library, and thus was thrown open to the public. His merits were admitted by Charles V., who in 1556 conferred knighthood upon him, whence the members of his family, to distinguish themselves from the other Petris, assumed the name of Henric-petri ; Henry Petri printed his first book under this ennobled name in 1566. In his old days another honour, also imperial, was bestowed on him : he received the Emperor Ferdinand on his festive entry into Basle on the 8th of January, 1563.

He was twice married. The first time with Anna Hütschin, a nun, who after the Reformation of 1529 had left her convent. Five sons and twelve daughters were born of this marriage. Two of the former, Sixtus and Sebastian, became printers ; of the latter one of them married the printer Hieronymus Curio. His second wife was Barbara Brant, the daughter of Theodore Brant, the burgomaster.

He died in 1579, at the age of 71. His tomb, like that of his father, is in the church of Barefooted Friars.<sup>1</sup>

His device represents a hand striking with a hammer a rock, out of which fire is issuing, which is being fanned by the wind. (Jer. xxiii. 29.)

<sup>1</sup> Besides his sons famous as printers we may mention Adam Henricpetri, who not only distinguished himself, but had distinguished descendants. He was doctor of laws at Basle, and wrote a general history of the events, which occurred at the abdication and death of the Emperor Charles V., and at the beginning of his brother's reign in Germany and other countries. Printed at Basle in 1557 and 1595, fol. His son Jacob Henricpetri, also a doctor of laws, was at the Diet of Frankfurt on the Maine raised by the Emperor Matthias to the dignity of Comes Palatinus. Of the two sons of this Jacob, the one, also called Jacob, settled at Mühlhausen, was sent by that town as ambassador to Oxenstiern; then became burgomaster there, and wrote a history of the town. The other son of Jacob Henricpetri had a son, who, in consequence of his being mixed up with the disturbances at Basle, was banished, whereupon he wrote the book, entitled: "Basle-Babel," for which he was hanged in effigy on the gallows, and his book was burnt by the hangman, he declared an outlaw, and a price of 400 dollars set on his head.

Sixtus and Sebastian Henricpetri.

HEY used their father's device, but each seems to have printed on his own account, since they printed under their separate names.

Only two works printed by Sixtus are known :

1569. 1. Pauli Aemylii Veronensis historiae emendatae de rebus gestis Francor. Lib. X. Fol.
 2. Jo. Tili Chronicon de Regib. Francor. a Pharamundo ad Franciscum primum. Libri IX. Fol.

Sebastian had married Elizabeth Löffel ; had his printing office in the suburb of St. Albans, and died in 1627.

We have no further records of the printing operations of the Petri family, but they must have extended into the middle of the seventeenth century, since Jacob Bertsche from 1660 by degrees purchased their presses, etc. Their bookselling business was afterwards purchased by the Königs, the most noted Basle printers in the seventeenth century.

Thus the Petris ceased to be reckoned among printers, but the successive fate of their establishment may be traced to our day; theirs is the oldest printing business of Basle, surviving to this day. From Bertsche it passed to Frederick Lüdin, from him to the Deckers, the best-known printers of Basle in the eighteenth century; at the beginning of this century it passed from Schöll to the Thurneysens, and finally to the Schweighausers, who since 1817 are established at the house known as the Korb on the Blumenplatz.

CHAPTER XXI.

Nicolaus Lamparter.

It appears to have resided in the suburb of St. Alban at Basle in 1497. In 1505 he went to live in the Freiestrasse. He printed up to 1521; his last book that can be traced was "Determinatio theologicæ facultatis Parisiensis super Doctrina Lutheriana." He seems not to have prospered in his business, for in 1516 we find him applying for the office of tax collector, and in 1521 he had to leave the town on account of debts; what little property he left behind was sold as the goods of one who had absconded.

His device was the arms of Basle and a shield with monogram. It appears thus in the "Navis stultifera," printed in 1507. "Jesuida Hieronymi Paduani," printed in 1505, has the more elaborate device shown here.

John Faber Emmeus.

He was a native of Julich (Rhenish Prussia), and settled at Basle about 1526. Panzer mentions nine works he printed between 1526-1529. On the establishment of the Reformation at Basle he left this city for Freiburg (Breisgau), where he printed till 1540. His device shows a hand cutting a knot with a sword.

Thomas Wolff.

A son of Jacob Wolff by his first wife, Dorothea David, daughter of Lienhart David, butcher. He printed Latin and German works, such as the Hortulus anime, 1520; Old and New Testament, 1523; several works of Ocolampadius. He also printed, by order of the magistrates, official notices, etc.; in 1534 he issued 600 copies of the Confession of Basle, for which he received £10 6s., and his workmen a gratuity. He employed various devices; his most usual ones are here reproduced.

The legend to the device representing the wise man closing his mouth appears indifferently in German, Latin, Greek, or even Hebrew.

We also give a reproduction of the title-page to the New Testament of 1523.

WOLFF. DAS NEUE TESTAMENT (NEW TESTAMENT).

Andreas Cratander.

Cratander, whose real patronymic was Hartmann, began printing at Basle in 1518. He was a man of great learning, and the friend of learned men. Oecolampadius for some time lived in his house as his guest. Like Froben, Cratander printed chiefly learned works, and embellished them as much as possible with elaborate illustrations. He printed up to the year 1536, when, at the instigation of his wife, who would no longer allow him to go on with the "dirty work," he sold his office and plant to the partnership concern, Winter, Oporinus, Platter, and Lasius. But he died soon after, and not in prosperous circumstances, viz., in 1540.

Among the books printed by him the following are enumerated :—

1519. 1. Alciati glossemata de stipulationum divisionibus T.
 2. Gellius, Commentarii S.
 1520. 3. Erasm. Roterod. Novum testamentum S.
 4. Hermanni Buschii Hypanticon.
 5. Topica Claudii Cantiunculæ.

1522. 6. Pomponii Melæ de orbis situ libri tres.
1521. 7. Gregorii Nazanzeni de Moderandis disputationibus.
1523. 8. Oecolampadius, Græcæ literaturæ Dragmata, the elaborate title-page to which is reproduced on opposite page.
9. Plauti Comoediæ. 1523.
1522. 10. Clavdii Cantiunculæ (iuriscons. Bas.). In patrocinium juris civilis. Ejusdem de ratione studij legalis parænsis. Basil. 1522. 4°. The title is enclosed in a border. Device. 32 leaves unnumbered.
1523. 11. Chrysostomus, Joannes. Psegmata a J. Oecolampadio in latinum versa cum adnot. ejusdem. 4°. With bordered title.
1527. 12. Isychius. Presb. Hierosolom. In Leviticum libri VII. 17 leaves unpagged, and 180 leaves pagged. 1527. Title-page handsomely bordered. Device. Fol.
1532. 13. Jan. de Manectis equitis ac jurecons. Florenti ad inclytum Arragonum regem Alfons. de dignitate et excellentia hominis libri IV. 234 pages. 1532. Very scarce.
1534. 14. Xenophontis opera (latine). 1534. Fol.
- In conjunction with Bebel, Cratander printed in 1532, Aristophanes. Comoediæ XI. 4°.

Cratander's device was the Goddess of Opportunity—according to the Romans a female, but according to the Greeks, a male deity.

Valentinus Curio.

His real name was Schaffner (steward), which he latinised into Curio. He set up his printing-press about 1521, and aimed at producing well-executed and elegant work. He printed from 1521 to 1532. He must have died in 1533, for in that year a book was published, apud Walderum, ex officina Curioniana.

His device was a tablet on which a hand, holding a pencil, traces a third line between two vertical lines.

ANDREAS CRATANDER. NO. 8. GRÆCÆ LITERATURÆ DRAGMATA.

Books printed by him are :

1. Dyonisii Afri de situ orbis. 1522.
2. Compendium grammaticæ græcæ Jac. Ceperini.
3. Georgii Trapezuntii rhetoricorum libri S.
4. Strabonis geographicorum liber primus.
5. Die Ander Tafel des Rheinstroms.

1522. DYONISII AFRI DE SITU ORBIS.

Hieronimus Curio.

He was the son of the above, and printed in partnership with Walder. Among his works are :

1. Theod. Bibliandri de optimo genere Grammaticorum Hebraicorum commentarius. 1542.
2. Claudii Cantiunculæ Topica legalia. 1545.
3. Lexicon Græcolatinum. 1548.
4. Georgii Trapezuntii Rhetoricorum libri. 1552.

John Bebel.

He began printing at Basle circa 1524, in which year he printed for Wattinschnee, a Basle publisher, a Greek New Testament; in 1534 he printed at the expense of Michael Isengrin and Henry Petri a Hebrew Bible with the Latin translation by Sebastian Münster. In 1536 he was associated with Cratander and John Herwagen in the printing of the works of Galen, 1526. JOHN BEBEL. ANNOTATIONES PETRI MOSELLANI.

which appeared in 1538 in five volumes, illustrated with initials by Holbein, and beautifully printed. With Thomas Wolff he printed "The Book of the Sacrament," by Carolstadius (it opposed the teaching of Luther), which publication so incensed the magistrates that the two printers were imprisoned, and did not regain their freedom for some time. And anent this book, the magistrates issued the order that thenceforth no book was to be printed without having first been submitted to the censors, and that no publication must appear without the printer's name. In 1527 Bebel printed for the magistrates 300 copies of a "Mandate concerning holidays, gambling, drinking, cursing and dancing," for printing which he received £3. The last book printed by him is dated 1550—"The Works of Aristoteles."

His device was a palm-tree, with a printer's platen in the branches, under which lies a man, who is supposed to utter the words on the platen: "Do not press poor me to death." This device was occasionally modified; we give two variations.

CHAPTER XXII.

Thomas Platter, Lasius, Robert Winter, and Nicolaus Brylinger.

THOMAS PLATTER, the son of poor parents of Visp, in the canton of Valais, in Switzerland, was born in 1499. He was at first a goatherd, then for years a vagrant scholasticus in various parts of Germany, then a teacher of Hebrew at Zurich, a ropemaker at Basle, and finally set up as a printer in this latter city in partnership with Oporinus, the latter's brother-in-law, Ruprecht Winter, and a clever compositor, Balthasar Ruch, or Rauch. Winter, or rather his wife, found the money to establish the business, which they did by purchasing Cratander's business, his plant and stock. But the undertaking did not prosper; disputes arose among the partners, and they separated, Oporinus, Winter, and Platter carrying on printing, each on his own account. Eventually Platter gave up the business and became headmaster of the gymnasium or college at Basle on "Burg," or the present Munsterplatz at Basle, which college is still carried on on the lines and rules laid down by him. Of Platter's impressions but few are on record or have come down to us; the following are all that are known:

LASIUS' DEVICE.

1. Julii Pollucis onomasticum . . . cum prefatione Simonis Grynæi ad ludimagistros. Ex inelyta Germaniæ Basilea per Balthasarem Lasium<sup>1</sup> et Thomam Platterum, mense Martio 1536. 4°.

2. Lucubrationum in M. Tulli Ciceronis orationes aliquot, pars prima. Basileæ per Thomam Platterum et Balthasarem Lasium. 1536, mense Martio. 4°.

3. Joannis Calvini Christianæ religionis institutio. Basileæ per Thomam Platterum et Balthasarem Lasium, mense Martio. 1536. 8vo.

4. J. Oecolampadii et H. Zwinglii epist. libri IV. Basileæ per Thomam Platterum et Balthasarem Lasium, mense Martio, 1536. 8vo (?).

The above four works, it will be noticed, were all printed in the month of March, 1536. No. 4 appears to have been the first printed, for in a letter addressed by Theodore Bibliander to Ulric, Duke of Wurtemberg, and George, Count of Wurtemberg and Montbeliard, the writer says that this was the first undertaking of the two parties, whom he calls: Honesti cives Basilienses et perinde typographi diligentes. There is a copy of this book in the public library of Geneva, originally given by Oporinus to William Farel.

5. M. reliquos M. T. Ciceronis orationes lucubrationum pars altera. Basileæ, etc., as above.

6. Joannis Calvinii epistolæ duæ, prior de fugiendis impiorum illicitis sacris et puritate religionis observanda; altera de Christiani hominis officio in sacerdotiis Papalis ecclesiæ vel administrandis vel abiiciendis. Basileæ, per Balthasarem Lasium et Thomam Platterum, mense Martio, 1537. 4<sup>o</sup>.

7. Homeri vita ex Plutarcho in Latinum translata per Joannem Rhellicanum unacum ejusdem annotationibus. Basileæ, etc., as above. 8vo.

8. Medicorum schola, hoc est Claudii Galeni Isagoge sive Medicus. Ejusdem definitionum medicinalium liber, græce et latine. Basileæ, etc., as above. 8vo.

9. In omnes de arte rhetorica M. T. Ciceronis libros doctissimorum virorum commentaria. Basileæ ex officina Roberti Winter et Thomæ Platteri 1541, mense Martio. Fol.

10. ΤΗΣ ΚΑΙΝΗΣ ΔΙΑΘΗΚΗΣ ΑΠΑΝΤΑ. Novi Testamenti omnia. Basileæ per Thomam Platterum. Anno 1538, mense Martio. 8vo. With Wattenschnee's device. A second edition appeared in 1540; a third in 1543.

11. ΙΠΠΟΚΡΑΤΟΥΣ ΠΕΡΙ ΑΙΜΟΡΡΟΙΔΩΝ. ΓΑΛΕΝΟΥ ΠΕΡΙ ΠΕΠΟΝΘΟΤΩΝ ΒΙΒΛΙΑ VI. Basileæ per Thomam Platterum, anno 1540, mense Sept. 8vo.

Copies of Nos. 3 and 4 are in the public library at Basle.

Robert Winter.

He, as we have seen, printed first in partnership with Platter, Oporinus, and Ruch, but afterwards on his own account separately. Of the works thus printed we know of three only.

1. Julii Pollucis Onomasticon, Hoc est instructissimum rerum et synony-morum Dictionarium, nunc primum Latinitate donatum, Rodolpho Gualthero Tigurino Interprete. Una cum Indice. Cum gratia et privilegio. Apud Robertum Winter, Basileæ An. 1541. Colophon. Basileæ in officina Roberti Winter, mense Septembri, Anno M.D.XLI. On the last page Platter's device, without the mottoes.

This Latin translation of No. 1, printed by Platter and Lasius, is a handsome volume of 479 pages, large 8vo, exclusive of Index (12 and a half pages). All the chapters have ornamental woodcut initials. We have a well-preserved copy lying before us; it has the ornamental book-plate of G. E. Wagner, with the date 1777 written above it.

2. Gast, J. (Brisac.) In Orationem Dominicam saluberrimæ ac sanctissimæ meditationes ex libris catholicorum patrum selectæ, hoc periculosissimo tempore cum primis utiles ac necessariae. With device. Basileæ, Robert Winter. 1543.

3. Joh. Oecolampadii et Huldrichi Zwingli epistolarum libri IV. 1536.

Nicolaus Brylinger.

He was the first printer who issued editions of the Latin authors with all objectionable passages omitted, editions which since then have been called editiones expurgatæ.

Of books printed by him we mention the following three :

1. Novum Testamentum græce post ultimam aeditionem D. Erasmi recognitum et castigatum. Basil. apud Brylingerum. 1543. With device.

NICOLAUS BRYLINGER'S DEVICE.

2. Terentius, P. Commoediæ sex elegantissimæ cum Donati comment. Basil. N. Brylinger. 1555.

3. Biblia Græco-Latina. 4 vols. Thick 8vo. Basil, ex Off. Brylingeriana, 1582.

In 1543 he printed for Oporinus the Koran, the sale of which, however, was for a long time prohibited. Oporinus himself was imprisoned for publishing so heretical a book. The sapient politicians of the day were even afraid the publication might lead to a war with Turkey. For fuller particulars see under Oporinus (p. 184).

CHAPTER XXIII.

John Oporinus.

JOHN OPORINUS (which name was a kind of translation into Greek of his original name, Herbster, which means a man engaged in the autumn, or vintage) was born on the 25th of January, 1507. His father, Hans Herbster, was a clever painter, who, however, made but a poor living by his art. John's grandfather, indeed, had been a wealthy man at Strasbourg, where he had held the office of a magistrate. But Hans Herbster had been expelled from his father's house when the latter discovered that his son, instead of pursuing his studies with a notary public, devoted himself to painting. Young Herbster had to leave home, and found work with a painter in Switzerland. On the father's death the heir was sought for; inquiries were made of his master after a young man from Strasbourg. But the former, afraid of losing the workman whose paintings yielded him large profits, denied all knowledge of him, and thus Hans lost his patrimony. He went to Basle, where he soon, by his good conduct, obtained the favour of many. He married Barbara Lupfart, who, however, brought him no dowry but her domestic virtues, and it was only with difficulty he maintained his family of three daughters and one son, John.

As John grew up his father was anxious to secure him a better fate than his own, and to bring him up to the profession for which his own father had destined him. Young John learned the rudiments of knowledge by the side of his father's easel. When he grew up he was sent to Strasbourg, for there he could live with other poor students, sing for his bread, and study. Under his clever teacher, Gebwyler, John made great progress in Latin and Greek. Thus four years went by, when he returned to Basle, where there were many learned men, and he was sufficiently advanced to profit by their teaching. But poverty drove him to seek employment with the Abbot of St. Urban,<sup>1</sup> where he taught the young people who were destined eventually to enter the monastery. There he made the acquaintance of Xylotectus, a canon of Lucerne, and a great friend of science and truth. Love of study and of the new light of the Reformation bound the new friends closely together. Xylotectus was unwilling to remain any longer in the Catholic Lucerne; he abandoned his large income, married, and went to Basle. John, tired of his monastic life, accompanied him.

At Basle Oporinus, as he had now translated his name, worked hard at copying the Greek authors, which Frobenius printed. His friend Xylotectus died of the plague, and Oporinus, in order to honour his memory, married his widow, he being then a young man of twenty and she an old and ill-tempered woman. He prepared himself for much domestic misery, and would often say that he was like Socrates, who learned philosophy from Xantippe. He lived very poorly. At one time he was a schoolmaster at St. Leonard's, and then at the gymnasium, or college, under the headmastership of Thomas Platter, mentioned above. But Oporinus strove to improve his condition. Oecolampadius advised him to study medicine. Paracelsus was then at Basle. Oporinus became his assistant in the hope of learning his great secrets. Oporinus suffered much in the service of this clever, but really uncultured man, who showed no inclination to teach his apprentice anything; he was, moreover, given to drink, and when excited with wine he would in the middle of the night, by the bedside of Oporinus, who slept in the same room, flourish his sword against ghosts, so that his poor assistant was frequently in fear of death. Then Paracelsus would pull him out of bed and dictate to him. Thus Oporinus had served him for two years when Paracelsus promised him, if he would accompany him into Alsace, to teach him how to prepare his opium pills. Oporinus served him for two years longer, but was never told the secret. The repulsive habits of his master at last compelled Oporinus to return to his old woman at Basle, all the benefit he derived from his four years' service being a packet of the doctor's opium pills. But these were after all to save his life, for being on one occasion, when he was not very well, driven out of his house by his wife's vixenish tongue, he became much worse, in consequence of spending the night in the open air. Whilst lying very ill in bed and quite alone, he suddenly thought of the opium pills, swallowed three of them, and wrapped himself up in his blankets again. His wife on coming home and expecting to find him dead, on the contrary saw he was on the mend. Soon after she died herself while on a visit at Lucerne, to which town she went every year to settle her money matters. Of her property, which would have been very useful to him, he got none; her relations managed to appropriate it all.

His learning was to give him what his marriage had denied him. Simon Gryænus<sup>1</sup> began to take an interest in him, and on his recommendation Oporinus was appointed professor of Greek and headmaster of the college in the street of St. Augustine. Brighter days seemed in store for him, his success as a teacher was immense; he married again. Yet fate would never allow him to be thoroughly happy. Erasmus after the death of Frobenius had left Basle, but his fondness for this city brought him back to it after a time, and Oporinus had been elected to welcome him, in the presence of the whole university, in a Latin speech, and to present to him the wine of honour and other marks of distinction the city had decreed for Erasmus. Oporinus had well learnt by heart his speech. But when he saw the honoured guest, who offered him his hand, he, in the joy of his heart, pressed it so hard, that Erasmus, who suffered from gout, screamed out: "How you hurt me!" This drove the whole speech out of the head of Oporinus. But when Erasmus spoke to him kindly, and insisted on his drinking first out of the cup containing the wine of honour, Oporinus recovered himself, and performed his allotted task to the satisfaction of all.

But Oporinus's academic career was only of two years' duration, for his new wife with her three extravagant sons was too liberal with his money, as his first had, apparently, been too stingy with hers. He had to look out for larger earnings. The great incomes made by Herwagen and other printers were tempting. Oporinus and his cousin Ruprecht Winter,<sup>1</sup> Thomas Platter, and a clever compositor, Balthasar Ruch (Lasius) entered into partnership, purchased with Winter's money the printing-office which Cratander had carried on at the sign of "The Bear," and set to work. But disputes arose among the partners, the business did not pay, the partnership was dissolved, and Winter, Lasius, and Platter began to work on their own account. On Winter's failure Oporinus bought his presses and stock, and carried on the business. But he was not equal to it, he got into debt; he moreover paid his workmen too liberally, spent much in charity, and supported his sisters and his old father, who, having adopted the Reformed creed, had conscientious scruples about painting any more portraits of saints. But he laboured with unexampled diligence, upwards of seven hundred works are said to have come from under his presses, and no single book was issued by him which he had not corrected with his own hand. He printed and published the works of Aeschylus, Sophocles, Euripides, Theocritus, Aristoteles, Diodorus Siculus, Pausanias, Isocrates, Hesiod, and Homer. Also of his own, Annotations to Cicero, Pliny, translations of Theocritus and Xenophon, and compiled elaborate indexes to most of these works. Authors were anxious to have their works printed by him; Vesalius would not entrust his book on Anatomy to any other printer. Oporinus at one time employed more than fifty hands; he carried on business twenty-eight years.

<sup>1</sup> This eminent philologer and theologian was born at Vehringen (Hohenzollern Sigmaringen); he died of the plague at Basle in 1541, aged 48 years, and is buried by the side of Oecolampadius; Myconius wrote his epitaph. He visited England, and edited many of the ancient writers with prefaces and commentaries. The Frey-Gryæus Institute at Basle commemorates his name.

In 1564 his second wife died; she had been a bad manager, but otherwise an affectionate and good wife. He then married the widow of Herwagen, the younger (see ante, p. 129), who was rich in affection, good sense, and money. But, unfortunately, she died four months after the wedding. Then the daughter of Bonifacius Amerbach (see ante, p. 30) gave him her hand, and she, anxious to render his old age free from care, induced him to relinquish the printing business. He died on the 6th of July, 1568. He was buried in the Cathedral of Basle, near Oecolampadius, Simon Grynæus, and Sebastian Münster. He repeatedly varied his device; we present two variations. In one of the last works printed by him his device is a basilisk, crowned with the monogram SA., the meaning of which is uncertain.

"Si daret autumnus mihi nomen, ὀπορινός essem, Horrida si brumæ sidera, χειμερινός."

After this distich Winter (winter) also turned his name into Greek, and Autumn and Winter thus entering into partnership, was in those days looked upon as a portentous omen.

[To Face p. 182.]

Of the works printed by Oporinus we name the following :

1. Hesiodi opera quæ extant item, Joannis grammat. cognom. Tzetzis scholia græca in eadem omnia Hesiodi opera. 2 vols. 1542.
2. Joh. Lodovici Valentini. De Virtute fidei. 1543.
3. Plinius C. Secundus. Liber de viris in re militari et administranda republica illustribus. 12mo Index. At end: Basileæ, ex officina Joannis Oporini, Anno salutis humanæ M.D.XLVII. Mense Septembris. The Lives are in Roman, the commentaries thereon in Italian type, both beautifully clear in the copy now lying before the present writer.
4. Nicolai Gerbelli. Pro Declaratione, etc. 1550.
5. Confessio Saxonica. Confessio (Augustana mutata) doctrinæ Saxoni-

10. Prædinius, Regenerus. Opera omnia. Cum rerum et verb. indice. Contains some fine initial letters. Bas. 1563. Fol.

11. Hesiodi opera, Gr. et lat. Ed. Oporinus. Bas. 1564.

12. Although the book we are about to mention was printed long before most of the above named, we introduce it last because there is a story attached to it, which shows the mental darkness of that age in a striking manner. About 1542 Bibliander<sup>1</sup> had come to Basle to have his Latin translation of the Koran published. Oporinus was prepared to undertake the work but unexpected obstacles arose. The censors of the Press refused their imprimatur, because they considered it objectionable to print so heretical a book. The question was submitted to the Town Council. They sought the advice of the clergy and the university. These bodies were divided in their opinions. The opponents maintained that the town would bring eternal infamy on itself by printing so damnable a book, and public-house politicians foresaw a war with Turkey for doing it. Oporinus was actually sent to prison for having merely entertained the thought of it. However, in the end, the mediation of the towns of Zurich and Strasbourg, and finally of Luther himself, induced the government of Basle to allow the book to be printed, adding to the sanction the express condition that the Koran should not be sold at Basle. The book appeared in 1543, with a præmonitio by Melanchthon, and an apologia pro editone, together with a refutation of its heretical dogmas.

<sup>1</sup> Theodore Bibliander (b. 1504, d. 1564) was professor of theology at Zurich. As he differed on the question of grace from the doctrine adopted by the Protestants, he was suspended. Besides his Latin translation of the Koran, we have of him a treatise: De ratione communi omnium linguarum et litterarum. 1548.

To give a complete list of the books printed by Oporinus would take up too much space, but the reader, curious on the point, may find one in a book, which is in the library of the Frey-Grynæus Institute at Basle (marked Z. vii. 15), and entitled, Oratio de ortu, vita et obitu Joannis Oporini Basiliensis Typographicorum Germaniæ Principis, recitata in Argent. inensi Academia ab Joanne Henrico Heinzelio Augustano. Authore Andrea Jocisco Silesio, Adiunximus librorum per Jo. Oporinum excusorum Catalogum. Jocish was the personal friend of Oporinus, and had nearly all the information he gives from the latter's own mouth.

CHAPTER XXIV.

The Brothers Gemusæus.

THE brothers Hieronymus and Polycarpus Gemusæus and Balthasar Han had purchased Oporinus's printing business, and continued it under the style of officina Oporiniana. Up to 1594 we find works issuing from their press. They used the device of Oporinus, though they occasionally slightly varied it, in the manner shown here. The device, as it appears in Baleus, Catalogus Scriptorium Britannicæ, 1557, is curious. Equally curious, and more elegant, is the device as seen in Prædinius, Opera omnia. 1563.

DEVICE OF THE BROTHERS GEMUSÆUS.

The Brothers Gemusæus were the sons of the famous professor of physical science of that name. Their mother was Sibylla Cratander, the daughter of Andreas Cratander, the printer. Hieronymus married Christina Brylinger, the daughter of the printer Nicolaus Brylinger. Polycarpus died in 1572, and Hieronymus in 1610 of the plague.

John Walder.

John Walder, a native of Zurich, settled in 1532 at Basle, where he married Curio's widow. He printed from 1533 to 1541.

WALDER'S DEVICE—NICOL. PEROTTI CORNUCOPIÆ.

1. De Mundo, Aristotelis, lib. I., Philonis, lib. I., Græc., Lat., Gulielmo Budæo interprete, etc. 1533. 8vo.
2. Budæi de studio instituendo et Philologia libri. 1533. 8vo.
3. Franc. Mar. Grapald de partib. ædium. 1533. 4°.
4. Hermol. Barbari Castigationes in Plin. Histor. 1534. 4°.
5. Platonis Opera, Græce. 1534. Fol.
6. Virgil. Bucolic. Georgic. and Aeneid. 1534. Fol.
7. Athenæi Deipnosophistarum Libri XV. 1535. Fol.

8. Sphæræ atque Astrorum Coelestium ratio, natura et motus. 1536. 4°.
9. Novum Testamentum. 1536.
10. Nicol. Perotti Cornucopiæ T. 1536.
11. Veterinariæ Medicinæ Libri Duo. 1537. 4°.
12. Claud Ptolemæi Μεγάλη Σύνταξις sive Almagestum Græce. 1538. 4°.
13. Lexicon Græco-Latinum, editore Simone Grynæo. 1539. 4°.
14. Manuel. Moschopuli Græc. Grammatica. 1540. 4°.
15. Aristotelis et Xenophontis ethica politica. Also, in the same volume, Xenophontis œconomica etc. 1540.

He bestowed great care on works printed in Greek by him; they were distinguished for accuracy and elegance. He had a lawsuit with Isengrin and H. Petri on account of a Greek lexicon he had printed.

Bartholomew Westheimer.

He became a Basle citizen in 1531. The first book printed by him, Artopeus, Evangelicæ Conciones, is dated 1533. In 1536 he issued :

1. M. Terentii Varronis de lingua latina libri tres.
2. Conciliatio Sacræ Scripturæ et Patrum. 1536. 8vo.
3. Aristotel. de longit. et brevit. Vitæ. 1536. 8vo.

4. John Loniceri, Methodus Græcæ Gram. 1536. 8vo.
5. Juveni presbyteri libri III. 1537. 8vo.
6. Justin. Histor. 1543. 8vo.

Also, without date: Ravisius Textor J. Epitome brevis epithetorum omnium quæ a poetis autoribusque attributa rebus aut sunt aut adjici apte possunt. His device was an arrow standing on its point, a fish winding round it.

Thomas Guarinus.

He was a native of Tournay, born in 1529. He first settled at Lyons as a bookseller, but in 1557 we find him at Basle, where he married Elizabeth Isengrin, the daughter of the printer of that name. On his father-in-law's death he took over his printing business; many bibles issued from his presses, to which Tobias Stimmer supplied the illustrations. We also have of him: Plutarch. Moralia quæ usurpantur. De græca in latin. linguam transcr. Guil. Xylandro interpret. 3 vols. 1572. His device was a palm-tree.

Paul Queeck.

He is first mentioned among Basle citizens in 1561, and is supposed to have died between 1568 and 1571. His device was a tree on which a bird is perched, and occasionally a Janus head.

Queeck printed chiefly for other printers and booksellers.

Samuel König.

In 1571 he married Queeck's widow. He had in 1570 printed: Belli Dithmarsici ab inlyto Daniæ rege Friderico II. et illustrissimis Holsatiæ Ducibus Johanne et Adolpho fratribus gesti . . . descriptio duobus libris comprehensa. His device is a winged female, holding a lamb in her arms; a satyr stands beside her. There is no indication that this König was in any way connected with the family of the same name, who in the seventeenth century became so famous at Basle as printers and publishers.

Peter Davantes.

He is mentioned as a bookseller at Basle, circa 1572. His device is thus given by Silvestre.

John Schröter.

He printed at Basle from 1597. His device, as given by Stockmeyer and Reber, is a crown, with a legend above. Dr. Bernoulli says he has not found this device on any of Schröter's books.

Jean Dubois.

Delalain, in his "Inventaire des marques d'imprimeurs et de libraires," Paris, 1888, mentions Jean Dubois, or John Sylvius, as a bookseller at Basle in 1583. But no particulars as to his life are known. His device is a rather picturesque rebus of his name. It was afterwards adopted by Franz Forest (1587-91), a bookseller at Basle, and afterwards by Jacob Stoer of Geneva, as it is found in books of that printer, dated 1635 and 1639.

CHAPTER XXV.

Peter Perna.

HE was a native of Lucca, and born in 1522. In 1542 he was settled at Basle, where, in 1544, he purchased from Thomas Platter, who had been appointed head-master of the Basle Gymnasium, his printing plant; and among the books he printed are two Latin editions of Machiavelli's "Prince" (1560 and 1580), which, however, excited much bigoted opposition. In 1560 he also printed: Satanæ strategemata libri octo. In 1562: Bucerus, metaphrasis et enarratio in Epist. Pauli ad Romanos. This volume has a very elaborate specimen of his usual device. A female figure, carrying a lamp in an oval with the legend: Lucerna pedibus meis verbum tuum. But about 1572 he adopted a totally different device, the book Correttione d'alcune cose del dialogo delle lingue di Benedetto Varchi per L. Castelvetro, has for its device an owl standing on an overturned urn, with the word KEKPIKA underneath, and Stampata in Basilea per Pietro Perna l'anno del Signore M.D.L.XXXVII.

In 1576 Perna printed: Poetica d'Aristotele Vulgarizzata, et sposta per L. Castelvetro, Stampata in Basilea ad istanza di Pietro di Sedabonis l'anno del Signore M.D.L.XXXVI. The same device and word as in the preceding.

In 1578: Petrarch, Fr. Sechs Triumph, in welchen mon fein Kurzweiliges weiss zu grossem lust erspiegeln Kan d. gemeinen Lauff, Stand, Wesen u. Ende des menschl. Lebens. Mit Holzschnitten, Bas. Peter Perna. 1578.

In 1582 there was published in small 4°: Le Rime del Petrarca brevemente sposte per Lodovico Castelvetro. Con Privilegio del Re christianissimo. On the title-page, in an ornamental border, is the device shown above, and "In Basilea ad istanza di Pietro di Sedabonis, M.D.L.XXXII." There is no printer's name, but the device as also the editor's, being the same as those of the works quoted above, we may safely assume that Perna was the printer of this volume.

Perna is said to have been obliged to leave his native country on account of his heretical opinions; he evidently entertained Protestant opinions, and in the Dedication prefixed to his "Paulus Jovius," of 1578, he himself states that, as a printer, it was his chief object to issue theological works as free from mistakes as possible, so that he might, so to speak, be a notary public against the many errors which had crept into the Church. When the celebrated de Thou, President of the Parliament in Paris, and author of the History of his own Time, was at Basle in 1579, he visited Perna's printing office, and found its master, though then an old man, actively engaged therein. Perna died in 1582.

CHAPTER XXVI.

Homes of the Basle Printers.

IN some cases the houses occupied by the Printers of Basle, enumerated in this work, have been indicated in the biographical notices accompanying the lists of the books printed by them. But as to bibliophiles, and especially to bibliophile pilgrims—of whom this very publication should create many—more precise and fuller details may be acceptable, most acceptable indeed, particularly when the houses can still be identified, a record, as complete as it is now possible to make it, is given in this concluding chapter, under the names of the printers, arranged in alphabetical order.

N.B. Strasse or Gasse means street ; Gässlein (the diminutive of Gasse) small or narrow street, lane ; Platz, a square or open space ; Berg, hill ; Hof, mansion or large house ; Vorstadt, suburb ; zum or zur, at the. Until houses were numbered, a practice which was not introduced at Basle, as even in London it was not, until about the middle of the last century, they were known by their signs or appellations. Names following those of the printers, therefore, are those of the houses they occupied. Where identification was possible, the street and present number of the house are given.

I. Amerbach, John : Kaiserstuhl, now Rheingasse (Little Basle), 23 ; Stift, adjoining the garden of the Carthusian monastery (see p. 29) ; zum Sessel, now Todtengässlein, 3.

II. Apiarius, Samuel : Printing office in St. Johann Vorstadt.

III. Bebel, John : Engelhof, now Nadelberg, 3.

IV. Bergmann von Olpe, John : Sevogelshof, Münsterplatz ; zum Oelbaum, now Weisse Gasse, 18 ; an der Schwellen, also called zum Mulbaum (Mulberry tree), now Bäumleingasse, 12.

V. Besicken, John : St. Alban's Vorstadt.

VI. Brylinger, Nicolaus : Rothe Hof, now Fischmarkt, 10 ; printing office on the Heuberg.

VII. Cratander, Andreas : zum Schwarzen Bären, St. Petersberg (see ISENGRIN).

VIII. Curio, Valentine : Heuberg.

Curio, Hieronymus (son of the above) : Heuberg ; St. Alban Vorstadt.

IX. Episcopus, Nicolaus : zum Sessel, now Todtengässlein, 3 (see AMERBACH) ; zum Luft, now Bäumleingasse, 18, and Luftgässlein, 2, 4.

Episcopus, Nicolaus, jun., and his brother Eusebius, continued the printing business in the house zum Sessel. Eusebius had a dwelling-house in St. Johann Vorstadt.

X. Flaccus, Martin : Steinen Vorstadt.

XI. Froben, John : zum Sessel, which Froben in 1507 purchased of Amerbach ; in 1522 he acquired of the heirs of John Petri a granary in the St. Johann Vorstadt, which he used as a bookstore ; in 1521 he had purchased the houses zur alten Treue, now Nadelberg, 15, 17 ; in 1526 he purchased a large garden in the Neue Vorstadt (since 1871 Hebelstrasse), probably the one now belonging to H. Buxtorf-Falkeisen. He must also have had a garden in the Malzgasse, since we are told of Erasmus that he liked taking a walk in Froben's garden in that street. In 1527 his son, Hieronymus, purchased the property called Arow, now Petersberg, 27, which he sold four years after to purchase the house then called zu Rin, but better known as zum Luft (see EPISCOPIUS), the house in which Erasmus lived when he finally settled at Basle, and where he died. Ambrosius and Aurelius Froben, the sons of Hieronymus, also lived and carried on the printing business in the same house.

XII. Furter, Michael : purchased in 1483 a house in the Rheingasse (Little Basle) ; in 1500 he and his wife bought the house zur Monen, now called zum Halbmond, Freiestrasse, 3. In 1491 he had hired a shop, zum Schlüssel, now Freiestrasse, 25.

XIII. Gemusæus, Hieronymus, and Polycarpus : zum schönen Haus, now

Nadelberg, 6, originally Oporinus' printing office. Felix Platter, in his description of Basle, calls the house Jemusaei Hof.

XIV. Gengenbach, Pamphilus : zum kleinen Rothen Löwen, now Freiestrasse, 31.

XV. Guarinus, Thomas : zur Krone, now called zur Mücke, Freiestrasse, 45.

XVI. Herwagen, John : zur Alten Treue, and garden in the Neue Vorstadt, which had belonged to Froben (see supra). In 1531 he exchanged the garden for one near the Preachers' Convent in the Spitalstrasse, then called Lottergasse. In 1533 he purchased a house in the Neue Vorstadt.

XVII. Isengrin, Michael : zum Falkenberg, now Freiestrasse, 51. He afterwards bought the house zum Schwarzen Bären from Bartholomew Westheimer, then a priest at Mulhouse, who afterwards became a printer at Basle. The Schwarze Bär (see CRATANDER, ante) now forms a part of the houses 13 and 15, St. Petersgasse.

XVIII. Kessler, Nicolaus : zum Blumen, now St. Petersberg, 37, which had belonged to Richel (see infra), and whose daughter Kessler had married. From the year 1498 his shop was at the house zum Schlüssel (see FURTER, supra).

XIX. König, Samuel : zur Schufflen and Hörnlin's, then two houses, now forming No. 2, Münsterberg, and called zur Schaufel and Spiess. (Schufflen is a dialectic corruption of Schaufel—shovel).

XX. Lamparter, Nicolaus : in 1506 he purchased the house, known as Appenzell, on the market-place, now Freiestrasse, 1.

XXI. Lasius, Bartholomew : zur Herrenfluh, St. Alban Vorstadt. Afterwards zum Schwarzen Bären.

XXII. Oporin, John : zum Schönen Haus, now Nadelberg, 6 ; zum Igel, Freiestrasse, 57, still bearing that name. He also had a house in the Malzgasse, and the dwelling zum Hohen Hus, now St. Petersgraben, 29, together with a garden and tower in the town moat.

XXIII. Parcus, Jacob : zum Tanneneck, now St. Petersberg, 32 ; corner-house of Weisse Gasse and Lampartergasse, now Streitgasse.

XXIV. Perna, Peter : printing office in St. Johann Vorstadt.

XXV. Petri, John : Granary ze Crütz, in the Rheinhalde, now St. Johann Vorstadt, 34, which he sold to Froben. Petri is supposed to have lived and had his printing office on the Heuberg.

Petri, Adam : zum langen Pfeffer in the Weisse Gasse, 28 ; zum Mulbaum

(see BERGMAMN VON OLPE). His son Henry, and his grandsons Sextus and Sebastian, had their printing offices in the Weisse Gasse, and throughout the seventeenth century the house, zum langen Pfeffer, was known as the "book-house" of the Petris. Sebastian also took over the printing business of Hieronymus Curio (see ante) in the St. Alban Vorstadt, and owned an estate at Mönchenstein, a village about three miles south of Basle. Having been ennobled by Charles V., he and his descendants henceforth took the name of Henricpetri.

XXVI. Platter, Thomas : zum Schwarzen Bären (having with his partners, Ruch, Oporinus, and Winter, purchased Cratander's business) ; zum Gejagd and two other houses, top of Freiestrasse. He also owned the estate of Gundeldingen, at a short distance south of Basle. He also had a shop in the Eisengasse, near the bridge over the Rhine.

XXVII. Pröpstlin, Ulric : Augustinergasse (1476).

XXVIII. Queck, Paul : near St. Martin's Church, next to a house called Glockenberg, a corner-house ; a house in the Gerbergasse.

XXIX. Richel, Bernhard : zum Blumen (afterwards Kessler's—see ante), now St. Petersberg, 37.

XXX. Ruppel, Bertoldus, of Hanau : zum Palast, Freiestrasse, 54.

N.B.—This fact was not known to Stockmeyer and Reber, and information thereof reached me after the first sheet of this book had already been printed off. Hence the reader is requested to correct the statement on page 2 that no printer of the name of Ruppel is known in the early history of printing at Basle. The above address is taken from the list of Basle taxpayers in 1477, and runs : Berchtold Röpel (sometimes his name is spelt Rippler), the printer at the Palast in the Freiestrasse. The Register of Deaths in the cathedral of Basle thus records the death of his wife : Obii. Honesta Domina Magdalena quondam Bertholdi Ripplers, impressoris.

XXXI. Schröter, Johann : printing office in Steinen Vorstadt.

XXXII. Walder, Johann : printing office on the Heuberg.

XXXIII. Wattinschnee, Johann : zum rothen Ring, now Fischmarkt, 9 ; lower Freiestrasse, on the Birsig side, i.e., on the west side.

XXXIV. Wenssler, Michael : zum Mulbaum (see BERGMANN VON OLPE, ante) ; zum Luft (see FROBEN, ante) ; dwelling-house in St. Alban Vorstadt.

XXXV. Westheimer, Bartholomew : zum Schwarzen Bären (see CRATANDER, ante).

XXXVI. Winter, Robert : purchased in 1544 a house in the St. Johann Vorstadt ; he already possessed a house in the Aeschen Vorstadt, and the house zum Pflug, Freiestrasse, 38, which he decorated with wall paintings, some of which were discovered with the date 1540 when the house was pulled down in 1892. He also owned meadows and a barn at MuttENZ, a village about three miles south-east of Basle, which property he sold in 1542.

XXXVII. Wolff, Thomas : he purchased in 1522 for twelve florins the guild zum Schlüssel, Freiestrasse, 25, and Schlüsselberg, 1. The house now belongs to the Corporation (see FURTER, ante).

Addenda.

THE following titles of books were obtained too late to be inserted in their proper places in the body of the work :

BIEL AND WENSSLER (p. 7).

Gasparini Parmensis Epistolæ. 4°. (No date.)

1477. Bonifacii VIII. Opera, viz., Sext. Decretal. Fol.

FLACCUS (p. 23).

The title of the book referred to on p. 23 as the oldest impression of Flach is "Roberti de Licio opus Quadragesimale."

AMERBACH (p. 27).

1481. Opuscul. Vincent. Bellovac. Fol.

1489. S. Augustin. Explanatio Psalmorum. Fol.

1491. Cassiodor. in Psalmos. Fol.

1492. Sancti Ambrosii Opera. Fol. The text is preceded by a letter from John de Lapide to the printer.

1494. S. Augustin. Sermones. 76 ad fratres in eremo; 35 de Verbis Apostoli; 10 in Epist. I. Johannis; Homiliæ quinquaginta. Fol.

1495. Aur. Augustin. Sermones 256 de Tempore; 51 de Sanctis. Fol.

Aur. Augustin. Opera. 6 vols. Fol. and 4°.

KESSLER (p. 50).

1494. Libri Deflorationum sive excerptionum ex Patrum Augustin. Hieron. Ambros. Gregor. Hilar. Chrysostom. Maxim. Origen. Remig. Cassiodor. Bed. Alcuin. aliorumque doctrina super Evangelia. Fol. This work is attributed to Kessler because it is printed in the same type as that seen in the Homeliarius Doctorum (No. 34, p. 59. ante).

No. 19. Textus Sententiarum (p. 56). A fine copy of this work was in March, 1897, privately sold in London for thirty guineas. Another copy had previously been sold, at public auction, for two hundred guineas. How those printers of old would have been consoled and encouraged, amidst the difficulties under which they produced their books, could they have foreseen the value posterity would place on them !

GENGENBACH (p. 68).

1517. Quinti Horatii Epodon. Illustrated by Ambrosius Holbein.
 1518. Nili Sententiæ morales ; Bilibaldo Pirckheymero interprete. 4°.

FROBEN (p. 87).

1518. Pet. Bembi de imitatione liber, cum Jo. Franc. Pici Mirandulæ opusculis. 4°.
     Homeri Batrachomnomachia. Gr. Latin. 4°.
 1521. Aphthonii Progymnasmata Joan. Maria Casanæo interprete. 4°.
