were Lord Elgin, Mr. Childers, Mr. R. Bruce, M.P., Sir C. Tennant, M.P., Sir G. Campbell, M.P., Mr. J. G. C. Hamilton, M.P., Mr. W. James, M.P., Mr. Haldane, M.P., Mr. C. S. Parker, M.P., and a very large number of other influential Liberals. The cheering of the crowds outside notified the arrival of Mr. and Mrs. Gladstone to those inside the Hall, who appeared at once to show a little excitement. A few popular airs were whistled by solitary individuals, but were not generally taken up. Then ensued another calm, almost immediately succeeded, as the right hon. gentleman and Mrs. Gladstone entered the Hall, by a round of lusty cheering. Both were in evening dress, and on Mrs. Gladstone's left sat Mr. Childers, who also was cordially greeted. The opening observations of the Chairman were brief and to the point. His references to Mr. Gladstone were loudly cheered, and his pleas for a silent hearing for the right hon. gentleman on account of his weak voice were sympathetically received.

Mr. GLADSTONE, who was received with great cheers and waving of hats and handkerchiefs, said—Mr. Cowan, of Beeslack and Electors of Midlothian.
