

[Undated, illustrated (cutting? leaflet?) about bearded Annie Jones-Elliot, "The Esau Lady"].

Publication/Creation

date of publication not identified.

Persistent URL

<https://wellcomecollection.org/works/w5p4en45>

License and attribution

This work has been identified as being free of known restrictions under copyright law, including all related and neighbouring rights and is being made available under the Creative Commons, Public Domain Mark.

You can copy, modify, distribute and perform the work, even for commercial purposes, without asking permission.

Wellcome Collection
183 Euston Road
London NW1 2BE UK
T +44 (0)20 7611 8722
E library@wellcomecollection.org
<https://wellcomecollection.org>

THE "ESAU LADY."

Bearded ladies have at all times been exhibited before the public, but the above is certainly a most striking instance. Miss Annie Jones-Elliott, called the "Esau Lady," was born in 1865, at Marion, Smith County, Virginia. Her parents, or sisters and brothers, showed no sign of more than an ordinary supply of hair. At her birth she was already possessed of a good-sized moustache, rough to the distress of her parents. But when two years old, she proved a godsend to her family—her beard had then fully developed, and she was exhibited in public with great success. She is now a woman of fine physique, her skin is smooth and beautiful, and she has all the accomplishments of one of the fair sex. Her hair and beard are dark brown.