FOR LONG-LONG-LASTING NASAL DECONGESTION

A clinical trial of an isotonic solution of oxymetazoline hydrochloride 0.05 per cent, as a nasal spray, in 100 patients with acute nasal congestion gave excellent or good results in 92 patients. "In about half the patients, twice-a-day medication kept the nasal passages clear all day and all night, and for almost all the remaining patients, thrice daily dosage sufficed for this purpose." (Haines, H. L. (1966), Curr. Ther. Res. 8, 91).

Stringer, reporting on a trial of an isotonic solution containing 0.05 per cent oxymetazoline hydrochloride stated that 30 out of 31 patients obtained relief from nasal congestion "and that the relief was long-lasting in 26 of these patients." (Stringer, C. G. (1964) Practitioner, 192, 270).

A long-lasting nasal decongestant permits comfortable sleep, which, in itself, is therapeutic.
