CONSTABLE (1776-1837)
"The Hay-Wain."

Constable's provisional title for this painting was, "Landscape: Noon." The scene is Constable's birthplace, his father's home at Flatford Mill, pictured in early summer. The clouds are high, the trees ruffled by a slight breeze, and the reflections in the water show the vertical light of noon. The honey-brown of the ground is echoed in the warm tints of the cottage. The painting made a profound impression on the young artists of his day, and was greatly admired by Delacroix.
