WEST INDIA DOCK

After the opening of the London Docks in 1801, the next stage in the development of London's dock system was the building of docks on the Isle of Dogs for the West India trade. These were opened in 1805, with special sheds for sugar and hardwoods. Later, special equipment was installed for unloading bananas. In the view of about 1840 the transit sheds are shown in the distance on the left, and in the foreground on the right. A brig with a small boat alongside is in the immediate foreground, and a man in a boat on the left appears to be hooking floating material from the water. The middle distance is filled with barques, brigs and full-rigged ships.
