Symptoms of Thrush

External

Intense
Itching

Inflammation
of the Vulva

Internal

White, creamy,
odourless discharge
(more than normal).

Inflammation of the vagina.

Burning

Soreness

Thrush is an internal infection, but most women also suffer from irritating external symptoms. It is therefore important to use a combination product to soothe the external itch and treat the internal infection.

internal infection.

Key facts

75% of women suffer from thrush
as some point in their life

If you haven't experienced thrush before or start to suffer from regular attacks you should consult your GP

Thrush is not a sexually transmitted disease, however if you are sexually active you can pass the infection to your partner during sex.

Antibiotics, stress and the use of perfumed soaps are the biggest causes of thrush.

The number one tip is to try and maintain a healthy lifestyle as this can reduce your susceptibility to thrush.

If you suffer from thrush on a recurring basis, it is a good idea to opt for loose clothes and cotton underwear.
