"AIDS will not go away. For every person who voted against Proposition 69, at least one person will die of AIDS. I have been deadly right on the issue. Yes, there were false propaganda put out; but votes and popular opinion do not make right or wrong. Science does. False propaganda does manipulate voters in the short term. However, none of these lies will intimidate the virus."

Presidential candidate Lyndon LaRouche, commenting the 32 percent vote support for Proposition 69, in the June 7 California primary.

AIDS will change the world's economy drastically, Lyndon LaRouche forecasted some years ago. The combined direct and indirect costs would approach, and perhaps surpass the defense budgets of the Western economies some years ahead. In fact, the "Economy of AIDS" is now becoming the issue in the battle against the frightening pandemic. Hospital and medical services will break down unless rapidly scaled up to be able to meet the first bigger waves of AIDS patients now starting to appear on the scene.

That gives us two options. Either we actually mobilize the resources for a real war against HIV — or the institutions and authorities of our societies will have to begin to administrate the AIDS death. The health establishments have until now repeatedly been caught lying about AIDS! In the effort to "stop the panic" and not the virus they have claimed both that "only 5-10 percent of infected persons actually develop the sickness" and "AIDS is only a threat to the individuals in the high-risk groups", despite knowing otherwise. The same health establishments today demand cost-containment as the prime concern in fighting AIDS.

No hospitals but hospices (i.e. death-camps), out-of hospital care, no general testing but free needles and no Apollo-style scientific crash program are therefore on the agenda today. It is an immoral, defeatist agenda, which in the long run will assure the HIV virus victory over mankind, and the extinction of the human species. To see a recent U.S. study on AIDS by admiral Watkins "brag" that in 1988 to date the United States has given the "extraordinary amount of $15 million" to AIDS programs in Africa, knowing any serious estimate would talk about 150 million Africans dying of AIDS, makes you just feel sick.

A nation under attack by an aggressor, in declared war, has no upper limit for its defense costs. Mankind is at war against HIV. It can have no upper limit on the costs to defend itself against that virus. If the economy of a nation does not produce the resources needed for the war effort, that economy has to be changed. The way to do that is of course to mobilize the population behind the cause of the war. As in all wars, the less successful that mobilization is carried out, the more lives are lost to the enemy.

Proposition 69, the ballot referendum calling for traditional public-health measures to be implemented to stop the spread of AIDS, and backed by presidential candidate Lyndon LaRouche, received 32 percent support on the June 7 California primary. That was 3 percent more than Proposition 64 got two years ago, which shows the rapid growth of support for the LaRouche policy among the U.S. population, despite every effort made by the establishments to crush that support.

In an paid half hour, prime time national TV broadcast (June 4) called "Total Victory over AIDS", Lyndon LaRouche presented his plan to wage war to wipe the AIDS virus from the face of the earth. Millions of Americans, both laymen and professionals, responded profoundly to his call to conquer this disease through a scientific crash program. In this documentary, which will be aired several times more in the U.S. before the Democratic Party convention in July, LaRouche states that mankind doesn't have to die, that we can conquer this disease and that he has a good plan for how to do it. To see it is an experience that will deeply move you. You are very welcome to drop by any time on Tuesday, June 14, at Royal Star Hotel, to watch this extraordinary broadcast for yourself.

Welcome!
