accurate information on HIV

The National HIV Prevention Information Service has been set up to help people working in the field of HIV education and prevention.

It is a free service that aims to keep constantly up to date by scanning the literature, interpreting contradictory information and selecting material that helps its users to be more effective in their prevention role.

How can we help you?

- An information resource at the end of the phone (9-5 Monday to Friday), run by skilled information workers familiar with the issues and in touch with the latest developments.

- Lists of references, tailored to your particular needs and interests, gained from key information sources such as journals and newsletters, press cuttings, conference and seminar reports, official documents, and policy and practice guidelines.

- Information sheets assessing the significance of new developments.

- Statistical information.

- Referral and networking service linked to other organisations.

How can you help us?

- Feedback to assist us to improve the services we provide.

- Information about your prevention initiatives so that we can keep others in touch with local activities.

In November 1989 the Health Education Authority agreed to fund the North West Thames Regional Health Authority to develop a national information service on HIV education and prevention. The service is built on the existing information service based at the Region's HIV Project, and has funding for an initial period of two years.

An advisory group with representatives from both the statutory and voluntary sectors has been set up. Its role is to consider how the service can best meet users' needs.
