The work of Robert Mapplethorpe.

Andy Warhol

Produced under exclusive licence from the Robert Mapplethorpe Foundation, a sumptuous hardback week-to-a-page 1993 diary. No fewer than 28 duotone images by the celebrated photographer, some expected, some delightfully surprising - but every one satisfying. 184 x 235mm. RM01 Mapplethorpe Diary £12.99

Mapplethorpe turns his camera on flora to produce a set of five startlingly gorgeous images. Each reproduced on the front of two blank greetings cards, 127 x 176mm. Ten cards supplied with envelopes in a laminated gift box.

RM02 Mapplethorpe Cards £8.99

When Terrence Higgins died with AIDS in 1982, some of his friends were horrified at the lack of relevant support available. They resolved to do something to ensure that people whose lives were affected by HIV and AIDS should be given all the care they need. Established in 1983, The Terrence Higgins Trust is the oldest UK charity working in the field of HIV and AIDS.

It coordinates the efforts of over 1,500 people, the vast majority of whom are volunteers.

From health education for safer sex to prevent the spread of HIV to providing practical, legal and welfare care and counselling support for people living with AIDS - and their families and friends - the Trust is involved in all aspects of the crisis.

When you buy from this leaflet you will be helping the Trust to answer the ever increasing demands on its services. If you possibly can, please top up your order with a donation - there is a need waiting for every extra pound.
