tales of gay sex

condoms are forever

James and Martin have been together for 2 years

After 2 years, maybe we could think about not using condoms

How do you know you can really trust me not to fuck around?

... and anyway, being in a one to one relationship is no protection, it doesn't change what might have happened before we met

But we trust each other

Yeah, but we're just as great a risk to each other as any one night stand

I suppose you're right, but if we both get tested ...

But then there's all the trauma of
a test and what
if we got different results?

And besides, now that I've got used to condoms ...

Yeah ... fancy
a fuck then?

Research shows that a lot of gay men are being infected whilst in a relationship. Asking your partner not to use condoms places an enormous pressure on him to trust you 100%, when in reality such expectations are often not met.

You should also consider how difficult it might be to going back to using condoms, if the relationship ends.
