Positively Primary

Strategies for Approaching HIV/AIDS With Primary School Children

by

Pete Sanders & Clare Farquhar

Primary school teachers are being asked to undertake a potentially crucial role in young children's acquisition of knowledge and attitudes in relation to HIV/AIDS.

Positively Primary aims to help them to prepare for this role by providing not only factual information about HIV/AIDS but also by helping them, through a series of activities, to explore some of the important issues and dilemmas.

Clare Farquhar is an experienced primary school teacher and has carried out research on children's AIDS-related knowledge. She is the author of books on education and has written a book for children about HIV/AIDS.

Pete Sanders works in primary education and has wide experience as an in-service trainer, providing courses on many aspect of education. He is the author of books for both pupils and teachers.

Positively Primary is published by the AIDS charity AVERT and is available at a cost of £8.95 from:
