They need intensive stress care, from aggressive cardiovascular and physical rehab. This is how some people who are HIV-positive are treated. But not being stronger, by such techniques, by better fitness and continuous care by stress family, is it not evidence of stress. In association with the UNAIDS theme of stigma and discrimination, NAT is running a campaign against HIV prejudice – discrimination people living with HIV face on a daily basis. This new initiative encourages the public to examine their own attitudes to those affected by HIV asking: 'ARE YOU HIV PREJUDICED?' Two posters and a leaflet have been produced using real life experiences of those living with HIV and AIDS.

We work with it... so can you

HIV and AIDS at work

Many people are still confused about HIV and AIDS. Much has been said and written about this illness, but it hasn't always been clear or accurate. There's one thing we can all be sure of: working with someone who has HIV or AIDS does not put you at risk of HIV infection.

What is HIV? How is it spread?

This leaflet explains:

KNOW THE FACTS

HIV TRANSMISSION AND TESTING

KNOW THE FACTS! NAT has produced these resources to inform and educate. Our leaflet details the facts about HIV/AIDS. We have also developed HIV resources that are relevant to all employers.
