Proceedings of the AIDS Conference 1986

This book is based on a major conference, held in Newcastle upon Tyne in February, 1986, and sponsored by the UK Department of Health and Social Security and the Haemophilia Society. The conference was designed to provide health care workers with up-to-date factual information about the acquired immune-deficiency syndrome (AIDS). The contributors to each chapter are internationally acknowledged experts from the UK and the USA. Their fully edited papers, in conjunction with reports of questions from the floor, panel discussions and special interest group meetings, ensure full coverage in this volume of current developments, techniques and trends in this important area of modern medicine. This volume will be of interest and value to all those who are concerned with any aspect of the social, nursing and medical management of AIDS throughout the world.
