AIDS

and the

WORKPLACE

A Critical One-Day Conference

26th March 1987
At The Institution of Civil Engineers
Westminster, London

Presented by BNA International Inc., London
A subsidiary of The Bureau of National Affairs, Inc.

Of the 30,000 U.K. citizens now believed to be carriers of AIDS (Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome), it has been predicted that as many as 75% will develop the disease within the coming decade.

But regardless of what occurs in the future, the impact of AIDS is already being felt in the workplace.

AIDS AND THE WORKPLACE is an all-day conference... the first of its kind in the U.K. ... providing you and those responsible for the well-being of their workforce with essential facts and practical guidance that will help you develop appropriate policies.

Specifically, topics to be covered include:

- The medical aspects of AIDS... what it is, how the infection spreads, and methods of protection;
- The legal implications of actions relating to recruitment, dismissal, interpersonal conflicts, and health insurance benefits;
- The 1985 U.K. AIDS regulations and current U.S. regulations;
- Developing policies: features and practice of the U.K. and U.S. experience;
- Union perspectives on issuing guidelines.
