JOBSON'S PATENT LIGHT AND HEAT REFLECTING STOVE.

The continued and increasing demand for this unique Stove manifests its decided superiority for domestic purposes, such as Dining, Drawing, and Breakfast Rooms, Libraries, &c. It is now so well known that a detailed description of the invention would be superfluous, it is enough to enumerate some of its principal advantages; amongst which may be noticed, that the reflection takes place from a comparatively cold surface, and, therefore, the air is not deprived of its moisture, a fact of considerable importance to health, no less than comfort.

In all new inventions economy is a great point in weighing their respective merits, and in this particular the testimony of many individuals of the first respectability, who have fairly tried them, must be considered conclusive. they agree in stating that JOBSON'S STOVE furnishes increased heat, with the saving of nearly one-half the fuel required in ordinary grates. While they afford a vast amount of warmth, the temperature can be regulated at pleasure by a simple and perfectly efficient arrangement, and thorough ventilation is amply provided for. The appearance of the Grate is extremely elegant, and the price, considering its numerous advantages, is also exceedingly moderate.
