furadantin dosage card – Tablet of Nitrofurantoin 50 mg.

The above are average doses. The dose should lie in the range 5–10 mg./kg. (2.2–4.5 mg./lb.) It may be reduced towards the lower limit if nausea occurs, and increased towards the upper if the infection is slow to respond.

'FURADANTIN' is an antibacterial agent for the specific treatment of urinary tract infections. It is active against most organisms responsible for such infections, including many strains of B. proteus and some strains of Ps. pyocyanea.

Bacterial resistance to 'Furadantin' develops very slowly if at all.
'FURADANTIN' cannot cause cross-resistance to antibiotics.

'FURADANTIN' neither interferes with the bacterial flora of the large intestine nor favours the development of yeast infections :

INDICATIONS:

Cystitis	Before and after
Pyelitis (including pyelitis in pregnancy and childhood)	prostatectomy
Pyelonephritis	Infection following
Urethritis	passage of instruments
Prostatitis	Trichomonas infection
	in the male

ADMINISTRATION:

see dosage table overleaf. To avoid nausea the tablets should be taken during meals. In the treatment of chronic infections, 'Furadantin' has been administered continuously for long periods without toxic effects. The longest period reported is 2 years.
