Rosebay (Eriobotrya argentea), to be found growing in the vicinity of coal mines, is a flower acclimatised by the dust-polluted atmosphere. Nature in her mysterious way has rendered this flower immune from blemishes of dust.

IMMUNITY from INFECTION

SUCH diseases as diphtheria, measles, whooping cough, typhoid and paratyphoid fevers, tetanus, small-pox and scarlet fever, can largely be prevented by systematic immunisation with the appropriate toxoids, vaccines or anti-sera.

The success of immunology against acute infectious diseases is undoubted and medical literature provides ample testimony of this fact. It remains only to utilise preventive medicine more widely to educate the nation to a fuller appreciation of its benefits.
