ENTICK (John), an English divine, who published a History of the War which ended in 1763, 5 vols. 8vo.; a History of London, 4 vols. 8vo.; a Latin and English Dictionary; An English Spelling Dictionary, and other works. He died in 1780.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

ENTINOPE, of Candia, an architect of the 5th century, who was one of the chief founders of the city of Venice. When the Goths invaded Italy in 405, Entinope fled into the marshes on the borders of the Adriatic, where he built a house, and his example was followed by other fugitives.—Mor.

ENZINAS (Francis), or Dryander, the Greek word for his name, was born at Burgos, in Spain, about 1515. He renounced popery at Wittemberg, and translated the New Testament into Spanish, for which he was thrown into prison at Antwerp, but contrived to make his escape, and went to Geneva, where he died. He wrote the History of the Low Countries, and of the Religion of Spain, 8vo.—His brother John was also a convert from popery, for which he was burnt at Rome in 1545.—— Bayle. Moreri.

EOBANUS (Elias), professor of the belles-lettres at Erfurt, at Nuremberg, and Marsburg. He died in the latter place in 1540, aged 52. He was a good poet and an honest man, but a hard drinker. His Latin Poems and Epistles have been published.— Moreri.

EON (de l'Etoile), a French fanatic of the 12th century, who pretended to be the son of God. He died in prison, and some of his followers were burnt.—Moreri.

EPAMINONDAS, a Theban general, illustrious for his talents and his virtues. He was the friend of Pelopidas, who by his advice delivered Thebes from the Lacedemonians. This produced a war, in which Epaminondas was appointed head of the Theban armies. He defeated the Spartans at the battle of Leuctra, about 371 B. C. and on his return to Thebes he was seized for violating the law, which ordered every public officer to resign his appointment within a limited period on pain of death. When brought before the senate, he calmly requested that after execution they would inscribe these words on his tomb: "Here lies Epaminondas, who suffered death for saving his country." This reproof so affected his judges, that he was pardoned. He was again placed at the head of the troops, and assisted the Eleans against the Spartans. But in the moment of victory over the latter at Mantinea, he was wounded by a javelin, and expired in triumph on hearing that the Thebans were the victors, B. C. 363.—Corn. Nep. Univ. Hist.

EPAPHRODITUS, bishop of Philippi in Macedonia. He was the bearer of the contributions sent by the christians of Philippi to St. Paul at Rome, who returned them an epistle by him, A. D. 62.—Philip. ii.

EPHORUS, an orator and historian of Cumæ, in Æolia. He was the disciple of Isocrates, by whose advice he wrote a history from the return of the Heraclidæ to Peloponnesus, to the 20th year of Philip of Macedon. He also wrote other pieces, but they are lost.—Voss. Hist. Græc.

Ephraim, the son of Joseph, was born in Egypt about 1710 B.C. He was adopted, together with his brother Manasseh, by Jacob among the tribes.—SS.

Ephrem (St.), a christian father of the 4th century, was born at Nisibis, in Mesopotamia. He settled at Edessa, was ordained deacon, and became superior of a society of monks. He wrote several religious discourses in the Syriac language, which have been translated into Greek and Latin. The best edition of his works is that of Rome, in 1747, in 6 vols. folio. He died in 778.

Epicharmus, a poet and philosopher, was a native of Cos, but carried when a child to Sicily. He was of the Pythagorean school, and is mentioned as being the first writer of comedy. Aristotle attributes to him the invention of the letters Θ and X. He died, aged 97, in the 5th century B. C.—Voss. Poet. Græc.

Epictetus, a stoic philosopher, was a native of Hierapolis, in Phrygia. He was the slave of Epaphroditus, the freedman of Nero. When Domitian banished the philosophers from Rome, he went to Nicopolis, but returned on the death of that tyrant, and was in great esteem with Adrian and Marcus Aurelius. He resided in a cottage with no furniture but an earthen lamp, which sold after his death for 3000 drachmas, near 100*l.* of our money. Here he wrote his Enchiridion, or Compendium of the Stoic Philosophy. It abounds in pure maxims of morality. The best edition is that of Upton, in 2 vols. 4to. London, 1742. Mrs. Carter translated it into English, 1758, 4to. with notes.—Moreri.

Epicurus, the founder of a celebrated sect of philosophers, was born at Gargettus, near Athens, about 342 B.C. He studied at Samos and Athens, from whence he removed in consequence of the war with Perdiccas, and opened a school, first at Mitylene, and next at Lampsacus. He finally settled at Athens, where he obtained a number of disciples, owing to the pleasantness of his system and his deportment. They lived together and had all things in common. Epicurus died in the 73d year of his age, and was succeeded by his friend Hermachus. His system had a tendency to atheism, by ascribing too little to the Deity, and extravagant powers to nature. His doctrine of pleasure being the supreme good, has been much misrepresented and abused, for the life of Epicurus was irreproachable, and he inculcated virtue as the essence of pleasure. It must be admitted, however, that his system was afterwards grossly perverted from the author's original meaning. His notion of the eternity of matter is peculiarly dangerous and absurd —Stanley. Bayle.

Epimenides, a Cretan poet and philosopher, of whom marvellous tales are related, as that he slept fifty years, and lived to be above one hundred and fifty years old. He was sent for by the Athenians to perform a solemn lustration when their city was visited by the plague. St. Paul is said to have quoted him in Titus i. 12.—Stanley's Hist. Phil.

Epiphanius, a father of the church, who displayed great zeal against the writings of Origen. He was chosen bishop of Salamis, and died in 403. His works were published by Petavius, in 2 vols. folio, 1622.—Cave.

Epiphanius, the scholastic, who translated, at the request of his friend Cassiodorus, the Ecclesiastical Histories of Socrates, Sozomen, and Theodoret. He lived in the 6th century.—Ibid.

Epiphanius, an heresiarch, was the son of Carpocrates. He allowed his followers a community of wives. After his death he was worshipped by them as a deity.—Mor.

Episcopius (Simon), a learned divine, born at Amsterdam in 1583. In 1612 he was chosen divinity professor at Leyden, but met with considerable trouble on account of his being an Arminian. He was the principal of the remonstrants, or Arminians, at the synod of Dort, which arbitrary assembly deposed him and the other deputies from their ministerial functions, and banished them the republic. He then went to Antwerp, but in 1626 he returned to Holland, and became minister to the remonstrants at Rotterdam. In 1634 he removed to Amsterdam, and was chosen rector of the remonstrants' college. He died in 1643. His works make 2 vols. folio.—Bayle. Moreri.

Erasistratus, a celebrated Greek physician, who is said to have discovered the passion of Antiochus Soter for his mother-in-law Stratonice, by the agitation of his pulse. He and Herophilus of Chalcedon are mentioned as the first who dissected human bodies, to improve themselves in anatomy.—Plin. Nat. Hist. Moreri.

Erasmus (Desiderius), an illustrious writer, was born at Rotterdam in 1467. He was the illegitimate son of one Gerard, a native of Tergou, by the daughter of a physician. It was the intention of Gerard to have married his mistress, but being deceived by a false report of her death while he was in Italy, he entered into orders, which completely destroyed his good design. Erasmus was called Gerard, which he afterwards altered to the Latin name Desiderius, and the Greek Erasmus, all signifying amiable. At nine years of age he was sent to Deventer, in Gelderland, where he made a great progress in his studies. While he was at Deventer his mother died there of the plague, and his father soon followed her; leaving our orphan to the care of three guardians, who determined on bringing him up to a religious life that they might enjoy his patrimony; for which purpose they removed him from one convent to another, till at last, in 1486, he took the habit among the canons-regular at Stein, near Tergou. The monastic life being disagreeable to him, he accepted an invitation from the archbishop of Cambray to reside with him. During his abode with this prelate he was ordained priest; but in 1496 he went to Paris, and supported himself by giving private lectures. In 1497 he visited England, and met with a liberal reception from the most eminent scholars, and applied to the study of the Greek language, of which he was before ignorant. His first literary works were philological, as his Adagia; De Copia Verborum; and De ratione Conscribendi Epistolas. In 1503 we find him at Louvain, where he studied divinity under Dr. Adrian Florent, afterwards Adrian VI. The next year came out his Enchiridion Militis Christiani, a book of practical religion. Not long after this he was again in England, for which country he had always a great regard. In 1506 he took his doctor's degree at Turin, and went to Bologna, where he continued some time; thence he removed to Venice, and resided with the famous Aldus Manutius. From Venice he went to Padua and Rome, where many offers were made him to settle; but having received an invitation from Henry VIII. he set out for England, and arrived in 1510. He at first lodged with sir Thomas More, and while here, wrote his Praise of Folly. Fisher, bishop of Rochester, invited him to Cambridge, where he was made lady Margaret's professor of divinity, and Greek professor. In 1514 we find him at Basil, preparing his New Testament, and Epistles of Jerome, for the press, which came out in 1516. This was the first time the New Testament was printed in Greek. The reformation now began under Luther, and though Erasmus approved of his principles and object, he was afraid to irritate the court of Rome. A friendly correspondence passed between these two great men, but afterwards a controversy ensued on the subject of free-will, and Luther treated Erasmus as a hypocrite. It is certain that Erasmus approved the reformation in his heart, but he had not courage to express himself openly; and the consequence was, that he was disliked by both parties. In 1522 appeared his Colloquies, which gave great offence to the monks, who used to say that "Erasmus laid the egg which Luther hatched." His next controversy was with Scaliger, and others, who, in their zeal for the purity of Latin composition, objected to the use of words not in the works of Cicero, whence they were called Ciceronians. Against these pedants Erasmus wrote an admirable dialogue, entitled Ciceronianus, printed in 1528. The same year appeared his learned work, "De recta Latinis Græcique Sermonis pronuntiatione." His last publication was his Ecclesiastes, or the Manner of Preaching, 1535. He died at Basil in 1536, and was buried in the cathedral of that city. The inhabitants of Rotterdam still shew the house where he was born, and there is a statue erected to his memory in the great square of that city. His works were edited at Leyden in 1706, in ten volumes, folio, by Le Clerc.—Jortin's Life of Erasmus.

Erastus (Thomas), a physician and divine, born at Baden about 1524, and died at Basil in 1582. He wrote some books on physic, but he is best known by a treatise, entitled De Excommunicatione Ecclesiastica, in which he denies that the church has power to inflict censures.—Moreri.

Eratosthenes, a Greek of Cyrene, who was keeper of the famous library at Alexandria. He died 194 B. C. He was the first who discovered the method of measuring the circumference of the earth. His Fragments were printed at Oxford in 1672, 8vo.—Voss. de Hist. Græc. Moreri.

Erchembert of Lombardy, was at first a soldier, and afterwards a benedictine monk. He wrote a Chronicle of the Lombards, of which an abridgment was published at Naples in 1620, 4to. He flourished in the 9th century.—Voss. de Hist. Lat.

Ercill-y-Zuniga (don Alonzo d'), a Spanish soldier and poet, was born at Madrid in 1533. He was at the battle of St. Quintin in 1557, and afterwards went to South America, where he distinguished himself against the revolted Indians of Peru and Chili. He died at Madrid about 1600. He wrote a poem on the subject of this war, called Araucana.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Erckern (Lazarus), a German writer on metallurgy. He was superintendant of the mines of Hungary, Germany, and the Tyrol. His book was printed at Frankfort in 1694, in Latin.—Ibid.

Eremita (Daniel), a writer of the 17th century, was a native of Antwerp, and became secretary to the duke of Florence. He turned Roman catholic, but afterwards became a deist, and died at Leghorn in 1613. His Opera Varia appeared at Utrecht in 1702, in 8vo. The best part of the collection is that entitled De Aulica Vita ac civili.—Moreri.

Eric IX. king of Sweden, Denmark, and Norway, succeeded Margaret in 1412. He married the daughter of Henry IV. of England. He made a pilgrimage to the Holy Land, but was made prisoner in Syria, and paid a large ransom for his liberty. Soon after his return the Swedes revolted, and were followed by the Danes, on which he withdrew to the isle of Gothland. In 1439 he was formally deposed. He afterwards settled in Pomerania, where he died in 1459. He compiled a History of Denmark to the Year 1288.—Mod. Un. Hist. Moreri.

Eric XIV. son and successor of Gustavus I. king of Sweden. He courted princess Elizabeth, afterwards queen of England, but being refused, he married the daughter of a peasant. This alienated from him the hearts of his subjects, and, together with his cruelties, occasioned a revolt. Eric was compelled to renounce his throne in 1568. He died in prison in 1578.—Mod. Un. Hist. Mor.

ERIGENA (John Scotus), a learned man of the 9th century, was born in Scotland, though others make him a native of England. He is said to have travelled to Athens, where he acquired the Greek and Oriental languages. He resided many years at the court of Charles the Bald, king of France, with whom he lived on terms of the greatest familiarity. At the request of his patron he translated the works of Dionysius into Latin, which drew upon him the resentment of the pope, to avoid whose fury he went to England. His greatest work was the Division of Nature, or the Nature of Things, printed at Oxford in 1681. Some say that he was employed by Alfred in restoring learning at Oxford, and that he taught school at Malmsbury, where he was murdered by his pupils on account of his severity. Others say that he died a natural death in France about 874.—Biog. Br.

ERINNA, a Grecian poetess, who was cotemporary with Sappho, and wrote several pieces, fragments of which are extant.—Voss. Poet. Græc.

ERIZZO (Lewis and Marc Antony), two brothers of Venice, who caused their uncle, a senator of Ravenna, to be murdered in 1546, that they might gain possession of his wealth. Lewis was beheaded, but the other died in prison. Paul Erizzo, of the same family, was governor of Negropont, which he defended against the Turks, and at last surrendered on condition that his life should be spared. But the sultan ordered him to be sawn in two; and with his own hands cut off the head of his daughter, because she would not yield to his desires, A. D. 1469.—Moreri.

ERIZZO (Sebastian), a learned Venetian nobleman, who died in 1585. He wrote, A Treatise on Medals; another on Logic; and one entitled Sei Giornate. He also translated some of Plato's works into Italian.—Tiraboschi.

ERLACH (John Lewis), a noble Swiss, born at Berne. He distinguished himself in the service of France, and obtained several victories, for which he was made commander in chief of the army by Lewis XIV. on the defection of Turenne. He died at Brisac the year following, aged 55.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

ERNESTI (John Augustus), professor of theology at Leipsic, was born at Tennstadt in 1707. In 1742 he was chosen extraordinary professor of antient literature, and in 1756 professor of eloquence. Two years afterwards he took his doctor's degree, and obtained the divinity chair, which he held with great reputation to his death in 1781. He published several valuable editions of Latin and Greek authors, as Xenophon, Cicero, Suetonius, Tacitus, Homer, and Callimachus, accompanied with learned notes. His Institutio interpretis Novi Testamenti, Leipsic, 1761, is a very excellent work; as also are his Opuscula Oratoria, Orationes, Prolusiones et Elogia, 8vo.: and Opusculorum Oratorum Novum Volumen, 8vo. 1791; Opuscula Critica, 8vo.—Life by W. Aug. Ernesti.

EROSTRATUS, or ERATOSTRATUS, an obscure Ephesian, who, to acquire a name, set fire to the temple of Diana, 356 B. C. The magistrates of Ephesus passed an edict, prohibiting any to pronounce his name.—Moreri.

ERPENIUS, or ERPEN (Thomas), a learned Dutchman, born in 1584. He was educated at Leyden, after which he travelled into several countries to perfect himself in the Oriental languages. He returned to Leyden in 1612, and was chosen professor of the Oriental tongues. He died in 1624. He wrote Grammatica Arabica; Rudimenta Linguæ Arabicæ; Precepta de Lingua Græcorum Communi; Grammatica Hebræa; Orationes de Linguarum Hebrææ atque Arabicæ dignitate. He also translated several Arabic works into Latin, with annotations; and the New Testament and Pentateuch into Arabic.—Moreri.

ERSKINE (Ebenezer and Ralph), two Scotch divines, of the class of seceders, or those who adhere to the solemn league and covenant. The first died at Stirling in 1755, and Ralph in 1751. Their sermons have been often printed, and are held in great request by high calvinists.—Lives prefixed to their works.

ERXLEBEN (John Christian Polycarp), a German naturalist, born at Quedlinburg in 1744. He studied physic at Gottingen, and gave lectures there on the veterinary art and natural history. He also wrote on those subjects. His Principles of Natural History, 8vo. 1768, is particularly valuable. He died in 1777.—Gen. Biog.

ERYCEIRA (Ferdinand de Meneses count), a Portuguese historian, born at Lisbon in 1614. He devoted himself to military service, and distinguished himself as an able general at Tangier. He wrote The History of Tangier, folio, 1723: History of Portugal, 2 vols. folio; The Life of John I. King of Portugal.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

ERYCEIRA (Francis Xavier, Meneses, count), great-grandson of the above, was born at Lisbon in 1673. He was also a soldier and a writer, and died in 1743. He wrote on the Value of the Coins of Portugal: Reflections on academical Studies; Parallels of illustrious Men and Women; A Translation of the Henriade.—Ibid.

ESAU, the son of Isaac and Rebecca, born about 1836 B. C. He sold his primogeniture to his brother Jacob, who by deceit afterwards procured from him his father's blessing. Enraged at this, he would have slain Jacob had he not fled into Mesopotamia. On his return Esau met him, and behaved very generously to him. Esau died 1710 B.C. He was the father of the Edomites.—Genesis.

Escobar (Bartholomew), a learned Spanish jesuit, who went to the Indies, and died at Lima in 1624, aged 66. He wrote several religious pieces. Anthony Escobar, another Spanish jesuit, died in 1669, aged 80. He wrote a Commentary on the Bible, in 9 vols. folio; and a work, entitled Theologia Moralis, 7 vols folio.—Moreri.

Espagnac (John Baptist, baron d'), a gallant French general, born in 1713, and died at Paris in 1783. He served with great glory under marshal Saxe, and wrote a number of books on the military art, and a History of the Marshal, in 3 vols. 4to.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Espagne (John d'), a French protestant minister, born in Dauphine. He came to London in the reign of James I. and officiated to a French congregation there till about the Restoration. His Treatise on Popular Errors in Religion, dedicated to Charles I. has been praised by Bayle. He criticised therein some of Calvin's principles. His works were printed at the Hague, in 2 vols. 12mo. 1674.—Bayle.

Espagnet (John d'), a learned Frenchman of the 17th century. He was president of the parliament of Bourdeaux, and published two books, one entitled Enchiridion Physicæ Restitutæ; and another called Arcanum Hermeticæ Philosophiæ Opus, which is appended to the former.—Ibid.

Espagnolet (Joseph Ribeira l'), a Spanish painter, born at Xativa, in Valencia, in 1580. He imitated the manner of Caravaggio, whom in some points he surpassed. He died at Naples in 1656. He also engraved in aquafortis.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Espen (Zeger Bernard van), a learned professor at Louvain, who opposed the formulary and the bull Unigenitus, by which he brought himself into trouble, and went to Amersfort to avoid his enemies, where he died in 1728, aged 83. His works on the canon law were printed at Paris, 4 vols. folio, 1753.—Moreri.

Espence (Claude d'), a French divine and doctor of the Sorbonne, born in 1511. He accompanied cardinal Lorraine to Rome, and distinguished himself at the council of Trent, and in many important negociations. He died in 1571. His theological works were printed at Paris in 1619, folio.—Ib.

Esper (John Frederic), a naturalist and entomologist, was born at Drossenfeld, in Bayreuth, in 1732. He studied theology at Erlangen, but devoted himself chiefly to botany and natural history. He died in 1781. He published, an accurate Description of the lately discovered Zoolites of unknown Animals, and of several Caverns, 4to. Nuremburg, 1774, folio; A Method of determining the Orbits of Comets, and other celestial Bodies, without astronomical Instruments, or mathematical Calculations, 8vo.—Gen. Biog.

Esperiente (Philip), a learned Italian, who formed a society at Rome, the members of which adopted Greek names, and that which he assumed was Callimachus. This giving offence to pope Pius II he retired to Poland, where he was employed by king Casimir to educate his children. He died in 1496. He wrote, 1. Commentarii rerum Persicarum; 2. Historia de iis quæ à Venetis tentata sunt, Persis & Tartaris contra Turcas movendis, &c.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Espremenil (James Duval d'), a French advocate, was born at Pondicherry in 1746. He was the nephew and heir of Duval de Leyril, governor of that city, and the accuser of the unfortunate count Lally. D'Espremenil became counsellor of the parliament of Paris, and was a very eloquent orator. He distinguished himself by his violence in the French revolution, but perished on the scaffold with his old antagonist Chapelier, in 1794. In going to the place of execution, he said to his companion: "We have at this moment a terrible problem to solve; to which of us two the shoutings of the mob are addressed?" He was the author of Remonstrances, published by parliament, 1788; Nullity and Despotism of the Assembly, 8vo.; Actual State of France, 1790, 8vo.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Esprit (James), a member of the French academy, was born in 1611, and died in 1678. His works are, 1. Paraphrases on some of the Psalms; 2. The Fallacy of human Virtues, 2 vols. 12mo.—Moreri.

Essex (James), an English architect, was born in 1723. He distinguished himself by the repairs and improvements of King's college chapel, Cambridge, and Ely and Lincoln cathedrals. He wrote some papers in the Archæologia, and the Bibliotheca Topographica Britannica. He died at Cambridge in 1784.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Estaing (Charles Henry, count d'), a French commander, was born of a noble family in Auvergne. He served under count Lally in India, and was made prisoner by the English; but was released on his parole, which he broke. In the American war he was employed as vice-admiral and general of the French armies on that station, where he took the island of Grenada. In 1787 he became member of the assembly of notables, and commandant of the national guards at Versailles at the commencement of the revolution. He was guillotined in 1793.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Estampes (Anne of Pisseleu, duchess of), wife of the duke of Estampes, and mistress of Francis I. king of France. She carried on a correspondence with Charles V. and informed him of the state of the armies and the country, by which means he gained the greatest advantages, and nearly ruined France. After the death of Francis she retired to her country seat, where she died in 1576.—Moreri.

Estcourt (Richard), an actor and dramatic writer, born at Tewkesbury, in Gloucestershire. He was a second-rate performer at Drury-lane, and died in 1713. He wrote two dramatic pieces: 1. The Fair Example, a comedy; 2. Prunella, an interlude.—Biog. Dram.

Esther, a Jewess of the tribe of Benjamin, and cousin to Mordecai. Ahasuerus, king of Persia, married her after divorcing his queen Vashti. His favourite minister, Haman, out of resentment against Mordecai, plotted the destruction of all the Jews in the empire, which being communicated to Esther, she applied to the king, who revoked the decree, and ordered Haman to be hanged on the gallows which he had prepared for Mordecai. In memory of the deliverance, the Jews celebrate the yearly feast of Purim. Historians are not agreed as to the king who is called Ahasuerus in scripture, but he seems to have been Darius, son of Hystaspes.—SS. Stackhouse's Hist. of the Bible.

Estius (William), a learned Roman-catholic divine, was born at Gorcum, in Holland, in 1542. He became professor of theology, and afterwards chancellor of the university of Douay, where he died in 1613. He wrote Commentaries on the Epistles, 2 vols.; and Annotationes in præcipua ac difficioliora S. Scriptura loca, fol.; Martyri Edmundi Campiani, &c.—Moreri.

Estoile (Pierre de l'), a French writer, and grand-auditor of the chancery of Paris, died in 1611. After his death were published, 1. His Journal of Henry III. 5 vols. 8vo.; 2. Journal of Henry IV. 4 vols. 8vo. His son, Claude, was a member of the French academy, and wrote some plays and poems. He died in 1652.—Ibid.

Estrades (Godfrey, count of), a French general and statesman. In 1661 he was sent ambassador to England, and again in 1666, where he strenuously maintained his right of precedence over the Spanish ambassador. The year following he went to Holland, and concluded the treaty of Breda. In 1673 he was at the conference at Nimeguen. He died in 1686, aged 79. The negociations of the count d'Estrades were printed at the Hague in 1472, in 9 vols. 12mo.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Estrees (Francis Annibal d'), duke and marshal of France. He was the son of Anthony d'Estrees, grand master of the artillery, and born in 1573. He was educated for the church, and was appointed bishop of Laon, which he quitted for a military life. He died at Paris in 1670. He wrote Memoirs of the Regency of Mary de Medicis; Relation of the Siege of Mantua. His sister Gebrielle became the favourite mistress of Henry IV. by whom she had three children. She died, as it is said, by poison, in 1599.—Moreri.

Estrees (Cæsar d'), cardinal and abbot of St. Germain des Prés, born in 1628. He was the son of the preceding, and raised to the see of Laon in 1653. Lewis XIV. employed him in several negociations, particularly at Rome. He died in 1714.—Mor.

Estrees (Victor Marie d'), vice-admiral of France, born in 1660. He bombarded Barcelona and Alicant in 1691. In 1701 he was appointed lieutenant-general of the naval forces of Spain by Philip V. He was made marshal of France, and created a grandee of Spain. He died in 1737.—Ibid.

Estrees (Louis Cæsar, duke d'), marshal of France and minister of state, was born in 1695. He distinguished himself in Flanders under marshal Saxe, and in the war in 1756 had the command of the army in Germany, where he obtained signal advantages. He was afterwards recalled, and made a duke in 1763. He died in 1771.——Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Ethelbert, king of Kent in 560. He married Bertha, daughter of Caribert, king of France, by whose means he embraced christianity, which he had permitted to be preached to his subjects by Austin the monk. Ethelbert enacted a code of laws, and died in 616.—Rapin. Hume.

Ethelbert, king of England, the second son of Ethelwolf, succeeded his brother Ethelbald in 860. He was a virtuous prince, and beloved by his subjects.—Ibid.

Ethelred, king of England, the son of Edgar, succeeded his brother Edward the Martyr in 978. He paid a tribute to the Danes by a tax levied on his subjects called Danegelt. To free himself from this oppression, he caused the Danes to be treacherously massacred in one day. On this, Swein, king of Denmark, entered his kingdom, and compelled him to fly to Normandy, but Swein dying soon after, Ethelred returned, and died in 1016.—Ibid.

Ethelwolf, king of England, came to the crown in 838. He was a mild and religious prince, and went to Rome with his youngest son Alfred. He died in 857, and was buried at Winchester.—Ibid.

Etherege (George), an English dramatic writer, was born about 1636, of an ancient family in Oxfordshire. In 1664 he produced a comedy, called The Comical Revenge, or Love in a Tub; encouraged by the favourable reception of which, he brought out another in 1668, entitled She Would if She Could. In 1676 appeared his Man of Mode, or Sir Fopling Flutter. He received the honour of knighthood about 1683. He died at Ratisbon by a fall down stairs when drunk. His songs are sprightly.—Biog. Dram.

Ethyg (George), or Etheridge, an English physician, was born at Thame, in Oxfordshire, and educated at Corpus Christi college, Oxford, of which he was elected fellow. About 1553 he was appointed king's professor of Greek, after which he practised as a physician at Oxford. He was also a good mathematician, and skilled in music, but being a zealous Roman-catholic, he lost his professorship. He died about 1588. He wrote Hypomnemata quædam in aliquot libros Pauli Æginetæ, seu Observationes Medicamentorum quæ hâc ætate in usu sunt, 8vo. 1588. Some musical compositions and Latin poems of his are extant in MS.—Wood's A. O.

Ethiopia and Abyssinia. Sesostris, king of Egypt, conquered this country about 1008 B. C. In 956 the Ethiopians regained their liberties, and in 947 invaded Egypt, and drowned king Orus. In 671 Ethiopia was subdued by Asserhaddon, king of Assyria, but it revolted on his death in 668. Cyrus obtained a great part of the country about 534, but at the time of his death the Ethiopians were in a state of independence, since Cambyses made an unsuccessful expedition against them in 525. A. D. 960, a woman called Fredda Gabey put to death del Noad of the Solomonic race, and placed her son on the throne. This race, however, was restored by Icon Amlac in 1300. —Univ. Hist. Bruce's Travels.

Etmuller (Michael), a physician, was born in 1644, at Leipsic, in which university he became professor of botany, anatomy, and chemistry. He died in 1683. He wrote several esteemed books on medical subjects, most part of which were published after his death, by his son, Michael Ernest Etmuller, in 3 vols. folio. The son, who was born in 1673, was chosen in 1702 extraordinary professor of physic at Leipsic. —Haller Bibl. Med. Moreri.

Evagoras I. king of Cyprus, recovered Salamis from the Persians, but afterwards he was defeated and deprived of the greatest part of his territories. He was assassinated 374 B. C.—Evagoras II. grandson of the preceding, and son of Nicocles. He was dethroned by his uncle Protagoras, on which he fled to Artaxerxes Ochus, who made him governor of a province, but at last put him to death.—Moreri.

Evagoras, a Greek writer in the time of Augustus, who wrote, a History of Egypt; the Life of Timagenes; De artificio Thucydidis Oratorio; Lexicon in Thucydidem.—Moreri.

Evagrius, a monk of the 5th century, who wrote a book called Altercatio Simonis Judæi & Theopholi Christiani, which is still extant.—Moreri.

Evagrius, bishop of Antioch in 389. His election was disputed by Flavianus, and confirmed by the council of Capua, in 390. He died in 392.—Moreri. Dupin.

Evagrius (Scholasticus), an ecclesiastical historian of Epiphania in Syria. He flourished in the 6th century, and wrote six books of ecclesiastical history, from 431 to 594, printed by Stephens at Paris in 1544. An edition appeared at Cambridge in 1720, folio.—Moreri.

Evagrius (Ponticus or Hyperborita), a monk of the 4th century, who was born near the Euxine sea. He embraced the monastic life at Jerusalem, from whence he removed to Syria. He zealously defended the opinions of Origen. Fragments only of his writings remain.—Cave Hist. Lit.

Evans (Arise), an astrologer, was a native of Wales, and educated at Oxford. On entering into orders he obtained a curacy in Staffordshire, but was dismissed on account of his irregularities. He then removed to London, where he taught the mathematics, and practised astrology. He also obtained fame as a necromancer. He died in the great rebellion. The noted Lilly was his pupil.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Evans (Cornelius), an impostor, was born at Marseilles, but his father was a Welshman. In 1648 he came to England, and pretended to be the prince of Wales, to whom he bore a great resemblance. After carrying on this farce a few weeks, he was sent to Newgate, from whence he effected his escape, but what became of him afterwards is not known.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Evans (Abel), commonly called Dr. Evans the epigrammatist, was one of the Oxford wits, and intimate with the most eminent poets of the age. He was a member of St. John's college, and took his degree of D. D. in 1711. He was vicar of St. Giles, Oxford. Some of his poems are in Mr. Nichols's collection.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Evans (John), a dissenting minister, was born in 1680, at Wrexham in Denbighshire, and educated at some academies in London and Yorkshire, after which he resided with a private family in Shropshire. In 1704 he became assistant to Dr. Daniel Williams, pastor of a congregation in London, and succeeded him in the sole charge in 1716. He obtained the degree of D. D. from the universities of Edinburgh and Aberdeen. He died in 1730. Dr. Evans is known as the author of two volumes of excellent sermons on the Christian Temper, and a volume of sermons to Young Persons.—Dr. Harris's Fun. Sermon for Dr. Evans.

Evans (Caleb), an eminent baptist minister, was born at Bristol, where his father officiated to a respectable congregation. The son was educated at a dissenting academy in London, and afterwards became assistant and successor to his father. He also conducted a seminary for bringing up young men to the pastoral office with great reputation. In 1789 King's college, Aberdeen, conferred on him the degree of D. D. He died in 1791, aged 54. Dr. Evans published sermons on the Scripture Doctrine of the Son and Holy Spirit; a collection of Hymns adapted to public worship; Address to the serious and candid Professors of Christianity; Christ crucified, or the Scripture Doctrine of the Atonement, &c. —Funeral Sermon by Dr. Stennet.

Evans (Evan), a divine and poet, was born in Cardiganshire about 1730, and entered of Jesus college, Oxford, in 1751. He never obtained any preferment in the church, which disappointment is supposed to be the cause of his addicting himself to drinking. He died in 1790. He published a quarto volume entitled Dissertatio de Bardis, with specimens of Welsh poetry; an English poem called the Love of our Country; and two volumes of Sermons by Tillotson and others, translated into Welsh. —Owen's Camb. Biog.

Evanson (Edward), a divine, was born at Warrington, in Lancashire, in 1731. He received his education at Emanuel college, Cambridge, where he took his degrees in arts, and entering into orders, became curate to his uncle at Mitcham in Surrey. In 1768 he obtained the living of South Mims, where he resided about two years, and was then presented to the living of Tewkesbury in Gloucestershire, to which was added that of Longdon, a village in Worcestershire. Here he altered his sentiments on the Trinitarian doctrine, and ventured to make alterations in the Common Prayer, which gave such offence to the parishioners that a prosecution was instituted against him, which failed on account of some irregularity in the proceedings. In 1778 he resigned his livings and returned to Mitcham, where he undertook the education of some pupils. He died in 1805. He wrote the Dissonance of the four generally received Evangelists; A Letter to Bishop Hurd on the Grand Apostacy; Reflections on the State of Religion in Christendom, and some other works.—Monthly Mag.

Evaristus, bishop of Rome, was elected A. D. 109, and martyred in 109. He presented to the emperor a book or apology on the excellence of the Christian religion. —Platina. Bower.

Eubulides, a philosopher and dramatic writer of Miletus, was a disciple of Euclid, and preceptor to Demosthenes and Alexinus. He wrote comdies, and a book against Aristotle. There was another of the same name, but of the cynic sect.—— Moreri.

Eucharius, or Houchar (Eligius), a divine and poet of Ghent of the 16th century. He wrote, 1. The Lives of St. Levinus, St. Cotera, and Bertulsius; 2. a Comedy of the Patience of Chryselleis, and other works.—Moreri.

Eucherius, archbishop of Lyons. He obtained so great a name for his piety as to be canonized. He died about 454. He wrote several devotional pieces.—Moreri.

Euclid, an eminent philosopher of Megara, and the disciple of Socrates, from whom he differed in the manuer of teaching; for, instead of instructing his pupils in morals, he confined their attention wholly to the subtleties of logic. Hence his followers became noted wranglers.——Bayle. Moreri.

Euclid, a celebrated mathematician of Alexandria, who flourished B. C. 300. He immortalized his name by his books on geometry, in which he digested all the propositions of the eminent geometricians who preceded him, as Thales, Pythagoras, and others. Ptolemy became his pupil, and his school was so famous, that Alexandria continued for ages the great university for mathematicians. The best edition of his whole works is that of Gregory, Oxford, folio, 1703. His Elements have gone through innumerable editions.— Martin's Biog. Phil. Hutton's Mathematical Dict.

Eudæmon (John Andrew), or John the happy, a learned jesuit, who died at Rome in 1625. He was a native of Candia, and wrote a book entitled Admonitio ad regem Ludovicum XII. 1625, 4to. in which he attacked the authority of the kings of France in church matters, which occasioned his order to be severely treated in that country.—Moreri.

Eudes (John), founder of a religious society called after his name. He was an eloquent preacher, and died at Caen in 1680, aged 79.—Ibid.

Eudocia, a learned Athenian lady, whose original name was Athenais, was the daughter of Leontius the philosopher, who left her only a small legacy, bequeathing the rest of his property to his two sons. On this she went to Constantinople to lay her complaint before Theodosius the younger. Here she became the favourite of Pulcheria, sister of that emperor, and embraced the christian religion. In 421 she was married to the emperor, who afterwards divorced her in a fit of jealousy. She then went to Jerusalem, where she built churches, and led a life of great devotion. She died in 460. This empress wrote some Greek poems, and paraphrases on some of the prophets.—Moreri.

Eudocia, or Eudoxia, widow of the emperor Constantine Ducas, on whose death, in 1067, she assumed the imperial diadem, and married the general Romanus Diogenes. When her son Michael ascended the throne, he shut her in a convent, where she amused herself in writing on the pagan mythology.—Moreri.

Eudocia (Feodorevna), first wife of Peter I. czar of Russia, and daughter of the boyard Feodor Lapookin. Peter married her in 1689, but a few years afterwards he sent her to a nunnery on account of her complaints of his infidelity. She died in 1731, aged 59.—Coxe's Russia. Tooke's Hist. of Russia.

Eudoxius, patriarch of Constantinople, to which see he was preferred by the emperor Constantius, after having been deposed from the bishopric of Antioch for arianism. He died in 379.—Moreri.

Eudoxus of Cnidus, an eminent astronomer of Caria, in Asia Minor. He studied in Egypt with Plato, and afterwards opened a mathematical school at Athens. It is said that he passed a great part of his time on a high mountain, where he made celestial observations.—Stanley's Hist. Phil.

Evelyn (John), an ingenious writer, was born at Wotton, in Surrey, in 1620, and educated at Baliol college, Oxford. By his marriage with the daughter of sir Richard Brown, in 1647, he became possessed of Sayes court, a manor in Kent, where he led a retired life till the Restoration, to which he in some measure contributed. At the establishment of the royal society he became one of the first members. In 1662 appeared his Sculptura, or the History and Art of Chalcography and Engraving in Copper. This curious and valuable work was reprinted in 1755. In 1664 came out his Sylva, or a Discourse of Forest Trees, folio, which has gone through several editions. He was appointed a commissioner for the sick and wounded seamen, one of the commissioners for rebuilding St. Paul's, and afterwards had a place at the board of trade. In the reign of James II. he was made one of the commissioners for executing the office of lord privy seal, and after the Revolution was appointed treasurer of Greenwich hospital. In 1697 appeared his Numismata, or Discourse of Medals, folio. Mr. Evelyn has the honour of being one of the first who improved horticulture, and introduced exotics into this country. Of his garden at Sayes court a curious account may be seen in the Philosophical Transactions. He died in 1706, and was buried at Wotton. He wrote several books besides the above. His son, John Evelyn, wrote a Greek poem, prefixed to his father's Sylva; and translated Rapin's poem on Gardens into English; and the Life of Alexander from Plutarch. He was also the author of a few poems in Dryden's collection, and died in 1698, aged 44.—Biog. Brit.

Everdingen (Cæsar van), an eminent Dutch painter, was born at Alkmaer in 1606, and died in 1679. One of his finest performances is the victory of David over Goliah, painted on the folding-doors of the organ in the great church of Alkmaer. His nephew, Albert, excelled as a landscape painter. He died in 1675.—Houbraken.

Eugene (Francis), prince of Savoy, was born in 1663. His father was the count of Soissons; and his mother niece to cardinal Mazarine. He was intended for the church, but the death of his father altered the design, and he resolved to follow a military life. His mother being banished to the Netherlands, he went to Vienna, where the emperor gave him a regiment of dragoons, and he served with great reputation against the Turks in Hungary. In 1691 he was sent to Piedmont, where he relieved Coni, which was besieged by the French, and took Carmagnole. In 1597 he obtained the chief command of the Imperial army, and the same year defeated the Turks at the battle of Buda. On the death of the king of Spain, the emperor laid claim to that throne, and a new war breaking out, prince Eugene was sent to Italy, where he defeated Catinat the French general, who was succeeded by Villeroi; but while this general lay secure, as he thought, at Cremona, the prince entered the place by stratagem, and took him prisoner. Soon after this he returned to Vienna, and was made president of the council, and associated in the command of the allied army with the great duke of Marlborough. In 1704 he had a principal share in the famous battle of Blenheim. In 1707 he was repulsed at Cassano by Vendome, but he soon recovered his reputation by a bloody action near Turin, which was then besieged by the French, whose trenches he forced, and gained a complete victory. The same year he entered France, and laid siege to Toulon, but was unsuccessful. The next year he commanded the Imperial army in Flanders, and shared in the victory of Oudenard, as he afterwards did that of Malplaquet. In this last battle he was severely wounded, but would not quit the scene of action. In 1712 he was at London, to induce the English ministers not to make a separate peace, but his arguments were ineffectual: and he was left to finish the war alone. After this defection his progress was weak, and he was successfully opposed by marshal Villars, with whom he entered into a negociation which produced the peace of Radstadt in 1714. Shortly after this a war broke out between the emperor and the Turks, on which the prince was again entrusted with the command in Hungary, where, in 1716, he defeated the grand vizier at Peterwaradin, which was followed by the capture of Belgrade. After the peace of 1718 he retired to a private life: but in 1733, when the election for the crown of Poland was disputed, he was again employed. His service, however, was short, and unproductive of any remarkable action. He died at Vienna in 1736. The prince was very amiable in his private deportment, correct in his manners, serious, sincere, and devout. —Moreri. Univ. Hist.

Eugenius I. a pope and saint, succeeded Martin in 654. He is praised for his liberality and piety, and died in 657.—Eugenius II. succeeded Paschal I. in 824, and died in 827. He defended image-worship, though the practice was condemned by the council of Paris in 825.—Eugenius III. pope, ascended the papal chair in 1145. The Romans were at that time in a turbulent state, and finding that he could do little good with them, Eugenius retired to Pisa, and from thence to Paris. He died at Tivoli, in 1153.—Eugenius IV. (Gabriel Condolmere.) He was a Venetian by birth, and succeeded Martin V. in 1431, in which year the council of Basil assembled. This pope and the members of that assembly differed in their judgment. Eugenius issued a bull against them, which they disregarded, and at last he was under the necessity of confirming the decrees. He afterwards called a council at Ferrara, to endeavour a reconciliation between the Greek and Latin churches. At this council appeared the emperor Paleologus, with several Greek bishops; but the plague breaking out at Ferrara, the council was removed to Florence, where a sort of union was agreed to, which was soon broken. Another council at Basil deposed Eugenius, and elected Amadeus VIII. duke of Savoy, who took the name of Felix. V. Eugenius, however, triumphed over his adversaries, and died at Rome in 1447.—Cave Hist. Lit. Platina. Bower.

Eugenius, an obscure man, who from being a grammarian, was proclaimed emperor in Dauphiné by count Arbogastus, after the death of Valentinian the Younger, in 392. He crossed the Alps, and made himself master of Milan. But in 394 he was defeated and slain by the emperor Theodosius.—Moreri.

Euler (Leonard), a celebrated mathematician, was the son of a protestant minister, and born at Basil in 1707. He received his education in the university of that city with a view to the church, but he devoted himself principally to mathematical studies under the famous John Bernouilli. In 1727 he followed his friends Hermann and Daniel Bernouilli to Petersburgh, and was associated with them in the mathematical professorship. In 1730 he was appointed professor of natural philosophy, and on the departure of Daniel Bernouilli he succeeded him in the mathematical chair. In 1735 he lost the sight of one eye by intense application to the solution of a difficult problem. A memoir of his on "Fire" obtained the prize from the French academy of sciences in 1738, and in 1740 he divided another on the Flux and Reflux of the Sea, with Maclaurin and Daniel Bernouilli. In 1741 he went to Berlin, at the invitation of the king, to assist in establishing the academy there. He continued at Berlin twenty-five years, and then returned to Petersburgh, where he soon after entirely lost his sight. But still he continued his favourite pursuits, and his Elements of Algebra. He also received another prize from the French academy, for three Memoirs on the Inequalities in the Motions of the Planets: which was followed by two others for solutions of questions on the Theory of the Moon. In 1772 appeared his Lunar Tables. He died of a fit of apoplexy in 1783. Besides the above works he wrote a great number of papers in the Memoirs of several Academies; Opuscula Analytica; Introduction to the Analysis of Infinitesimals, &c.—Encyclopædia Brit.

Eulogius, patriarch of Alexandria in 581. He wrote some books against heretics, fragments of which only remain. He died in 608.—Moreri.

Eulogius, the martyr of Cordova, was elected archbishop of Toledo, but before his consecration he was put to death by the Saracens, in 859. Some of his works are extant.—Ibid.

Eumenes, an eminent general under Alexander the Great, after whose death he became very powerful, but was conquered at last by Antigonus, and put to death 316 B. C. He was a man of strict probity, mild, and generous.—Plutarch. Corn. Nep.

Eumenes I. king of Pergamus, succeeded his uncle Philætærus, B. C. 263, and reigned 22 years.—Eumenes II. nephew of the preceding, succeeded his father, Attalus, 197 B. C. He assisted the Romans against Antiochus the Great, and reigned 38 years.—Univ. Hist.

Eumenius, a celebrated orator, who flourished about 310. Some of his orations are in Panegyrici Veteres.—Moreri.

Eunapius, a writer and physician of the 4th century, who wrote a book of the Lives of the Philosophers and Sophists, in which he speaks rancorously of christianity. He also composed the history of the Cæsars, which is lost, but the substance of it may be seen in Zosimus.—Voss. Hist. Græc.

Eunomius, an heresiarch of the 4th century. He was a native of Cappadocia, and the secretary of Ætius, whose errors he embraced and enlarged, which produced a sect called Eunomians. In 360 he was made bishop of Cyzicum by Eudosius bishop of Antioch, who afterwards deposed him by order of Constantius. He died in exile in 394. Some of his works are extant.—Cave Hist. Lit. Moreri.

Euphemius, patriarch of Constantinople in 490. He had some disputes with the pope about admitting certain names into the calendar of saints, and the pope being supported by the emperor Anastasius, he was sent into exile, and died at Ancyra, in 515.—Ibid.

Euphorion, a Greek poet and historian, born at Chalcis in Eubœa, B. C. 274. Only a few fragments of his poems are extant. There were two others of the same name; the first was a son of Æschylus, and wrote some tragedies; the other was the author of epigrams in the Anthologia.—Moreri.

Euphrates, a heretic of the 2d century, who held that the serpent which deceived our first parents was Christ himself under that form, and therefore he and his followers paid reverence to serpents, on which account they were called ophites. There were besides two philosophers of this name, one a platonist, under Perdicas; and the other a stoic, under Adrian.—Ibid.

Euphranor, an Athenian painter and sculptor, who lived about 352 years B. C. He wrote some books on the arts which he professed, but they are lost.—Ibid.

Eupolis, a comic poet of Athens, who lived about 435 B. C. Alcibiades is said to have caused him to be cast into the sea for writing a play against him, but Ælian says that he died at Egina. Some fragments of his remain.—Vost. Poet Græc.

Evremond, St. (Charles de St. Dennis, lord of), a French writer, was born in Normandy, in 1623, and being a younger son was designed for the law, which profession he quitted for the military life. He served under the duke of Enghien, as lieutenant of the guards, and in the civil wars of France was major-general. He attended Mazarine in the negotiation with Spain, but having betrayed some confidential secrets, in a correspondence with the marquis de Crequi, he was obliged to quit France. On this he went to England, where he was in great esteem with king Charles II. He died in 1703, and was buried in Westminster abbey. He was a man of wit and ingenuity. His works were printed in 1728, in 3 vols. 8vo.—Life by Des Maizeaux.

Euripides, a Grecian tragic poet, was born in the island of Salamis, B. C. 480. He studied at Athens under Anaxagoras the philosopher, and Prodicus the rhetorician. Euripides was twice married, but was unfortunate in both his wives. He left Athens in disgust, on account of the rivalship of Sophocles, and the raillery of Aristophanes, and went to the court of Archelaus, king of Macedon. As he was walking one evening in a wood, he was assaulted by the king's hounds and torn in pieces. He was then in his 75th year. The Athenians, out of respect for his talents, went into mourning. Only 19 of his tragedies are extant: and the best editions are those of Barnes, Cambridge, 1694, folio; and Musgrave, Oxford 1778, 4to. Euripides has been well translated into English by Woodhull and Potter.—Moreri.

Eurydice, wife of Amyntas, king of Macedon, and mother of Alexander, Perdiccas, and of Philip, father of Alexander the Great. She conspired against her husband, from a criminal love she had for her daughter's husband. The plot, however, was discovered by Amyntas, who forgave her. On his death Alexander ascended the throne, but he perished through his mother's ambition, as did Perdiccas. But Philip preserved his crown from all her attempts, on which she fled, but what became of her is unknown.—Boyle. Moreri.

Eurydice, a daughter of Aridæus, the natural son of Philip. On the death of Alexander the Great, Aridæus ascended the throne, and was governed by his wife. Olympias, the mother of Alexander, conquered the usurpers, and put them to death, 319 B. C.—Ibid.

Eusden (Laurence), an English poet, was born in Yorkshire, and educated at Trinity college, Cambridge. In 1718 he obtained the laureatship, which raised him several enemies, particularly Pope, who placed him in the Dunciad. He became rector of Coningsby, in Lincolnshire, where he died in 1730. His poems are in Nichols's collection.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Eusebius, a Greek by birth, succeeded Marcellus as bishop of Rome in 310, and died the same year. He was violent against readmitting lapsed Christians to communion, which gave great offence at Rome, and the emperor Maxentius banished the pope to Sicily.—Platina. Bower.

Eusebius (Pamphilus), an ecclesiastical historian, was born in Palestine about 270. In the persecution by Dioclesian, he assisted the suffering christians by his exhortations, particularly his friend Pamphilus, whose name out of veneration he assumed. Eusebius was chosen bishop of Cæsarea about 313. He was at first the friend of Arius, because he considered him as persecuted, but on perceiving the dangerous extent of his opinions, he abandoned him, and assisted at the council of Nice, which he opened with an address. He was also at that of Antioch. The emperor Constantine had a particular esteem for him, and shewed him several tokens of favour. He died about 338. He wrote an Ecclesiastical History, the Life of Constantine, and other works. The best edition of his Ecclesiastical History is that of Cambridge, 3 vols. folio, 1720. He wrote besides this many other works, the principal of which is that of Evangelical Preparation, 2 vols. folio, Paris, 1628.—Fabricius. Cave. Moreri.

Eusebius, bishop of Berytus, of Nicomedia, and lastly of Constantinople, was a turbulent arian, and a great persecutor of Athanasius. He died in 341.—Cave. Fabricius. Moreri.

Eusebius, bishop of Emesa in Syria, of whom some homilies are still extant. He also was an arian, and died in 360.—Ibid.

Eusebius, bishop of Vercelli in Piedmont and a zealous defender of Athanasius, for which he was banished to Syria, but after the death of Constantius he returned to his see, and died in 371. Some Letters of his are extant.—Ibid.

Eusebius, bishop of Samosata. He was at first an arian, but afterwards became a zealous opposer of that sect. He was banished by the emperor Valens, and in 378 was killed by a tile thrown upon his head by an arian woman.—Moreri.

Eusebius, bishop of Dorylæum, in Phrygia, in the 5th century. He was at first a lawyer, but entering the ecclesiastical state, became bishop of Dorylæum, about 448. He was a zealous opponent of the Eutychians, by whose means he was deposed in 449. Some of his works exist.—Ibid.

Eustache (David), a French protestant minister, and pastor of the church at Montpellier. In 1659 he was deputed by the national synod of Loudun to present their address to the king, on which occasion his speech was much applauded. He wrote some practical and polemical pieces.—Bayle. Moreri.

Eustachius (Bartholomew), an eminent Italian physician of the 16th century. He settled at Rome where he formed his anatomical tables in 1552, which were not published till 1714. A second edition appeared in 1728. Boerhaave published this author's Opuscula Anatomica in 1707. He died in 1570.—Tiraboschi.

Eustathius, a saint of the Greek and Roman calendar, and bishop of Antioch in 325. He strenuously opposed the arians, for which he was banished by Constantius, and died at Trajanopolis in 360.—Moreri.

Eustatius, archbishop of Thessalonica, was born at Constantinople, and lived in the 12th century. His Commentaries on Homer were printed at Rome in 1550, and those upon Dionysius the geographer, at Paris in 1577, and at Oxford in 1697, 8vo. —Moreri.

Eustochium, the daughter of Paula, an eminent Roman lady, and like her mother distinguished for her knowledge of the Greek and Hebrew languages She resided in the monastery at Bethlehem, but was driven from it by the Pelagians, and died about 419.—Ibid.

Eustratius, archbishop of Nice, in the 12th century. His Commentaries, in Greek, on Aristotle's Analytics and Ethics, were printed at Venice, 1544, and 1536, folio.—Moreri.

Euthymius, patriarch of Constantinople in 906. The emperor Leo VI. having deposed Nicholas Mysticus, placed Euthymius in his room; but Alexander II. banished him, and restored Nicholas. He died in 911, and was interred at Constantinople.—Moreri.

Euthymius (Zigabenus, or Zigadenus), a Greek monk, who wrote, at the command of the emperor Alexius Comnenus, a work entitled Panoplia, or a Defence of the Orthodox Faith. He also wrote a Commentary on the Psalms, printed in Latin in 1530, folio; a Treatise against various Heresies; Commentaries on the Epistles, &c. He died after 1118.—Ibid.

Eutocius, of Ascalon, in Palestine, a Greek mathematician of the 6th century. He wrote Commentaries on Apollonius's Conics, to be found in Halley's edition of that work and also Commentaries on Archimedes, in the works of that writer, printed at Oxford in 1792, folio.—Hutton's Math. Dict. Moreri.

Eutropius (Flavius), a Latin historian of the 4th century. He was secretary to Constantine the Great, and served under Julian in his Persian expedition. He wrote an Epitome of the History of Rome, of which numerous editions have been printed. —Moreri.

Eutropius, the eunuch, and minister of the emperor Arcadius, who in 399 made him consul. His conduct in this situation was so oppressive, that his master was obliged to banish him. He was afterwards beheaded, A. D. 399.—Moreri.

Eutyches, a Greek monk, and abbot of a convent near Constantinople: in opposing nestorianism, he broached a new heresy, by denying the human nature of Christ, and asserting that his body was only an aërial vehicle. This heresy was condemned in the council of Constantinople, and Eutyches deposed. But his opinions had many supporters.—Mosheim. Cave. Moreri.

Eutychianus (Pope), succeeded Felix in 275, and suffered martyrdom in 283. He was a native of Tuscany, and a warm defender of the rights and orders of the church.—Platina. Bower.

Eutychius, patriarch of Constantinople. He reproved Justinian when that emperor fell into an error, for which he was deposed and banished in 564, but in 578 he was restored to his see. He died in 585.—Moreri.

Eutychius, a physician and divine, was born at Cairo in 876. After practising physic for many years, he was ordained, and in 933 became patriarch of Alexandria. He died in 950. He wrote, in Arabic, Annals from the Creation to 900, published at Oxford by Pocock in 1659, 4to. Eutychius also wrote a History of Sicily, the MS. of which is in the public library at Cambridge. —Cave. D'Herbelot.

Euzoius, a deacon of Alexandria, who was deposed for arianism, but on his submission was made bishop of Antioch, and died about 376. There was another of the same name, who was bishop of Cæsarea in the 4th century. He was a great restorer of learning.—Moreri.

Ewald (John), a Danish poet, was born at Copenhagen in 1743. Being of a wandering and adventurous turn, he entered into the Prussian service, and rose to the rank of serjeant, but deserted, and returned to Denmark, where he applied to the study of divinity, but never entered into the ecclesiastical state. He studied the English language, to make himself acquainted with our best poets. He died in 1781. He wrote a dramatic poem, entitled Adam and Eve; Poems in the style of Ossian; a theatrical piece, called "The Fishermen;" and other works which shew great fire and imagination. They were printed at Copenhagen in 1791, 4 vols.—Gen. Biog.

Expilli (Claude d'), president in the parliament of Grenoble, born at Voiron, in Dauphiné, in 1561, and died in 1636. He wrote Pleadings, printed at Paris in 1612, 4to.; Poems, 1624; the Life of Bayard, 1650; and a book on French Orthography, 1618.—Ibid.

Exuperius, bishop of Thoulouse, and a saint of the Roman calendar, who expended all his own property and the sacred vessels to maintain the poor in the time of famine. He died about 417.—Gen. Biog.

Eyck (Hubert van), an eminent painter, and founder of the Flemish school, was born at Maaseyk in 1366, and died in 1426. There is a fine picture, painted by him and his brother, in a church at Ghent, of the adoration of the Lamb. He painted in distemper and in oil.—Pilkington.

Eyck (John van), brother of the above, was born in 1370, and died in 1441. He painted history, portraits, and landscapes; but is chiefly known now by his being the inventor of oil painting.—Ibid.

Eykens (Peter), an historical painter, born at Antwerp in 1599. In a church at Antwerp is a fine picture by him, representing the last supper; and in another a noble piece of the Baptist preaching in the desert.—Ibid.

Ezekiel, the third of the greater prophets. He was the son of Buzi, and a descendant of Aaron. In 597 B. C. he was carried captive to Babylon. Here he wrote his prophecies, the style of which, according to bishop Lowth, is bold, vehement, and tragical, and worked up occasionally to a kind of tremendous dignity.—SS. Lowth's Prælectiones.

Ezekiel, a Greek Jew and poet, who composed tragedies on scriptural subjects. Fragments of one on the departure of the Israelites from Egypt are preserved by Clemens Alexandrinus, and Eusebius. He flourished about 300 years B. C.——Whitaker's Origin of Arianism.

Ezra, son of Seraiah, priest of the Jews, and a descendant of Aaron. He was carried into captivity to Babylon by Nebuchadnezzar; but Artaxerxes Longomanus sent him to his own country with a colony of the Jews, and all the sacred vessels and ornaments of the temple, which he had in charge to rebuild. On his arrival at Jerusalem 467 B C. he set about the reformation of abuses, particularly that of strange marriages. He restored the whole canon of the Old Testament. There is in the Bible a book under his name, and in the Apocrypha two others. Josephus says, that he died at Jerusalem; but others assert that he returned, and ended his days in Persia.——Ezra. Nehemiah. Prideaux's Connection.

F.

Faber (John), a German divine, was born at Hailbron in 1500. He was created doctor at Cologne, and in 1526 was appointed confessor to Ferdinand, king of the Romans, who, when he became emperor, gave him the see of Vienna. He was called the mallet of heretics, and owed his preferment to the zeal which he showed against Luther. He died in 1542. His works were printed at Cologne, in 3 vols. folio. There was another of this name, who wrote several publications against the protestants.—Moreri.

Faber (Basil), a learned German protestant, who published in 1571 a work, entitled Thesaurus Eruditionis Scholiasticæ, since improved by Cellarius and others into 2 vols. folio. He died in 1576.—Ibid.

Fabian, a pope and saint, according to the Roman calendar, ascended the papal chair in 326. He built many churches, and sent bishops into Gaul to propagate christianity. He suffered in the persecution under Decius in 250.—Ibid.

Fabian (Robert), an English chronicler of the 15th century. He was a tradesman of London, and served the offices of alderman and sheriff. He died in 1512, and was buried in the church of St. Michael, Cornhill. His Chronicle of England and France was first printed at London in 1516, and again in 1553, in 2 vols. folio.—Biog. Br.

Fabius (Maximus Rullianus), an illustrious Roman. Being appointed master of the horse by the dictator S. Papirius, censor, in the war against the Samnites, he charged the enemy, and obtained a victory; but having done this in the absence of the dictator, and contrary to his orders, he was condemned to death, but was rescued by the people. In 303 B C. he served the office of censor, and obtained the name of Maximus for lessening the power of the populace in elections. He triumphed over seven nations, and served the office of dictator a second time B. C. 287.—Livy.

Fabius Maximus (Quintus), surnamed Verrucosus, was a lineal descendant of the above. He distinguished himself by his prudence, valour, and generosity. He was consul the first time B. C. 233, when he gained a great victory over the Ligurians. When Hannibal defeated the Romans at the battle of Thrasymenus, he was nominated pro-dictator to oppose that general. Fabius surrounded Hannibal in a defile, from whence he escaped by stratagem, on which the Roman commander was recalled by the senate, who refused to confirm an agreement which he had made for the ransom of prisoners. On this Fabius sold his estates to raise the money. When the time of his dictatorship expired, he advised his successor, Paulus Æmilius, not to hazard an engagement, which, however, was neglected, and thus was lost the famous battle of Cannæ. Fabius was now looked upon as the only refuge of the Romans, and he quickly recovered Tarentum, which had been betrayed to Hannibal. In his advanced years he was superseded by Scipio, yet his death was lamented by the people as a common loss. He died B. C. 203, aged near 100.—Plutarch. Livy.

Fabius (Pictor), the first writer of the Roman history, who flourished B. C. 225. There is a work extant under his name, but it is a manifest forgery.—Voss. Hist. Lat.

Fabre (John Claude), a French priest of the oratory at Paris, who compiled two dictionaries, translated Virgil into French, and continued Fleury's Ecclesiastical History. He died in 1753, aged 85.—N. D. H.

Fabretti (Raphael), an Italian antiquary, was born at Urbino in 1619. He was an advocate, and filled several distinguished situations at Rome, in Spain, and Urbino. He died in 1700. He wrote, De Aquis & Aquæductibus Veteris Romæ, 1680; De Columna Trajani, 1683, folio; Inscriptionum Antiquarum Explicatio, fol. 1699.—Tiraboschi.

Fabri (Honorius), a learned jesuit, was born in 1607 at Bellay, and died at Rome in 1688. He wrote, Physica, seu rerum corporearum Scientia, 6 vols. 4to; Synopsis Optica, 4to.: De Plantis, de Generatione Animalium, & de Homine, 4to. &c. He is said by some to have discovered the circulation of the blood before Harvey.—Moreri.

Fabriano (Gentile da), an eminent historical painter, born at Verona in 1332, and died in 1412. He was ennobled by the state of Venice.—Pilkington.

Fabricius (Caius), a Roman general, who was twice consul and gained several victories over the Samnites, and Lucanians; but his integrity and contempt of riches have done more honour to his memory than his military renown. Being sent ambassador to Pyrrhus, he rejected every attempt, both of bribery and threat to corrupt his integrity. He discovered to Pyrrhus a plot formed to poison him by his physician. He died in poverty about 250 B. C.—Bayle. Univ. Hist.

Fabricius (George), a learned German, was born at Misnia in 1516. His Latin poems were printed at Basle in 1567, in 2 vols. 8vo. He also wrote a Description of Rome; Saxonia illustrata, seu origines Saxonicæ, 2 vols. folio, &c. He died in 1571. —Moreri.

Fabricius (Jerome), an Italian physician, usually called Aquapendente, from the place of his birth. He professed anatomy with extraordinary reputation at Padua forty years. He died in 1619. His works on anatomy have been printed in 2 vols. folio.—Tiraboschi.

Fabricius (John Albert), a learned divine, was born at Leipsic in 1668. He became professor of eloquence at Hamburgh, where he died in 1736. The principal of his works are, Bibliotheca Latina, 2 vols. 4to.; Bibliotheca Græca, 14 vols. 4to.; Codex Apocryphus Novi Testamenti, 3 vols. 8vo.; Codex Pseudepigraphus Veteris Testamenti, 2 vols. 8vo.; Bibliographia Antiquaria, 4to.; Bibliotheca Latina Ecclesiastica, folio; Bibliotheca mediæ et infimæ Latinitatis, 5 vols. 8vo.—Moreri.

Fabricius (William), surnamed Hildanus, a famous surgeon, was born near Cologne in 1560. He became public physician at Berne, where he died in 1634. His Six Centuries of Observations and Cures were published in 1606, 4to.; besides which he wrote on Gangrene and Sphacelus: on Burns; on Gun-shot Wounds; on Lithotomy, &c. All his works were published in folio at Frankfort, in 1682.—Halleri Bib. Anat.

Fabricius (Vincent), an ingenious Latin poet of the 17th century. He was born at Hamburgh in 1613, and became syndic and burgomaster of Dantzic. He died in 1667. The best edition of his poems is that of Leipsic, in 1685.—Moreri.

Fabricius (John Lewis), a Swiss protestant divine, was born at Schaffhausen in 1630. He became professor of theology and philosophy at Heidelberg, and ecclesiastical counsellor to the elector, who also employed him in state matters. He died at Frankfort in 1697. He wrote De Viis Dei, an et quosque sint similes Viis Hominum; De Symbolica Dei Visione; on Infant Baptism, &c.—Moreri.

Fabricius (Baron), a German writer, who was a great favourite of Charles XII. of Sweden, and of Stanislaus, king of Poland. He was also in favour with George I. king of England, and attended him in his last journey to Hanover. He wrote a volume of letters relative to Charles XII. during his residence in Turkey, 8vo. 1761, London.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Fabricius (Charles), a celebrated painter of perspective and portrait, was born at Delft. He was cut off in the flower of his age in a melancholy manner, for his house being near the powder magazine, it suddenly blew up, and the painter and his disciple, Matthias Spoors, were killed on the spot.—Pilkington.

Fabroni (Angiolo), a learned Italian, was born at Marradi in Tuscany, in 1732. He was educated first at Faenza, and afterwards at Rome, where he obtained a canonry. The duke Peter Leopold appointed him prior of the church of St. Lorenzo at Florence, where he remained till called to be curator of the university of Pisa, where he died in 1802. He is generally known by his biographies of Italian literati of the 17th and 18th centuries, of which work he published 18 volumes, and left another ready for the press. Besides this, he wrote separate biographies of Cosmo, Lorenzo, Leo, and other eminent persons of the house of Medici; and many panegyrics on learned men. He also conducted the Giornale de Letterati, and published some religious pieces.—Monthly Mag. vol. xvi.

Fabot (Charles Hannibal), a learned

French lawyer, was born at Aix, in Provence, in 1580, and died in 1659. He published Basilicon, or the Constitutions of the Eastern Emperors, in 7 vols. folio, 1647; editions of Cedrenus, Nicetas, Anastatius, &c. 2 vols. folio; the Works of Cujacius, 10 vols. folio, &c.—Moreri.

FACHETTI (Pietro), an eminent portrait painter, was born at Mantua in 1535, and died at Rome in 1613. He painted with admirable taste.—Pilkington.

FACINI (Pietro), an historical painter of Bologna, was born in 1560, and died in 1602. He was the disciple of Annibal Caracci.—Ibid.

FACIO (Bartholomew), a writer of the 15th century, was born at Spezzia, in the territory of Genoa. He was secretary to Alphonso, king of Naples, and died about 1457. His works are, De Bello Veneto Claudiano, 8vo. 1578; De rebus ab Alphonso I. Rege Neapolitano gestis, lib. x. De Humanæ Vitæ Felicitate; De Viris illustr. sui Temporis.—Moreri.

FACUNDUS, bishop of Hermiana in Africa, who defended the books called the Three Chapters, at the council of Constantinople, in 547, for which he was banished. He wrote some pieces which are extant.——Dupin. Mosheim.

FADLALLAH, or Chodia Rasehid Addin Fadlallah, a Persian historian. He was vizir to the sultan Cazan, who reigned at Taurus, at whose command he compiled a History of the Moguls, which he finished in 1294. He added a supplement to this work by the order of Cazan's successor. The first part was translated into French by La Croix.—Moreri.

FAERNO (Gabriel), a Latin poet of the 16th century. He wrote some Latin elegies, and fables in the same language in iambic verse. Bentley has given his notes upon Terence in his edition of that author. He died at Rome in 1561.—Ibid.

FAGAN (Christopher Barthelemi), a French comic writer, who died in 1755, aged 53. His plays were printed in 4 vols. 12mo. 1760.---Nouv. Dict. Hist.

FAGIUS (Paul), a German protestant divine, whose real name was Buchlein. He was born in 1504, and studied at Heidelberg and Strasburgh. For some time he exercised the office of a schoolmaster, but afterwards entered into orders. In 1541 the plague broke out at Isna, where he resided, but Fagius remained in the place, comforting and administering to the sick. In 1543 he and Bucer went to England, where archbishop Cranmer employed them in a new translation of the scriptures. Fagius died at Cambridge in 1550, and Bucer about a year after. In Mary's reign their bodies were taken up and burnt. Fagius wrote several books on the Hebrew language and the Targums.---Melch. Adami Vit. Germ. Theol.

FAGNANI (Prospero), an eminent Italian canonist of the 17th century. He was secretary to the holy congregation, and composed a Commentary on the Five Books of the Decretals. He died in 1678, aged 80.---Moreri.

FAGNANO (Julius Charles, count of), an excellent geometer of the last century. He had also the title of marquis of Toschi, and was born at Sinigaglia, in the Roman state, about 1690. His works were published at Pesaro, in 1750, in 2 vols. 4to. of which the greatest part contains his discoveries relative to the property and the use of the geometrical curve, which is commonly called the Lemniscate. He died about 1760.

FAGON (Guy Crescent), physician to Lewis XIV. was born at Paris in 1632. He defended the doctrine of the circulation of the blood, and collected numerous plants to enrich the royal gardens, of which he was superintendant. He died in 1718.---Nouv. Dict. Hist.

FAGUNDY (Stephen), a Portuguese jesuit, who died at Lisbon in 1645, aged 68. He wrote Quæstiones de Christianis Officiis et Casibus Conscientiæ in vi Ecclesiæ Preceptæ; De Justitiæ, &c.—Moreri.

FAHRENHEIT (Gabriel Daniel), an experimental philosopher, was born at Hamburgh in 1686. He improved the thermometer, by making use of mercury instead of spirits of wine, and formed a new scale for the instrument, grounded on accurate experiments. The English have generally adopted this scale, but the French prefer Reaumur's. Fahrenheit wrote a Dissertation on Thermometers, and died in 1736.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

FAIRCLOUGH (Samuel), a nonconformist minister, was born at Haverli in 1594, and educated at Queen's college, Cambridge. He became minister of Barnardiston in Suffolk, and afterwards of Ketton in the same county; from whence he was ejected in 1662 for nonconformity, and died in 1678. He was a man of exemplary character, moderate in his judgment, and a friend to episcopacy, though he objected against some things in the liturgy. He published a Funeral Sermon for sir Nathaniel Barnardiston, 1653, and others on public occasions. His son Samuel Fairclough, was deprived of the rectory of Houghton Conquest, in Bedfordshire, and died in 1691; and his son Richard lost the living of Wells, in Somersetshire, on the same account. He died in 1682. They were both men of eminent piety and talents.—Calamy. Palmer's Noncon. form. Mem.

FAIRFAX (Edward), an English poet, was the son of sir Thomas Fairfax, of Denton, in Yorkshire. He translated Tasso's poem of Godfrey of Bouillon into English verse, and wrote a curious book, entitled Demonology, in which he avows his belief of witchcraft. He died about 1632.—Biog. Br.

FAIRFAX (Thomas lord), general of the parliament army in the civil wars, was the eldest son of Ferdinando lord Fairfax, and born at Denton, in Yorkshire, in 1611. He commenced his military career under lord Vere in Holland; and when the difference broke out into hostility between the king and parliament, he took a decided part in favour of the latter, being, as well as his father, a zealous presbyterian. He had a principal command in the north, where he and his father were defeated in several engagements, particularly at Adderton Moor, in June 1645. Afterwards, sir Thomas had better fortune, and distinguished himself so greatly at the battle of Marston-moor, that in the new-modelling of the army, he was nominated general in the room of the earl of Essex. In 1645, he defeated the king's forces at Naseby, after which he marched into the west, where he subdued a number of places. In 1648 he succeeded to the title by the death of his father, and the same year took Colchester, after a brave resistance by sir George Lisle and sir Charles Lucas, whom his lordship, after the surrender, basely caused to be shot. Though he pretended to be against putting the king to death, he took no steps to prevent it, and at the time of execution was kept in prayer by major Harrison; a piece of canting hypocrisy scarcely to be credited. He lived retired till the Restoration, when he made his peace with Charles II. and upon whom he waited at the Hague. He died in 1671. He wrote an account of his public life.—Biog. Brit. Clarendon.

FAISTENBERGER (Anthony), a painter of Inspruck, was born in 1678, and died in 1722. His landscapes are beautiful. He had a younger brother, called Joseph, who was also a good painter.—Pilkington.

FAITHORNE (William), an English painter and engraver. He was a soldier in the royal army during the civil wars, and was taken prisoner by Cromwell. On obtaining his liberty he went to France, where he studied under Champagne. At his return he practised painting in miniature and engraving, but chiefly the latter. He also published a book on drawing, graving, and etching. He died in 1691, aged about 75. His son, William, was a good engraver in mezzotinto.—Strutt's Dict. of Engravers.

FALCANDUS (Hugh), the author of a history of Sicily under William I. and written in 1166. When he died is unknown.—Mor.

FALCONBERG (Mary, countess of), the third daughter of Oliver Cromwell, and wife of Thomas viscount Falconberg. She was a woman of considerable talents, a constant member of the church of England, and contributed to the restoration of monarchy. She died in 1712.—Granger.

FALCONE (da Benevento), an Italian historian, and secretary to pope Innocent II. He wrote a Chronicle, or History of Naples, from 1102 to 1140.—Tiraboschi.

FALCONER (William), a Scotch poet, was born in the county of Fife, of humble parents, and bred to the sea. Though he possessed few advantages from education, he had good natural talents, which he cultivated with assiduity. In 1751 he published a poem on the Death of the Prince of Wales, which has merit; but his reputation rests on the Shipwreck, a poem in three cantos, which is highly descriptive and pathetic. It originated in the circumstance of the author's being shipwrecked in a voyage from Alexandria to Venice, when only three of the crew escaped. Falconer also wrote an Ode to the Duke of York, which obtained him the post of purser to the Royal George. He likewise compiled a useful work, entitled the Marine Dictionary, 4to.; and published a poem against Wilkes and Churchill, under the title of The Demagogue. He sailed from England in 1769, in the Aurora, for the East Indies, but after her departure from the Cape of Good Hope the ship was never heard of.—Dr. Anderson's Life of Falconer in Brit. Poets.

FALCONET (Camillus), a French physician, was born at Lyons in 1671. He was a great collector of books, and died in 1762. His works are, 1. A Translation of Ville mot's Systema Planetarum; 2. Several editions of curious books, with notes; 3. Dissertations in the Memoirs of the Academy of Belles Lettres —Nouv. Dict. Hist.

FALCONIA (Proba), a Latin poetess in the time of Theodosius. She was a native of Horta, in Etruria, and composed a cento from Virgil, containing the sacred history from the creation, and the history of Christ in verse —Moreri.

FALDA (John Baptist), an Italian engraver of the 18th century, whose etchings are held in great esteem. He executed views of palaces and views in Rome, which are valuable and curious.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

FALETI (Jerome), an Italian poet of the 16th century, born in the state of Genoa. He wrote a poem on the wars of Charles V. printed in 1557, and other pieces.—Ibid.

FALIERI (Ordelafo), doge of Venice, who sailed with a fleet to the assistance of Baldwin, king of Jerusalem, about 1102. He conquered Dalmatia, Croatia, and other provinces; but in laying siege to the city of Zara, he lost his life, 1120 —Moreri.

FALIERI (Marino), doge of Venice in 1355. He formed the design of murdering all the senators to render himself absolute, but the plot being discovered, he was beheaded.—Ibid.

FALK (John Peter), an ingenious Swede, was born in Westrogothia in 1727. He studied medicine at Upsal, where also he applied assiduously to botany under Linnæus, by whose recommendation he was appointed professor of botany in the apothecaries' garden, and keeper of a cabinet of natural history at Petersburgh, where he shot himself in a fit of melancholy, in 1774. His observations made in his travels were published at Petersburgh in 1785, 3 vols. 4to. —Supplement to the Encyclopedia Britannica.

FALKENSTEIN (John Henry), a voluminous writer of Franconia, was born in 1682. In 1714 he was appointed director of the nobles' academy at Erlangen; but turning Roman catholic, he entered into the service of the bishop of Eichstadt, on whose death he was patronised by the margrave of Anspach. He died in 1760. He wrote the Antiquities of Nordgan, in the bishopric of Eichstadt, 3 vols. folio; and other works of a similar kind.—Gen. Biog.

FALLÉ (Philip), the author of a history of the isle of Jersey, where he was born in 1655. He received his education at Exeter college, Oxford, and on entering into orders, became rector of St. Saviour's, in his native land, where he died.—Gen. B. D.

FALLOPIO (Gabriel), an eminent physician and anatomist of Modena, born in 1430. He discovered the tubes of the uterus, which bear his name. He was professor of anatomy, first at Pisa, and afterwards at Padua, where he died in 1563. His works were printed in 3 vols. folio, at Venice, in 1584.—Tiraboschi.

FALS (Raymond), an ingenious engraver of medals, born at Stockholm in 1658. He went to Paris, where he obtained a pension. He died at Berlin in 1703.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

FANCOURT (Samuel), a dissenting minister, was born in the west of England in 1678. He became pastor of a congregation at Salisbury, from whence he was obliged to remove, for rejecting the Calvinistic notions of election and reprobation. He then came to London, and established the first circulating library about 1740, in which, however, he had little encouragement. He wrote some controversial tracts, and died poor in 1768.—Gent. Mag.

FANNIUS, surnamed Strabo, was twice consul of Rome, and rendered himself remarkable by a law, which prohibited any person from spending more than a certain sum daily. His son was distinguished for his eloquence. He was consul in the 631st year of Rome. There was another of this name, who wrote a history of Nero's cruelties, the loss of which is greatly regretted. He lived in the time of Trajan.—Moreri.

FANSHAWE (sir Richard), a statesman and poet, was born in Hertfordshire in 1608, and educated at Cambridge. In 1635 he was sent ambassador to Spain, from whence, in 1641, he returned, and acted steadily for the royal cause. He was taken prisoner at the battle of Worcester, and closely confined for a considerable time; but at last recovered his liberty, and went to Breda, where he was knighted by Charles II. in 1656. At the Restoration he was made master of requests, and sent to Portugal, to negociate the marriage with the king and the infanta Catherine. In 1664 he was sent ambassador to Spain, and died there in 1666. He translated into English the Pastor Fido, or Faithful Shepherd, of Guarini; also the Lusiad by Camoens. His letters during his embassies in Spain and Portugal were printed in 1702, 8vo.——Biog. Brit.

FARDELLA (Michael Angelo), professor of natural history and astronomy at Padua, was born in Sicily in 1650, and died at Naples in 1718. He wrote several books, which are little known.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

FARE (Charles Augustus, marquis de la), a French writer, was born in 1644. He was a captain in the guards, and died in 1712. He began to write verses at the age of 60, and his poems are lively and ingenious. He also wrote Memoirs and Reflections on the reign of Lewis XIV. 12mo.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

FAREL (William), a protestant divine, was born at Gap, in Dauphiné, in 1489. He studied at Paris, but having embraced the reformed religion, he left France; and after visiting several parts of Germany and Switzerland, settled at Geneva, where he laboured with great zeal against popery, and was the chief person in establishing the Reformation. He was banished from thence, with Calvin, in 1538, for refusing to submit to the synod of Berne. Farel then settled at Neufchatel, where he died in 1565. His writings are few.—Boyle.

FARIA DE SOUSA (Emanuel), a Portuguese knight, who died at Madrid in 1650. He wrote, a History of Portugal to the reign of Henry Cardinal; a History of the Portuguese dominions in Europe, Asia, and Africa; and some other works.——Moreri.

FARINATO (Paul), an Italian painter and architect, born at Verona in 1522. There is a picture by him in the church at Verona, not inferior to one of Paul Veronese, placed next to it. He died in 1606.—Pilkington.

FARINELLI; see BROSCHI.

FARRINGDON (Anthony), an English divine, was born at Sunning, in Berkshire, in 1576, and educated at Trinity college, Oxford, of which he became fellow in 1617, and three years after took the degree of M. A. In 1634 he obtained the vicarage of Bray, in Berkshire, but was deprived of it in the civil wars, and reduced to great straits, when he was invited by the parishioners of St. Mary Magdalen, Milk-street, London, to be their minister. He died in 1658. His Sermons have been published in 3 vols. folio.—Wood's A. O.

FARMER (Hugh), a learned dissenting divine, was born at Shrewsbury in 1714. He completed his academical studies under Dr. Doddridge, at Northampton, after which he became chaplain in the family of Mr. Coward, at Walthamstow in Essex, where he also officiated to a small congregation. Owing to the oddness of Mr. Coward's temper, Mr. Farmer went to live with a Mr. Snell, a gentleman in the same neighbourhood, still continuing his connection with the congregation at Walthamstow, till 1761, when he was appointed one of the lecturers to the congregation of salters'-hall. Mr. Farmer's first publication, except a thanksgiving Sermon, was, An Enquiry into the Nature and Design of our Lord's Temptation in the Wilderness, 8vo.: in this work he considers that event as a divine vision, representing the different scenes of our Saviour's future ministry. It was answered by several writers. In 1771 he published his "Dissertation on Miracles." His next publication was "An Essay on the Demoniacs of the New Testament," which he maintains to have been natural diseases: this work was replied to by Dr. Worthington and Mr. Fell; to the former Mr. Farmer returned a temperate answer, but on the other he was unmercifully severe. His last performance was entitled "The general Prevalence of the Worship of Human Spirits in the ancient Heathen Nations asserted and proved:" this was also attacked by Mr. Fell, in an acute and learned treatise, in 1785. That year Mr. Farmer was almost deprived of his sight, but was relieved by a surgical operation, and enabled to pursue his studies. He died at Walthamstow, in 1787. He directed his executors to burn his papers, but some of his letters and fragments of a Dissertation on the story of Balaam were published in 1804, with his life prefixed.

Farmer (Richard), a divine and antiquary, was born at Leicester in 1735, and educated at Emanuel college, Cambridge, where he took his degree of M. A. in 1760, and the same year was appointed classical tutor. In 1767 he took the degree of B. D. and became one of the preachers at Whitehall. He published the year before his Essay on the Learning of Shakspeare, in which he proved that all the knowledge of ancient history and mythology possessed by the immortal bard, was drawn from translations. In 1775 Mr. Farmer was chosen master of his college, and took his degree of D. D. He also became chancellor and prebendary of Litchfield, librarian to the university of Cambridge, and prebendary of Canterbury, which last situation he resigned for a residentiaryship of St. Paul's. He collected ample materials for a history of Leicester, but these, with the plates, he gave to Mr. Nichols for the use of his history of that county. He died in 1797. His collection of scarce and curious books was sold by auction.—Necrology, 1798.

Farnaby (Thomas), an eminent schoolmaster, was born in London about 1575, and admitted a servitor of Merton college in 1590. From thence he was drawn away by a jesuit, whom he accompanied to Spain. But being disgusted with his new connection, he escaped, and entered on board the English fleet; after which he served as a soldier in the Low Countries. On his return to England he kept a school at Martock, in Somersetshire, from whence he removed to London, and gained great reputation as a teacher. In 1616 he was admitted to the degree of M. A. at Cambridge. In the civil wars he was imprisoned for his loyalty: and died in 1647. He published Juvenal and Persius; Seneca's Tragedies; Martial; Lucan's Pharsalia, and other classical authors with notes: Index Rhetoricus & Poeticus; Florilegium Epigrammatum Græcorum; and Systema Grammaticum.—Biog. Brit.

Farnese (Peter Louis), the first duke of Parma and Placentia, was the son of pope Paul III. by a secret marriage, before he became a cardinal. He was assassinated by his subjects, on account of his oppressive conduct, in 1547.—Moreri.

Farnese (Alexander), a Roman cardinal, was the eldest son of the above, and born in 1520. Charles V. said, that if all the members of the sacred college were like Farnese, it would be the most august assembly in the world. He died in 1589.—Ibid.

Farnese (Alexander), third duke of Parma, and nephew of the preceding. He distinguished himself as an able general in the Low Countries, and afterwards in the catholic army in France, in support of the league against Henry IV. He was wounded at the siege of Caudebec, and died soon after at Arras, in 1592, aged 46.—Moreri.

Farneworth (Ellis), an English divine, was born in Derbyshire, and educated at Jesus college, Cambridge. In 1762 he obtained the rectory of Carsington in Derbyshire, where he died the year following. He translated the Life of Pope Sixtus V. from the Italian, 1754, folio; Davila's History of the Civil Wars of France, in 1757, 2 vols. 4to.; the works of Machiavel, 1761, 2 vols. 4to.; and Fleury's History of the Israelites, 12mo.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Farquhar (George), a comic writer, was born at Londonderry in Ireland in 1678, and educated at Trinity college, Dublin, which he quitted to join a company of comedians. Not succeeding in Ireland, he removed to London, and received from the earl of Orrery a lieutenancy in his lordship's regiment. In 1698 appeared his first dramatic piece, entitled Love in a Bottle, which met with success. This was followed, in 1700, by the Constant Couple, or Trip to the Jubilee; the same year he was in Holland, of which country he has given a humorous description in his Letters. In 1701 appeared the comedy of Sir Harry Wildair, and the year following his Miscellanies. In 1703 he brought out the Inconstant, or the Way to Win Him. His next piece was the popular play of the Recruiting Officer. His last performance was the Beaux Stratagem, which also had a great run. He died in the midst of its success in 1707, leaving two orphan daughters unprovided for. Farquhar's comedies are lively, natural, and full of business; but they are also extremely licentious.—Biog. Dram.

Fastolff (sir John), a famous general, was born at Yarmouth in Norfolk, in 1377. He served with great reputation in France, where he obtained several high posts while the English held possessions in that kingdom. In 1440 he returned to his own country, and distinguished himself as a friend to the poor, and an encourager of learning. He was a considerable benefactor to the university of Cambridge, and to Magdalen college, Oxford. Fastolff died in 1459. Though there be a strong similarity in the names, he is not to be taken for the whimsical knight, sir John Falstaff, rendered ridiculous by Shakspeare.—Biog. Br.

Favart (Charles Simon), a French composer of operas, born at Paris in 1710, and died there in 1793. His pieces are numerous and excellent. They make ten vols. in 8vo. His wife was an admirable actress and singer. She died in 1772, aged 45.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Fauchet (Claude), a French antiquary, who died in 1601, aged 72. His works are, Gaulish and French Antiquities; on the Liberties of the Gallican church; on the Origin of Knights, Armorial Bearings, and Heralds; Origin of Dignities and Magistrates in France: all printed together at Paris in 1610, 4to.—Moreri.

Fauchet (Claude), a French priest, was born at Dorne, in the Nivernois, in 1744. He became vicar-general to the archbishop of Bruges, and preacher to Louis XVI. That monarch, however, was disgusted with his excessive vanity, and theatrical mode of action, which, it is said, made Fauchet espouse the revolutionary cause with ardour. He took a leading part in storming the Bastille, and preached a thanksgiving sermon on the occasion. In another he had the impudence to call Jesus Christ the first sans culotte of Judea. He entered among the Illuminati, and in 1791 became what was called the constitutional bishop of Bayeux. He was also deputy for the department of Calvados, to the legislative assembly, and afterwards a member of the convention. He was guillotined in 1793. His works are, a Panegyric on St. Lewis, pronounced before the French academy; a Funeral Oration for the Duke of Orleans; Eloge on Benjamin Franklin; Discourse on Universal Manners, &c.—Nouv. Dict. H.

Faucheur (Michael le), a French protestant divine, who was greatly admired for his eloquence. The marquis de la Force said, after hearing him preach against duelling, "If a challenge were to be sent to me, I would refuse it." He died at Paris in 1667. He wrote, a treatise on oratorical Action; Sermons; Christian Prayers and Meditations; a treatise on the Eucharist. —Bayle.

Faulkner (George), a celebrated Irish printer at Dublin, and the friend of dean Swift and lord Chesterfield. He carried on business many years with great reputation. Having the misfortune to lose his leg, Foote took him off in his Orators in 1762, under the title of Peter Paragraph. Faulkner commenced an action against the poet, but the affair was terminated by lord Townshend. He was chosen an alderman of Dublin, and died there in 1775.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Favorinus, a Platonic philosopher, was born at Arles, in Gaul, and flourished in the time of Adrian. He also taught rhetoric at Rome with great reputation. An historical work by him is quoted in Lucretius.—Fabric. Bibl. Græc.

Favorinus (Varinus), a disciple of Politian, and a benedictine monk. In 1514 he was made bishop of Nocera, and died in 1537. He published a Greek Lexicon at Rome, which was reprinted at Venice in 1712. He also wrote Cornucopiæ & Horti Adonidis.—Ibid.

Faur (Guy de), lord of Pibrac, was born at Toulouse in 1528. He became an advocate, and was sent by Charles IX. to the council of Trent, where he well defended the liberties of the Gallican church. He afterwards became advocate-general in the parliament of Paris, and counsellor of state. He died in 1584. He wrote, an Apology for the Massacre of Paris; and Quatrains, or Moral Maxims in French verse, which have been translated into several languages.—Moreri.

Favre (Antony), in Latin Faber, an able lawyer, born in 1557 in the duchy of Savoy, and died in 1624. His works form 10 volumes in folio.—Ib'd.

Faust, or Fust (John), a goldsmith of Mentz, who is said by some to have been the inventor of printing. He is, however, supposed only to have assisted Guttemburg and his son-in-law Schaeffer, in bringing this noble discovery to perfection. The first production, by the new process of metallic types, was, Durandi rationale divinorum officiorum, by Faust and Schaeffer, in 1459; which was succeeded by the Catholicon Joannis Januensis. But the greatest work of all was the Bible in 1462; previous to which they had executed two beautiful editions of the Psalter. The story of Faust's being taken up as a magician at Paris, on account of the exactness of the copies of the Bible, which he took thither for sale, is not entitled to credit. He was there in 1466, and is supposed to have died soon after.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Fausta (Flavia Maximiana), the second wife of Constantine the Great. By her accusations the emperor put his son, Crispus, by a former wife, to death; but her infidelity becoming notorious, she was suffocated in a bath A. D. 327.—Moreri.

Faustina (Anna Galeria), the Elder, was the daughter of Annius Verus, and the wife of Antoninus Pius. Notwithstanding her debaucheries, the emperor would not divorce her. She died in 141, aged about 37. Her daughter was the wife of Marcus Aurelius, and exceeded her mother in dissoluteness. She died in 175.—Moreri.

FAUSTUS, a learned prelate of the 5th century, was a native of Britain, and in 455 became bishop of Riez, in Provence. He wrote against the doctrines of election and reprobation, which pieces have been abridged by Dupin. He was banished from his see in 481, and died soon after.—Dupin.

FAWCETT (William), an English general, was born of a good family at Shipden-hall, near Halifax in Yorkshire, and was educated in classical learning, at a grammar school in Lancashire. He also became a proficient in mathematics. Having a strong predilection for the army, he served as a volunteer in Flanders, and was soon presented with a pair of colours. He paid an unremitted attention to his duty, and at his leisure hours, studied the French and German languages. While a lieutenant in the guards, he translated from the former, the Reveries, or Memoirs upon the art of War, by field-marshal count Saxe, published in 4to. in 1757; he also translated from the German, Regulations for the Prussian Cavalry, published the same year: this work was followed by, Regulations for the Prussian Infantry, to which was added, the Prussian Tactics, published in 1759. On general Elliot's being ordered to Germany in the seven years war, Mr. Fawcett accompanied him as aid-de-camp, as he afterwards was to the marquis of Granby, who sent him to England with the account of the battle of Warburgh. He was soon after promoted to a company in the guards, with the rank of lieutenant-colonel. The great Frederick, king of Prussia, made him flattering offers to induce him to enter into his service, which he prudently declined. His services and high character were duly valued by his king and country; and he was made knight of the bath, colonel of the third regiment of dragoon guards, and governor of Chelsea hospital. Sir William died in 1804, and was buried with great pomp in the chapel of Chelsea college.—Gent. Mag.

FAWKES (Francis), an English poet and divine, was born in Yorkshire about 1721, and educated at Jesus college, Cambridge, where he took his degrees in arts. On entering into orders he settled at Bramham in his native county, but afterwards he obtained the vicarage of Orpington in Kent, which he exchanged for the rectory of Hayes, where he died in 1777. He published a volume of poems and translations of Anacreon, Sappho, Bion, Moschius, and Theocritus. His version of the Argonautics of Apollonius, was published in 1780. Mr. Fawkes also lent his name to an edition of the Bible with notes.—Nichols's Anec. of Bowyer.

FAYDIT (Anselm), a Provençal poet or troubadour, who was patronized by Richard Cœur de Lion. He died in 1220. He wrote a poem on the Death of Richard I.; The Palace of Love; and several comedies.—Moreri.

FAYDIT (Peter), a French priest of the congregation of the Oratory, from whence he was compelled to remove for publishing a book on the Cartesian philosophy, contrary to a prohibition from his superiors. He also wrote Illustrations of Ecclesiastical History, 8vo.; A Treatise on the Trinity, for which he was imprisoned and a wretched critique on Telemachus. He died in 1709.—Moreri.

FAYETTE (Mary Magdalen, countess of), the wife of the count de la Fayetté. She wrote the romances of Zaide, and the Princess of Cleves, also the Princess of Montpensier; Memoirs of the court of France; the history of Henrietta of England; and other works. She died in 1693.—Moreri.

FEATLY (Daniel), an English divine, was born at Charlton, in Oxfordshire in 1582. He was educated at Magdalen college, Oxford, and afterwards became fellow of Corpus Christi college. He was for some years chaplain to the English embassy in France, and on his return became chaplain to archbishop Abbot, who gave him the rectory of Lambeth. Dr. Featly was the last provost of Chelsea college. He wrote several polemical treatises, principally against the church of Rome. At the commencement of the civil wars he was chosen one of the assembly at Westminster, but his correspondence with archbishop Usher at Oxford being intercepted, he was sent to prison. On regaining his liberty he retired to Chelsea college, where he died in 1644.—Wood's A. O.

FECHT, or FECHTIUS (John), of Brisgaw, a Lutheran divine, was born in 1636, and died in 1716. He wrote a History of Cain and Abel; a treatise on the Religion of the Modern Greeks, &c.—Moreri.

FECKENHAM (John de), the last abbot of Westminster, was born in a village of that name in Worcestershire. When the Reformation commenced he opposed it with spirit, and was sent to the Tower, where he continued till queen Mary's accession, when he was made abbot of Westminster. Queen Elizabeth, whose life he had saved by his remonstrances with Mary when she designed her death, would have given him the archbishopric of Canterbury if he would have conformed, but this he refused. He sat in her first parliament, and protested against the Reformation, for which he was committed to the Tower. He continued in confinement till 1563, and was then delivered to the care of the bishop of Winchester. He died in the castle of Wisbeach in 1585. He was a learned and liberal man, and charitable to the poor. He wrote some controversial pieces.—Wood.

Feijoo (Benedict Jerom), a learned Spaniard of the order of St. Benedict, who died in 1765. He endeavoured to reform the vitiated taste of his countrymen, and to introduce liberal notions in philosophy and medicine. His Teatro Critico in 14 vols. 4to. is full of curious matter, and very free on the licentiousness of the priests and the ignorance of the monks. He also exposed the abuses of pilgrimages, exorcisms, and false miracles; for which he narrowly escaped persecution, but was protected by several eminent men of that nation.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Feithius (Everard), a learned German protestant of the 16th century, who in the troubles of the Low Countries retired to France, where he was greatly esteemed by Casaubon and De Thou. As he was walking in Rochelle he was invited into a house, and was never seen afterwards. His Antiquitates Homericæ appeared at Strasburgh, in 12mo. 1742.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Felibien (Andrew), historiographer and counsellor to the French king, was born at Chartres in 1619, and died in 1695. He wrote Entretiens sur les Vies et sur les Ouvrages des plus excellens Peintres, 5 vols. 4to; The Principles of Architecture, Painting, and Sculpture, 4to.; and Conferences of the Royal Academy of Painting. His sons John Francis, and Michael, were also ingenious men. The first succeeded him in his places, and wrote the Lives of celebrated Architects, 4to.; and a Description of Versailles. He died in 1733. Michael was a benedictine of St. Maur, and wrote the History of the Abbey of St. Denis, folio; and began the History of Paris, which was afterwards completed by Lobineau in 5 vols. folio. He died in 1719.—James Felibien, the brother of Andrew, was canon of Chartres and archdeacon of Vendome. He wrote several religious works, and died in 1716.—Moreri.

Felix, governor of Judea, A. D. 53. St. Paul, when brought before him, delivered an admirable discourse, which made him tremble. Nero recalled him on account of his rapacities.—Ibid.

Felix I. succeeded pope Dionysius in 269. He suffered death in 274, and was canonized. An epistle by him against Sabellius and Paulus Samosatenus is extant.—Felix antipope. He was placed in the papal chair in 355 by the emperor Constans, during the exile of Liberius, on the return of whom he was expelled. Constans would have had the two popes reign together, but the people exclaimed, One God, one Christ, and one bishop! Felix was then exiled, and died 365.—Felix III. succeeded Simplicius, in 483. He had a violent dispute with the emperor Zeno in behalf of the western church, and died in 492.—Felix IV. a native of Beneventum, ascended the chair after John I. in 526. He governed the church with zeal and piety, and died in 530. He introduced extreme unction.—Mor.

Felix, bishop of Urgella, in Catalonia. He espoused the notion of his friend Elipand, archbishop of Toledo, that Jesus Christ was the Son of God only by adoption. For this Charlemagne caused him to be deposed and banished to Lyons, where he died in 815.—Moreri. Mosheim.

Fell (John), a learned prelate, was born at Longworth in Berkshire in 1625, and educated at Christchurch, Oxford, of which his father was dean. In the rebellion he was ejected from the college for his loyalty. At the Restoration he was made canon and dean of Christchurch, to which college he was a liberal benefactor. He served the office of vice-chancellor several times, and in 1675 was made bishop of Oxford, with leave to hold the deanry in commendam. He died in 1686. His works are: The Life of Dr. Hammond; a Paraphrase on St. Paul's Epistles; editions of several ancient authors with notes, as Cyprian and others. The bishop's father was turned out of his deanry by the rebels in 1647, and died of grief for the murder of the king.—Biog. Br.

Fell (John), a dissenting minister, was born at Cockermouth, in Cumberland, in 1732, and bred a taylor; which occupation he followed in London for some time, but his love of letters being discovered, he was enabled by a friend to pursue his studies at an academy, after which he became pastor of a congregation at Beccles, near Yarmouth, from whence he removed to Thaxted, in Essex, where he also kept a boarding-school. After residing there several years, he accepted an invitation to be resident tutor in the dissenting academy at Homerton. But he had not been there long before a misunderstanding arose between him and the managers of that institution, which ended in his dismissal without being heard in his own defence. Some friends then subscribed a yearly stipend of one hundred pounds, for which he was to deliver a course of lectures on the evidences of christianity. Four of these were preached by him in 1797, but the treatment he had received brought on a complaint of which he died, Sept. 6, in that year. The lectures were completed and published by Dr. H. Hunter. Mr. Fell was the author of an answer to Mr. Farmer's Essay on the Demoniacs; and another in reply to that gentleman on the Idolatry of Greece and Rome; an Essay on the Love of one's Country; Genuine Protestantism; A Letter to Mr. Burke on the Penal Laws; An Essay towards an English Grammar, &c.—Necrology. Fun. Serm. by Dr. Hunter.

Feller (Joachim Frederic), a learned German, was born in 1673, and died in 1726. He was secretary to the duke of Weimar, and published Monumenta varia inedita, 1714, 4to.; Miscellanea Leibnitiana; Genealogy of the House of Brunswick, &c.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Feller (Francis Xavier), an ex-jesuit, was born at Brussels in 1735, and died at Ratisbon in 1802. He published at Luxembourg an historical and literary Journal, from 1774 to 1794; a Geographical Dictionary; and the Historical Dictionary, in 8 vols. 8vo. at Liege. The editors of the last edition of the Nouveau Dictionnaire Historique are very severe on him, on account of this last work, which they call a piracy, committed on their own. Feller also wrote Observations on the Philosophy of Newton; an impartial Examination of the Epochs of Nature, by Buffon, &c.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Felton (John), a catholic gentleman, who placed the pope's bull, excommunicating queen Elizabeth, upon the gates of the bishop of London, for which he was executed in 1570.—His son Thomas was an ecclesiastic of the order of St. Francis, and visiting England as a missionary, was apprehended and executed in 1588.—Moreri.

Felton (John), an obscure man, who rendered himself remarkable by stabbing George Villiers duke of Buckingham, at Portsmouth, in 1628. He had been a lieutenant of a foot company the captain of which was killed in the unsuccessful attack on the isle of Rhé; and being disappointed in succeeding him, Felton left the army and turned puritan. Fanaticism and revenge operating on his mind, he thought he should render God service by committing this action, for which he was soon after executed. —Clarendon's Hist. Rebellion.

Felton (Henry), an English divine, was principal of Edmund hall, Oxford. He dedicated to his pupil the duke of Rutland, an ingenious little volume entituled, "A Dissertation on reading the Classics, and forming a just style." He was also the author of a volume of sermons, and died in 1739.

Fenelon (Francis de Salignac de la Motte), archbishop of Cambray, was born of an illustrious family, at the castle of Fenelon, in 1651. He completed his studies at Paris, where, when young, he distinguished himself as a preacher. In 1686 he was employed as a missionary in Saintonge to convert the protestants. In 1689 he became tutor to the dukes of Burgundy, Anjou, and Berri, which office he discharged so well, that in 1595 he was preferred to the archbishopric of Cambray. About this time he fell into trouble, on account of his book entituled, The Maxims of the Saints, which was charged with favouring the principles of madame de Guyon. Bossuet, bishop of Meaux, who was a violent enemy of that celebrated mystic, attacked the archbishop, and by his influence with the king, obtained an order for him to be banished to his diocese. The book was also condemned at Rome; and to this censure Fenelon submitted with profound deference, and even read the pope's decree from the pulpit. He spent the remainder of his days in his diocese, and never recovered the king's favour, owing in a great measure to his composing for his royal pupil, the duke of Burgundy, that inestimable work for the instruction of a prince, Telemachus, which Lewis considered as a satire upon himself. The good archbishop, however, bore his exile with the serenity of conscious integrity; uniting in his deportment the dignity of a nobleman, with the exemplary care of a prelate, and the tender affection of a good pastor. His charities were unbounded, and so revered was his character, that the duke of Marlborough and other generals of the allies, when possessed of that part of Flanders, exempted his lands from pillage or exaction. He died in 1715, without money and without a debt. Besides the above works, he wrote Dialogues of the Dead; Dialogues on Eloquence; a treatise on the education of Daughters; a Demonstration of the Existence of God; and Spiritual Works.—Mor.

Fenton (sir Geoffrey), an English writer, was born in Nottinghamshire, and died at Dublin in 1608. He translated Guicciardini's History of the Wars of Italy, and some other books.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Fenton (Elias), an English poet, was born at Shelton, in Staffordshire, and educated at Jesus college, Cambridge, for the church, but this design was frustrated by his refusing the oaths to William and Mary. He was for some time usher of a school in Surrey, and afterwards master of one at Sevenoaks in Kent. He removed from thence in 1710, to be secretary to the earl of Orrery, and tutor to his son. He afterwards lived with lady Trumbull as tutor to her son, and died at her seat in Berkshire in 1730. He wrote some poems; the Life of Milton; the Tragedy of Marianne; and assisted Pope in his translation of the Odyssey.—Johnson's Lives of the Poets.

Ferajuoli (Nuzio), an Italian painter of landscape, was the disciple of Luca Giordano, and born in 1661. His pictures are beautiful.—Pilkington.

Ferdinand I. emperor of Germany, succeeded his brother Charles V. in 1558, at which time Ferdinand was king of the Romans, and of Hungary and Bohemia. He made peace with the Turks, and died in 1564, leaving the character of a wise and humane prince.—Ferdinand II. was the son of the archduke of Stiria; elected king of Bohemia in 1617, and of Hungary in 1611. Soon afterwards he succeeded Mathias as emperor. The Bohemian states having chosen the elector palatine Frederic to be their king, Ferdinand defeated him at Prague in 1620. A league was then formed against the emperor by the protestant princes, headed by Christian IV. of Denmark, who was defeated by Tilly, and forced to make peace. Another league was formed, of which Gustavus Adolphus had the lead: he defeated the Imperialists in different battles, but was himself slain at that of Lutzen in 1632. A partial peace was afterwards made between the emperor and some of the protestant princes. He died in 1637. —Ferdinand III. surnamed Ernest, was the son of the preceding, born in 1608, made king of Hungary in 1625, of Bohemia in 1627, and succeeded his father in 1637. Sweden and France being in alliance, gained several advantages over the Imperialists, which terminated with the peace of Munster in 1648. The emperor died in 1657.—Mor.

Ferdinand I. king of Castile and Leon, called the Great, was the second son of Sancho III. king of Navarre. By the death of Bermudo in 1037, he became king of Leon; on which he made war against the Moors, from whom he took several cities, and pushed his conquests as far as Portugal. He next declared war against his brother Garcias IV. king of Navarre, in which that prince lost his kingdom and life. Ferdinand died in 1065.—Ferdinand II. son of Alphonso VIII. king of Leon and Castile. He gained great advantages over the Portuguese, and made prisoner their king, Alphonso Henriquez, whom he used with moderation. He died in 1187, after reigning 30 years.—Ferdinand III. son of Alphonso IX. He obtained the crown of Castile by the abdication of his mother, Berengere, in 1217, and that of Leon by the death of his father, in 1230. He took many places from the Moors, but while he was projecting an expedition against Morocco, he died in 1252. He was canonized by pope Clement X.—Ferdinand IV. succeeded to the throne of Castile in 1295, at the age of six years, under the guardianship of his mother, who governed the kingdom with great prudence. He died in 1312.—Ferdinand V. called the Catholic, son of John II. king of Arragon. He married Isabella of Castile, sister of Henry IV. and thereby united the two kingdoms of Castile and Arragon. Ferdinand declared war against Alphonso, king of Portugal, and defeated him at Toro in 1476. He next conquered Grenada, and in 1516 he expelled the Moors out of Spain; but the most remarkable event of his life was the discovery of America by Columbus. He also made himself master of part of Navarre. He died in 1516.—Ferdinand VI. son of Philip V. and of Mary of Savoy, ascended the throne in 1746. This prince distinguished his reign by acts of beneficence. He restored liberty to the prisoners, proclaimed pardon to smugglers and deserters, and assigned two days in a week to render justice to his subjects. He took part in the war of 1741, and signed the peace in 1748, by which means one of his brothers obtained the crown of the two Sicilies, and the other the dukedom of Parma and Placentia. He re-established his marine, and reformed and promoted the arts and agriculture He died at Madrid without issue, in 1759, aged 46.—Univ. Hist. Moreri. N. D. H.

Ferdinand, king of Portugal, succeeded his father Peter the Justicer in 1367. On the death of Peter the Cruel, king of Castile, he assumed that title, which produced a war between him and Henry of Transtamare, who ravaged Portugal, and forced Ferdinand to make peace on condition of marrying his daughter. This marriage he afterwards disowned; and entered into an alliance with John of Gaunt, duke of Lancaster, who laid claim to the Castilian throne. This war proved very disastrous to the Portuguese, and Ferdinand was obliged to sue for peace. Another war was entered into, in which he was supported by the English, and was for a time successful, but was at last under the necessity of making peace. He died in 1383.—Ibid.

Ferdinand, king of Naples and of Sicily, succeeded Alphonso in 1458. He died in 1494, aged 70, detested for his debaucheries and cruelties; yet he enacted many good laws, and restored the university of Naples.—Univ. Hist.

Ferdinand of Cordova, a learned Spaniard of the 15th century. He is said to have been master of numerous languages and sciences, and perfectly accomplished in all the polite arts. He wrote a treatise, entituled, De Artificio omnis Scibilis; also Commentaries on the Almagest of Ptolemy. —Moreri.

Ferdinand (John), a jesuit of Toledo, who died at Palantia in 1595, aged 59. He wrote a book entituled, Divinarum Scripturarum, juxta Patrum sententias, locupletissimus Thesaurus, in 1594.—Ibid.

Ferdinand de Jesus, a Spanish monk, of the order of Carmelites, at the beginning of the 17th century. On account of his eloquence he was called Golden-mouthed. He wrote Commentaries on Aristotle and the Scriptures.—Ibid.

Ferdinandi (Epiphanius), a celebrated physician, born at Otranto in 1569, and died in 1638. He published Observationes & Casus Medici; Theoremata Medica; De Vita Propaganda; De Peste.—Ibid.

Ferdousi, a Persian poet, whose principal piece is called the History of the Persian Kings. He died A. D. 1020.—D'Herbelot.

Ferg, or Fergire (Francis Paul), an eminent landscape painter, was born at Vienna in 1689. He settled in London, where his talents were greatly admired, but he was reduced to poverty by an imprudent marriage, and died in misery in 1740. He adorned his landscapes with ruins in a grand taste.—Pilkington.

Fergus I. king of Scotland. He was the son of Fergus, king of the Irish Scots, and was invited to Scotland to repel the Picts for which he was chosen king. He was drowned in his passage to Ireland about 404.—Boetius.

Ferguson (Robert), a nonconformist of considerable notoriety. He was ejected in 1662, from the living of Godmersham in Kent; after which he became a schoolmaster, but distinguished himself by his political intrigues, and was accounted a court spy. He joined the duke of Monmouth, whom he is supposed to have betrayed. He was never steady to any party, and died poor in 1714. He wrote the Interest of Reason in Religion, 8vo; a discourse concerning Justification, &c.—Calamy. Burnet's Hist. of his own Times.

Ferguson (James), an ingenious philosopher and astronomer, was born in 1710, at Keith, a village in the shire of Bamff, in Scotland. His parents being poor, he was placed out as a servant to a farmer, who employed him in keeping sheep; in which situation he acquired a surprising knowledge of the stars, and his abilities being discovered by some neighbouring gentlemen, one of them took him to his house, where he learnt decimal arithmetic and the rudiments of algebra and geometry from the butler. From a description of the globes in Gordon's grammar, he made one in three weeks sufficiently accurate to enable him to work problems. He afterwards made a wooden clock and a watch, on which he was employed by some of the gentry in repairing and cleaning clocks; and having a taste for drawing, he earned something by drawing patterns for ladies' work. He next began to draw portraits with Indian ink, by which he supported himself creditably some years. In 1743 he came to London, where he published some astronomical tables and calculations, and gave lectures in experimental philosophy, which he repeated with success throughout the kingdom. In 1754 he published a brief description of the solar system, with an astronomical account of the year of our Saviours's Crucifixion, 8vo.; also an Idea of the Material Universe, deduced from a Survey of the Solar system. But his greatest work is his "Astronomy explained upon Sir Isaac Newton's Principles, and made easy to those who have not studied Mathematics." It first appeared in 1756, 4to. and has been several times reprinted in 8vo. On the accession of the present king, to whom he had read lectures, Mr. Ferguson obtained a pension of fifty pounds a year. In 1763 he was elected a fellow of the Royal Society, without paying the admission fee, or the annual subscriptions: the same year appeared his Astronomical Tables and Precepts, 8vo. In 1767 he published Tables and Tracts relative to several Arts and Sciences, 8vo. Besides these works he was the author of Select Mechanical Exercises; the Young Gentleman and Lady's Astronomy; an Easy Introduction to Astronomy; an Introduction to Electricity; the Art of Drawing in Perspective made easy; and several tracts and papers in the Philosophical Transactions. He died in 1776. Mr. Ferguson was a man of unassuming manners, meek, innocent, and religious.—Life prefixed to his Mechanical Exercises. Hutton's Math. Dict.

Ferguson (William), a Scotch painter, who excelled in painting dead birds and still life. He died about 1690.—Pilkington.

Ferguson (Robert(, a Scotch poet, was born at Edinburgh in 1750. He was educated for the ministry, but a love of poetry and dissipation disqualified him for that profession, and he obtained a place in the sheriff-clerk's office at Edinburgh. He died insane in the Asylum for lunatics at that city in 1774. His poems, which are pastoral, humorous, and lyric, are in Dr. Anderson's collection.—Life by Irving, 1799.

Fermat (Peter) a French mathematician, was born at Toulouse in 1590, and bred to the profession of the law. He became counsellor to the parliament of Toulouse, and died in 1664. His mathematical works were printed at Toulouse, in 2 vols. folio, 1679. His son Samuel Fermat was a learned man, and the author of several works.—Mor.

Fermor (William, count von), a celebrated Russian general, was born at Plaskow in 1704. His father was a native of Scotland, in the Russian military service. In the war against the Turks in 1736, young Fermor displayed great bravery and was made a general. In 1755 he obtained the chief command, and made himself master of Prussia, for which the emperor Francis made him a count of the empire. He gained the famous battle of Zorndoff against Frederic II. of Prussia, and had a considerable share in taking Berlin. He died in 1771. —Gen. Biog.

Fernandez (Anthony), a Portuguese Jesuit, who was many years superior of his order in India, and died in Portugal in 1628. He wrote commentaries on Isaiah, and other parts of the Old Testament. He is not to be confounded with Benedict Fernandez another Portuguese of the same order, who wrote commentaries on Genesis and the gospel of St. Luke. He died at Lisbon in 1630. Nor with Alphonso Fernandez, a Spanish monk of the dominican order, who published an Ecclesiastical History of his time, and other works. He died about 1640.—Moreri.

Fernel (John Francis), physician to Henry II. was born at Mont Didier, in Picardy, in 1506, and died 1558. His works, which are wholly on medical subjects, have been often printed.—Moreri.

Ferracino (Bartholomew), a self-taught genius of Padua. He was born in 1695, and bred a sawyer. His first invention was a saw worked by the wind. He made curious clocks, and hydraulic engines, but his greatest work is the bridge over the Brenta, which is remarkable for the boldness of the design, and its firmness. He died about 1764.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Ferrand (Louis), a lawyer, was born at Toulon in 1645. He became advocate in the parliament of Paris, and died in 1699. He wrote a commentary on the Psalms; several pieces against the Protestants; Conspectus sive Synopsis Libri Hebraici qui inscribitur Annales regum Manciæ et Regum Domus Othomanicæ; Reflections on the Christian Religion, &c.—Moreri.

FERRAND (Anthony), a French counsellor who died at Paris in 1719, aged 42. He wrote songs, epigrams, and madrigals.—N. D. H.

FERRAND (James Philip), a painter in enamel, born at the Joigni, in Burgundy, in 1653, and died at Paris in 1732. He wrote a treatise on his art.—Ibid.

FERRANDUS (surnamed Fulgentius), a deacon of Carthage who died about 550. He was a disciple of St. Fulgentius, whom he accompanied in his exile to Sardinia. His collection of Ecclesiastical Canons was published at Paris in 1588, 8vo. There are also extant two of his letters, an exhortation on the duties of a Christian Soldier, and other remains.—Cave Hist. Lit.

FERRAR (Robert), an English bishop, was born at Halifax, in Yorkshire, and received his education at Cambridge and Oxford. About 1533 he became chaplain to archbishop Cranmer, by whose means he obtained the bishoprick of St. David's, but he was imprisoned at the latter end of king Edward's reign, on some charges alleged against him. In that of Mary he was condemned as a heretic and burnt at Caermarthen in 1555.—Fox's Acts and Mon.

FERRAR (Nicholas), a pious gentleman, was born in London in 1591. His father was an East India merchant. He received a liberal education at Cambridge, after which he travelled over most part of Europe. On his return he became secretary of the Virginia company, and was chosen in 1624 member of parliament, by whom he was appointed, with two others, to draw up articles of impeachment against the lord treasurer Cranfield. Soon afterwards, being of a pious and ascetic turn, he and his family retired from public life to a seat in Huntingdonshire, called Little Gidding, which they converted into a kind of protestant monastery. Mr. Ferrar also entered into deacon's orders in 1626, and died in 1637. He translated Valdesso's Considerations on Religion, from the Spanish into English.—Peckard's Life of Ferrar, 8vo. 1792.

FERRARI (Anthony), one of the founders of the Barnabites, in 1520; the other was James Morigia. This order was confirmed by pope Paul III. in 1535, and multiplied exceedingly. Ferrari became superior of it, and died in 1544.—Moreri.

FERRARI (Octavian), an Italian writer, was born at Milan, in 1518. He became professor first at Padua, and afterwards at Milan, where he taught philosophy till his death in 1586. He wrote, 1. De Sermonibus Exotericis, Venice, 1575; 2. De Origine Romanorum, 1607. He also translated Athenæus into Latin.—Moreri.

FERRARI (Francis Bernardin,) a learned Italian, was born at Milan in 1577. He collected a great number of books, which laid the foundation of the Ambrosian library, of which he was the first keeper. He died in 1669. He wrote De Antiquo Ecclesiasticarum Epistolarum Genere, 1613; De Ritu Sacrarum Ecclesiæ Catholicæ concionum Lib. iii. De veterum acclamationibus & plausu Lib. vii.—Ibid.

FERRARI (Octavio), another learned man of the same family, was born in 1607, and educated at the Ambrosian college, where he became professor of rhetoric. He afterwards removed to Padua, and died in 1682. He wrote Origines Linguæ Italicæ, Padua; De lucernis Sepulchralibus veterum, de Pantominis & Mimis, de Balneis & Gladiatoribus; Electorum, &c.—Ibid.

FERRARI (John Baptist), a Jesuit of Sienna, who published a Syriac dictionary in 1622, 4to. He also wrote De Malorum Aureorum Cultura, 1646; and De Florum Cultura, 1633. He died in 1655.—Ibid.

FERRARS (Giovanni Andrea), an eminent painter, was born at Genoa in 1599, and died in 1666. He painted history, landscape, animals, and flowers.—Pilkington.

FERRARI (George), a lawyer and poet, was born in Hertfordshire in 1512, and educated first at Oxford, and next at Lincoln's-inn. He was in great esteem with Henry VIII. who gave him a large grant of lands in Hertfordshire. He wrote some pieces inserted in the Mirror for Magistrates, published in 1559; and the History of Queen Mary, in Grafton's Chronicle. He died in 1579.—Biog. Br.

FERRARS (Edward), a gentleman of Warwickshire, who wrote some tragedies and comedies, and died in 1564.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

FERRARS (Henry), of the same family with the last mentioned. He made collections towards a history of his native county, which were made use of by Dugdale. He died in 1633, aged 84.—Ibid.

FERREIN (Anthony), professor of medicine in the Royal College at Paris, and member of the French academy. He took his degrees at Montpellier, and distinguished himself by his Lectures on Medicine and the Materia Medica. He died at Paris in 1769, aged 76.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

FERRERAS (don John de), a learned Spanish divine, was born in 1652. He was a member of the Spanish academy at its commencement, to whose dictionary he was a considerable contributor. He also wrote a History of Spain, 10 vols. 4to. and other works, and died in 1735.—Moreri.

FERRETI, of Vicenza, an Italian poet and historian of the 14th century. He wrote a history of his own times, from 1359 to 1428, and some other works in verse and prose.—Moreri.

FERRETI (Emilius), an Italian civilian, born in 1489, and died in 1552. His Opera Juridica appeared in 1591.—Bayle.

Ferri (Paul), a German protestant divine, was born in 1591, at Metz, where he became a popular preacher, and died in 1669. His works are: Scholastici Orthodoxi Specimen; Vindiciæ pro Scholastico Orthodoxo; Catechisme general de la Reformation, &c.—Bayle.

Ferri (Ciro), an eminent painter, was born at Rome in 1634. He was employed by pope Alexander VII. and several Italian princes. He also distinguished himself as an architect, and designed several churches. He died in 1589.—D'Argenville.

Ferrier (Arnaud du), professor of law at his native city Toulouse. In 1562 he was sent ambassador to the council of Trent, where his bold language gave so much offence, that he was sent ambassador to Venice. He assisted father Paul in writing the history of that council, and on his return he avowed himself a protestant. He died in 1585.—Moreri.

Ferrier (Jeremiah), a French protestant minister, who turned papist, and obtained some civil employments. He died in 1626. He was the reputed author of a noted book called Catholique d'Etat, in 1625, and of another on Antichrist.—Bayle. Moreri.

Ferrier (John), a French jesuit, was born at Rodez, in Rouergue. He succeeded father Annat as confessor to Lewis XIV. He was a zealous opponent of the jansenists, and wrote several books. He died in 1674. —Moreri.

Ferrieres (Claude de), a doctor of law of the university of Paris, who published several books on jurisprudence. He died in 1715, aged 77. His son Claude Joseph published a dictionary of law in 2 vols. 4to. 1771.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Ferron (Arnauld du), a lawyer of Bourdeaux, who wrote a continuation of Æmilius's History of France. He died in 1563, aged 48.—Ibid.

Ferte' (Henry de Senecterre mareschal de), a famous French general, who defeated the duke of Lorraine in 1650, for which he was made mareschal of France. In 1656 he was taken prisoner by the Spaniards at the siege of Valenciennes. He died in 1681, aged 82.—Ibid.

Ferus (John), a learned German of the Franciscan order, was born at Metz, where he died in 1554. He wrote commentaries in Latin on several books of the Scripture, in which he so much favoured the protestants, that his works were placed in the Index Expurgatorius.—Bayle. Moreri.

Festus (Porcius), pro-consul and governor of Judea, before whom St. Paul was accused by the Jews, but the apostle appealing to the emperor, Festus sent him to Rome. —Acts Apost.

Festus (Pompeius), an ancient grammarian, who abridged Verrius Flaccus "de Significatione Verborum," the best edition of which is that of Paris in 1681.—Moreri.

Feti (Dominico), an Italian painter born at Rome in 1589. He was the disciple of Civon, and his pictures are highly valued. He died in his 35th year. His sister, who was a nun, also painted well, and adorned her convent with several good works.—D'Argenville.

Feu Ardent (Francis), a Franciscan friar, was born in Lower Normandy in 1541. He was a bigoted zealot, and a seditious preacher against Henry III. and Henry IV. He wrote furiously against the protestants, and died in 1610.—Moreri.

Feuille (Louis), a mathematician of the order of Minims, was born in Provence in 1660. Lewis XIV. sent him into various countries, and granted him a pension. He died in 1732. He wrote a Journal of Observations, physical, mathematical, and botanical, made on the Coasts of South America and New Spain, 2 vols. 4to.—Moreri.

Feuquieres (Anthony de Pas, marquis of), a French general, was born in Artois of a noble family, in 1648. He distinguished himself in Germany, but being disappointed of a marshal's staff, he wrote with great bitterness against all the other commanders of his time in his Military Memoirs, 4 vols. 12mo. He died in 1711.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Feuborn (Justus), a German protestant divine, was born in Westphalia in 1587, and died rector of the university of Grossen in 1656. He wrote several theological works in Latin.—Moreri.

Feutsking (John Henry), a German protestant divine, was born in the duchy of Halstein in 1672. He became doctor in divinity at Wittemberg where he was afterwards professor. He was also ecclesiastical counsellor to the duke of Saxe Gotha, and confessor to the elector of Saxony. He died in 1713. His theological works in the Latin and German languages are very numerous.—Moreri.

Fevre (Claude), a French painter, who excelled in portraits, flowers and historical subjects. He died in London in 1675, aged 42.—Pilkington. Walpole.

Fevre (James le), or Faber Stapulensis, a learned French divine, was born in Picardy about 1440. At the Reformation he fell under the suspicion of lutheranism, owing to his intimacy with several eminent protestants; and his enemies persecuted him so much that he was obliged to retire to Navarre, where he died in 1537. He wrote severely against Erasmus, with whom he had been very friendly, on his alteration of the Scripture. Faber translated the New Testament into French, and wrote Commentaries on several parts of the Scripture. —Bayle. Moreri.

Fevre (Guy le), sieur de la Boderie, a French poet, was born in Lower Normandy, in 1541. He is supposed to have been an ecclesiastic. He was well acquainted with the oriental languages, and assisted in the edition of the Polyglot by Montanus. He also published several works on the Syriac and Chaldaic languages. He died in 1598.—Moreri.

Fevre (Anthony le), brother of the preceding, was born about 1555. Henry IV employed him in several embassies, particularly to England. His memoirs were published at Paris in 5 vols. 12mo.—He died in 1615.—Moreri.

Fevre (Nicholas le, or Faber), a learned man, born at Paris in 1544. Henry IV. appointed him preceptor to the prince of Condé, and after the death of Henry he was tutor to Lewis XIII. He died in 1611. His works were printed at Paris in 1614. 4to.—Moreri.

Fevre (James le), a French ecclesiastic, who wrote several books against the protestants. He was a doctor of the Sorbonne, and died in 1716.—Moreri.

Fevre (Roland le), a painter, commonly called le Fevre of Venice, but born in Anjou. He painted portraits and naked figures, and had a curious method of staining marble. He died in England in 1667.—Pilkington.

Fevre (Tannegui le, or Tanaquil Faber), a learned critic, was born at Caen in 1615. Richelieu settled upon him a pension of 2000 livres, to inspect the books that were printed at the Louvre; but on the death of the cardinal, his salary was stopped. He then removed to Saumur, where he embraced the reformed religion, and obtained the classical professorship. He died in 1672. He was the father of the celebrated Madame Dacier. His son was a protestant minister, but afterwards turned papist. He wrote a tract, entituled, De futilitate Poetices, 1697. Le Fevre published several comments on Greek and Latin authors; 2 vols. of Letters; Lives of the Greek Poets in French; Greek and Latin poems; a Method of Education.—Moreri.

Fevre (N. le), a French jesuit, who died in 1755. He wrote a Treatise on True Religion, and a critical examination of the works of Bayle.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Fevret (Charles), a French civilian, was born in 1582. He was counsellor to the parliament of Dijon, where he died in 1661. He wrote De Claris Fori Burgundici Oratoribus, and Traité de l'Abus.—Ibid.

Fevret de Fontette (Charles Maine), great grandson of the preceding, was born at Dijon in 1710, and bred to the law, in which he became eminent. He was a man of letters, and died in 1772.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Feydeau (Matthew), a doctor of the Sorbonne, was born in 1616, and died in exile at Annonai in Vivares, in 1594. He was a zealous jansenist, and wrote a Catechism on Grace; on the Harmony of the Gospels, &c.—Moreri.

Fiasella (Domenico), an Italian painter, was born in 1589 and died in 1669. He was called Sarezana from the place of his birth. He excelled in painting portraits and history.—Pilkington.

Fichard (John), an eminent lawyer of Frankfort, who died in 1581, aged 69. He wrote Onomasticon Philosophico-Medico Synoymum, de Cautelis; Concilium Matrimoniale; Vitæ Virorum qui emendatione clamerunt, &c.—Moreri.

Ficinus (Marsilius), a learned Italian, was born at Florence in 1433. His father was physician to Cosmo de Medici, by whom Marsilius was greatly esteemed on account of his attachment to the doctrines of Plato. Under the patronage of Cosmo, he made a great progress in all kinds of learning, and was appointed first president of an academy founded by him at Florence. After this he published a complete version of Plato's works in the Latin language. He also translated Plotinus, Iamblichus, Proclus, and other Platonists. Lorenzo the Magnificent was also a liberal patron of Ficinus, and thus Platonism revived with great splendour in Italy. At the age of forty-two he entered into orders and obtained some considerable preferment. He died in 1499. His works were collected and printed together in 2 vols. folio.—Moreri.

Ficoroni (Francesco), a Roman medalist, who wrote several books in Italian on antiquarian subjects. He died in 1747, aged 83. —Gen. Biog. Dict.

Fiddes (Richard), an English divine, was born at Hunmanby in Yorkshire, in 1671, and educated at Corpus Christi college, Oxford, and afterwards at University college. In 1694 he entered into orders, and soon after obtained a living in his native county; but the air of the place proving unhealthy, he was deprived of his speech which he never perfectly recovered. After this he was appointed chaplain to the garrison at Hull, of which he was deprived on the death of queen Anne. He died at Putney in 1735. His principal works are, the Life of Cardinal Wolsey, which brought on him the charge of being popishly affected; a Body of Divinity, folio, for which the University of Oxford conferred on him the degree of D. D.; Fifty-two practical discourses; a Treatise on Morality, &c.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Field (Richard), a learned English divine, was born in Hertfordshire in 1561, and educated at Oxford. In 1591 he was made chaplain to queen Elizabeth, and in 1509 dean of Gloucester. He died in 1616, just as he was about to be nominated to the see of Oxford. He wrote a learned work "Of the Church" in folio.—Wood's A. O.

Fielding (Henry), a celebrated writer, was born at Sharpham, in Somersetshire, of a good family, in 1707. After receiving the rudiments of education at home, he went to Eton, from whence he was sent to Leyden, where he studied two years, and then returned to England. The narrowness of his father's circumstances and the largeness of his family, prevented him from providing for his son in a proper manner. He then commenced writer for the stage, his first piece being entitled, Love in several Masques, which met with a favourable reception: as did his next performance, called The Temple Beau. Some of his dramatic efforts, however, were not so successful, and he had the courage to prefix to one of them, "As it was damned at the theatre-royal, Drury-lane." He afterwards had the good luck to marry a lady of some fortune, and by the death of his mother, he came into the possession of 200*l.* a year. His extravagances, however, were such, that at the age of thirty he had reduced himself to his former condition, on which he entered the Temple, and studied the law with considerable ardour, still exercising his pen for immediate support. One of his publications was, The History of Jonathan Wild, a notorious character, whose story Fielding wrought up into an entertaining romance. In 1742, appeared his Joseph Andrews, a novel, full of humour and admirable delineations of human nature. During the rebellion of 1745, he published some patriotic pieces, for which he was made a Middlesex justice, in which situation he gained considerable reputation, by his Enquiry into the Causes of the late Increase of Robberies; and his Proposal for the Maintenance of the Poor. About this time he wrote his principal work, the novel of Tom Jones; which exhibits a great knowledge of life, and is equally rich in comic delineation and pathetic expression. The moral, however is suspicious. His Amelia, which followed in 1751, is more correct in its sentiment but deficient in humour and variety. A complication of complaints had now produced a dropsy, and after undergoing the operation of tapping, he went with his family to Lisbon, where he died in 1754. His works have been printed uniformly in 12 vols. 8vo. with his life prefixed by Mr. Murphy.

Fielding (Sarah), sister of the preceding, was born in 1714, and died unmarried in 1761. She wrote the novels of David Simple, and the Cry; and translated Xenophon's Memoirs of Socrates into English.—Biog. Brit.

Fielding (sir John), half-brother of Henry and his successor as a justice for Middlesex. Though blind from his childhood, he discharged his office with great credit, and in 1761 received the honour of knighthood. He died in 1780. He published some tracts on police; a Charge to the Grand Jury of Westminster, &c.—Ibid.

Fiennes (William), lord Say and Sele, was born at Brighton, in Oxfordshire, in 1582, and educated at New college, Oxford. In 1624 he was made a viscount. In the rebellion he sided with the parliament party, for which he was declared an outlaw by the king, after whose m[illegible]der he joined the independents, and during the protectorate retired to the isle of Lundy, on the coast of Devon, where he continued till Cromwell's death. At the Restoration he was made privy seal and chamberlain of the household. He died in 1662. His lordship wrote some pamphlets against the quakers.—Granger. Wood.

Fiennes (Nathaniel), second son of the above, was born in 1608, and educated at New college, Oxford, after which he went to Geneva. Being entrusted with the government of Bristol, he surrendered it to prince Rupert, for which he was condemned by a council of war, but his father's interest saved his life. Cromwell, with whom he was in great favour, made him one of his lords. He was a considerable leader of the independent party, and printed some speeches and pamphlets. He died in 1669. —Wood's A. O.

Fienus (Thomas), a physician, was born at Antwerp in 1566. He became professor of physic at Louvain, and died there in 1631. His works are, De viribus Imaginationis; De Formatione & Animatione Fœtus; Apologia pro eodem; de Cauteris; Libri Chirurgici.—Moreri.

Frescho (John Lewis), a noble Genoese, who out of ambition and hatred to the famous Andrew John Doria, formed a conspiracy, with the assistance of France and pope Paul, to revolutionize Genoa in 1547. In the attempt to seize the galleys Fiescho was drowned. The conspirators disheartened gave up the enterprise, and the family of Fiescho was proscribed.—Mod. Univ. Hist.

Figino (Ambrozio), an Italian painter, was born at Milan. Lord Pembroke has a fine picture of the ascent from the cross by him. He died in 1590.—Pilkington.

Figrelius (Edmundus), a learned Swede, who was professor of history at Upsal, and died in 1676. He wrote De Statuis illustrium Romanorum.—Gen. B. D.

Filangeri (Gaetano), a political writer, was born at Naples in 1751. He studied the law but never practised. In 1777, he entered into the service of the court, was appointed a gentlemen of the bedchamber, and an officer in the marine. In 1780 he published the beginning of his work on Legislation, and the 8th volume in 1791. It was never completed. In 1787 he obtained a place in the royal college of Finance, and died the year following. His work has gone through several editions.—Gen. Biog.

Filelfo (Francis), or Philelphus, one of the restorers of letters, was born at Ancona in 1398, and after studying at Padua, he opened a school of rhetoric at Venice, the state of which appointed him chancellor and ambassador to Constantinople. While there he studied the Greek language, and married a daughter of Chrysoloras. On his return to Venice he brought with him many Greek manuscripts. In 1428 he removed to Bologna, where he was appointed professor of moral philosophy, but in 1429 he went to Florence. A difference between him and Cosmo de Medici, obliged him to go to Sienna and afterwards to different other places. He died at Florence in 1481. He was a man of learning and abilities, but restless and quarrelsome. His epistles were printed at Venice in 1502. His eldest son GIAMMARIA, or Marius Philelphus, was also a good scholar, and died at Milan in 1480.—Mor. Tiraboschi.

FILESAC (John), a French divine and doctor of the Sorbonne, and dean of the faculty of theology at Paris. He died in 1638. His works were printed in 1621, 3 vols 4to.—Moreri. Dupin.

FILICAIA (Vincentio da), an Italian poet, was born of a noble family at Florence in 1642, and died in 1707. His poems in Latin and Italian are very elegant.—Tirab.

FILMER (sir Robert), an English writer, was born in Kent, and educated at Trinity college, Cambridge. He wrote The Anarchy of a limited and mixed Monarchy; Patriarcha, in which he proves that government was monarchical in the patriarcal ages; and the Freeholder's Grand Inquest. He died about 1688. Mr. Locke wrote against his book on government.—Gen. B. D.

FINÆUS (Orontius), or Finé, professor of mathematics in the Royal college at Paris, was born in 1494. Notwithstanding his great reputation, he died poor in 1755, and left a distressed family. His works were printed in 3 vols. fol.—Moreri.

FINCH (Heneage), first earl of Nottingham, was the son of sir Heneage Finch, recorder of London. He was born in 1621, and educated at Westminster school, from whence he removed to Christ church, Oxford, and afterwards to the Inner Temple. Charles II. made him solicitor-general, and created him a baronet. He was returned to parliament for the university of Oxford in 1661. In 1670 he was appointed attorney general, and soon after lord keeper, with the rank of a peer. In 1675 he was made lord chancellor, and in 1681 created earl of Nottingham. He died the year following. Several of his speeches are in print.—Collins's Peerage.

FINCH (Daniel), eldest son of the above, was born in 1647, and finished his education at Christ church, Oxford. In 1680 he was appointed first lord of the Admiralty, and in 1662 succeeded his father as earl of Nottingham. He opposed the arbitrary measures of James II. but though he favoured the prince of Orange he was against his taking possession of the throne, and strenuously supported the convention in favour of the regency. However, William offered him the post of lord chancellor, which he declined, but he was for a short time secretary of state. On the death of queen Anne, he was one of the lords justices for the administration of affairs, and soon after was made president of the council, but in 1716 he was dismissed on account of a speech which he made in the behalf of the Scottish lords, condemned for high treason. In 1729 he became earl of Winchelsea on the death of John, fifth earl, in virtue of his descent from Elizabeth, daughter and heiress of sir Thomas Heneage, and wife of sir Moyle Finch, his great-grandfather. He died in 1730. He was an able speaker and a man of learning, as appears from his reply to Whiston on the Trinity, for which he received the thanks of the university of Oxford, and of the bishop and clergy of London.—Collins's Peerage. B. B. Coxe's Hist. of Sir Robert Walpole.

FINCH (sir John), a man of wit in the courts of James I. and Charles I. He was born in Kent in 1571, and died in 1641. He wrote a book, entituled, Fineti Philoxenus, or Observations touching the reception, Precedency, &c. of foreign Ambassadors in England.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

FINCK (Thomas), a Danish mathematician, was born in South Jutland in 1561. He took the degree of doctor in physic at Basil, after which he became physician to the duke of Sleswick. In 1591 he was appointed professor of mathematics at Copenhagen, in 1602 professor of eloquence, and the year following that of medicine. He died in 1656. He wrote Geometriæ rotundi; de Constitutione Matheseos; de Medicinæ Constitutione, &c.—Moreri.

FIRENZUOLA (Angelo), an Italian writer, was born at Florence in 1493. He was in orders and had a rich abbey at Rome, where he died in 1545. His works were printed at Florence in 1763, in 3 vols.—Tiraboschi.

FIRMICUS MATERNUS (Julius), a christian writer of the 4th century, whose book De Errore profanarum Religionum has been frequently printed; an Astronomical or Astrological Treatise, printed first at Venice in 1497, has also been ascribed to this author.—Fabric. Bibl. Lat. Moreri.

FIRMILIAN, bishop of Cæsarea in Cappadocia. He was the friend of Origen, and took part with St. Cyprian in the dispute concerning the rebaptization of converted heretics. He presided at the first council of Antioch against Paul of Samosata, and died in 269.—Cav. Hist. Lit.

FIRMIN (Thomas), a benevolent character, was born at Ipswich in Suffolk in 1632, and apprenticed to a tradesman in London. When out of his time, he began business for himself in the linen trade, in which he had good success. His uprightness, piety, and charity, were so distinguished, that some of the greatest divines of the age were glad of his friendship, particularly archbishop Tillotson. He erected a warehouse for the employment of the poor in the linen manufacture, and when the French protestants came over he set up another for their use at Ipswich. He was one of the governors of Christ's and St. Thomas's hospitals, to which he was a liberal benefactor, nor was there any public charity in which he had not some concern. This truly good man died in 1697. He published in 1678, "Some Proposals for the employing of the Poor, and especially in and about the city of London, and for the Prevention of Begging," 4to.—Life of Firmin by Cornish.

FIRMIN (Giles), an English divine of the nonconformist persuasion. He was a native of Suffolk, and educated at Cambridge, after which he went to New England, and practised as a physician. On his return he was ordained in the Presbyterian way, and became minister of Shalford, from whence he was ejected in 1662. He then resumed the practice of physic, and died in 1697. He wrote The real Christian, a book of practical Religion; a Treatise of Schism, and other works.—Calamy.

FIRONZABADI, surnamed Shirazi, a Persian doctor of the 11th century, who wrote a work highly esteemed among the Mussulmans, entituled, Al Tanbidh, or General Information on the Mohammedan Law. There was another of the same name, who compiled a dictionary of the Arabic language, called, The Ocean. He died A. D. 1414.—D'Herbelot. Moreri.

FISH (Simon), an English lawyer, who on account of his activity for the Reformation, was obliged to fly to Germany, where in conjunction with William Tyndale, he wrote the Supplication of Beggars against Monks and Friars. This piece so pleased Henry VIII. that Fish had liberty to return. He also translated from the Dutch, a little book, entitled, The Sum of the Scriptures. He died of the plague in 1571.—Wood.

FISHER (John), an English prelate, was born at Beverly, in Yorkshire, in 1459, and educated at Cambridge. He became confessor to Margaret, countess of Richmond, mother to Henry VII. who by his advice founded St. John's and Christ's colleges, Cambridge. He was afterwards chosen chancellor of that university, and was a liberal encourager of learning. In 1504 he was made bishop of Rochester, from which he would never remove to a better see. He was a zealous opponent of the Reformation, and of the king's divorce from queen Catherine. Great efforts were made to bring him to acknowledge the king's supremacy, which proving ineffectual, he was sent to the Tower. While in confinement the pope made him a cardinal, which so enraged the king, that he caused him to be tried for high treason, condemned and beheaded in 1535. He was a man of considerable learning, strict integrity, and fervent piety. He wrote a commentary on the penitential psalms; a Defence of the king's book against Luther; a funeral Sermon for the lady Margaret, &c.—Biog. Brit.

FISHER (Mary), a quaker of the 17th century, who took it into her head to go to Constantinople, to convert the grand seignor. The sultan Mahomet IV. heard her patiently, and then caused her to be sent back to her own country, where she married a preacher of her own sect. This couple afterwards went to Languedoc, to preach the tenets of quakerism among the protestants there.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

FITZHERBERT (sir Anthony), a learned judge in the reign of Henry VIII. was born in Derbyshire, and educated at Oxford, from whence he removed to one of the inns of court. In 1523 he was made a judge in the court of common pleas, and died in 1538. He wrote The Grand Abridgment; a Collection of Cases; The Office and Authority of Justices of the Peace; The Office of Sheriffs; Natura Brevium, &c. He is also supposed to have written a book on the Surveying of Lands, and another of Husbandry.—Biog. Brit.

FITZHERBERT (Thomas), grandson of the preceding, was born in Staffordshire in 1552, and educated at Oxford. On account of his zeal for the Roman catholic religion he went abroad; and in 1614 he entered among the jesuits at Rome, after which he removed to Brussels, to preside over the English mission. Being appointed rector of the English college at Rome, he returned thither, and died in 1640. His writings are wholly controversial.—Biog. Brit.

FITZHERBERT (Nicholas), another grandson of the judge, was born about 1550, and educated at Exeter college, Oxford. About 1572 he went to Italy, and resided with cardinal Allen. He was drowned in 1612. He wrote a Description of the University of Oxford; on the Antiquity and Continuance of the Catholic Religion in England; the Life of Cardinal Allen, &c.—Ibid.

FITZJAMES (James), duke of Berwick, natural son of James II. by Arabella Churchill, sister to the duke of Marlborough. He was born at Moulins in 1671, and entered early into the French service. At the age of 15 he was wounded at the siege of Buda. In 1688 he was sent to Ireland, where he distinguished himself at the siege of Londonderry, and the battle of the Boyne. He was afterwards employed on various services, for which he was rewarded with the rank of marshal of France. He gained the victory of Almanza over the English and their allies, which fixed Philip V. on the throne of Spain. He was killed by a cannon ball at the siege of Philipsburgh, in 1734.—Moreri.

FITZ-STEPHEN (William), a monk of Canterbury, in the 12th century, who wrote the life of his master Thomas Becket, in which he gives a curious description of London. He died in 1191.—Leland de Script. Brit. Cave Hist. Lit.

FIXLMILLNER (Placidus), a German astronomer, was born near Linz, in Austria. He displayed a turn for mathematics early in life, and pursued it with ardour at Strasburg under professor Stuard, after which he embraced the monastic life, and entered into orders. He became professor of ecclesiastical law, in the academy attached to his monastery at Kremsmunster, and discharged it with reputation forty years. An observatory was also erected there under his direction, of which he became astronomer, and he published an account of numerous observations, besides other works relative to the celestial science. He was also the author of some books on the canon and the origin of the church. He died in 1791, aged 71.—Schlichtegroll's Necrology.

Fixes (Anthony), an eminent physician of Montpellier, who died in 1765, aged 75. He published Opera Medica, 4to.; Leçons de Chymie, 12mo; Tractatus de Febribus, 12mo.; Tractatus de Physiologia, 12mo.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Flaccourt (F. de), director general of the French East India Company, who commanded a colony in the island of Madagascar in 1648, but was obliged to abandon it and return to France, where he wrote a history of that island in one volume, 4to.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Flaccus (Caius Valerius), a Latin poet, who lived in the reign of Vespasian. A poem of his on the Argonautic expedition is extant, the best edition of which is that of Burman 1724.—Voss. Poet. Lat. Moreri.

Flaccus, or Francowitz (Mathias), a Lutheran divine, was born in Istria, which being a part of the antient Illyricum, he assumed the name of Flaccus Illyricus. He became a disciple of Luther and Melancthon at Wittemberg, where he taught the Hebrew and Greek languages, and became professor. He was the principal author of the Centuriæ Magdeburgenses, and a great defender of the rigid principles of Luther against those who were for moderate doctrines, on which account he settled at Magdeburg, and afterwards removed to other places. He died at Franckfort in 1575, aged 55. He wrote Clavis Sacræ Scripturæ, 2 vols. folio; Catalogus Testium Veritatis, folio; De Translatione Imperii Romani ad Germanos, de Electione Episcoporum quod æque ad plebem pertineat, 8vo.—Melch. Adami Vit. Germ. Theol. Bayle.

Flameal (Bertholet), a Flemish painter, was born at Liege in 1614. After studying the principles of his art in his own country he went to Italy, where he greatly improved himself. In 1647 he returned to Liege, which city he adorned with many excellent works. He died in 1675.—D'Argenv.

Flamel (Nicholas), a notary of Paris in the 14th century, who accumulated a vast property, which he appropriated to benevolent purposes, and the endowment of hospitals and churches. The ignorant multitude ascribed his great wealth to his possessing the philosopher's stone, but it is supposed to have arisen from commercial speculations. Two foolish books on alchemy are falsely attributed to him.—Moreri.

Flaminto (Giovanni Antonio), a learned Italian, was born at Imola in 1464. He became an eminent teacher of the belles-lettres at Bologna, where he died in 1536. He wrote Latin poems; Epistles; and the lives of St. Dominic, Albertus Magnus, &c. His son Marc Antonio was also a man of letters. He accompanied cardinal Pole to the council of Trent, and died at Rome in 1550, aged 52. He wrote Carmina quinque illustrium poetarum, 1549; An Exposition of the Psalms; Epistles.—Tiraboschi.

Flaminius, or Flamininus (Titus Quintius), a Roman general, who served the office of consul, B. C 198. He defeated Philip, king of Macedon, in the defiles of Epirus, and afterwards in Thessaly, and restored Greece to freedom, for which the people paid him a profusion of honours at the Isthmian games. In 190 he served the office of censor, and afterwards was ambassador to Prusias, king of Bithynia, whom he prevailed upon to deliver up Hannibal, who poisoned himself to prevent his falling into the Roman power.—Livy. Plutarch.

Flaminius (Nobilis), an Italian divine and critic, who died at Lucca in 1590. He corrected the Vulgate translation of the Scriptures by the Septuagint, and wrote a book on Predestination.—Moreri.

Flamsteed (John), an English astronomer, was born at Derby in 1646, and educated at the grammar school in that town. When very young he discovered a turn for mathematical learning, and in 1669 he calculated an eclipse of the sun which was to happen next year; and also five appulses of the moon to the fixed stars. He sent the same to the royal society, for which he received the thanks of that learned body. Soon after this he visited London, and was introduced to the most learned mathematicians of the time. He then went to Cambridge, and entered himself of Jesus college. One of his best friends was sir Jonas Moore, who introduced him to the king, and in 1674 procured for him the place of astronomer royal. The same year he entered into orders. In 1675 the foundation of the royal observatory at Greenwich was laid, and he was the first resident and astronomer royal, it was called Flamsteed-house, by which name it continues to be known. In 1725 appeared his great work, entituled, Historia Cœlestis Britannica, in 3 vols. folio. In the Philosophical Transactions are many of his papers, and in sir Jonas Moore's System of Mathematics is a tract by him on the Doctrine of the Sphere. He died in 1719. Mr. Flamsteed never received any other church preferment than the crown living of Burstow, in Surry.—Biog. Brit.

Flassans (Taraudet de), a Provençal poet of the 14th century, who wrote a piece on the Treacheries of Love. Joan the queen of Navarre sent him ambassador to the emperor Charles IV. when he passed through Provence.—Moreri.

FLATMAN (Thomas), an English poet, was born in London in 1633, and educated at Winchester-school, from whence he removed to New college, Oxford. On leaving the university he entered himself of the Inner Temple. He died in 1688. His poems, which are licentious and poor, were printed in 1682, 8vo.—Wood's A. O.

FLAVEL (John), a nonconformist divine, was born in Worcestershire, and educated at University college, Oxford, where he took the degree of B.A. In 1650 he was ordained in the presbyterian way at Salisbury. Afterwards he settled at Dartmouth, in Devonshire, where he wrote his Navigation Spiritualized. He was ejected from his living in 1662, but continued to preach privately. At the accession of James II. he returned to Dartmouth. He died suddenly at Exeter in 1691. His works, which are held in considerable esteem, and have been extensively beneficial, make 2 vols. folio, and 6 vols. 8vo.—Life prefixed to his Works. Calamy.

FLAVIAN, patriarch of Antioch, in which see he was confirmed by the council of Constantinople in 382, but it occasioned a schism, numerous bishops adhering to Paulinus and others to Flavian. The prudence of the latter at length restored peace to the church. He was a zealous opposer of the Arians, and died in 404.—Cave Hist. Lit. Moreri.

FLAVIAN, patriarch of Constantinople, to which he was elected on the death of Proclus in 447. He condemned the Eutychian heresy, in a synod held at Constantinople, but the followers of Eutychius afterwards got Flavian banished to Lydia, where he died.—Ibid.

FLAVIGNI (Valerian de), doctor of the Sorbonne, canon of Rheims, and professor of Hebrew in the royal college of France, was born at Laon, and died at Paris in 1674. He attacked le Jay's Polyglot, and defended the purity of the Hebrew text of the Pentateuch, against Morin.—Moreri.

FLAVITAS, patriarch of Constantinople. When Acacius, patriarch of Constantinople, died, the emperor Zeno was weak enough to leave a blank paper under the altar, in expectation that an angel would write upon it the name of a person to succeed him. Flavitas, by bribing the grand chamberlain, gained admittance into the church, and inscribed his own name in the letter; on which he was chosen patriarch. He died about three months afterwards, and the cheat being discovered, the chamberlain was executed.—Moreri.

FLAUST (John Baptiste), an advocate in the parliament of Rouen, who spent fifty years in compiling the Explication of the Jurisprudence Usage of Normandy, in 2 vols. folio. He died in 1733, aged 82.—Ib.

FLECHIER (Esprit), a famous French bishop, was born in 1632, at Pernes, in the county of Avignon. He was greatly admired as a preacher at Paris, and his funeral orations set him on a level with Bossuet. In 1679 he published his History of Theodosius the Great. In 1685 he was made bishop of Lavaur; on which the king said, "I should have rewarded you much sooner, but that I was afraid of losing the pleasure of hearing your discourses." Shortly after he was promoted to the see of Nismes. As a bishop he was exemplary, and by the mildness of his behaviour drew several protestants to the Roman church. When a famine raged in 1709, his charity was unbounded, and manifested to all persons without any respect to religious persuasion. He died in 1710. His works are: Miscellaneous Works, 12mo.; Panegyrics of the Saints; Funeral Orations; Sermons; the Lives of Cardinals Ximenes and Commendon; Letters; Posthumous Works: they were all published together at Nismes in 1782, in 10 vols. 8vo.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

FLEETWOOD (William), an English lawyer, and recorder of London, was born in Lancashire. He received his education at Oxford, from whence he removed to the Inne Temple. He died about 1592. He wrote the history of Edward V. Richard III. Henry VII. and VIII. 1597; the Office of a Justice of Peace, &c.—Wood's A. O.

FLEETWOOD (William), an English prelate, was born in London in 1656, and educated at Eton, from whence he was sent to King's college, Cambridge. Soon after the Revolution he became chaplain to William and Mary, and fellow of Eton. In 1702 he obtained a canonry of Windsor, and in 1706 he succeeded bishop Beveridge in the see of St. Asaph, from whence in 1714 he was translated to Ely. He died in 1723. He wrote Inscriptionum Antiquarum Sylloge, &c.; Chronicon Preciosum, or an Account of the English Money, the Price of Corn, &c. 8vo.; A plain Method of Christian Devotion, 8vo.; An Essay upon Miracles, 8vo.; The reasonable Communicant; Sermons on the relative Duties, 2 vols. 8vo.; Tracts and single Sermons.—Biog. Brit.

FLEMING (Robert), a Scotch presbyterian minister, was born at Bathens in 1630, and educated at St. Andrews. At the age of 23 he was called to a pastoral charge, but at the Restoration he went to Rotterdam, where he officiated to the Scotch congregation, and died in 1694. He is known by a book entitled The fulfilling of the Scriptures.—Fun. Sermon by D. Burgess.

FLEMING (Robert), son of the above, was born in Scotland. He studied at Leyden and Utrecht, and became minister of an English congregation at the former place, from whence he removed to the Scotch church at Amsterdam. After residing there some years he came to London, and officiated to the Scotch church in Lothbury. He was also lecturer at Salters' Hall. He died in 1716. He wrote several sermons and tracts, but he is principally known by a work entituled Christology, 3 vols. 8vo.; and a discourse on the rise and fall of Popery, in which are many passages that correspond remarkably with the early events in the French revolution.—Europ. Mag. 1793.

Fleming (Caleb), a nonconformist minister, was born at Nottingham in 1698. In 1738 he became pastor of a congregation of dissenters in London, and in 1752 was chosen assistant to Dr. James Foster at Pinners' Hall. He died in 1778. Dr. Fleming was of the Arian party, and published several books, the principal of which is, "A Survey of the Search after Souls," 8vo.—Fun. Sermon by J. Palmer.

Flemming or Flemmynge (Richard), an English prelate, was born at Croston, in Yorkshire. He received his education at University college, Oxford, and in 1408 obtained a prebend in the cathedral of York. He was for a time a zealous defender of Wickliffe's doctrines, but he afterwards as strenuously opposed them. In 1442 he became bishop of Lincoln and soon after was sent deputy to the council of Constance, where he distinguished himself by his eloquence. At his return he executed the decree of that assembly for digging up Wickliffe's bones and burning them. He was next raised to the see of York by the pope, but the king refusing his consent, he was obliged to remain at Lincoln. He founded Lincoln college and died in 1431.—Wood's A. O.

Fletcher (Richard), an English prelate, was born in Kent, and educated at Cambridge. In 1588 he was made dean of Peterborough; and in 1586 he attended Mary queen of Scots at her execution, with a view of converting her to the protestant religion, but failed. In 1589 he was preferred to the bishopric of Bristol, from whence he was translated to Worcester, and lastly to London. On the death of his first wife he married again, which gave such offence to queen Elizabeth, that she suspended him from his episcopal function. He died in 1596.—Godwin de Præsulibus.

Fletcher (Giles), brother to the above. He received his education at Eton, and King's college, Cambridge, where he took his degree of L.L.D. in 1581. In 1588 he was sent ambassador to Russia, and on his return was made secretary to the city of London, and treasurer of St. Paul's. He died in 1610. He wrote a piece, entituled, "Of the Russe Commonwealth;" which is a very curious description of that country, 1591, 8vo. and in Hackluyt's Voyages.—Biog. Br.

Fletcher (John), an English dramatic poet, was the son of the bishop of London, and born in 1576. He received his education at Cambridge, and wrote several plays in conjunction with Beaumont. He died of the plague at London in 1625, and was buried in St. Saviour's church, Southwark. The principal piece of his own writing is a dramatic pastoral, entituled, The Faithful Shepherdess.—Biog. Br.

Fletcher (Phineas), son of Giles Fletcher, was born about 1582, and educated at Eton and Cambridge. In 1621 he obtained the living of Hilgay, in Norfolk, where he died in 1650. He is best known by a poem, entituled, The Purple Island, which is an allegorical description of man, in the manner of Spenser, reprinted at London in 1783. His Piscatory Eclogues were printed at Edinburgh in 1772. His younger brother Giles was also a divine and poet, and wrote Christ's Victory. He died in 1623.—Ibid.

Fletcher (Andrew), a political writer, was the son of sir Robert Fletcher, of Saltoun, in Scotland, and born in 1653. He was bred up under the care of Dr. Burnet, afterwards bishop of Salisbury, after which he went abroad. On his return to his own country, he became commissioner for East Lothian in the Scotch parliament, in which he so strongly opposed the court measures, that he found is expedient to withdraw to Holland. In 1685 he landed in the west of England with the duke of Monmouth, but was dismissed for shooting a gentleman who had remonstrated with him for stealing his horse. One of Fletcher's biographers says, that "he was a man of breeding and nice honour, in whose constitution anger was extremely predominant," and this is all the reflection he makes upon the murder. But Fletcher was a republican. After this he was engaged in the Hungarian service against the Turks. At the Revolution he returned to his own country, and was a member of the convention for settling the government of Scotland. He died in London in 1716. His publications, which are wholly political, and filled with the boldest extravagances, were collected into one volume, 8vo. 1732.—Life by Lord Buchan.

Fletcher (Abraham), an ingenious mathematician, was born at Little Broughton, in Cumberland, in 1714, and bred to his father's business, which was that of a tobacco-pipe-maker. He learned to read and write by his own application, after which he taught himself arithmetic, mathematics, and botany. At the age of thirty he turned schoolmaster, to which profession he added those of astrologer and doctor, by which means he acquired 3000*l*. He died in 1793. He published a compendium of practical mathematics, under the title of the Universal Measurer, 1 vol. 8vo. a book of merit.—Hutchinson's History of Cumberland.

Fletcher (John), a pious divine, was a native of Switzerland, and educated at Geneva. He came to England, and was appointed president of lady Huntingdon's seminary of education at Trevecka, in South Wales, but was dismissed from that situation for denying the doctrine of absolute election. He afterwards obtained the vicarage of Madely in Shropshire, where he died in 1785. Mr. Fletcher wrote several tracts against the Calvinists.—Gent. Mag.

FLEURY (Claude), a French writer, was born at Paris in 1640. He was a lawyer, but afterwards embraced the ecclesiastical state, and obtained the abbey of Loc Dieu, in the diocese of Rhodez. He became confessor to Louis XV. and died in 1723. The chief of his works are: 1. The Manners of the Israelites; 2. The Manners of Christians; 3. Ecclesiastical History, 13 vols. 4to.; 4. Treatise on Public Law, 2 vols. 12mo.—Moreri.

FLEURY (Andrew Hercules de), cardinal and prime minister of France, was born in 1653, in Languedoc. In 1698 he was appointed bishop of Frejus, by Lewis XIV. who also nominated him in his will tutor to his successor Lewis XV. over whom he gained a great influence. In 1726 he was made a cardinal, and notwithstanding his great age, he managed the affairs of government with great vigour and political wisdom. In 1733 he concluded a peace with the emperor, and gained Lorraine to France. He died in 1743, and was buried in the church of the Louvre.—Moreri.

FLINK (Govert), an eminent Dutch painter, was the disciple of Rembrandt, whose manner he imitated with success; but afterwards he studied the best Italian masters. He died in 1660.—Houbraken.

FLODOARD, or FRODOARD, a French historian. He was an ecclesiastic in the church of Rheims, and wrote a Chronicle from 919 to 966; also a History of the Church of Rheims to 949. He died in 966, aged 73. —Moreri.

FLOGEL (Charles Frederic), a German writer and professor of philosophy in the academy of nobility at Leibnitz, who died in 1788, aged 59. He wrote a history of the Human Understanding; present state of the Belles Lettres in Germany; History of Comic Literature, &c. all in German.—Gen. Biog.

FLOOD (Henry), a political character, was the son of the right hon. Warden Flood, chief justice of the King's Bench in Ireland. He received his education at Dublin and Oxford, and was created M.A. at the latter university in 1752. While there he wrote an English poem on the death of Frederic prince of Wales, inserted in the Oxford collection. He came into parliament for the county of Kilkenny, and afterwards for the borough of Callan. His eloquence was great, and he acquired an uncommon popularity in Ireland, which he lost when he obtained a seat in the British parliament. He died in 1791. Mr. Flood published a Pindaric Ode to Fame; and several of his speeches have been also printed. He bequeathed the bulk of his property, after the death of his wife, to the university of Dublin, for the purpose of founding a professorship, purchasing manuscripts and books, and for granting premiums.—Europ. Mag.

FLORENTINO (Stephano), an historical painter, was born at Florence in 1301. He studied under Giotto, and died in 1350.—Pilkington.

FLORIAN (John Peter Claris de), a French writer, was born in 1755, of a genteel family, in Languedoc. He was related to, and educated under, Voltaire, who procured him the place of page to the duke de Penthièvre. The duke had a great regard for him, made him his confidential friend, and obtained him a captain's commission in his regiment. He devoted himself, however, principally to letters, and produced a number of works, chiefly of the romantic kind. His first production was Galathée, published in 1782, which was followed by his Theatre, containing Les deux Billets, le bon Menage, le bon Pere, la bonne Mere, and le bon Fils. His Voltaire et le Serf du Mont Jura gained him the prize given by the French academy, of which society he became a member. His Estelle is reckoned equal to Galathée, and his Numa is also highly esteemed. For the latter he was sent to prison in the tyranny of Robespierre. In his confinement he began a poem on the story of William Tell, and finished another, entituled, Ebrahim. He gained his liberty after the fall of Robespierre, and died at Seaux in 1794.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

FLORIMOND de Remond, a French writer, was born in Guienne. He became counsellor of the parliament of Bourdeaux, and died in 1602. He was a zealous defender of the Romish tenets against the Calvinists: the principal of his works are on Antichrist; and on the Origin of Heresies. —Moreri.

FLORIO (John), a French refugee of the protestant persuasion, who settled in England in the reign of Elizabeth. He taught the French and Italian languages at Oxford, and died in 1625, aged 80. He compiled a dictionary, Italian and English, 1597, folio, and translated Montaigne's Essays.—Wood's A. O.

FLORIS (Francis), a painter of Antwerp, was born in 1520. He studied the works of Michael Angelo in Italy, and on his return to his own country he became so greatly employed as to acquire a good fortune. He died at the age of 50.—Houbraken.

FLORUS (Lucius Annæus), a Latin historian, of the same family as Seneca and Lucan. He wrote an abridgment of the Roman History, in four books, which is concise and elegant. He flourished A.D. 116. The best editions of Florus are Duker's, 2 vols. 8vo. L. Bat. 1722, Grævius, Lips. 1760, and that of Fischer. 8vo. Lip. 1760.—Voss. Hist. Lat. Biog. Classica.

FLORUS, surnamed the Master, a deacon of the church of Lyons in the 9th century.

He answered Erigena on Predestination, which is to be found in the Bibl. Pat. tom. 8. He was also the author of Commentaries on the Epistles of St. Paul, and other works. —Cave. Hist. Lit. Moreri.

Flover (sir John), a physician, was born at Hinters in Staffordshire, in 1649. He became a commoner of Queen's college, Oxford, where he completed his degrees in arts, and took those in physic, after which he settled at Litchfield, and was knighted. He died about 1720. His works are: 1. The Touchstone of Medicines, 2 vols. 8vo; 2. The Virtues of Cold Water, 8vo.—Wood.

Fludd (Robert), an English philosopher, was the son of sir Thomas Fludd, and born at Milgate, in Kent, in 1574. He received his education at St. John's college, Oxford, where he took his degrees in arts, and then travelled abroad. In 1605 he returned to England, and took his degree of M.D. after which he settled in London, and became fellow of the college of physicians. His writings are wholly on alchemy, and the mysticism of the Rosicrusians. He died in 1637.—Wood's A. O.

Foes, or Foesius (Anutius), a learned physician, was born at Metz in 1528. He translated the works of Hippocrates into Latin, and died in 1596.—Moreri.

Foglietta (Uberto), a Genoese historian and divine, was born in 1518. He was banished from Geno for the freedom of his writings, on which he retired to Rome, where he died in 1581. His principal works are: 1. Historia Genuensium, 1585; 2. De Causis Magnitudinis Turcarum Imperii; 3. Della Republica di Genoa, &c.—Tiraboschi.

Foh, the first Chinese monarch, who is said to have founded that kingdom 200 years after the deluge. To him the Chinese are indebted for musical instruments, a code of laws, and the regulation of marriages.—Dubalde.

Foinard (Frederic-Maurite), a French priest, was born at Couches, in Normandy. He was learned in the Hebrew, and became vice-principal of the college of du Plessis. He died in 1743. He published Breviarium Ecclesiasticarum, 2 vols. 8vo.; The book of Genesis explained, Latin and French, 2 vols. 12mo.; The Psalms in historical order, &c. —Moreri.

Foix (Mark Antony de), a French jesuit, was born in 1627. He was a distinguished preacher, and died provincial of the college of Billon in Auvergne, in 1687. He wrote the Art of Preaching, and the Art of Educating a Prince, 12mo.—Moreri.

Foix (Odet de), lord of Lautrec, a French general of eminence. He was wounded at the battle of Ravenna, in 1512, and afterwards driven out of Italy. In 1528 he returned into that country, took Pavia, and died the same year before Naples.—Moreri.

Folard (Charles), a French officer, was born at Avignon, in 1669. In 1702 he became aid-du-camp to M. de Vendome, who undertook nothing without consulting him. For his services he was rewarded with a pension, and the cross of St. Louis. He was wounded at the battle of Cassano, and taken prisoner at that of Malplaquet; being exchanged he was sent to Malta, to assist in its defence against the Turks. He afterwards served under Charles XII. of Sweden, and was present at the siege of Frederickshall, when that prince was killed. He then returned to France, and served under the duke of Berwick. He died in 1752. He wrote commentaries upon Polybius, 6 vols. 4to.; A book of new Discoveries in War; and a treatise on the Defence of Places.—Moreri.

Folengo (Theophilus), an Italian poet, who assumed the name of Merlin Coccaye. He was born near Mantua in 1491, and became a benedictine, but being of an amorous turn, he quitted his habit and resumed it again, after leading a rambling life some years. He died in 1544. He distinguished himself by writing macaronic verses, the first edition of which appeared at Venice in 1513. He also wrote a licentious poem, entituled Orlandino; and an obscene piece called Chaos del Triperuno, and other works.—Tirabschi.

Folengio (John Baptist), an Italian benedictine monk, was born at Mantua in 1490. He died abbot of Treviso in 1559. He wrote commentaries on the Epistles of St. James, St Peter, and the first of St. John, 1555, 8vo. which work was placed in the Index expurgatorius, as was his Commentary on the Psalms, 1557, folio.—Moreri.

Folkes (Martin), an English philosopher and antiquary, was born in Westminster in 1690. After receiving a private education, he was sent to Clare-hall, Cambridge. At the age of twenty-three he was chosen a fellow of the royal society, and in 1723 was nominated one of the vice-presidents. In 1741 he succeeded sir Hans Sloane as president of that learned body, and was elected about the same time a member of the royal academy of sciences at Paris. He was also created doctor of laws by both universities. He died in 1754. Mr. Folkes wrote, besides a number of papers in the Philosophical Transactions, a Table of English Silver Coins, from the Norman conquest to the present time, 1745. A new edition of this valuable work appeared in 1763.—Biog. Br.

Fonseca (Anthony de), a Portuguese monk of the order of St. Dominic. He was preacher to the king, and professor of theology in the university of Coimbra. He wrote Remarks on cardinal Cajetan's Commentaries on the Bible, folio. There was a learned Portuguese jesuit, called Peter Fonseca, who published a system of Metaphysics, in 3 vols. folio. He died in 1559. —Moreri.

Font (Joseph de la), a French comic writer, who died in 1725, aged 39. He wrote five comedies and some operas.—Moreri.

Font (Peter de la), a French divine of the jansenist party, who wrote, Entretiens Ecclésiastiques, 5 vols. 12mo and four volumes of Sermons. He died in 1799.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Fontaine (John de la), a French poet, was born at Chateau-Thierry in 1621. He was educated first at Rheims, and afterwards under the fathers of the Oratory. He was a man of excessive simplicity of manners, credulous, fearful, and uncommonly absent. He lived for some time with the superintendant Foucquet, who allowed him a pension. Afterwards he was in the service of princess Henrietta of England, and next lived with madame de la Sabliere. He was married, but his wife had as little knowledge of economy as himself. He died in 1695, and on being laid out, a hair shirt was found next his skin. His Tales are very licentious, but his Fables are usually put into the hands of young people. They are very natural, poetical and entertaining. He also wrote Les Amours de Psyche, a romance; some comedies; Letters, &c. to be found in his miscellanies.—Moreri. Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Fontaine (Nicolas), a member of the society of Port Royal, and superintendant of the students there. In 1664 he was sent to the Bastille, and released in 1668. He died at Melun in 1709, aged 84. His works are: Illustrations of the New Testament, 2 vols. 8vo.; Lives of the Patriarchs, Prophets, and Saints; on the Figurative Language of the Bible, published under the name of Royaumont; Memoirs of the Solitaries of Port Royal.—Moreri.

Fontaines (Peter Francis Guyot des), a French critic, was born at Rouen in 1685. He was educated under the jesuits, and admitted a member of that society, which he quitted at the age of 30. In 1724 he succeeded the abbé Bignon in the management of the Journal des Sçavans. He conducted several periodical publications, and died in 1745. He translated Virgil into prose, with notes, 4 vols. 8vo.; and a number of other books.—Moreri.

Fontana (Domenico), an eminent architect and mechanic, was born at Milan in 1543. He raised the Roman obelisk from the dust in the front of St. Peter's, a work deemed impracticable, and which many others had attempted in vain. He died at Naples in 1607.—Life by Bellori.

Fontana (Prospero), an historical painter, was born at Bologna, in 1512. He was preceptor to Ludovico and Annibal Caracci. His daughter Lavinia was also an exceilent artist in portrait, and was patronized by pope Gregory XIII. She died in 1602.—Pilkington.

Fontanini (Giusto), archbishop of Ancyra, was born in 1666, in the duchy of Frioul, and died at Rome in 1736. His principal works are: Bibliotheca della Eloquenza Italiana; a Literary History of Aquileia, 1742; a Collection of Bulls of Canonization.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Fonte Modesata, a Venetian lady, whose real name was Modesta Pozzo, was born at Venice in 1555, and died in 1592. She wrote two poems, one entituled il Floridoro; the other on the Passion and Resurrection of Jesus Christ; also a book in prose, in which she asserts that the women are not inferior in understanding to the men.—Ibid.

Fontenay (John Baptiste Blain de), a French painter, was born at Caen in 1654. He was a disciple of Monnoyer, and had a happy taste in painting fruits and flowers, with insects. He died in 1715.——D'Argenville.

Fontenay (Peter Claude), a French jesuit, was born at Paris in 1683. His learning in ecclesiastical antiquities occasioned his being employed to continue Longueval's History of the Gallican Church. He died in 1742.—Moreri.

Fontenelle (Bernard le Bovier de), a celebrated French writer, was born in 1657 at Rouen, where his father was a counsellor. Young Fontenelle was also bred to the same profession, which however he abandoned. His first literary efforts were in the dramatic line, under the auspices of his uncle Thomas Corneille, but in this he did not succeed. In 1683 he published his Dialogues of the Dead, which met with a good reception. His conversations on the Plurality of Worlds, which appeared in 1686, gained him a great reputation. The year following, he published the History of Oracles, taken chiefly from Van Dale. In 1688 he printed pastorals, which also became popular. He was admitted a member of the French academy in 1691; and afterwards became secretary of that eminent body, which office he filled with honour forty-two years. He wrote a History of the Academy, and distinguished himself by the excellent eulogies which he wrote of deceased members. He died in 1757. Besides the above works, he wrote a History of the French Theatre; Elements of the Geometry of Infinites; Moral Discourses, &c.—Moreri.

Fontenu (Louis François), a French antiquary and historian, was born at Lilledon, in Gatinois, in 1667. He wrote several dissertations in the Memoirs of the Academy of Inscriptions, and died in 1750.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Fontius (Bartholomew), an Italian writer, was born at Florence in 1445. He was librarian to Matthew Corvinus, king of Hungary, and died in 1513. He wrote a Commentary on Persius, and orations.—Ibid.

Foote (Samuel), an English dramatic writer and actor, was born at Truro, in Cornwall, in 1722. His father was a justice of peace for that county, and his mother sister to sir John Dinely Goodere, of Herefordshire. Foote was educated at Worcester college, Oxford, from whence he removed to the Temple, but he quitted the study of the law, and took to the stage. His first performance was in the character of Othello. In 1747 he opened the little theatre in the Haymarket, with a dramatic piece of his own, called, The Diversions of the Morning, which succeeded very well. The exhibition next season, was called An Auction of Pictures, in which he took off some of the most noted characters of the day. He still continued to play at one or the other of the theatres, and frequently produced new pieces. In 1760 he brought out the Minor at his own house in the Haymarket. In 1766 he had the misfortune to break his leg, which was obliged to be amputated. The duke of York, out of compassion, procured for him a patent for life for the theatre in the Haymarket. In 1776 he attacked the duchess of Kingston in a piece, which was suppressed by authority. Soon after this a man-servant, whom he had dismissed, charged him with an unnatural offence; and though he was honourably acquitted, the circumstance made so deep an impression on his spirits, that he never recovered it. He died at Dover, on his way to France for his health, in Oct. 1777. His remains were interred in Westminster abbey. Foote had an infinite fund of comic humour, both in writing and conversation; but he took unwarrantable liberties in taking off persons merely on account of natural failings and peculiarities of manner. His farces have procured him the title of the English Aristophanes.—Life by Cooke.

Foppens (John Francis), a Flemish divine, was born about 1689, and died in 1761. He was divinity professor at Louvain, and archdeacon of Mechlin. He compiled the Bibliotheca Belgica, 2 vols. 4to. containing the works of some learned Belgians. He also published a new edition of Miræus's Opera Historica & Diplomatica, and other works.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Forbes (Patrick), a Scotch prelate, was born in 1564, of a noble family in the shire of Aberdeen. In 1618 he was made bishop of Aberdeen, and died in 1635. His Commentary upon the Revelation was printed at London in 1613. He was a pious prelate, and a liberal patron of learned men. Biog. Brit.

Forbes (John), son of the above. He also became bishop of Aberdeen, but the Covenanters obliged him to go abroad. He continued in Holland about two years, and then returned to his own country, where he led a retired life, and died in 1648. His works were printed at Amsterdam, in 2 vols. folio, 1703.—Ibid.

Forbes (William), the first bishop of Edinburgh, was born at Aberdeen in 1585. After studying at several universities, he went to England, where he was offered the Hebrew professorship at Oxford, which he declined. When Charles I. erected Edinburgh into an episcopal see, he appointed Dr. Forbes to fill it, but he enjoyed this dignity only three months, dying in 1634. He wrote Considerationes modestæ & pacificæ controversiarum de Justificatione, &c. 8vo. reprinted by Fabricius at Frankfort in 1707.—Biog. Brit.

Forbes (Duncan), an eminent Scotch judge, and an excellent writer, was born at Culloden in 1685, and educated first at Edinburgh, and afterwards at Utrecht. In 1708 he commenced advocate at the Scotch bar, and gained considerable reputation. In 1717 he was appointed solicitor general of Scotland, and in 1725 lord advocate. He afterwards became president of the court of session. He died in 1747. His lordship was a man of great piety and learning, and well versed in the Hebrew scriptures, as appears from his Letter to a Bishop on Hutchinson's Writings and Discoveries, in 1732; Thoughts concerning Religion, natural and revealed, 1735; and Reflections on Incredulity; the whole collected into one volume, 12mo, 1750.—Life of Duncan Forbes, 8vo. 1748.—Encycl. Brit.

Forbin (Claude, chevalier de), a French naval commander, was born in 1656. He served in the East Indies some years, and was admiral to the king of Siam. He greatly distinguished himself afterwards in Europe, and was in great favour with Lewis the Fourteenth. He died in 1733. His Memoirs were published in 1749, in 2 vols. 12mo.—Moreri.

Force (James, duke de la), son of Francis, lord de la Force. He was a child, in bed with his father and elder brother, when they were murdered in the massacre of St. Bartholomew; and being unperceived by the assassins, he escaped. He signalized himself under Henry IV. and afterwards joined the protestants against Lewis XIII. However, he made his submission to the king, and was appointed marshal of France, lieutenant-general of the army, and created a duke. He took Pignerol, and defeated the Spaniards at Carignan in 1630. He died in 1652.—Moreri.

Fordun (John de), a Scotch historian of the 14th century. He wrote a history of Scotland, which was printed by Hearne at Oxford, in 5 vols. 8vo. and by Goodal at Edinburgh, in 1 vol. folio.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Fordyce (David), an ingenious writer, was born at Aberdeen in 1711. He was educated at that university, and became professor of moral philosophy in the Marischal college. Though licensed as a preacher, he never became a stated minister. In 1750 he made a tour to Italy; and on his return the following year was drowned on the coast of Holland. He wrote Dialogues concerning Education, 2 vols. 8vo. The Elements of Moral Philosophy, which first appeared in Dodsley's Preceptor. Theodorus, a Dialogue concerning the Art of Preaching. The Temple of Virtue, a Dream.—Preface to Theodorus.

Fordyce (James), an eminent divine, was born in 1720 at Aberdeen, and educated at that university. His first settlement, as a minister, was at Brechin, from whence he removed to Alloa; and while in that station he distinguished himself by some elegant pulpit compositions, particularly one preached before the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, on the folly, infamy, and misery of unlawful pleasures, for which the university of Glasgow conferred on him the degree of D. D. About 1762, he removed to London, where he became assistant to Dr. Lawrence of Monkwell-street, and afterwards his successor. Here he drew crowded audiences by his eloquence, and the beauty of his sermons. In 1782 he resigned his situation, and went to live first in Hampshire, and next at Bath, where he died in 1796. He published a Sermon on the Eloquence of the Pulpit, printed with his brother's Theodorus; Sermons to Young Women, 2 vols. 12mo.; Addresses to Young Men, 2 vols.; Addresses to the Deity; a volume of poems; and single sermons.—Encyclop. Brit. Gent. Mag.

Fordyce (George), an eminent physician, was the nephew of the preceding, and born near Aberdeen in 1736. He received his education in that university, where he obtained the degree of M. A. at the age of 14. The year following he was placed with his uncle, who was a surgeon and apothecary at Uppingham in Rutlandshire. He went from thence to Edinburgh, and next to Leyden, where, in 1758, he took his doctor's degree. In 1759 he settled in London, and commenced lecturer on the materia medica and practice of physic, in which he acquired an unrivalled reputation. In 1770 he was chosen physician to St. Thomas's hospital, and in 1776 a fellow of the royal society. In 1787 he was elected, speciali gratia, a fellow of the college of physicians, which is a very unusual distinction. He died in 1802. Dr. Fordyce is known by his Essays on Fever; an Essay on Digestion; Elements of the Practice of Physic; and miscellaneous papers. He was also an excellent experimental chemist, and published Elements of Agriculture and Vegetation.—Monthly Mag. Gen. B.

Foreiro (Francis), a Portuguese monk, of the dominican order, was born at Lisbon. The king of Portugal sent him to the council of Trent, where he was greatly admired as a preacher, and was appointed to draw up a catechism. He died at Lisbon in 1587. He published at Venice, in 1562, a Latin translation of the Prophecy of Isaiah, with a commentary.—Moreri.

Forest (John), painter to the king of France, was born at Paris in 1636, and died in 1712. His landscapes are beautiful.—Moreri.

Foresti or Foresta (James Philip of), usually called Philip of Bergamo, was an Augustine monk. He wrote a chronicle from Adam to 1503; also a Confessional, printed at Venice in 1487; and a Treatise on illustrious Women, in 1497.—Bayle.

Forestus (Peter), a Dutch physician, was born in 1522. He studied in Italy, and afterwards became medical professor at Leyden. He died in 1597. His Observations on Medicine were printed at Frankfort in 1623, in 6 vols. fol.—Hal. Bib. Anat.

Formey (John Henry Samuel), a Prussian writer, was born at Berlin in 1711. He was for some years pastor of a French church in that city; which place he resigned on being chosen professor of philosophy in the French college. On the Restoration of the royal academy of sciences at Berlin, he was appointed secretary to the philosophical department, and afterwards sole secretary. He was also made a privy counsellor. He died in 1797. Formey conducted, in conjunction with Beausobre, the Bibliothéque Germanique. He also wrote Le Philosophe Chrétien; Pensées raisonnables; Anti-Emile, against Rousseau; the History of Philosophy abridged; an Abridgement of Ecclesiastical History; [these two have been translated into English;] Researches on the Elements of Matter; Considerations on the Tusculans of Cicero, &c. —Eloge de M. Formey in Mem. Acad. de Berlin.

Formosus, bishop of Porto, in Italy, succeeded pope Stephen V. in 891. The Roman people were greatly displeased with him, and when he died in 896, they threw his body into the Tiber.—Platina. Bower.

Forskal (Peter), a Swedish naturalist, was born in 1736. He studied at Gottingen, and afterwards at Upsal, where he became a pupil of Linnæus. In 1761 he went, at the request of the king of Denmark, with Niebuhr and others to Arabia, to make discoveries. He died at Jerim, in that country, in 1763. He printed a tract, entituled, Thoughts on Civil Liberty; and from his papers Niebuhr published Descriptiones Animalium, & equæ in Itinere orientali observavit, 4to.; Flora Ægyptiaco Arabica, 4to; Icones rerum naturalium quas in Itinere orientali depigni curavit Forskal, 4to.—Gen. Biog.

Forster (John), a learned protestant divine, was born at Augsburgh in 1495. He taught Hebrew in the university of Wittemberg, where he died in 1556. A Hebrew lexicon by him was published at Basle in 1564, folio. He is not to be confounded with John Forster, who published Commentaries on some parts of scripture.—Melch. Adam's Vit. Germ. Theol.

Forster (John Reinhold), a celebrated naturalist, was born in Prussia in 1729. He made, when young, a great progress in the learned and modern languages. In 1748 he entered the university of Halle, where he studied divinity: from thence he removed to Dantzic, and commenced preacher. He afterwards went to Russia, in expectation of considerable preferment; but being disappointed, he proceeded to England, where for some time he was tutor in the French and German languages at Warrington. In 1772 he accompanied captain Cook on his voyage round the World. He returned to England in 1775, and was honoured by the university of Oxford with the degree of LL. D. Having published, contrary to the engagement entered into with government, a botanical account of plants discovered in this voyage, he was treated with such coolness, that he quitted England and went to Halle, where he was made professor of natural history. He died in 1798. He was the author of Observations made in a Voyage round the World; History of Voyages and Discoveries in the North; on the Byssus of the Ancients; several Papers in the Philosophical Transactions, &c.—Monthly Mag. Supplem. Encyc. Brit.

Forster (George), son of the above, was born at Dantzic in 1754. He accompanied his father in his voyage round the world. After his return he became professor of natural history at Cassel; from whence he removed to Wilna, in Poland, and next to Mentz, where he was appointed president of the university. He was nominated by the people of Mentz their representative at Paris, in the beginning of the revolution, and died there in 1792. He wrote a Voyage round the World, 2 vols. 4to.; a Defence of the same against Mr. Wales, 4to.; a philosophical and picturesque Journey along the Banks of the Rhine, 2 vols. 8vo.; and a Journey through England.—Life of Forster by Pougens.

Forster (Nathaniel), a learned divine, was born at Plymstock in Devonshire in 1717. He was educated first at Plymouth, and next at Eton. In 1733 he was entered of Corpus Christi college, Oxford, where he proceeded to his degrees in arts, and was elected fellow. His first church preferment was the rectory of Hethe in Oxfordshire. In 1750 he became chaplain to bishop Butler of Durham, who made him his executor. At this time he took his degree of D. D. In 1752 he was appointed chaplain to archbishop Herring. In 1754 he obtained a prebend in the cathedral of Bristol, and the vicarage of Rochdale in Lancashire. In 1756 he was appointed chaplain to the king; and next year preacher at the Rolls. He died the same year in Westminster. His works are, Reflections on the Antiquity, &c. of Egypt; Platonis Dialogi quinque, &c. 1745; Appendix Liviana, 1746; Popery destructive of the Evidence of Christianity, a Sermon; a Dissertation on the Account given of Jesus Christ by Josephus; Biblia Hebraica, sine Punctis, 4to.; on the Marriages of Minors, 8vo.—Gen. Biog.

Forstner (Christopher), a German lawyer, was born in 1598, and died in 1667. He wrote, 1. De Principatu Tiberii; 2. Notæ politicæ ad Tacitum; 3. Hypomnemata Politica; 4. Epistola.—Moreri.

Fort (Francis le), a soldier and statesman, in the service of Peter the Great, who entrusted him with the siege of Azoph, where he shewed so much bravery, that the emperor made him his first minister of state, and commander of all his forces. He died at Moscow in 1699.—Moreri.

Fortescue (sir John), an English judge, was born in Devonshire, and educated at Oxford, from whence he removed to Lincoln's-inn. He was made, in 1442, chief justice of the king's-bench. He was zealously attached to Henry VI. and accompanied him in his exile to Scotland. Henry made him chancellor, but he never exercised the office. He was afterwards in Flanders, and while abroad wrote his famous book, entituled, De Laudibus Legum Angliæ, which however was not published till the reign of Henry VIII. since which it has been frequently printed. He returned to England with queen Margaret, and was taken prisoner at the battle of Tewkesbury in 1471. Edward IV. granted him a pardon, on which he retired to his seat at Ebrington, in Gloucestershire, where he died at the age of 90.—Biog. Brit.

Fortiguerra (Nicholas), an Italian prelate and poet, was born in 1674, and made a bishop by pope Clement XI. He died in 1735. He wrote a poem, in burlesque of Ariosto, entituled, Ricciardetto, and translated Terence into Italian.—Tiraboschi.

Foscari (Francis), a doge of Venice, who conquered Brescia and Bergamo; but the expence attending these acquisitions proved so offensive to the Venetians, that they deposed him, and he died in 1457, aged 84. His son died in prison, into which he was thrown upon a false charge of having murdered a senator.—Moreri.

Foscarini (Michael), a Venetian senator, who completed Nani's History of Venice, published in 1692. He died in 1692, aged 64. He also wrote some novels.—Tiraboschi.

Fosse (Charles de la), a French painter, and pupil of Le Brun. After studying in Italy he returned to Paris, and gained a great reputation by several public works. A pension was granted him, and he became rector of the academy of painting. The duke of Montague invited him to England, and employed him in ornamenting his house, now the British Museum. He died in 1716.—D'Argenville.

Fosse (Anthony de la sieur d'Aubigny), nephew of the above, was born at Paris in 1658. He wrote tragedies and poems in French, and several pieces in Italian. His Manlius Capitolinus is the best of his dramatic compositions. He died in 1708.—Moreri.

Foster (Samuel), an English mathematician, was born in Northamptonshire, and educated at Emanuel college, Cambridge, where he took his degrees in arts. In 1636 he was chosen professor of astronomy in Gresham college. He was one of the first members of the scientific association, which afterwards obtained the name of the Royal Society. He died in 1652. The chief of his works are, the Art of Dialling; a Description of sundry Instruments, invented or improved by him; and Miscellanies. There were two other mathematicians of his name in the same century: William Foster, who was a pupil of Oughtred, and afterwards a teacher in London; and Mark Foster, the author of a Treatise on Trigonometry.---Biog. Brit.

Foster (James), an eminent nonconformist minister, was born in 1697 at Exeter, and educated there under Mr. Hallet. In 1718 he commenced preacher at Exeter; but the disputes which broke out in that place respecting the doctrine of the Trinity, occasioned his removal to Milborne-port in Somersetshire, and afterwards to Trowbridge in Wiltshire. At this place he turned baptist; and in 1724 was chosen successor to Dr. John Gale, in the meeting in Barbican, London. In 1741 he succeeded Dr. Jeremiah Hunt in the congregation at Pinners'-hall. In 1748 the degree of D.D. was conferred on him by the university of Aberdeen. He died in 1753. Dr. Foster was a man of considerable learing; and so celebrated as a preacher, that Pope has bestowed a fine compliment on him in the epilogue to his Satires. He wrote a Defence of Revelation against Tindal; Tracts on Heresy; Sermons, in 4 vols. 8vo.; Discourses on natural Religion and social Virtue, 2 vols. 4to.; &c.---Biog. Brit. Gen. Biog.

Foster (John), a learned divine, was born in 1731 at Windsor, and educated at Eton, from whence he was sent to King's college, Cambridge He afterwards became an assistant in Eton school, and in 1765 head master, which station he resigned in consequence of his infirmities; and in 1772 obtained a canonry of Windsor. He died the year following at Spa, whither he had gone for his health. He published an essay on the nature of accent and quantity, with their use and application in the pronunciation of the English, Latin, and Greek languages, 8vo.; and a prize dissertation at Cambridge, on the moral Doctrines of Epicurus and the Stoics.---Gent. Mag.

Foster (Michael), an eminent lawyer, was born at Marlborough in Wiltshire in 1689. He was educated at the free school of Marlborough, from whence he removed to Exeter college, Oxford. In 1707 he was entered of the Middle Temple, and in regular course called to the bar. In 1735 he was chosen recorder of Bristol. The same year he published a pamphlet, entituled, an Examination of the Scheme of Church Power, laid down in the Codex by Bishop Gibson. In 1745 he was appointed one of the justices of the King's Bench, on which occasion he received the honour of knighthood. In 1762 he published a Report of Proceedings on the Commission for the Trial of the Rebels in the year 1746, in the county of Surrey. He died in 1763.---Gen. Biog.

Fothergill (George), an eminent divine, was born in Westmoreland in 1705, and educated at Kendal school, from whence he removed to Queen's college, Oxford, where he became fellow and tutor. In 1751 he was elected principal of Edmund hall, and presented to the vicarage of Bramley in Hampshire. He died in 1760. He wrote two volumes of sermons.—Gent. Mag.

Fothergill (John), an eminent physician, was born in 1712 at Carr End in Yorkshire of reputable parents, who were quakers. He served his time to an apothecary; after which he went to Edinburgh, where, in 1736, he took his doctor's degree. In the same year he became a pupil in St. Thomas's hospital, and in 1740 went abroad. On his return he settled in London; and in 1748 acquired a great reputation, by a tract, entituled, an Account of the Sore Throat attended with Ulcers. This disease was at that time very prevalent and fatal. In 1754 he became a member of the Edinburgh College of Physicians; and in 1763 a fellow of the Royal Society. When the differences broke out between this country and the American colonies, he laboured much to prevent hostilities, and had conferences with Dr. Franklin for that purpose. Dr. Fothergill was a man of amiable manners, a skilful physician, a great encourager of learning, and an excellent botanist. He died in 1780. His works consisting chiefly of medical pieces, have been printed in 3 vols. 8vo. with his life prefixed. He was at the expence of printing Purver's translation of the Bible, and of an edition of Percy's Key to the New Testament, for a seminary of quakers in Yorkshire. His brother Samuel was a considerable preacher among the quakers, and died in 1773.—Life by Letsom.

Foucault (Nicholas Joseph), a French antiquary, was born at Paris in 1643. He discovered, in 1704, the ancient town of the Viducassians, near Caen, of which he gave an account to the Academy of Inscriptions. He also discovered the MS. of Lactantius de Mortibus Persecutorum. He died in 1721.—Moreri.

Fouche (Simon), a French priest, was born at Dijon in 1644. He died at Paris in 1696. He wrote a Treatise on the Wisdom of the Ancients: Letters, tending to exhibit the History and Principles of the academic Philosophy, 6 vols.; a Treatise on Hygrometers, &c.—Moreri.

Fouchier (Bertram de), a Dutch painter, was born at Bergen-op-Zoom in 1609. He painted portraits and conversations; and died in 1674.—Houbraken.

Foucquet (Nicholas), marquis of Belleisle, was born in 1615. He became superintendant of the finances under Mazarine; but he abused the trust in such a manner, that in 1661 he was arrested at Nantes, and sentenced to perpetual imprisonment. He died in the citadel of Pignerol in 1680.—Moreri.

Foucquet (Charles Louis Augustus), count of Belleisle, grandson of the above, was born in 1684. His gallant conduct at the siege of Lisle, where he commanded a regiment of dragoons, brought him into favour with Lewis XIV. after whose death he was disgraced and confined in the Bastille. In the war of 1733 he was appointed to command in Germany, and became the confident of cardinal Fleury. In 1741 he was created marshal of France, and the year following attended the diet of Frankfort as plenipotentiary from the court of Versailles. In 1743 he was taken prisoner near Hanover, but soon obtained his liberty. He died in 1761.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Fouillon (James), a French ecclesiastic, of the jansenist persuasion, was born at Rochelle in 1670. He was educated among the jesuits, whom he afterwards forsook. He died at Paris in 1736. He was concerned in writing the History of the Case of Conscience, 1705, 8 vols.; and in the work against the bull Unigenitus, called Hexaples, 7 vols. He was also the editor of Arnauld's Letters, &c.—Moreri.

Foulon (William), a modern Latin poet, was born at the Hague, where he kept a school. He died in 1558, aged 75. He wrote three Latin comedies; Martyrium Johannis Pistorii: Hypocrisis, 1554; Acolastus, de filio prodigo. He is not to be confounded with John Foulon, a learned jesuit of Liege, who died in 1668. He wrote a Commentary on the Maccabees; and Historia Leodiensis, 3 vols. folio.—Moreri.

Fountaine (sir Andrew), an English antiquary, was born at Narford in Norfolk, and educated at Christ church, Oxford, where he studied the Anglo-Saxon language; and wrote a piece inserted in Dr. Hickes's Thesaurus, entituled, Numismata Anglo-Saxonica et Anglo-Danica. King William conferred on him the honour of knighthood. He had also a taste for the fine arts, and made a noble collection of antiques and curiosities. He drew the designs for the Tale of a Tub, by Swift, with whom he was very intimate. In 1727 he was appointed warden of the Mint. He died in 1753.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Fouquieres (James), a Flemish painter, was born at Antwerp in 1580. He was the disciple of Velvet Breughel, and became so excellent in painting landscapes, as to be ranked with Titian. He died in 1659.—Pilkington.

Fourmont (Stephen), professor of the Arabic and Chinese languages, at Paris, was born in 1683. He succeeded M. Galland as Arabic professor in the royal college, and died at Paris in 1743. His principal works are Critical Reflections upon Ancient History, to the Time of Cyrus, 2 vols. 4to.; Meditationes Sinicæ, folio; and a Chinese Grammar in Latin, folio. His brother Michael was professor of Syriac, in the royal college, and member of the academy of inscriptions. He died in 1746.—Moreri.

Fournier (Peter Simon), an eminent engraver and letter-founder, was born at Paris in 1712. He published, in 1737, a Table of Proportions, to determine the height and relation of letters but his chief work is entituled Manuel Typographique, 2 vols. 8vo. He died in 1768.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Fourquevaux (Raimond of Pavia, baron of), an Italian writer and soldier. He was of an ancient family of Pavia; but in the wars between the Guelphs and Ghibelines he went to France, and was appointed governor of Narbonne. He died in 1574, aged 66. He wrote the Lives of eminent French Generals, printed at Paris in 1543, 4to.—Moreri.

Fowler (John), an English printer, was born at Bristol. He was for some time a fellow of New college, Oxford, but resigned in 1559, and went to Louvain, where he conducted the printing business, chiefly in defending the tenets of the Roman church, to which he was zealously attached. He died in 1578.—Wood's A. O.

Fowler (Edward) an eminent prelate, was born at Westerleigh, in Gloucestershire, in 1632, and educated at Corpus Christi college, Oxford. In 1673 he obtained the rectory of Allhallows, Bread-street. In 1675 he was made prebendary of Gloucester, and in 1681 vicar of St. Giles's, Cripplegate. The same year he took his doctor's degree. For his zeal in promoting the revolution, he was promoted to the see of Gloucester in 1691. He died in 1714. Besides several sermons and tracts, he wrote The Principles and Practices of certain moderate Divines of the Church of England, abusively called Latitudinarians, 8vo. 1670; The Design of Christianity, 8vo. 1671; (this is an excellent book and has been several times printed;) Libertas Evangelica, or a Discourse of Christian Liberty, 8vo.—Biog. Br.

Fox (Edward), an English bishop and statesman, was born at Dursley, in Gloucestershire, and educated first at Eton and next at King's college, Cambridge; of which, in 1528, he was elected provost. Cardinal Wolsey took him into his service, and obtained for him the appointment of ambassador to Rome, in conjunction with Gardiner, to promote the divorce of Henry VIII. He was afterwards sent in the same capacity to France and Germany; and in 1535, was promoted to the see of Hereford. He died in 1538. The bishop was a great friend to the reformation. He wrote De vera differentia Regiæ Potestatis et Ecclesiastica, et quæ sit ipsa Veritas et Virtus utriusque.—Biog. Brit.

Fox (Richard), an English prelate, was born of low parentage at Grantham, in Lincolnshire, in the reign of Henry VI. He was educated first at Boston school, and afterwards at Magdalen college, Oxford, from whence, on account of the plague, he removed to Pembroke hall, Cambridge. He next went to Paris, where he gained the friendship of Dr. Morton, bishop of Ely, who recommended him to the earl of Richmond, afterwards Henry VII. On the accession of that monarch, Dr. Fox was made privy counsellor, and preferred to the see of Exeter. He was also sent on several embassies, and after obtaining different church preferments, was advanced to the see of Durham, from whence he was removed to Winchester. He founded Corpus Christi college, in Oxford, and several free schools. He died in 1528.---Biog. Brit.

Fox (John), an English divine, was born at Boston in Lincolnshire, in 1517, and educated at Brasenose college, Oxford, from whence he removed to a fellowship in Magdalen college. In 1545 he was expelled on a charge of heresy, which reduced him to great distress. At length sir Thomas Lucy of Warwickshire, took him into his house as tutor to his children. Afterwards he removed to London, and was employed by the duchess of Richmond as tutor to the earl of Surrey's children. Here he continued till the reign of queen Mary, when his life being in danger on account of his principles, he withdrew with his wife and other protestants to the Continent. Mr. Fox settled at Basil, and earned his subsistence by correcting the press for Oporinus the printer. On the accession of queen Elizabeth, he returned to England, and by means of secretary Cecil, obtained a prebend of Salisbury. In 1563 he published his Acts and Monuments of the Church, better known by the name of Fox's Book of Martyrs, in one large volume folio. In the edition of 1583, it made two volumes: and in the subsequent ones, three. This book has always been highly esteemed by protestants, though it is stigmatized by the romanists with the name of Fox's Golden Legend. He died in 1587, and was buried in the church of St. Giles, Cripplegate, of which he was some time vicar. Besides his Acts and Monuments, he published several books, particularly Latin comedies on scripture subjects. Mr. Fox was a man of learning, piety, and humility. —Biog. Brit.

Fox (George), the founder of the sect of quakers, was born at Drayton in Leicestershire, 1624. He was at first placed with a shepherd, and afterwards bound apprentice to a shoemaker. In 1643 he became a religious itinerant; and about 1647 commenced public preacher, inveighing, not only against the prevailing vices, but the stated ministers and religious services, affirming that the light within or Christ in the heart is alone the means of salvation, and the true qualification for the ministry. He suffered frequent imprisonment and other rough treatment, which he seems in general to have brought upon himself by his indiscretions in opposing the clergy and vilifying them in their public ministry. The name of quakers was given to him and his followers first at Derby, on account of the strange contortions and trembling which accompanied their preaching. In 1669 he married the widow of a Welsh judge, but still continued his course of itinerant preaching, and visited Holland, Germany, and America. Fox died in London in 1690. His Journal was printed at London in 1694, his Epistles in 1698, and his Tracts in 1706; all in folio.---Sewel's Hist. of Quakers. Neale's Puritans.

Fox de Morzillo (Sebastian), a Spanish writer, was born at Seville in 1528. He was drowned on his voyage from Louvain, to undertake the tuition of Don Carlos, son of Philip III. He wrote De Studii Philosophici ratione; De Natura Philosophorum, &c.---Moreri.

Fracastorio (Jerome), an Italian poet and physician, was born at Verona in 1483. He studied at Padua, and at the age of 19 he became professor of logic. He afterwards settled at Verona, where he gained a wonderful reputation. He was appointed physician to the council of Trent; and died in 1553. His principal poem is, De Syphilis; and his medical pieces are, De Sympathia & Antipathia; De Contagiosis Morbis; De Causis Criticorum dierum, &c. His works were printed entire in 2 vols. 4to. at Padua in 1785.---Moreri.

Fracietta (Jerome), an Italian political writer, was a native of Rovigno, and died at Naples the beginning of the 17th century. His principal work is entituled Seminario di Governi di Stato, et di Guerra.---Ibid.

Fraguier (Claude-Francis), a French writer, was born at Paris in 1666. He assisted abbé Bignon in the Journal des Sçavans, and died at Paris in 1728. His Latin poems were printed at Paris in 1729, 12mo. ---Ibid.

Francesca (Peter), painter to the state of Florence, who died in 1443. He excelled in representing battles and night-pieces.---De Piles.

France. The ancient inhabitants of this country were called Gauls. That part of the country which was called Gallia Narbonensis became a Roman province, B. C. 118. In 57 B. C. Julius Cæsar conquered the Helvetii, and afterwards the Belgiæ. Honorius permitted the Goths to reside in the southern parts of Gaul, A. D 400. In 413 the Burgundi, a people of Germany, seized that part of Gaul next the Rhine; but in 534 the Franks put an end to their kingdom, and in 540 they completed the entire conquest of the country. In 880 the Normans seized Britany, Picardy, and Champagne. In 1204 Philip Augustus, king of France, took Normandy from John king of England. In 1347 Edward I. of England took Calais. About 1372 the French took from the English all their possessions in France, except Calais; but in 1415 Henry V. subdued the greatest part of the kingdom; and on his death in 1422, his son, Henry VI. then a minor, was crowned king of France at Paris; but soon afterwards the English lost almost all their acquisitions in that country. In 1477 Lewis XI. added a part of the duchy of Burgundy to France, and Lewis XII. obtained that of Bretagne. In 1558 the French took Calais. In 1789 a revolution broke out at Paris, the Bastille was destroyed, a new constitution was formed, and after a variety of sanguinary changes, Lewis XVI. was brought to trial, and murdered on the scaffold, January 21, 1793. His queen, Maria Antoinette, of Austria, shortly after suffered the same fate. The same year a confederacy was formed against France, in which England had a share. In 1799 Buonaparte returned from Egypt, abolished the directory, created a new constitution, and was declared first consul. In 1802, he was proclaimed first consul for life; and in 1804 he assumed the title of emperor of the French.—Univ. Hist. Henault's History of France. Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Franceschini (Mark Anthony), a painter of Bologna, was born in 1648, and died in 1729. He was the disciple of Cignani, whose manner he imitated with great success.—Pilkington.

Franchi (Antonio), an Italian painter, was born at Lucca in 1638, and died in 1709. He painted several altar-pieces at Florence.—Ibid.

Francia (Francesco), an eminent painter, was born at Bologna in 1450. He had been a goldsmith and an engraver of medals, but afterwards applied wholly to painting. Being employed by Raphael to place a picture of his in a church at Bologna, he was so struck with its beauty, and convinced of his own inferiority, that he fell into a desponding state, of which he died in 1518. —Ibid.

Francis of Lorraine, emperor of Germany, was born in 1708, and married in 1736 Maria Theresa, daughter of Charles VI. On the death of her father in 1740, Maria Theresa appointed her husband to the administration of the government, and on the death of Charles VII. in 1745, he was elected emperor. He was a prince of amiable character and a promoter of the arts. He died in 1765.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Francis I. king of France, ascended the throne in 1515 at the age of 21. He was the son of Charles of Orleans, and of Louisa of Savoy, grand-daughter to Valentine duke of Milan, in right of whom he laid claim to that duchy. The Swiss opposed his passage through their territories, and were defeated at the battle of Marignano. Francis then entered the Milanese, and forced Maximilian Sforza to relinquish the sovereignty. A war afterwards broke out between him and the emperor Charles V. in which Francis lost a considerable part of his territories, was made prisoner and conveyed to Madrid. In 1526 he regained his liberty, after renouncing his claim to Naples, the Milanese, Flanders, and Artois. In 1535 he marched again into Italy, and possessed himself of Savoy, but a peace was hastily made up, which was soon after broken, and Francis again lost a good part of his own dominions. He died in 1547, leaving two sons and four daughters by his first wife, Claude of France. He was a great patron of learned men, and founded the royal college of Paris.—Moreri. Robertson's Ch. V.

Francis II. king of France, succeeded his father Henry II. in 1559, at the age of 16. He married Mary Stuart, daughter of James V. of Scotland, but died the year after his accession.—Ibid.

Francis, duke of Alençon and Anjou, the youngest son of Henry II. of France, was born in 1554. He stirred up a revolt against his brother Henry III. for which Catherine de Medicis, his mother, sent him to prison, but the king soon gave him his liberty. In 1581 he came to England, with a view of marrying queen Elizabeth, in which he was disappointed. The year following he was crowned duke of Brabant and count of Flanders. His conduct, however, proved so offensive to the Brabanters, that they obliged him to fly to France, where he died in 1584.—Ibid.

Francis of Lorraine, duke of Guise. He distinguished himself by his military exploits, and took Calais from the English, and Thionville from the Spaniards. He also defeated the Germans at Renty, and obliged Spain to make peace with Paul IV. After the battle of St. Quintin, he was made lieutenant-general of the army of France. In 1562 he took Rouen and Bourges, and defeated the Hugonots at Dreux. The same year he was slain at the siege of Orleans.—Ibid.

Francis, of Assisi, a Romish saint, and founder of a religious order, called by his name. He was born at Assisi in Italy in 1182, and brought up a merchant, but led for some years a debauched life. At last a severe illness had such an effect on him, that he resolved to renounce the world, and accordingly resigned all claim to his paternal estate. He then gathered some disciples, who entered into vows of voluntary poverty, and their number increasing, pope Innocent III. confirmed the order in 1210. Francis in his zeal went to the east to convert the Sultan, who treated him civilly, and sent him back to Europe. He died at hissisi in 1226. Pope Gregory IX. canonized Am in 1230.—Moreri.

Francis (of Paulo), another saint of the Roman church, who founded the order of Minims, was born in 1416 at Paulo, in Calabria. Louis XI. of France, being dangerously ill, sent for this devotee, hoping to be healed by him. His successor Charles VIII built a convent for Francis and his monks, where he died in 1507. He was canonized by pope Leo X. in 1519.—Ibid.

Francis (Xavier), called the apostle of the Indies, was born at Xavier in Navarre, in 1506, and educated at Paris, where he formed an intimacy with Ignatus Loyola, and bound himself with some others to attempt converting the heathen. In 1541 he embarked at Lisbon for Goa, and laboured with great zeal in various parts of India and Japan. He died on a voyage to China in 1551. He was canonized in 1622. His works are, Epistles, Paris, 1631, 8vo.; a Catechism, Opuscula.—Moreri.

Francis (de Sales), a Romish saint, was born in the castle of Sales, near Geneva, in 1567. In 1602 he was made bishop of Geneva, in which station his conduct was very exemplary. He founded a society of religious called the order of the Visitation. He died in 1622, and was canonized by Alexander VI. His works are, an Introduction to a devout Life; a Treatise on the Love of God; Letters.—Ibid.

Francis de Borgia, another saint of the Roman calendar, was born in Spain about 1511. He was the grandson of pope Alexander VI and hereditary duke of Candia. After filling several high offices, on the death of his wife he embraced a religious life, and entered among the jesuits. He refused the dignity of cardinal, and died at Rome in 1572. Pope Clement X. canonized him in 1671. He wrote some pious pieces in Spanish, which have been translated into Latin.—Moreri.

Francis (Lucas), called the Old, was born at Mechlin in 1574, and employed for some years by the kings of France and Spain. He painted history and portrait, and died in 1643. His son Lucas, called the young, was born at Mechlin, in 1606. He studied under Gerhard Segers, and died in 1654.—D'Argenville.

Francis (Simon), a portrait painter, was born at Tours in 1606, and died in 1671. He acquired great eminence in his profession.—Ibid.

Francis (Laurence), a French writer, was born in Franche Comté in 1698, and died at Paris in 1782. He wrote an elementary Treatise on Geography; evidences of the Christian Religion, 4 vols. 12mo.; an Examination of the Catechism of an honest man; on the Philosophy of History, &c.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Francis (Philip), an ingenious divine was a native of Ireland, where his father was a dean. The son became rector of Barrow in Suffolk, and chaplain to Chelsea hospital. He translated Horace and Demosthenes into English, and wrote two tragedies, Eugenia and Constantia. He died at Bath in 1773.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Francius (Peter), a Greek and Latin poet, was born at Amsterdam in 1645. He studied under Gronovius at Leyden; after which he spent some time in England and France. In 1674 he became professor of history and rhetoric at Amsterdam, where he died in 1704. He wrote Specimen Eloquentiæ Exterioris; Poemata; Orationes, &c. His Greek and Latin poems are very fine.—Gen. Hist. of Dict. Luiscus.

Franck (Francis), called the Old, a Flemish painter, who died in 1616, aged 72. He painted sacred historical pieces, of considerable merit. His son, called Young Frank, was also a good painter, born in 1580, and died in 1642.—Pilkington.

Franck (George), a German physician, was born at Naumbourg in 1643. At the age of 18 he received the poetic crown for his verses in German, Latin, Greek, and Hebrew. After taking his degree in physic he became professor in that faculty at Heidelberg and at Wittemberg. He died in 1704. His works are, Flora Francica, 12mo.; Satyræ Medicæ, 4to.; Epistolæ.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Franck (Augustus Herman), a pious German divine, was born at Lubeck in 1663. He became professor of the oriental languages, and afterwards of divinity, in the university of Halle. Here he laid the foundation of an orphan-house, which in 1727 had 2196 children, and more than 130 preceptors. He also carried into effect a mission for propagating the gospel in Malabar. He died in 1727. His works are, Sermons and Books of Devotion; Methodus studii Theologici; Introductio ad lectionem Prophetarum; Commentario de scopo Librorum veteris & novi Testamenti: Manuductio ad lectionem Scripturæ sacræ; Observationes Biblicæ. Some of his practical books have been translated into English.—Moreri.

Francken (Christian), a German divine, was at first a jesuit, but quitted that order and embraced the socinian creed, on which he went to Poland, and joined the unitarians. Afterwards he returned to the Roman communion, and died at the close of the 16th century. He wrote a severe satire on the jesuits, entituled, Breve Colloquium Jesuiticum; de Honore Christi, and other works. Moreri.

Franckenstein (Christian-Godfrey), an advocate of Leipsic, was born in 1661, and died in 1717. He wrote a Continuation of the Introduction to History, by Puffendorf;

Life of Christina, Queen of Sweden; History of the 16th and 17th Ages. His son James, who died in 1733, wrote De Collatione bonorum; de Juribus Judæorum singularibus in Germania.—Moreri.

Francklin (Thomas), an English divine, was born in London about 1720, and educated at Westminster school, from whence he was removed to Trinity college, Cambridge, where he proceeded to the degree of D.D. He was also chosen professor of Greek in that university. In 1758 he obtained the vicarage of Ware, to which was afterwards added the rectory of Brasted in Kent. He was also chaplain in ordinary to the king, and died in 1784. Dr. Francklin translated Phalaris, Sophocles, and Lucian into English, and wrote three plays: the Earl of Warwick, and Matilda, tragedies, and the Contract, a comedy. He also published a volume of sermons on the relative duties, and permitted his name to be prefixed to a translation of Voltaire's works.—Europ. Mag.

Franco (Battista), an historical painter of Venice, was born in 1498, and died in 1561. He imitated the manner of Michael Angelo.—Pilkington.

Franco (Nicolo), an Italian satirist, was born at Benevento in 1510. He was the friend of Aretine, whom he afterwards wrote against. He was hanged at Rome for a satire on Pius V. in 1569.—Moreri.

Franklin (Benjamin), an American patriot and philosophical writer, was born at Boston, in New England, in 1706. His father was a soap-boiler and tallow-chandler in that town, and being a man of good understanding, educated his son himself. His elder brother was bred a printer, and Benjamin was placed under him; but a difference happening between them, he removed to New York, from whence he went to Philadelphia, where after serving as a journeyman some time, he attracted the notice of sir William Keith, the governor, who persuaded him to set up for himself. Accordingly he came to England to procure printing materials, but on his arrival he found that the governor had deceived him by false promises, on which he worked as a journeyman printer in London, and in 1726 returned to Philadelphia, where he became clerk to a merchant. He next entered into partnership with a person named Meredith, in the printing business, which he afterwards conducted alone. In 1730 he was united to a widow lady, whom he had courted before her first marriage. About this period he contributed to the forming of the public library at Philadelphia, and in 1732 he published his Poor Richard's Almanack, in which he inserted some useful aphorisms or maxims of prudence. In 1736 he was appointed clerk to the general assembly at Pennsylvania, and the year following post-master of Philadelphia. In the French war in 1744 he proposed and carried into effect a plan of association for the defence of that province. About this time he commenced his electrical experiments of which he published an account. He had the honour of making several discoveries in this branch of philosophy, the principal of which was the identity of the electric fire and lightning. In 1747 he was chosen a representative of the general assembly, in which situation he distinguished himself by several acts of public utility. By his means a militia bill was passed, and he was appointed colonel of the Philadelphia regiment. In 1757 he was sent to England as agent for Pennsylvania. At this time he was chosen fellow of the royal society, and honoured with the degree of doctor of laws by the universities of St. Andrews, Edinburgh and Oxford. In 1762 he returned to America, but two years afterwards he again visited England, in his former capacity as agent, and it was at this period that he was examined at the bar of the house of commons concerning the stamp act. In 1775 he returned home, and was elected a delegate to the congress. He was very active in the contest between England and the colonies, and was sent to France, where in 1778 he signed a treaty of alliance offensive and defensive, which produced a war between that country and England. In 1783 he signed the definitive treaty of peace, and in 1785 returned to America, where he was chosen president of the supreme council. He died in 1790. Besides his political, miscellaneous, and philosophical pieces published in 4to. and 8vo. he wrote several papers in the American transactions, and two volumes of essays, with his life prefixed, written by himself, 2 vols 12mo.

Franks (Sebastian), a Flemish painter, was born at Antwerp, in 1573. He painted landscapes and historical subjects. John Sebastian Franks, of Antwerp, who painted after Vandyck and Rubens, is supposed to have been his son.—Pilkington.

Frantzius (Wolfgang), a German lutheran divine, was born in 1564. He was professor of divinity at Wittemberg, and died there in 1620. His works are: Historia Animalium sacra; Tractus de Interpretatione Sacrarum Scripturarum; Schola Sacrificiorum Patriarchalium sacra; Commentarius in Leviticum, &c.—Moreri.

Fratellini (Giovanna), an Italian artist was born at Florence in 1666. She painted historical subjects and portraits in miniature, and died in 1721. Her son Lorenzo Maria Fratellini was a good painter of history and landscape. He died in 1729.—Pilkington.

Frauwenlob (Henry), a German author, who died in 1317. Having written in behalf of the ladies, a number of females attended his funeral, and poured so large a quantity of wine over his grave as to overflow the church.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Frassen (Claude), a learned French monk, was born at Peronne, in Picardy, in 1620. He was superior of the Franciscan convent at Paris, doctor of the Sorbonne, and theological professor. He died in 1711. His System of Philosophy, 2 vols. 4to. has been well esteemed, also Disquitiones Biblicæ, 2 vols. 4to.—Moreri.

Fredegarius, called the Scholastic, an old French historian, who wrote a chronicle which extends to the year 641, to be found in the collection of Duchesne.—Moreri.

Frederic I. surnamed Barbarossa, emperor of Germany, the son of Frederic duke of Suabia, was born in 1121, and crowned emperor in 1152. He was a warlike prince, and marched into Italy to settle the tumults which distracted that country in 1155. He was crowned at Rome by Adrian IV. who dying in 1160, no less than three antipopes were chosen, who were all opposed by the emperor. The Milanese profiting by these divisions endeavoured to shake off the imperial yoke, on which Frederic marched into Italy, and took Milan, after which he entered Rome and set Calixtus on the papal throne instead of Alexander. The Venetians, however maintained the cause of the latter with so much vigour, that Frederic was obliged to make his submission to Alexander. He next embarked against the infidels, obtained some victories, took Iconium, and penetrated into Syria, where he was drowned in 1190. —Frederic II. the grandson of the preceding, and son of Henry VI. born in 1194. elected king of the Romans in 1196, and emperor in 1210, in opposition to Otho. In 1220 he was crowned by pope Honorius III. at Rome. He afterwards went to the Holy Land, and concluded a truce with the Sultan of Babylon, which so provoked pope Gregory IX. that he anathematized him. On this Frederic returned to Europe and laid siege to Rome, which occasioned the famous parties of the Guelphs and the Ghibelines, the former being on the side of the pope, and the other on that of the emperor. Gregory was obliged to make peace, but in 1236, he again excommunicated Frederic, and the war was renewed, which proved unsuccessful to the emperor, whose German subjects revolted against him. He died in his kingdom of Naples, in 1250.—Frederic III. was the son of Albert I. and chosen emperor in 1314, by some of the electors, but the majority elected Lewis of Bavaria. Frederic died in 1420. —Frederic IV. called the Pacific, ascended the throne in 1440, and was crowned at Rome in 1452. He died in 1493, in consequence of the amputation of his leg.—Moreri. Univ. Hist.

Frederic, king of Sweden, was the eldest son of Charles, landgrave of Hesse-Cassel. He married the sister of Charles XII. on whose death, in 1719, the states of Sweden elected her queen, but the year following they consented to her resigning the crown to her husband. He had a long and unsuccessful war with Russia, which ended in a disadvantageous peace to Sweden. He died without issue in 1751.—Mod. Univ. Hist.

Frederic I. king of Denmark, succeeded his nephew, Christian II. on his deposition in 1523. He made an alliance with Gustavus I. king of Sweden. After taking Copenhagen, he gained over all the nobility, and introduced lutheranism into his dominions. He died in 1533.—Frederic II. the son and successor of Christian III. He was a great friend of learning, and patronized Tycho Brahe and other men of science. He had a long war with Sweden, which ended in 1570. He died in 1588, aged 54.—Frederic III. succeeded his father Christian IV. in 1648, and died in 1670, aged 61, after changing the constitution from an elective to an hereditary monarchy.—Frederic IV. ascended the throne on the death of Christian V. in 1699. He leagued against Charles XII. of Sweden, who forced him to make peace. But when Charles fled to Turkey, Frederic drove the Swedes out of Norway. He died in 1730, aged 59.—Frederic V. grandson of the preceding, came to the throne in 1746, and died in 1766. He said on his death-bed, to his successor Christian VII. "It is a great consolation to me, my son, that I have not injured any person, and that my hands are not stained with one drop of blood."—Univ. Hist. Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Frederic Augustus I. king of Poland was born at Dresden, in 1670. His father was John George III. elector of Saxony, whom he succeeded in 1694, and made several campaigns against the French and Turks. Having embraced the catholic religion, he was elected king of Poland in 1697. He joined Russia and Denmark against Charles XII. of Sweden and was for some time successful, but at last fortune changed; Charles took Warsaw, and defeated Augustus at the battle of Clissow. In 1706 the Swedish monarch entered Saxony, of which he took possession, and Augustus was forced to renounce the crown of Poland. After the battle of Pultowa, Frederic recovered the throne, and died in 1733. He was a man of prodigious strength and undaunted courage.—Frederic-Augustus II. son of the above, was born in 1696, and elected king of Poland in 1734. In 1756, the king of Prussia invaded Saxony, and kept it till the peace of 1763. Frederic-Augustus died October 5, the same year.—Ibid.

Frederic-William, elector of Brandenburg, and commonly called the Great Elector, was born in 1620. He succeeded his father in 1640, and obtained the investiture of Prussia from the king of Poland in 1642. He had a war with Sweden, but was obliged to make peace in 1655, in which year he assisted that power against Poland. In 1672 he joined the Imperialists in opposition to Lewis XIV. but soon after he made a separate treaty with France. In 1674 he again joined the allies, on which the French prevailed with the Swedes to attack his dominions. Frederic, however, defeated the invaders, and took several places from them which he was obliged to restore by a treaty in 1679. He now turned his attention to the improvement of his states, and died in 1688.—Memoirs of the House of Brandenburg.

Frederic I. king of Prussia, was the son of the preceding, and born in 1657. In 1700 a treaty was concluded at Vienna, to which all the northern powers agreed, and by virtue of which he was crowned king of Prussia the year following. He augmented his dominions by the county of Tecklenburgh, and the principality of Neufchatel and Valengin. He died in 1713. He founded the university of Halle, the royal society of Berlin, and the academy of the nobles. His queen Sophia-Charlotte, of Hanover, was a woman of fine understanding.—Frederic-William II. son of the above, was born in 1688, and commenced his reign in 1713. In 1715 he declared war against Charles XII. of Sweden, and in conjunction with Denmark took Stralsund, but on the death of Charles he made peace. He died in 1740. Frederic married Sophia, daughter of George elector of Hanover.—Frederic III. king of Prussia, commonly called The Great, the son of the preceding, was born in 1712. He obtained but a scanty education, owing to his father's contempt of letters and predilection for military discipline. On growing up, the young prince shewed so strong an inclination to literature and music as to incur his father's displeasure. The severe treatment he received led him, in 1730, to attempt an escape from Prussia, but the scheme being discovered, the prince was confined in the castle of Custrin, and his young companion Katte executed before his face. After a confinement of some months he obtained his pardon, and in 1733 married the princess of Brunswick Wolfenbuttle, in obedience to his father's command, but he never cohabited with her. In 1740 he succeeded to the throne, and taking advantage of the defenceless state of Maria-Theresa, queen of Hungary, he marched into Silesia, which was added to his dominions by the treaty of Breslaw. In 1744 the war was renewed against the queen of Hungary, and the same year Frederic took Prague, which however he was forced to quit by the approach of a Saxon army under the prince of Lorraine. In 1745 he defeated that prince, at Friedburgh, and then marched into Bohemia, where he defeated an Austrian army which was superior to his own. Shortly after he took Dresden and laid it under heavy exactions. A treaty of peace was concluded at the end of this year by the mediation of the English minister; and the interval of tranquillity was employed by Frederic in regulating his dominions, forming a body of laws, and in composing some literary works. In 1750 Voltaire visited Prussia, and was received with the most flattering marks of attention by the king; but the friendship at last ended in a violent quarrel, and the French philosopher quitted Prussia abruptly, and in disgrace. In 1756 a treaty was concluded between England and Prussia, which produced another between France, Austria, and Russia. The seven years war, as it is called, began by the march of Frederic into Saxony and taking the camp of Pirna. The following year he gained the battle of Prague over the Austrians, on which he laid siege to that city: but after reducing it to great straits, he was compelled to retreat by marshal Daun, and retire into Saxony. Frederic was now surrounded by enemies, the French entered Hanover, the Russians and Swedes advanced towards Prussia, and the Imperialists pursued him into Saxony. Still undaunted, he attacked and defeated the French and Austrians at Rosebach; then marching into Silesia, he beat another army at Lissa. The Russians and Swedes retreated precipitately from Prussia; and the Hanoverians took the field under the prince of Brunswick. In 1758 he received a large subsidy from England; and the same year he entered Moravia, where he laid siege to Olmutz, which was relieved by marshal Daun. He then marched against the Russians, who had laid siege to Custrin, and defeated them after a bloody battle at Zorndoff. But not long after he was surprized and beat by Daun, at Hockkirchen. The next year the king was defeated after a very obstinate and doubtful engagement, at Cunnersdoff, by the Russians; and in 1761, the confederates entered Brandenburg, and took Berlin. Frederic, however, by defeating Daun at Torgau, gave a turn to his affairs, and the Russians and Swedes quitted his territories. In 1762 peace was restored between him and Russia and Sweden, and in 1763 a treaty much in his favour was concluded with the empress queen, by which Silesia was confirmed to Prussia. Still intent upon aggrandizement, he planned the partition of Poland in 1772, and obtained for his share Western Prussia. In 1778 he opposed the design of the emperor Joseph to dismember Bavaria, and marched in person against that monarch, who was assisted by the famous general Laudohn. But no action took place, and by the treaty of Teschen, in 1779, the Austrian court renounced the design. After a long and active life, Frederic died in 1786. He was courteous in his manners, lively in conversation, an acute politician, and in general fond of justice and humanity. But he was an avowed infidel, and actuated by no better principle than pleasure and self-interest. He never had any issue. His works published in his lifetime are in 4 vols. 8vo.; and since his death fifteen more have been printed. The principal are, the Memoirs of the House of Brendenburg: a poem on the Art of War: the History of his own Time: and the History of the Seven Years War.—Towers's Memoirs of Frederic III.

FREDERICK (Colonel), son of the unfortunate Theodore, commonly called king of Corsica, of whose misfortunes and imprudence he partook. He was bred to the military profession, and obtained the rank of colonel, with the cross of the order of merit, from the duke of Wirtemburg, for whom he acted as agent in England. Being greatly reduced in circumstances, he shot himself in the portal of Westminster abbey, in 1796. He wrote: 1. Memoires pour servir à l'Histoire de Corse, 1768, 8vo.; 2. The Description of Corsica, with an Account of its Union to the Crown of Great Britain, &c. 1798, 8vo.—Necrology. Monthly Mag.

FREGOSO (Baptist), a doge of Venice in 1478, who was deposed and banished to Fregui for his arbitrary and oppressive conduct. He wrote on Memorable Actions; the Life of Pope Martin V.; on learned Women, &c.—Moreri.

FREHER (Marquard), a German writer, was born at Augsburg in 1565. He studied under Cujacius, and at the age of 23 was made professor of law at Heidelberg. Afterwards he became vice-president of the court of the elector palatine. He died in 1614. His principal works are, De Re Monetaria veterum, Romanorum, & hodierni apud Germanos Imperii, lib. ii.: Rerum Germanicarum Scriptores a Carolo Magno ad Fred. III.; Corpus Histor. Franciæ.—Ibid.

FREGIUS (John Thomas), a learned German, was born at Friburg in the 16th century. He became rector of the new college at Altorf in 1575, and died in 1583. The chief of his works are, Questiones Geometriæ et Steriometricæ: Logicis Consultorum: Ciceronis Orationes perpetuis Notis, &c. 3 vols. 8vo. Basil, 1753.—Ibid.

FREIND (John), an English physician, was born in 1675, at Croton, in Northamptonshire, and educated at Westminster school; from whence he was elected to Christchurch, Oxford. In 1699 he communicated to the royal society the case of a remarkable hydrocephalus, and in 1701 another of a singular instance of spasmodic affections. In 1703 he distinguished himself by an able work entituled Emmenologia, in qua Fluxus muliebris Menstrui phænomena, periodi vitæ, cum medendi methodo, ad rationes mechanices exiguuntur, 8vo. The next year he was appointed chemical professor at Oxford, and in 1705 he accompanied the earl of Peterborough in his expedition to Spain as physician to the army. On his return in 1707, he published a vindication of the earl's conduct in Spain, which gained him considerable reputation. The same year he took his doctor's degree, and published his chemical lectures. In 1711 he was chosen a member of the royal society, and the same year accompanied the duke of Ormond to Flanders. In 1716 he was elected a fellow of the college of physicians, and the same year had a controversy with Dr. Woodward, on the mode of treating fevers in the small-pox. In 1722 he was elected into parliament for Launceston. The year following he was sent to the Tower on suspicion of being concerned in Atterbury's plot, but was soon released on bail. At the accession of George II. he was appointed physician to the queen. He died in 1728. Besides the above works, he wrote the History of Physic, 2 vols. 8vo. and all his writings were collected and published in Latin by Dr. Wigan, 1 vol. folio.—Dr. Robert Freind, his brother, was master of Westminster school, and died in 1754. He published an edition of Cicero de Oratore.—Biog. Brit.

FREINSHEMIUS (John), a learned writer, was born at Ulm, in Suabia, in 1680. He became professor of eloquence at Upsal, in Sweden, and historiographer to Queen Christina. He died in 1660. He is best known by his Supplement to Quintus Curtius and Livy; besides which, he wrote notes upon Tacitus, and Latin poems, &c.—Moreri.

FREIRE DE ANDRADA (Hyacinthe), a Portuguese writer, was born in 1597. He was abbot of St. Mary de Chans, and died at Lisbon in 1657. His Life of Don John de Castro is an excellent work. He also wrote poems.—Ibid.

FREMINET (Martin), a French painter, was born at Paris in 1567, and died in 1619. He was chief painter to Henry IV.; and Lewis XIII. conferred on him the order of St. Michael.—D'Argenville.

FREMONT D'ABLANCOURT (Nicholas), a learned French protestant writer, was the nephew and pupil of Perrot d'Ablancourt. On the revocation of the edict of Nantes he went to Holland, and became historiographer to the prince of Orange. He died in 1693. He translated Lucian's Dialogue between the Letters, and the Supplement to the True History. He also defended his uncle's version of Tacitus against De la Houssaye; and after his death appeared his Memoirs on the History of Portugal, 12mo.—Bayle.

FRENICLE DE BESSY (Bernard), a French mathematician, was the friend of Descartes, Mersenne, and Fermat. He was also a member of the French academy, and died in 1675. He wrote a treatise of Right-angled Triangles: on Combinations: on resolving Problems by Exclusions, &c.—Moreri.

FRERET (Nicholas), a learned Frenchman, was born at Paris in 1688. He was chosen a member of the academy of inscriptions; on which occasion he presented to the society a dissertation on the origin of the French, for which he was sent to the Bas-ville. On his release he wrote some pieces against revealed religion, and several memoirs in the papers of the academy of inscriptions. He died in 1749.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Freron (Elie Catherine), a French critic, was born at Quimper in 1719. He was bred among the jesuits, whose society he quitted in 1739. His critical works were much read, but owing to some strictures which he passed on Voltaire's writings, that writer attacked him with great asperity. In 1749 he commenced his Letters on certain Writings of the Times, which extended to 13 volumes. He then began his Année Litéraire, which he continued till his death in 1776. Besides the above works, he wrote, Miscellanies; Les Vrais Plaisirs; part of a translation of Lucretius.—Ibid.

Fresnaye (John Vauquelin de la), an old French poet. He was king's advocate at Caen, and president of that city. He died in 1606, aged 72. His works are; 1. Satires. 2. The Art of Poetry. 3. Miscellaneous Poems.—Moreri.

Fresnoy (Charles Alphonsus du), a French painter and poet, was born at Paris in 1611, and after studying under Perrier and Vouet, he went to Rome, where he copied the works of the best masters, and planned his Latin poem on the art of painting. He died at Paris in 1665. His poem was printed after his death, with a French translation by De Piles. There are two English translations of it, one by Dryden, and another by Mason.—D'Argenville.

Frewen (Accepted), an English prelate, was born in Kent, and educated at Magdalen college, Oxford, of which he was elected fellow in 1612. In 1622 he accompanied prince Charles to Spain as chaplain. In 1631 he obtained the deanry of Gloucester, and in 1643 the bishopric of Lichfield and Coventry. At the Restoration he was translated to York, and died at Thorpe castle in 1664, aged 75.—Wood.

Frey (John Cecil), a German physician, was born in the 16th century. He boasted of being the first who defended theses in philosophy in the Greek language in Europe. He died of the plague in 1631. His Opuscula were printed after his death by Baledrens.—Moreri.

Freytag (Frederic Gotthelb), burgomaster of Nuremberg, was born in 1723, and died in 1776. He wrote, Rhinoceros veterum scriptorum monumentis descriptus, 1747. Analecta Literaria, de Libris variorum, 1751. Oratorum & Rhetorum Græcorum quibus Statuæ honoris Causa positæ fuerunt, 1752. An Account of scarce and valuable Books, 1776.—Gen. Biog.

Frezier (Amedée Francis), a French mathematician, was born at Chambery, in 1682, of a family which came from Scotland. He was employed in taking a survey of the Spanish colonies of Peru and Chili in 1711, of which he published an account in 1716. He was afterwards employed in fortifying St. Maloes and other places, for which he was rewarded with the cross of St. Louis. He died in 1772. He wrote, Traité des Feux d'Artifice; Elemens de Stereotomie, &c.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Friche, or Frische (James du), a French benedictine monk, was born in Normandy in 1641, and died at Paris in 1693. He edited the works of St. Ambrose at Paris in 10 vols. folio. He also wrote the Life of St. Augustine.—Moreri.

Frisch (John Leonard), a German naturalist and divine, was born in Sultzbach in 1666. He became a member of the academy of sciences at Berlin, where he died in 1743. He was the founder of the silk manufactory in Brandenburg, and was the first who cultivated mulberry-trees in that country. He was the author of a Dictionary German and Latin: A Description of German Insects: Dictionnaire nouveau des Passagers Francois-Allemand, & Allemand-Francois, 8vo. &c.—Gen. Biog.

Frischlin (Nicodemus), a learned German, was born at Balingen in 1547. At the age of 20 he obtained a professorship in Tubingen. He wrote so vehemently in praise of a country life and on the corrupt manners of the great, in a commentary on Virgil, that he was obliged to quit his native country. At length he was imprisoned at Aurach, and in attempting to make his escape fell from the window, and was killed in 1590. He wrote a Latin grammar, and poems in that language.—Moreri.

Frischmuth (John), a learned German, was born in Franconia in 1619, and died rector of the university of Jena in 1687. He wrote Illustrations of difficult Passages of Scripture.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Frisius (John), a learned Swiss divine, was born in the canton of Zurich, in 1505. He became president of the college at Zurich, where he introduced the study of the Hebrew and other oriental languages. He died in 1565. He translated several of the Hebrew scriptures into German, and published a Latin and German dictionary. His son John James was professor of philosophy and theology. He died about 1610. His other son succeeded him as professor at Zurich, and died there in 1611.—Henry Frisius, of the same family, was professor of languages at Zurich, where he died in 1718. He wrote de Sede Animæ rationalis, De Communione Sanctorum, &c. See Gemma.—Moreri.

Frith (John), a protestant martyr, was born at Sevenoaks in Kent, and educated at Cambridge, from whence he removed to Oxford, where he became one of the canons in Wolsey's college. Through his acquaintance with Tyndall, he embraced the principles of the Reformation, for which he was imprisoned. In 1528 he obtained his liberty, and went abroad. On his return he zealously promoted the doctrines of the gospel, for which he was burned in Smithfield in 1533. He wrote several books against popery, collected into 1 vol. folio. —Wood's A. O.

Frizon (Peter), a French jesuit, and grand master of the college of Navarre at Paris, who died about 1650. He published an edition of the Bible in French, translated by the divines of Louvain, with notes. He also wrote a History of the French Cardinals: a History of the Grand Almoners of France: The Life of Spondæus, &c. —Moreri.

Frobenius (John), a German printer, who flourished at Basil in the 16th century, and was greatly esteemed by Erasmus, whose works he printed, as he did those of Augustine and Jerom. He died in 1529.—Moreri.

Frobisher (sir Martin), an English navigator, was born near Doncaster, in Yorkshire, and bred early to the sea. The discovery of a north-west passage to India was an object which constantly exercised his thoughts; and after applying to several merchants to engage in the enterprise, he obtained the patronage of the earl of Warwick and other noblemen, who enabled him to fit out three small vessels, with which he sailed from Deptford in 1576. After exploring the coast of New Greenland, he entered the straits which bear his name, and then returned to England, bringing with him a black stone, which is said to have contained gold. In consequence of this, he was sent out again to search for ore, with a quantity of which he returned. A third voyage was undertaken, with a number of ships to bring home the riches supposed to exist in the newly-discovered countries: but on the return of the expedition the delusion was discovered. In 1585 Frobisher served under Drake in the West Indies, and in 1588 he had a share in the defeat of the Spanish armada The same year he was knighted. This gallant officer was killed in assaulting a fort near Brest, in 1594.—Hacklayt. Biog. Brit.

Froelich (Erasmus), a learned jesuit, was born at Gratz, in Stiria, in 1700. He was a good mathematician and medallist, and died in 1758. His works are, Quatuor Teutermina in re Nummaria, 4to. Annales Rerum et Regum Stiriæ, folio; De Figura Telluris, 4to.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Froila I. king of Spain, was the son of Alphonsus I. and began his reign in 757. He made good laws, and opposed the progress of the Moors. In 760 he obtained a victory over the Saracens in Galicia, but he sullied his character by the murder of his brother Vimazan, which was avenged by his other brother Aurelius, who slew him in 768.—Froila II. succeeded his brother Ordogno in 923. He was a cruel prince, which occasioned the province of Castile to revolt against him. He died of the leprosy in 925.—Univ. Hist.

Froidmont (Libert), an ecclesiastic, was born near Liege, in 1587. He was professor of philosophy and dean of St. Peter's at Louvain, where he became interpreter of the scriptures to the students. He died in 1653. He wrote Dissertatio de Cometa; Meteorologicorum, lib. v; Brevis Anatomica Hominis; In Actus Apostolorum Comment. &c.—Moreri.

Froissard or Froissart (John), an historian, was born at Valenciennes in 1337. His Chronicle, which narrates the transactions of France, Spain, and England, from 1326 to 1400, is very accurate. The best edition is that of Lyons, in 4 vols. folio, 1559. He was an ecclesiastic, but given to gaiety. He died about 1410. His chronicle was translated into old English by lord Berners, and recently by Mr. Johnes of Hafod.—Ibid.

Fromage (Peter), a French jesuit, who resided many years in Egypt and Syria as superior of the missions, and died in the latter country in 1740. He established a printing-press in the monastery of St. John, near Antura, from whence he issued a number of pious pieces in the Arabic language. —Moreri.

Fronteau (John), a French divine, was born at Angers in 1614. He became chancellor of the university of Paris, and afterwards prior of Benay in the diocese of Angers, and lastly of St. Magdalen of Montargis, where he died in the 48th year of his age. He published, The Philosophy of Alamandus; Antitheses Augustini & Calvini; and De Diebus Festivis, folio.—Ibid.

Frontinus (Sextus Julius), a Roman writer, who died under Trajan. He wrote, De Aquæductibus Urbis Romæ: Tres Libros Stratagematum: De Re Agraria: De Limitibus: which are extant.—Voss. Hist. Lat.

Fronto (Marcus Cornelius), a Roman orator, who was preceptor to Verus and M. Aurelius. The latter made him consul, and erected a statue to his honour.—Moreri.

Frowde (Philip), an English poet, was educated at Oxford. His Latin poems in the Musæ Anglicanæ are elegant. He also wrote two tragedies: The Fall of Saguntum, and Philotas. He died in 1738.—Biog. Dram.

Frugoni (Charles Innocent), an Italian poet, was born at Genoa in 1692. He was bred an ecclesiastic, which state he quitted, and became secretary to the academy of arts at Parma, where he died in 1768. His works were printed at Parma in 1779, in 9 vols. 8vo.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Frumentis (St.), the first who preached the gospel in Ethiopia, of which country he was ordained bishop by St. Athanasius in 331. He died about 360.—Moreri.

Frye (Thomas), a painter, was born at Dublin in 1710. He came early to London, and in 1738 painted a picture of the Prince of Wales for Sadlers'-Hall. After practising as a painter some years, he undertook the management of a china manufactory at Bow, which did not answer. He then returned to his former profession, and also exercised the art of scraping portraits in mezzotinto, particularly those of the king and queen. He died in 1762.—Europ. Mag.

Fuchs (Leonard), a German physician and botanist, was born in 1501, at Wembdingen, in Bavaria. He was knighted by Charles V. His greatest work is Historia Plantarum, printed at Basil in 1542. He also wrote several medical books. He died in 1566.—Haller's Bibl. Med. et Anat.

Fuessli (John Gaspard), an ingenious Swiss, was born at Zurich in 1706. He was an excellent artist, and generally esteemed for his amiable qualities. He wrote a history of the artists of Switzerland, which is a good work. He died in 1782. His son John Gaspard, was a bookseller at Zurich, and died there in 1786. He published some esteemed works on entomology.—Gen. Biog.

Fugger (Huldric), a liberal encourager of learning, was born at Augsburg in 1526. He expended considerable sums in purchasing ancient MSS. and getting them printed, which so provoked his relations, that they obtained a decree against him, by which he was pronounced incapable of managing his affairs. He died at Heidelberg in 1584.—Moreri.

Fulbert, a French bishop, was a native of Italy, and a pupil of pope Sylvester II. On going to France as a public lecturer, he gained a great reputation, and the bishopric of Chartres. He was zealous against Berengarius on the eucharist, and introduced the worship of the Virgin into France. His works are extant. He died in 1028.—Ibid.

Fulda (Charles Frederick), an ingenious Lutheran divine, was born at Wimpfen in Suabia in 1722, and died at Einzigen, in 1788. He wrote a dictionary of the German Roots; An Enquiry into Language; On the Origin of the Goths; On the Cimbri; On the Deities of the Germans; and a Chart of History. He was also an excellent mechanic.—Gen. Biog.

Fulgentius (St.), a father of the church, was born at Lepta, about 468, of a noble family. When young, he was appointed to a lucrative post, which he abandoned for the monastic profession. In 507 he was chosen bishop of Ruspa. He was afterwards banished with all the African bishops who adhered to the orthodox faith, by Thrasimond, king of the Vandals, who professed arianism. On the death of that monarch they were recalled. Fulgentius died in 533. His works were printed at Paris in one vol. 4to. 1684.—Cave Hist. Lit.

Fulke (William), an English divine, was born in London, and educated at St. John's college, Cambridge, of which he was chosen fellow in 1564. The earl of Leicester presented him to the livings of Warley in Essex, and Diddington in Suffolk. He was afterwards made master of Pembroke-hall, and Margaret professor of divinity. He died in 1589. Of his woks the most noted is his Commentary upon the Rhemish Translation of the New Testament, printed in 1580.—Wood's A. O.

Fuller (Nicholas), a learned divine, was born at Southampton, and educated at the free-school in that town, after which he became secretary to the bishop of Winchester, on whose death he went to Oxford, where he took his degrees in arts, and entered into orders. He obtained a prebend in the church of Salisbury, and the living of Bishop's Waltham in Hampshire. He died in 1622. His Miscellanea Theologica, printed at Oxford in 1616, is a valuable body of sacred criticism.—Ibid.

Fuller (Thomas), an historian and divine, was born at Aldwincle in Northamptonshire in 1608, and educated at Queen's college, Cambridge. In 1631 he was chosen fellow of Sidney college, and about the same time obtained a prebend of Salisbury. He was also presented to the rectory of Broad Windsor in Dorsetshire. He afterwards removed to London, and became lecturer at the Savoy. He adhered strenuously to the royal cause, and became chaplain to lord Hopton, who left him at Basinghouse, which was shortly after besieged by sir William Waller, but the garrison being spirited up by Fuller, made so vigorous a resistance, that Waller was obliged to retire. On the ruin of the king's affairs he was chosen lecturer of St. Bride's, Fleet-street. About 1648 he obtained the rectory of Waltham in Essex; and between that time and the Restoration he published a number of books, the principal of which was the Church History of Britain, folio. At the Restoration he was made chaplain-extraordinary to the king, restored to his prebend, and created D. D. He died in 1661. The year following appeared his History of the Worthies of England, in folio. Besides the above he published, The History of the Holy War, folio; The Holy State, folio; Pisgah Sight of Palestine, folio; Abel Redivivus, or Lives of eminent Divines, 4to.; Sermons and Tracts. He is said to have had so strong a memory as to tell in their exact order the names of the signs then placed over every tradesman's door, after a walk between Temple-bar and the Royal Exchange. His style is exceedingly quaint, and he was too fond of punning.—Biog. Brit.

Fuller (Isaac), an English painter in the reign of Charles II. He painted the Resurrection at All Souls' college, Oxford; another at Magdalen college; and a picture at Wadham college; which last is the best. He studied in France under Perrier.

He died in 1676.—Walpole's Anec. of Painters.

Fulco (Peter), an heretical bishop of Antioch in the 5th century. He embraced the Eutychian heresy, to which he added a notion, that all the persons of the Trinity suffered on the cross. He usurped the see of Antioch from Martyrius, for which he was deposed, but Zeno the emperor restored him.—Moreri.

Fulvia, the wife of Marc Anthony, was a woman of a vindictive spirit. When Octavius returned to Rome, and had a quarrel with her, Fulvia took up arms against him, which gave so much offence to Anthony, that he treated her with roughness. This behaviour operated upon her so much, that she retired to Greece, and died of grief. When the head of Cicero was brought to her, she took it in her lap, spit upon it, and thrust repeatedly a silver bodkin through the tongue.—Bayle.

Furetiere (Anthony), a learned Frenchman, was born at Paris in 1620. After practising with reputation as an advocate, he entered into orders, and became abbot of Chalivoy and prior of Chuines. He was expelled from the French academy for undertaking his dictionary of the French tongue, in opposition to their own. It was printed in 1690, in 2 vols. folio. He died in 1688.—Moreri.

Furini (Francesco), an eminent historical painter, was born at Florence in 1604, and died in 1646. He excelled in painting naked figures, as nymphs bathing, &c.—Pilkington.

Furius, surnamed Bibaculus, an old Latin poet, was born at Cremona about 100 B.C. He wrote annals and satires, of which only some fragments are extant.—Voss. de Poet. Lat.

Furneaux (Philip), an ingenious divine of the nonconformist persuasion, was born at Totness in Devonshire, in 1726. After receiving an academical education for the ministry, he became assistant in a presbyterian congregation in Southwark, and afterwards one of the lecturers at Salters'-hall. In 1753 he succeeded Mr. Lowman as pastor of a congregation at Clapham. He obtained his degree of doctor of divinity from one of the Scotch universities, and died in 1783. Dr. Furneaux wrote letters to Judge Blackstone concerning his Exposition of the Act of Toleration; and an Essay on Toleration.—Gent. Mag. Dec. 1783.

Furst (Walter), one of the founders of the liberties of the Swiss. In 1307 he headed some other brave men, and took the forts belonging to the Austrians and destroyed them, which was the first step to the restoration of the Swiss independence.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Furstemberg (Ferdinand de), an eminent prelate, was descended from an antient and noble family in Westphalia, and born in 1626. Pope Alexander VII. gave him several ecclesiastical benefices, and in 1678 he obtained the see of Munster, at which time he was also declared apostolical vicar of the north of Europe. He was a liberal encourager of learning, and supported several foundations for the propagation of Christianity in distant countries. He died in 1683. The bishop published a valuable work, entituled Monumenta Paderbornensia, 1672, 4to.; and a Collection of Latin Poems.—Moreri.

Fusi (Anthony), a French ecclesiastic, who turned protestant at the beginning of the 17th century. He was a doctor of the Sorbonne, and held the living of St. Bartholomew in Paris; but having expressed free opinions against the jesuits, he was thrown into prison on the charges of lewdness and heresy. After a long confinement he was liberated and went to Geneva, where he renounced popery, and died about 1630. He wrote an account of his case, and a book against the Romish errors and corruptions.—Ibid.

Fuzelier (Lewis), a French dramatic writer, and one of the editors of a periodical work called the Mercury. He died in 1752, aged 80. His pieces are written with spirit.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Fyot de la Marche (Claude), count of Bosjam, a French ecclesiastic, was born at Dijon in 1630. Lewis XIV. made him counsellor of state and prior of Notre Dame. He died at Dijon in 1721. He wrote a History of the Abbey of St. Stephen, folio, and some religious pieces.—Moreri.

G.

Gaal (Barent), a Dutch painter, was born about 1650. He was the disciple of Philip Wouvermans. His landscapes are very fine.—Houbraken.

Gabbiani (Antonio Domenico), an historical and portrait painter of Florence, was born in 1652, and died in 1726. He was killed by a fall from a scaffold as he was at work.—Pilkington.

Gabinius (Aulus), a Roman consul 58 years B.C. He was successful in a war against Alexander, the son of Aristobulus, king of Judea; and placed Ptolemy Auletes on the throne of Egypt. On his return to Rome he was accused of extortion, and banished. He died B.C. 40.—Josephus. Univ. Hist.

Gabriel (Severus), a Greek bishop, was born at Monembasia, in the Peloponnesus. He was consecrated bishop of Philadelphia in 1577, but afterwards went to Venice, and was bishop of the Greek church in that republic. He wrote in Greek a Treatise on the Sacraments, and a Defence of the Greek Church, published at Paris in 1671, 4to.—Moreri.

Gabriel (Sionita), a learned maronite, and professor of the Oriental languages at Rome and at Paris, at which last place he died in 1648. He assisted Le Jay in his Polyglot Bible, and published a translation of the Arabic geography, with the title of Geographia Nubiensis, 1619, 4to.—Ibid.

Gabriel (James), a French architect, was born at Paris in 1661, and died in 1742. He became inspector-general of buildings, and chief architect and engineer, and had the order of St. Michael conferred on him. —Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Gabrielle (de Bourbon), daughter of Louis de Bourbon count de Montpensier, married in 1485 Louis de la Trimouille, who was killed at the battle of Pavia in 1525, and by whom she had Charles count de Talmond, killed at the battle of Marignan in 1515. She died in 1516. This princess was a woman of talents and virtue. She wrote several pious tracts, which were never published.—Ibid.

Gabrino (Augustin), the chief of a sect of fanatics who called themselves "Knights of the Apocalypse," was a native of Brescia. He assumed the title of "Prince of Number Seven, and Monarch of the Holy Trinity." The object he professed was, to defend the catholic church against antichrist; he collected about eighty followers, who wore a device on their habits to distinguish them. In 1694 Gabrino was confined in a madhouse, where he died, and his disciples were dispersed.—Moreri.

Gacon (Francis), a French satyrist, who wrote against Bossuet, Rousseau, and Le Motte. He was born at Lyons in 1666, and became a priest of the oratory; gained the prize for poetry of the academy in 1717, and died at his priory of Baillon in 1725.—Ibid.

Gaddesden (John), an English physician, author of a treatise on medicine, entituled Rosa Anglica. He lived in the 14th century. Like most of his profession in those times, he was in holy orders.—Ibid.

Gaddi (Gaddo), an historical painter of Florence, was born in 1239, and died in 1312. He performed several works in mosaic. His son Taddeo and his grandson Agnolo were also excellent artists.—Pilkington.

Gaelen (Alexander van), a Dutch painter, was born in 1670, and died in 1728. He settled in London, and painted some battle-pieces, particularly one of the Boyne.—Ibid.

Gaetano (Scipio), a Florentine painter, was born in 1550, and died in 1588. He painted historical subjects and portraits.—Ibid.

Gaertner (Joseph), an eminent naturalist, was born at Calu, in Suabia, in 1732. His father was physician to the duke of Wirtemberg. He received his education at Tubingen, where he studied theology, being destined for the church. An ardent thirst for natural history and mathematics drew him from this profession, and he applied to medicine. From Tubingen he went to Gottingen, and attended the lectures of Haller. He afterwards travelled through several parts of Europe, and on his return to his own country, took the degree of M.D. In 1759 he went to Leyden, where he attended the botanical lectures, and applied himself to vegetable anatomy. With this view he visited England, and communicated some interesting papers to the Philosophical Transactions, the principal of which is a Memoir on the Fructification and Propagation of Confervæ, &c. Here he gained the friendship of some of the most eminent men of the age, and was admitted a fellow of the royal society. In 1768 he went to Petersburg, and was appointed professor of botany and natural history. After filling that place with great credit, and exploring the Ukraine for botanical discoveries, he returned to his native place in 1770. In 1778 he came to London, to make drawings and descriptions of fruits to illustrate the great work in which he was engaged, his Carpology, the first volume of which he dedicated to sir Joseph Banks. He died in 1791. He left a number of valuable MSS.—Life of Gaertner by Deleuze.

Gaffarell (James), a French writer, was born at Mannes, in Provence, about 1601. He adopted the doctrines of the Cabala, in defence of which he wrote a quarto volume in Latin. He became librarian to cardinal Richelieu, who gave him several preferments. He died at Sigonce, at the age of 80. Besides the above, he wrote a book, entituled, "Unheard-of Curiosities concerning the Talismanic Sculpture of the Persians, the Horoscope of the Patriarchs, and the Reading of the Stars." —Moreri.

Gafurio (Franchino), a professor of music, was born at Lodi in 1451. He was in orders, and became head of the choir in the cathedral of Milan, where also he was appointed musical professor. He died about 1520. His works are, Theoricum Opus Musicæ disciplinæ; Practica Musicæ utriusque Cantus; Angelicum et Divinum Opus Musicæ materna lingua Script.; De Harmonica Musicorum Instrumentorum, &c. —Tiraboschi. Hawkins. Burney.

Gage (Thomas), an Irishman by birth, and a monk of the jacobin order in Spain, was sent a missionary to the Philippines in 1625. On finishing his mission, he retired to England, where in 1651 he published an Account of the East Indies.—Moreri.

Gagnier (John), a learned orientalist, was a native of Paris. He was bred a Roman catholic, but turned protestant and settled in England. He was patronised by many eminent persons, and received the degree of M. A. at Cambridge and Oxford. In 1706 he published an edition of Ben Gorion's History of the Jews, in Hebrew, with a Latin translation and notes. In 1723 he edited Abulfeda's Life of Mohammed, in Arabic, with a Latin translation and notes, folio. He succeeded Dr. Wallis in the Arabic professorship at Oxford. He died in 1725.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Gagny (John), a learned French divine, and first almoner to Francis I. He was chancellor of the university of Paris, and died in 1549. He published an edition of the Psalms in verse, and Commentaries on the New Testament, &c.—Moreri.

Gaguin (Robert), a French historian, was born at Colines, near Amiens, and educated at Paris. He was keeper of the royal library, and general of the order of trinitarians, and died in 1501. His principal work is, Compendium super Francorum gestis a Pharamondo usque ad an. 1491, published at Lyons in 1524.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Gaichies (John), a French writer, was born in 1648. He became a priest of the oratory, and a prebendary at Soissons. He died at Paris in 1731. He wrote Academical Discourses, Maxims for Pulpit Orators, &c.—Ibid.

Gaillard (de Lonjumeau), bishop of Apt, in Provence, who died in 1695. He was the first who projected a universal historical dictionary, and employed Moreri, who was his almoner, to execute the work; causing researches to be made for it in all valuable libraries. Moreri dedicated to him the first edition of his dictionary.

Gainas, a Goth, who became a general in the Roman army under Arcadius. He put Eutropius, the favourite of that emperor, to death, also the prefect Rufinus. Being refused a church for the Arians, he took Constantinople; but after ravaging Thrace, he was defeated by the Huns, and his head sent to Arcadius, A. D. 400.—Univ. Hist.

Gainsborough (Thomas), an English painter, was born at Sudbury, in Suffolk, in 1727. He was self-taught, and used to entertain himself by drawing landscapes from nature, in the woods of his native county. From Sudbury he came to London, and commenced portrait painter, in which line he acquired great eminence. His chief excellence, however, was in landscape, in which he united the brilliancy of Claude with the simplicity of Ruysdael. He died in 1788. His eldest brother was also a good artist; and another, who was a dissenting minister at Henley, in Oxfordshire, was an ingenious mechanic.—Europ. Mag. Pilkington.

Galadin (Mahomet), emperor of the Moguls in the 16th century. He gave audience to his subjects twice a day; and that none might be repulsed, he ordered a bell to be fixed in his apartments, with a cord that descended into the street; and when he heard the bell, he either went down, or caused the petitioner to be brought to him. He died in 1605.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Galantini (Hippolito), a painter and capuchin, whence he is frequently called Capuchino, was born at Genoa in 1627. He painted history and portraits in miniature. He died in 1706.—Pilkington.

Galanus (Clement), an Italian monk of the order of Theatins, who was employed as missionary in Armenia many years. He published at Rome in 1605 a grammar of the Armenian language, and in 1650 various treatises in that tongue, accompanied with Latin translations, in 2 vols. folio.—Moreri.

Galas (Matthew), one of the greatest generals of his time, was born at Trent in 1589. He served in Italy and Germany under the celebrated Tilli, in the command of the Imperial armies, and rendered eminent services to the emperor Frederic II. and Philip IV. king of Spain. He was deprived of the command, after being defeated by the Swedes near Magdeburg, but was restored, and died at Vienna in 1647. —Moreri.

Galateo (Antonio), a learned physician, was descended from a Greek family, and born in 1444 at Galatino in the territory of Otranto. He was appointed physician to the king of Naples, and died at Lecce, in his native province, in 1516. He wrote De Situ Iapygiæ; De Situ Elementorum; De Situ Terrarum; De Mari et Aquis, &c.—Ibid.

Galatin (Peter), a franciscan monk, who flourished about 1530. He wrote De Arcanis Catholicæ Veritatis, a work of considerable reputation, the best edition of which is that of 1672, folio.—Ibid.

Galba (Servius Sulpicius), emperor of Rome, was descended from the ancient family of Sulpitii. He was successively prætor, proconsul of Africa, and general of the Roman armies in Germany and Spain. He retired to avoid the jealousy of Nero; but the tyrant having issued an order for his death, Galba proclaimed himself emperor, and Gaul declaring for him, Nero put himself to death. Galba gave himself up to the government of three obscure men, whom the Romans called his school-masters. He was slain by the prætorian band, who proclaimed Otho in his stead, A. D. 69.—Crevier.

Gale (John), an eminent divine among the baptists, was born at London, in 1680. At the age of 17 he was sent to Leyden, where he received the degrees of master of arts and doctor of philosophy. From Leyden he went to Amsterdam to study under professor Limborch; and there he became acquainted with Le Clerc. The History of Infant Baptism, by Mr. Wall, published in 1705, attracting his notice, he wrote a reply to it; which, however, did not appear till 1711. About this time he was chosen minister of the baptist congregation in Barbican. Mr. Wall published an answer to Dr. Gale in a work, entituled, A Defence of the History of Infant Baptism; for which he received the degree of D. D. from the university of Oxford. A premature death prevented the execution of a reply which Gale meditated. He died of a fever in 1721. Four vols. of his sermons were printed after his death.—Biog. Brit.

GALE (Theophilus), an eminent nonconformist divine, was born in 1628 at King's Teignton in Devonshire. He received his academical education at Magdalen college, Oxford, took his degrees in arts, and was chosen fellow. He was invited to Winchester in 1657, where he preached till 1661, when he was deprived for nonconformity. He then became tutor to the sons of lord Wharton, with whom he went to Caen in Normandy. In 1665 he returned to England, and became pastor of a dissenting congregation and master of a seminary at Newington. He died in 1678. He wrote many works, the principal of which is, his Court of the Gentiles, 3 vols. 4to.; in which he proves, that the theology and philosophy of the pagans were borrowed from the scriptures. —Prince's Worthies of Devon. Wood. Calamy.

GALE (Thomas), a learned English divine, was born in 1636, at Scruton, in Yorkshire. He was educated at Westminster school, and elected to Trinity college, Cambridge, of which he became fellow. In 1666 he was chosen Greek professor, and, in 1672, master of St. Paul's school. He was a member of the royal society, of which he became one of the honorary secretaries. In 1697 he was promoted to the deanry of York, where he died in 1702. He published a collection of the Greek Mythologists; Historiæ Poeticæ antiqui Scriptores Græcæ & Latinæ; Jamblichus de Mysteriis; Herodotus Halicarnassensis Historiarum; an edition of Cicero; Historiæ Anglicanæ Scriptores; Historiæ Britannicæ, Saxonicæ, Anglo-Danicæ; a volume of sermons; Antonini iter Britanniarum, &c.—Biog. Brit.

GALE (Roger), the eldest son of the above. He received his education at Trinity college, Cambridge, where he was chosen fellow in 1697. He was member of parliament for Northallerton, in Yorkshire, in three parliaments, the first vice-president of the society of antiquaries, and treasurer of the royal society. He died in 1744. Mr. Gale published some valuable books, the principal of which was an edition of his father's Commentary on Antoninus. Samuel Gale, his brother, was also eminent for his knowledge of antiquities. He died in 1754, at the age of 72.—Biog. Brit.

GALEANO (Joseph), a physician of Pavia, was born in 1605, and died in 1675. Besides several works on medical subjects, he published a collection of the Sicilian Acts, in 5 volumes.—Moreri.

GALEN (Claudius), a celebrated physician, born at Pergamus in Asia, in 131. After obtaining a most liberal education, he applied to the study of medicine, and attended all the eminent schools in Greece and Egypt. He practised four years in his native city, and then went to Rome, but was driven from thence by the persecution of the physicians, who attributed his success to magic. From Rome he returned to Pergamus, but by the favour of the emperor Marcus Aurelius he gained his footing at Rome. He died at the age of 70. He wrote 300 volumes on physic, and also on many other sciences. The remains of his works were published at Basil, with a Latin version, in 5 vols. folio, 1538.—Mor.

GALEN (Matthew), a learned divine of the Roman church, was a native of Zealand. He became professor, and chancellor of the university of Douay, where he died in 1573. He wrote Commentarium de Christiano & Catholico Sacerdote, 4to.; De Originibus Monasticis; De Missæ Sacrificio; De Sæculi nostri Choreis, &c.—Mor.

GALEN (Bernard van), bishop of Munster, was born of a noble family in Westphalia in 1604. In his youth he commanded a regiment in the service of the elector of Cologne, but on entering into orders obtained a canonry in the cathedral of Munster. In 1650 he was elected bishop; but the pope refused to confirm the appointment. Bernard, however, secured his seat, and endeavoured to introduce a garrison of troops into the city, which occasioned a war between him and the citizens. The matter was at last compromised, and the bishop was chosen one of the leaders of the army against the Turks, but peace being restored prevented his taking the command. In 1665 he took up arms against the United States and captured several places, but the interference of France forced him to make peace. In 1672 he entered into a league with France and England against the States, and again took some places from them. He afterwards joined Denmark against Sweden. He died in 1678.—Moreri.

GALEOTI (Martio), a native of Narni in Italy, was private secretary to Matthias Corvinus, king of Hungary, tutor to his son John Corvinus, and keeper of the library at Buda. Lewis XI. of France inviting him to his court, he went to Lyons, where he died in 1478. He published a collection of bon-mots of Matthias Corvinus; and a work entituled, De homine interiore, & de corpore ejus.—Moreri.

GALEOTI (Nicholas), an Italian jesuit, who died in 1748. He wrote lives of the generals of his order, published in Latin and Italian at Rome, in 1748; also notes on the Musæum Odescalcum, 2 vols. folio.—N. D. H.

GALERIUS (C. Valerius Maximianus), a Roman emperor, was a herdsman of Dacia, and entering into the army as a private soldier, rose to several military posts. Diocletian gave him his daughter in marriage, and in 292 took him as partner in the empire. In 296 he commanded in Mesopotamia, where he was defeated by Narses, king of Persia, but he soon retrieved his reputation by a great victory, in which the wives, children, and property of that prince fell into his hands. He instigated Diocletian to persecute the christians, and on his abdication Galerius rose to supreme power. At the close of his life he desisted from persecuting the christians, and requested their prayers. He died in 311.—Crevier. Un. Hist.

GALGACUS, chief of the Caledonians, who resisted with uncommon valour the Romans under the command of Agricola. After several skirmishes the two armies came to a pitched battle, previous to which Galgacus made a noble speech to his troops. He was however defeated with prodigious loss.—Tacitus.

GALIANI (Ferdinand), an Italian writer, was born of a noble family at Chieti in Abruzzi, in 1728. His principal work was on Money and Specie, published in 1750, occasioned by the scarcity of cash in the two Sicilies. This procured him preferment in the church for which he had been educated, by his uncle the archbishop of Tarento. In 1772 he published a catalogue of stones found about Vesuvius, which collection he presented to pope Benedict XIV. and, on one of the boxes, wrote this inscription, "Beatissime pater, fac ut lapides isti panes fiant." This wit had its effect, and the pope gave him a valuable living. In 1759 he was appointed secretary to the French embassy; and during his residence at Paris his company was universally courted. He wrote there, Dialogues on the Corn Trade, which excited considerable notice, though anonymous. In 1779 he returned to Naples, where he died in 1787. Besides the above works he wrote a Commentary on Horace; a Treatise on the natural Duties of Princes to other belligerent Powers; &c.—Life of Galiani, by D'adati, Naples, 1788.

GALILEI (Galileo), a celebrated astronomer, was the son of a Florentine nobleman, and born at Pisa in 1564. His father was desirous that he should study medicine; but he attached himself to mathematics, and at the age of 25 was made mathematical professor at Pisa, from whence he removed to Padua. In 1609 having heard that Jansen had invented a glass by which objects at a distance were rendered as visible as if near, he turned his attention to the subject and constructed a telescope, by means of which he discovered the irregularities of the Moon's surface and that of Venus. He also found that the Via Lactea is an assemblage of fixed stars; and by assiduous application of his invention, he made many other important discoveries in the heavens. But his assertion of the earth's motion gave such offence to the inquisitors, that in 1615 he was cited to Rome, and required to recant these propositions, that the sun is the centre of the world, and that the earth is not the centre of the world, but has a diurnal motion. After being confined a few months, he was released, and charged not to defend these heretical opinions either by word or writing. In 1632 he published at Florence his Dialogues on the Ptolemaic and Copernican Systems of the World, for which he was cited to Rome; his book ordered to be publicly burnt; the author sentenced to be imprisoned, to make another recantation of his errors, and, by way of penance, to recite the seven penitential psalms once a week. This sentence however was changed by the pope, and Galileo obtained his liberty. He then retired to his house near Florence, where he continued his observations till he became blind by intense application. He died in 1642. His principal works are, The Operations of the Compass; on the Swimming of Bodies; Mechanics; Nuncius Sidereus; on the Trepidation of the Moon; Discourse of the solar Spots. Mathematical Discourses and Demonstrations; Treatise of the Mundane System. His son Vincenza Galilei was the first who applied his father's invention of the pendulum to clock-work. The father of Galilei wrote some esteemed works on music.—Martin's Biog. Phil. Hutton's Math. Dict.

GALLAND (Anthony), a learned French writer. He was born at Rollo in Picardy, in 1646; and died at Paris in 1715. He was sent by Colbert to the East; and on his return to France was made a member of the academy of inscriptions, and professor of Arabic in the royal college of Paris. He wrote several dissertations on medals; but the work by which he is best known is the translation of the Arabian Nights' Entertainments. He is not to be confounded with Augustus Galland, author of a History of France and Navarre.—Moreri.

GALLE, or GALLÆUS (Servatius), a Dutch divine, and pastor of the Walloon church at Haerlem, who died in 1709. He edited Lactantius with notes, 1660. 8vo.; and wrote Dissertationes de Sybillis earumque Oraculis, 1688, 4to.: he also published an edition of the Sybilline Oracles, with corrections and notes.—Moreri.

GALLIENUS, a Roman emperor, was son of Valerian, and associated with him in the empire in 253. His father being taken prisoner by Sapor, king of Persia, in 260, he became sole emperor, but degenerated into effeminacy and cruelty. He was assassinated in 268.—Univ. Hist. Crevier.

GALLITZIN (Basil), a Russian nobleman, who was in great favour with the regent princess Sophia, sister of the czars Peter I. and Iwan. He was of an ambitious character; and suspected of a design upon the throne. He was unsuccessful in war; and the intrigues of Sophia against her brother Peter being discovered, she was confined in a monastery, and Gallitzin exiled. He died in a monastery, in 1713, at the age of 80.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

GALLITZIN (Michael Michaelowitz prince of), of the same family as the preceding, was born in 1674. He served under Peter the Great, both by land and sea. In 1725 he was made field-marshal, and afterwards president of the college of war. He died in 1730.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

GALLOCHE (Lewis), a French painter, was the disciple of Boullonge and the master of le Moine. He died rector and chancellor of the royal academy in 1761, at the age of 91.—D'Argenville.

GALLONIUS (Anthony), a priest of the oratory at Rome, who died there in 1605. He wrote a History of Virgins; Lives of Martyrs; Life of Philip Neri; and Apologeticus liber pro assertis in annal. Eccles. Baronianis de Monachatu Sancti Gregoriæ Papæ, 4to. But his most famous work is one on the different Sorts of Cruelties exercised on the primitive Martyrs, with plates, 1594, 4to.—Moreri.

GALLUCCI (Tarquinio), an Italian jesuit, who had a contest with madame Dacier, on the merits of Virgil and Homer, in which he contended for the pre-eminence of the former. He was born in 1574, and died in 1649.—Ibid.

GALLUCCI (John Paul), an eminent Italian astronomer, who died about 1600. He was a member of the academy of Venice, and wrote several treatises, the chief of which are Theatrum Mundi et Temporis, folio, 1589; De Themate erigendo, Parte Fortunæ, Divisione Zodiacæ, Dignitatibus Planetarum, et Temporibus ad Medicandum Accommodatis, 1584, fol.; Speculum Uranicum, fol. &c.—Moreri.

GALLUS (Cornelius), a Roman poet, was born at Frejus, then called Forum Julii or Frejus. Augustus gave him the government of Egypt, but afterwards deprived him of his estate, and banished him for maladministration, on which he put an end to his life A. D. 26. Virgil's 10th eclogue is written on the love of Gallus for Lycoris. —Voss. Poet. Lat.

GALLUS (C. Vibius), a Roman emperor, was born about the year 206. He served under the emperor Decius, whom he is said to have betrayed to the Goths that he might succeed him. On his death, in 251, the soldiers elected Gallus, who was slain by them in 253.—Crevier. Univ. Hist.

GALLUS (Flavius Claudius Constantius), brother of the emperor Julian, was created Cæsar in 351, by the emperor Constantius. He acquired reputation in war; but afterwards abandoned himself to the counsels of his wife, who was cruel and avaricious. He was arrested by the order of Constantius; and beheaded in 354.—Ibid.

GALLY (Henry), a learned divine, was born at Beckenham in Kent, in 1696, and educated at Benet's college, Cambridge. In 1721 he took his degree of M. A. and at the same time was chosen lecturer of St. Paul, Covent-garden, and preferred to the rectory of Waveden in Buckinghamshire. In 1728 he took his degree of D. D. and obtained a prebend in the cathedral of Gloucester, which was followed by the rectory of Ashton in Northamptonshire, and a prebend of Norwich. In 1732 he was presented to the rectory of St. Giles in the Fields. He died in 1769. Dr. Gally published, besides single sermons, The Reasonableness of Church and College Fines Asserted, 8vo.; Considerations upon Clandestine Marriages.—Gen. B. D.

GALVANI (Lewis), a celebrated physiologist, was born at Bologna, in 1737. He studied medicine under Galeazzi, whose daughter he married. In 1762 he became lecturer in anatomy at Bologna, and obtained a considerable reputation. By experiments on frogs, he discovered, that all animals are endued with a peculiar kind of electricity; and he followed up this discovery with so much perseverance and success, as to give his name to a system of physiology, which has excited universal attention. His first publication on this subject was in 1791, and entituled "Aloysii Galvani de Viribus Electricitatis in Motu Musculari Commentarius." Upon this system the famous Volta made vast improvements. Galvani, on the death of his wife, in 1790, fell into a state of melancholy. He died in 1798. Besides the above work, he wrote several memoirs upon professional subjects. —Eloge de Galvani, par Alibert.

GALVANO (Antony), was born in the East Indies, and made governor of the Moluccа islands, where he distinguished himself by clearing the seas of corsairs. His liberality was so great, that he reduced himself to poverty; and died in a hospital at Lisbon, in 1557.—Moreri.

GAM (David), a native of Wales, and an officer in the army of Henry V. Having returned from reconnoitring the enemy on the evening preceding the battle of Agincourt, he reported, that there were enough of the enemy to be killed, enough to be taken prisoners, and enough to run away. He was killed defending his sovereign, who was exposed to imminent danger, and was knighted by him on the field.—Rapin.

GAMA (Vasco or Vasquez de), an illustrious navigator, was born at Sines, a maritime town of Portugal, of a good family. Emanuel, king of Portugal, sent him in 1497 to endeavour to double the Cape of Good Hope, which he accomplished, and then sailed along the eastern coast of Africa. Having proceeded as far as Calicut, he again doubled the Cape in 1499, and returned to Lisbon. In 1502 he went out with twenty ships, and returned the following year with thirteen rich vessels, which he had captured in the Indian Seas. John III. of Portugal appointed him viceroy of India; on which he went there a third time, and established his government at Cochin, where he died in 1525.—Moreri.

GAMACHES (Philip de), a French priest, and professor of divinity in the university of Paris, where he died in 1625. He opposed the encroachments of the papal power on the rights of the Gallican church, and published two volumes of Commentaries on the Summa of Aquinas.—Moreri.

GAMMACHES (Stephen Simon), a French writer, was born at Meulan, about 1672. He was an ecclesiastic, and member of the academy of sciences, and died in 1756. He wrote Physical Astronomy, 2 vols. 4to.; Literary and Philosophical Dissertations, 8vo; the System of a christian Philosopher, 8vo.; the Elegances of Language reduced to their Principles.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

GAMALIEL, a Jewish doctor, and a disciple of Jesus Christ. He defended the apostles in an assembly held by the Jews, to concert measures for their destruction; and when St. Stephen was stoned to death, Gamaliel caused him to be buried.—Acts.

GAMBARA (Lorenzo), a Latin poet of Italy, who died in 1586, at the age of 90. His principal poem is entitled Columbus, or the Discovery of America.—Moreri. Tiraboschi.

GAMBARA (Veronica), an Italian lady of considerable genius, was born at Brescia, in 1485. She married the lord of Corregio; after whose death she devoted herself to the education of her two sons. She died in 1550. Her poems have been often printed, and a complete edition, with her letters, was published at Brescia, in 1759.—Tiraboschi.

GAMBOLD (John), an English divine, was a native of Haverfordwest in Pembrokeshire. He was educated at Christ church, Oxford, where he took the degree of M. A. About 1739 he was presented to the vicarage of Stanton Harcourt, in Oxfordshire, which he quitted, and joined the sect of the Moravians, of which he became bishop, in 1754. He died at Haverfordwest in 1771. Mr. Gambold published an edition of the Greek Testament; Maxims and Theological Ideas; Sermons; and a religious poem of the dramatic form called Ignatius.—Nichols's Anecdotes of Bowyer.

GANDY (James), an eminent painter, who was brought to Ireland by the duke of Ormond, and died there in 1689. He was a very able portrait painter, and had been the disciple of Vandyck.—Pilkington.

GARAMOND (Claude), a French engraver and letter-founder, was a native of Paris, where he died in 1561. He was the first who banished the gothic or black letter printing, for which he substituted the Roman letter.—Moreri.

GARASSE (Francis), a French jesuit, was born at Angouleme. He was a man of considerable talents, but very scurrilous in his writings. In 1625 he published a book, entituled, A Summary of the principal Truths of the Christian Religion, which was condemned by the Sorbonne. He was also the author of Latin Poems, and some controversial works. Garasse died of the plague, which he caught at Poictiers, while attending a person afflicted with that disorder, in 1631.—Moreri.

GARBIERI (Lorenzo), an historical painter of Bologna, and the disciple of Ludovico Caracci. He died in 1654, aged 64.—Pill.

GARBO (Raphael del), an historical painter of Florence, born in 1476, and died in 1534. His picture of the Resurrection is his master-piece.—Ibid.

GARCILASSO, or Garcilasso de la Vega, an eminent Spanish poet, was descended from a noble family, and born at Toledo in 1503. He accompanied the emperor Charles V. in his military expeditions, and died of a wound, which he received in Provence in 1536. His works were printed at Naples in 1664, in 8vo. There was another of both his names, who was a native of Peru, and wrote a History of Florida, and another of his own country.—Moreri. Monthly Mag.

GARDIE (Pontus de la), a French adventurer, who served first under marshal Brisac. Afterwards he went into the service of the Danes; from whence he passed over to that of the Swedes, and was created a baron. The king of Sweden sent him ambassador to the emperor and the pope, and in 1580 he commanded against the Russians with great success. He was drowned in 1585, in the port of Revel.—Moreri.

GARDINER (Stephen), a celebrated prelate and statesman, was born at Bury St. Edmund's in Suffolk, in 1483. He was the illegitimate son of Dr. Woodville, bishop of Salisbury, and brother to Elizabeth queen of Henry IV. He was educated at Trinity hall, Cambridge; from whence he went into the family of the duke of Norfolk, and afterwards into that of cardinal Wolsey, who made him his secretary. In this situation he acquired the confidence of Henry VIII. to whom he was serviceable in procuring his divorce from queen Catharine: he also defended the king's supremacy in a book, entituled, De vera Obedientia. For these services he was promoted to the see of Winchester. Gardiner drew up articles accusing Henry's last queen, Catharine Parr, of heresy; but the queen avoided the storm, and he fell into disgrace. At the accession of Edward VI. he opposed the reformation, and was committed first to the Fleet, and afterwards to the Tower, where he was a prisoner during the remainder of the reign. He was also deprived of his bishopric; but on the accession of Mary he was restored to his see and appointed chancellor of England. His conduct towards the protestants was cruel and sanguinary. He died in 1555. He was a learned man, but of little principle, crafty and ambitious.—Biog. Brit.

GARDINER (James), a brave and pious colonel in the army of George II. He was a native of Scotland, and in his youth was very gay and licentious, but the accidental perusal of a religious book, entituled, Heaven taken by Storm, made him serious, and from thence he became distinguished for his piety. He was killed by the rebels at the battle of Preston Pans, within sight of his own house, Sept. 21, 1745.—Life by Doddridge.

GARENGEOT (Rene Jacques Croissant de), a French surgeon, was born at Vitri in 1688, and died at Paris in 1759. He was royal lecturer in surgery at Paris, and a fellow of the royal society in London. His works are Traité des Operations de Chirurgie, 2 vols. 8vo.; Nouveau Traité des Instrumens de Chirurgie, 2 vols. 12mo.; Splanchnologie ou l'Anatomie des Visceres, 12mo. &c.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

GARET (John), a French benedictine monk of the congregation of St. Maur, was born at Havre de Grace about 1625, and died in 1694. He edited the works of Cassiodorus, 2 vols. folio, with curious notes.—Moreri.

GARISSOLES (Anthony), a French protestant divine, was born at Montauban in 1587. He became professor of theology at his native place, and was moderator of the synod of Charenton. He died in 1650. He wrote the Way to Salvation; De Christo Mediatore; Explicatio Catecheseos Religionis Christianæ; and some Latin poems.—Bayle.

GARNET (Henry), an English jesuit, memorable for being concerned in the gunpowder plot, was educated at Winchester school. He took the jesuit's habit at Rome in 1575, and returned to England in 1586, as provincial of his order. He was executed for high treason in 1606. He owned the crime for which he suffered, but was placed by the jesuits among their martyrs.

GARNETT (Thomas), an ingenious English physician, was born in Westmoreland, where his father enjoyed a small estate. He received his education at Sedburgh in Yorkshire, after which he went to Edinburgh, and became a pupil of Dr. Brown. On taking his degree he removed to London, and studied surgery. He next settled at Harrogate in Yorkshire, but his practice being small, he went to Liverpool, with a view of emigrating to America. From the scheme he was diverted, at the request of some of his friends, who persuaded him to commence a course of lectures on chemistry and natural philosophy. He repeated this course at Manchester; after which he was chosen Anderson's lecturer in the university of Glasgow. In the formation of the royal institution in London, Dr. Garnett was invited to become one lecturer, with which he complied, and his lectures during two seasons were uncommonly popular. He then resigned that situation, and began to read lectures at his own house in Great Marlborough-street, where he died of a fever in 1802. He wrote an Analysis of the Mineral Waters at Harrogate; a Tour through Scotland, 2 vols. 4to.; a Lecture on Health, 12mo.; several papers and essays on medical and physical subjects; and since his death have appeared his Lectures on Zoonomia, 4to. published for the benefit of his daughters.—Monthly Mag. August 1802.

GARNIER (Robert), a French tragic poet, was born at Ferté Bernard, in the province of Maine, in 1545, and died in 1601. His dramatic works were printed at Lyons in 1 volume 12mo. 1597.—Moreri.

GARNIER (John), a learned jesuit, and professor of rhetoric, was born at Paris in 1612, and died at Boulogne in 1681. He wrote Organi Philosophiæ Rudimenta; Theses de Philosophia Morali; and several other esteemed works.—Moreri.

GARNIER (Julian), a French benedictine monk, was born in 1670, and died in 1723. He edited the works of St. Basil, 3 vols. fol. —Ibid.

GAROFALO (Benvenuto), an Italian painter, was born at Ferrara. He was celebrated chiefly for accurately copying the pictures of Raphael. He died in 1695.—Pilkington.

GARRARD (Mark), a painter, was born at Bruges in Flanders, in 1561. He was principal painter to Elizabeth queen of England, and also to Anne, consort to James I. He died in 1685.—Ibid.

GARRICK (David), a celebrated actor, was descended from a French family, who being protestants, fled to England on the revocation of the edict of Nantes. His father, Peter Garrick, was a captain in the army, and generally resided at Litchfield; but being on a reconnoitring party at Hereford, David was born there in 1716. He received his education partly at the grammar school at Litchfield, and partly under Dr. Johnson, with whom he visited London in 1735. He was for some time under Mr. Colson, an eminent mathematician, and afterwards went into partnership with his brother in the wine trade. This business he soon quitted for the stage. His first attempt was at Ipswich in 1741, under the assumed name of Lyddal; and the applause he met with, induced him to make his appearance at the theatre in Goodman's fields, in the character of Richard III. The other theatres were quickly deserted, and Goodman's fields became the resort of people of fashion, till that theatre was shut up. Garrick then formed an engagement with Fleetwood, the patentee of Drury-lane. In the summer of 1743 he played in Dublin, to such full houses, that the heat of the weather and the crowds occasioned a fever, which was called the Garrick fever. In 1747 he became joint-patentee of Drury-lane theatre; and in 1749 he married Mademoiselle Violetti, an Italian stage dancer. In 1763 he and Mrs. Garrick made a visit to Italy, and at Paris he saw the celebrated Mademoiselle Clairon, whose future eminence he predicted. He returned to England in 1765, and in 1766 he brought out the Clandestine Marriage, a comedy, written in conjunction with the elder Colman. In 1769 he celebrated a fete in honour of Shakspeare, called the Jubilee at Stratford-upon-Avon. It was afterwards made an entertainment at Drury-lane, under the same title, and had a prodigious run. In 1776 he gave up his concern in the theatre for 35,000*l*. The last character he performed was Don Felix in the Wonder. He died in 1779, and was buried in Westminster abbey, where a handsome monument has been erected to his memory by private friendship. Mr. Garrick was hospitable and generous, but vain and fond of flattery. He wrote several dramatic pieces, prologues, epilogues, songs, and epigrams; in the last he excelled.—Life of Garrick by Murphy. Ditto by Davies.

Gabriel (Peter), a French priest in the 17th century, who was a native of Montpellier, of which city he wrote a description. He was also the author of an Account of the Cathedral of Montpellier, 1631, 12mo.; a Chronological View of the Governors of Provence; and Series Præsulum Megalonensium et Montispeliensium, ab Ann. 451 ad Ann. 1652, folio.—Moreri.

Garth (sir Samuel), an English poet and physician, was born in Yorkshire, and educated at Peterhouse, Cambridge, where he took the degree of M. D. in 1691. He greatly contributed to the carrying into execution the establishment of dispensaries, but was opposed by the apothecaries, whom he severely lashed for their venal spirit, in his poem of the Dispensary. In 1697 he spoke the Harveian oration before the college. At the accession of George I. he was knighted, and appointed king's physician in ordinary, and physician-general to the army. He died in 1719. His poems are of the middling class.—Johnson's Poets.

Garzi (Lewis), a painter, the disciple of Andrea Sacchi, was born at Pistoia in Tuscany. At the age of 80 he painted the dome of a church at Rome, by order of Clement XI. which is deemed his finest work. He died in 1721, at the age of 83. —D'Argenville.

Gascoigne (sir William), chief justice of the king's bench in the reign of Henry IV. was born at Gawthrop in Yorkshire, about 1350. He was a man of inflexible integrity, as appeared on two memorable occasions. When Henry required him to pass sentence on archishop Scroope, taken in arms against the king, he refused to obey, as contrary to the laws of the realm; and when the prince of Wales, afterwards Henry V. insulted him on the bench, he committed him to prison till his majesty's pleasure should be known. He died in 1413.—Biog. Brit.

Gascoigne (George), an old English poet, was born in Essex, and died at Stamford in Lincolnshire, in 1577. He served with reputation in the wars in the Low Countries. His poems are not without merit.—Granger.

Gasparini, surnamed Barzizio, from Barzizia, the place of his birth, an Italian writer, was born about 1370, and died in 1431. There have been several editions of his Letters, the best of which is that of 1723.—Tiraboschi.

Gassendi (Peter), a French philosopher, was born in 1592, at Chanstersier, in Provence. He displayed an acute and inquisitive mind at a very early age, and made so rapid a progress in learning as to be appointed teacher of rhetoric at Digne before he was sixteen. About three years afterwards he became professor of philosophy at Aix, when he ventured to oppose the system of Aristotle, and his lectures were published under the title of Exercitationes paradoxicæ adversus Aristotelem. This work procured him the friendship of the celebrated Peiresc, by whose interest he was preferred to a canonry in the cathedral of Digne. In 1645 he was appointed royal professor of mathematics at Paris, where he applied so intensely to his studies, and to astronomical observations, as brought him into a consumption, of which he died in 1655. Gassendi is deservedly ranked among the first mathematicians of his age. He opposed the philosophy of Des Cartes with success, and obtained a number of followers, who were called after his name. His works are the Lives of Tycho Brahe, Copernicus, Purbachius, and Regiomontanus; a Commentary on Diogenes Laertius; astronomical and philosophical pieces; the whole collected into 6 vols. folio, 1658.—Moreri. Martin's Biog. Phil.

Gassion (John de), marshal of France, was born at Pau in 1602. He entered early into the army, and served under the duke de Rohan, on the side of the protestants. He afterwards joined Gustavus of Sweden, and became captain of his body guard. He rendered eminent services to that prince in Germany, and on his death returned to France, where he engaged under the marshal de la Force. He had a considerable share in the victory at Rocroy, and was wounded at the siege of Thionville, for which he received the marshal's staff in 1643. He next served in Flanders, and was mortally wounded at the siege of Lens in 1647.—Moreri.

Gast (John), a divine and historian, was born in Dublin of French parents, in 1715. He received his education at Trinity college in his native city, after which he entered into orders, and became curate of the parish of St. John. He also kept a school. In 1753 he published The Rudiments of Grecian History, for which the university of Dublin conferred on him the degree of D.D. without expence. In 1761 the author was presented to the living of Arklow, and three years afterwards to the archdeaconry of Glandelogh, and the parish of Newcastle. In 1775 he exchanged Arklow for the parish of St. Nicholas without, Dublin. He died in 1788. Besides his History of Greece, he wrote, "A Letter from a Clergyman of the Established Church of Ireland to those of his Parishioners who are of the Popish Communion." —Europ. Mag. vol. XXVI.

GASTALDI (John Baptist), physician to the king of France, was born at Sisteron in 1674, and died at Avignon in 1747. He wrote, 1. Institutiones Medicinæ Physico-Anatomicæ, 12mo.; 2. Some Medical Tracts on curious and interesting subjects.—Ibid.

GASTAUD (Francis), a French ecclesiastic, a native of Aix, in Provence, was a father of the oratory, a preacher at Paris, and lastly a counsellor in his native city. He died in 1732 at Viviers, to which place he was banished, by means of the jesuits, against whom he had written. His corpse was refused the rites of Christian interment. He published a Collection of Homilies, Orations, &c.—Moreri.

GASTON DE FOIX, duke of Nemours, son of John de Foix, count d'Etampes, and of Mary of Orleans, sister of Louis XII. signalized himself at the age of twenty-three, in his uncle's wars in Italy. He beat an army of Swiss, and gained the battle of Ravenna; soon after which he was killed, at the age of 24, in 1512.—Moreri.

GASTON of France (John Baptista), duke of Orleans, son of Henry IV. and brother of Louis XIII. was born in 1608. He is chiefly known by his intrigues against cardinal Richelieu, and for bringing almost all his abettors to the scaffold. He died in 1660.—Ibid.

GASTRELL (Francis), an English bishop, was born about 1662 in Northamptonshire. He was educated at Westminster school, and at Christ church, Oxford. In 1697 he preached the Boyle's lecture, which he published as one discourse, to which he afterwards added another, on the Necessity of the Christian Revelation. In 1702 he was presented to a canonry of Christ church, at which time he published Considerations concerning the Trinity. In 1707 he printed his excellent scriptural manual, entitled, Christian Institutes. In 1714 he was promoted to the bishopric of Chester, and the same year answered Dr. Clarke's book on the Trinity. The bishop opposed the decrees granted by the archbishop of Canterbury, for which he received the thanks of the university of Oxford. He died in 1725.—Biog. Brit.

GATAKER (Thomas), an English divine, was born in 1574 at London, and educated at St. John's college, Cambridge. He became preacher at Lincoln's inn, and in 1611 obtained the rectory of Rotherhithe in Surrey. In 1619 he published a curious Treatise on the Nature and Use of Lots, which occasioned considerable controversy. In 1642 he was chosen one of the famous assembly of Westminster, though he did not approve of the presbyterian plan. He zealousy opposed the murder of Charles I. and died in 1654. Besides the above he wrote Opera Critica, folio; and other eminent works, chiefly of biblical criticism. His son Charles was a considerable writer and divine. He died in 1680.—Biog. Brit.

GATIMOZIN, the last of the kings of Mexico, was driven from his throne in 1523, by Cortes. He was put to the fiery ordeal by the Spaniards, to make him discover his treasures; and was hanged three years after in his own capital.—Townsend's Hist. of the Conquest of Mexico.

GAVANTI (Bartholomew), an Italian monk, of the order of Barnabites, was born in the Milanese, about 1568, and died at Milan in 1638. He wrote Thesaurus Sacrorum Rituum, on the Ceremonies, &c. of the Roman Church, 5 vols. 4to. with plates; also Manuale Episcoporum; and on conducting of Diocesan Synods.—Moreri.

GAUBIL (Anthony), a French missionary in China, was born at Caillac in 1708, and died in 1759. He was interpreter at the court of Pekin; and published a History of Gengis Khan, and a translation of the Chou Kin.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

GAUBIUS (Jerome-David), a celebrated physician, was born at Heidelberg in 1705. After studying medicine under his uncle, a physician at Amsterdam, he went to Handerwyck, and from thence to Leyden, where he contracted an intimate friendship with Boerhaave. In 1725 he took his doctor's degree, and published his Thesis on the Solids. He succeeded Boerhaave, as lecturer in botany and chemistry, in 1731, and in 1734 he obtained the medical professorship. His Treatise on the Method of Prescribing, or of Writing Receipts, which appeared in 1738, contains the best rules on that important subject. But his greatest work is his Principles of Nosology. He next published Institutiones Pathologiæ Medicinalis, 1758, 4to. Besides these publications, he was the author of Adversaria Varia Argumenti, &c. and the editor of Cramer's Elementa Artis Docimasticæ; Albinus de Presagienda Vita et Morte, &c. He died in 1780.—Hist. de la Soc. Royale de Medicine à Paris, 1782.

GAUD (Henry), a painter and engraver of Utrecht, who engraved seven pieces of singular beauty, from pictures by Elshaimer. He died in 1639.—Pilkington.

GAUDEN (John), an English bishop, was born in 1605, at Mayland in Essex. He received his education first at Bury St. Edmund's, and afterwards at St. John's college, Cambridge. He next entered of Wadham college, Oxford, where he took his degree of D.D. At the beginning of the civil wars he sided with the parliament, and had a piece of plate given him for a sermon preached before the house of commons. In 1641 he obtained the deanry of Bocking, and in 1643 was nominated one of the assembly of divines at Westminster, but did not sit among them. He wrote against the Covenant, but complied with it to keep his preferment. In 1648 he published a tract against the bringing of the king to trial. He had also committed to his care the collating and publishing the king's meditations, to which he gave the name of Εικων Βασιλικη, or the Portraiture of his Sacred Majesty in his Solitude and Sufferings. This book had a wonderful effect upon the public mind, and led Gauden, after the restoration, to assume the merit of being the author, though his own style is the very opposite to that of the Εικων. In 1659 he became preacher at the Temple, and when Charles II. was restored he was preferred to the see of Exeter, and in 1622 to that of Worcester, where he died soon after. He wrote several books on the hierarchy of the church of England, and Sermons.—Biog. Brit.

GAUDENTIO, an historical painter of Milan, was born about 1480. He painted in fresco and oil a number of pictures for the churches in his native city.—Pilkington.

GAUDENTIUS (St.), bishop of Brescia in the 5th century, to which he was appointed by St. Ambrose and other prelates much against his own wishes. He died about 427. He wrote the life of his predecessor Philaster; fifteen sermons, and letters, published together at Brescia in 1738, fol. There was a bishop of the Donatists of the same name and age, who wrote two apologies for his sect.—Cave. Dupin.

GAUDENZIO (Paganin), a learned writer, was born in the Valteline in 1596, and educated at Rome, where he became Greek professor, and afterwards professor of the belles lettres at Pisa. He died in 1648. His principal works are: 1. Declamationes; 2. Chartæ Palantes; 3. Obstetrix Litteraria; 4. Academicum instar; 5. De Philosophiæ apud Romanos initio et Progressu; all in quarto.

GAVESTON (Peter), a favourite of Edward II. was the son of a gentleman of Gascony, who had rendered considerable services to Edward I. He was a worthless character, and after a great abuse of his power, and changes in his fortune, he was beheaded in 1312.—Rapin.

GAULI (John Baptist), a painter, was born at Genoa in 1639, and died at Rome in 1709. He was eminent for historical painting and portraits.—Pilkington.

GAULMIN (Gilbert), a French writer, was born at Moulins in 1585. He was a counsellor, and a considerable orator and critic. He wrote Latin poems and commentaries of little merit. Gaulmin died in 1665.—Moreri.

GAUPP (John), a German protestant divine and mathematician, was born at Lindau in Suabia in 1667. He was educated at Jena, and in 1693 became a pastor at his native place, where he died in 1738. He wrote Gnomonica Mechanica Universalis, 4to.; several astronomical and chronological tracts; and sermons.—Moreri.

GAURICO (Luca), an Italian astronomer and astrologer, was born in 1475 in the kingdom of Naples. He became professor of astronomy at Ferrara, but was severely handled by John Bentivoglio for predicting that he would lose the sovereignty of Bologna. He then went to Venice, and afterwards to Rome. Pope Paul, who had a great faith in astrology, gave him the bishopric of Civita in Naples, which he resigned in 1550, and retired to Rome, where he died in 1558. His works were printed at Basil in 1575, in 3 vols. folio. His brother Pomponio was a man of letters and a professor in the university of Naples. He wrote Latin Poems; Treatises on Architecture and Physiognomy.—Moreri. Tiraboschi.

GAUTHIER or GAULTIER (John Baptist), a French priest, was born at Louvain in the diocese of Evreux in 1685. He studied at Paris, but was refused his degrees on account of his attachment to the Jansenist doctrines. Langle, bishop of Boulogne, gave him a canonry in his cathedral, with other preferment. He died in 1755. He wrote against Pope's Essay on Man; Letters against Irreligion; the Life of the Bishop of Senez; History of the Parliament of Paris; Letters against the Jesuits, 3 vols. 12mo.; &c.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

GAY (John), an English poet, was born at or near Barnstaple in Devonshire in 1688, and educated at the grammar school in that town under Mr. Luck, a man of wit and a poet. He was afterwards apprenticed to a silk-mercer in London, which situation he did not like, and in a few years bought the remainder of his time. His first poem, entitled Rural Sports, printed in 1711, and dedicated to Mr. Pope, gained him the friendship of that poet, which lasted till death. The year following he was appointed secretary to the duchess of Monmouth: at this time he printed his mock heroic, entitled, Trivia, or the Art of walking the Streets of London, in the composition of which he was assisted by Swift. In 1714 appeared his Shepherd's Week, a series of pastorals, intended to ridicule Phillips, but they possess more merit as a genuine picture of rustic life than as a satire. The same year he became secretary to the earl of Clarendon on his embassy to Hanover. On the death of queen Anne he returned to England, but his expectations of preferment from the new court were disappointed. In 1720 he published his Poems, by subscription, which produced him one thousand pounds; but embarking it in the famous South-Sea bubble, he lost the whole and was reduced to such a state of despondency as was nearly fatal. He next produced the tragedy of the Captive, which met with a good reception, and occasioned his being employed by the princess of Wales to write his Fables for the young duke of Cumberland. In 1727 appeared on the stage his Beggar's Opera, which had a success infinitely beyond what it deserved both in a dramatic and moral point of view. Though it was a favourite with the town, it was not so at court; and when he produced his Sequel to it, under the title of "Polly," it was prohibited by the lord chamberlain. Gay, however, cleared more by printing it than he would have done by its performance. The duke and duchess of Queensbury took him into their house, where he died in 1732. His remains were interred in Westminster-abbey, where a monument was erected to his memory by his worthy patrons, with an epitaph written by Pope. Besides the works already mentioned, he wrote some lesser dramatic pieces, ballads, and poems, making 2 vols. 12mo.—Johnson's Poets.

Gaza (Theodore), a learned Greek, was born at Thessalonica, and when that place was taken by the Turks in 1430 he escaped to Italy, where he studied the Latin language with so much assiduity that he became an elegant writer and speaker of it. He was for several years a professor at Ferrara, and at length rector of that university. From thence he went to Rome under the patronage of pope Nicholas V. and cardinal Bessarion. He died in Calabria in 1478. He wrote a Greek grammar printed by Aldus, 1495; a Treatise on the Grecian Months. He also translated Aristotle on Animals, Hippocrates's Aphorisms, and other works into Latin; and some of Cicero's into Greek.—Moreri. Tiraboschi.

Gazali, or Abou Hamed Mohammed Zein Eddin al Thousi, a famous mussulman doctor, was born in Khorassan, A.D. 1058, and died there about 1112. His famous work is entitled Ahia ôloum Eddin, or the Several Classes of Sciences which concern religion. There were two others of this name, one of whom wrote on the mercy of God.—D'Herbelot.

Gazet (William), a Flemish ecclesiastic, was born at Arras in 1554, and died in 1612. He wrote a History of the Archbishops of Cambray; Ecclesiastical History of the Low Countries, and other works.—Moreri.

Gazzoli (Benozzo), an Italian painter, was born at Florence in 1400, and died in 1478. He painted pictures from the sacred history, also landscapes and portraits.—Pilkington.

Geber (John), an Arabian physician and astronomer in the 9th century. He wrote a Commentary on the Almagest of Ptolemy, and other works chiefly on alchemy. Dr. Johnson supposes that the word gibberish is derived from the cant of Geber and his followers.—Moreri.

Ged (William), a goldsmith of Edinburgh, who in 1725 endeavoured to introduce a method of printing with blocks and plates, containing letters for a whole page or sheet. He entered into an engagement with the university of Cambridge, to print Bibles and Common-prayer Books in this manner, but the project failed. On his return to Scotland, however, he printed an edition of Sallust, with his plates. The plan has since been successfully carried on by Didot, at Paris, and is lately adopted in London under the name of stereotype. Ged died in 1749.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Gedalia, a famous rabbi, who died in 1448. He wrote an account of a chain of traditions from Adam to A.D. 761, and on the creation of the world.—Moreri.

Geddes (James), an ingenious Scotch writer, was born in the county of Tweeddale in 1710, and educated at Edinburgh, after which he entered on the study of the law, and was admitted an advocate, but died of a decline when he was between 30 and 40 years of age. In 1748 was published a posthumous piece of his entituled, "An Essay on the Composition and Manner of Writing of the Ancients, particularly Plato," 8vo.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Geddes (Michael), an eminent English divine of the 17th century. He was chaplain several years to the factory at Lisbon, where he was apprehended by the inquisition in 1686, and interdicted from officiating in his ministerial capacity, on which he returned to England. He was created doctor of laws by the university of Oxford, and made chancellor of Salisbury. He died about 1714. He wrote the History of the Church of Malabar; the Church History of Ethiopia; Miscellaneous Tracts against Popery, 3 vols. 8vo. &c.—Burnet's Hist. Reform.

Geddes (Alexander), a Roman catholic priest, was born in Ruthven, in the county of Bamff, in 1737. He was educated at an obscure school in the Highlands, and in 1758 removed to the Scottish college at Paris. In 1764 he returned to Scotland, and officiated to a congregation in the county of Angus, but the year following he became chaplain in the family of the earl of Traquair. In 1769 he undertook the charge of a congregation at Auchinhalrig, in Bamffshire, where he commenced farmer, but with no success. In 1779 he quitted his pastoral charge, and the year following obtained the degree of doctor of laws from the university of Aberdeen. About this time he removed to London, where he served some time in the imperial ambassador's chapel, and in that in Duke-street, Lincoln's-Inn-fields. In 1782 he relinquished the clerical vocation, and began to devote himself to a translation of the Bible into English. In 1786 he published his prospectus of that work in 4to. and the year following an Appendix to it in a letter to bishop Lowth. The same year he published an answer to Dr. Priestley on the Divinity of Christ. In 1788 he published proposals for a New Translation of the Bible; and in 1790 a general Answer to the Queries, Counsels, and Criticisms communicated to him since the publication of his proposals. In this undertaking he was liberally supported by lord Petre. The first volume of it appeared in 1792, comprising the Pentateuch and the Book of Joshua; but the translator had taken such unwarrantable liberties with the text, and treated many important subjects with so much indecency, that all true friends of religion were disgusted. Those of his own communion declared their disapprobation of it, and some of the Roman catholic bishops suspended him from his ecclesiastical functions. To these he replied in pamphlets written with coarseness and illiberality. In 1797 appeared the second volume of his version. In 1800 he published Critical Remarks, in vindication of his work. About this time appeared his Apology for the Roman catholics of Great Britain. He died in 1802. Dr. Geddes was a man of learning, but vain and irritable.—Life of Geddes by Good.

Gedoyn (Nicholas), a French writer, was born at Orleans in 1667, and died in 1744. He was a jesuit, but renounced the society and became a man of the world. He was the intimate friend of the celebrated Ninon de l'Enclos, but his mode of life did not hinder his preferment. He became a member of the French academy and of that of belles-lettres, and obtained the abbacy of Notre Dame de Beaugency. His works were printed in 1745. He translated Quintilian and Pausanias into French.—Moreri.

Geer (Charles de), a celebrated naturalist, was born in Sweden of a noble Dutch family in 1720. He studied at Utrecht and Upsal, and at the latter place had Linnæus for his master. He possessed a share in the iron-works at Dannemora, which mines he improved by the application of new machinery. He also invented an apparatus for drying corn by the heat of the smelting houses. By these means he gained great wealth, which he applied to the noblest purposes in feeding the poor, repairing churches, and establishing schools. He was appointed marshal of the court, knight of the Polar star; and created a baron. He died in 1778. He wrote Memoires pour servir à l'Histoire des Insectes, 7 vols. 4to; also, an Oration on the Procreation of Insects, and Papers in the Transactions of the academies of Stockholm and Upsal. —Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Geinoz (Francis), a learned Swiss abbé, and member of the academy of belles-lettres, died in 1752. He wrote many valuable dissertations on subjects of antiquity.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Gejer (Martin), a German protestant divine, was born at Leipsic in 1614. He became professor of Hebrew, and member of the ecclesiastical council to the elector of Saxony. He died in 1681. He wrote Commentaries on the Old Testament; and a Treatise on the Mourning of the Hebrews; in 2 vols. folio.—Moreri.

Gelasius I. pope, was elevated to the chair in 492. He had a contest with the patriarch of Constantinople, and by his arrogance prevented a union between the two churches. He condemned the practice of communicating only in one kind, though that practice became afterwards a standing rule in the Roman church as far as relates to the laity. Several of his works are extant. He died in 496.—Gelasius II. a native of Campania, was elected pope in 1118. Cencio, marquis di Frangipani, consul of Rome, who was in the interest of the emperor Henry V. drove him from Rome, and another pope was elected. Gelasius, after some attempts to regain the pontificate, retired to France, where he died in 1119.—Platina. Moreri. Bower.

Geldenhaur (Gerard), a divine and historian, was born at Nimeguen in 1482. Being sent to Wittemberg by Maximilian of Burgundy, he embraced lutheranism, which gave such offence to his friend Erasmus, that he wrote against him. He afterwards became professor of history and theology at Marpurg, where he died in 1542. He wrote Historia Batavica; Historiæ suæ Ætatis; Germanicorum Histor. illustratio; De viris illustribus inferioris Germaniæ, &c. —Moreri. Bayle.

Gelder (Arnold de), a Dutch painter, was born at Dort in 1645, and died in 1727. He was a disciple of Rembrandt, whose manner he imitated.—Pilkington.

Geldorp (Gauldorp), a painter, was born at Louvain in 1553, and died in 1618. He excelled in portraits and historical subjects. —Ibid.

Gellert (Christian Furchtegott), a German divine and poet, was born at Haynichen, a village in Misnia, in 1715, and died in 1769. He supported himself many years as tutor in private families; but became afterwards professor of philosophy at Leipsic. He is best known by his Fables and Tales, which are very pleasing. His works have been collected in 10 vols. 8vo.—Gen. Biog.

Gelli (John Baptist), an Italian writer, was born in 1498 at Florence, where he died in 1563. His occupation was that of a shoemaker, which he continued to follow till his death, though he was a member of the academy at Florence, and admitted to the friendship of all the men of genius in that city. He translated from the Greek the Hecuba of Euripides, and was the author of two comedies called La

Sporta, and L'Errore. His dialogues are in great esteem, and have been translated into several languages.—Moreri. Tiraboschi.

Gellibrand (Henry), an English mathematician, was born in London in 1597. He took his degrees in arts in Trinity college, Oxford, and was for some time a curate in Kent, but his passion for the mathematics led him to quit that situation and return to Oxford. He afterwards became professor of astronomy at Gresham college, London, where he died in 1636. He completed and published his friend Brigg's Trigonometria Britannica. Mr. Gellibrand was also the author of a tract concerning the longitude, appended to captain James's Voyage for the Discovery of the North-west Passage; a Discourse on the Variation of the Magnetic Needle; an Institution Trigonometrical, explaining the Doctrine of Plane and Spherical Triangles, 8vo.; an Epitome of Navigation, &c.—Ward's Lives of Gresham Professors. Martin's Biog. Phil.

Gelon, king or tyrant of Syracuse, who usurped the supreme authority in that city in the year 484 B. C. He possessed great qualities, and died extremely regretted by the Syracusans, after a reign of seven years. —Univ. Hist.

Gemelli Carreri (Francis), an Italian writer, and an advocate of Naples, who is said to have travelled round the world from 1693 to 1698, but some assert, that the account he has given of his travels was written by his fireside. Let this be as it may, the work is extremely interesting.—Tiraboschi.

Gemignano (Vincentio di St.), an Italian painter, was born in Tuscany in 1490, and died in 1530. He was the disciple and imitator of Raphael. There was another of the same name, who died in 1681. He painted several fine pictures for the churches at Rome.—Pilkington.

Geminiani (Francis), a celebrated musician, was born at Lucca about 1680. In 1714 he came to England, and was patronized by George I. to whom he dedicated his solos for the violin, which were followed by his concertos. In 1742 he published his Guida Armonica, or, a Sure Guide to Harmony and Modulation. His other works are, The Art of Playing on the Violin; Harpsichord Pieces, &c. He died at Dublin in 1762.—Burney's Hist. of Music. Hawkins.

Gemistus (George), surnamed Plethon, a learned Greek, was born at Constantinople in 1390. He was a zealous Platonist, and defended the Greek church against the Latins. In 1438 he was sent to the council at Florence assembled to effect a union between the two churches, where he displayed considerable eloquence. He returned to Greece, and died at the age of 100. He wrote De Gestis Græcorum post pugnam ad Mantineam, printed by Aldus, 1503, fol.; De Virtutibus Libellus; De Rebus Peloponnesiasis constituendis Orationes duas; De Platonicæ et Aristotelicæ philosophiæ differentia, &c.—Fabr. Bib. Grac. Moreri.

Gemma (Reinier), commonly called Frisius, a Dutch physician and mathematician, was born at Doerckum, in Friesland, in 1508. He became medical professor at Louvain, where he died in 1555. He wrote Methodus Arithmeticæ; De Usu Annuli Astronomici; De locorum describendorum Ratione, deque distantiis eorum inveniendis; Demonstrationes Geometricæ de Usu Radii Astronomici; De Astrolabio Catholico liber, &c. His son Cornelius was a good Latin poet, born at Louvain in 1535, and died in 1579. He wrote De Prodigiosa Specie Naturaque Cometæ, &c.—Moreri.

Gendre (Louis le), a French historian, was born at Rouen in 1659, and died in 1733. His principal works are, a History of France, 8 vols. fol.; the Life of M. de Harlai; an Essay on the Reign of Louis the Great; and the Life of Cardinal d'Amboise.—Ibid.

Gendre (Gilbert Charles le), marquis of St. Aubin, was counsellor of the parliament of Paris, and master of the requests. He died in 1746, at the age of 59. His principal work is, a Treatise on Opinion, 6 vols. 12mo. He also wrote Antiquités de la Maison de France, 4to.—Ibid.

Gendre (Nicolas le), an eminent French sculptor, who died at Paris in 1670, at the age of 52.—Ibid.

Genebrard (Gilbert), a French bishop, was born at Riom, in Auvergne, and entered among the benedictines. In 1563 he became a regius professor of Hebrew in the college of Navarre, at Paris. Being disappointed of a bishopric, he joined the party of the league. In 1693 he obtained the archbishopric of Aix. In the reign of Henry IV. he published a book on the election of bishops, which was burnt by the hangman. He died in 1597. He wrote a Sacred Chronology, and other works.—Moreri.

Genesius (Josephus), a Byzantine historian, who flourished about 940. He wrote a History of Constantinople, printed at Venice, in 1733, in Greek and Latin.—Ibid.

Genest (Charles Claude), a French poet, was born at Paris in 1636, and died in 1719. He wrote a Poem on the Existence of God and the Immortality of the Soul; Principes de Philosophie; a tragedy called Penelope, &c.—Ibid.

Genet (Francis), bishop of Vaison, was born at Avignon in 1640, and died in 1702. He wrote Morale de Grenoble, 6 vols. 12mo. —Ibid.

Genga (Jerome), an Italian painter, and architect, was born at Urbino in 1476, and died in 1551. His son Bartholomew was also celebrated for his skill in architecture. He superintended the fortifications at Malta, where he died in 1558.—Pilkington.

Gennadius, patriarch of Constantinople, succeeded Anatolius in 458. He was an eloquent writer; but none of his works are extant, except an Epistle against Simony, and a piece against the Anathemas of Cyril. He died in 471. There was another patriarch of the same name, who was at the council of Florence in 1438, and greatly opposed a union between the eastern and western churches. In 1453 he was elected patriarch, which dignity he resigned about five years afterwards, and retired to a monastery, where he died in 1460. He wrote an explanation of the christian faith in Greek, Latin, and Turkish, and other works.—Ibid.

Gennadius, the author of a work intituled, De Dogmatibus Ecclesiasticis, which has been improperly attributed to St. Augustin, was a priest of Marseilles, and died about 400. There is another work of his extant, intituled, De illustribus Ecclesiæ Scriptoribus.—Ibid.

Gennari (Benedetto), an historical and portrait painter of Bologna, born in 1633, and died in 1715. He resided some time at London, where he was greatly encouraged by Charles II. and the principal nobility. His son Cæsar Gennari was fine landscape painter. He died in 1688.—Pilkington.

Gennaro (Joseph Aurelius), an eminent civilian, who was born at Naples in 1701. After practising at the bar he became chief magistrate in his native city. His works are all on legal subjects, and are remarkable for the purity of style, and depth of erudition. The principal is entitled, Respublica Jurisconsultorum, which teaches the dry and intricate system of civil law in the form of a novel. He died in 1762.

Genoels (Abraham), a painter of Antwerp, was born in 1640. He excelled in landscape and portrait.—Ibid.

Genovesi (Anthony), an Italian philosopher, was born at Castiglione in 1712. He read lectures in philosophy at Naples with great reputation for some time; but at length he was attacked by numerous enemies for publishing his metaphysics, in which he recommended the works of Galileo, Grotius, and Newton. The king of Naples, however, protected him, and made him professor of ethics. But unfortunately becoming candidate for the chair of theology, the ecclesiastics brought charges of heresy against him, and he had nearly lost the king's favour, when he prudently relinquished that pursuit. By his means a professorship of political philosophy was established in that university, which he discharged with credit. He died in 1769. Besides the above work, he wrote in Italian, Philosophical Meditations on Religion and Morality; a System of Logic; Humourous Letters; and Italian Morality, which last is accounted his principal performance. —Gen. Biog.

Genseric, king of the Vandals in Spain, was the natural son of Godisicles, whom he succeeded in 428. In the commencement of his reign he gained a great victory over Hermanric, king of the Suevi. He afterwards made himself master of Africa, where he practised the greatest cruelties to establish arianism. Being invited by the empress Eudoxia to revenge the death of her husband Valentinian III. who had been murdered by Maximus, Genseric sailed to Italy, entered Rome in 435, and gave up the city to pillage. He was, from this time, the terror of the countries bordering on the Mediterranean, which he laid waste every year with his fleets. He died in 477.—Univ. Hist.

Gentili (Alberico), an Italian lawyer, was born in Ancona in 1550. His father, who was a physician, embraced the reformed religion, and came to England, where Alberico became professor of law at Oxford, and died in 1608. He wrote six dialogues on the Interpreters of Law; and a Treatise de Jure Belli, which Grotius has praised; and other works. His brother, Scipio, became professor of civil law at Altdorf, where he died in 1616. He wrote De Jure publico Populi Romani; De Conjurationibus; Latin poems, &c.—Bayle. Tiraboschi.

Gentilis (de Foligno), or de Gentilibus, a physician, was author of Commentaries on Avicenna, folio; and of the following works: De Legationibus; De Juris interpretibus; and De Advocatione Hispanica. He died at Foligno in 1348.—Moreri.

Gentilis (John Valentine), a relation of the preceding, was born in Calabria. Having embraced the protestant doctrines, he quitted Italy and went to Geneva, where he embraced arianism, but, to save himself from sharing the fate of Servetus, he subscribed to the orthodox confession of faith. After visiting several places, and suffering imprisonment repeatedly on account of his opinions, he was beheaded at Berne, about 1567.—Bayle.

Gentileschi (Horatio), an Italian painter, was born at Pisa in 1563. He painted the cielings in Greenwich hospital, and died, in this country, at the age of 84. His daughter was also a good artist. She lived chiefly at Naples, in great splendour; and was famous for her amours.—Walpole. Pilkington.

Gentillet (Valentine), a French writer of the 16th century, was born in Dauphiné. He became syndic of the republic at Geneva, and in 1578 published an Apology for the Protestants, which went through several editions. He wrote also Anti-Machiavel, and Anti-Socinus, 1612.—Bayle.

Geoffrey of Monmouth, a British historian, who flourished about 1150. He was first, archdeacon of Monmouth, and next, bishop of St. Asaph, which see he resigned, and retired to the monastery of Abingdon, of which he was abbot. His principal work is his Chronicon sive Historia Britonum, which, however, is full of legendary tales respecting the early monarchs of Britain.—Pits. Bayle. Moreri.

GROFFROY (Stephen Francis), an eminent physician and chemist, was born at Paris in 1672. He was professor of chemistry in the king's garden, and of medicine in the royal college. His principal work is a History of the Materia Medica, 3 vols. 8vo. He died in 1731.—Eloge par Fontenelle.

GEORGE (Saint), a martyr in the reign of Diocletian, was greatly celebrated both among the christians and mahometans; but there is little certain known of him.—Moreri.

GEORGE LEWIS I. king of Great Britain, was the son of Ernest Augustus, elector of Hanover, by Sophia, daughter of Frederic, elector Palatine, and the grand-daughter of James I. of England. He was born in 1660, created duke of Cambridge in 1706, and succeeded queen Anne in 1714. The next year a rebellion broke out in Scotland in favour of the pretender, which was soon suppressed. In his reign parliaments were made septennial, and the order of the Bath revived. In 1720 happened the failure of the famous South-sea scheme, by which thousands of families were ruined. He died suddenly, June 11, 1727, at Osnaburgh. He married his cousin Sophia Dorothea, daughter of the duke of Zell, which marriage proved very unhappy.—Smollet.

GEORGE AUGUSTUS II. was born in 1683. He married, in 1705, princess Caroline, of Brandenburg Anspach, who died in 1737. In 1714 he came to England with his father, whom he succeeded in 1727. In 1739 admiral Vernon was sent with a squadron to the West Indies, where he demolished Porto Bello, but failed in his attempt on Carthagena. In 1743 the king headed his army on the continent, and gained the battle of Dettingen. In 1745 the pretender's eldest son landed in the Highlands, and was joined by several clans. After obtaining various successes, the rebels were defeated by the duke of Cumberland at Culloden in 1746. In 1748 peace was concluded at Aix-la-Chapelle. In 1751 died, universally lamented, Frederic prince of Wales, between whom and his father there never was any cordiality. In 1755 war broke out between England and France, which was at first very unpromising; Braddock was defeated and killed in North America, and Minorca was taken in the Mediterranean, for which admiral Byng, who was sent to relieve it, was shot. About this time Mr. Pitt became prime minister, and public affairs began to wear a new face. In 1758 a treaty was entered into between England and Prussia. The French power was nearly destroyed in the East Indies. In America Louisburg was taken, and the capture of Quebec was followed by the conquest of Canada. The island of Guadaloupe and the settlement of Senegal were taken by the English. Admiral Hawke defeated the French fleet under Conflans, and the British flag waved triumphant in every part of the world. Amid this blaze of glory George II. died suddenly, by the bursting of the right ventricle of the heart, October 25, 1760.—Smollett.

GEORGE the Cappadocian, bishop of Alexandria on the expulsion of St. Athanasius. He was a native of Epiphania in Cilicia, and was, for some time, a purveyor in the army, but his frauds were so great that he was obliged to fly to avoid justice. He then went to Alexandria, where he displayed great zeal for arianism, and in 356 was elected bishop by the prevailing party. His conduct was so cruel and oppressive that the people put him to death in 362.—Moreri.

GEORGE, or AMIRA, a learned Maronite in the seventeenth century, who published at Rome a Syriac and Chaldee grammar in 1596. He became patriarch of the Maronites, and died about 1641.—Ibid.

GEORGE of Trebisond, (or Trapezuntius,) a learned man of the fifteenth century, was a native of Crete. He went to Italy about 1420, and became professor of Greek at Vicenza; after which he removed to Rome, but giving offence to the pope, he was banished in 1452. He then went to Naples; but in 1459 he was at Venice. He was afterwards recalled to Rome, but again fell under the papal displeasure, and was imprisoned in the castle of St. Angelo. He died about 1480. He translated Eusebius's Evangelical Preparations into Latin; some of the works of Aristotle, Plato de Legibus, Ptolomy's Almagest, &c. He also wrote De Arte Rhetorica; Reflections on some of Cicero's Orations and Letters.—Tiraboschi.

GERARD (Thom or Tung), founder, and first grand-master of the order of St. John of Jerusalem, was a native of Martigues, an island on the coast of Provence. In 1100 he assumed a religious habit, and, with many others, engaged in a vow to relieve all distressed Christians in Palestine. This order was confirmed by Anastasius IV. in 1154. Gerard died in 1120.—Moreri.

GERARD (Balthazar), the assassin of William I. prince of Orange, was born at Villefans in Franche-Compté. He entertained this design six years, and at last shot the prince with a pistol at Delft. He declared he committed the murder "to expiate his sins," the prince being at the head of the protestants. He was executed in 1584.—Ibid.

GERARD (John), a learned lutheran divine, was born at Quedlinburg in 1582. He was theological professor at Jena many years, and died in 1637. He wrote Commentaries on the Scriptures, and a Harmony of the Gospels, folio.—Moreri.

GERARD (John), a learned protestant divine, was born at Jena in 1621. He became professor of divinity and rector of the university of Jena, and died there in 1668. He wrote Harmonica Linguarum Orientalium; Disputationum Theologicarum Fasciculus; De Sepultura Mosis; De Ecclesiæ Copticæ Ortu, &c. His son, John Ernest Gerard, was professor of divinity at Giessen, and died in 1707. He was the author of some learned works.—Moreri.

Gerard (Alexander), a Scotch divine, was born at Garioch in the county of Aberdeen in 1728. He was educated at Aberdeen and at Edinburgh, and in 1750 was chosen professor of philosophy in the Marischal college at the former place. In 1759 he was ordained, and the following year chosen professor of divinity, about which time he was admitted to his doctor's degree. In 1771 he was appointed theological professor in King's college. He died in 1795. His works are, an Essay on Taste, 8vo.: Dissertations on the Genius and Evidences of Christianity, 8vo.; an Essay on Genius, 8vo.; 2 vols. of Sermons; and a Discourse on Pastoral Care.—Supp. to Ency. Brit.

Gerard (John), an English botanist, was born at Nantwich in Cheshire, in 1545. He was bred a surgeon, and settled in London, where he had lord Burleigh for a patron, and was superintendant of his lordship's garden. He had also a large physic garden of his own. He died in 1607. He was the author of Catalogus Arborum, Fruticum, et Plantarum, tam indigenarum quam exoticarum, in horto Joh. Gerardi, 4to. 1591. But his great work is the "Herbal, or General History of Plants," folio, published first in 1597. The best edition is that by Johnson in 1633.—Pulteney's Sketches on Botany.

Gerardi (Christofaro), an Italian painter, was born at Florence in 1500, and died in 1556. He painted historical subjects, landscapes, and grotesque.—Pilkington.

Gerards (Mark), a painter of Brüges, was born in 1561. About 1580 he came to England, and was appointed painter to queen Elizabeth. He was eminent in history, portraits, and landscapes; and died in 1635.—Ibid.

Gerbais (John), a French divine, was born about 1629. He became doctor of the Sorbonne, and professor of eloquence in the royal college. He distinguished himself so much by his writings in behalf of the liberties of the Gallican church, as to offend the pope. He died in 1699.—Moreri.

Gerbel (Nicholas), a learned German, who was professor of law at Strasburg, where he died in 1560. He wrote Isagoge in Tabulum Græciæ Nicholai Sophiani; Vita Joannis Cuspiniani, &c.—Freheri Theatr.

Gerberon (Gabriel), a zealous jansenist, was born in 1628. He was at first of the oratory, and afterwards a benedictine of St. Maur. He taught theology at that place, till Louis XIV. having ordered him to be arrested, he fled to Holland. He died in the abbey of St. Dennis, in 1711. He wrote several works, the principal of which is, the History of Jansenism, 3 vols. 12mo.—Moreri.

Gerbier (sir Balthazar), a painter of Antwerp, was born in 1592, and died in 1661. He was knighted by Charles I. and appointed that monarch's agent at the court of Brussels. He painted small figures in distemper.—Walpole. Pilkington.

Gerbillon (John Francis), one of the most celebrated of the jesuit missionaries in China, was born in 1654. He wrote Historical observations on Great Tartary; and Accounts of some of his Travels are inserted in Du Halde's History of China. He was in great favour with the emperor, for whom he composed two books on Geometry, which were printed at Pekin in the Chinese and Tartar languages. He died at Pekin in 1707, superior-general of the missions in China.—Moreri.

Gerdes (Daniel), professor of divinity at Groningen, was born in 1698, at Bremen. He took his doctor's degree at Utrecht, after which he became professor at Duisburg, from whence in 1735 he removed to Groningen, where he died in 1765. His chief works are Vesperæ Vadenses, sive Diatribæ Theologico-Philologicæ de Hyperbolis ex Scriptoribus Sacris eliminandis, 4to.; Observationes Miscellaneæ ad quædam Loca S. S. in quibus Historia Patriarcharum illustratur; Miscellanea Duisburgensia, ad incrementum Rei Literariæ omnis præcipue vero Eruditionis Theologicæ publicata, 4to.; Florilegium Historico-criticum Librorum variorum; Compendium Theologiæ Dogmaticæ, &c.—Jocher's Gelehrt. Lex.

Gerhard (Ephraim), a German lawyer and philosopher of the 18th century, was born in Silesia in 1682. He became professor of law at Altdorf, where he died in 1718. The principal of his works is entituled Delineatio Philosophiæ Rationalis.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Gerlach (Stephen), a German protestant divine, was born in Suabia in 1546. He was educated at Tubingen, and became chaplain to the imperial embassy at Constantinople, where he resided five years, and in 1578 returned to Tubingen; soon after which he was appointed professor of divinity, and dean of the church there. He died in 1612. His works are, Epitome of Ecclesiastical History; Journal of the Embassy to the Porte; Dissertations, &c.—Meleb. Adam. Vit. Theol. Germ.

Germain (Thomas), a French artist, was born at Paris in 1674. His father was goldsmith to the king, and a man of great ingenuity. The son resided a long time at Rome, where he worked as a goldsmith, and exercised himself in drawing. He also performed many fine sculptures in metal, and on his return to Paris became famous in that line. Plate wrought by him fetched very high prices. He was likewise skilled in architecture; and died in 1748.—Moreri.

GERMANICUS (Cæsar), the son of Nero Claudius Drusus by Antonia, the niece of Augustus. He was adopted by Tiberius, A.D. 4, and married Agrippina, the daughter of Agrippa, and grand-daughter of Augustus. She was a woman of eminent virtue. Germanicus was greatly beloved by the Roman people for his splendid accomplishments and excellent disposition. He served the office of consul, A.D. 12, and at the close of the reign of Augustus he commanded in Gaul, where he suppressed a dangerous insurrection in the army. He gained several victories over the Germans, which rendering Tiberius jealous, he was recalled. He was next appointed to command in the east, and after restoring order in Greece, went to Egypt, but died on his return, it is supposed of poison, near Antioch, A.D. 19, aged 34. His death was considered as a public loss, and all the houses in Rome were shut on the occasion. He wrote some comedies in Greek, and translated the Phænomena of Aratus into Latin.—Univ. History. Tacitus. Moreri.

GERMANIO (Anastasio), an Italian prelate, was born in Piedmont in 1551. He was nearly self-taught; after which he studied at Turin and Padua. At the former place he was chosen professor of canon law. He was employed by the popes, and became bishop of Tarantasia. Being sent ambassador by the duke of Savoy to Madrid, he died there in 1627. He wrote De Sacrorum Immunitatibus, &c.—Moreri.

GERMANUS, patriarch of Constantinople in the 8th century, was an eunuch. He was made bishop of Cyzicum, and in 715, elevated to the patriarchate. He was a zealous defender of image-worship, for which he was degraded in a council held at Constantinople in 730. He died about ten years after. He wrote De Sex Synodis Oecumenicis, &c. There was another patriarch of Constantinople of the same name, in 1222. He was deposed in 1240, and restored in 1254; but died shortly after. He wrote Homilies, Orations, &c.—Cave. Moreri.

GERMANY was anciently divided into several independent states. About 390 B.C. some colonies of Gauls, under Segovesus, settled in it. B.C. 25 the Romans gained some advantages over the Germans, A.D. 177 Aurelius made a further progress, and in 276 Probus extended his conquests, but shortly after the Romans lost all their possessions in Germany. In 432 the Huns, a Tartar nation, conquered a great part of Germany. In 771 Charlemagne conquered several of the German nations; in 772 he defeated the Saxons, and in 788 he made himself master of all Germany. On the death of Lewis the Mild, this country was separated from France, Lotharius being declared emperor of Germany, and Charles the Bald king of France. The Carlovingian race expired in Lewis IV, and Conrad duke of Franconia and Hesse was made emperor in 912. In 1273 Rodolph of Hapsburg, of the house of Austria, was elected emperor. In 1519 the empire was united to Spain, in the person of Charles V. but this union ceased on his abdication in 1556. —Univ. Hist.

GERMYN (Simon), a Dutch painter of fruit and landscapes, was born at Dort in 1650, and died in 1719.—Houbraken.

GERSON (John), an eminent divine, whose real name was Chartier, was born at Gerson in Champagne, in 1363. He was educated in the college of Navarre, and became chancellor and canon of the church of Paris. He was deputed to go to the council of Pisa, where he contributed to the election of pope Alexander V. He condemned the murder of the duke of Orleans by the duke of Burgundy, and distinguished himself at the council of Constance. He died in 1429. His works are highly and deservedly valued. They were published in 1706, in 5 vols. folio.—Moreri.

GERSTEN (Christian Louis), mathematical professor at Giessen, where he was born in 1701. He was appointed to the professorship in 1733, but was afterwards deprived of it for not submitting to the decision of a court of justice in a lawsuit with his brother-in-law. Failing in his endeavours to recover his situation, he wrote a rude letter to the landgrave, for which he was imprisoned in 1748, and did not regain his liberty till 1760. He died in 1762. His works are, Tentamina Systematis novi ad Mutationes Barometri ex Natura elateris Aerei demonstrandas; Methodus nova ad Eclipses Terræ et Appulses Lunæ ad Stellas Supputendas; Exercitationes recentiores circa Roris Meteora; Methodus nova Calculi Eclipsium Terræ Specialis, in the English Philosophical Transactions, vol. 48; Mercurius sub Sole visus; Quadrantis Astronomici muralis Idea nova et peculiaris. —Jocher's Gelehrt. Lex.

GERVAIS (Armand Francis), a French ecclesiastic of the order of Carmelites. He was appointed superior of several houses belonging to his order; but in 1695 he retired to the monastery of La Trappe, of which he was made abbot, but resigned that station soon after. He was at last confined in an abbey in the diocese of Troyes, for attacking the Bernardines in his History of the Cistercian Order. He died in 1741. He abridged the works of St. Cyprian, and wrote the life of that father. He was also the author of the lives of Abelard and Heloise, and other biographical and theological works.—Moreri.

GERVAISE (Nicholas), a French missionary, who went to Siam, and on his return published the Natural and Political History of that country, 4to. 1688. He afterwards became provost of Suevre in the church of St. Martin at Tours. Besides the above he wrote the Life of St. Martin, bishop of Tours, with a History of the Foundation of his Church; History of Boethius, &c. About 1724 he went to Rome, and was appointed bishop of Horren. He then set out for Guiana, where, with all the other missionaries, he was murdered by the natives in 1729.—Ibid.

Gesner (Conrad), an eminent physician and naturalist, was born at Zurich in Switzerland in 1516. His parents were too poor to give him an education, which he acquired by the liberality of some of his fellow citizens. After studying at Stutgard, he went to Paris, and supported himself by teaching grammar. He was also Greek professor some time at Lausanne. At Basil he took his doctor's degree in physic, and then returned to Zurich, where he practised as a physician, and gave lectures in philosophy. His fame as a naturalist was circulated over Europe, and he maintained a correspondence with learned men of all countries. He died in 1565. He wrote on the Collection of Plants, a work of vast merit; Apparatus et Delectus Simplicium Medicamentorum, et de Compositione Medicamentorum; Catalogus Plantarum; Hortorum Germaniæ Descriptio; Historia Animalium, which is accounted his greatest performance, and procured him the name of the modern Pliny; De Fossilibus, Gemmis, Lapidibus, Metallis, &c. Bibliotheca Universalis; the last has gone through several editions.—Moreri. Haller, Bibl. Med.

Gesner (John James), a native of Zurich, and professor there, was born in 1707, and died in 1787. He wrote Thesaurus Universalis omnium Numismatum veterum Græcorum et Romanorum, 4 vols. folio; Specimen Rei Nummariæ Nnmismata Regum Macedoniæ omnia quæ laboribus celeber. virorum Crophii, Lazii, Golzii, &c.—Gen. Biog.

Gesner (Solomon), a German protestant divine, was born in Silesia in 1559. He studied at Breslaw and Strasburgh, and about 1593 became professor of divinity at Wirtemberg. He afterwards attained the honourable distinctions of dean and rector of that university, and principal preacher in the castle-church. He died in 1605. He published the prophecy of Hosea from the version of Jerome; a Disquisition on the Psalter; Dissertation on the Book of Genesis; Sermons, &c.—Melch. Adam. Vit. Germ. Theol.

Gessner (Solomon), a poet and painter, was born at Zurich in Switzerland, in 1730. His father was a bookseller and printer, and brought him up to the same business. In 1753 he published a short poem, in poetic prose, intituled Night, which was followed by the pastoral of Daphnis. His next work was the Idyls, tender and interesting. But his reputation was encreased and extended by the Death of Abel, which has been translated into several languages. In 1765 he published ten landscapes, engraved by himself from his own designs. These were followed by others. He was also the author of a Letter on Landscape Painting; Poems, &c. He died in 1781.—Preface to his Works.

Gessner (John Matthias), a profound scholar and critic, was born at Roth in Anspach in 1691. On the recommendation of Buddæus, he was appointed rector of the school of Weimar, which situation he filled eleven years. From thence he removed to Leipsic; and lastly to Gottingen, where he was made professor of rhetoric, librarian, and inspector of public schools. He died in 1761. His most esteemed works are; editions of some of the Classics, and an excellent Latin Thesaurus, 4 vols. folio.—Gen. Biog.

Geta (Septimius), son of the emperor Severus, and brother of Caracalla, who being jealous of his accomplishments, stabbed him in the arms of their mother Julia, at the age of 23, A. D. 212.—Univ. Hist.

Gethin (Grace), an ingenious English lady, was the daughter of sir George Norton in Somersetshire, and born in 1676. She married early sir Richard Gethin of Ireland, but died soon after in 1697, and her remains were interred in Westminster abbey. After her death appeared a work, entituled Reliquiæ Gethinianæ, or some remains of the most ingenious and excellent Lady Grace Gethin, lately deceased, &c. 1700, 4to. Provision was made for a sermon to be preached annually to commemorate her memory, in Westminster abbey, and Mr. Congreve wrote a poem to her honour.—Female Worthies.

Geuss (John Michael), mathematical professor at Copenhagen, was born in Holstein in 1745, and died there in 1786. He published the Theory of the Art of constructing Mines, 1776; a Voyage to Iceland, translated from the German, 2 vols. 4to.; an edition of Logarithmi Buggiani Numerorum ab Unitate ad 10,000, &c.—Gen. Biog.

Ghelen (Sigismund), a learned man of the 16th century. He was a native of Prague; and by the recommendation of Erasmus, became corrector of the press in the office of Frobenius. He died in 1554. Ghelen published a dictionary in four languages, Greek, Latin, German, and Dalmatian; and some translations of antient authors.—Bayle. Moreri.

Ghezzi (Pier Leone), a painter, was born at Rome in 1674. He was appointed by the pope to adorn the castle of Gandolfo, and other places. Francis I. duke of Parma, conferred on him the honour of knighthood. He died in 1755.—Pilkington.

Ghilini (Jerome), a learned Italian, was born in the Milanese in 1589. He became eminent as a canonist, and obtained ecclesiastical preferment at Milan. He died about 1670. His works are Poems; Cases of Conscience; Annals of Alexandria: and Teatro di huomini Letterati, 2 vols. 4to.—Moreri.

GHIRLANDAIO (Domenico), a Florentine painter, was born in 1449. He was intended for a goldsmith; but having a strong passion for painting, he cultivated that art with success. His manner was however Gothic and dry, and he deserves most to be celebrated for being the tutor of Michael Angelo. He died at the age of 44, leaving three sons, David, Benedict, and Randolph, all painters.—Pilkington.

GHISOLFI (Giovanni), a painter, was born at Milan in 1628, and died in 1683. He excelled in painting perspective views and sea-ports.—Ibid.

GIAFAR, or Sadek i. e. the Just, a mahometan doctor, was descended by his mother's side, from the caliph Abubekir. He died at Medina in 764. A book of mussulman prophecies is ascribed to him; and another on lots; but his Traditions are most esteemed.—D'Herbelot.

GIAREDH, or large eyed, another mussulman doctor. He was the head of a sect called Motazales, who blended philosophy with religion. He studied the Greek philosophers, and wrote treatises on metaphysics. He died in 840.—Ibid.

GIANNONE (Peter), an historian, was born at Naples about 1680. He wrote the history of that kingdom, for some freedoms in which, respecting the papal power, he was obliged to quit his native country. He died in Piedmont in 1748. His works were collected after his death.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

GIBBON (Edward), a celebrated historian, was born at Putney in 1737, of a genteel family. He was first placed at a private school at Kingston, and next at Westminster school; from whence he was removed to Magdalen college, Oxford. While there, he read books of controversial divinity, particularly those between the papists and protestants and not having had the advantage of religious instruction in his childhood, he conceived that the truth lay on the side of the romanists. Accordingly, in 1758, he renounced heresy in the presence of a popish priest in London. His father was greatly concerned at this, and to reclaim him sent him to Lausanne in Switzerland, under the care of Mr. Pavilliard, a protestant divine, by whose instructions he was convinced of the errors of the Romish church, and he received the sacrament according to the reformed communion, in 1754. While at Lausanne he pursued his classical studies with ardour, and made himself master of the French language. He here fell in love with the daughter of a minister, but was dissuaded from entering into the marriage state by the force of paternal remonstrance; and he lived single the remainder of his life. The lady afterwards became the wife of the famous Necker. In 1758 he returned to England, where he began to collect a noble library; and in 1761 published in French, a small volume, entituled, "Essai sur l'Etude de la Littérature." He was at this time a captain in the Hampshire militia, which line he quitted at the peace of 1763, when he visited Paris, and from thence went to Lausanne. He next travelled into Italy: and, while sitting amid the ruins of the capitol at Rome, formed the idea of writing the decline and fall of that mighty empire. In 1767 he assisted M. Deyverdun in writing the Memoires Litteraires de la Grande Bretagne. In 1770, Mr. Gibbon published in English a pamphlet, entituled, "Critical Observations on the Sixth Book of the Æneid;" the design of which was to refute bishop Warburton's hypothesis on the descent of Æneas. The same year, by the death of his father, he came into the possession of the family estate: but it was much involved. In 1774 he was returned to parliament for Liskeard; but though he sat eight years, he never distinguished himself as a speaker, always giving a silent vote for the minister. In 1776 appeared the first volume of his great work, the Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire, which was afterwards extended to six volumes, 4to. and on the merit of which no remark need be made. It must not, however, be passed over, that in this truly splendid history the author opened a masked battery against Christianity in several places, but especially in two chapters of the first volume, on the growth and progress of that religion. Several writers attacked the historian, to one of whom only, Mr. Davis, who had charged the author with want of fidelity, did Mr. Gibbon vouchsafe a reply. He was employed by ministers in writing a memoir in justification of this country's going to war with France, for the part taken by that court in the American contest. This piece was written in French, and was greatly admired. For this he obtained a seat at the board of trade, which he lost on the abolition of that board by Mr. Burke's bill. In 1783 he retired to Switzerland, where he employed himself in completing his History: but when the French revolution began to disturb the neighbouring states, Mr. Gibbon returned to England, and died of a dropsy, Jan. 16, 1794. After his death appeared his posthumous works, with his memoirs, written by himself, and finished by his friend, lord Sheffield, 2 vols. 4to.

GIBBONS (Grinling), an eminent sculptor, in the seventeenth century, was the son of a Dutchman who settled in England. He was employed by Charles II. who appointed him to a place under the board of works, and employed him in ornamenting several of his palaces. He carved the foliage in the chapel at Windsor, the choir of St. Paul's cathedral, and the admirable font in St. James's church, Westminster; but his principal performance is said to be at Petworth. He died in 1721.—Walpole's Anecdotes of Painting.

Gibbons (Orlando), an eminent musician, was born at Cambridge in 1583. He became organist of the chapel royal at the age of 21; and, in 1622, was created doctor of music by the university of Oxford. He died at Canterbury of the small-pox, in 1625. He was the best church composer of his time; he also published Madrigals, 1612. His two brothers and son were likewise good musicians.—Burney. Hawkins.

Gibbs (James), an architect, was born at Aberdeen in 1683. He designed the churches of St. Martin's and St. Mary le Strand, London; the new church at Derby; the senate-house, and the improvements of King's college, Cambridge and other works. He died in 1754.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Gibelyn (M. le comte de), a French writer, was born in 1725. He wrote a work, entituled, Le Monde primitif comparé au Monde moderne, for which the French academy twice awarded him their annual prize. He died in 1734.——Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Gibert (Balthazar), a French writer, was born at Aix in 1662. He became professor of rhetoric in the college of Mazarin, at Paris, in 1688, and in 1734 was elected syndic of the university: but in 1740 he was exiled for opposing the revocation of an appeal of the university against the bull Unigenitus. He died the year following. His principal works are, De la Veritable Eloquence; Reflexions sur la Rhetorique; Jugemens des Savans sur les Auteurs qui ont traité de la Rhetorique; La Rhetorique, ou les Regles de l'Eloquence.—Moreri.

Gibert (John Peter), a French divine, was born at Aix in 1660. He taught theology at Toulon and Aix for some years; but in 1709 he removed to Paris, where he led a retired life, and refused several ecclesiastical preferments. He died in 1736. His eminence as a canonist was great, and his works are highly valued. They are, The Duties of a Christian; Cases of Practice relating to the Sacraments; Doctrina Canonum in corpore Juris inclusorum, &c.; Memoirs relating to the Scriptures; Ecclesiastical Institutions; the Customs of the Gallican church, with respect to Censures and Irregularity; Tradition, or the History of the Church with reference to the Sacrament of Marriage, &c.—Ibid.

Giberti (Giammateo), an Italian prelate, was born at Palermo. He became a great favourite of popes Leo X. and Clement VII. The latter made him governor of Tivoli and bishop of Verona. He was one of the hostages delivered by that pontiff in 1527 to the Imperialists, from whom he received very ill usage. On his release he retired to his bishopric, but was recalled to Rome by Paul III. He set up a Greek press in his palace, from whence issued several works of the fathers. He died in 1543. His letters and directions to the clergy have been often printed.—Tiraboschi.

Gibieuf (William), a French ecclesiastic, of the congregation of the Oratory, who died in 1650. His work, On the Liberty of God, and of the Creature, in Latin, is an esteemed performance.—Moreri.

Gibson (Edmund), a learned prelate, was born at Bampton in Westmoreland, in 1669. After receiving his education in the school of his native town, he was sent to Queen's college, Oxford, where he applied particularly to the study of the northern languages. In 1691 he took his first degree in arts, and published a new edition of Drummond's Polemo-Middiana, and James V. of Scotland's Cantilena Rustica, 4to. with curious notes. In 1692 he published a Latin version of the Chronicon Saxonicum, with notes, 4to. These works were followed by another volume, entituled, Librorum Manuscriptorum in duabus insignibus Bibliothecis, altera Dugdaliana Oxonii, Catalogus, dedicated to bishop Tenison, which procured him the patronage of that prelate, who appointed him his chaplain. In 1694 he proceeded M. A.; and the year following appeared his edition of Camden's Britannia, with considerable additions. In 1700 he obtained the rectory of Stisted, in Essex; and in 1702 archbishop Tenison gave him the degree of D. D. The year following he obtained the rectory of Lambeth, and the mastership of the hospital of St. Mary. In 1710 he was made archdeacon of Surrey, and in 1713 he published his Codex Juris Ecclesiastici Anglicani, in folio, which procured him the applause of the friends of the church, and much censure from its enemies. On the advancement of bishop Wake to the primacy in 1715, Dr. Gibson was made bishop of Lincoln, and in 1723 translated to London, in which station he conducted himself with apostolical zeal, piety, and disinterestedness. He died at Bath in 1748. Besides the above works, he published several excellent pastoral letters, against infidelity, immorality, and enthusiasm.—Biog. Brit.

Gibson (Richard), known by the name of the dwarf, an English painter in the time of sir Peter Lely, whose manner he studied. In his youth he was servant to a lady at Mortlake, who, perceiving his taste for painting, put him under de Cleyn, for instruction. He was page to Charles I. and when he married Mrs. Anne Shepherd, who was also a dwarf, the king honoured the wedding with his presence, and gave away the bride. They were of equal stature, each measuring three feet ten inches. They had nine children, five of whom arrived at years of maturity, and were of the usual stature. Gibson died in his 75th year, and his wife in 1709, at the age of 89.——Walpole.

Gibson (William), a nephew of the above, was instructed in the art of painting by him and sir Peter Lely, whose works he copied. He died at the age of 58.—Ibid.

Gideon, a judge of Israel, was of the tribe of Manasseh, and divinely called, as he was threshing, to deliver his countrymen from the Midianites; after which he judged the people forty years, and died B. C. 1236.—Book of Judges.

Gifanius (Hubertus), a learned critic, was born at Buren in Guelderland, in 1534. He studied at Louvain, and at Paris, but took his degree of doctor of civil law at Orleans. He was made counsellor of state by the emperor Rodolph, and died in 1604. He wrote comments on Homer, Aristotle's politics and ethics, and upon Lucretius; also Comment. de Imperatore Justiniano; and Index Histor. Rerum Romanarum.—Bayle. Moreri.

Gifford (Andrew), a baptist minister, was born in 1700. He was assistant librarian of the British Museum many years, and died in 1784. He bequeathed his library to the baptist academy at Bristol. Dr. Gifford was a learned antiquary and a pious divine.—Gent. Mag.

Giggeo (Anthony), a learned Italian divine, of the 17th century. He lived at Milan, and translated into Latin the Commentaries of R. R. G. Solomon, Aben Ezra, and Levi Gersom, on the Proverbs; but his greatest work is Thesaurus Linguæ Arabicæ, seu Lexicon Arabico-Latinum, 4 vols. folio. He died about 1632.—Nouv. Diet. Hist.

Gilbert (William), a physician, who discovered several of the properties of the loadstone, was born at Colchester in 1540, and educated at Cambridge, but took his degree of M. D. abroad. On his return he was elected a fellow of the college of physicians, and became physician to queen Elizabeth. In 1600 he published a work, entituled, De Magnete, magneticisque Corporibus, et de magno Magnete tellure, Physiologia nova, in which are many important suggestions for the improvement of navigation. He died in 1603.—Biog. Brit.

Gilbert (sir Humphrey), an able navigator, was born at Dartmouth, in Devonshire, in 1539. His mother becoming a widow, married Mr. Raleigh, by whom she had the celebrated sir Walter. Humphrey was educated at Eton and Oxford, but he forsook an academical life for the military, and served with reputation in Ireland, as a reward for which he was knighted. In 1576 he published a Discourse to prove a passage by the north-west to Cathay and the East Indies. Two years afterwards he obtained a patent for establishing settlements in North America. In 1583 he took possession of Newfoundland, where he thought to find silver mines, and made another voyage for that purpose, but on his return the vessel foundered, and all on board perished.—Biog. Brit. Prince's Worthies.

Gildas, a British monk of the 6th century. There is nothing extant of his but an epistle on the depravity of the Britons, written in 781, the best edition of which is that by Gale in 1691. Bishop Bale mentions another Gildas, who was a native of Wales, and flourished abou 820. He was a monk, and wrote a calendar of saints, yet extant in MS.; and Leland notices a poet of the name, who drew up the prophecies of Merlin in Latin verse.—Cave, Hist. Lit. Moreri.

Gildon (Charles), a poet, was born at Gillingham in Dorsetshire, about 1666, and educated at Douay. In 1685 he returned to England, and wasted his paternal estate, on which he turned dramatic writer, but without success. He wrote a book, entituled, The complete art of Poetry. He died in 1723.—Biog. Dram.

Giles, of Viterbo, an Italian cardinal of the 16th century, who was a great favourite with the popes Julius II. and Leo X. the latter of whom sent him legate to Germany, on which occasion he was made a cardinal. He died in 1532. He wrote Remarks on the Three first Chapters of Genesis; Commentaries on the Psalms; Dialogues; Letters and Poems.—Moreri.

Giles (John), or Johannes Ægidius, was born at St. Alban's. He lived in the 13th century; was physician to Philip of France, and a professor at Paris and Montpellier. He was also doctor of divinity, and the first Englishman of the dominican order.—Bale. Pits.

Gilimer, or Gelimer, the last king of the Vandals in Africa, was the descendant of Genseric. He deposed his cousin Hilderic in 530, but was defeated shortly after by Belisarius, on which he retreated into Numidia. He was a second time defeated and conducted in triumph to Constantinople, repeatedly exclaiming as he was led along, Vanity of vanities! all is vanity! Justinian gave him an estate, and would have created him a patrician, on the condition that he renounced arianism, which he refused.—Gibbon. Univ. Hist.

Gill (Alexander), a famous school-master, was born in Lincolnshire in 1564. He received his education at Corpus Christi college, Oxford, where he took his degrees in arts, and entered into orders. In 1608 he became master of St. Paul's school, where he brought up many eminent persons, and among the rest, the celebrated Milton. Dr. Gill wrote, 1. Treatise concerning the Trinity in Unity 8vo.; 2. Logonorica Anglica 4to; 3. Sacred Philosophy of holy Scripture, or a Commentary on the Creed, fol. He died in 1635. He was succeeded by his son Alexander Gill, who was doctor in divinity, and accounted a good Latin poet. In 1640 he was removed from that situation, on which he kept a school in Aldersgate street. He wrote a Latin treatise on Arithmetic, and some poems. He died in 1642. —Wood.

GILL (John), a baptist minister, was born at Kettering in Northamptonshire, in 1697. He was nearly self-taught, and acquired a great knowledge of the Latin, Greek, and Hebrew languages. About 1716 he became a preacher, and officiated to a congregation of Higham Ferrers, from whence in 1719 he removed to London, where he was chosen pastor of the baptist congregation in Southwark. He died in 1721. The university of Aberdeen conferred on him the degree of doctor in divinity. He published an Exposition of the Bible, 9 vols, folio; The Cause of God and Truth, 3 vols. 8vo.; a Body of Divinity, 3 vols. 4to.; a Dissertation on the Antiquity of the Hebrew Language; and several Tracts and Sermons. In his sentiments he was a Calvinist of the most rigid cast.— Life prefixed to his Sermons and Tracts.

GILLES (Peter), a learned traveller, was born at Albi in 1490. About 1534 Francis I. of France sent him to travel in the Levant; but, neglecting to supply him with money, Gilles was obliged to enter into the army of Soliman II. He returned from Constantinople with the French ambassador in 1550, and died at Rome in 1555. He wrote De Vi et Natura Animalium; De Bosphoro Thracio, and de Topographia Constantinopoleos.—Moreri.

GILLOT (Claude), a French painter and engraver, was the disciple of Watteau. He was born at Langres in 1673, and died at Paris in 1722. He succeeded chiefly in grotesque figures.—Pilk.

GILPIN (Bernard), an excellent divine, was born at Kentmire in Westmoreland in 1517, and educated at Queen's college, Oxford, of which he became fellow. But he afterwards removed to Christ church, where by reading the works of Erasmus, he secretly embraced the principles of the Reformation. In 1552 he obtained the living of Norton in the diocese of Durham, which, however, he soon resigned, thinking himself not qualified for the pastoral charge. By the advice of his uncle, bishop Tonstal, he went abroad, and caused a manuscript treatise of that prelate on the eucharist to be printed. He returned to England in 1556, and was presented by his uncle to the archdeaconry of Durham, and the rectory of Easington, where he laboured with truly apostolical zeal; and in his capacity of archdeacon made strict visitations, being a great enemy to non-residence and pluralities. He was next presented to the rectory of Houghton le Spring, where his labours in promoting true religion were so remarkable, that bishop Bonner gave orders for him to be arrested and sent to London. Gilpin dressed himself for the stake, but before he reached London news came of the queen's death, on which he returned to his parish, to the great joy of his people. Queen Elizabeth offered him the bishopric of Carlisle, which he refused. He died in 1583. —Life of Gilpin by bishop Carleton. Ditto by W. Gilpin.

GILPIN (Richard), a non-conformist divine, was a native of Cumberland. He took the degree of M. D. in Queen's college, Oxford, but afterwards was ordained, and had the living of Greystock in Cumberland. He was silenced for not complying with the act of uniformity, in 1662. He then practised physic with success at Newcastle-upon-Tyne, and died in 1697.— Calamy. Palmer.

GILPIN (William), an ingenious divine, was a native of Westmoreland, and educated at Queen's college, Oxford, where he took his degrees in arts. He kept for many years a respectable seminary at Cheam in Surrey, and afterwards became vicar of Boldre in Hampshire, and prebendary of Salisbury. He died in 1804, aged 80. Mr. Gilpin published, The Life of Bernard Gilpin, his ancestor, abovementioned; The Lives of Latimer, Wickliffe, Huss, and archbishop Cranmer; Lectures on the Church Catechism, 12mo.; Exposition of the New Testament, 2 vols. 8vo.; Observations relative to Picturesque Beauty, 8vo.; A Tour to the Lakes, 2 vols. 8vo.; Remarks on Forest Scenery, 2 vols.; Essay on Prints; Essays on Picturesque Beauty, &c.; Observations on the River Wye, &c. 8vo.; Picturesque Remarks on the Western Parts of England, 8vo.; Sermons to a Country Congregation, 2 vols. 8vo.; Moral Contrasts, 8vo. &c. &c.— Gent. Mag.

GINNANI (Francis), count, a naturalist, was born at Ravenna in 1716. He became page to duke Anthony Farnese, after which he led a retired life on his estate, improving agriculture, and collecting a museum of natural curiosities. He died in 1766. His principal work is a Historical Treatise of the Diseases of Growing Corn, 4to. 1759. His other writings are, Account of his Museum; A Description of Indigenous Plants; and a Dissertation on the Scirpus of Ravenna.—Halleri Bibl. Botan.

GIOCONDO (Fra Giovanni), an architect, was a native of Verona, where he taught school, and had Julius Cæsar Scaliger for a pupil. He was versed in theology, mathematics, and antiquities, and constructed several bridges in France and Italy. He died in 1521. He published an edition of Vitruvius, and another of Cæsar's Commentaries, &c.—Tiraboschi.

GIOJA (Flavio), a mathematician of Naples to whom is inscribed the invention of the compass. He was born about 1300. He marked the north with a fleur de lis, in honour of the sovereigns of Naples, who were a branch of the royal family of France. —Moreri.

GIOLITO (de Ferrari), a celebrated printer of Venice in the 16th century. His reputation was acquired chiefly by the elegance of his type and paper. He was ennobled by Charles V. He died in 1547, leaving two sons, both printers.—Tiraboschi.

GIORDANI (Vital), an Italian mathematician of the 17th century, was a native of the kingdom of Naples. He became a soldier in the pope's galleys, and the admiral under whom he served made him his purser. He next obtained the place of keeper of the castle of St. Angelo at Rome, where he applied so assiduously to the study of the mathematics, as to be appointed to a professorship. He died in 1711. His works are, Euclide Restituto, folio; De Componendis Gravium Momentis, folio; Fundamentum Doctrinæ Motus Gravium, et ad Hyacinthum Christophorum Epistola.—Moreri.

GIORDANO (Luca), a painter, was born at Naples in 1632. He was in high favour with the king of Spain, who conferred on him the honour of knighthood. He died in 1705.—Pilkington.

GIORGIANI, a celebrated mussulman doctor, whose real name was Alsied Alscherif Abou Hassan, or Houssain Ali, but so called from his being a native of Georgia. He died at Shiraz in 1413. He wrote an Explanation of Terms used in Philosophy and Theology; a Commentary on Euclid, &c. There was another mathematician, and also a grammarian, of the same name.—D'Herbelot.

GIORGIONE, or GEORGIO BARBARELLI, a painter, was born at Castel Franco, in the state of Venice, in 1478. He studied the works of Leonardo da Vinci, whom he soon surpassed. Titian worked under him to obtain his manner of colouring, but Giorgione perceiving his design, dismissed him. His finest work, is a painting of Christ carrying his cross, at Venice. He died in 1511.—Pilkington.

GIOTTINO (Tomaso), an Italian painter, was born at Florence in 1324. His real name was Stefano, but he was called Giottino on account of the resemblance of his style to that of Giotto. He died in 1356. —Ibid.

GIOTTO, an eminent painter, sculptor, and architect, was born near Florence in 1276. He was chiefly admired for his works in mosaic, the best of which is a ship over the grand entrance of St. Peter's church at Rome. His mosaic of the death of the Virgin, at Florence, was greatly admired by Michael Angelo. He died in 1336.—Pilkington.

GIRALDI (Gigio Gregorio), an eminent writer, was born at Ferrara in 1479. He died in 1552. The most esteemed of his works are Syntagma de Diis Gentium, and a history of the Greek and Latin poets.—Moreri.

GIRALDI (John Baptist Cintio), an Italian poet and physician, was born at Ferrara in 1504. He was secretary to the duke of Ferrara, and professor of rhetoric at Pavia. He died at his native place in 1573. He wrote nine tragedies in Italian: but his principal work is entituled Ecatommithi, or A hundred Novels, 2 vols. 8vo.—Moreri.

GIRALDUS. See BARRY.

GIRARD (John Baptiste), a celebrated jesuit, was a native of Dôle. He was tried before the parliament of Aix, on the accusation of Marie Catherine Cadiere, a girl of 18, for using sorcery, first to abuse her, and afterwards to destroy the fruit of her womb. He was acquitted, but the affair made a great noise.—Moreri.

GIRARD (Gabriel), author of the celebrated work entituled Synonymes François, &c. was almoner to the duchess de Berry, and the king's interpreter for the Russian and Sclavonian languages. He also wrote a work, entituled, Principes de la Langue Françoise. The Abbé Girard died in 1748, aged 70.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

GIRARDON (Francis), a sculptor and architect, was born at Troyes in 1628. After studying under Anguier, he was sent to Rome by Louis XIV. to perfect himself in his art, and he succeeded le Brun as inspector-general of sculpture. His chief works are the Mausoleum of Richelieu, in the church of the Sorbonne; the equestrian statue of Louis XIV.: and the rape of Proserpine, in the gardens of Versailles. He died in 1715.—D'Argenville. Moreri.

GIRON (Don Peter), duke of Ossuna, a Spaniard of illustrious birth, and successively viceroy of Sicily and Naples, was a man of great valour and fortitude, but of a cruel disposition. When viceroy of Naples, he patronized the famous conspiracy at Venice, on which is built Otway's best play. The duke of Ossuna fell into disgrace at Madrid, and died in prison in 1624.—Moreri.

GIROUST (James), a French jesuit and popular preacher, was born at Beaufort in Anjou, in 1624, and died in 1689. His sermons in 5 vols. 12mo. were printed in 1704.—Moreri.

GIRTIN (J.), a young painter of promising talents, was born in 1773, and died in 1802. So great was his attachment to his profession, that he worked at it till within a few days of his death, though labouring under a painful asthma. He drew landscapes from nature in water-colours, and some in oil. The panoramic view of London, which was exhibited, and his views of Paris, are admirable representations. Prints of the latter have been published.—Monthly Mag. Feb. 1803.

Gisbert (John), a learned French jesuit, was born at Cahors in 1639. He was professor of divinity at Toulouse many years, and afterwards provincial of his order in Languedoc. He died in 1710. He wrote Anti-Probalisimus, 4to. and other works. He is not to be confounded with Blaise Gisbert, a jesuit, born also at Cahors, and who died at Montpellier in 1731. He wrote on the Education of a Prince, and on Christian Eloquence.—Moreri.

Giulano (di Majano), a Florentine sculptor, and architect, was born in 1377, and died at Naples at the age of 70. He constructed the magnificent palace of Poggio Reale, and other edifices at Naples. He was also employed at Rome by Paul II.—Ibid.

Giusti (Antonio), an Italian painter, was born at Florence in 1624, and died in 1705. He excelled in painting animals and landscapes.—Pilkington.

Glandorp (John), a learned German, was born at Munster. He was the disciple of Melancthon, and became professor of history at Marpurg, where he died in 1564. He wrote Sylva Carminum Elegiacorum; Descriptio Gentis Antoniæ; Familiæ Juliæ Gentis; Disticha Sacra et Moralia, &c. —Moreri.

Glandorp (Matthias Lewis), an eminent German physician, was born in 1595 at Cologne, where his father was a surgeon. He died about 1633. His works were published at London in 1729.—Moreri.

Glanvil (Joseph), an English divine, was born at Plymouth in 1636. He was first of Exeter college, Oxford, and afterwards of Lincoln college. At the Restoration he became a member of the royal society, being a zealous advocate for the new philosophy. In 1666 he was presented to the rectory of the abbey church at Bath, at which time he published his Considerations on the Being of Witches and Witchcraft, in which he betrays a peurile credulity. In 1678 he obtained a prebendal stall in the cathedral of Worcester. He died at Bath in 1680. Besides the above, he wrote several pieces in defence of revealed religion, and experimental philosophy; and after his death were published his discourses, and remains, 4to.—Biog. Brit.

Glanville (Ranulph), an English lawyer of the 12th century, who first collected the English laws into one body.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Glaphyra, wife of Archelaus, high-priest of Bellona, was celebrated for her beauty, and her amours with Marc Anthony. She was a native of Cappadocia, and obtained from Anthony that kingdom for her two sons, Sisinna and Archelaus.—Moreri.

Glass (John), a Scotch presbyterian divine, and founder of a sect, called, in Scotland, Glassites, and in England, Sandemanians, was born at Dundee in 1698. In 1727 he published a work to prove that the civil establishment of religion is inconsistent with christianity, for which he was deposed; and then became the father of a sect. He wrote several controversial Tracts, in 4 vols. 8vo. He died at Dundee in 1773. His son John Glass was master of a merchant vessel belonging to London; but was murdered, with his wife and children, on the coast of Ireland, by four of his crew, in 1765. The murderers were soon after executed. He wrote a Description of Teneriffe, 4to.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Glassius (Solomon), a learned German divine, was born in 1593. He took his degree of D. D. at Jena, where he was professor of theology; but afterwards became superintendant of the churches and schools in Saxe Gotha in 1656. His works are Philologia Sacra, 4to.; Onomatologia Messiæ Prophetica; Christologia Mosaica et Davidica; Disputationes in Augustanam Confessionem; Exegesis Evangeliorum et Epistolarum, &c.—Moreri.

Glauber (John Rodolph), a German chemist in the 17th century, who has perpetuated his name by the discovery of a neutral purgative salt. His works are in one volume, an English translation of which was published in folio, in 1689.—Ibid.

Glauber (John), a painter, was born at Utrecht in 1646, and died in 1726. He is accounted one of the finest landscape painters among the Flemings. His brother, John Gotlief, painted landscapes and sea views. He died in 1703. The sister of these was also an ingenious artist in portraits and history.—Pilkington.

Gleditsch (John Gotlieb), an eminent naturalist, was born at Leipsic in 1714. In 1740 he took the degree of M. D. at Frankfort on the Oder, where he read lectures on botany, physiology, and the materia medica. He afterwards became member of the academy of sciences at Berlin, professor of anatomy, and director of the botanical garden. He died in 1786. He wrote on the Management of Forests; on Funguses; on the Means of extirpating Locusts; Systema Plantarum; Miscellaneous Essays on Medicine, Botany, and Economy; on the State of Bees, &c. &c.—Gen. Biog.

Gleichen (Frederick William von), an eminent nobleman, was born at Bayreuth in 1714. He was a lieutenant-colonel in the service of his country, but retired in 1756 with the rank of privy counsellor. He directed his studies to natural history, and constructed an universal microscope, of which he published a description, with Observations on Seminal Animalcula, and the Fructification in Vegetables. He was also ingenious in delineating plants, and a good chemist. He died in 1783. His works on natural history are in the Glen (John), a printer and engraver in wood, was born at Liege in the middle of the 16th century. He published a work on ancient and modern Dresses, &c. illustrated with figures.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

German language, and numerous.—Gen. Biog.

Glendower (Owen), a celebrated Welchman, who opposed Henry IV. fourteen years, declaring him a usurper of the English throne. He was born in 1354, and died in 1415.—Rapin.

Glicas or Glycas (Michael), a Greek historian of the 13th or 15th century. His Annals from the Creation, and the History of the Byzantine Emperors, are extant, and were published by Labbe at Paris, 1660.—Moreri.

Glisson (Francis), an eminent physician, was born at Rampisham in Dorsetshire, in 1597. He was educated at Caius college, Cambridge, and regius professor of physic in that university forty years. He was a long time president of the college of physicians. He died in 1677. He wrote a Latin Treatise on the Rickets, 12mo.; Anatomia Hepatis, 8vo.; Tractatus de Ventriculo et Intestinis; de Natura Substantiæ Energetica, seu de Vita Naturæ, 4to.——Aikin's Biog. Mem. of Medicine.

Gloucester (Robert of), the oldest of our English poets, lived in the time of Henry II. Camden quotes many of his old English rhymes, and speaks highly of him. He died about the beginning of the reign of king John, at an advanced age.—Bale. Pits.

Glover (Richard), a poet, was born at London in 1712, and educated at Cheam school, where, at sixteen, he wrote some verses to the memory of sir Isaac Newton, prefixed to Dr. Pemberton's view of that great man's philosophy. On leaving school, he entered on the mercantile line under his father, who was engaged in the Hamburgh trade. In 1737 he married a lady of fortune, and the same year published his Leonidas, an epic poem. His poem of London, or the Progress of Commerce, appeared in 1739. The same year he published his popular ballad, intituled, Hosier's Ghost, intended to rouse the national spirit against the Spaniards. About this time he distinguished himself as a city politician, in taking the lead of the oppositions at elections. His credit was so great that he was appointed to manage an application to parliament in behalf of the London merchants, and his speech at the bar of the house of commons was printed. In 1753 was acted at Drury-lane his tragedy of Boadicea, which had but indifferent success. His next tragedy, Medea, in 1761, had better luck. The same year he was chosen into parliament for Weymouth. He died in 1785. Another epic of his, intituled, the Athenaid, was published in 1788, in 3 vols. 12mo. but it is indifferent.—Eur. Mag.

Gluck (Christopher), an eminent musician, was born about 1714 in the Upper Palatinate. After studying in Italy, he visited England, and composed for the opera-house. He next went to Vienna, where he acquired great eminence; in 1774 he went to Paris, and his pieces were performed with such applause that he obtained a pension. He died at Vienna in 1787. Besides his operas, he wrote Letters on Music.—Burney's Hist. of Music.

Glynn (Robert), an English physician and poet, was born at Cambridge, and educated at Eton and King's college, where he took his degree of doctor in medicine in 1752. He continued to reside in his college universally respected for his wit and learning sixty-three years, and died in 1800, aged 82. Dr. Glynn wrote an excellent poem on the Day of Judgment, which obtained the Seatonian prize in 1757. It has been oftentimes printed.—Gent. Mag.

Gmelin (John George), a German botanist and physician, was born at Tubingen in 1709. He became member of the academy at Petersburgh, and was employed by the Russian government to explore, with others, the boundaries of Siberia; the result of which was his Flora Siberica, seu Historia Plantarum Siberiæ, 4 vols. 4to. The author died in 1755.—Gen. Biog.

Gmelin (Samuel Gottlieb), nephew of the preceding, was born at Tubingen in 1743. He took his degree in medicine at his native place, and, after travelling in France and Holland, went to Petersburgh. The empress of Russia appointed him to travel in Astrachan in 1768. He next explored the coast of the Caspian sea; but on his journey to Russia, he was seized by the Tartars, and died in confinement in 1774. He wrote Historia Fucorum; Travels through Russia.—Ibid.

Gmelin (John Frederic), an eminent physician and chemist, was born at Tubingen in 1748. He received his education at his native place, and afterwards at Gottingen, where he became professor of chemistry and natural history. He published numerous pieces on the Materia Medica, chemistry, mineralogy, and every part of natural history. One of the most celebrated is his edition of the Systema Naturæ of Linnæus. He, however, introduced great disorder into the science by multiplying the species. He was also the author of a History of Chemistry; and the world is indebted to him for the discovery of several excellent dyes from mineral and vegetable substances. He died at Gottingen in 1805.—Gent. Magazine.

Goadby (Robert), a printer of Sherborne in Dorsetshire, who died in 1778. He was a man of abilities, and compiled an Illustration of the Scriptures, three vols. folio; a work, intituled, The Universe Displayed; and some other books. He was also the author of the Life of Bampfylde

Moore Carew, king of the beggars.—Gent. Mag.

Goar (James), a learned dominican, was born at Paris in 1601. He was sent on a mission to the Levant in 1618. In 1647 he published, at Paris, a work, called Græcorum Eucologium, in Greek and Latin, folio. He also published translations of some of the Byzantine Historians, and died in 1653. —Moreri.

Gobbo (Pietro Paolo Cortonese), a native of Cortona, and eminent as a painter of fruit and landscape. He died in 1640, aged 60. He is not to be confounded with Andrea Gobbo, who painted historical subjects, and died in 1527.—Pilkington.

Gobelin (Gilles), a French dyer in the reign of Francis I. who is famous for inventing the fine scarlet which goes by his name. He lived in the fauxbourg of St. Marcel in Paris, where his house still bears his name.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Gobier (Charles), a jesuit of St. Maloes, was born in 1644. He was secretary of the jesuits' missions; and author of the History of the Isles Marianes, and of Lettres curieuses et edifiantes. He died at Paris in 1708. —Moreri.

Gobrias, one of the seven lords of Persia, who, after the death of Cambyses, united to dethrone the magi who had usurped the supreme authority about 52 B. C. He was father-in-law of Darius, whom he accompanied in his expedition against the Scythians. —Ibid.

Goclenius (Conrad), a learned German, was born in Westphalia in 1485. He published Notes on Cicero's Offices, an Edition of Lucian, and a Translation of the Hermotimus of the same writer. He died in 1539.—Moreri.

Goclenius (Rodolphus), a German physician, was born at Wirtemberg in 1572, and died in 1621. He was professor of physic and mathematics at Marpurg. He wrote a Treatise on the Cure of Wounds by the Magnet.—Ibid.

Goddard (Jonathan), an English physician and chemist, was born at Greenwich in 1617. He was educated at Oxford, but took his degrees in physic at Cambridge. He was one of the first members of the society afterwards called the royal, fellow of the college of physicians, and physician to Cromwell, by whom he was appointed warden of Merton college, Oxford. But at the restoration he lost that situation, on which he removed to Gresham college, of which he was medical professor. Bishop Ward says, he was the first Englishman who made a telescope. He died in 1674. He wrote on the Abuses of the Apothecaries, and several papers in the Philosophical Transactions.—Ward's Lives of Gresham Professors.

Godeau (Antony), a French bishop, was born in 1605. He was one of the first members of the academy of belles-lettres. Cardinal Richelieu gave him the bishopric of Grasse, which he afterwards exchanged for that of Venice. He died in 1672. He wrote an Ecclesiastical History, 3 vols. folio; and a Translation of the Psalms into French verse.—Moreri.

Godefroi (Denys), an eminent jurist, was born at Paris in 1549. He was a counsellor in the parliament; but being a protestant he was obliged to quit France, on which he settled first at Geneva, and afterwards at Strasburgh, where he died in 1622. His works are Corpus Juris civilis cum Notis, 4to; Notæ in iv Libr. Institutionum; Opuscula Varia Juris, &c.—His eldest son Theodore turned catholic, and became counsellor of state in France. He died at Strasburgh in 1642. He wrote on the genealogical history of France. James Godefroi, another son of Denys, adhered to the religion of his father, and became professor of law at Geneva, and a member of the council. He died in 1659. He wrote several learned works, and edited Cicero and other ancient authors.—Denys Godefroi, son of Theodore, wrote Memoires et Instructions pour servir dans les Negotiations les Affaires concernant les Droits du Roi, folio. He died in 1681. John Godefroi, son of the last mentioned, died in 1732. He edited Philip de Comines's Memoirs, 5 vols. 8vo.; and wrote the Memoirs of Queen Margaret, &c —Moreri.

Godeschalc, or Gotteschalc, surnamed Fulgentius, a benedictine monk of the 9th century, was a native of Saxony. In 848 he preached the doctrine of absolute predestination, on which account he was attacked by Rabanus Maurus, archbishop of Mentz, and in a council held in that city presented a written defence of his opinions. But the council condemned them, and sent him prisoner to Hincmar, archbishop of Rheims, who called a council at Quercy in 849, by which Godeschalc was degraded, scourged, and sent to prison. He gained however many followers, and some provincial councils in France approved his doctrines. He died about 869. Only two confessions of his are extant.—Usseri Vit. Godeschalc.

Godewyck (Margarita), a Dutch paintress, was born at Dort in 1627, and died in 1677. She had a fine taste for painting landscapes, and for working in embroidery. —Pilkington.

Godfrey (sir Edmundbury), a magistrate, who was active in the discovery of the popish plot in 1678; and was made remarkable by the manner of his death. His body was found pierced by his own sword, and with many marks of violence, on which account his death was imputed to the papists; and his funeral was performed with great pomp.—Granger.

Godfrey of Bouillon, chief of the first crusades, was the son of Eustace count of Boulogne. He served with great valour under the emperor Henry IV. after which he went to the Holy Land, where he took the city of Jerusalem in 1099. The army elected him king of that country; but he rejected the title from motives of piety, assuming that of defender of the holy sepulchre. He formed a code of laws for his subjects; and died in 1100.—Moreri.

Godinot (John), a French divine, was born at Rheims in 1661. He was a canon in the cathedral of his native city, besides which he exercised the profession of a wine-merchant. His riches however he bestowed in charitable uses. He was a zealous jansenist, and died in 1749.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Godiva, a lady celebrated for an uncommon instance of generosity, was the wife of Leofric, earl of Mercia. Soliciting her husband to exempt the city of Coventry from a heavy toll, he affected to consent on condition that she rode naked through the streets of that city, which she submitted to. This extraordinary adventure was painted in one of the windows of Trinity church in Coventry.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Godolphin (Sidney), a poet, was born of an ancient family in Cornwall in 1610, and educated at Exeter college, Oxford. In 1640 he was elected into parliament for Helston, where he took the part of the earl of Stafford. He afterwards joined the king's army, but was slain in an action with the rebels at Chagford in Derbyshire in 1643. He wrote several poems, and translated the Passion of Dido for Æneas, from Virgil; printed in 1658, 8vo. He was very intimate with Hobbes, who gives him a high character in his Leviathan.—Wood.

Godolphin (John), an eminent civilian, was born in Cornwall in 1617. He took the degree of doctor of civil law at Oxford. In 1653 he was appointed one of the three judges of the admiralty; at the restoration he was made king's advocate, and died in 1678. He wrote the Holy Limbec, or an Extraction of the Spirit from the Letter, 12mo.; the Holy Arbour, or a Body of Divinity, fol.; Catalogue of such as have filled the Office of Lord High Admiral; View of the Admiralty Jurisdiction, 8vo.; the Orphan's Legacy, or a Testamentary Abridgment, 4to.; Reperforium Canonicum, 4to.—Wood's A. O.

Godwin, a powerful Saxon lord and earl of Kent. In 1017 he accompanied Canute in an expedition against Sweden, where he behaved with such valour as to receive the daughter of that monarch in marriage, and large grants of land. On the death of Canute, the earl sided with Hardicanute against Harold, but afterwards he espoused the cause of the latter. He was charged with murdering Alfred, one of the sons of Ethelred II. from which he vindicated himself by oath. On the death of Hardicanute he joined Edward, who married his daughter, but afterwards he rebelled against Edward, and, being unsuccessful, fled to Flanders. Having gathered fresh forces, he sailed up the Thames, and appeared before London, which threw the country into such confusion, that the king was obliged to negociate peace with Godwin, who was restored to his estates. He died suddenly while dining with the king at Winchester in 1053.—Biog. Brit.

Godwin (Thomas), an English bishop, was born at Okingham in Berkshire, in 1517. He received his academical education at Magdalen college, Oxford, of which he became fellow. In 1549 he was appointed master of Brackley school, Northamptonshire, but resigned it on the accession of Mary, and practised physic. In the next reign he was ordained, and in 1565 made dean of Christ Church, Oxford; the year following he was removed to the deanry of Canterbury. In 1584 he was promoted to the see of Bath and Wells, but not long after he was suspended by the queen for marrying a second wife. He died in 1590.—Wood. Biog. Brit.

Godwin (Francis), son of the preceding, was born at Havington in Northamptonshire, in 1561. He received his education at Christ Church college, Oxford; and greatly assisted Mr. Camden in his topographical enquiries. In 1601 he was promoted to the see of Llandaff, from whence he was translated to Hereford in 1617. He died in 1633. Bishop Godwin published in 1601, "A Catalogue of English Bishops," 4to. This work he afterwards greatly enlarged, under the title of De Præsulibus Angliæ Commentarius, &c. He was also the author of Rerum Anglicarum Hen. VIII. Edw. VI. et Maria regnantibus, Annales, folio; and a curious book, intituled, the Man in the Moon, or a Discourse of a Voyage thither, by Domingo Gonzales, 8vo.—Ibid.

Godwin (Dr. Thomas), a learned divine, was born at Somersetshire in 1587, and educated at Magdalen college, Oxford. About 1609 he became master of the school at Abingdon in Berkshire, for the use of which he published in 1613 Romanæ Historiæ Anthologia, or an Exposition of Roman Antiquities; in 1616 appeared his Synopsis Antiquitatum Hebraicarum ad Explicationem utriusque Testamenti valde necessaria, &c. At this time he resigned his school, and obtained the rectory of Brightwell in the same county, where he died in 1642. Besides the above works, he wrote Moses and Aaron, Civil and Ecclesiastical Rites used by the ancient Hebrews, 4to. a book of merit.——Ibid.

Godwin (Mary Wollstonecraft), an extraordinary writer, was born at Beverly in Yorkshire, in 1768. Her father's extravagances reducing his family to poverty, she opened a day-school, first at Islington, and afterwards at Newington-green. She next became governess to the daughters of lord Kingsborough, in whose family, however, she remained but a short time. In 1787

she settled in the metropolis, and had recourse to her pen for a subsistence, and published a little work, intituled, Original Stories for the Use of Children; translated some works from the French and German; and had some concern in the Analytical Review. In 1790 she published an Answer to Burke's Reflections on the French Revolution, and the year following her Vindication of the Rights of Women. In 1792 she went to Paris, and there formed an unfortunate connection with an American gentleman, by whom she had a daughter. For him she undertook a voyage to Norway to regulate some commercial concerns. This tour occasioned her Letters from Scandinavia. On her arrival in England she found herself forsaken by this man, on which she endeavoured to drown herself in the Thames, but was extricated after throwing herself from Putney bridge. In 1796 she married Mr. William Godwin, but died in child-birth in 1797. Her posthumous works, consisting of Letters and Fragments, were published in four volumes, 12mo.—Life written by her husband. Necrology.

Goeree (William), a learned bookseller at Amsterdam, was born at Middleburg in 1635. He was the author of Jewish Antiquities, 2 vols. folio, Utrecht, 1700; a General Introduction to the Art of Painting; and a book on the Principles of Architecture. He died at Amsterdam in 1715. His son was an excellent painter, and died at Amsterdam in 1735.—Moreri.

Goertzs (John, baron of), a Swedish nobleman of great talents and ambition, was a native of Holstein. He became the favourite and minister of Charles XII. to gratify whose passion for war he had recourse to the most oppressive measures. On the death of that monarch he was beheaded in 1719.—Moreri.

Goes (Hugo Vander), a Flemish painter, was born at Bruges, and flourished at the beginning of the 16th century. He was a disciple of Van Eyck, and several fine works by him are still remaining at his native place.——Pilkington.

Goetze (George Henry), a German protestant divine, was born at Leipsic in 1668, and died at Lubec in 1702. He was superintendant of the churches in the latter city, and the author of Dissertations Historical, Critical, and Theological, in Latin. A selection from his numerous pieces was published in 3 vols. 12mo. 1706.——Moreri.

Goez (Damian), a learned Portuguese of the 16th century, was descended of an ancient family. He spent many years in travelling, and was recalled home to write the history of his own country, which he never completed, being accidentally burnt to death in his own house. He wrote Legatio Magni Indorum Imperatoris ad Emanuelem Lusitaniæ Regem, 1532; Fides, Religio, Moresque, Æthiopum; Hispaniæ Laudatio; Comment. Rerum Gestarum in India a Lusitanis, &c.—Moreri.

Goeze (John Augustus Ephraim), a celebrated naturalist, was born at Ascherleben in 1731. He was educated at Halle, and became a minister at Quedlingburg, where he died in 1786. He distinguished himself by his microscopial discoveries, particularly on intestinal worms, of which he wrote a valuable history in the German language in 1782. His Entomological Collections, in four parts, appeared between the years 1771 and 1781.—Schlichtegroll's Necrology.

Goff (Thomas), an English divine and poet, was of Christchurch college, Oxford, and a native of Essex. He obtained the living of East Claydon in Surry; and died in 1627, aged 33. Five tragedies by him were printed after his death.—Biog. Dram.

Goguet (Anthony-Yves), a French writer, was born at Paris in 1716, and died in 1758. He wrote Origines des Loix, des Arts, des Sciences, et de leur Progrès chez les anciens Peuples, 3 vols. 4to. This has been translated into English.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Goldast (Melchior Heimensfield), a learned writer, was born in Switzerland in 1576, and died, extremely poor, in 1635. His works are, Monarchia Sancti Imperii Romani, 3 vols. fol.; Alamaniæ Scriptores, 3 vols. fol.; Commentarius de Bohemiæ Regno, 4to.; Informatio de Statu Bohemiæ quoad Jus, 4to.; Sybilla Francica, 4to.; Scriptores Rerum Suevicarum, 4to; Collectio Consuetudinum et Legum Imperialium, fol.; Politica Imperialia, 2 vols. folio.—Moreri.

Goldman (Nicholas), a German mathematician, was born at Breslau in Silesia, in 1623, and died at Leyden in 1665. He wrote Elementa Architecturæ Militaris; De Usu Proportionarii Circuli; De Stylometricis; on Architecture.—Moreri.

Goldoni (Charles), a dramatic writer, was born at Venice in 1707. He discovered a propensity to the drama at an early age, and his father caused a theatre to be built for him in his house. The Italian stage was reformed by him, and his comedies, which are numerous, are exceedingly humorous and natural. About 1761 he went to Paris, and became composer to the Italian theatre; besides which he had an appointment at court. He died in 1792. His works were printed at Leghorn, in 31 vols. 8vo.—Monthly Mag. 1798.

Goldsmith (Oliver), an eminent writer, was born, according to one account, in 1731, at Pallas, in the county of Longford, in Ireland, and to another at Elphin, in 1729. His father was a clergyman, who gave him a good education, and sent him to Trinity college, Dublin, from whence he removed to Edinburgh, to study physic. At this place he became security for a fellow-student, on which account he was obliged to escape to England, but was arrested at Sunderland, and released by two college friends, whom he met with there. He then went to Holland, and travelled through Flanders and part of Germany on foot. At Louvain he took the degree of bachelor of physic, the highest degree he ever attained. After accompanying an English gentleman to Geneva, and the south of France, he arrived in England in 1758. Being reduced to a low state, he became usher in a school at Peckham; where, however, he did not remain long, but settled in London, and subsisted by writing for periodical publications. One of his first performances was an Enquiry into the State of Polite Learning in Europe; but he emerged from obscurity in 1765 by the publication of his poem, entituled, the Traveller, or a Prospect of Society, of which Dr. Johnson said, "that there had not been so fine a poem since Pope's time." The year following appeared his beautiful novel of the Vicar of Wakefield. His circumstances were now respectable, and he took chambers in the Temple; but the liberality of his temper, and a propensity to gaming, involved him in frequent difficulties. In 1768 he brought out his comedy of the Good-Natured Man at Covent Garden, but its reception was not equal to its merits. In 1770 he published The Deserted Village, a poem, which, in point of description and pathos, is above all praise. As a comic poet he appeared to great advantage in 1772, by the play of She Stoops to Conquer, or the Mistakes of a Night, which is still a favourite with the public. Besides these performances he produced a number of others:—as a History of England, in a Series of Letters from a Nobleman to his Son, 2 vols. 12mo. This useful and pleasing work was for a long time attributed to lord Lyttleton. A History of England, 4 vols. 8vo.; A Roman History, 2 vols. 8vo.; A Grecian History, 2 vols.; A History of the Earth and Animated Nature, 8 vols. 8vo.; Chinese Letters, &c. He died by taking an extravagant dose of James's powder in 1774, and was buried in the Temple church-yard. A monument was erected to his memory in Westminster-abbey, with a beautiful Latin epitaph by Dr. Johnson.—Life prefixed to his Works.

Golius (James), a learned Orientalist, was born at the Hague in 1596. Having finished his education at Leyden, he went to France, and taught the Greek language at Rochelle. In 1622 he accompanied the Dutch ambassador to the emperor of Morocco, who was highly pleased with his conversation. After his return he succeeded to the Arabic professorship. In 1625, he went to the Levant, and made excursions into Arabia; in 1629, he returned to Leyden, where he was chosen professor of mathematics, which station he filled with great honour till his death in 1667. He published an Arabic Lexicon; a Persian Dictionary; the Saracen History of Elmacin; the Life of Tamerlane; the Astronomical Elements of Alfregan, &c.—Moreri.

Golius (Peter), elder brother of the preceding, was born at Leyden. He was the author of several works, both in Greek and Latin, and founded a monastery of the barefooted carmelites on mount Libanus. He was afterwards employed on a mission to the East Indies, and died at Surat about 1673. He had a considerable share in editing the grand Arabic Bible, printed at Rome in 1671. He also translated some religious manuals into that language.—Moreri.

Goltzius (Henry), a painter and engraver, was born in 1558, in the duchy of Juliers, and died at Haerlem in 1617. His prints are highly esteemed.—Ibid.

Golyddan, the bard of Cadwallader, the last nominal king of the Britons, who flourished in the latter part of the seventh, and beginning of the eighth century.—Owen's Camb. Biog.

Golzius (Hubert), a celebrated antiquary, was born at Venloo, in 1526. He travelled through France, Italy, and Germany, in search of medals and other antiquities, and died at Bruges in 1582. His works are:—Fasti Romani ex Antiquis Numismatibus et Marmoribus, folio; Icones Imp. Romanorum et Series Austriacorum, fol.; Sicilia et Magna Græcia ex Numismat., fol.; Fasti Consulares; Thesaurus Antiquitatum.—Moreri.

Gomar (Francis), a zealous defender of the calvinistic doctrines, was born at Bruges in 1568. He studied at both the English universities, and in 1594 became professor of divinity at Leyden. When Arminius was chosen as his colleague in 1603, a difference arose between them on the subjects of grace and predestination, and Gomar conducted himself in the controversy with great bitterness. In 1611 he resigned his professorship, and went to Middleburgh, from whence in 1614 he removed to Saumur, and afterwards to Groningen. He distinguished himself by his ardour against the Armenians at the synod of Dort, and died at Groningen in 1641. His works are almost wholly polemical.—Bayle.

Gombauld (John Ogier de), a French poet, was born at St. Just de Lussac, in Saintonge. He was one of the first members of the French academy, and had a pension, but was generally poor. His works are, tragedies, pastorals, romances, sonnets, and epigrams. He died in 1666.—Moreri.

Gomberville (Marin le Roi), sieur de, a French writer, was born in 1599 at Chevreuse. He was member of the French academy, and died in 1674. His works are: Polexandre; La Cytherea; La Jeune Alcidiane; romances: Discours sur les Vertus et les Vices de l'Histoire, et de la Manière de bien écrire; a Relation of the River of the Amazons; La Doctrine des Mœurs, tirée de la Philosophie des Stoiques; Poesies diverses.—Moreri.

Gomersal (Robert), an English poet in the reign of Charles the First. His best composition is called the Levite's Revenge, in meditations on Judges 19 and 20. He died in 1646.—Langbaine.

Gomez de Cividad (Alvarez), a modern Latin poet, was born at Guadalaxara in Spain in 1488, and died in 1558. His principal performance is a Latin poem on the Order of the Golden Fleece. He also wrote some pieces in Spanish.—Moreri.

Gomez de Castro (Alvarez), a Spanish writer, was born near Toledo, and educated at Alcala. He wrote the Life of Cardinal Ximenes, and was employed in editing the works of St. Isidore. He died in 1580, aged 65.—Ibid.

Gomez (Mad. Angelica Poisson de), was born at Paris in 1684, and died in 1770. She wrote the following romances: Les Journées Amusantes, 8 vols.; Anecdotes Persanes, 2 vols.; Hist. Secrète de la Conquête de Grenade; Histoire du Comte Oxforde; la Jeune Alcidiane; les Cent Nouvelles Nouvelles, 5 vols.; and some tragedies.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Gondrin (Louis Antony duc de), a French courtier, is remarkable for his complaisance to Louis XIV. That prince, visiting the duke's country-house, disapproved of a grove before his chamber-window, and when he rose in the morning the grove was cut down. Louis, in his walk, complained that his view was intercepted by an extensive wood; and on making the same remark in a second walk, "Your majesty," said Gondrin, "need only command, and it will instantly disappear." "I do command," said Louis; and the wood was in a moment levelled to the ground by twelve hundred men placed for the purpose. "Ah!" said the duchess of Burgundy, "if the king should wish our heads to disappear, the duke would not disappoint him."—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Gondebaud, or Gundobald, third king of Burgundy, who ascended the throne on the death of his brother Chilperic in 491. He ravaged Italy, and in 499 called a council at Lyons to reconcile the catholics and Arians, but without success. Soon after this he was defeated by Clovis, king of the Franks, and his brother Godesil, but on becoming tributary to the former, he recovered his dominions. Gondebaud then put his brother to death. He afterwards reigned in peace, civilized his country, and introduced a system of laws still extant by the title of La Loi Gourbette. He died in 516.—Univ. Hist. Moreri.

Goncora (Lewis de), a Spanish ecclesiastic and poet, was descended from an illustrious family, and born at Cordova, in 1562. The Spaniards call him the prince of their poets. He died in 1627.—Moreri.

Gonet (John Baptist), a French dominican, was born at Beziers in 1616. He became professor of theology at Bourdeaux, and provincial of his order. He died in 1681. He compiled a System of Divinity, in 18 vols. 12mo.: and wrote Manuale Thomistarum, seu brevis Theologiæ Cursus: and Dissertatio Theologica de Probabilitate.—Moreri.

Gonnelli (John), surnamed the blind man of Combassi, by the mere touch acquired great perfection as a sculptor. He died at Rome in 1673.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Gonsalva (Hernandez de Cordova), surnamed the Great Captain, a Spanish commander, was descended of a noble family, and was born in 1443. He distinguished himself in the conquest of Grenada, under Ferdinand and Isabella. Afterwards he was sent to Naples, which he recovered almost entirely from the French. He next conquered Apulia and Calabria, and captured Taranto in 1501. Two years afterwards he entered Naples in triumph, and for his services was made a constable of that kingdom and duke of Terranova. Ferdinand however, being jealous of the Great Captain, recalled him, and banished him to his estate in Grenada, where he died in 1515.—Moreri.

Gonthier (John and Leonard), two Frenchmen and brothers, were admired by the curious for their taste and skill in painting on glass.—Ibid.

Gonzaga (Lucretia), a celebrated Italian lady in the 16th century, was the daughter of the lord of Gazzuolo, and the wife of Manfroni of Ferrara, who was condemned in 1546 for a plot against the duke of Ferrara. He died in confinement in 1552. His wife tried all the means in her power to procure his liberty, and even solicited the interference of the Grand Signior on his behalf, but in vain. The letters attributed to her are of dubious authority; but her poems and other works are genuine. She died at Milan in 1576.—Bayle. Tiraboschi.

Gonzaga (Scipio), a Roman cardinal, was born in 1542, of a noble family, and received his education at Padua, where he formed the academy of Degli Eterei. He afterwards became distinguished in theology and philosophy. Sixtus V. created him a cardinal. He died in 1598. Some poems by him are extant, and he left Commentaries on his Life in MS.—Tiraboschi.

Gonzaga (Vespasian), duke of Sabbioneta, was born in 1531. He was an eminent commander, and founded the city of Sabbioneta, where he erected churches and established a classical seminary. He was also a good Italian poet, and a patron of men of learning. He died in 1591.—Ib.

Gonzalez (Thyrsus), a Spanish jesuit, and general of his order, who died at Rome in 1705. He wrote a famous Treatise on the Doctrine of Probability, 1694, folio.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Goodall (Walter), a Scotch antiquary

nd philologist, was born in 1689. Among is works is a Vindication of Mary Queen f Scots, published in 1751. He died at dinburgh at the age of 71.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Goodwin (John), an English divine, was orn in 1593, and educated at Queen's col-ge, Cambridge. In 1633 he became vicar f St. Stephen, Coleman-street, London, from hich he was ejected in 1645 for re-using to administer baptism and the Lord's upper promiscuously. He was a zealous ndependent, arminian, and republican. n account of his vindicating the king's urder, he was exempted from pardon at e Restoration, but was never proceeded gainst. He died in 1665. His works are edemption redeemed, fol.; Imputatio Fi-i, or a Treatise of Justification, 4to.; Ex-osition of Romans ix. 4to.; of being filled ith the Spirit, 4to. and numerous controver-al tracts.—Calamy's Ejected Ministers. Palmer's Nonconf. Mem.

Goodwin (Thomas), an English divine f the independent persuasion, was born at olesby in Norfolk, in 1600. He was bred Christchurch college, Cambridge, but terwards became fellow of Catherine hall. 1628 he was chosen lecturer of Trinity urch in that town, of which in 1632 he as made vicar. On account of his puri-nical opinions, he withdrew to Holland 1639, and officiated to an independent ngregation. When the civil wars broke t he returned to England, and was cho-n one of the assembly of divines at West-inster, where he opposed the presbyterians. n this account he became a great favourite ith Cromwell, who made him his chaplain. e attended the usurper in his last illness, d is said to have predicted his recovery, as answer to his prayers; and that when s death was certain, he thus addressed e Almighty: "Lord, thou hast deceived , and we were deceived." He was a ri-d predestinarian, and his works, which e greatly admired by people of that turn, ke 5 vols. folio. He died in 1679.—Ibid.

Goot (John van), a Dutch painter, who rote a history of the lives and works of e Flemish painters. He was born at the ague in 1685.—Houbraken.

Gordian I. emperor of Rome, was born D. 157, and was a descendant of the racchi. He was a man of large possessions d of considerable talents. At the age of he served the office of consul, and en-yed the same honour under Alexander verus, who had a great regard for him, d nominated him proconsul of Africa. 237 a conspiracy was formed against aximin, and the authors of it insisted on ordian's assuming the imperial diadem, ich he refused, but at last yielded, and son Gordian the younger was associated th him in the empire. The latter was an of letters, but of dissolute manners, d addicted to women. The two empe-rs removed to Carthage, and announced their election to the Roman senate, which ratified the choice. But in the mean time Capelianus governor of Mauritania declared for Maximin, and marched against Carthage, where the younger Gordian was slain in battle, and the father strangled himself A. D. 237. After this event the Roman citizens refused to submit to Maximin, and chose for emperors Maximus, Balbinus, and a youth of the family of the preceding, who assumed the name of Gordian. Not long afterwards Maximus and Balbinus being massacred in a mutiny, Gordian was declared sole emperor. He married the daughter of his tutor Misetheus, whom he made prefect, a trust which he discharged to the satisfaction of the emperor and the people. By his advice Gordian undertook an expedition to the east, where he defeated Sapor king of Persia, and recovered Mesopotamia. On the death of Misetheus, he chose in his room Philip, an Arab, who conspired against him, and put him to death in 244.—Crevier. Gibbon.

Gordon (Andrew), professor of philosophy in the Scots monastery of Benedictines at Erfurt, was born in 1712, near Aberdeen. In 1713 he entered into the above order, and died in 1751. His works are, Phenomena Electricitatis Exposita, 8vo.; Philosophiæ utilis et jucunda, 3 vols. 8vo.; Impartial Account of the Origin of the present War in Great Britain, 4to.: Physicæ experimentalis Elementa, 8vo. He was the first who used a cylinder instead of a globe in the electrical apparatus.—Gen. Biog. Priestley's Hist. of Electricity.

Gordon (George), commonly called lord George Gordon, was the son of Cosmo George duke of Gordon, and born in 1750. He entered into the navy when young, but quitted it on account of some dispute with lord Sandwich. He afterwards sat in parliament for Luggershall, and distinguished himself by some strange speeches against the ministers. But what chiefly brought him into notice was his opposition to the bill for granting farther toleration to Roman catholics. His intemperance on this occasion proved the cause of the riots in 1780, for which he was tried and acquitted. In 1786 he was excommunicated for not appearing as a witness in a cause. In 1788 he was found guilty of publishing a libel against the queen of France, on which he fled to Holland. A little after this he returned to England, and was taken in the disguise of a Jew, which profession he had adopted, and was committed to Newgate, where he died in 1793.—Gent. Mag. Ann. Reg.

Gordon (Thomas), a political writer, was born at Kirkudbright in Scotland. He received a liberal education in his own country, and then removed to London, where he taught the classics. He also busied himself in politics, and was employed by Harley earl of Oxford. Mr. Trenchard next took him to live with him, and they wrote in conjunction Cato's Letters and the Independent Whig. On the death of Trenchard Gordon married his widow, and thus gained possession of a fine estate. They were both zealous whigs, and inveterate enemies of religion. Sir Robert Walpole employed Gordon to defend his administration, and made him a commissioner of wine-licences. He translated Tacitus and Sallust into English, with Discourses relative to each; and after his death, which happened in 1750, at the age of 66, appeared his tracts, in two works, entitled, A Cordial for Low Spirits, and the Pillars of Priestcraft and Orthodoxy shaken.—Gen. Biog.

Gordon (Alexander), a learned Scotch writer of the eighteenth century. He received a liberal education; after which he went to Italy and other parts of Europe, where he continued several years. He was successively secretary to the society for the encouragement of learning, the Egyptian club, and the antiquarian society. Afterwards he went to Carolina with governor Glen, where he died. His works are: Itinerarium Septentrionale, or a Journey through most parts of Scotland, folio; the Lives of Pope Alexander VI. and his son Cæsar Borgia, fol.; a complete History of Ancient Amphitheatres, 8vo.; an Essay towards explaining the Hieroglyphical Figures on the Coffin of a Mummy, fol. 1773; Twenty-five Plates of the Egyptian Mummies in England, and Egyptian Antiquities, 1739, fol.—Nichols's Anecdotes of Bowyer.

Gordon (James), a learned jesuit, was descended from a Scotch family of distinction, and born in 1543. He taught Hebrew at Bourdeaux and Paris, and died in 1620. He wrote Controversiarum Christianæ Fidei Epitome, 2 vols. folio. There was another jesuit of both his names, who published in 1632, a Commentary on the Bible, 3 vols. folio. He was also the author of some other works.—Moreri.

Gorgias (Leontinus), a celebrated orator of the school of Empedocles, was a native of Leontium in Sicily. A golden statue was erected to his honour at Delphi. Plato has given his name to one of his dialogues. He lived B. C. 417.—Cicero de Orat.

Gorio (Antony Francis), a learned antiquary, was born at Florence. He was the author of Musæum Florentium, or a Description of the Cabinet of the Grand Duke of Florence, 11 vols. fol.; Musæum Etruscum, 3 vols. folio; Musæum Cortenese, fol.; Ancient Inscriptions in Towns of Tuscany, 3 vols. fol. He died in 1757.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Gorlæus (Abraham), an eminent antiquary, was born at Antwerp in 1540, and died at Delft in 1609. His works are: Dactyliotheca, seu Annulorum Sigillorumque e Ferro, Ære, Argento, atque Auro, Promptuarium, 4to.; Thesaurus Numismatum familiarum Roman., fol.; Paralipomena Numismatum. He is not to be confounded with David Gorlæus, of Utrecht, who in the 17th century published some peculiar philosophical notions.—Bayle. Moreri.

Goropius (John), a physician of Brabant. In his work, entitled, Origines Antverpianæ, among other fabulous tales he attempts to prove that the Flemish was the language of Adam. He died in 1572.—Moreri.

Gorran (Nicholas de), a French dominican of the 13th century. He was confessor to Philip the fair king of France, and a famous preacher. He died about 1295. His Commentary on the Gospels, and Sermons, were printed at Paris in 1523 and 1539.—Moreri.

Gorreus (John de), a protestant physician of Paris, who suffered much persecution; and his coach being one day suddenly seized by a party of soldiers, he lost his senses, and died in 1572, aged 72. He published a translation of Nicander.—Ibid.

Gorter (John), an eminent physician, was born in 1689 at Enkuysen in West Friesland. He took his doctor's degree at Leyden, and in 1725 became lecturer in medicine and public physician at Harderwyk. He was afterwards one of the imperial physicians at Petersburgh but returned to Holland in 1758, and died in 1762. His principal works are: Tractatus de Perspiratione insensibili Sanctoriana Batavia; De Secretione Humorum e Sanguine, ex Solidorum Fabrica præcipue et Humorum Indole demonstrata; Compendium Medicinæ; Morbi Epedemici brevis Descriptio et Curatio; Materies Medica Compendio Medicinæ accommodata exhibens Formulas Exercitationes Medicæ quatuor, &c.—Gen. Biog.

Gossilini (Julian), an Italian writer, was born in 1525. He was secretary to Ferdinand di Gonzaga, viceroy of Sicily, whose life he wrote and other works. He died at Milan in 1587.—Tiraboschi.

Gotu (Stephen), archbishop of Upsal in the 16th century. He assisted John king of Sweden in his design of restoring popery in that kingdom, which nearly produced a civil war, and was frustrated.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Gotti (Vincent Lewis), an Italian cardinal, was born at Bologna in 1664. He wrote several books in defence of the catholic faith. He died in 1742.—Moreri.

Gottignies (Giles Francis), a Flemish jesuit and mathematician, was born at Brussels in 1630. He resided at Rome, where he taught mathematics, and died in 1689. His principal works are: Elementa Geometriæ Planæ; Figura Cometarum qui apparuerunt Ann. 1664, 5, 8; Arithmetica Introductio ad Logisticam universæ Mathesi servientem; Epistolæ Mathematicæ.—Moreri.

Gottleber (John Christopher), a German critic, was born in 1738, and died in 1785. He wrote Animadversions on different Portions of Plato.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Gottsched (John Christopher), a German poet, and philosophical writer, was born at Koningsberg in 1700. He became professor of philosophy, logic, and metaphysics, at Leipsic, where he died in 1766. He greatly improved the German language by his works, the chief of which are: Essay towards a Critical History of Poetry for the Germans; the Death of Cato, a tragedy; Collections towards a Critical History of the German Language, Poetry and Eloquence; the first Principles of General Philosophy; the German Theatre; the Principles of the German language; Poems, &c. Madame Gottsched was also a good dramatic writer. She died in 1762.—Gen. Biog.

Goudelin or Goudouli (Peter), a Gascon poet, was born at Toulouse in 1579, and died there in 1629. His verses have great uprightliness, and a delicate simplicity; his works, which are much admired by his countrymen, have gone through numerous editions.—Moreri.

Goudimel (Claude), a musician of the sixteenth century, was put to death by the catholics at Lyons in 1572, for setting the psalms of Marot and Beza to music.—Moreri.

Govea (Anthony), a Portuguese jesuit, was born at Beja in 1505. He became professor of law at Toulouse, and afterwards at Turin, where he died in 1565. His works on law were published in one volume folio, 1562. He was also the author of a Commentary on the Topica of Cicero, and published an edition of Terence. He and two brothers: Martial, the elder, was a good Latin poet and grammarian; Antonio, the younger, was principal of the Portuguese college of Coimbra, and died in 1548.—Moreri.

Gouge (William), an English divine, was born at Bow, in Middlesex, in 1575. He became fellow of King's college, Cambridge, and in 1608 obtained the living of Blackfriars, London. He was a member of the assembly of divines at Westminster, and often sat therein as moderator. He was also one of the annotators on the bible appointed by that body. He died in 1653. His works are: a Commentary on the Hebrews: an exposition of the Lord's Prayer; the whole armour of God; and other pieces of practical theology of the Calvinistic cast.—Wood's Lives of English Divines.

Gouge (Thomas), a pious divine, and son of the preceding, was born at Bow in 1605, and educated at Eton, and afterwards at King's college, Cambridge, of which he became fellow. In 1638 he obtained the living of St. Sepulchre's London, where he conducted himself with great diligence in his pastoral capacity. At the reformation he was ejected for non-conformity, on which he laid himself out in promoting Christian knowledge among the ignorant poor in Wales, on which good work he expended large sums. He died in 1681, and his funeral sermon was preached by doctor, afterwards archbishop, Tillotson. He wrote some practical religious tracts which were collected into one vol. 8vo.—Calamy.

Goujet (Claude Peter), a French priest, was born at Paris in 1697, and died there in 1767. He wrote Bibliotheque Françoise, 18 vols. 12mo. &c.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Goujon or Gougeon (John), a French sculptor and architect in the reign of Francis I. He was also a good medalist, and his works in this kind are scarce and valuable. Being a protestant, he was shot in the massacre of St. Bartholomew, 1572.—D'Argenville.

Goulart (Simon), a French writer, was born at Paris in 1543. He studied divinity at Geneva, and succeeded Calvin in the ministry. He died in 1628. He wrote a History of the League, and edited a number of considerable works.—Bayle.

Gould (Robert), an English poet, who died in 1709. His works were collected the same year, and published in 2 vols. 8vo.——Gen Biog. Dict.

Goulston (Theodore), an English physician, was born in Northamptonshire, and studied at Merton college, Oxford. He died in 1632, bequeathing 200*l.* for a pathological lecture to be read yearly in the college of physicians.—Wood.

Goulou (John), a French monk, was born at Paris in 1576. He is chiefly known by his furious attack on the letters of Balzac. He translated some of the Greek writers into the French language; and died in 1629.—Bayle. Moreri.

Goupil (James), a physician of the 16th century, was born at Luçon. He studied at Paris, where he became royal professor of physic, on the death of James Sylvius in 1555. He edited several of the Greek medical writers, and translated from the Italian Piccolomini's work on the Sphere of the World. He died in 1564.—Moreri.

Goupy (Joseph), a French artist, celebrated for painting in water-colours, and for excellence in copying the works of others. He died in 1747.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Gourdon (Simon), a French monk, was born at Paris in 1646. At the age of 15 he entered among the canons regular of St. Victor, where he led an ascetic life, and died in 1729. He wrote numerous letters on cases of conscience, hymns, &c.—Moreri.

Gournai (Mary de Jars), a French lady, celebrated for her wit and talents, was born at Paris, of a noble family, in 1566. She was adopted by the celebrated Montaigne, for whose works, which she edited, she had an enthusiastic admiration. She died at Paris in 1645. Her works were published in one volume, 4to —Bayle. Moreri.

Gourville (John Herauld de), was originally valet to the duke de Rochefoucault, who advanced him to several high offices.

He wrote Memoirs of his Life from 1612 to 1698, 5 vols. 12mo. which are full of interesting anecdotes. He died in 1705, aged 80.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Gousset (James), a French protestant divine, was born at Blois in 1635. On the revocation of the edict of Nantz, he became professor of divinity and Hebrew at Groningen, where he died in 1704. His works are: Theological and Critical Strictures on the Proposals for a new Version of the Scriptures; Dissertations in Controversy with the Jews; Theological Lectures on a living and dead Faith; Commentarii Linguæ Hebraicæ, fol. &c.—Moreri.

Goutrieres (James), a lawyer of the seventeenth century, was born at Chaumont in Bassigni, and died in 1638. He wrote De vetere Jure Pontificio Urbis Romæ; De Jure Manium, seu de Ritu, More, et Legibus, prisci Funeris; Tiresias, seu de Cæcitatis Major. et Sapientiæ Cognatione; and De Orbitate toleranda.—Moreri.

Goux de la Boulaye (Francis le), a famous traveller, was born about 1610 in Anjou. He went through several countries in Asia and Africa as a Mahomedan, and in Europe as a Catholic. On his return he published an account of his travels, 4to. 1653. In 1668 he was sent ambassador to the great mogul, and died in Persia of a fever the year following.—Moreri.

Gouye (Thomas), a French jesuit and eminent mathematician, was born at Dieppe in 1650, and died at Paris in 1725. He wrote Mathematical and Philosophical Observations, 2 vols. 8vo. He must not be confounded with Gouye de Longuemare, who wrote Memoirs and Dissertations to illustrate the History of France, and died in 1763.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Gower (John), an early English poet, was born in Yorkshire about 1320. He became eminent as a professor of law in the Inner Temple; and is supposed to have been chief justice of the common pleas. He was a liberal benefactor to the church of St. Saviour's, Southwark, where his monument still remains. He died in 1402. His works are of the grave kind, whence his friend Chaucer styles him the Moral Gower. They consist of three parts: Speculum Meditantis; Vox Clamantis; Confessio Amantis. They were printed first by Caxton in 1483.—Biog. Brit.

Goyen (John van), an eminent painter, was born at Leyden in 1596, and died in 1656. He painted landscapes, battles, and sea-pieces, in a beautiful manner.—Pilkington.

Gozon (Deodati), grand-master of the order of St. John of Jerusalem, was celebrated for his courage and other virtues. A fabulous story is told of his killing a dragon of a monstrous kind, that infested the island of Rhodes. He died 1353.—Vertot's Knights of Malta.

Gozzi (count Gaspar), a Venetian nobleman, celebrated for his literary talents. He was born in 1713, and died in 1786. Besides lyric and satirical poems of merit, he conducted a periodical paper called L'Osservatore, similar to the English Spectator, Tatler, &c. All his works were published at Venice in 1794, 12 vols. 8vo.

Graaf (Regnier de), an eminent physician, was born at Schoonhoven in Holland in 1641, and died in 1673, leaving several works which do honour to his memory. Two editions of them have been published, in one vol. 8vo. at Leyden, the last in 1705.—Moreri.

Graaf (Barent), a painter, was born at Amsterdam in 1628, and died in 1709. He excelled in painting landscapes.—Pilkington.

Graaw (Henry), a native of Hoorn, and a disciple of van Campen. He was a good historical painter, and died in 1682, aged 55.—Ibid.

Grabe (John Ernest), a learned divine, was born in 1666, at Koningsberg in Prussia. He devoted himself to the study of divinity: and having read the works of the fathers, became so convinced of the necessity of a regular succession in the ministry, that he left his native country with the design of embracing popery. On the road, three tracts, written by the order of the elector of Brandenburg, in answer to the memorial which he had left explaining his reasons for quitting the college, were presented to him; and Grabe changed his mind, so far as to hold a conference at Berlin with Spener, the author of one of the tracts; the result of which was, that he was prevailed on to go to England, where the ecclesiastical succession is maintained, without the superstitions of popery. Here he received considerable patronage, and the university of Oxford conferred on him the degree of D. D. He also entered into orders, and published several valuable works, the principal of which is, an edition of the Septuagint from the Alexandrian MS. in the royal library. He died in 1719, and was buried in Westminster abbey.—Life by Dr. Hickes.

Gracchus (Tiberius and Caius), were sons of Sempronius Gracchus, by Cornelia the daughter of Scipio. They were educated with great care by their mother, and were celebrated for their eloquence, their zeal for the cause of the people, and their misfortunes. The elder, after establishing the agrarian law, and enjoying a temporary success, was slain through the intrigues of the patricians, B. C. 133, and the younger was killed some time after.—Plutarch. Univ. Hist.

Gracchus (Sempronius), was exiled to an island on the coast of Africa, for his connection with Julia the daughter of Augustus, and assassinated 14 years afterwards by order of Tiberius, who also caused Julia to be put to death.—Ibid.

Gracchus (Rutilius), a Roman poet of the tenth century. He was a poet of considerable merit, but of an extravagant turn of mind, and died in great misery.—Moreri.

Gracian (Balthazar), a Spanish jesuit, who died rector of the college of Tarragona in 1658. He wrote the Hero, 1617; Reflections on the Political Conduct of Ferdinand the Catholic; a Treatise on Witty Conceptions; Meditations on the Sacrament: all in the Spanish language.—Moreri.

Gradenigo (Peter), doge of Venice in 1290. He changed the government of that city from a form entirely popular to an aristocracy, and died in 1298.—Moreri.

Græcinus (Julius), a Roman senator, was a native of Forum Julii, now Frejus. He was distinguished by his eloquence and virtue, and was put to death by Caligula for refusing to be the accuser of Marcus Silanus. He was the father of Julius Agricola, and wrote a book on agriculture.—Tacit. Vit. Agric.

Græme (John), a Scotch poet, was born in 1748, and died in the 22d year of his age. His poems, consisting of elegies and miscellaneous pieces, were printed at Edinburgh, in one vol. 8vo. in 1773.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Grævius (John George), an eminent critic, was born at Naumburg in Saxony, in 1632. He succeeded his friend Gronovius in the professorship of history at Deventer, from whence he was invited to Utrecht, where he died in 1703. He published several valuable editions of the classics, and compiled two excellent works: Thesaurus Antiquitatum Romanorum, 12 vols. fol.; and Thesaurus Antiquitatum Italicorum, 6 vols. fol.—Moreri.

Grafigny (Frances), an ingenious lady, was born at Nanci about 1694. Her husband was chamberlain to the duke of Lorrain; but being of a brutal disposition, she separated herself from him, and went to live with the wife of the marshal Richelieu at Paris, where she was greatly admired for her talents, and died in 1758. She wrote the Letters of a Peruvian; a dramatic piece called Cenie, and another named La Fille de Aristide.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Grafton (Richard), an English historian, was born at London in the reign of Henry VIII. and died in that of Elizabeth. He compiled a Chronicle, and large History of the Assayers of England, and Kings of the same, deduced from the Creation of the World.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Graham (George), an eminent mechanic, was born at Gratwick in Cumberland, in 1675. He was journeyman and successor to Tompion, the celebrated clock-maker, and distinguished himself not only by the accuracy of his timepieces, but by the invention of several valuable instruments for astronomical observations. The great mural arch in the observatory of Greenwich was made under his inspection, and divided by his own hand. He invented the sector with which Dr. Bradley discovered two new motions in the fixed stars. He furnished the members of the French academy, who were sent to the north to measure a degree of the meridian, with the instruments for that purpose. Mr. Graham was a member of the royal society, to which he communicated several useful discoveries. He died in 1751, and was interred in Westminster abbey.—Hutchinson's History of Cumberland.

Grain (John Baptist le), a French historian, was born at Paris in 1565, and died in 1642. He wrote the History of Henry IV., and that of Lewis XIII., under the title of decades.—Moreri.

Graindorge (Andrew), a physician and philosopher of the sect of Epicurus, was born at Caen in Normandy in 1616. Among his works is a curious Treatise on Fire, Light, and Colours. He died at the age of 60.—Moreri.

Grainger (James), a poet and physician, was born in 1724, at Dunse, in the county of Berwick, and served his apprenticeship to a surgeon at Edinburgh. He afterwards acted in that capacity in the army, and in 1748 took his doctor's degree, and settled in London. His practice, however, was not considerable; and he engaged as tutor to a young gentleman, whom he accompanied to the island of St. Kitt's, in the West Indies, where he died in 1767. He wrote an Ode on Solitude; Bryan and Pereene, a ballad; the Sugar Cane, in blank verse; and translated the Elegies of Tibullus into English verse. His medical works are, Historia Febris Anomalæ Batavæ, an. 1764; and a Treatise on the West India Diseases, 8vo.—Life by Dr. Anderson.

Gramaye (John Baptist), provost of Arnheim, and historiographer of the Low Countries, was a native of Antwerp. He died at Lubeck in 1635. His most valuable work is entitled, Peregrinatio Belgica.—Moreri.

Grammond (Gabriel, lord of), president of the parliament of Thoulouse, and author of a history of the wars of Lewis XIII. against his protestant subjects. He died in 1654.—Ibid.

Gramont (Antony, duke of), marshal of France, an illustrious warrior and courtier in the reign of Louis XIV. was descended from the noble family of Gramont in Navarre, and related to cardinal Richelieu by marriage. He wrote two volumes of Memoirs, and died in 1678, aged 74.—Ibid.

Gramont (Philibert, count of), son of the preceding, was a celebrated favourite at the English court after the restoration. He served with reputation under the prince of Condé and marshal Turenne, and died in 1707. His well-known memoirs were written by count Hamilton, from information furnished by himself.—Ibid.

Granby (John Manners, marquis of), a famous English general, was the eldest son of the duke of Rutland, and commanded with honour during the seven years war in Germany, and after the peace of 1763 retired to a private life, greatly beloved by all ranks of people for his many virtues. He died in 1770, aged 50.—Ann. Register.

GRANCOLAS (John), a French divine, was born at Paris, and became a doctor of the Sorbonne. He died in 1732. His works are, a Treatise on Liturgies; the Ancient Sacramentary of the Church; an Historical Commentary on the Roman Breviary; a Critique on Ecclesiastical Authors; and a Concise History of the Church in the City of Paris. He also translated into French the works of St. Cyril.—Moreri.

GRAND (Antony le), a Cartesian philosopher of the 17th century, was the author of several works, the principal of which are a Sacred History from the Creation to the Time of Constantine the Great; Institutio Philosophiæ secundum Principia Ren. Descartes.—Moreri.

GRAND (Joachim le), a political writer, who died at Paris in 1733, aged 80. His works are, History of the Divorce of Henry VIII. and Catharine of Arragon, 3 vols. 12mo.; on the Succession of the Crown of France by Agnates.—Ibid.

GRAND (Marc Antony le), a French actor and poet. He was the author of several comedies, and died at Paris in 1728. His works are in 4 vols. 12mo.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

GRAND (Louis le), a French divine, was born at Luzigni, in the diocese of Autun, and became doctor of the Sorbonne. He died in 1780. His works are, Prælectiones Theologicæ de Deo, 2 vols. 12mo; De Incarnatione Verbi Divini, 2 vols. 12mo.; and De Ecclesia Christi, 8vo.—Ibid.

GRAND (Peter le), a captain of a French privateer belonging to Dieppe, who made himself famous by his courage. In 1640, with a small vessel of four guns and 28 men, he took a Spanish ship of 54 guns, which he conducted safe into a French port.—Ibid.

GRANDET (Joseph), a French priest, and biographical writer, was born at Angers in 1646, and died there in 1724. He wrote several lives of persons eminent for their piety.—Moreri.

GRANDI (Francis Lewis), an Italian abbot and mathematician, was born at Cremona, in 1671. He was successively professor of philosophy at Florence and Pisa, and abbot of St. Michael at Pisa, where he died in 1742. He wrote several works on mathematical subjects.—Ibid.

GRANDIER (Urban), a French priest, who was burnt on the charge of magic. He was born at Bovere, near Sable, and bred a jesuit. The superiors of his order gave him the living of St. Peter at Loudon, and a prebend in the cathedral. His talents as a preacher excited the envy of the monks, which was aggravated by his preaching against them, and in 1629 a plot was formed to ruin him by the charge of his seducing maids and married women. Though the accusation was weak, the bishop suspended Grandier, who appealed to the parliament and was acquitted. He then returned to Loudon in triumph, but his enemies formed another conspiracy against him, which proved successful. Some of the nuns in the Ursuline convent were taught to act as persons possessed, and to accuse Grandier with having practised magical arts upon them. The farce was badly played, but the monks having gained cardinal Richelieu to their side, Grandier was condemned and burnt alive, 1634.—Bayle. Moreri.

GRANDIN (Martin), a doctor of the Sorbonne, who published a Course of Theology, in 6 vols. 4to.; died at Paris in 1691, at the age of 87.—Ibid.

GRANGE (Joseph de Chancel de la), a French writer, celebrated for his talents, adventures, and misfortunes; the latter of which he drew upon himself by a satire against the duke of Orleans. He wrote several tragedies, and died in 1758, at the age of 82.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

GRANGE (M. de la), a French critic, known by a translation of Lucretius, and another of Seneca. He was born at Paris in 1738, and died in 1775.—Ibid.

GRANGER (James), an English divine, who published a valuable work entitled, The Biographical History of England, in 4 vols. 8vo. He was vicar of Shiplake in Oxfordshire, and was seized with an apoplectic fit while administering the Lord's supper in his church, and died the next morning, April 15, 1776.—Gent. Mag.

GRANT (Francis, lord Cullen), a Scotch judge, was descended from an ancient family, and born about 1660. He wrote a treatise to prove that James had abdicated the throne. He was created a baronet by queen Anne, and appointed a judge. He died in the 66th year of his age.—Gen. Biog. Brit.

GRANT (Patrick), a judge in Scotland, was born at Edinburgh in 1698; in 1754 he was made one of the lords of session, with the title of lord Preston-Grange. He wrote several tracts against the rebellion in 1745. He died at Edinburgh in 1762.—Ibid.

GRANVILLE (George, baron Lansdown), a nobleman of considerable talents, was the son of Bernard Greenvile, or Granville, and the grandson of the famous sir Bevil Greenvile. He was born in Cornwall in 1667, and at the age 12 was sent to Trinity college, Cambridge. In 1685 he wrote some poetical pieces on the accession of James II. After the revolution he lived retired for a considerable time in amusing himself in literary composition. In 1686 was acted with great applause, his tragedy of Heroic Love, which was followed by the dramatic poem of the British Enchanters. On the accession of queen Anne he obtained a seat in parliament, and in 1710 was made secretary at war.

The same year he married a daughter of the earl of Jersey, and was soon after created a peer, by the title of lord Lansdowne, baron of Bideford. The accession of George II. deprived him of his place, and in 1715 he was sent to the Tower on suspicion of being concerned in a plot against the government. He obtained his release in 1717, and afterwards went to France, where he resided some years. He died in 1735, leaving four daughters. His works were published in 2 vols. 4to. 1732.—Biog. Brit. Johnson's Poets.

GRAPALDUS (Francis Marius), a native of Parma, in the 16th century, who wrote a curious book which describes all the parts of a house and has been often printed.—Moreri.

GRAS (Anthony le), a French priest, who published translations into French of Cornelius Nepos, and of the works of some of the fathers. He died in 1761, aged 70.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

GRASWINKEL (Theodore), a learned civilian, was born at Delft in 1600, and died at Mechlin in 1666. He wrote, Liberas Veneta, seu Venetorum in se & suo imperandi Jus; for which the Venetian state created him a knight of St. Mark. He was also the author of a work against Buchanan entitled, De Jure Majestatis; and other learned treatises.—Bayle. Moreri.

GRATAROLUS (William), a physician of the 16th century, was born at Bergamo, in Italy, and practised physic with great success at Padua, till he was converted to the Protestant religion, when he retired to Basil. He died in 1562. He was a voluminous writer.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

GRATIAN, a Roman emperor, was the son of Valentinian I. by his wife Severa, and born in 359. His father took him as his associate in the empire when he was only eight years old. In his seventeenth year he succeeded to the throne, on the death of his father, and the army elected as his partner, Valentinian II. his younger brother. The beginning of his reign was distinguished by several cruelties, particularly the murder of his general Theodosius. Gratian defeated the Goths, and exerted himself with energy and success in defending the empire, but was put to death in a revolt, in Gaul, A. D. 383.—Gibbon. Univ. Hist.

GRATIAN, a private soldier, was crowned emperor by the legions in Britain, about 407, and put to death four months afterwards by the same troops.—Moreri.

GRATIAN, a benedictine monk in the 12th century, was a native of Chiusi, in Tuscany. He employed 24 years in compiling an abridgment of the canon law, commonly called Gratian's Decretal, which has been several times printed.—Moreri.

GRATIUS (Faliscus), a Latin poet, supposed to be contemporary with Ovid. He wrote a poem, entitled, Cynegeticon, or the Art of Hunting with Dogs, printed at Leipsic in 1659, 4to.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

GRATIUS (Ortuinus), a learned German, was a native of the bishopric of Munster. He was the author of several works, and died in 1542.—Moreri.

GRAVELOT (Henry Francis Bourguignon), an eminent engraver, was born at Paris in 1699. He resided many years in England, and died at Paris in 1773. He wrote a book on perspective. His engravings are very excellent.—Europ. Mag.

GRAVEROL (Francis), a French advocate, was born at Nismes in 1635. He was the author of several works, among which is the Sorberiana. He died in 1694.—Moreri.

GRAVES (Richard), an ingenious divine, was born at Micleton, in Gloucestershire, in 1715. After receiving his education at Abington school, he removed to Pembroke college, Oxford. In 1736 he was elected fellow of All Souls, and applied to the study of physic, which he afterwards renounced for divinity, and in 1740 entered into holy orders. In 1750 he obtained the rectory of Claverton near Bath. In 1763 Mr. Allen of Prior-park presented him to the living of Kilmersdon and obtained for him the appointment of chaplain to lady Chatham. Mr. Graves died at Claverton in 1804. He wrote, The Festoon, or Collection of Epigrams 12mo.; Lucubrations in prose and rhyme under the assumed name of Peter of Pomfret; The Spiritual Quixote, a novel in ridicule of the methodists, 3 vols.; Columella, or the distressed Anchoret; a collection of political pieces under the title of Euphrosyne: Eugenius, or anecdotes of the Golden Vale; Recollections of some particulars in the life of Mr. Shenstone; Plexippus, or the aspiring Plebeian; Life of Commodus from the Greek of Herodian; Hiero on the condition of Royalty from Xenophon; The meditations of Antoninus from the Greek; The Reveries of Solitude; The Coalition, or Rehearsal of the pastoral opera of Echo and Narcissus: Sermons on various subjects; The Farmer's Son, as a counterpart to Mr. Ansley's Farmer's Daughter; The Invalid with the Means of enjoying long Life; and Senilities.—Monthly Mag.

GRAVESANDE (William James le s'), a Dutch mathematician, was born at Bois-le-Duc in 1688. He was bred a civilian, and practised some time at the bar with reputation, but about 1715 he became professor of mathematics and natural philosophy at Leyden where he taught the Newtonian system. He died in 1742. His principal works are, 1. Physices Elementa Mathematica, &c.; 2. Matheseos Universalis Elementa, &c.; 3. Philosophiæ Newtonianæ Institutiones; 4. Introductio ad Philosophiam, Metaphysicam et Logicam continens. —Hutton's Math. Dict.

GRAVINA (Peter), an Italian poet, who was admired for the sweetness and delicacy of his poetry. He died in 1528, at the age of 75.—Moreri.

GRAVINA (John Vincent), an eminent lawyer, was born at Rogiano, in Italy, in 1664. He was professor of canon law in the college of Sapienza at Rome, and died there in 1718. He was the author of many learned works; the principal of which is entitled, De Ortu & Progressu Juris Civilis, in three books.—Moreri. Tiraboschi.

GRAUNT (Edward), master of Westminster school, who published a work entitled, Græcæ linguæ Spicilegium, et Institutio Græcæ Grammaticæ. He died in 1601.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

GRAUNT (John), author of a celebrated book entitled, Observations on the Bills of Mortality, was born in London, in 1620. He was a haberdasher in the city, but dedicated a large portion of his time to study, and in 1661 published the work mentioned above. He was a fellow of the royal society, and one of the managers of the New River company. He died in 1674.—Biog. Brit.

GRAY (Thomas), an English poet, was the son of a money-scrivener in London, where he was born in 1716. He was educated at Eton, from whence he removed to Peter-house, Cambridge. In 1738 he entered of the Inner Temple, but never engaged much in the study of the law. The year following he accompanied Mr. Horace Walpole in the Tour of Europe; but a difference arising between them, they parted in Italy in 1741, and Mr. Gray returned to England, where his father died soon after. He now took up his residence chiefly at Cambridge, where, in 1768, he became professor of modern history. He died of the gout in 1771, and was buried with his family at Stoke Pogeis, in Buckinghamshire. The odes of Gray possess uncommon merit, and his Elegy in a Country Church-yard has obtained almost an unexampled run. His letters are instructive and entertaining. —Mason's Life of Gray.

GRAZZINI (Anthony Francis), surnamed Il Lasca, one of the founders of the academy Della Crusca, was a native of Florence. He wrote six comedies, and a variety of tales. He died in 1583.—Moreri.

GREATRAKES (Valentine), a native of Ireland, deserves to be mentioned for the extraordinary stories which are told of his curing diseases by touching the parts affected. Mr. Boyle, and other distinguished persons attested, several of his cures, and gave a high character of Mr. Greatrakes for virtue and piety. He died about 1680. —Granger.

GREAVES (John), a mathematician and antiquary, was born at Colmore, in Hampshire, in 1602, and after receiving a grammatical education in his native country, he was removed to Baliol College, Oxford. In 1621 he was chosen fellow of Merton college, and in 1628 took the degree of M. A. In 1630 he became professor of geometry in Gresham college and was soon afterwards sent by archbishop Laud to the east, where he made a large collection of oriental MSS, coins, and medals. He also took a careful survey and measurement of the Egyptian pyramids, and made many astronomical observations. After his return in 1640 he was chosen Savilian professor of astronomy at Oxford, but was obliged to resign the professorship by the persecution of the parliamentary visitors. He died in 1652. He wrote Pyramidographia, or a Description of the Pyramids in Egypt; a discourse on the Roman foot and denarius; and other valuable works.—Biog. Brit.

GRECOURT (John Baptist Joseph Villert de), a French poet, was born at Tours in 1683. He was bred to the church, which he afterwards quitted, and led a dissipated life; but his company was courted by people of rank, on account of his wit. He died in 1743. His works are Tales, Epigrams, Songs, Fables, and other light pieces. —Nouv. Dict. Hist.

GREEN (Robert), an English poet, was a man of wit and talents, but a gross libertine. He is said to have been the first Englishman who wrote for bread. He died in 1592 of a surfeit.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

GREEN (John), an English bishop, was born in 1706 at Hull, in Yorkshire. After obtaining several church preferments he was raised to the see of Lincoln. He died at Bath in 1779. He wrote some sermons and religious tracts.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

GREEN (Matthew), an English poet, was born in London in 1696. He was bred a dissenter, which sect he quitted, and ridiculed in his admirable poem of the Spleen. He obtained a place in the custom-house, and died in 1737. His poems, which possess great merit, were published in Dodsley's collection, and together in 1. vol. in 1796.—Europ. Mag.

GREEN (William), an English divine, was educated at Clarehall, Cambridge, where he took his degree in arts and was chosen fellow. He was presented to the rectory of Hadingham, in Norfolk, and died in 1794. Mr. Green published, 1. The song of Deborah, reduced to metre; with a new translation and Commentary, 4to. 2. A new translation of the prayer of Habakkuk, the prayer of Moses, and the 139th psalm with a Commentary, 4to. 3. A new translation of the Psalms from the Hebrew Original with notes, 8vo. 4. A new Translation of Isaiah vii. 13 to the end of liii. with notes, &c. 4to. 5. Poetical parts of the Old Testament newly translated from the Hebrew, with notes, 4to.—Europ. Mag.

GREENE (Dr. Maurice), professor of music at Cambridge, was a native of London. He began the work of correcting and reforming the church music, greatly corrupted by transcribers; which undertaking was completed by his friend Dr. Boyce. He died in 1755.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Greene (Edward Burnaby), a writer of some merit, who published translations of Anacreon and Pindar, and various poems and essays. He died in 1788.—European Mag.

Greenville (sir Richard) a gallant officer, was the son of sir Roger Greenville, and born in Devonshire or Cornwall about 1540. He served in the imperial army in Hungary against the Turks, and on his return engaged in the reduction of Ireland. In 1751 he represented Cornwall in parliament; about which time he received the honour of knighthood. In 1485 he undertook an expedition to America, and made some discoveries. In 1591 he was appointed vice admiral of a squadron sent out to intercept a rich Spanish fleet. He proceeded as far as the Western Islands, and while there a powerful squadron was sent from Spain to escort the plate fleet. On their approach the English admiral, Thomas Howard, proceeded to sea; but Greenville, in the Revenge, staying to take on board some of his sick crew, was surrounded by the whole Spanish fleet. He defended his ship with the utmost bravery, and after receiving several wounds, was about to sink her, but was carried on board the Spanish admiral's ship, where he died three days after—Campbell's Lives of the Admirals.

Greenville (sir Bevil), grandson of the above, was born at Stow, the family seat in Cornwall, in 1596. He was educated at Exeter college, under Dr. afterwards bishop Prideaux. In the rebellion he distinguished himself by zealously defending the royal cause, and after several gallant actions was killed in the battle of Lansdown, near Bath, July 5, 1643.—Clarendon.

Gregory (the Great), pope, was born about 544. He was appointed præfect of the city, and held other civil dignities but being inclined to a religious life, he retired to the monastery of St. Andrew, of which he became abbot. On the death of Pelagius, in 590, he was elected pope. He died in 604. He sent Austin the monk to convert the English to christianity.—Bower.

Gregory II. (St.), succeeded Constantine in the pontificate in 715, and died in 731.—Ibid.

Gregory III. a native of Syria succeeded to the pontificate in 731, and died in 741. This pope sent legates to Charles Martel to demand succour against the Lombards; which embassy is considered as the origin of the apostolic nuncios in France.—Ibid.

Gregory IV. a native of Rome, succeeded to the pontificate in 827, and died in 844. He was greatly esteemed for his learning and piety.

Gregory V. a native of Germany and a relation of the emperor Otho, was elevated to the pontificate in 996. An antipope, named John XVII. was set up by Crescentius, consul of Rome; but was expelled by the emperor. Gregory died in 999.

Gregory VI. a native of Rome, was elected pope in 1044. Finding the lands and revenues of his church greatly diminished by usurpations, and the roads infested by robbers, Gregory acted with such vigour, that a powerful party was raised against him by those who had been accustomed to live by plunder. At a council, held at Sutri in 1046, Gregory abdicated the pontificate.

Gregory VII. was the son of a carpenter of Soano, in Tuscany, and succeeded to the pontificate in 1073. This pope formed vast projects for the reform of the church, and in attempting to execute them assumed unexampled powers. But he was embroiled with the emperor Henry IV. and after a violent struggle, retired to Salerno, where he died in 1085.

Gregory VIII. was a native of Benevento. He succeeded Urban III. in 1187; and died the same year, after having exhorted the christian princes to undertake a new crusade. He is not to be confounded with the antipope Bourdin, who assumed the same name.

Gregory IX. was nephew of Innocent III. of the family of the counts of Segni. He was elected pope in 1227, and died in 1241. He caused a new crusade to be undertaken, in which the emperor Frederic II. engaged, notwithstanding which he twice excommunicated that prince.

Gregory X. of the illustrious family of Visconti, was elected pope in 1271, at which time he was in the Holy Land. He died in 1276. He assembled a council at Lyons, to promote a union between the eastern and western churches, and other objects.

Gregory XI. (Peter Roger), a native of Limousin in France, was a nephew of Clement VI. and son of the count of Beaufort. He was elevated to the pontificate in 1370, and died in 1377. He was a patron of learning, and endeavoured to reconcile the princes of christendom, and to reform the religious societies. He transferred the papal see from Avignon to Rome, where he died.

Gregory XII. (Angelo Corario), a native of Venice, was raised to the pontificate in 1406, during the schism in the east; Benedict XIII. being the other pope. Both were deposed by a council held at Pisa, and Alexander V. elected in their stead. Gregory submitted, and laid aside the pontifical dignity. He died in 1417, at the age of 92.

Gregory XIII. a native of Bologna, succeeded Pius V. in 1579. He embellished

Rome with many fine buildings; but that which more particularly marks his government is the reform of the calendar, which goes by his name. He contributed greatly to correct and amend Gratian's Decretals; which he enriched with learned notes. He died in 1585, at the age of 83.

Gregory XIV. (Nicholas Sfondrate), succeeded Urban VII. in 1590. He was the son of a senator of Milan. He involved himself in an unsuccessful war against Henry IV. of France, and died in 1591 at the age of 57.

Gregory XV. (Alexander Ludovisi), a Bolognese, descended of an antient family, was elected pope in 1621, and died in 1623. He wrote several works; among which is one entitled, Epistola ad Regem Persarum, Schah Abbas, cum Notis Hegalsoni, 8vo. 1627.—Bower. Platina. Moreri.

Gregory (George Florence), commonly called Gregory of Tours, a Romish saint, was born in 544, in Auvergne. He was chosen bishop of Tours in 573, and in 578 distinguished himself in a council at Paris. He is said to have converted Chilperic from pelagianism. He died in 595. Gregory was the author of a History of the Franks, in ten books; and other works.—Cave. Moreri.

Gregory (John), a learned divine, was born at Agmondesham, in Buckinghamshire, in 1607. He became a servitor of Christchurch college, Oxford, where he proceeded to the degree of M.A. and became one of the college chaplains. Dr. Duppa, bishop of Chichester, gave him a prebend, as he also did in that of Salisbury on his translation thither. But he lost all in the rebellion, and died poor near Oxford, in 1646. He was the author of curious notes and observations on some passages of Scripture, which, with his posthumous tracts, were printed in quarto. He is not to be confounded with Edmund Gregory, a divine, who wrote the Historical Anatomy of Christian Melancholy, and died about 1650.—Wood. Biog. Brit.

Gregory (James), a celebrated mathematician, was born at Aberdeen in 1638. He early discovereda genius for the mathematics, which he cultivated with eagerness in the Marischal college of Aberdeen. In 1663 he published his Optica Promota, seu abdita Radiorum Reflexorum & Refractorum Mysteria, geometrice enucleata, &c. 4to. In this work he announced the invention of the reflecting telescope, which spread his name over Europe. Soon after this he made a tour to Italy, and resided some years at Padua, where he published his Vera Circuli & Hyperbolæ Quadratura, &c. in which appeared an account of his discovery of an infinitely converging series for the areas of the circle and hyperbola, and the mode of computing them. Soon after his return to England he was chosen a fellow of the Royal Society: and engaged in a controversy with Huygens on the subject of his treatise on the quadrature of the circle. In 1668 he was appointed professor of mathematics in the university of St. Andrews. He had an amicable controversy with Newton concerning the reflecting telescope: in the course of which he threw out the idea of a burning concave mirror, which came into universal repute. In 1674 he became professor of mathematics at Edinburgh, where he died in the year following, after being struck with sudden blindness as he was lecturing. His Optics were translated into English by Dr. Desagulieres, and several of his papers are in the Philosophical Transactions.—Biog. Brit. Martin's Biog. Philos. Hutton's Math. Dict.

Gregory (David), nephew of the above, was born at Aberdeen in 1661. He completed his education at Edinburgh, where he took the degree of M. A. and in 1684 his merit recommended him to the professorship of mathematics in that university. In 1691, by the recommendation of Newton, he was chosen member of the Royal Society, and elected Savilian professor of astronomy at Oxford. In 1695 he published his Catoptricæ & Dioptricæ Sphericæ Elementa, 8vo. His demonstration of the curve, called the catenarian, appeared in 1697 in the Philosophical Transactions; but his greatest work was published in 1702, and entitled, Astronomiæ Physicæ & Geometricæ Elementa, folio. It was afterwards translated into English in 2 vols. 8vo. In 1703 he published a splendid edition of Euclid's works in folio. Dr. Gregory died while engaged in superintending an edition of Apollonius's Conics in 1710. After his death appeared a treatise on Logarithms, and another on Practical Geometry. His brother James became professor of mathematics at Edinburgh, which he held thirty-three years. His other brother, Charles, was professor of mathematics at St. Andrew's thirty-two years, and was succeeded by his son David, who published a system of arithmetic and algebra in Latin. He died in 1763.—Ibid.

Gregory (John), a physician, was born in 1724, at Aberdeen, where his father, Dr. James Gregory, was professor of medicine in King's college. After studying at his native place he removed to Edinburgh, and from thence to Leyden. In 1745 he obtained the degree of doctor of physic, and became professor of philosophy at Aberdeen, which he exchanged in 1749 for that of physic. About 1751 he settled in London, and was chosen a fellow of the Royal Society. In 1764 he removed to Edinburgh, where in 1766 he was elected professor of physic. He died in 1773. His works are, on the Duties and Offices of a Physician, 8vo.; Elements of the Practice of Physic, 8vo.; a Father's Legacy to his Daughters, 12mo. All his pieces have been collected into four vols. 8vo.—Life prefixed to his works.

GREGORY (Nazianzen), bishop of Constantinople, was born in 324, near Nazianzum, in Cappadocia, of which place his father was bishop. When Julian prohibited the Christians from reading the books of the Gentiles, Nazianzen wrote poems to furnish the Christian youth with subjects for study. In 378 he was appointed, by the council of Antioch, to go to Constantinople to suppress arianism, and was there chosen bishop. He afterwards resigned that see and retired to his native country, where he died in his 66th year. He was one of the ablest champions of the doctrine of the Trintiy, and possessed an acute and sublime genius. The best edition of his works is that of Paris, 1609, 2 vols. folio.—Cave. Moreri.

GREGORY (Nyssen), the youngerbrother of St. Basil, was bishop of Nyssa, in Cappadocia, but was deposed by the arian faction. He drew up the Nicene creed, by order of the council of Constantinople. He died about 400. His works were published at Paris in 1615, in 2 vols. folio.——Cave. Moreri.

GREGORY (Theodorus), surnamed Thaumaturgus, bishop of Neo-Cæsarea, the metropolis of Cappadocia, was a native of that city. He was converted by Origen to christianity. He governed his church with such success, that the power of working miracles was attributed to him, whence he acquired his surname. He died in 265. An edition of his works was published by G. Vossius in 1604, 4to.—Cave. Fabric. Bibl. Græc.

GREGORY of Rimini, a schoolman of the 14th century, who died at Vienna in 1357. He was general of the order of Augustines, and zealously defended the doctrine of Austin on free-will. He wrote Commentaries on the Sentences, and on the Epistles, &c.—Cave. Dupin.

GREGORY of St. Vincent, a Flemish mathematician, was born at Bruges in 1584. He was a jesuit, and died at Ghent in 1667. His greatest work is entitled, Opus Geometricum Quadraturæ Circuli & Sectionum Coni, decem Libris Comprehensum, 1647, 2 vols. folio.—Moreri.

GRENADA (Lewis de), a Spanish monk of the Dominican order, was born at the city of his name in 1504. He refused the archbishopric of Braganza, and devoted himself to a monastic life, of great austerity. He died in 1588. His works evince considerable piety, tinctured with enthusiasm. —Moreri.

GRENAN (Benignus), a poet, and professor of rhetoric at Harcourt, was born at Noyer, in Burgundy in 1681, and died at Paris in 1723. He translated into Latin verse the Lamentations of Jeremiah—Mor.

GRENVILLE (George), an eminent statesman, was born of an antient family in Buckinghamshire, and early obtained a place in parliament, where he distinguished himself by his eloquence. In 1754 he became treasurer of the navy, and in 1757 he brought in his celebrated bill for the more regular payment of the navy. This and his bill for the trial of contested elections, passed in 1770, have immortalized his name as a legislator. He was appointed first ord of the treasury, in 1763 and was succeeded by lord Rockingham in 1765. He died in 1770. Mr. Grenville was the father of the present marquis of Buckingham and lord Grenville.—Notes to Almon's edition of Junius.

GRESHAM (sir Thomas), a celebrated merchant, was descended from an ancient family in Norfolk, and born in 1519 at London. He was bred to trade, but was some time at Caius college, Cambridge, He amassed a large fortune, being successively agent for Edward VI. and Mary and Elizabeth, at Antwerp. He built the royal exchange at his own expence; founded a college in London for lectures in divinity, law, physic, astronomy, geometry, music, and rhetoric; besides endowing many public charities. He died suddenly in 1579. The Gresham lectures are now read in a room over the royal exchange.—Biog. Br.

GRESSET (John Baptist Louis), a French poet, was born at Amiens in 1709, and died in 1777. His poems are elegant, particularly the tale of Ver-vert. His comedy entitled Mechant had a prodigious run. He was director of the French academy, and obtained letters of nobility, and the order of St. Michael.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

GRETSER (James), a Jesuit, born at Marcdorf, in Germany, about 1561. He was professor of divinity at Ingoldstadt, where he died in 1635. His principal performance is entitled De Cruce, 3 vols. 4to. All his works amount to 17 vols. folio.—Moreri.

GREVENBROECK, a Flemish painter of the 17th century. He was celebrated for his sea pieces.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

GREVILLE (Fulke), lord Brooke, a patron of letters and an ingenious writer, was born of an antient family at Beauchamp-court, in Warwickshire, in 1554. He was in great favour with Elizabeth, and was created lord Brooke by James I. who gave him Warwick castle. He founded a history lecture at Cambridge. This accomplished nobleman was stabbed by a servant whom he had reprimanded for an insolent expression; after which the man put an end to himself with the same weapon. This was in 1628. After his lordship's death appeared several of his poetical works, and the life of sir Philip Sidney, written by him. ---Biog. Brit.

GREVIN (James), a French poet and physician, was born in 1538. He was in the service of Margaret of France, duchess of Savoy, and died at Turin at the age of 32.

He was concerned in writing the ingenious poem entitled, The Temple, aimed at Ronsard, who had abused the calvinists.—Moreri.

Grew (Obadiah), an English nonconformist divine. He was a native of Warwickshire, and held the living of St. Michael's at Coventry till the Restoration, when he was ejected, and afterwards imprisoned. He died in 1689. He wrote sermons on the parable of the Prodigal Son, and a Sinner's Justification by Christ, 8vo. —Calamy. Palmer.

Grew (Nehemiah), a learned physician, was the son of the preceding, and born at Coventry. He studied physic in a foreign university, and in 1672 settled in London, where he became a fellow of the Royal Society, which learned body, in 1677, appointed him their secretary. He died in 1711. His principal works are, The Anatomy of Plants, a Catalogue of Rarities belonging to the Royal Society, and Cosmologia Sacra, or a Discourse of the Universe, folio.—Biog. Brit.

Grey (Jane), a celebrated and unfortunate lady, was the daughter of Henry Grey, marquis of Dorset, by Frances Brandon, daughter of the duke of Suffolk and Mary queen dowager of France, and sister to Henry VIII. She was born about 1537, and from her childhood evinced a quick and amiable mind. Her education was liberal, and at the age of fourteen the learned Ascham, on a visit to the family, found her reading Plato's Phædon in Greek. She was also well acquainted with several modern languages. Her religious principles were those of the Reformation, and her virtue and modesty equal to her other accomplishments. When the health of Edward VI. began to decline, Dudley, duke of Northumberland, persuaded him, from a pretended concern for the interests of religion, to bequeath his crown to lady Jane, thus setting aside his sisters Mary and Elizabeth. About the same time the duke effected a marriage between his son, lord Guildford Dudley, and lady Jane Grey. On the death of the king, her father and the duke of Northumberland paid homage to her as queen, much against her wish and entreaty. She was also proclaimed in London with the usual formalities. But this pageantry lasted only a few days: and Mary proving successful, the duke of Northumberland was beheaded, and lady Jane and her husband were sent to the Tower. After being confined some time, the council resolved to put these innocent victims of their father's ambition to death. Lord Guildford suffered first, and as he passed her window, his lady gave him her last adieu. Immediately afterwards she was executed on the same scaffold; suffering with calm resignation, and a firm attachment to the protestant religion, Feb. 12, 1554.—Biog. Brit.

Grey (Dr. Zachary), an English divine, well known for his edition of Hudibras, enriched with a great number of curious and entertaining notes, 2 vols. He also published notes on Shakspeare, 2 vols.; and an answer to Neale's History of the Puritans, in 3 vols. 8vo. He was of a Yorkshire family, and died in 1766, aged 79.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Grey (Richard), a learned English divine, was born in 1693. He was educated at Lincoln college, Oxford, where he took the degree of M. A. in 1718. He obtained successively the livings of Kilncote, Leicester, and Hinton, in Northamptonshire; also a prebend in the cathedral of St. Paul. He died in 1771. His principal works are, 1. Memoria Technica, or a new Method of Artificial Memory, 12mo. 2. a System of English Ecclesiastical Law, 8vo. For this work the university of Oxford conferred on him the degree of D. D. 3. A new and easy Method of learning Hebrew, without Points, 8vo. 4. Liber Jobi in Versiculos Metrica divisus, &c. 5. The Last Words of David, divided according to the metre.—Nichols's Anecdotes of Bowyer.

Gribaldi (Matthew), a learned civilian of Padua in the 16th century, was professor of civil law at Tubingen, and died in 1564.—Bayle.

Gribner (Michael Henry), professor of law at Wittemberg, died in 1734. He published works on Jurisprudence in Latin.

Grierson (Constantia), a woman of extraordinary attainments, was descended of poor parents in the county of Kilkenny, in Ireland. She was well acquainted with Greek and Roman literature, and published editions of Tacitus and Terence. She addressed a Greek epigram to the son of lord Carteret, which nobleman procured her husband a patent to be the king's printer in Ireland; and, as a mark of distinction, caused her life to be inserted in it. She died in 1733, at the age of 27.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Griffet (Henry), a French jesuit, was born at Moulins in 1698. He published an enlarged edition of father Daniel's History of France, 7 vols. 4to. a Treatise on the different Kinds of Proof employed in establishing historical Facts; Sermons, and other Works. He died at Brussels in 1775. —Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Griffier (John), known by the appellation of old Griffier, an eminent painter, was born at Amsterdam in 1658, and died at London in 1718. He succeeded chiefly in landscapes, and painted several views on the Thames. He also etched prints of birds and beasts. His son Robert, called the younger Griffier, was born in England. He was a good landscape painter, and was living in 1713.—Gen. Biog. Dict. Pill.

Griffin, prince of Wales, was the last sovereign of that country previous to its being subjugated by England. He was put to death by order of Edward the Confessor, at London, in 1060.—General Biog. Dict.

Griffiths (Ralph), a man of letters, was born in Shropshire, and settled in London as a bookseller. In 1749 he commenced the Monthly Review, the success of which was very slow for a considerable time; but it made its way gradually to the height of periodical journals. Of this work he was both proprietor and editor, being powerfully assisted from time to time, by the first-rate talents. Many years before his death, he had retired from business to Turnham-green, and obtained, unsolicited, the degree of doctor of laws from an American college. He died aged 83, in 1803. —Monthly Mag. vol. xvi.

Grimani (Domenico), cardinal, was the son of the doge of Venice, where he was born in 1460. He was a patron of learning, and the correspondent of Erasmus. He translated some of the Homilies of Chrysostom into Latin, and died in 1523.—Moreri.

Grimani (Hubert), a painter of Delft, was born in 1599, and died in 1629. He excelled in painting portraits.—Pilkington.

Grimarest (Leonor le Gallois sieur de) a French writer, who died in 1720. He wrote the life of Moliere.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Grimmer (Jacques), a landscape painter, was born at Antwerp in 1510, and died in 1546. His pieces are valuable.—Pilkington.

Grimou, a French painter, who died about the year 1740. His portraits are sought after as cabinet pieces.—Ibid.

Grimston (sir Harbottle), master of the rolls in the reign of Charles I. He was a profound lawyer, and died in 1683, aged 99.

Grindal (Edmund), archbishop of Canterbury, was born at Hensingham in Cumberland in 1519. He was educated at Cambridge, where he obtained a fellowship in Pembroke-hall. Being attached to the principles of the reformation, bishop Ridley made him his chaplain, and precentor of St. Paul's. He was also appointed chaplain to the king, and prebendary of Westminster; but on the accession of Mary he retired to Germany, and settled at Strasburg. When Elizabeth ascended the throne, he returned home, and was employed in revising the Liturgy. In 1559 he was chosen master of Pembroke-hall, and the same year preferred to the see of London, from whence in 1570 he was translated to York, and in 1575 to Canterbury. Two years afterwards he was suspended from his archiepiscopal functions, for refusing to obey the queen's order to suppress prophesyings, or the associations of the clergy to expound the Scriptures. His sequestration was taken off, though he never completely recovered the royal favour. He died at Croydon in 1583. He contributed to Fox's Acts and Monuments.—Life by Strype.

Gringonneur (Jacquemin), a French painter, who is said by some to have been the inventor of cards, but it seems more probable that he only invented, or improved, the painting of them. He died in 1392. —Moreri.

Gringore (Peter), herald at arms to the duke of Lorrain, died in 1544. He was the author of several moral productions in verse.—Ibid.

Grissaunt (William), an English physician, astronomer, and mathematician, in the 4th century. He was suspected of magic and retired to France, where he dedicated himself to the study of medicine. His son became pope Urban V.—Moreri.

Grive (John de la), an eminent French geographer, was born at Sedan in 1689, and died in 1757. He published the Topography of Paris, a Manual of Spherical Trigonometry, and other esteemed works. —Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Grocyn (William), a learned English divine, was born at Bristol in 1442, and died at Maidstone, at the age of 80. He was the friend of Erasmus, and godfather to Lilly the grammarian. A Latin epistle of his to Aldus Manutius is prefixed to Linacre's translation of Proclus de Sphæra. —Wood.

Groditius (Stanislaus), a jesuit of Poland, who published eight volumes of Latin sermons, and died at Cracow in 1613.

Gronovius (John Frederic), a learned critic, was born at Hamburgh in 1611. After travelling through Germany, Italy, and France, he was made professor of Greek and Belles Lettres at Deventer, and next at Leyden, where he died in 1672. He published a Dissertation on the Sylvæ of Statius, a work on the Ecclesiastical Writers, a Treatise on the Sesterce, and various editions of ancient authors.—Moreri.

Gronovius (James), son of the preceding, was born in 1645, at Deventer. He became professor of Greek and History at Leyden, where he died in 1716. He published editions of several of the Classics, which are valuable; but his great work is his Thesaurus Antiquitatum Græcorum, 13 vols. folio.—Ibid.

Gropper (John), a native of Westphalia, was an able polemic. He published Enchiridion Christianæ Religionis, and died at Rome in 1559.—Moreri.

Gros (Peter le), a French sculptor, was born at Paris in 1666, and died at Rome in 1719. His works possess great simplicity and taste. They are mostly at Rome.

Gros (Nicholas le), a divine of Rheims, was born in 1675. Compelled to quit France for his opposition to the bull called Unigenitus, he settled at Utrecht, and was professor of theology at Amersfort. He died in 1751. His writings are principally concerning the Jansenist controversy, and practical divinity.—Moreri.

Grose (Francis), an eminent English antiquary, He illustrated the antiquities of England and Wales, in 4 vols. and of Scotland, in 2 vols. He was executing a work of the same kind relative to Ireland, when he died in Dublin in 1791, at the age of 52. Besides the above, he published a Classical Dictionary of the Vulgar Tongue; also, a volume of Miscellanies, 8vo. and Military Antiquities, 4to.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Grosley (Peter John), a French writer, was born at Troyes in 1718, where he died in 1785. He assisted in the French Encyclopedie, and in the Dictionnaire Historique: besides which he wrote a Description of London, &c.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Grosseteste, or Grosthead (Robert), an English prelate, was born at Stradbrook, in Suffolk, about 1175. He received his education at Oxford and Paris. After enjoying several preferments with great reputation, he was chosen bishop of Lincoln in 1234. He successfully resisted the encroachments of the papal power, and was a great encourager of learning. He died in 1253. His Opuscula Varia were published at Venice in 1514, and his Compendium Sphæræ Mundi in 1508. Some of his discourses and letters are extant.—Life by Dr. Pegge.

Grosteste (Claude), a French protestant clergyman, who came to London on the revocation of the edict of Nantz; and died in 1713. He was minister of the Savoy. He wrote sermons, and a treatise on the Inspiration of the Sacred Books.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Grosvenor (Benjamin), a dissenting minister, was born in London in 1675, and became minister of the congregation in Crosby square 1704. In 1716 he was elected one of the preachers at the merchants' lecture at Salters'-hall. He died in 1758. Dr. Grosvenor published several sermons, and two tracts that have been very useful; viz. 1. An Essay on Health; 2. the Mourner; which have gone through many editions.—Funeral Sermon by Barker.

Grotius (Hugo), an illustrious writer, was the son of John de Groot, (the family name), a burgomaster of Delft, where the son was born in 1583. At the age of eight years he composed Latin verses of great merit. In his twelfth year he was sent to Leyden under the care of Francis Junius. In 1598 he accompanied the ambassador Barnevelt to the court of Henry IV. of France, who was so pleased with Grotius, that he gave him his picture and a gold chain; while in France he took the degree of doctor of laws. The year following he commenced practice as an advocate, and pleaded his first cause at Delft. Soon afterwards he published an edition of Martianus Capella, which was well received by the learned. This was followed by a translation of a work of Stevinus, on finding a ship's place at sea. His edition of the Phenomena of Aratus appeared in 1600, and about the same time he composed Latin Tragedies on sacred subjects. He was now appointed historiographer of the United Provinces, and advocate-general of the treasury for Holland and Zealand. In 1609 he published his famous book on the liberty of the sea, which was answered by the learned Selden. About this time appeared his Treatise de Antiquitate Reipublicæ Batavæ, to prove the independence of Batavia of the Romans. In 1613 he accepted the post of pensioner of Rotterdam, by which means he obtained a seat in the states of Holland. About this time he was sent to England to settle a dispute on the subject of the Greenland fishery. During the contests which arose in Holland on account of religion, Grotius sided with the Arminians, for which he was condemned to perpetual imprisonment in the castle of Louvestein, from whence he was delivered by his wife. This excellent woman having obtained leave to convey away a chest of books, for fear her husband should injure his health by over-study, Grotius was placed in the chest, and taken out of the castle. As the soldiers were carrying the chest, one of them said it was so heavy that there must be an Arminian in it; to which madame Grotius answered, that there were indeed many Arminian books. When the chest was brought out of the castle, it was conveyed to Gorcum, from whence Grotius went to Antwerp, and afterwards to France, where he obtained a pension. In 1622 he published his Apology, which so stung the States, that they ordered it to be burnt, and the author to be seized wherever he could be found. In 1625 he finished his famous book De Jure Belli & Pacis, which greatly extended his reputation. In 1613 he accepted an invitation from count Oxenstiern, and went to Stockholm, where he was appointed counsellor of state, and ambassador to the court of France. He filled this important station, amidst circumstances of extreme difficulty, with honour to himself, and satisfaction to the court which he represented. In 1645 he quitted France, and went to Holland, where he was honourably received. From Amsterdam he sailed to Sweden, and was welcomed in a cordial manner by queen Christina. He died on his journey to Holland, at Rostock, August 28, the same year. His remains were interred at Delft. The works of this great man are too many to be enumerated here; but we must mention his treatise on the Truth of the Christian Religion, which has become a standard book in all universities, for students in divinity: his Annales & Historiæ de Rebus Belgicis; and his Commentaries on the Scriptures; these last are an immortal monument of learning. In his religious sentiments he coincided with the church of England, and advised his wife to join in communion with it. His sons Cornelius and Diederic entered into the army. Peter was bred to the law, and became pensionary of Amsterdam. His brother William was a learned man, and wrote some books on loyal subjects.—Life of Grotius by Burigny.

GROVE (Henry), a nonconformist divine, was born at Taunton in Somersetshire in 1683. After receiving a liberal education at London he entered upon the ministerial office, and in 1706 became a tutor in the academy at Taunton, which flourished greatly under his management. He died at Taunton in 1738. Besides some excellent Sermons, he wrote Nos. 588, 601, 626, and 685, of the Spectator, an Essay on the Immateriality of the Soul, Essay on the terms of Christian Communion, the Evidence of our Saviour's Resurrection considered, Thoughts concerning the Proof of a Future State, a Discourse on the Nature and Design of the Lord's Supper, &c. He is not to be confounded with Joseph Grove, who wrote the Life of Cardinal Wolsey, and died in 1764.—Gen. Biog. Dict. Biog. Br.

GRUCHIUS (Nicholas), descended from a noble family of Rouen, was the first who lectured on Aristotle in Greek. He translated Castanedo's History of the Indies; and wrote a treatise entitled, De Comitiis Romanorum; and tracts against Sigonius. He died at Rochelle in 1572.—Moreri.

GRUDIUS (Nicholas Everard), treasurer of Brabant, who wrote poetry, sacred and profane, in Latin. He died in 1571.—Ibid.

GRUE (Thomas), a Frenchman, who distinguished himself by translations of English works into French, among which are Ross's History of all Religions, and Rogers's Gate opened to the Knowledge of Paganism. He died at the end of the 17th century.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

GRUGET (Claude), a native of Paris, who lived in the 16th century, and published translations of Italian and Spanish works into French; and among others the Heptameron of the Queen of Navarre.—Ibid.

GRUNER (John Frederic), an eminent scholar and theologian, was born at Cobourg in 1723, and died in 1778. He was the author of many works. He published a new edition of Cœlius Sedulius, with commentaries; Miscellanea Sacra; an Introduction to Roman Antiquities; and Critical Remarks on the Classics.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

GRUTER (John), or Gruterus, an illustrious philologist, was born in 1560, at Antwerp. His father, who was a burgomaster, fled to England, on account of his religion, taking his son, who was an infant, with him. Here he received his education under his mother, who was a very learned woman. From Cambridge he went to Leyden, where he took his degrees in law, and afterwards visited several universities in Germany and Italy. He became a professor at Heidelberg, but lost his valuable library when the city was sacked in 1622. He died there in 1627. His principal works are, a Collection of Ancient Inscriptions, folio, 1601; Thesaurus Criticus, 6 vols. 8vo.; Deliciæ Poetarum Gallorum, Italorum, &c. 18 vols.—Moreri.

GRUTER (Peter), a practitioner of physic in Flanders, who died at Amsterdam in 1624. He published two centuries of Latin epistles.—Ibid.

GRYLLUS, the son of Xenophon, who slew Epaminondas, and was himself killed at the battle of Mantinea, in 363, B. C. Xenophon was offering a sacrifice when he heard of his death, and instantly threw off the garland which he had on his head, but replaced it when he was informed that his son had slain the enemy's general.—Ibid.

GRYNÆUS (Simon), a learned German, was the son of a peasant in Suabia, and born at Veringen, in the county of Hohenzollern, in 1493. He was Greek professor at Vienna, and afterwards at Heidelberg. In 1531 he visited England, where his learning procured him many friends. The learned are indebted to him for editions of several of the ancients, enriched with prefaces and commentaries. He died at Basil in 1541.—Melch. Adami Vit. Germ. Phil.

GRYNÆUS (John James), grand-nephew of the above, was born at Bern in 1540. He was professor of divinity many years at Basil, and minister of the church there. For the last five years of his life he was totally blind. He died in 1617. He published Notes on several of the Fathers, and an Ecclesiastical History, &c.—Ibid.

GRYPHIUS (Sebastian), a celebrated German printer, who resided at Lyons, in France. He was a man of learning, and excelled in the accuracy of his books. One of the most beautiful is a Latin Bible, two vols. folio, 1550. He died in 1556, and his trade was carried on with reputation by his son Antony Gryphius.—Bayle.

GRYPHIUS (Andrew), a German dramatic writer, was born at Glogaw, in 1616, and died in 1664. His tragedies were greatly admired. He also wrote a Critique, in which he ridiculed the ancient comedies of the Germans.—Moreri.

GRYPHIUS (Christian), son of the preceding, and a man of great erudition, was born in 1649, and died in 1706. He was professor of eloquence at Breslaw, principal of the college of Magdalen, and librarian. His works are German Poems, History of the Orders of Knighthood; Treatise on the German Language, &c.—Mor.

GUADAGNOLI (Philip), a learned orientalist, was born at Magliano, in Italy, about 1596, and died at Rome in 1657. He translated the Bible into Arabic, and addressed Christina queen of Sweden, in an oration in the same language. He wrote Apologia pro Religione Christiana; Considerations against the Mahometan Religion; and a grammar of the Arabic language, entitled, Breves Institutiones Linguæ Arabicæ, folio. —Nouv. Dict. Hist.

GUAGNINI (Alexander), born at Verona, in 1538. He wrote a work which is very rare, entituled, Sarmatiæ Europæ Descriptio, 1581, folio. He died at Cracow, at the age of 76.—Ibid.

GUALBERT (St. John), a Florentine, who founded a monastery in the Vallombrosa, among the Apennines, which place is mentioned by Milton in his Paradise Lost. Gualbert died in this monastery in 1073.—Ibid.

GUALDO PRIORATO (Galeazzo), an historian, was born in 1606, at Vicenza, where he died in 1678. He was historiographer to the emperor, and wrote the History of the Wars of Ferdinand II. and III.; the Troubles of France from 1648 to 1654; History of the Cardinal Mazarin, and of the Emperor Leopold.—Moreri.

GUALTERUS (Rodolphus), a learned divine, was born at Zurich in 1529, and died in 1586. He wrote Commentaries on the Bible; and published a translation of Julius Pollux.—Ibid.

GUARIN (Peter), a benedictine, who was celebrated for his skill in Greek and Hebrew, was born at Rouen in 1678, and died at Paris in 1729. He published a Hebrew Grammar, 2 vols. 4to. and a Hebrew Lexicon.—Ibid.

GUARINO, surnamed Veronese, an eminent reviver of learning, and the first who introduced Greek into Italy, was descended of a noble family at Verona. He became professor of the learned languages at Ferrara, where he died in 1460, at the age of 90. He translated Plutarch's Lives, part of Strabo, and other works. His son Batista was also a learned man, and became an eminent professor at Ferrara. He translated into Italian some of Plautus's comedies, and wrote Latin poems and other works.—Tiraboschi.

GUARINI (Baptista), an Italian poet, great-grandson of the preceding, was born at Ferrara, in 1537. He passed the greatest part of his life in courts, being in the service of Alphonso II. duke of Ferrara, and other princes, in which he seems to have been a prey to continual disgusts. Notwithstanding the celebrity of his Pastor Fido, he contemned the title of poet, which he thought beneath the dignity of a gentleman. He died at Venice in 1612.—Moreri. Tiraboschi.

GUARINI (Guarino), a celebrated Italian architect, was born at Modena in 1624, and died in 1683.—D'Argenville.

GUASCO (Octavian), a writer of considerable merit, was a native of Turin; and died at Verona in 1783.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

GUAZZI (Stephen), an Italian writer, who was esteemed in his time. He was secretary to the duchess of Mentz, and died at Pavia in 1565.—Tiraboschi.

GUAZZI (Mark), an Italian, eminent both in arms and learning, who died in 1556. He wrote several histories, and some poetical pieces.—Tiraboschi.

GUAY-TROUIN (René du), a French naval officer, was born at St. Maloes in 1673, and died at Paris in 1736. He commanded a privateer when he was only 18; but afterwards he went into the navy, in which he served with success. He took Rio Janeiro, one of the richest colonies of Brazil; and when ennobled, it was stated in his patent that he had taken more than 300 merchant vessels, and 20 ships of war. He was made lieutenant-general of the naval forces of France, and commander of the order of St. Louis. His Memoirs, partly written by himself, were printed at Paris in 1 vol. 4to. 1740.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

GUDIUS (Marquard), a learned German critic. Having studied at Rensberg, and Jena, he went to Holland, where he contracted a friendship with Samuel Schas, who at his death left Gudius his whole fortune. He died in 1689.—Moreri.

GUDIUS (Gottlob Frederic), a Lutheran minister, who wrote several valuable works, among which is a Life of Hoffman.—Moreri.

GUEDRIER DE ST. AUBIN (Henry Michael), a doctor and librarian of the Sorbonne, was born at Gournai-en-Bray, in the diocese of Rouen, in 1595, and died abbot of the monastery of St. Vulmer in Bayonne, in 1742. He was an able casuist, and wrote the Sacred History of the Two Covenants, 7 vols. 12mo.—Ibid.

GUERARD (Robert), a benedictine monk of the congregation, was born at Rouen in 1641. He assisted father Delfau in editing the works of St. Austin; and when that father fell into disgrace for writing a book called L'Abbe Commendataire, Guerard was also exiled. He died at Rouen, in 1715. He published an Abridgement of the Bible in questions and answers, 2 vols. 12mo.—Ibid.

GUERCHEVILLE (Antoinette de Pons, marchioness of), deserves to be named for the answer she gave Henry IV. who made some attempts on her chastity. "If," said she, "I am not noble enough to be your wife, I am too much so to be your mistress." When Henry married Mary of Medicis, he made the marchioness lady of honour to that princess, saying; "Since you are really a lady of honour, be so to my wife."—Ibid.

GUERCINO. See BARBIERI.

GUERET (Gabriel), a French advocate and writer, was born at Paris in 1641, and died in 1688. He wrote, among other works, Parnassus reformed, and the War of Authors.—Moreri.

GUERICKE (Otho), a German philosopher, born in 1602, and died in 1686. He was counsellor to the elector of Brandenburg, and burgomaster of Magdeburg. He invented the air-pump and weather-glass, and published some Treatises on Experimental Philosophy.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Guerin (Francis), a professor of the college of Beauvais, who translated Tacitus and Livy into French. He died in 1751, at the age of 70.—Ibid.

Guerinière (Francis Robichon de la), equerry to the king of France, who wrote two works of considerable repute, entitled, L'Ecole de Cavalerie, and Elemens de Cavalerie. He died in 1751.—Ibid.

Guerre (Martin), a Frenchman, rendered famous by an extraordinary imposture, practised by Arnaud du Thil, his friend. Martin married Bertrande de Rols, and after living with her about ten years, left her, and entered into the service of Spain. Eight years after du Thil presented himself to Bertrande as her husband, and so imposed upon her, by relating various facts, that he lived with her. An uncle of Martin prosecuted du Thil and he was condemned to be hanged. Du Thil appealed to the parliament of Thoulouse; the members of which were greatly divided, when Martin returned home; on which his treacherous friend was hanged and burned in 1560.—Ibid.

Guesclin (Bertrand du), constable of France, and an illustrious warrior, was born in Britany in 1311, and died, in the midst of his triumphs, before Chateauneuf de Rendon, in 1380. He gained many victories over the English, and defeated the troops of the king of Navarre.—Moreri.

Guettard (John Stephen), a French physician and botanist, who published Memoirs on several of the Arts and Sciences, and Observations on Plants. He died in 1786.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Guevara (Antony de), a Spanish prelate. He became preacher and historiographer to Charles V. and was successively bishop of Guadix, in Granada, and of Mondoneda, in Galicia. He died in 1544. He wrote the Dial of Princes, or, Marcus Aurelius; also letters, called Golden Epistles. His nephew, Anthony de Guevara, was also a divine, and wrote Commentaries on the Scriptures.—Bayle. Moreri.

Guevara (Lewis Valez de), a Spanish comic poet, was a native of Andalusia, and died in 1646. He wrote many comedies, and a celebrated work, entitled, El Diablo Cojuelo, which furnished the foundation for Le Diable Boiteux of Le Sage.—Ibid.

Gueulette (Thomas Simon), a French writer, was born at Paris in 1683, and died in 1766. He wrote several novels, and some comedies.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Guglielmini (Dominic), an eminent Italian mathematician, was born at Bologna in 1655, and died in 1710. He wrote many works, the most celebrated of which is his Treatise on the Nature of Rivers.—Mor.

Guibert, an abbot and historian, was born in the diocese of Beauvais, in 1053. He died abbot of Rogent-sous-Couci, in 1124. He wrote a good history of the first crusade, entitled, Gesta Dei per Francos.—Moreri.

Guibert (James Anthony Hypolite), a writer on military affairs, was born at Montauban in 1743. He served in Germany and afterwards in Corsica, where he was made a colonel. In 1770, he published his great work, Essai Général de Tactique. Afterwards he turned his attention to dramatic composition, and produced some tragedies. He also wrote the Eulogies of Catinat and L'Hopital. The French academy elected him a member, in the room of M. Thomas. He died in 1790. Besides the above works, he wrote the Eulogy of the King of Prussia.—Life prefixed to his German Tour, 2 vols.

Guichard (Claude de), historiographer to the duke of Savoy, and author of a work, entitled, the Funeral of the Ancients. He died in 1607.—Moreri.

Guicciardini, an eminent historian, was descended from a noble family of Florence, where he was born in 1482. He practised in the early part of his life as a lawyer, filling several high offices in that profession. Afterwards he was employed in affairs of state for his native city. From this situation he passed into the service of Leo X. and his two immediate successors, and was raised by them to the highest civil and military dignities. His History of Italy, in 4 vols. 4to. is a valuable performance. He died in 1540.—Tiraboschi.

Guicciardini (Lewis), nephew of the preceding, was born at Florence about 1523, and died at Antwerp in 1589. He wrote, among other works, a Description of the Low Countries, folio.—Ibid.

Guicheron (Samuel), a French historian, died in 1664, at the age of 57. He wrote the Genealogical History of the House of Savoy.—Moreri.

Guidi (Alexander), an Italian poet, was born at Pavia in 1650, and died at Frescati in 1712. He wrote Lyric Poems, &c.—Ibid.

Guido (Reni), an illustrious Italian painter, was born at Bologna in 1575. His father, being a musician, intended him for the same profession, but conceiving an early attachment to painting, he was placed under Dennis Calvert, a Flemish master. He afterwards studied under the Caracci, and soon acquired greater repute than any of his cotemporaries. Honours were heaped upon him by several crowned heads, and riches flowed upon him in abundance. He was unfortunate only in an immoderate love of gaming, which reduced him to such distress, that a languishing disease ensued, of which he died in 1642. His heads are beautiful, and the draperies elegant.—Pilkington.

Guido (Cagnacci), an historical painter, born at Bologna in 1600, and a disciple of Guido Reni. He died in 1680.—Pilk.

Guidotti (Paul), an Italian painter, sculptor, and architect, was born at Lucca in 1569, and died in 1629. He made wings, with which he imagined he could fly; but in making the attempt at Lucca, he fell, and received great injury.—Ibid.

Guignard (John), a French jesuit, professor of divinity in the college of Clermont, who was executed at Paris in 1597, for writing a treatise in which he asserted it lawful to murder Henry IV.—Moreri.

Guignes (Joseph de), a learned French writer, was born at Pontoise in 1721. He studied the oriental languages under Stephen Fourmont, and was appointed interpreter to the king in 1741, and member of the academy of Belles Lettres in 1753. He particularly applied to the study of the Chinese characters, and had a principal concern in the Journal des Savans thirty-five years. The revolution reduced him to poverty. He died at Paris in 1800. He wrote the Life of Fourmont; General History of the Huns, Turks, Moguls, and Tartars, 5 vols. 4to.; Memoir proving that the Chinese were an Egyptian Colony; Le Chon-King, 4to.; The Military Art of the Chinese; Historical Essay upon the Oriental and Greek Typography; Principles of Typographical Composition; Memoirs in the Academy of Inscriptions, &c.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Guilandius (Melchior), an eminent botanist, was born at Konigsberg, in Prussia. He travelled over Palestine, Egypt, Africa, and Greece, and afterwards became botanical professor at Padua, where he died in 1589. His principal work is named Papyrus.—Haller, Bib. Bot.

Guild (William, D.D.), a minister of the church of Scotland, was born near Dundee in 1602. He was successively professor of philosophy, divinity, and church-history, at Aberdeen. He died in 1662.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Guillain (Simon), a French sculptor, who died in 1658, at the age of 77. He was rector of the academy of painting and sculpture.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Guillelma of Bohemia, the foundres of a sect in Italy, in the 13th century, which added shameful lewdness to the most extravagant enthusiasm. She was regarded as a saint in her life; but after her death, her delusions were discovered, and her body was burnt.—Moreri.

Guillemeau (James), an eminent French surgeon, and author of many important works in his profession, who died at Paris in 1612.—Moreri.

Guillet de St. George (George), a French historian, was born at Thiers, in Auvergne, in 1625, and died at Paris in 1705. He was historiographer to the academy of painting and sculpture, and the author of Ancient and Modern Sparta; Ancient and Modern Athens; and other works.—Moreri.

Guilliaud (Claude), a French divine, and doctor of the Sorbonne in the 16th century. He wrote Commentaries on the Gospels of St. Matthew and St. John; Collationes in Omnes D. Pauli Epistolas, &c.—Ibid.

Guillim (John), the reputed author of the celebrated work, entitled, the Display of Heraldry, which was in reality written by Dr. Barkham, was born about 1565, and died in 1621. He was rouge croix pursuivant at arms.—Wood.

Guiscard, a famous Norman knight, and son of Tancrede de Hauteville, died in the island of Corfu in 1085. He was one of the warriors who conquered Naples from the Saracens, and acquired the dukedom of Apulia and Calabria.—Mod. Univ. Hist.

Guischard (Charles Gotlieb), a Prussian officer, was born at Magdeburg in 1742. He served with great reputation in the service of the stadtholder, and afterwards in that of Frederic II. of Prussia, who gave him the name of Quintus Icilius, and a regiment. He died in 1775. His works are: Memoires Militaires sur les Grecs & les Romains, 4to.; Memoires critiques & historiques sur plusieurs Points d'Antiquités Militaires, 4 vols. 8vo.—Gen. Biog.

Guise (Claude de Lorraine, duke of), was the 5th son of René II. duke of Lorrain. He settled in France, where he married Antoinette de Bourbon, a princess of the blood, in 1513. He died in 1550. At the battle of Marignan, when he was but twenty-two years of age, he received more than twenty wounds.—Moreri.

Guise (Francis de Lorrain, duke of), eldest son of the above, was born in 1519. He was a man of great talents and valour, and during the greater part of his life enjoyed almost unbounded power in France. With him began the famous factions of Condé and Guise. The duke of Guise was at the head of the Catholic party, and a great zealot. He was killed by a pistol-shot, in 1563, by a Protestant gentleman, named Poltrot de Méré.—Ibid.

Guise (Henry, duke of), eldest son of the preceding, was born in 1550. He was a good soldier, but of a turbulent temper; and formed the association called the League, on the pretence of defending the Catholic religion, and the liberty of the state. With its aid, the duke of Guise long controlled Henry III. and even was in open rebellion against him. On the celebrated day of the Barricades, the king, having escaped from the duke to Blois, convened the states there; where Guise was assassinated, in 1588.—Ibid.

Guise (Charles, duke of), eldest son of the above, was born in 1571. On his father's death, he was shut up in the castle of Tours, from which he escaped in 1592. Proceeding to Paris, he was received with the greatest joy by the partisans of the League. He finally made his peace with the king but cardinal Richelieu, dreading his power, compelled him to quit France. He died at Cuna, in Italy, in 1640.—Ibid.

Guise (Lewis de Lorrain, cardinal of), was the son of Henry, duke of Guise, who was assassinated at Blois. Though a priest, he was of a warlike disposition, and followed Louis XIII. in his expedition into Poitou, where he signalized himself among the bravest of the officers. He died at Saintes, in 1621.—Ibid.

Guise (Henry of Lorrain, duke of), grandson of the last-mentioned Henry, was born in 1614. He was of an intriguing and restless disposition, and having joined the conspiracy of the count of Soissons and the duke of Bouillon, was obliged to retire to Rome. While there, the disaffected Neapolitans, who had revolted from Spain, chose him their leader; and he expected to have obtained the sovereignty, but was taken prisoner, at Abruzzo, and carried to Spain, where he remained four years, and was then set at liberty. He died in 1664. His Memoirs of the Neapolitan Enterprize were published in 1 vol. 4to.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Guise (William), a learned English divine, was born in Gloucestershire in 1653. He was fellow of All Souls college, Oxford, and died of the small-pox in 1683. He translated into English, Misnæ pars Ordinis primi Zeraim Tituli septem, and illustrated the work with a commentary.—Wood's A. O.

Guiton (John), a citizen of Rochelle, who was chosen mayor of that town when it was besieged by cardinal Richelieu in 1637. He refused the post, unless permitted to have a poignard to stab the first who should offer to surrender. Being told that famine had carried off many of the inhabitants, he answered, "It matters not, provided there is one left to shut the gates."—Moreri.

Guittone (d'Arezzo), one of the earliest of the Italian poets, flourished about the year 1250. Some of his productions are found in a Collection of Ancient Italian Poets, Florence, 1527, 8vo.—Tiraboschi.

Guldenstadt (John Antony), a celebrated traveller, was a native of Riga. For his knowledge of natural history and languages, he was invited to Petersburg, and made professor of natural history. He spent seven years in travelling through Tartary, Georgia, and over the Caucasus, and died at Petersburg, in 1781.—Coxe's Travels through Russia, &c.

Gundling (Nicholas Jerom), a German writer on jurisprudence, history, and polics, was born at Nuremburg, in 1671. He was successively professor of philosophy, eloquence, and civil law, at Halle, and died rector of that university in 1729.—Moreri.

Gunnerus (John Ernest), a Norwegian divine, was born in 1718 at Christiana. On account of his merit he was made bishop of Drontheim in 1758, where he founded the Royal Norwegian Society, principally for the encouragement of the study of natural history. Linnæus gave the name of Gunnera to a plant in his vegetable system. He died at Christiansund, in 1773. He published Flora Norwegiæ, &c.—Gen. Biog.

Gunning (Peter), an English prelate, was born at How, in Kent, in 1613. Having received his education at King's school, Canterbury, he was removed to Cambridge, where he distinguished himself as a tutor and preacher. Being a firm royalist, he was driven from Cambridge, on which he entered of New college, Oxford, where he met with patronage and advancement. At the Restoration, he distinguished himself in the Savoy conference, and in 1669 was made bishop of Chichester, from whence he was translated, in 1674, to Ely. He died in 1684.—Wood A. O.

Gunter (Edmund), an English mathematician, was born in Herefordshire in 1581. He was educated at Westminster school; from whence he went to Christchurch, Oxford, where took orders; but his genius leading him chiefly to the study of mathematics, he was promoted to the professorship of astronomy in Gresham college, where he died in 1626. He invented a portable quadrant, which goes by his name; and a scale used by navigators. He also dicovered the variation of the magnetic needle. He published Canon Triangulorum, sive Tabulæ Sinuum Artificialium, &c. His works were collected into one volume, 4to, 1673.—Biog. Brit. Martin's Biog. Phil.

Gunther, a German poet, who lived in the beginning of the last century, and died at the age of 28, in an extraordinary manner. A rival poet mixed some intoxicating drug with his drink, when he was about to be presented to Augustus II. king of Poland, and while Gunther was speaking to the monarch, he staggered and fell down, on which he died of mortification. His works have proofs of genius and taste; among others is an Ode on Prince Eugene's victory over the Turks.—Gen. B. D.

Gurtler (Nicholas), a learned divine, was born at Basil in 1654, and died in 1707. He wrote Historia Templariorum; Origines Mundi; Institutiones Theologicæ; and Lexicon Linguæ Latinæ, Germanæ, Græcæ, et Gallicæ.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Gusman (Lewis), a Spanish jesuit, who died at Madrid, in 1605. He was the author of a work in Spanish entitled, The History of the Jesuits in the Indies, and the Success of their Missions in Japan.—Moreri.

Gussanvillan (Peter), a native of Chartres in France, who published the best edition of the works of Gregory the Great that appeared before the edition of the Benedictines.—Ibid.

Gustavus I. king of Sweden, known by the name of GUSTAVUS VASA, was born in 1490. He was the son of Eric Vasa, duke of Gripsholm, and descended from the ancient kings of Sweden. Christian II. king of Denmark, having got Gustavus into his hands in the war in which he reduced Sweden, kept him several years prisoner at Copenhagen. He at length made his escape, and having prevailed on the Dalecarlians to throw off the Danish yoke, he put himself at their head; and, after various fortunes, recovered the whole of Sweden from the tyranny of Christian, and was raised to the throne by the election of the states, whom he prevailed with to make the crown hereditary in his family. Lutheranism was established as the national religion of Sweden in his reign. He died at Stockholm, in 1560.---Mod. Univ. Hist.

GUSTAVUS (Adolphus), king of Sweden, was born at Stockholm in 1594, and ascended the throne in 1611. Notwithstanding his youth, he displayed his discernment in the choice of able ministers, and distinguished himself in the field, in a war with Denmark, Muscovy, and Poland; and finally, he rendered his name immortal, by his illustrious achievements in the war he carried on at the head of the German protestants against the house of Austria. He penetrated from the Vistula to the Danube, and twice defeated the celebrated Tilly. He was a patron of the sciences, enriching the university of Upsal; founding a royal academy at Abo, and a university at Dort, in Livonia. This great prince fell in the battle fought on the plains of Lutzen, in 1632; and is supposed to have been treacherously slain, either from the intrigues of cardinal Richelieu, or by the hand of Lawenburg, one of his generals.---Life, by Harle.

GUSTAVUS III. king of Sweden, was the son of Adolphus Frederick, and Louisa Ulrica, sister of Frederick II. king of Prussia. He was born in 1746, and educated under count Tessin, whose letters to his royal pupil are well known. He succeeded his father in 1771, at which time a corrupt senate, composed of the four orders, possessed the government, leaving the king a mere cypher. Gustavus the year following effected a revolution without bloodshed, and established a new constitution. He abolished the practice of torture, and introduced other good regulations in the administration of justice. He also formed a college of commerce, and reformed his army and navy. He caused a new translation to be made of the bible, and greatly encouraged agriculture, arts, and literature. In 1777 he paid a visit to the empress of Russia, and was entertained in a magnificent manner. In 1783 he made a tour for his health to France and Italy; and returned after an absence of ten months. In 1788 he was involved in a war with Russia, which power was assisted by Denmark. Gustavus headed his army himself, and stormed the defences of Frederickshamn, where he took and destroyed a great number of vessels. Encouraged by this success, he made an attack on the Russian squadron and arsenal of Revel, but was obliged to retreat. He was equally unfortunate in an attempt on Wyburg, about seventy miles from Petersburgh; but July 9, 1790, the Swedish fleet, commanded by the king, gained a victory over the Russians, who lost forty-five vessels, and a great number of men. This produced a peace the same year. On the breaking out of the French revolution, a coalition was formed between the northern powers and Spain, by which it was agreed that Gustavus should march against France at the head of a considerable army; but while preparations were making he was shot at a masquerade by Ankarstroem, a disbanded officer of the army, March 15, 1792, but did not die till the 29th. Gustavus wrote some plays, and political pieces of merit.---Annual Reg.

GUTHIERES (James), a French advocate and writer, died in 1638. The lovers of antiquities are indebted to him for many valuable writings.---Moreri.

GUTHRIE (William), a native of Scotland, was born in 1701, and educated at Aberdeen. His most esteemed work is his Geographical Grammar. He died in 1769.---Gen. Biog. Dict.

GUTTENBURG (John), one of those to whom the invention of the art of printing is attributed, was descended of a noble family, and born at Mentz, about 1400. If he did not invent printing, it is probable he was the first who conceived the idea of printing a book; which he executed, first with blocks of wood engraved, and afterwards with separate letters cut in wood. He took for a partner John Faust, and died at Mentz in 1468.---Gen. Biog.

GUY (Thomas), founder of Guy's hospital, was the son of Thomas Guy, lighterman and coal-dealer in Horseleydown Southwark. He was bred a bookseller, and began trade with only 200*l.*; but the bulk of his fortune was made by purchasing seamen's tickets, during queen Anne's wars, and by speculations in South-sea stock, in the memorable year 1720. Besides Guy's hospital, he erected an alms-house at Tamworth. He died in 1724, aged 81, worth 300,000*l.*---Gen. Biog. Dict.

GUY, a monk of Arezzo, famous for inventing the gamut in music. He lived about the year 1026.---Burney.

GUYARD (de Berville), a French writer, was born in Bans, in 1697, and after a life of extreme distress, died in the prison of the Bicetre, at the age of 73. He wrote the Lives of Bertrand du Guesclin, and of the chevalier Bayard. He is not to be confounded with Anthony Guyard, a benedicting monk, who died at Dijon in 1770. He wrote Political Observations on the Administration of Benefices, &c.---Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Guyet (Francis), a French critic, was born at Angers in 1575. He was tutor to the abbot of Grandselve, afterwards cardinal de la Valette, and died in 1655. He attempted to prove that the Latin language is derived from the Greek, and that all the primitive words of the latter consisted only of one syllable.---Moreri.

Guyon (Johanna Mary Bouvieres de la Mothe), a famous enthusiast, was born at Montargis, in France, in 1648. At sixteen she married, and became a widow at the age of 28, after which she devoted herself to religious meditation, and imbibed all the mystical conceits of quietism, till she worked herself up into the belief that she was the pregnant woman in the Apocalypse, and the destined foundress of a new church. Having gained many followers, she was confined in a convent, but was released, at the instance of madame Maintenon. After this she proselyted the illustrious Fenelon, but was treated with great severity by Bossuet of Meaux, by whose means she was sent to the Bastile from whence she was liberated in 1702. She died at Blois, in 1717. Her works are numerous, and still admired by those who are fond of mysticism.---Moreri.

Guyon (Claude), a French historian, was a native of Franche-Comté, and died at Paris, in 1771. One of his best works is an ecclesiastical history.---Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Guyse (John), a dissenting divine, was born at Hertford about 1680. After receiving a suitable education, he became a minister at his native place; but in 1727 he removed to London, as pastor to the independent congregation in New Broad-street. The university of Aberdeen conferred on him the degree of D. D. in 1732. Some years before his death he became blind, but still continued his ministerial duties. He died in 1761. His works are: a Paraphrase on the New Testament, 3 vols. 4to.; Jesus Christ God man, or the Constitution of Christ's Person, &c. considered, in several sermons, 8vo.; The Standard Use of the Scripture to all the Purposes of a Divine Revelation, 8vo.; The Holy Spirit a Divine Person, several sermons, 8vo.; Youth's Monitor, or six Sermons preached to young People, 12mo.—Fun. Serm. by Conder.

Gwynn (Eleanor), famous for the circumstance of her rising from the lowest situation to be mistress of Charles II. In the early part of her life she entertained companies at taverns, by singing; and previous to her winning the affection of the monarch, she was successively mistress to Hart, Lacy, and Buckhurst. She died in 1687.---Granger.

Gwynne (Mathew), a physician, was descended from an ancient Welsh family, but born in London. He was educated at Oxford, where he took his doctor's degree. He attended sir Henry Hunton, ambassador from queen Elizabeth to the French court. The time of his death is uncertain. ---Gen. Biog. Dict.

Gylippus, a Lacedemonian commander, who was employed by the Syracusans against the Athenians, B. C. 414. He gained many advantages, but having appropriated to himself the greatest part of the spoils, he was banished ---Plutarch in Lysander.

Gyzen (Peter), an eminent landscape painter, was born at Antwerp about 1686. He was a disciple of John Breughel, and painted views on the Rhine in an excellent style.---Pilkington.

H.

Haansbergen of Utrecht, a painter, was the disciple of Poelemburg, and many of his pictures have been mistaken for the productions of that master.---Moreri.

Haas (William), an eminent type-founder and printer, was born at Basil in 1741, and died at the monastery of St. Urban, in the canton of Lucern, in June 1800. He was the first in Germany and Switzerland who successfully engraved a French type in the style of Baskerville. He invented a new printing-press, also the art of printing geographical charts with moveable characters. In his youth he devoted several years to the military service of his country, and instituted a corps of artillery on a new system, the school of which he superintended himself. Some of his papers are in the Memoirs of the Economical Society at Basil.—Monthly Mag.

Habakkuk, a Jewish prophet, who is supposed to have lived in the reign of Jehoiakim, A. M. 3395. His style is grand and beautiful.—Grey's Key to Old Test.

Habert (Henry Louis), the editor of the works of Gassendus, for whom he had a great friendship. He was a member of the academy, and wrote some pieces of poetry. He died in 1679.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Habicot (Nicholas), a French surgeon, was born at Bonny, in Gatinois, and died in 1624. He wrote a treatise on the Plague. —Ibid.

Habington (William), an English writer, was born in Worcestershire, in 1605. He was educated in France, and died in 1654. He wrote some poems, a play called the Queen of Arragon, and the history of Edward IV.—Nicholson's Hist. Library.

Hackaert (John), a Dutch painter, was born at Amsterdam about 1635. His landscapes are beautiful.—Houbraken.

Hacket (William), a fanatic in the reign of Elizabeth, who, after leading a licentious life, suddenly pretended to be a prophet, and associated with two others, named Goppinger and Arthington. Hacket called himself sole monarch of Europe, and the son of God, for which he was executed in 1592.—Camden's Hist. of Eliz.

HACKET (John), an English prelate, was born in London, in 1592, and educated at Trinity college, Cambridge, of which he was chosen fellow. Archbishop Williams became his patron, and in return he wrote that prelate's Life. In 1628 he was made archdeacon of Bedford, after which he obtained a residentiaryship of St. Paul's, but the civil wars deprived him of his places. At the Restoration he was made bishop of Litchfield and Coventry, the cathedral of which he repaired at a great expence. He died in 1670. He has a volume of sermons in print.—Life by Dr. Plume.

HACKSPAN (Theodore), a Lutheran divine, who was deeply versed in oriental learning. He was professor at Altorf, and died in 1659. His works are: Miscellaneorum Sacrorum Lib. ii; Notæ Philologico-Theologicæ in rariora et difficiliora Vet. & Nov. Test. Loca, 3 vols.; Observationes Arabico-Syriacæ in quædam Loca Veteris et Novi Testamenti, 4to.; Specimen Theologiæ Talmudicæ, &c.—Moreri.

HADDOCK (sir Richard), a gallant English admiral, who distinguished himself in the reigns of Charles II. and James II. He died in 1714.—Campbell.

HADDON (Walter), a learned Englishman, was born in Buckinghamshire, in 1516, and educated at Eton school, from whence he was sent to King's college, Cambridge, where he took his doctor's degree in civil law. He was a zealous promoter of the Reformation, which brought him into some danger in the reign of queen Mary. On the accession of Elizabeth, he was made master of the court of requests, and employed on state affairs. He died in 1572. His miscellaneous works were printed in 1567, in 4to.—Biog. Brit.

HAEN (Anthony de), privy counsellor and physician to the empress Maria Theresa. His chief performances are, Ratio Medendi, 17 vols. 8vo. and a treatise on Magic. He died in 1776.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

HAERLEM (Theodore van), a painter, was born in the city of the same name, about 1410, and died in 1470.—Houbraken.

HAGEDORN, a German poet of the 18th century, who imitated Fontaine with considerable success. His writings shew real spirit and delicacy.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

HAGEN (John van), a landscape painter, was born in the county of Cleves, and died at the close of the 17th century. His manner was pleasing, and his colouring natural.—Pilk.

HAGGAI, one of the minor prophets, who prophesied in the second year of Darius Hystaspes, or A.M. 3484. He predicted the coming of the Messiah.—Grey's Key to Old Test.

HAGUENIER (John), a French poet, was born in Burgundy. His pieces are all of the lighter kind. He died in 1738.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

HAGUENOT (Henry), a physician of Montpellier, who died in 1776. He wrote Tractatus de Morbis externis Capitis, 12mo.; Otia Physiologica Memoirs addressed to the Academy of Sciences.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

HAHN (Simon Frederic), professor of history at Helmstadt, and historiographer to the elector of Hanover, who died in 1729. He wrote a history of the German empire, and a work entituled, Collectio Monumentorum veterum et recentiorum ineditorum.—Moreri.

HAILLAN (Bernard de Girard, lord of), a French historian, was born at Bourdeaux, in 1535. He wrote poems, and several books relative to the history of France. He died in 1610.—Bayle.

HAINES (Joseph), nick-named count Haines, a comedian, who received a liberal education, and was for some time secretar to sir Joseph Williamson, secretary of state. He possessed merit as a performer, and died in 1701.—Biog. Dram.

HAKEM, the third caliph of the Fatemite family, who persecuted the jews and christians with great severity, and set up claims to divinity. He was assassinated A.D. 1021.—D'Herbelot.

HAKEWILL (George), an English divine, was born at Exeter, in 1579, and educated at Oxford, where he became fellow of Exeter college. Afterwards he was made archdeacon of Surrey, and rector of Heanton, in his native county, where he died in 1649. He wrote an Apology for the Power and Providence of God in the Government of the World, folio, 1635. His brother, a barrister, sided with the puritans, and wrote some tracts against the church.—Prince's Worthies.

HAKLUYT (Richard), an English divine, was born in Herefordshire about 1553, and educated at Westminster school, from whence he removed to Christ-church college, Oxford. He distinguished himself by his skill in cosmography, and published a curious collection of voyages, in 3 vols. folio. In 1605 he was made prebendary of Westminster, besides which he had the benefice of Wetheringset in Suffolk. He died in 1614. His countrymen, out of respect to his labours, named a promontory on the coast of Greenland, Hakluyt's headland.—Biog. Brit.

HALE (sir Matthew), an English judge, was born at Aldersley, in Gloucestershire, in 1600, and educated at Magdalen hall, Oxford, from whence he removed to Lincoln's-inn, where he followed the study of the law with great application. He was one of archbishop Laud's counsel, and acted in the same capacity to several other illustrious sufferers in the great rebellion, and also for the king. However, he took the covenant and engagement, and accepted of a judge's place in the common-bench from Cromwell. On the death of Oliver, he refused to act under his son Richard. In the parliament which recalled the king, he sat for his native county; and soon after the Restoration was made chief baron of the exchequer, from whence he was advanced to the chief-justiceship of the king's bench. He resigned his office in 1675, and died the same year. His remains were interred in the church-yard of Aldersley. He was twice married, and had by his first wife ten children. He was a learned man, an upright judge, and an exemplary christian. His writings are numerous on theological, philosophical, and legal subjects. The principal are: 1. the Primitive Origination of Mankind considered and explained according to the Light of Nature, &c. folio; 2. The History of the Pleas of the Crown, folio; 3. The original Institution, Power, and Jurisdiction of Parliaments; 4. Contemplations, Moral and Divine, 3 vols. 8vo. His religious works have been recently published in 2 vols. 8vo. by the rev. T. Thirlwall, A. M.—Life by Burnet.

HALES (John), commonly called "the ever-memorable," was born at Bath, in 1584, and educated at Corpus Christi college, Oxford, from whence he removed to Merton on being elected to a fellowship. In 1613 he was admitted a fellow of Eton college, and in 1618 he attended sir Dudley Carleton, ambassador to Holland, as his chaplain. While there he was present at the synod of Dordt, an account of which he wrote to his patron, printed in his Remains. In 1638 archbishop Laud procured for him a canonry of Windsor. He suffered great hardships in the rebellion, and died in 1656. He was a man of learning and skill in argument, as appears from his works, 8vo. and 3 vols 12mo.—Wood.

HALES (Stephen), a divine and philosopher, was born in Kent, in 1677, and brought up at Bene't college, Cambridge, of which he became fellow in 1703. He took great pains in the study of botany and experimental philosophy, and invented a machine for demonstrating the motions of the planets, nearly similar to the orrery. In 1741 he published his invention of ventilators. He contented himself with the rectory of Teddington near Hampton-court, refusing higher dignities. He was greatly esteemed by Frederic prince of Wales, and was almoner to the princess. He died in 1761. His communications to the Philosophical Transactions, were numerous, besides which he published two volumes of statical Essays, &c.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

HALKET (lady Anna), an English lady, was born at London, in 1622. She was the daughter of Mr. Robert Murray, preceptor to princee Charles, afterwards Charles I. In 1656 she married sir James Halket, by whom she had four children. She died in 1699. A volume of Meditations taken from her MSS. was printed at Edinburgh in 1701.—Female Worthies.

HALL (Richard), an English divine of the Roman church, who in the reign of Elizabeth, went to Flanders, and became professor of divinity at Douay, and canon of St. Omer. He published, among other works, a History of the Troubles of his Time, and is very severe on the protestants. He died in 1604.—Bayle.

HALL (Joseph), an English prelate, was born in 1474, at Ashby-de-la-Zouch in Leicestershire, and brought up at Emanuel college, Cambridge, where he obtained a fellowship. In 1597 he published his Virgidemiarum, or Satires, in six books; which were reprinted at Oxford, in 1753. About 1603 he was presented to the rectory of Hawsted, in Suffolk, which he resigned on obtaining Waltham in Essex. Henry prince of Wales appointed him his chaplain, and had a great regard for him. In 1616 he obtained the deanry of Worcester, and two years afterwards was appointed one of the English divines at the synod of Dordt. In 1627 he was promoted to the bishopric of Exeter, from whence in 1641 he was translated to Norwich. This pious and moderate prelate was very ill used by the puritanical party in the civil war. He died in 1656. His works have been published in three volumes, folio. They abound in fine thoughts, expressed in excellent language, and he has been generally called the English Seneca.—Biog. Brit.

HALL (John), an English lawyer and poet, was born at Durham, in 1627, and educated at Cambridge, from whence he was removed to Gray's-inn, and in due course called to the bar. He died in 1657. He published a volume of poems in 1646, and translated Longinus into English.—Langbaine. Gen. Biog. Dict.

HALL (Henry), an English divine, was born in 1716. He was fellow of King's college, Cambridge, and became chaplain to archbishop Herring, who gave him the rectories of Harbledown and Orpington, in Kent, and East Peckham. He was also treasurer of Wells, and died in 1763.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

HALL (John), an English surgeon in the reign of queen Elizabeth. He published a Compendium of Anatomy, and other works; also a collection of Hymns, with musical notes, in 1565.—Ibid.

HALLE (Peter), a French poet and lawyer, was born at Bayeux, in Normandy, in 1611. He became king's poet and professor of canon law. His Latin poems have merit, but he is best known by his works on jurisprudence. He died in 1689.—Moreri.

HALLE (Antony), professor of eloquence at Caen, who published a Latin grammar, and poems in the same language. He died in 1675, aged 83.—Moreri.

HALLE (Claude Guy), a painter, and director of the academy of painting at Paris. Several of his works adorned the churches in Paris, particularly that of Notre Dame. He died in 1736, aged 85. His son, Noel HALLE, was also a good painter: he was a member of the academy of painting, and for his services in reforming that at Rome, obtained the order of St. Michael. He died in 1781, aged 70.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

HALLER (Albert), a celebrated physician, was born at Berne, and evinced great genius at a very early age, particularly for poetry. His reputation procured him a medical professorship at Gottingen, where he afterwards became president of the academy. He was also a member of most of the learned societies in Europe, but refused the title of a baron of the empire. He died at Berne in 1777, at an advanced age. His son, who trod in his steps, died in 1786, after having published an esteemed work, entitled Biographie Litteraire de la Suisse. The poems of the elder Haller are descriptive and elegant. Besides these he published: 1. Stirpes Helvetiæ, folio; 2. Disputationes Anatomicæ, 8 vols. 4to.; 3. Disputationes de Morbis, 7 vols. 4to.; 4. Disputationes Chirurgicæ, 5 vols. 4to.; 5. Bibliotheca Medicinæ theoreticæ et practicæ; 6. Elementa Physiologiæ, 8 vols. 4to.; 7. Hippocratis Genuina, 4 vols. 4to. &c.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

HALLEY (Edmund), a celebrated astronomer, was born in London, in 1656, and educated at St. Paul's school, from whence he was sent to Queen's college, Oxford, where he chiefly applied to the mathematics particularly astronomy. He made a number of observations, and having formed the design of completing the scheme of the heavens by the addition of the stars near the south pole, he went to St. Helena in 1676, and finished his catalogue. On his return he was chosen a fellow of the Royal Society, and in 1679 he went to Dantzic to confer with Hevelius about the dispute between him and Dr. Hooke, respecting the preference of plain or glass sights in astronomical instruments. In 1680 happened the great comet, which Mr. Halley first observed in his passage from Dover to Calais. He afterwards completed his observations upon it at the royal observatory at Paris. From thence he went to Italy with Mr. Robert Nelson, and in 1681 returned to England. In 1686 Mr. Newton committed to his care the publication of his Principia, to which Halley prefixed some Latin verses. In 1698 he was appointed commander of a ship sent out for the purpose of trying his theory of the variation of the compass. The year following he made another voyage with the same design, and from his observations he constructed his General Chart, exhibiting the variation of the compass in most parts of the ocean. He was sent on a third voyage to ascertain the course of the tides in the British channel, of which he also published a chart. Soon after he went, at the request of the emperor of Germany, to survey the Adriatic, and to examine two ports which the emperor intended to erect there. On his return in 1703, the degree of doctor of laws was conferred on him by the university of Oxford. He was also appointed professor of geometry, and had the half-pay of a captain in the navy settled on him. In 1713 he was chosen secretary to the royal society, and in 1719 made astronomer-royal. He died in 1742. Dr. Halley published several papers in the Philosophical Transactions, a set of Astronomical Tables, and an edition of Apollonius's Works, folio, 1710.—Biog. Brit.

HALLIFAX (George Savile marquis of), an eminent statesman, was born in 1630, and created marquis in 1682. Charles II. made him a privy counsellor, and lord privy seal: he was also offered the post of secretary of state, and that of lord-lieutenant of Ireland, but declined both. On the accession of James, he was appointed president of the council, from which he was dismissed for refusing his consent to a repeal of the tests. In the convention parliament he was chosen speaker of the house of lords, and at the accession of William and Mary was made lord privy seal. In 1689 he resigned that office, and became an opponent of the government. He died in 1695. His lordship wrote an excellent piece entitled, Advice to a Daughter.—Granger.

HALLIFAX (Samuel), a learned bishop, was born at Mansfield in Derbyshire, and admitted at an early age of Jesus college, Cambridge, where he proceeded A. B. in 1744, and A. M. in 1747. He then removed to Trinity hall, and took his doctor's degrees in civil law in 1764. He was many years Arabic professor of Cambridge, but resigned in 1770, and was made regius professor of civil law. In 1775 he was created D. D. by mandate. He became chaplain to the king, master of the faculties in doctors' commons, and rector of Worksop in Nottinghamshire. He was afterwards master of his college, which station he resigned in 1781 on being promoted to the bishopric of Gloucester, from whence he was translated to St. Asaph in 1787. He died in 1790. His lordship wrote an Analysis of Civil Law and published a volume of Lectures preached at bishop Warburton's lecture in Lincoln's-inn chapel.—Edward's Survey of the Cathedral of St. Asaph.

HALS (Francis), an eminent portrait painter, was born at Mechlin, in 1584, and died in 1666. He was equalled only by Vandyck. His brother Dirk excelled in painting festive meetings of boors, &c. He died in 1656.—Pilkington.

HAMBERGER (George Albert), an epic

nent mathematician, was born in Franconia in 1662, and died at Jena in 1726. He wrote De Iride Diluvii; de opticis Oculorum Vitris; de Hydraulicæ frigore; de Basi Computi ecclesiastici, 4to.—Moreri.

HAMBERGER (George Christopher), a voluminous German writer, who is known as the editor of the works of Orpheus. He was a member of the university of Gottingen, and died in 1773, aged 47.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

HAMEL (John Baptist), a French mathematician and priest of the oratory, was born in Normandy in 1624. He studied at Caen and Paris, and at the age of 19 published a treatise on trigonometry. He was the first secretary to the royal academy, and attened Colbert in his travels. In 1678 appared his Philosophia Vetus et Nova. In 1698 he published Regiæ Scientiarium Academiæ Historiæ. He died at Paris, in 1706. Besides the above, he published some works on theological subjects.—Nouv. Dict Hist HAMEL DU MONCEAU (Henry Louis du), was born at Paris in 1700. He applied with great assiduity to the study of agriculture, commerce, and mechanics; and was appointed inspector of the marine. He died in 1782. He wrote Elements of Agriculture, treatises on Trees, and some on Naval Architecture.—Ibid.

HAMILCAR (Barcas), father of Hannibal. He distinguished himself as an able general, and founded Barcelona in Spain. He was slain in battle, B.C. 237.—Corn. Nepos. Plutarch.

HAMILTON (Patrick), a gentleman of learning and piety, who suffered for his religion in Scotland at the beginning of the Reformation. He was related to James V. and early in life was made abbot of Ferme, which would have been followed by other preferments if he had not imbibed the doctrines of Luther, which he propagated with so much zeal as to irritate the catholic clergy, particularly cardinal Beaton, archbishop of St. Andrews, by whose means he was brought to trial and condemned to the flames. He suffered with great fortitude in 1527, aged only 23. A confession of faith by him was published by John Frith.—Foxe's Acts and Mon.

HAMILTON (Anthony, count), an ingenious writer, descended from a Scotch family, but born in Ireland. He attached himself to the fortunes of the house of Stuart, and wrote Fairy Tales, and poems; but his best work is the memoirs of the count de Grammont, a romance. He died in France, in 1720, aged 74.—N. D. H.

HAMILTON (James, first duke of), was the son of James marquis of Hamilton, born in 1606, and educated at Oxford. In 1625 he succeeded his father, and gained the favour of Charles I. In 1631 he went with an army to the assistance of Gustavus Adolphus, king of Sweden, and returned to England the year following. He afterwards accompanied the king to Scotland and assisted at the coronation. On the breaking out of the disturbances in that country, respecting episcopacy, he was appointed the king's commissioner, and when the war began he raised forces in defence of the royal cause, for which he was created duke of Hamilton and earl of Cambridge. After distinguishing himself greatly in behalf of the king, he was defeated by Cromwell at Preston, and though he surrendered on a promise that his life should be spared, he was brought to trial and beheaded in 1649.—Lives of the dukes of Hamilton, by Burnet, fol.

HAMILTON (William, duke of), brother of the above, was born in 1616, and succeeded to the title in 1649. He was secretary of state for Scotland, bravely exerted himself in the royal cause, and died of the wounds which he received at the Worcester fight in 1652.—Ibid.

HAMILTON (George), earl of Orkney, and fifth son of the earl of Selkirk, distinguished himself as an able general in the reigns of William and Anne. He died in 1737.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

HAMILTON (William), a native of Bangor, and an ingenious poet, whose works were printed at Edinburgh in 12mo. 1760. He was born in 1704, and died in 1752.

HAMILTON (sir William), was born in Scotland, of the noble family of that name, in 1730. His education was liberal, but his fortune very narrow, which he improved in 1755 by marrying an heiress. In 1764 he was appointed ambassador to the court of Naples, where he distinguished himself by his ardour in promoting the fine arts, in collecting antiquities, and advancing the interests of science, till his recall in 1800. He explored the volcanic mountains of Vesuvius and Etna, his valuable observations on which have been published. His Campi Phlegræi, 2 vols. folio, must also be pronounced a splendid and interesting performance. He greatly promoted the publication of the magnificent and elegant work, Antiquités Etrusques, Grecques, et Romaines, tirées du Cabinet de Mr. Hamilton; the editor of which was D'Hancarville. During his residence at Naples, he received from his majesty the riband of the order of the bath. The Philosophical Transactions have been enriched by many of his communications, and also the British Museum by his presents of antiquities and other curiosities. He died at London, in 1803.—Literary Journals.

HAMLET, the name of a celebrated Danish prince, whose story is told by Saxo Grammaticus, and rendered familiar by the admirable play written by Shakspeare.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

HAMMOND (Henry), a learned divine, was born at Chertsey, in Surrey, in 1605, and educated at Eton, from whence he was removed to Magdalen college, Oxford, of which he was chosen fellow in 1625. In 1632 he obtained the rectory of Penshurst, in Kent, from whence he was ejected in the rebellion. In 1643 he was made archdeacon of Chichester. He was with the king at the treaty of Uxbridge, to confer with the parliamentary commissioners on church government, on which subject he disputed with Vines, a presbyterian minister. In 1645 he was appointed canon of Christchurch, Oxford, and chaplain in ordinary to the king, whom he attended in the Isle of Wight. In 1653 he published his Annotations on the New Testament, a work of great merit. He died as he was about to be made bishop of Worcester, in 1660. Besides the above he wrote a Commentary on the Psalms, a Practical Catechism, Sermons and controversial pieces, all collected into 4 vols. folio.—Life by Fell. Biog. Br.

Hammond (Anthony), an English poet, was born in Huntingdonshire, and educated at St John's college, Cambridge. He was a member of parliament, and commissioner of the navy. He published a volume of poems, and wrote the Life of Mr. Moyle. He died about 1730.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Hammond (James), the son of the above, was born in 1710, and educated at Westminster school. He was equerry to the prince of Wales, and member of parliament for Truro. Lord Chesterfield published his Love Elegies, which are very pleasing. He died in 1742.—Ibid.

Hamon (John), a French physician, was born at Cherbourg. He wrote several books on religious subjects in a good style, and died in 1687, aged 69.—Moreri.

Hampden (John), a political character, was descended of an ancient family in Buckinghamshire, and born at London in 1594. In 1636 he distinguished himself by his opposition to the payment of ship-money, by which he acquired great popularity. He became a leading man in the house of commons, and at the commencement of the civil war he took up arms against the king, but was shot by a pistol in a skirmish in Oxfordshire in 1643. Lord Clarendon observes of him, that "he had a head to contrive, a tongue to persuade, and a heart to execute, any mischief."—Clarendon's Hist. of the Rebellion.

Hamsa, a mohammedan doctor, who wrote a book against the Koran, remarkable for its purity and elegance, which has been translated from Arabic into French by La Croix.—D'Herbelot.

Handel (George Frederic), an illustrious musician, was born at Halle in Saxony, in 1684. His father who intended him for the law, perceiving his propensity to music, prohibited all instruments from his house. The son, however, contrived to have a small clavichord concealed in the garret, where he used to amuse himself when the family were asleep. At the age of seven he went with his father to the court of the duke of Saxe Weissenfels, to whom Handel's brother-in-law was valet. While there he got into the church one morning, and began to play on the organ. The duke, who was in the church, surprized at the playing, asked who it was, and on being informed, he expostulated with the old gentleman for restraining his son's inclination; in consequence of which a master was provided for him. Handel made so great a progress, that at the age of nine he composed the church service. In 1693 he went to Berlin, where he was greatly noticed by the king of Prussia. From thence he went to Hamburg, and had a dispute with another musician, who made a push at him with his sword as they were coming out of the orchestra, but a music-book in his bosom prevented the weapon from piercing his heart. Here he composed, at the age of 14, his opera of Almeria. Soon after this he visited Italy, and at Florence produced the opera of Rodrigo. In 1710 he visited England, but being under an engagement to the elector of Hanover, his stay was short. In 1712 he returned, and obtained a pension of 200*l.* a year, which was afterwards doubled. Some of the nobility projected a plan for erecting an academy in the Haymarket to secure a supply of operas, composed by Handel, and under his direction. This plan was carried into effect, and succeeded for about ten years, and then fell to the ground; when the rage for Italian music prevailed, and Handel could not stop the progress of the delusion. But in 1742 his popularity returned, and he retained his glory to the last. He died in 1759, and was buried in Westminster abbey, where there is an elegant monument to his memory. But his greatest monument is in his works, a complete edition of which was published by Dr. Arnold.—Life of Handel, 8*vo.*

Hanifah, chief of one of the most ancient sects among the Mussulmans: the other sects are those of Schiafi, Malik, and Hambel. The Turks account Hanifah a saint. He died at Babylon.—Rycaut's Hist. of the Turks. Chardin's Travels.

Henkius (Martin), professor of history at Breslaw, was the author of some learned works; the best of which is entitled, De Romanorum Rerum Scriptoribus. He died in 1709, aged 76.—Moreri.

Hanmer (Meredith), a divine of the church of England, was a native of Flintshire, and treasurer of Trinity church, Dublin. He died of the plague, in 1604. Dr. Hanmer translated the ecclesiastical histories of Eusebius, Socrates, and Evagrius, into English.—Collier's Hist. Dict.

Hanmer (Jonathan), a nonconformist divine, was born at Barnstaple, in Devonshire, about 1605, and educated at Emanul college, Cambriege. He obtained the living of Bishop's Tawton, and the lectureship of Barnstaple, from which he was ejected in 1662. He died in 1687. He wrote a Discourse on Confirmation, and a View of Ecclesiastical Antiquity.—Calamy. Palmer.

HANMER (sir Thomas), an English writer, was born in 1676; and educated at Westminster school, and Christchurch, Oxford. He was chosen speaker of the house of commons, in 1713, and died in 1746. Sir Thomas published an edition of Shakspeare with notes, in 6 vols. 4to.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

HANNEKEN (Mennon), a Lutheran divine, was born in Oldenburg in 1595. He was professor of the Oriental languages at Marpurgh, and wrote a Hebrew Grammar, and other works. He died in 1671. His son, Philip Louis, became professor of Hebrew at Gissen, and died in 1706.—Moreri.

HANNEMAN (Adrian), a portrait and historical painter, was born at the Hague, in 1611. He copied the works of Vandyck with great exactness. He died in 1680.—Houbraken. De Piles.

HANNIBAL, a famous Carthaginian general, and the son of Hamilcar, who made him swear eternal enmity to the Romans, at the age of eight years. On the death of Asdrubal, he obtained the command of the Carthaginian armies, and in three years subdued Spain. Having taken Saguntum, which was in alliance with the Romans, it occasioned the second Punic war, in which he shewed the most consummate generalship. He is said to have crossed the Alps by softening the rocks with fire and vinegar. On his arrival in Italy he defeated Cornelius Scipio, and obtained several victories over the most experienced Roman generals, particularly at Cannæ, where the Romans lost about 40,000 men, and had Hannibal pushed on for Rome it must have fallen. But by stopping at Capua, where his soldiers gave themselves up to luxury, the Romans recovered from their surprize; and when he appeared before the city, it excited so little concern, that the ground on which he was encamped was put up for sale, and sold at a high price. He soon retired and experienced a defeat near Zama. A peace was then concluded; but Hannibal fearing the Romans, fled to Prusias king of Bithynia, and on hearing that the senate had sent to demand him, he poisoned himself, 182 B. C.—Corn. Nepos. Plutarch.

HANNIBALIANUS (Flavius Claudius), nephew of the emperor Constantine, from whom he received the provinces of Pontus, Cappadocia, and the Lesser Armenia, with the title of king. He was murdered by Constantius, in 338.—Univ. Hist.

HANNO, a Carthaginian general, who made great geographical discoveries in the interior of Africa, an account of which is extant. There was another of this name, who tamed a young lion, which used to attend him like a dog. The Carthaginians, fearing his power, banished him.—Moreri.

HANNSACHS, a German poet, who published no less than five folio volumes of poems, in which are a few grains only that are passable. He was a native of Nuremburgh, and died in 1576.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

HANWAY (Jonas), an eminent philanthropist, was born at Portsmouth, in 1712, and being bred a merchant, formed a connexion with a commercial house at Petersburgh, in consequence of which he travelled into Persia, of which country he published an account in 2 vols. 4to. On settling in London, he devoted a considerable portion of his time to benevolent purposes, and was the principal institutor of the marine society, and the Magdalen Hospital. For these exertions he was made a commissioner of the navy; and when he resigned his seat at the board, his salary was continued. He died in 1786. He wrote several religious books of considerable merit; the best of which is entitled Domestic Happiness promoted, 12mo.—Life by Pugh.

HARCOURT (Harriet Eusebia), an ingenious English lady, was the daughter of a gentleman of large estate at Richmond in Yorkshire, where she was born in 1705. She received a learned education from her father, whom she accompanied in his travels through Europe, and at his death inherited his estates. In 1733 she returned to England, having lost her father at Constantinople. Having brought with her several ladies from abroad, she formed a kind of monastery on her estate in Yorkshire, and another in one of the western isles of Scotland, but without any vows or austerity. She died in 1745. Her romantic institutions ceased after her death.—Female Worthies.

HARDER (John James), a physician, was born at Basil in 1656. After studying medicine at his native place he went to France, and on his return was made professor of rhetoric, but soon after he obtained the medical and anatomical chair, to which was added that of botany. He was also three times rector of the university. The emperor Leopold created him a count; and he obtained several distinguished honours from other princes. He died in 1711. His works are, Apiarium; Prodromus Physiologic. s, Naturam explicans Humorum Nutritioni & Generationi dicatorum: Examen Anatomicum Cochleæ terrestris, &c. His brother Jerome was a learned divine, and professor of oriental languages at Leyden: but before his entry on the office he resolved on making a tour to the East, and died at Constantinople.—Moreri.

HARDERY (Geoffrey), an English monk of the order of St. Augustine, and confessor to Henry III. He was a professor at Oxford, and wrote some pieces on evangelical poverty, a History of his Order, Lectures on the Old and New Testament, &c. He died at London, in 1360.---Pits. Bayle.

HARDIME (Peter), a flower-painter of Antwerp, was born in 1678, and died in 1748. In the monastery of the Bernardines at Antwerp he painted four large designs, representing the four seasons. His brother Simon was also a good flower-painter, and died at London, in 1737.---Pilkington.

HARDING (John), the author of an English Chronicle, who died in 1461

HARDING (Thomas), an English divine of the Roman church, was born at Comb-Martin, in Devonshire, in 1512. He was fellow of New college, Oxford, and Hebrew professor; but at the accession of Elizabeth he went to Louvain, where he employed his pen against the protestants, particularly bishop Jewell, with whom he had a long controversy. He died about 1570.---Wood's A. O.

HARDINGE (Nicholas), an English poet, was fellow of King's college, Cambridge, member of parliament for Eye, in Suffolk, and secretary of the treasury. He died in 1758. Some of his Latin poems are in the Musæ Anglicanæ, and the English in other collections.---Gen. Biog. Dict.

HARDION (James), a French writer, was a native of Tours, and a member of the academy of inscriptions. He wrote a Treatise on Poetry and Rhetoric and a Universal History, in 18 vols. He died in 1766, aged 80.---Nouv. Dict. Hist.

HARDOUIN (John), a French jesuit, was born at Quimper in Bretagne, in 1647. He published some of the Latin classics, with learned notes, for the use of the dauphin; but he is rendered famous by the strange notion which he broached, that the greater part of the authors, considered as ancients, are in fact moderns, and were forgeries of the monks. He died in 1729.---Moreri.

HARDWICKE (Philip Yorke, earl of), a great English lawyer, was born at Dover in Kent, in 1690. In 1718 he was elected into parliament for Lewes in Sussex. After serving the offices of solicitor and attorney general, he was in 1733 appointed chief justice of the king's-bench, and created a peer. In 1736 he was made lord chancellor, which situation he held twenty years. In 1754 he was created earl of Hardwicke. He died in 1764. In all his offices, particularly the last, he distinguished himself so as to acquire the esteem of all parties, and the veneration of posterity.---Gen. B. D.

HARDWICKE (Philip Yorke, earl of), a distinguished nobleman, was born in 1720, educated at Hackney under Mr. Newcome, and entered of Bene't college, Cambridge, in 1737. The year following he was appointed one of the tellers of the exchequer. He was chosen member for Ryegate in 1741, and for the county of Cambridge in 1747. In 1764 he succeeded his father. He was also lord-lieutenant of Cambridgeshire, and high-steward of the university. During his residence at college, he undertook a work, assisted by some of his contemporaries, which is a proof of the learning and taste of the literary society to which he belonged. It is entitled "The Athenian Letters," and was at first only printed for private circulation, but recently it has been published. The persons who bore the greatest share in this learned and ingenious work, were the earl of Hardwicke, and his brother Mr. Charles Yorke. His lordship published the correspondence of sir Dudley Carleton, ambassador to the states general in the reign of James I.; also two volumes of state papers. He died in 1790.---Europ. Mag.

HARDY (Alexander), a French dramatic writer, who wrote six hundred pieces, of which only forty-one were published. He died in 1630.---Moreri.

HARDY (sir Charles), an English admiral, and the grandson of an eminent naval commander of the same name, in the reign of queen Anne. He had the command of the channel fleet in 1779, but died the same year at Spithead.---Gent. Mag.

HARE (Francis), an English prelate, was educated at Eton school, and King's college, Cambridge, of which he was chosen fellow. From being dean of Worcester, he was raised to the bishopric of Chichester, which he held, with the deanry of St. Paul's to his death, in 1740. He wrote some tracts against bishop Hoadley, and published an edition of Terence. He also reduced the book of Psalms to a metrical order, which system was completely refuted by Dr. Lowth.---Biog. Br.

HARIOT (Thomas), an English mathematician, was born at Oxford in 1560, and educated at St. Mary hall. He accompanied sir Walter Raleigh to America, and published an account of the discovery of Virginia. On his return he was patronized by the earl of Northumberland, who allowed him a pension. He lived some time in Sion college, and died in 1621. His Artis Analyticæ Praxis was printed after his death, and there is no doubt that Descartes drew from it all his pretended discoveries in algebra.---Ibid.

HARIRI, an Arabian author who died about 1122. He was a native of Barsa in the kingdom of Babylon, and wrote Almakamah, or Fifty Assemblies, i. e. Conferences, in which are some excellent remarks. They were published by Golius in Arabic and Latin at Leyden in 1656, and six of them were translated into English, by Mr. Chappelow, Arabic professor at Cambridge, in 1767.---Moreri.

HARLEY (Robert), earl of Oxford, was eldest son of sir Edward Harley, and born in London in 1661. He received a private education, and at the Revolution raised a troop of horse for king William. He was soon elected into parliament, and in 1704 was appointed one of the secretaries of state, and in 1710 made a commissioner of the treasury, and chancellor of the exchequer. The same year he was wounded at the privy-council table with a penknife by a Frenchman named Guiscard, who was under examination for treasonable practices. In 1711 he was raised to the peerage, and appointed lord high treasurer, which office he resigned a few days before the death of queen Anne. In 1715 he was impeached of high treason by the commons, and committed to the Tower, where he remained two years, and was then brought to his trial, and acquitted. He died in 1724. His lordship was a liberal patron of learning, and a great collector of books. His library was sold after the death of his son, and his MSS. are in the British museum.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

HARMER (Thomas), a dissenting minister, was born at Norwich, in 1715, and after receiving a suitable education, settled as pastor of a congregation at Wheatfield in Suffolk. He published Observations on Passages of Scripture, 4 vols. 8vo. a work of great value; also Outlines of a Commentary on Solomon's Song; and some other pieces. He died in 1788.—Europ. Mag. May 1792.

HARMODIUS. See ARISTOGITON.

HAROLD I. king of England, was the son of Canute I. but his legitimacy being questioned, Alnot, archbishop of Canterbury, refused to consecrate any but the sons of Emma. Harold, however, seized upon the throne, and having got his half-brother, Alfred, into his possession, put out his eyes, and confined him in a monastery. He died without issue, in the 5th year of his reign, in 1039.—Rapin. Hume.

HAROLD II. son of earl Godwin, seized the throne on the death of Edward the Confessor, in 1066. That year William, duke of Normandy, invaded the kingdom, and a battle ensued near Hastings, in which Harold was slain.—Ibid.

HARPALUS, a Grecian astronomer about 380 B. C. who corrected the cycle of eight years, which was invented by Cleostratus, and adopted one of nine, which was afterwards improved by Meton.—Petavius, Ration. Temporum.

HARPALUS, a man to whom Alexander committed the charge of the treasures at Babylon, when he went to the East. Harpalus squandered away a good part of the riches, and fled with the remainder. He was assassinated at Crete, B. C. 325.—Quintus Curtius. Arrian.

HARPE (John Francis de la), a celebrated writer, was born at Paris, in 1739, of Swiss parents, and educated at the college of Harcourt. After publishing some lesser pieces, he brought forth in 1764 his tragedy of the Earl of Warwick, which was received with applause. This was followed by a number of dramatic pieces of great merit, also poems which gained prizes from different academies. His Elogies of Fenelon, Racine, Catinat, and Charles V. were also greatly admired; but his principal work is a Complete Course of Literature, 12 vols. 8vo. He died in 1803.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

HARPOCRATION (Valerius), a rhetorician of Alexandria, who wrote a lexicon upon the ten orators of Greece, in which he describes the magistracy and judicial proceedings in Africa. He flourished about A. D. 180. Aldus published his work in 1608 at Venice, and Gronovius at Leyden, in 1696. —Moreri.

HARPSFIELD (Nicholas), an English divine, and archdeacon of Canterbury, who distinguished himself by his zeal for the Roman catholic religion, for which he was imprisoned many years in the reign of Elizabeth. He wrote an Ecclesiastical History of England; one of the heresy of Wickliff, &c. He died in 1572.—Pits.

HARRINGTON (sir John), an English poet, was born in Somersetshire, and educated at Eton and Cambridge. He published a translation of Ariosto's Orlando Furioso, and received the honour of knighthood, in the field, from the earl of Essex, and in the reign of James I. was made a knight of the bath. A collection of his works has been printed under the title of Nugæ Antiquæ, in 3 vols. 12mo. He died in 1612, aged 51. —Parke's Ed. of the Nugæ Antiquæ.

HARRINGTON (John lord), was the eldest son of lord and lady Harrington, to whose care James I. committed his daughter Elizabeth, afterwards the wife of Frederic, elector palatine and king of Bohemia. The young lord early evinced superior talents, and spoke Latin with great fluency. He acquired a considerable variety of knowledge, which was accompanied with a deep sense of religion. It is said that when at Rome the jesuits, having endeavoured in vain to pervert him and his tutor, Mr. Tovey, administered poison to them, of which the latter died soon after his return to England, but the former struggled against its effects a longer time. He died, however, at the age of 22, in 1613. His lordship was the intimate companion and correspondent of Henry prince of Wales, and the letters which passed between them, in Latin, are extant.—Nugæ Antiquæ.

HARRINGTON (James), a political writer, was born in 1611, in Northamptonshire, and educated at Trinity college, Oxford. In the civil wars he at first sided with the parliament, but afterwards became an attendant on his majesty. On the king's death he devoted his time to study, and composed his Oceana, a political romance, in which he defended republicanism. This work occasioned a great controversy, and the author formed a society upon its principles. In 1661 he was, on a charge of treason, sent to the Tower, from whence he was removed to St. Nicholas's island, near Plymouth, but was afterwards released on bail. He died deranged in his intellects, in 1677. His works were published in folio in 1700, and since in 1 vol. 4to.—Life by Toland.

HARRIS (Walter), an English physician in the reign of William III., who wrote a good book on the diseases of children.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

HARRIS (Robert), an English divine, was born in 1578 at Broad Camden, in Gloucestershire, and educated at Oxford. In the rebellion he joined the presbyterians, and was made rector of Petersfield, and president of Trinity college, Oxford, where he died in 1658. His works are, Sermons; Tractat. de Fœdere Novi Testamenti; Remedium contra Avaritiam; Epistolæ Apologeticæ, &c.—Wood's A. O.

HARRIS (John), an English divine and mathematician, who was secretary to the Royal Society, and died about 1730. He published a translation of Pardie's Elements of Geometry, but he is best known by having first projected a Cyclopædia, or Dictionary of Sciences. This work appeared in 1710, in 2 vols. folio, entitled, Lexicon Technicum; a supplementary volume was added to it in 1736, but the Dictionary of Chambers superseded it.

HARRIS (James), a philological writer, was born at Salisbury, in 1709, and educated at the grammar school of that city, from whence he removed to Wadham college, Oxford. He sat in parliament for Christ Church, Hampshire, and in 1763 was appointed commissioner of the admiralty, but afterwards was removed to the treasury board. In 1774 he was made secretary and comptroller to the queen, and died in 1780. He wrote, 1. Three Treatises, concerning Art, Music, Painting, and Poetry, and Happiness, 8vo. 2. Hermes, or a Philosophical Enquiry concerning Universal Grammar, 8vo. 3. Philosophical Arrangements. 4. Philological Enquiries, 2 vols. 8vo.—Life written by his son lord Malmesbury, prefixed to an edition of his father's works.

HARRIS (William), a dissenting divine of the independent persuasion, was upwards of 40 years pastor of a congregation in Crutched-friars. He was the author of a volume of Sermons on the principal Representations of the Messiah in the Old Testament; another called Funeral Discourses; besides other religious pieces. He died in 1740, aged 65.—Toulmin's edit. of Neale's Puritans.

HARRIS (William), a baptist minister at Honiton, in Devonshire. He wrote the Lives of James I., Charles I. and II., Oliver Cromwell, and Hugh Peters, in the manner of Bayle, but not with much fidelity, being violently set against the house of Stuart, and partial to republicanism. He died at Honiton, in 1770.—Nichols's Anecd. of Bowyer.

HARRISON (William), an English writer, was fellow of New college, Oxford, and secretary to the earl of Stafford, at the Hague. He was the correspondent of Swift, and wrote some poems, to be found in Nichols's Collection. He died in 1712.—Gen. B. D.

HARRISON (John), an ingenious mechanic, was born at Wragley in Yorkshire, in 1693, and bred a carpenter. Having a turn for wheel work, he constructed some wooden clocks, the accuracy of which was so much admired that he came to London in 1725 with a timekeeper, which he shewed to Dr. Halley, who recommended him to Mr. Graham, from whom he received great encouragement. In 1735 he visited London again, with a complete machine, and was sent by the board of longitude to Lisbon, to make a trial of it. From that time he went on improving his invention, and received the reward of 20,000*l.* granted by parliament. He died in 1776.—European Magazine.

HARRISON (John), one of the regicides who sat at the trial of Charles I. He was the son of a butcher, and rose by his impudence and fanaticism to the rank of colonel in the parliament army. He was executed at the Restoration.—Trials of the Regicides.

HARTE (Walter), an English poet and historian, was born and educated at Marlborough, in Wiltshire. He published a poetical collection, called the Amaranth, in 12mo.; a History of Gustavus Adolphus, 2 vols. 4to.; and Essays on Husbandry, 8vo. He died in 1773.—Gent. Mag.

HARTLEY (David), an English physician, was born about 1704, and educated at Jesus college, Cambridge, of which he became fellow. He died at Bath, in 1757. He wrote an excellent work, entitled, Observations on Man, 2 vols. 8vo. 1749.—Gen. B. D.

HARTSOEKER (Nicholas), a Dutch philosopher, was born at Gouda, in 1656. After receiving a liberal education from his father who was a minister, he applied himself to mathematics and natural philosophy. He became professor of philosophy at Heidelberg and mathematician to the elector palatine. He died in 1725. He wrote a Course of Natural Philosophy, in 4to., and some small pieces.—Martin's Biog. Phil. Nouv. Dict. Hist.

HARTUNG (John), a German author and Greek professor at Heidelberg, who published notes on the Odyssey, and translated the Argonautics of Apollonius into Latin. He died in 1579.—Bayle.

HARVARD (John), a nonconformist divine, who died in 1688 at Charlestown, in New England. He is deserving of commemoration by being the founder of a college bearing his name, at Cambridge, in North America, which is in a very flourishing state.—Neale's Hist. of New England.

HARVEY (William), a celebrated physician, was born at Folkstone in Kent, in 1578. He received his education at Cambridge, and then went to Padua, where he took his doctor's degree in physic. In 1607 he was admitted fellow of the college of physicians, and in 1615, anatomical reader, on which occasion he discovered the circulation of the blood, of which he published an account in 1628, entitled, Exercitatio Anatomica de Motu Cordis & Sanguinis. This discovery made a great revolution in medical science, and many foreign practitioners endeavoured to rob the author of his due honour, by ascribing it to other persons, but the right of our countryman has long since been fully established. In 1632 he was made physician to Charles I. and adhered faithfully to the king, for which in 1645 he was chosen warden of Merton college, Oxford; but when the parliamentary visitors came there, he left it for London, and was chosen president of the college, but declined the office on account of his infirmities. He died in 1657, leaving his estate to the college, for which he had built a library and museum. An edition of his works was printed in 1766, 2 vols. 4to.—Biog. Br.

HARVEY (Gideon), an English physician, was born in Surrey. He studied at Leyden, and was admitted of Exeter college, Oxford, in 1655. He was physician to Charles II in his exile, and to the English army in Flanders. He died about 1700. He wrote several medical books.—Biog. Med.

HARWOOD (Edward), a dissenting minister, was born in Lancashire, in 1729. He became pastor of a congregation at Bristol, from whence he was obliged to remove for being an arian. He then removed to London, where he subsisted by teaching the classics, and correcting the press. He died in 1794. Dr. Harwood published several pamphlets; a translation of the New Testament, in 2 vols. 8vo.; and a View of the various editions of the Greek and Roman Classics, 12mo.—Europ. Mag.

HASE (Theodore de), professor of Hebrew at Bremen, was the author of some dissertations, which shew his learning to advantage. He died in 1731, aged 49. His brother James, who died in 1723, wrote some learned pieces.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

HASSELQUIST (Frederick), a Swedish physician, was born in 1722 at Tournalla, in East Gothia, and educated at Upsal, where he attended the botanical lectures of Linnæus, after which he went to Palestine, and collected many natural curiosities. He died at Smyrna, in 1752. Linnæus published his observations.—Ibid.

HASTINGS (Elizabeth), daughter of Theophilus earl of Huntingdon, was a lady of great accomplishments and piety. Her charities were numerous, though her income was but contracted. She not only supplied the poor with necessaries, but visited them in their sickness, and consoled them with religious counsel as well as with medical aid. In the 42d No. of the Tatler is a fine character of her, drawn by Mr. Congreve, under the title of Aspasia. She died unmarried in 1739.—Gibbons's Memoirs of Pious Women.

HATTON (sir Christopher), chancellor of England in the reign of queen Elizabeth, was born at Holdenby, in Northamptonshire, of an ancient Cheshire family. He was a man of great learning and judgment, and though not bred to the law, he discharged his office with singular reputation. The queen one day insisting on being paid an old debt owing to her, and that immediately, so affected him that he took to his bed and died in 1591.—Wood.

HAVERCAMP (Sigisbert), a learned critic, was born in Holland. He was professor of Greek and history at Leyden, where he died in 1742, aged 58. He published some valuable editions of Latin and Greek authors. —Nouv. Dict. Hist.

HAVERS (Clopton), an English physician, who published in 1691 a Treatise on the Bones. It is a curious book, and contains several new observations on the subject. —Hutchinson's Biog. Med.

HAUSTED (Peter), a divine in the reign of Charles I., who wrote a comedy, called the Rival Friends, which was performed before that monarch when he visited Cambridge. Some of his sermons were printed in 1646.—Biog. Dram.

HAUTEFEUILLE (John), an ingenious mechanic and abbe, was the son of a baker at Orleans, and born in 1647. He was the inventor of pendulum watches, which invention was afterwards improved by Huygens. He wrote some pieces on clock-making, and died in 1724.—Moreri.

HAWES (Stephen), an English poet, was a native of Suffolk, and educated at Oxford. He was well versed in French and Italian poetry, and was groom of the privy chamber to Henry VII. His works are: the Temple of Glass, which is a copy of Chaucer's House of Fame; the Passetyme of Pleasure, which was finished in 1506, and printed in 1517, 4to., by Wynkyn de Worde, with wooden cuts.—Longbaine's English Poets. Phillips's Poetarum Theat.

HAWKE (Edward lord), a gallant English admiral, was the son of a barrister, and entered the navy at an early age. In 1734 he obtained the command of a ship, and distinguished himself in the famous battle of 1744, when the English fleet was commanded by Matthews, Lestock, and Rowley. In 1747 he was made rear-admiral of the white, and the same year defeated a large French fleet, and captured five sail of the line. For this he was created a knight of the bath. In 1759 he defeated Conflans, and was rewarded with a pension of 2000*l.*

a year. In 1765 he was made vice-admiral of Great Britain, and first lord of the admiralty. In 1776 he was created a peer. He died in 1781.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

HAWKESWORTH (John), an ingenious writer, was born at Bromley, in Kent, in 1713, and bred a watchmaker. He afterwards applied to literature with considerable success. The Adventurer is his principal work, for which archbishop Herring conferred on him the degree of LL.D. He was employed to compile an account of the discoveries made in the South Seas, for which he received the sum of 6000*l*. He afterwards became an East India director, and died in 1773. He wrote Almoran and Hamet, an Oriental Tale, and other pieces of a like kind.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

HAWKINS (sir John), a gallant admiral, was born at Plymouth of a good family, and went early to sea in the merchant service. In 1562 he sailed with three ships from London for the coast of Africa, where he procured a number of slaves, which he disposed of in the West India islands. He made several other voyages to Guinea and the West Indies, and experienced a variety of adventures, which are detailed in Hakluyt's Voyages. In 1588 Hawkins was appointed rear-admiral, and knighted for his services in the defeat of the Spanish armada. He died off Porto Rico, in 1590. Sir John Hawkins founded a hospital at Chatham.—— Campbell's Lives of the Admirals. Prince's Worthies.

HAWKINS (sir Richard), son of the above, was born at Plymouth. He distinguished himself in the engagement with the invincible armada, and in 1593 obtained a commission under the great seal to attack the Spanish settlements in South America, where after an obstinate conflict with a superior force, the English were taken. Sir Richard, who was severely wounded in the action, was detained a prisoner in America a considerable time, and was then sent to Spain, where he remained some years. On his return to England he employed himself in writing the history of his own life. He died of an apoplexy while attending the privy council.—Ibid.

HAWKINS (sir John), a writer and magistrate, was born in London in 1719. He was bred an attorney, and acquired a considerable knowledge of the law. At the same time he did not neglect other studies. He formed an early intimacy with Dr. Johnson, which lasted through life. He wrote several pieces in the periodical publications, particularly the Gentleman's Magazine: and in 1760 printed a good edition of Walton's Angler. In 1761 he was put into the commission of the peace for Middlesex. In 1772 he received the honour of knighthood, for suppressing a riot in Moorfields. In 1776 he published his History of Music, 5 vols. 4to. which contains much curious information. His Life of Dr. Johnson was written at the request of the booksellers, but not to the satisfaction of the public. He died in 1789.—Europ. Mag. Gent. Mag.

HAWKSMOOR (Nicholas), an English architect, was the pupil of sir Christopher Wren, but he did not improve on the practice of his master. He died in 1736. He built the church of St. George Bloomsbury, with an absurd tower, on the top of which is a statue of George I.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

HAWKWOOD (sir John), a gallant general, who rose to knighthood and military renown in the service of Edward III. after having been a taylor in London. When the peace was concluded between France and England in 1360, he assembled a number of discarded soldiers, who followed a marauding life, and became the terror of the country. With this banditti he went to Italy, where he entered into the service of the Florentines, and distinguished himself by many gallant exploits. He died in that city in 1394, and was buried with great pomp.—Biog. Brit.

HAY (James), earl of Carlisle, came to England with James I. and was the first Scotchman created an English peer. His first title was baron Hay, he was afterwards made viscount Doncaster, and lastly earl of Carlisle. James I. employed him in several embassies, particularly to France, to mediate on behalf of the protestants, and to negociate a marriage between the prince of Wales, and princess Henrietta Maria. He died in 1636.—English Peerage.

HAY (William), an English writer, was born at Gledbourne, in Sussex, about 1700. In 1734 he was chosen member of parliament for Seaford, which place he represented to his death in 1755. He wrote Religio Philosophi; an Essay on Deformity; and other pieces, which were published in 2 vols. 4to. in 1794.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

HAYES (Charles), a mathematician, was born in 1678. He was deputy-governor of the royal African company, and died in 1760. He published a Treatise on Fluxions, in folio, 1704; and some other mathematical pieces.—Ibid.

HAYNES (Hopton), paymaster of the mint, and principal tally-writer of the exchequer, was the author of a book, entitled, The Scripture Account of the Attributes and Worship of God, and of the Character and Offices of Jesus Christ, 8vo. He died in 1749.—Anecd. of Bowyer.

HAYNES (Samuel), an English divine, was the son of the preceding. He was canon of Windsor, and rector of Clothall and Hatfield, Hertfordshire. He died in 1752. Mr. Haynes published a collection of State Papers, in 2 vols. folio.—Ibid.

HAYWARD (sir John), an English historian, was a doctor of laws in the university of Cambridge, and the author of a History of Henry IV.; also of the Lives of the three Norman kings, William I. William II. and Henry I. He was knighted by James I. and died in 1627. Besides the above he wrote the History of Edward VI. and some religious books.—Biog. Brit.

Haywood (Elizabeth), an ingenious writer, was born in London in 1693, and died in 1756. She published the Female Spectator, 4 vols.; Epistles for the Ladies, 2 vols.; Fortunate Foundling; Adventures of Nature; Jemmy and Jenny Jessamy, 3 vols.; Invisible Spy, 2 vols.; Husband and Wife, 2 vols.; Betsy Thoughtless; and a Present for a Servant Maid.—Hays's Female Biog.

Hazael, minister of state to Benhadad king of Syria, who, when that monarch lay ill, was sent by him to Elisha the prophet to know whether he should recover. On his return he murdered his master and usurped the throne, B. C. 889.—Stackhouse.

Head (Richard), an Irishman, who was for some time a member of the university of Oxford, but afterwards a bookseller in London. He was drowned in crossing to the Isle of Wight in 1678. He wrote the English Rogue; the Art of Wheedling; the Humours of Dublin, a comedy; and other pieces of a similar kind.—Granger.

Headley (Henry), an ingenious writer, was born at Norwich, and educated under Dr. Parr, after which he went to Trinity College, Oxford, where he took his degree of B. A. He died at Norwich in 1788, aged 33. Mr. Headley published a volume of poems; papers in the Olla Podrida; a work, entitled, Select Beauties of Ancient English Poetry, with Remarks, in 2 vols. 8vo. also some papers in the Gentleman's and European Magazines under the signature of T. C. O.—Europ. Mag.

Hearne (Thomas), a learned antiquary, was born at White-Waltham in Berkshire in 1680. Mr. Cherry of Shottesbrooke took him into his family, and gave him a liberal education. In 1695 he entered of Edmund Hall, Oxford, where he applied to the study of antiquities. In 1703 he took his degree of M. A. and in 1714 was appointed archepographus of the university. He died at Oxford, in 1735. He published several ancient MSS. and editions of old books; as the Life of Alfred by Spelman; Leland's Itinerary, 9 vols. 8vo; a collection of curious Discourses written by eminent antiquaries, &c.—Lives of Leland, Hearne, &c. 8vo.

Heath (Benjamin), an ingenious writer, was town-clerk of Exeter, and the author of several publications, the chief of which is entitled, a Revisal of Shakspeare's Text, 8vo. 1765. He also published Notæ sive Lectiones ad Tragicorum Græcorum veterum, Æschyli, &c. 4to. 1752. He was created doctor of laws at Oxford, in 1762. His brother, Thomas, wrote a new version of Job, published in 1755.—Anecd. of Bowyer.

Heath (James), an historian, was born at London in 1629, and educated first at Westminster school, and next at Christchurch, Oxford, from whence he was ejected for his loyalty in 1640. He then turned author for a subsistence, and published, among other things, a chronicle of the civil war, which was continued by Phillips to 1675. He died in 1664.—Wood, A. O.

Heath (Nicholas), archbishop of York, and chancellor of England in the reign of queen Mary, was a native of London, and educated at Christ college, Cambridge. He was a man of piety and moderation, but refused to take the oath of supremacy, for which he was deprived. He died at Cobham in 1560.—Camden's Eliz. Burnet's Hist. Ref.

Heath (Thomas), brother of the preceding, was a jesuit, and sent by his superiors as a missionary to England in 1568, under the disguise of a puritan. Being permitted to preach in Rochester cathedral, where he inveighed against the liturgy, he dropped a letter from his pocket by accident, which the verger carried to the bishop, and it proved to be written by a jesuit in Madrid, on the subject of the mission. His lodgings being examined a papal bull was discovered, and other particulars which proved him a jesuit. In consequence of this he was pilloried, and sentenced to perpetual imprisonment, but he died a few months afterwards.—Collier's Eccl. Hist.

Heathcote (Ralph), an English divine, was born in 1721, and educated at Cambridge, where he proceeded to his degree of D. D. He died in 1795. He wrote a long tract against the Hutchinsonians; a Sketch of Lord Bolingbroke's Philosophy; Sylva, or the Wood; and other works.—Europ. Mag.

Hebenstreit (John Ernest), a learned physician of Leipsic, where he died in 1756, aged 54. He published Carmen de Usu Partium, and several other works. His brother, John Christian Hebenstreit, was eminent for his skill in Hebrew.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Heber, the son of Saleh, and father of Phaleg, born in 1281 B.C. and died at the age of 464 years. The name of Hebrews, given to the Jewish nation, is derived from him.—S. S.

Hecatæus of Abdera, a Grecian historian, who attached himself to Ptolemy Lagus. He wrote commentaries on Hesiod and Homer, and a History of Egypt, but his most celebrated work was a History of the Jews, in which he spoke so favourably of that nation, that Philo and Scaliger have doubted whether it were his. Josephus, however, quotes it as the real production of Hecatæus, and Diodorus Siculus and Arian also mention it.—Vossius Hist. Grac.

Hecht (Christian), a learned divine of Essen, in East Friesland, who died in 1748, aged 52. He wrote, 1. Commentaria Philologico-critico-exegetica, &c. 2. Antiquas Haræorum inter Judæus in Polonia.---Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Heck (John van), an eminent painter, was born near Oudenard about 1625. He went to Rome, and resided there many years. He painted flowers and fruit in a good style, and also landscapes from the beautiful scenes in the neighbourhood of Rome. He died at Antwerp at the close of the 17th century.---Pilkington.

Heck (Nicholas van der), a landscape and historical painter, was born in Holland about 1580. His manner of pencilling was strong and firm, his colouring natural and lively, and his knowlege of the chiaro-scuro enabled him to give his pictures a bold and striking effect.---Ibid.

Heck (Martin Hemskirk van der), a nephew of Martin Hemskirk, and the son of the preceding, was a good landscape painter.---Ibid.

Hecquet (Philip), a French physician, who was a great advocate for the use of warm water and bleeding, and in consequence was ridiculed by Le Sage, in his novel of Gil Blas, under the name of Dr. Sangrado. He was, however, a man of skill and piety. He died in 1737. He wrote several medical books.---Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Hedelin (Francis), a French ecclesiastic, and abbé of Aubignac, and Meimac, was born at Paris, in 1604, and died in 1676. He wrote a tragedy called Zenobia, in prose; and some romances.---Moreri.

Hederich, or Hedericus (Benjamin), a learned lexicographer, was born at Hain, in Misnia, in 1675. He published an edition of Empedocles de Sphæra and a Greek and Latin lexicon, which is very valuable. He died in 1748.---Gen. Biog. Dict.

Hedlinger (John Charles), a Swiss engraver, born in 1691, and died in 1771. His medals are much sought after, and very rare. He was a man of letters, and member of several academies.---Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Heede (William and Vigor van), brothers, and eminent painters, were natives of Furnes, but resided chiefly in Italy. The works of William are most esteemed, and are scarce. They painted historical subjects. Vigor died in 1708, aged 49; and William in 1728, aged 68.---Pilkington.

Heem (John David de), a painter of Utrecht, was born in 1600, and died in 1674. He painted fruit and flowers in a fine taste. His son Cornelius, painted in the same way as his father -- Ibid.

Heemskerk (James), a Dutch admiral, was born at Amsterdam. In 1596 he sailed with Barentien to discover a north-east passage to Asia, in which voyage the commander died, but Heemskerk brought the ships safe to Holland. In 1607 he was made vice-admiral, and sent against the Spaniards in the Mediterranean, where he defeated a superior force, and took the Spanish admiral prisoner; but Heemskerk was slain in the action.---Grotii Annal. Belg.

Heemskirk (Martin), a Dutch painter, was born in 1498, and studied at Rome, after which he returned to his own country, and settled at Haerlem, where he died in 1574, aged 76. He painted all kinds of subjects with success, but his figures are generally bad, and he was ignorant of the chiaro-scuro.---Felibien, Vies des Peintres.

Heere (Lucas de), a portrait and historical painter, was born at Ghent in 1534, and died in 1584. His mother was an excellent artist, and his father a good statuary. His portraits are very fine, and his historical pieces in a grand style.---Pilk.

Hegesippus, a Jew, who embraced christianity at Rome in 157, and died in 181. He was the author of an ecclesiastical history from Christ to his own time, fragments of which are preserved in Eusebius. He is not to be confounded with Hegesippus who wrote an account of the destruction of Jerusalem, printed at Cologne, in 1559, 8vo. The latter lived after Constantine.---Eusebius. Dupin.

Heidegger (John Henry), professor of morality and divinity at Zurich, died in 1698, aged 65. He published, 1. Exercitationes selectæ de Historia sacra Patriarcharum, 2 vols. 4to.; 2 De Ratione Studiorum Opuscula aurea, 12mo.; 3. Tumulus Tridentini Concilii, 4to.; 4. Historia Papatus, 4to.---Moreri.

Heidegger (John James), a native of Zurich, in Switzerland, who came to England in 1708. By his address and ingenuity, he became the arbiter elegantiarum to the court, and manager of the opera-house, by which means he contrived to gain 5000*l.* a year. He was a man of good humour and liberality, and died in 1749.---Gen. Biog. Dict.

Heil (Daniel van), a painter of Brussels, was born in 1604. He had a great reputation as a painter of landscapes, and in representing houses on fire. His brother, John Baptist, excelled in painting history and portrait. The other brother, Leonard, had a fine taste for painting flowers and insects ---Houbraken.

Hein (Peter), an obscure man, who rose by his bravery to the command of the Dutch fleet, with which he defeated that of Spain on the coast of Brazil in 1626. He was slain in fighting with the French off Dunkirk, in 1629. When the news arrived, the states sent a deputation to condole with his mother on the melancholy occasion; but the old woman only replied, "Ah, I always said Peter was an unlucky dog, and would come to an untimely end."---Moreri.

Heineccius (John Gottlieb), a German lawyer, born at Eisemburg in 1681. He was professor of philosophy, and afterwards of law, at Halle, from whence he removed to Franeker; and in 1727 accepted the law-professorship at Frankfort on the Oder. In 1733 he resumed his former station at Halle, and died there in 1741. He wrote several books on jurisprudence and philosophy, in Latin, collected in eight vols. 4to. 1744.---Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Heinecken (Christian Henry), a celebrated child at Lubeck, who died at the age of four years, in 1725. He is said to have been acquainted with the history of the Bible at the age of 14 months. At the time of his death he was versed in ecclesiastical history, and several of the Latin classics, the history of modern Europe, and spoke the German, Latin, French, and Dutch languages.---Moreri.

Heinsius (Daniel), an eminent critic, was born at Ghent, in 1580. He was made Greek professor at Leyden, when he was but eighteen; and afterwards he succeeded his master, Joseph Scaliger, in the professorship of politics and history. He died in 1621. He wrote poems: and several admired works in prose, as Laus Asini, Laus Pediculi.; and he illustrated many of the Greek and Latin classics.---Moreri.

Heinsius (Nicholas), son of the preceding, was born at Leyden, in 1620. He was an eminent Latin poet, and published editions of Virgil, Ovid, Claudian, and other classics, with notes. He died in 1681. ---Ibid.

Heister (Laurence), a celebrated physician, was born at Frankfort on the Main in 1683. He was professor at Altorf, and afterwards at Helmstadt, where he died in 1758. His principal works are Compendium Anatomicum; De Medicamentis Germaniæ indigenis sufficientibus; Institutiones chirurgicæ: Compendium Institutionum medicarum. His son, Elias Frederic, who died at Leyden in 1740, published Apologia pro Medicis Atheismo accusatis.---Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Hele (Thomas), an Englishman, who acquired so great a knowledge of the French language, as to write it with the elegance of a native. He was born in Gloucestershire, and served in the army till the peace in 1763, when he went to Italy, and afterwards settled at Paris, where he wrote comedies for the theatre. He died in 1780, aged about 40.—Ibid.

Helena (St.), a native of Bithynia, of obscure origin, but accomplished in mind and person. She became the wife of Constantine Chlorus, by whom she had the emperor Constantine. When her husband espoused the daughter of Maximilian-Hercules, in 292, he divorced Helena; but on the accession of her son she was recalled to court, and treated with the honours due to her rank. She visited the Holy Land, where she is said to have discovered the true cross. She founded several churches, and bestowed immense sums in charity. She died in the arms of her son, in 328, aged 80.—Moreri. Baillet Vies des Saints.

Heliodorus, bishop of Tricca in Thessaly, in the 4th century. He wrote, in his youth, a romance, entitled, The Amours of Theagenes and Chariclea, for which he was deposed in a synod of bishops, though some writers deny it. This work is extant.—Vossius. Bayle.

Heliogabalus (M. Aurelius Antonius), a Roman emperor, so called because he had been a priest of the sun. He was chosen emperor after the death of Macrinus, at the age of fourteen. He associated to himself in the government his grandmother Moesa, and his mother Sæmias; and chose a senate of women, over whom the latter presided. He afterwards fell into every kind of cruelty, and debauchery, raised his horse to the consular dignity, and caused divine honours to be paid to himself. He was assassinated in 222.—Moreri.

Hellanicus, a Greek historian, who wrote a history of ancient kings, and of the founders of famous towns. He died B. C. 411.—Dupin Bibl. Univ. des Hist. Prof.

Hellot (John), a French chemist who died at Paris, in 1766, aged 80. He was a member of the academy of sciences of Paris, and of the royal society at London. He wrote L'Art de la Teinture des Laines, et Elosses de Laine, 12mo. and several dissertations in the memoirs of the academy of sciences, besides other chemical pieces of merit. He also conducted for many years the Gazette de France.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Helmbreker (Theodore), an historical painter, was born at Haerlem in 1624, and died at Rome in 1694. He painted history and landscape.—Pilkington.

Helmont (Matthew van), a painter of Antwerp at the end of the 17th century. He painted markets, fruitshops, and chemical laboratories. His son was an excellent historical painter, and died in 1726.—Ibid.

Helmont (John Baptist van), a physician and chemist, was born at Brussels, in 1577, and educated at Louvain. He performed such cures that the inquisition caused him to be imprisoned on the charge of magic, but having vindicated himself he was set at liberty. He died in Holland, in 1644. He was a voluminous writer, but fanciful and credulous. His son Francis was an able physician, and died in 1699.—Moreri.

Heloise, the mistress of Abelard, died in 1163. See Abelard.

Helsham (Richard), an Irish physician, and professor of medicine and natural philosophy at Trinity college, Dublin. He was the author of Lectures on Natural Philosophy, which possess merit.--Gen. Biog. Dict.

Helst (Bartholomew van der), an historical and portrait painter, was born at Haerlem, in 1613, and died in 1670.—Houbraken.

Helvetius (Adrian), a Dutch physician, who settled at Paris, and by administering ipecacuanha in the dysentery, which raged violently in that city, gained a pension, and the appointment of inspector-general of the military hospitals. He died in 1727, aged 65. He wrote some medical treatises. —Moreri.

Helvetius (John Claude), son of the preceding, was born in 1685. He was a man of skill and humanity. He died in 1755. His works are, 1. Idée générale de l'Economie animale, 1722; 2. Principia Physico-Medica in Tyronum Medicinæ Gratiam conscripta, 2 vols. 8vo.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Helvetius (Claude-Adrian), son of the last-mentioned, was born at Paris, in 1715. In 1758, he produced his celebrated work, entitled, L'Esprit, which for its atheistical principles, was condemned by the parliament of Paris. On this he went to England, and from thence to Prussia, where he was well received by the king. On his return to France, he led a retired life, and died in 1771. Besides the above, he wrote Le Bonheur, a poem; Of Man, a philosophical work, of the same cast as his first performance; The Child of Nature improved by Chance, an indecent romance.—Ibid.

Helvicus (Christopher), professor of the Greek and Oriental languages, and also of divinity, at Giessen, was born in 1581, near Frankfort, and educated at Marpurg. He died in 1617. He published several Latin poems, grammars of different languages, lexicons, and chronological tables.—Bayle.

Helyot (Peter), a Franciscan monk, was of English extraction, and the author of a work, entitled, A History of monastic Orders, in 8 vols. 4to. He died in 1716, aged 56.—Moreri.

Hemelar (John), a divine of the Roman church, was born at the Hague, and became canon in the cathedral of Antwerp. He published Commentaries on the imperial Medals from Julius Cæsar to Justinian. He died in 1640.—Moreri.

Hemmingford (Walter de), an English chronicler of the 14th century, whose work extends from 1066 to 1303. He was an ecclesiastic in Gisborough abbey, Yorkshire, and died in 1347.—Pits.

Hemskirk (Egbert), called Hemskirk the Old, was an excellent painter of droll subjects and conversations.—Pilk.

Hemskirk (Egbert), called the Young, was probably the son of the above. He had a whimsical imagination, many of his pieces being representations of the nocturnal meetings of witches and devils. He died in 1704, aged 59.—Ibid.

Hemmerlin, or Malleolus (Felix), a canon of Zurich in 1428. He lost his benefices for satirizing the secular and regular clergy, and was sent to prison. His Opuscula are very rare.—Moreri.

Hemsterhuis (Tiberius), a learned critic, was born at Groningen, in 1685, and at the age of 19 was appointed professor of mathematics and philosophy at Amsterdam. In 1717 he became professor of Greek at Franeker, to which was added the professorship of history. He afterwards filled the same offices at Leyden, where he died in 1766. He published, 1. the three last books of Julius Pollux's Onomasticon, in 1706; 2. The works of Lucian; 3. The Plutus of Aristophanes; and other esteemed works.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Henault (John), a French poet, was born at Paris. The superintendant Fouquet gave him the place of receiver of the taxes at Fores. He wrote a satirical poem on Colbert, and several pieces of merit. His conduct was irregular, and his principles libertine, but he died penitent in 1682.—Bayle.

Henault (Charles John Francis), a French writer, was born at Paris, in 1685. In 1715 he produced a tragedy, which had a bad success; but Mr. Walpole in 1768, obtained it from the author, and printed it at Strawberry-hill. In 1706 he was admitted a counsellor of parliament, and in 1710 president of the chamber of inquests. In 1744 he published his chronological abridgment of the History of France, which is highly esteemed. He also wrote some comedies, and died in 1770.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Henderson (Alexander), a Scotch presbyterian divine, who was at the head of his party on account of his learning and eloquence. He was sent to England as a plenipotentiary, and when Charles I. was at Newcastle in 1646, he engaged in a dispute with him about episcopacy, in which Henderson was completely overcome. This disgrace, it is said, hastened his end; and before his death he expressed his concern at the part he had taken against the king.—Granger.

Henderson (John), an English actor, was born in London in 1747. Having a taste for drawing, he was placed under Mr. Fournier, an artist of ability, but of an eccentric character, with whom he did not continue long. He next lived with a silversmith, on whose death he devoted himself to theatrical studies. His first appearance was at Bath, under the name of Courtney, in 1772, in the character of Hamlet, which he performed with great applause. His fame increased, but it was not till 1777 that he made his appearance on the London stage, when he was engaged by Mr. Colman at the Haymarket theatre, where his first character was Shylock. After this he distinguished himself as a first-rate performer in Falstaff, Richard III. and other arduous parts, which he personated with unbounded applause at Drury-lane, and at different provincial theatres. He died of a spasm in the brain, in 1785.---Life by Ireland.

HENDERSON (John), an extraordinary genius, was born at Ballagarance in Ireland, in 1757. His father was a preacher in Mr. Wesley's connection, and afterwards a school-master near Bristol. Young Henderson received his education among the methodists, and made so quick a progress as to be employed in teaching Latin in Kingswood school at eight years of age, and Greek in lady Huntingdon's college in Wales when he was no more than twelve. Dr. Tucker, dean of Gloucester, sent him to Pembroke college, Oxford, where he took his degree of B.A. but never entered into orders. His habits and studies were alike singular. He wore no neckcloth. His buckles did not exceed the size of an ordinary knee-buckle. He generally went to rest about day-break, and rose in the afternoon. He used to strip himself naked to the waist, and going to the pump, would completely sluice himself, after which he would pump over his shirt, and in that condition go to bed. His learning was multifarious; but he delighted chiefly in alchemy, physiognomy, and the occult arts. He died at Oxford in 1788.---Fun. Serm. by Agutter. Europ. Mag.

HENGIST, the first Saxon king of Kent, towards the end of the 5th century, was a descendant of Woden, whom the Saxons deified. Hengist being called in by Vortigern, king of the Britons, to assist him in expelling the Picts, took with him his daughter Rowena, with whom Vortigern became enamoured, and married her. Hengist then obtained the kingdom of Kent. He died in 489.---Bede. William of Malmesbury.

HENLEY (Anthony), an English writer and senator, was born in Hampshire, and educated at Oxford. In 1698 he was chosen member of parliament for Andover. He wrote some papers in the Tatler and Medley, and died in 1711. His son Robert became earl of Northington, and lord chancellor.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

HENLEY (John), commonly called the Orator, was born at Melton Mowbray in Leicestershire, in 1692, and brought up at Cambridge, after which he entered into orders, and became a preacher in London, but disgraced himself by setting up a lecture on Sunday evenings, near Lincoln's-inn-fields. He had also another on Wednesdays, chiefly on political subjects. He published a translation of Pliny's Epistles, and other works. He died in 1756.—Ibid.

HENNUYER (John), a French bishop, who saved the protestants in his diocese of Lisieux, at the time of the Bartholomew massacre, against the orders of Charles IX. He died in 1577.—Moreri.

HENRY I. surnamed the Fowler, emperor of Germany, was the son of Otho duke of Saxony, and elected to the imperial dignity in 919 or 920. He re-united the German princes, and subdued the Hungarians, formed good laws, and built several cities. He vanquished the Bohemians, the Sclavonians, and Danes, and conquered the kingdom of Lorraine. He died in 936, and was succeeded by his son Otho.—Univ. Hist.

HENRY II. called the Lame, grandson of the preceding, was elected emperor in 1002. He re-established Benedict VIII. in the papal chair, and was crowned by that pontiff in 1014 at Rome. He tranquillised Italy, and expelled from thence the Saracens and Greeks. He died in 1024.—Ibid.

HENRY III. or the Black, son of Conrad II. was born in 1017, and succeeded his father in 1039. He was crowned at Rome by Clement II. and died in 1056.—Ibid.

HENRY IV. the Great, son and successor of the preceding, was born in 1050. Agnes his mother, governed with ability during his minority. The Saxons rebelled against him, and accused him of simony, and other crimes, to pope Gregory VII. who took from him the right of presenting to benefices. Henry then called a diet at Worms in 1076, for the purpose of deposing the pope, who anathematized the emperor. The German princes deposed Henry, who went to Italy, and made his submission to the pontiff, but Gregory was not to be appeased, and Henry resolved on vengeance. The electors chose Rodolphus duke of Suabia, and Gregory confirmed his title; but Henry, after defeating his competitor, put him to death. He then called a council, which deposed the pope, and elected in his room the archbishop of Ravenna. In 1106 his son Henry assumed the title, and being supported by the princes of the empire, the emperor was obliged to renounce his crown; after which he became a wanderer, and supplicated the archbishop of Spires to give him a prebend in his church, which he refused. He died at Liege in 1106.—Ibid.

HENRY V. or the Young, born in 1081; deposed his father in 1106. In 1110 he forced pope Paschal II. to restore to him the right of nominating to ecclesiastical benefices, which Gregory VII. had wrested from his father. Paschal afterwards called two councils, and excommunicated Henry, who returned to Italy, where he opposed the election of Gelasius II. But in 1122 he submitted to the pope. He died in 1125.—Ibid.

HENRY VI. the Severe, son of Frederic Barbarossa, succeeded his father in 1190, at the age of 25. This prince behaved treacherously to Richard I. king of England, who, in his journey from the crusade through Germany, was arrested by Leopold duke of Austria, and sent to the emperor, who exacted from him an enormous ransom. His wife Constance poisoned him in 1198.—Ibid.

Henry VII. son of Henry count of Luxemburg, was elected emperor in 1308, aged 45, and soon after went into Italy, at that time distracted with the contentions between the Guelphs and Gibelins. He was crowned at Rome in 1312, and died the year following.—Univ. Hist.

Henry Raspon, landgrave of Thuringia, was elected emperor by the ecclesiastical princes in 1246, when pope Innocent IV. deposed Frederic II. but the new emperor died the year following of a wound received in fighting against his competitor.—Moreri.

Henry I. king of England, called, on account of his learning, Beauclerc, was the youngest son of William the Conqueror, and succeeded his brother Rufus in 1100, at which time his elder brother Robert was in Normandy. Robert soon after invaded the kingdom, but agreed with Henry for a yearly tribute to renounce his right; afterwards the two brothers differed, and Henry invaded Normandy, deposed Robert, and brought him prisoner to England, where he died in Cardiff castle. He restored the university of Cambridge, forgave all debts owing to the crown prior to his accession, reformed the court, and conquered Wales. He died in Normandy, in 1135, and his remains were brought to England, and interred in the abbey of Reading. He abolished the curfew-bell, established a standard for weights and measures, and signed the charter which proved the origin of the English liberties.—Rapin. Hume.

Henry II. son of Geoffrey Plantagenet and Maud empress of Germany, succeeded Stephen in 1154. He added the provinces of Anjou, Touraine, Maine, Poitou, Saintonge, Guienne, and Gascony, to the English crown. His reign was troubled by disputes between him and Becket, archbishop of Canterbury, who being murdered in 1171, the pope obliged the king to undergo penance for it at Becket's tomb at Canterbury. In 1170 he caused his eldest son Henry to be crowned king of England. In 1172 he conquered Ireland; and the year following his sons rebelled against him, being instigated by their mother, on account of Henry's attachment to the fair Rosamond. The kings of France and Scotland gave them assistance, but peace was concluded between all parties the following year. In 1182 his son Henry died, in his 20th year. Richard, his third son, revolted against his father, and was supported by the king of France. Henry, being defeated in Normandy, was obliged to submit to disgraceful terms. He died in 1189, in the 56th year of his age.—Hist. by Lord Lyttelton.

Henry III. was born at Winchester, and succeeded his father, John, in 1216. He was obliged to relinquish Normandy, Anjou, Poitou, Touraine, and Maine, to the king of France, after which a civil war broke out in England, and the king was taken prisoner by the barons. The tide of affairs turning in his favour, he deprived several of these lords of their estates, and gave them to his friends. He cancelled the Great Charter, and suffered the pope to appoint an archbishop of Canterbury, and to collect tenths in this kingdom. He died in 1272, aged 65 years.—Rapin. Hume.

Henry IV., deposed his cousin Richard II. and seized the throne in 1399. He was the son of John of Gaunt, duke of Lancaster, the third son of Edward III. This usurpation gave rise to the civil war between the houses of York and Lancaster. Henry died in 1413, and was succeeded by his son, Henry V. who was born at Monmouth. In his youth he was very wild, but on coming to the crown he discarded his licentious companions, and conducted himself with a dignity becoming his station. Having formed the project of conquering France, he left his kingdom in the hands of a regency, and invaded that country, where he displayed uncommon courage. With 15,000 men he gained the battle of Agincourt, though the French amounted to 52,000. He then returned to England, but three years afterwards he went again to France, where he married Catherine, the daughter of the French king. He died at Vincennes, in 1422. He was a brave, humane, and virtuous prince, with a strong sense of religion, and signally temperate in his deportment.—Ibid.

Henry VI., the son of the above, was but ten months old at the death of his father. His grandfather Charles, king of France, died soon after, and the duke of Orleans, encouraged by the minority of Henry, assumed the title of king, by the name of Charles VII. This renewed the war, and the English for a while were successful. Henry was crowned at Paris, and the great duke of Bedford, his guardian, obtained several important victories. But the raising of the siege of Orleans by Joan of Arc gave a new turn to affairs, and the English interest declined. The death of the duke of Bedford was a fatal blow to the cause of Henry; and to add to his misfortunes, the York party in England grew strong, and involved the country in a civil war. They adopted the white rose as their badge of distinction, and the Lancastrians the red. After various contests the king was defeated and taken prisoner. However, his wife, Margaret of Anjou, carried on the war with spirit, and for some time with considerable success. Richard duke of York was slain at Wakefield, and Henry recovered his liberty. But Edward earl of March, son of Richard, laid claim to the crown, and routed the queen's forces at Ludlow, but he was afterwards defeated at St. Alban's. At length the York party prevailed, and Henry was sent to the Tower, where he was slain by Richard duke of Gloucester in 1471. He was a mild and religious prince, but of weak parts.—Rapin. Hume.

HENRY VII. the son of Edmund earl of Richmond, and of Margaret of the house of Lancaster. By the assistance of the duke of Brittany he landed in Wales with some troops and laid claim to the crown in 1485. The people, disgusted at the cruelties of Richard III. joined him in such numbers that he was enabled to give the usurper battle at Bosworth field, where Richard was slain, and Henry crowned on the spot. He united the two houses by marrying Elizabeth, daughter of Edward IV. His reign met with little disturbance, except from two impostors set up by lady Margaret, sister to Edward IV.; one was a baker's son, called Lambert Simnel, who personated Richard duke of York, who had been murdered by the duke of Gloucester in the Tower. On being taken prisoner, Henry made him a turn-spit in his kitchen. The other was Perkin Warbeck, who pretended to be Edward V.; but he was soon taken and hanged at Tyburn. Henry reigned 24 years and greatly increased trade and commerce, but his avarice was excessive. He died in 1509, aged 52, and was buried in Henry the seventh's chapel, built by him in Westminster abbey.—Rapin. Hume. Lord Bacon.

HENRY VIII. succeeded his father, the preceding monarch, at the age of 18. The first years of his reign were very popular, owing to his great generosity, but at length his conduct grew capricious and arbitrary. The emperor Maximilian and pope Julius II. having leagued against France, persuaded Henry to join them, and he in consequence invaded that kingdom, where he made some conquests. About the same time James IV. king of Scotland, invaded England, but was defeated and slain at Flodden-field. Cardinal Wolsey succeeded in bringing Henry over from the imperial interests to that of the French king. When Luther commenced the Reformation in Germany, Henry wrote a book against him, for which he was complimented by the pope with the title of defender of the faith. But this attachment to the Roman see, did not last long; for having conceived an affection for Anne Boleyn, he determined to divorce his wife Catherine of Arragon, to whom he had been married 18 years. His plea for the divorce was, that Catharine was his brother Arthur's widow. The divorce being refused by the pope, Henry assumed the title of supreme head of the English church, broke down the monasteries, and alienated their possessions to secular purposes. His marriage with Anne Boleyn followed; but afterwards he brought her to the scaffold, and married lady Jane Seymour, who died in child-bed. He next married Anne of Cleves; but she not proving agreeable to his expectations, he put her away, and caused Cromwell, earl of Essex, the promoter of the match, to be beheaded. His next wife was Catharine Howard, who was beheaded for adultery; after which he espoused Catherine Parr, who survived him. Henry died in 1546. He was a man of strong passions, and considerable learning; but it is well said of him "that he never spared man in his anger, nor woman in his lust."—Ibid.

HENRY I. king of France, succeeded his father Robert in 1031. His mother, Constance of Provence, excited a revolt against him in favour of her second son Robert, but without success. Henry died with the reputation of a valiant commander and a good king, in 1060, aged 55 years.—Moreri. Henault. Mezeray.

HENRY II., the son of Francis I. succeeded his father in 1547, at which time France was at war with England. In 1550 peace was restored, and Boulogne yielded to the French for a large sum. The year following a league was entered into between him and the protestant princes of Germany against Charles V., which produced a ruinous war to France. In 1556 a truce was settled for five years, but the emperor having resigned his crown to his son Philip, the war was renewed. In 1557 the French army was defeated at St. Quintin. In 1559 Henry concluded a dishonourable peace. The same year he was wounded at a tournament by a lance, of which he died.—Ibid.

HENRY III. third son of the above, succeeded his brother Charles IX. in 1573. While he was duke of Anjou the Poles elected him to their throne on the death of Sigismund Augustus; but he renounced it on taking possession of that of France. The same year he gained the battle of Dormans, and concluded a peace with the Huguenots, in which toleration was granted them. But this was revoked in 1585, and the protestant princes, of whom Henry king of Navarre was the chief, had recourse to arms. The king of Navarre defeated the catholic army in 1587. The duke of Guise, on the other hand, obtained a signal advantage over the Huguenots and their allies, but on his marching to Paris the gates were shut against him. The people, however, were attached to Guise, and the king was obliged to retire from his capital which was commanded by the head of the catholic league. Thus France was divided into three parties; the royalists, the Guises, and the Huguenots. At length the two first were reconciled in appearance, but Henry caused the duke to be assassinated soon after with his brother the cardinal. The flames of civil war broke out with additional fury. The pope excommunicated Henry, and the parliament instituted a criminal process against him. In this exigency he had recourse to the king of Navarre, who set out on his march to Paris; but the face of affairs was suddenly changed by the death of the king of France, who was assassinated by James Clement in 1589. He instituted the military order of the Holy Ghost.—Moreri.

Henry IV., called the Great, king of France and Navarre, was born at Pau, the capital of Bearn, in 1553. His father was Antony of Bourbon, king of Navarre, and his mother Joan d'Albert. Being descended from Louis IX. of France, he became the heir to that kingdom, but as he was educated a protestant his claim was resisted. He early distinguished himself by feats of arms. After the peace of St. Germain, in 1570, he was taken to the French court, and two years afterwards married Margaret, sister of Charles IX. At the rejoicings on this occasion happened the infamous massacre of St. Bartholomew. In 1576 he left Paris, and put himself at the head of the Huguenots. In 1587 he gained the battle of Courtras. In 1572 he succeeded to the throne of Navarre, and in 1589 to that of France; but his religion proving an obstacle against his coronation, he consented to abjure it in 1593. In 1595 he issued the edict of Nantz, granting toleration to the protestants. The same year he entered into a war with Spain, which lasted till 1598, after which his country enjoyed uninterrupted peace till his death. His abjuration was very disagreeable to the protestants, and did not prove quite satisfactory to the opposite party, who doubted his sincerity. His greatest enemies were the jesuits, one of whose pupils wounded him in the mouth in an attempt upon his life, which was finally taken away by Francis Ravaillac, May 14, 1610. This monarch truly merited the name of great, for he loved his people, and his constant aim was to make them happy.—Ibid. Sully's Memoirs.

Henry, prince of Wales, and the eldest son of James I., was born at Stirling, in 1594. He was a most amiable and accomplished prince, and a great patron of learning and science. He died in 1612, to the great grief of the nation, which had formed of him the highest expectations.—Life of prince Henry by Birch.

Henry of Huntingdon, an English historian, was canon of Lincoln and archdeacon of Huntingdon in the 12th century. He wrote a History of England to the year 1154, published in 1576, by Savile. He was also author of a Latin piece on the Contempt of the World, &c.—Nicholson's Historical Library. Pits.

Henry (Philip), a pious divine, was born at London in 1631, and educated at Westminster school, from whence he was removed to Christ-church, Oxford, after which he received presbyterian ordination, and settled at Worthenbury in Flintshire, but at the Restoration he was silenced for nonconformity. He died in 1685.—Life by his Son.

Henry (Matthew), a nonconformist divine, was the son of the above, and born at Broad Oak, in Flintshire, in 1662. He received his education under his father, and having made a considerable progress in learning, entered at Gray's-inn; but he renounced the study of the law, and became a dissenting minister at Chester, where he resided many years, and then removed to Hackney. He died at Nantwich, in 1714, and his remains were interred at Chester. His chief work is an Exposition of the Bible, in 5 vols. folio; besides which he wrote a Method of Prayer: a Discourse on the Lord's Supper; and other esteemed books of practical divinity.—Life by Tong.

Henry (Robert), a Scotch divine, was born at St. Ninian's in 1718, and educated at Edinburgh. In 1748 he was ordained as a presbyterian minister at Carlisle. He afterwards removed to Berwick, and in 1768 to Edinburgh, where he became minister of the New Gray-friars Church. In 1776 he was chosen one of the ministers at the Old church, and died in 1790. Dr. Henry is known as the author of a valuable history of Great Britain, to the reign of Henry VII. which has gone through several editions.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Henry (David), a printer who was a manager of, and writer in, the Gentleman's Magazine above 50 years. He married a sister of its original proprietor, Mr. Cave, and died in 1792, aged 82. He published several compilations; as a System of Husbandry, a Collection of Voyages, &c. —Ibid.

Heraclitus, a celebrated philosopher of Ephesus, who florished about 500 B. C. He was fond of solitude, and obtained the appellation of "the mourner," from his custom of weeping at the follies of men. He supported the doctrine of fatalism, and maintained, that the world was made of fire, which element he deified. He died in the 60th year of his age.—Stanley's Lives of Philosophers.

Heraclius, emperor of Rome, was the son of Heraclius governor of Africa. He dethroned Phocas in 610. Chosroes, king of Persia, having ravaged Palestine, and committed dreadful cruelties on the Christians, Heraclius marched against him, forced him to sue for peace, and to deliver up the holy cross, which the emperor carried into Jerusalem on his shoulders. The end of his reign was disturbed by ecclesiastical disputes, and the inroads of the Saracens. He died in 641.—Univ. Hist.

Heraclius-Constantine, son and successor of the above, was associated in the throne with his brother Heracleonas, agreeable to the will of Heraclius. He reigned only a few months, being poisoned, it is said, by his mother-in-law, Martina.—Ibid.

Heraclius, patriarch of Jerusalem, in the 12th century. He was a debauched and scandalous prelate, and shewed great enmity to Henry II. king of England, for not going to Jerusalem in person, agreeable to the terms of his penance, on account of the murder of Becket.—Moreri.

Heraldus (Desiderius), or Herault, a counsellor of Paris, who published some learned books, the chief of which is, the Adversaria, printed in 1599. He also wrote notes on Tertullian's Apology, Minutius Felix, and Arnobius. He died in 1649. His son was minister of the Walloon church, in London, and canon of Canterbury. Some of his sermons are in print.—Moreri.

Herbelot (Bartholomew d'), a learned orientalist, was born at Paris, in 1625. He obtained a pension from the king, and the place of regius professor of the Syriac language. Ferdinand II. grand duke of Tuscany made him a present of a large library of oriental manuscripts. He died at Paris in 1695. His great work, entitled, Bibliotheque Orientale, containing whatever relates to the knowledge of the eastern world, is universally known. The best edition is that of Paris, in 6 vols. 8vo. 1782. He also compiled a Turkish Dictionary.—Moreri.

Herbert (Mary), countess of Pembroke, was the sister of sir Philip Sidney. She translated from the French a tragedy called Annius, 1595, 12mo. and rendered into English some of David's psalms. She died in 1621. Ben Jonson wrote the following elegant epitaph for her:

Underneath this sable hearse
Lies the subject of all verse:
Sidney's sister, Pembroke's mother;
Death! ere thou hast kill'd another,
Fair and good and learn'd as she,
Time shall throw a dart at thee.—B. B.

Herbert (Edward), lord Herbert of Cherbury in Shropshire, was born in Montgomery castle, in 1581. He was educated at Oxford, after which he went on his travels. On his return he was made one of the king's counsellors for military affairs, and soon after was sent ambassador to France to intercede in behalf of the protestants. In 1625 he was made a peer of Ireland, and in 1631 an English peer. At the breaking out of the rebellion he sided with the parliament. He died in 1648. Lord Herbert was the author of some singular books: the most remarkable is entitled, De Veritate, in which he espouses deism. He also wrote the History of Henry VIII. a treatise in Latin on the Religion of the Gentiles, and his own Memoirs.—Biog. Brit.

Herbert (George), an English poet and divine, was brother of the above, and born in 1593. He received his education at Westminster school, from whence he was elected to Trinity college, Cambridge, where he was chosen fellow. He was also appointed orator to the university. On taking orders, he obtained the rectory of Bemerton, in Wilts, and a prebend of Lincoln. He was an exemplary divine, and died about 1635. His poems, entitled, The Temple, were printed in 1635, 12mo. and his Priest to the Temple in 1652.—Life by Walton.

Herbert (William), earl of Pembroke, was born at Wilton in Wiltshire, in 1580, and educated at New college, Oxford. In 1601 he succeeded to the family honours and estate. In 1626 he was chosen chancellor of Oxford, and about the same time made steward of the king's household. He died suddenly in 1630. His poems were printed in 1660, 8vo.—Walpole's Noble Authors.

Herbert (Thomas), an ingenious writer of the Pembroke family, was born at York. He went from Jesus college, Oxford, to Trinity college, Cambridge, after which he travelled four years. In 1634 he published, in folio, his Travels in Africa and Asia, a work of considerable merit. On the breaking out of the rebellion he joined the parliament party, but he afterwards served the king when a prisoner, with great fidelity, and at the Restoration was created a baronet. He died in 1682. Besides the above, he wrote an Historical Account of the two last Years of the Life of Charles I. 8vo.—Biog. Brit.

Herbinius (John), a native of Bitschen in Silesia, who wrote on Cataracts and Waterfalls; also De Statu Ecclesiarum Augustinæ Confessionis in Polonia, 4to. 1670. He died in 1676, aged 44.—Moreri.

Herissant (Louis-Antony Prosper), a physician and poet, was the son of a printer, and born in 1745, at Paris, where he died in 1769. He wrote L'Eloge de Gouthier d'Andernach, which was crowned by the faculty of medicine; L'Eloge de Du Cange; Poem upon Printing; Catalogue raisonnée des Plantes; Bibliotheque Physique de la France.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Heritier (Nicholas l'), a French dramatic poet. He was treasurer to the French guards, and historiographer of France, and died in 1680. He wrote two tragedies, called, Hercule Furieux, and Clavis, of indifferent merit.—Moreri.

Heritier (Marie Jeanne l') de Villandon, a French poetess, was daughter of the above, born in 1664, and died in 1734. She was a member of the academy of the Jeux Floraux, and of that of the Recovrati at Padua. Her works are: A Translation of Ovid's Epistles; La Tour Tenebreuse, an English tale; Les Caprices du Destin, a novel; L'Avare puni, a tale in verse.—Ibid.

Heritier de Brutelle (Charles Louis l'), a French botanist, was born at Paris, in 1745. Though he enjoyed places under government, he devoted himself wholly to botanical researches. In 1786, Dombey having brought from Peru and Chili an inestimable collection of plants, L'Heritier undertook to publish a description of them, which was executed at London, under the title of the Flora of Peru. On his return to Paris he published a work with the singular title of Flore de la Place Vendome. This ingenious man was assassinated in 1801, but his murderers were not discovered.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Herlicius (David), a German astrologer, was born in 1557, and got a great deal of money and reputation by an almanac, and books of pretended prophecies.—Ibid.

Herman (Paul), a botanist of Halle in Saxony, who was physician to the Dutch settlements at Ceylon, and afterwards botanical professor at Leyden. He died in 1695. His works are: Catalogue of the Plants in the Public Garden at Leyden; Cynosura Materiæ Medicæ, 2 vols. 4to.; Lugduno-Batavæ Flores; Paradisus Patavus; Museum Zeylanicum.—Ibid.

Hermann (James), a mathematician of Basle, where he was professor of law. He had been mathematical professor at Padua, and was employed by the czar Peter I. in forming an academy at Petersburg. He died at Basle, in 1733, aged 55. He wrote Responsio ad Considerationes circa Principia Calculi differentialis; De Phoronomia; De nova Accelerationis Lege, &c.; Disquisitio de Vibrationibus chordarum Censarum, Solutio Problematis de Trajectoriis Curvis in veniendis.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Hermant (Godefroi) a doctor of the Sorbonne, was born at Beauvais, in 1617. He became rector of the university of Paris, and died in 1690. He wrote the Lives of several of the Fathers, and some pieces against the jesuits and quietists.—Ibid.

Hermas (Pastor), or the Shepherd, a father of the church, who is said to be the same mentioned by St. Paul in his Epistle to the Romans. He is supposed to have died at Rome, about the year 81. A piece of his entitled The Shepherd, is still extant, and was translated into English by archbishop Wake.—Dupin.

Hermes (Trismegistus), an Egyptian priest and philosopher, who instructed his countrymen in the cultivation of the olive, the measurement of lands, and the knowledge of hieroglyphics. He wrote several books. There is a forgery which goes under his name, entitled, Poemander. He is supposed to have flourished A. M. 2076.—Moreri.

Hermias, a heretic of Galatia, in the 2d century, who maintained the eternity of the world and the materiality of God. He also asserted that the soul is composed of fire and spirit.—Dupin. Lardner.

Hermilly (Vaquette d'), a French historian, was born at Amiens, in 1707, and died at Paris, in 1778. He wrote the history of Majorca and Minorca; and translated Ferrera's History of Spain, and the Critical Theatre of Father Feijoo.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Hermogenes of Tarsus, a rhetorician of the second century. His works were published by Aldus in 1509, but the best edition is that of Laurentius at Geneva in 1614, 8vo.—Moreri.

Hermogenes, a heretic of the second century, was a native of Africa, and a philosopher of the stoic sect. He held matter to be the primary principle, and Idea the mother of all the elements.—Lardner. Dupin.

Herod the Great, was born at Ascalon in Judea, B. C. 70. He was the son of Antipater the Idumean, who appointed him governor of Galilee. Antony made him tetrarch, and Augustus confirmed to him the kingdom of Judæa. He governed with savage cruelty, and sacrificed his wife, Mariamne, her grandfather Hyrcanus, and brother Aristobulus. At the birth of our Saviour he caused all the infants of Bethlehem to be massacred, in hopes that he would fall in the number. He also put to death his sons Alexander and Aristobulus, so that Augustus said, "It was better to be Herod's hog than his son." He rebuilt the temple of Jerusalem, and in a time of famine sold his curiosities to relieve the sufferers. He died miserably about two or three years after the birth of Christ, aged 70.—Josephus.

Herod Antipas, the son of the above, succeeded his father as tetrarch of Galilee. He divorced his wife, the daughter of Aretas king of Arabia, and espoused Herodias, the wife of his brother Philip, on which Aretas declared war against him, and Herod sacrificed John the Baptist to the cruelty of Herodias; and his conduct occasioned the Jews to revolt. Being called to Rome to justify his conduct, he died on the road. This is the Herod to whom our Saviour was sent by Pilate.—Ibid.

Herodian, a Greek historian, who flourished A. D. 247. He was a native of Alexandria, but lived the greatest part of his life at Rome. He wrote a Roman history in Greek in eight books, the best editions of which are that of Politian, who also translated it into Latin, 4to. 1525; and that of Oxford, 8vo. 1708.—Vossius. Moreri.

Herodotus, a Greek historian, was born at Halicarnassus, 484 B. C. He went into voluntary exile when his country was oppressed by Lygdamis, but afterwards returned and expelled the tyrant. This, however, so far from pleasing his countrymen, irritated them against him, and he quitted Greece again. He recited his history with great applause at the Olympic games. His work, which is elegantly written, is a history of the wars of the Persians against the Greeks, from Cyrus to the reign of Xerxes. The best editions are that of Wesseling, fol. Amst. 1763; and that of Glasgow, 9 vols. 12mo. 1761. Mr. Beloe has given an excellent English translation of Herodotus.—Vossius. Fabricius.

Herophilus of Chalcedon, an ancient physician, who flourished 570 B. C. He was an accurate anatomist, and is said to ave discovered the lacteal vessels. He was lso a good botanist.—Moreri.

HERRERA TORDESILLAS (Antonio de), Spanish historian, was historiographer of ndia, and secretary of state. He wrote a General History of India in 4 vols. folio, which is a curious work. He also wrote a General History of Spain, in 3 vols. folio, nd died in 1625, aged 60.—Ibid.

HERRERA (Ferdinand de), a Spanish oet, was born at Seville. He published yric and heroic poems in 1582, and some rose works, as, the Life of Sir Thomas More; Relation of the War of Cyprus, nd the Battle of Lepanto; &c.—Ibid.

HERRING (Thomas), archbishop of Canerbury, was the son of a clergyman in Norfolk, and born in 1693. He received is education at Wisbeach, from whence he emoved to Jesus college, Cambridge. Afterward he was elected fellow of Corpus Christi college. On entering into orders he became minister of Great Shelford. In 722 he was appointed chaplain to Dr. Fleetwood, bishop of Ely. In 1726 he was hosen preacher to the society of Lincoln's-nn, and about the same time appointed haplain to the king. In 1731 he was made ean of Rochester, and in 1737 raised to he bishopric of Bangor, from whence in 743 he was translated to York. In the rebellion of 1745 he exerted himself with great eal in defence of the government, for which he was in 1747 advanced to the see f Canterbury. He died in 1757, and was uried at Croydon. A volume of his sermons on public occasions has been printed, nd Mr. Duncombe published a volume of is letters.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

HERSENT or HERSAN (Charles), a French ivine, who brought himself into trouble y a book entitled, Optatus Gallus de cauendo Schismate, in which he charged cardinal Richelieu with views inimical to the Gallican church. He quitted France and etired to Rome, where he was excommunicated for advancing some peculiar notions n grace. He then returned to France, and ied in 1660. He wrote a paraphrase of Solomon's Song, and other works.—Moreri.

HERTSBERG (Ewald Frederic von), an minent statesman, was born in Pomerania, 1725. His merit recommended him to a tuation in the department of foreign affairs at Berlin, and he afterwards became ecretary to the Prussian embassy at Vienna. The king made him counsellor of legation, n which capacity he distinguished himself s a profound politician. In 1752 his Essay n the Population of the Marche of Brandenburg obtained the prize from the academy of sciences at Berlin. He was employed to draw up every state paper and memorial of consequence, and was gradually advanced to the first offices in the kingdom, and the rank of nobility. He died in 1795.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

HERVEY (James), a pious divine, was the son of a clergyman at Hardingstone in Northamptonshire, where he was born in 1714. He received his education at the grammar school of Northampton, and removed from thence to Lincoln college, Oxford. In 1736 he became curate to his father, and soon afterwards went to Bideford in Devonshire, where he was greatly beloved by the parishioners: but in 1743 he was removed from that curacy, on which he returned home, and succeeded his father in his livings of Weston Favel, and Collingtree. In 1746 he published his Meditations among the Tombs, and Reflections in a Flower Garden, which being well received, he added another volume. In 1755 appeared his Theron and Aspasio, or Dialogues and Letters on important Subjects, in 3 vols. 8vo. well written, but Calvinistic. The profits of his works, which were considerable, he gave away in charitable purposes. This eminently pious man died of a consumption in 1758. His works were printed in 7 vols. 8vo. 1796.—Life prefixed to his Works.

HERVEY (Augustus John), third earl of Bristol, was born in 1724. He entered early into the navy, and was a lieutenant in 1744. That year he married miss Chudleigh, afterwards the celebrated duchess of Kingston. In 1747 he was made post-captain, and served with reputation in the Mediterranean. In 1763 he was appointed groom of the bed-chamber to the king. In 1771 he was made one of the lords of the admiralty; and in 1774 he succeeded his brother as earl of Bristol. He died in 1779, and his titles descended to his brother the bishop of Derry. His lady in 1768 obtained a decision in the commons which annulled their marriage, but the sentence was set aside by the house of lords in 1775, and she was found guilty of bigamy.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

HERWART, or HERVART (John George), chancellor of Bavaria, who wrote some singular works, entitled, 1. Chronologia nova et vera, 1626: 2. Admiranda Ethicæ Theologicæ Mysteri propalata, de antiquissima veterum Nationum Superstitione, qua Lapis Magnes pro Deo habitus colebatur, 4to. 1624.—Bayle.

HESAUSIUS (Tilemannus), a German Lutheran divine, was born at Wesel in 1526. He was of a violent spirit, and died in 1588. His works are: 1. Commentaries on the Psalms; 2. On Isaiah; 3. On St. Paul's Epistles: 4. On Justification and the Lord's Supper, &c.—Ibid.

HESIOD, an ancient Greek poet, was born at Ascera in Bœotia, but in what age is not certain; some placing him before and others after Homer. He was the first who wrote on agriculture; and his performance is entitled the Works and Days. His Theogony is valuable, as affording the best account of the ancient mythology. His Shield of Hercules is only a fragment of a larger work. The best edition of Hesiod is that of Le Clerc, Amsterdam, 1701; and his poems have been translated into English by Thomas Cooke.—Moreri. Vossius.

Hesse (William, prince of), immortalized his name as an encourager of learning, and by his studies and observations for many years of the heavenly bodies. For this purpose he built an observatory at Cassel, and called to his assistance two scientific men, Rothman and Byrge. His Observations were printed at Leyden, in 1618. He died in 1597.—Martin's Biog. Philos.

Hessels (John), professor of theology at Louvain, was born in 1522. He distinguished himself in the council of Trent, and was profoundly read in the ancient fathers, particularly Austin and Jerome. He died in 1566. His works are chiefly against the protestants.—Moreri.

Hesychius, a grammarian of Alexandria, who has left a valuable lexicon of Greek words, first published by Aldus Manutius in 1513. The best edition is that of Ruhnken in 1766, 2 vols. folio.—Ibid.

Hetzer (Lewis), a German socinian, who translated the Bible into his native language; but the version being suppressed, it is now become scarce. It was printed at Worms, 1529, folio. He died about 1540.—Meleb. Adam.

Hevelius (John), an astronomer, was born at Dantzic in 1611, of a distinguished family. He studied mathematics with great ardour, but devoted himself chiefly to astronomy, and built an observatory for the purpose of making accurate observations; the result of which he published in 1647, under the title of Selenographia, or a Description of the Moon, to which he added the phases of the other planets as observed by the telescope. This work was followed by many others, the most distinguished of which was his Cometographia, published in 1668. Having sent a copy of this book to Dr. Hooke, it occasioned a controversy between them on this point: "Whether distances and altitudes could be taken with plain sights nearer than to a minute," which Hooke denied, and Hevelius maintained. Hevelius died at Dantzic, in 1688. Besides the above works, he was the author of Uranographia 1690, fol.; De Natura Saturni; &c.—Martin's Biog. Phil. Hutton.

Hevin (Prudent), an eminent surgeon, was born at Paris in 1715, and died in 1789. He wrote Pathologie Chirurgica, 2 vols. 8vo.; Memoir on Strange Substances in the Œsophagus, &c.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Heurnius (John), an eminent physician, was born at Utrecht, in 1543. He became professor of medicine at Leyden, of which university he was also rector. He died in 1601. He wrote numerous commentaries on the works of Hippocrates, and some learned pieces, particularly one on the comet of 1577. His son, who succeeded him in the professorship, was also a learned writer.—Moreri.

Heusch (William de), a landscape painter, was born at Utrecht, in 1638. He was the disciple of John Both, and adhered to the manner of his master. He died at the close of the 17th century. His nephew Jacob was also eminent in the same line, and died in 1701, aged 44. There was likewise one Abraham de Heusch, a painter of the same place, who acquired reputation as a painter of plants and insects.—Pilkington.

Heusinger (John Michael), a famous divine, born at Sunderhausen, in Thuringia, in 1690. In 1730 he was made professor at Gotha, but in 1738 he removed to Eisenach, where he died in 1751. He published editions of several Greek and Latin classics, and some learned treatises of his own. His nephew James became master of the school at Wolfenbuttle, and died in 1778. He published several learned pieces on ancient authors.—Gen. B. D.

Hewson (William), an ingenious anatomist, assistant first to Dr. William Hunter, and afterwards his partner; but a difference arising between them, Mr. Hewson read anatomical lectures in his own house. He published Inquiries into the Properties of the Blood, and the Lymphatic System, 2 vols. 8vo. He had also a dispute with Dr. Monro, on the discovery of the lymphatic system of vessels in oviparous animals. He died in 1774, aged 35.—Mortimer's Student's Dictionary.

Hexham (John of), an English benedictine monk in the 12th century, who composed some historical works of merit.—Pitt.

Heyden (John van der), an eminent landscape painter, was born at Gorcum, in 1637, and died in 1712.—Pilkington.

Heylyn (Peter), a learned divine, was born at Burford, in Oxfordshire, in 1600, and educated at Hart-hall, Oxford, but afterwards he obtained a fellowship of Magdalen college, where he read cosmographical lectures. In 1621 he published his Description of the World, which he afterwards enlarged under the title of Cosmography. In 1628 he was appointed chaplain in ordinary to the king, and in 1631 obtained a prebend of Westminster, which was followed by the living of Houghton in the diocese of Durham. In 1633 he took his degree of D. D. He obtained some other preferments, of which he was deprived by the parliament, and voted a delinquent, his goods were also confiscated, and his person endangered. At the Restoration he was restored to his prebend, and died in 1662. He was a man of great abilities, and uncommon industry. His principal works besides the above are, the History of the Reformation in England; History of the Presbyterians, fol.; Life of Abp. Laud, folio.—Life prefixed to his Miscellaneous Tracts.

Heywood (John), an English poet, was born at London, and bred at Oxford. He was one of the first who wrote plays in our language, and is said to have been well killed in music. He was a great favourite with Henry VIII. and queen Mary, but on the accession of Elizabeth he went to Mechlin, where he died in 1565. One of his principal performances is entitled, The Spider and Fly, a Parable, in 4to. 1596. His son, Ellis Heywood, became a jesuit, and died at Louvain in 1572. He wrote a book in Italian, called, Il Moro.—Wood, A. O.

Heywood (Jasper), the brother of the above John Heywood, was born in 1535, and educated at Merton college, Oxford; after which he was chosen master of All Souls; but in 1561 he went to Rome, where he entered among the jesuits. He died at Naples in 1597. He wrote some pieces in a book called, The Paradise of Dainty Devices, 1573, 4to.—Ibid.

Heywood (Thomas), an actor and dramatic writer, who died at the beginning of the reign of Charles I. It is said that he wrote 220 plays, of which only 24 are now extant, and those of no merit.—Biog. Dram.

Heywood (Oliver), a nonconformist divine, was born at Bolton in Lancashire in 1629, and educated at Trinity college, Cambridge, after which he settled as minister at Coley, in Yorkshire, from whence he was ejected in 1662. He suffered much for preaching privately, and was excommunicated. He died in 1702. His works are: Heart's Treasure, 12mo.; Closet Prayer, 12mo.; Life of Mr. Angier, 8vo.; Meetness for Heaven; and other pious tracts. There was also a Mr. Nathanael Heywood, who was deprived for nonconformity. He was likewise a native of Bolton, and died in 1677. Some of his Sermons are in print.—Calamy. Palmer.

Hicetas, an ancient philosopher of Syracuse, who lived about 340 B. C. He maintained that the sun and the stars were fixed, and that the earth had a circular motion.—Diog. Laert.

Hickes (George), a learned divine, was born in 1642 at Newsham, in Yorkshire, and educated at North Allerton, from whence he removed to St. John's college, Oxford; but afterwards he became fellow of Lincoln. In 1676 he was appointed chaplain to the duke of Lauderdale, whom he attended to Scotland, and at St. Andrew's received the degree of D. D. which was confirmed by the university of Oxford. In 1683 he was made dean of Worcester, of which he was deprived at the Revolution for refusing the oaths. The deprived bishops having consulted about preserving the episcopal succession among the non-jurors, recommended Dr. Hickes to king James, and he accordingly went over to France to wait on the exiled monarch, who confirmed their proceedings, and the doctor was consecrated suffragan bishop of Thetford. He was a man of strong mind, great resolution, and great abilities. He died in 1715. He wrote several theological treatises, mostly polemical; but his chief works are, Linguarum veterum Septentrionalium Thesaurus, fol.; and Grammatica Anglo-Saxonica, 4to. His sermons are close and argumentative, and full of excellent learning well applied.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Hickes (John), brother of the above, but of different principles. He became a presbyterian, and was deprived of the living of Stoke, in Devonshire, in 1662, for nonconformity. In 1685 he joined the duke of Monmouth's army, for which he was executed.—Calamy. Palmer.

Hickman (Henry), a learned divine, was fellow of Magdalen college, Oxford, and ejected in 1662 for nonconformity. He afterwards became minister of the English congregation at Leyden, where he died about 1688. He wrote against Heylyn's quinquarticular history, and other works.—Calamy.

Hiero I. king of Syracuse, succeeded his brother Gelon B. C. 478. He declared war against Theron the tyrant of Agrigentum, and took Himera. He gained three crowns at the Olympic games, for which he is celebrated by Pindar. The conversation of that bard and other eminent men softened his disposition, which was naturally impetuous, and rendered him humane and liberal. He died B. C. 467.—Univ. Hist.

Hiero II. king of Syracuse, was a prince of great virtues. He was a descendant of Gelon, and elected king B. C 268. He carried on a war against the Romans for some time, assisted by the Carthaginians, but he was obliged to make peace. He was the relation and friend of Archimedes, and greatly encouraged arts and commerce. He died regretted by his subjects, B. C. 225. He was succeeded by his grandson Hieronymus, who reigned with such rigour that the Syracusans assassinated him and expelled the family.—Ibid.

Hierocles, a persecutor of the christians in the fourth century. He was president of Bithynia, and afterwards governor of Alexandria, where he committed shocking cruelties. He wrote some books against the christians, mentioned by Lactantius and Eusebius. The remains of his writings were published by bishop Pearson in 1654, with a curious discourse upon them.—Cave, Hist. Lit. Bayle.

Hierocles, a Platonic philosopher of the fifth century, who flourished at Alexandria with reputation. He wrote seven books on Providence and Destiny, and a Commentary on the Golden Verses of Pythagoras; the latter of which is extant, also fragments of the former.—Bayle.

Hifernan (Paul), a modern author of great eccentricity, was born in Ireland in 1718. He took the grade of doctor of physic, and practised some time in Dublin, but meeting with no success, he went to London and commenced author. Some of the most eminent wits of the day were kind to him, and he contrived to live tolerably. He died in 1775. He wrote a periodical work at Dublin, called The Tickler; another called The Tuser; and two or three dramatic trifles.—Biog. Dram.

Higden (Ralph), an English historian, who wrote a work entitled, Polychronicon, first printed by Caxton, and again in 1642. Higden died in 1363.—Nicholson's Hist. Lib.

Higgins (John), an English divine and schoolmaster, who lived at Winsham near Ilminster, in Somersetshire, and died about 1608. He published some school-books, a treatise on Christ's Descent into Hell, and part of the Mirrour for Magistrates. —Gen. B. D.

Higgons (sir Thomas), an English writer and statesman, was born in Shropshire, and educated at Alban hall, Oxford. For his great services to the crown, he obtained, at the Restoration, a pension and knighthood. He was also sent envoy-extraordinary to Vienna. He died in 1691. His works are, A Panegyric to the King; A Funeral Oration for his first lady; The History of Isuf Bassa.—Ibid.

Higgons (Bevil), younger son of the above, was educated at St. John's college, Oxford, from whence he removed to the Middle Temple. He wrote some poems; and a Tragedy called, The Generous Conqueror, or the Timely Discovery. He was also the author of remarks on bishop Burnet's History of his own Times; and a short View of the English History. He accompanied James II. to France, where he died in 1735.—Ibid.

Highmore (Nathanael), an English anatomist, was born at Fordingbridge, in Hampshire. He wrote Corporis humani Disquisitio Anatomicæ, folio; The History of Generation; De Passione Hysterica. He died in 1684, aged 71.—Ibid.

Highmore (Joseph), an English painter, was born at London in 1692, and bred an attorney, but he abandoned that profession, for painting, and became an accomplished artist. He painted the portraits of several eminent persons, also a set of pictures, the subjects of which were taken from Richardson's Pamela. At the institution of the royal academy, he was chosen one of the professors. His greatest performances are, Hagar and Ishmael, at the Foundling-hospital; the finding of Moses; and the good Samaritan. He was also eminent for his literary abilities, and published A critical Examination of the two paintings by Rubens, on the Cieling of the Banqueting House at Whitehall, &c. 4to.; The Practice of Perspective on the Principles of Dr. Brooke Taylor, 4to; Observations on a Pamphlet entitled Christianity not founded on Argument; two volumes of Essays, 12mo. He died in 1780.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Hilarion, the founder of the monastic life in Palestine, was born at Gaza in 291. He visited St. Anthony the anchorite in Egypt, and on his return to his own country, followed his example, and obtained a number of followers. He died in the island of Cyprus in 371.—Moreri. Dupin.

Hilarieuse (Joseph), an eminent antiquary and medallist, was born at Enzesfield in Austria in 1737. In 1751 he entered into the society of jesuits, and afterwards became eminent as a teacher of grammar and rhetoric at Vienna, where he was appointed præfectus rei nummariæ. In 1770 he renounced his order, and was appointed director of the imperial cabinet of ancient coins. He was likewise dean of philosophy. He died in 1798.—Monthly Mag.

Hilary (St.), a father of the church in the fourth century, was born at Poictiers in France, and did not embrace christianity till he was advanced in life. On being instructed in the principles of religion, he was baptized with his wife and daughter. In 355 he was made bishop of Poictiers, and the year following sent by Constantius to defend Athanasius at the synod of Beziers against Saturninus, which he did with such zeal that Saturninus prevailed on the emperor to banish him to Phrygia, where he wrote his books on the Trinity. He was also the author of a treatise on Synods. He died in 367. The best edition of his works is that of Paris in 1693.—Moreri. Dupin.

Hilary, a saint of the Roman calendar, was born at Arles, in 401. He succeeded Honoratus in the bishopric of Arles, and presided in a council at Rome, in 441. He died at the age of 48. His works are, 1. Homilies, under the name of Eusebius of Emesa; 2. The Life of St. Honoratus; 3. Opuscula.—Ibid.

Hildebert, archbishop of Tours, was born in France in the 12th century. He is said to have lived licentiously before he entered the ecclesiastical state; but he was a man of learning, and became eminently pious. He wrote a letter against the court of Rome, in which he describes its vices in lively terms. He died in 1132. His works were printed at Paris in 1708, 1 vol. folio. —Ibid.

Hildesley (Mark), an English bishop, was born at Marston, in Kent, in 1698, and educated at the Charter-house, from whence he was sent to Trinity college, Cambridge, where he was chosen fellow. In 1731 he obtained the living of Hitchin in Hertfordshire, and four years after that of Holwell in Bedfordshire, where he distinguished himself as a diligent parish priest. On the death of Dr. Wilson, bishop of Sodor and Man, the duke of Athol appointed Dr Hildesley to succeed him, in which office he closely trod in the steps of his excellent predecessor, whose design of printing a translation of the Bible in the Manks language he brought to a conclusion. He died in 1772.—Life by Butler, 8vo.

Hill (Joseph), an English divine, who published an enlarged edition of Schrevelius's Greek Lexicon. He was born at Bromley, in Yorkshire, in 1625, and received his education at St. John's college, Cambridge, after which he became fellow of Magdalen college, from whence he was ejected in 1662 for nonconformity. He died pastor of a congregation at Rotterdam, in 1707. Besides his Lexicon he wrote Dissertations on the Antiquity of Temples and Churches.—Calamy.

Hill (William), an English critic, was fellow of Merton college, Oxford, and afterwards master of a school in Dublin, where he died in 1667. He prepared an edition of Dionysius Periegetes, with notes, published in 1658.—Wood.

Hill (Aaron), an English poet, was born at London in 1685. At the age of fifteen he went to Constantinople to visit his relation lord Paget, ambassador there, whom he accompanied to England, in 1703. He next went with sir William Wentworth on the tour of Europe. In 1709 he became manager of Drury-lane theatre, for which he wrote his Elfrid, or the Fair Inconstant. The following year he became master of the Opera-house, and wrote the opera of Rinaldo, the first which Handel composed in England. About 1718 he published a poem called the Northern Star, or a Panegyric on Peter the Great, for which the empress Catherine sent him a gold medal. He was a great schemer as well as a poet; but as in the former character he never acquired riches, so in the latter he never rose above mediocrity. His works were published in four volumes, 8vo. after his death, in 1750.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Hill (sir John), a voluminous English writer, was born in 1716, and bred to the business of an apothecary, which he carried on some years in St. Martin's-lane. His first publication was a translation of Theophrastus's Tract on Gems, which procured him reputation, and induced him to undertake a Natural History, in 3 vols. folio. He became now a general writer on almost all subjects. He published a Supplement to Chambers's Cyclopædia, and conducted a Magazine, and a daily paper under the title of the Inspector. At this time he obtained his degree of M. D. from Scotland, and set up as an empyric, by inventing some popular remedies. Under the patronage of the earl of Bute he commenced a voluminous work, called the System of Botany; which he sent to the king of Sweden, who invested him with one of his orders of knighthood. He died in 1775. Besides the above works he wrote many others: as, Mrs. Glasse's Cookery; a Review of the Works of the Royal Society; some novels, and a few farces. These last brought him into a controversy with Garrick, who wrote the following epigram on him:

For physic and farces, his equal there scarce is,
His farces are physic, his physic a farce is.—Biog. Dram. Gen. B. D.

Hill (Robert), a self-taught genius of extraordinary merit was born in Hertfordshire in 1699, and bred a taylor and staymaker. By indefatigable application he acquired a sufficient knowledge of the Latin, Greek, and Hebrew languages, to be able to teach them. He died at Buckingham, in 1777 He wrote, Remarks on the Essay on Spirit; The Character of a Jew; Criticisms on Job.—Life by Spence.

Hill (Thomas Ford), a learned English antiquary and philologist, who died in 1795.—Gent. Mag.

Hillel, the elder, a Jewish doctor, who lived about 40 years B. C. He was president of the Sanhedrim, which office continued in his family six generations. He was one of the compilers of the Talmud.—Prideaux's Connection.

Hillel, the prince, grandson of Judas Hakkadosh, and a principal writer of the Gemara, or Commentary on the Mishna. He lived in the fourth century.—Moreri.

Hilliard (Nicholas), goldsmith and portrait-painter to queen Elizabeth, was born at Exeter in 1547. He painted portraits in miniature, and his works were highly prized. He painted the portrait of Mary queen of Scots, and that of queen Elizabeth, several times. He died in 1619. —Walpole's Anecd. of Painting.

Himerius, a Greek sophist and grammarian in the reigns of Constantius and Julian. He was born at Prusias in Bithynia, and kept a rhetoric school at Athens. He made several insidious attacks upon the christian faith.—Moreri.

Hinckley (John), an English divine and D. D. was born in Warwickshire, in 1617, and educated at Oxford. He became rector of Northfield, in Worcestershire, and died there in 1691. He published several sermons and other pieces, the chief of which is entitled, Fasciculus Literarum, or Letters on several Occasions, 8vo. 1680.—Wood.

Hincmar or Hincmarus, archbishop of Rheims in 845. He was a warm defender of the liberties of the Gallican church, but his conduct to the monk Godeschalc was very unjust. He was obliged to fly from Rheims when the Normans invaded that province. He died at Eperny in 882. His works were printed in 2 vols. folio, 1645. —Moreri. Bayle.

Hipparchia, a lady of Maronea, in Thrace, who lived in the time of Alexander the Great. From a love of philosophy she married Crates the stoic, who was both poor and ugly. She wrote some pieces which are lost —Diog. Laert.

Hipparchus, son of Pisistratus, king of Athens, after whose death, B. C. 528, he reigned with his brother Hippias. They both had a great love of letters, and protected learned men; but Hipparchus disgraced these qualities by an unnatural passion which he conceived for a youth named Harmodius, who with his friend Aristogiton, slew him, B. C. 513. Hippias reigned tyrannically about three years after his brother's death, and was then expelled. —Thucydides.

Hipparchus, an antient astronomer, was born at Nice, in Bithynia. He is supposed to have been the first who reduced astronomy into a regular science, and his Catalogue of Stars is still preserved in Ptolemy's Almagest. Pliny says he foretold the course of the sun and moon for 600 years, calculated according to the different manners of reckoning the months, days, and hours, in use among several nations, and for the different situations of places. He also formed the lunar period which bore his name. His Commentary on Aratus's Phænomena is extant; a correct edition of which was published by Petavius. He died 125 B. C. —Pliny. Vossius de Math.

Hippocrates, the father of medical science, was born in the isle of Cos, B. C. 460. Much fable seems to be blended with the narrative given of his life by different authors; but it is certain that he practised physic in Greece, and became so eminent as to be sent for by Perdiccas, king of Macedon, whom he pronounced incurable. He was also applied to by the Abderites to cure their countryman Democritus, whom they considered as mad, but Hippocrates declared that the philosopher was the only man in the city who was perfectly in his senses. On being requested by the kings of Illyria and Pæonia to visit their countries, then ravaged by the plague, he refused, but predicted that the disease would come to Athens. The people of that city conferred on him great honours, and voted a public maintenance for him and his family. He died B. C. 361. His memory is still venerated in his native island, and the inhabitants shew with pride a house in which they say he resided. The best editions of his works are those of Geneva, fol. 1657; Amsterdam, 2 vols. 8vo. 1665; and Vienna, 2 vols. folio, 1740.—Moreri. Bayle.

Hipponax a Greek satiric poet, was born at Ephesus 540 B. C. He was so deformed that two sculptors made ridiculous representations of him, for which he retaliated upon them with such severity in his satires that they hanged themselves.—Moreri.

Hiram, king of Tyre, the friend of David and Solomon, the latter of whom he greatly assisted in the building of the temple, by furnishing him with timber, gold, and silver, also with able workmen. The letters that passed between these two monarchs on this occasion are extant. He died B. C. 1000, after reigning 60 years.—Josephus.

Hiram, an excellent architect, who was sent by the Tyrian king of the same name to Jerusalem to superintend the building of Solomon's temple, which he performed in an admirable manner.—Ibid. Bayle.

Hire (Laurence de la), an eminent French painter, was born at Paris in 1606, and died in 1656. His landscapes were the most pleasing of his works, and were finished with great care: but he was deficient in perspective.—D'Argenville Vies des Peintres.

Hire (Philip de la), a celebrated mathematician, was son of the above, and born at Paris, in 1640. He studied painting under his father, but having a turn for mathematics, he quitted that profession and went to Italy, where he applied with diligence to his favourite art. On his return to France he was made a member of the academy of sciences, and employed by Colbert in constructing the great map of the kingdom, with Picard and Cassini. He died in 1711. His principal works are; 1. Traité de Mechanique; 2. Nouvelle Methode en Geometrie pour les Sections des Superficies Coniques & Cylindriques; 3. De la Cycloide; 4. Sectiones Conicæ in novem Libros distributæ; 5. Veterum Mathematicorum Opera Græce & Latine pleraque nunc primum edita, folio, &c.—Moreri.

Hire (Philip de la), son of the preceding, was bred a physician, and became a member of the academy of sciences, but he is principally distinguished by his excellence in painting landscapes. He died in 1719, aged 42.—Pilkington.

Hiscam or Hisjam, the 15th caliph of the Ommiadian race, and the fourth son of Abdalmalech, succeeded his brother Jezid II. in 723. He conquered Khacam king of Turquestan, and made war against Leo the Isaurian. He died in 743.—D'Herbelot.

Hoadley (Benjamin), a celebrated prelate, was born at Westerham, in Kent, in 1676, and educated at Catherine hall, Cambridge, of which he became fellow. In 1706 he commenced his polemical career by remarks on Dr. Atterbury's funeral sermon for Mr. Bennet; and in 1708 he answered another sermon of the same author on the Power of Charity to cover Sin. The year following he had a farther controversy with Atterbury on the doctrine of non-resistance, which recommended Hoadley to the notice of the house of commons, who addressed the queen to bestow preferment on him. On the accession of George I. he was made bishop of Bangor, which see he never visited, but continued in London, preaching and publishing party sermons. One of these on the spiritual kingdom of Christ, produced a violent dispute called the Bangorian controversy. He was afterwards engaged in a contest with Dr. Hare on the nature of prayer. From Bangor he was removed to Hereford, thence to Salisury, and lastly to Winchester. In 1735 e made an attack on the orthodox faith in is Plain Account of the Lord's Supper, hich he treated as a matter of mere indifrence. This excited another considera- e controversy. The bishop died in 1761. ll his works have been published in 4 ols. folio. His lordship's brother, Dr. ohn Hoadley, died archbishop of Arnagh, in 1746.—Biog. Brit.

HOADLEY (Benjamin), an ingenious physcian, was the eldest son of the bishop, nd born at London in 1705. He received is education at Cambridge, under Mr. fterwards archbishop Herring. Here he ook his first degree in physic, and in 1728 as created doctor in that faculty by manamus. In 1742 he was appointed physician o the king's household, and to that of the rince of Wales in 1745. He died in 1757. His works are: Lectures on the Organ of espiration, before the College of Physiians; The Suspicious Husband, a comedy; Observations on a Series of Electrical Exeriments, &c.—Biog. Dram.

HOADLEY (John), the younger son of the ishop, was born in 1711, and educated at Corpus Christi college, Cambridge, from hence he removed to the Temple, but afterwards entered into orders, and became haplain to the prince of Wales. He died n 1776. He wrote some plays and poems, nd a drama of his has been performed ince his death.—Biog. Brit.

HOARD (Samuel), an English divine, as born in London, and educated at All ouls college, Oxford, where he proceeded achelor in divinity. Robert earl of Varwick to whom he was chaplain, gave im the rectory of Moreton in Essex, where he died in 1657. He was at first a Calvinist, but diligent study made him see is errors, and he published an able confuation of the doctrine of absolute election, ntitled, God's Love to Mankind manifested y disproving his absolute Decree for their Damnation, 4to. This was replied to by Dr. Twisse and bishop Davenant. Hoard lso published some sermons.—Wood.

HOBBES (Thomas), an English philosoher, was born at Malmesbury, in 1588, nd educated at Magdalen hall, Oxford. n 1608 he became tutor to a son of the arl of Devonshire, with whom he made he tour of Europe. On the death of his atron and pupil he became travelling tutor o a young gentleman, but the countess owager of Devonshire recalled him into er family to take upon him the education f the young earl. In 1634 he reprinted is translation of Thucydides, the first edition of which appeared in 1628. The same ear he attended the earl on his travels, and t Pisa contracted an intimacy with Galileo. n 1642 he printed his book, De Cive, which procured many enemies, by its danerous principles. Soon after this he was ppointed mathematical tutor to the prince of Wales. In 1650 appeared in English, his book on Human Nature; and one, De Corpore Politico, or the Elements of Law. The next year he published his famous book, entitled, Leviathan, which is full of sophistry and bad maxims in philosophy and morals. At the Restoration he received a pension; but in 1665 the parliament passed a censure on his writings, which greatly alarmed him. He died at Chatsworth, the seat of the earl of Devonshire, in 1679. Hobbes maintained the propriety of making use of bad means to procure a good end, which he thus illustrated: "If I were cast into a deep pit, and the devil should put down his cloven foot, I would readily lay hold of it to get out." Besides the above works he published, De Mirabilibus Pecci, or the Wonders of the Peak, a poem; a translation of Homer; Elements of Philosophy; Letter on Liberty and Necessity; Six Lessons to the Professors of the Mathematics; Marks of absurd Geometry, &c. —Wood, A. O. Biog. Brit.

HOBBIMA (Minderhout), an eminent landscape painter, was born at Antwerp about 1611. He studied after nature, but his works are very scarce—Pilkington.

HOCHE (Lazarus), a general of the French republic, was the son of a hostler, and born at Versailles in 1768. Being deprived of his father while a child, the rector of St. Germain-en-Laye took a fancy to him and made him a chorister, after which he became a helper in the royal stables. At the age of 16 he entered into the army, and became a corporal in the grenadiers. Soon after the breaking out of the revolution he obtained a commission, and distinguished himself in several engagements. During the tyranny of Robespierre he was confined in the Conciergerie several months, but the Thermidorean Revolution set him at liberty. He drove the Austrians out of Alsace, and being sent against the royalists at Quiberon he acted with great cruelty, and put to death, the brave Charette. Soon afterwards he commanded the forces sent to Ireland, but returned in disgrace. He next had the command of the army of the Sambre and Meuse, with which he acted successfully against the Austrians on the Rhine. He died at Wetzlar, in 1797. —Nouv. Dict. Hist.

HOCHSTETTER (Andrew Adam), a protestant divine, was born at Tubingen, in 1668. He became professor of divinity and rector of that university. He died in 1717. His principal works are: 1. Collegium Puffendorfianum; 2. De Festo Expiationis, et Hirto Azazel; 3. Conradino, ultimo ex Suevis Duce; 4. De Rebus Elbigensibus.—Ibid.

HODGES (Nathaniel), an English physician, was first educated at Westminster school and next at Christ church, Oxford, on leaving which he settled in London, and continued there during the plague. He died in 1684. He wrote An Apology for the Profession and Professors of Physic, 8vo.; and an historical Account of the Plague of London in 1665.—Wood's Ath. Oxon.

Hody (Humphrey), a learned divine, was born at Odcombe in Somersetshire, in 1659, and educated at Wadham college, Oxford, of which he became fellow. When young he published his Dissertation against Aristeas's History of the 72 Interpreters, which was received by the learned with great applause. It was, however, attacked by Isaac Vossius, and defended by the author in an unanswerable manner. In 1690 he was appointed chaplain to bishop Stillingfleet, and about the same time engaged in a controversy with Mr. Dodwell respecting the deprived bishops, for which archbishop Tillotson made him his domestic chaplain. In 1698 he was appointed Greek professor at Oxford, and in 1701 he published his History of English Councils and Convocations. He died in 1706.—Biog. Br.

Hoe (Matthias), a German Lutheran divine, was born at Vienna in 1580. He was ecclesiastical counsellor and first preacher at the court of Saxony. He wrote some sharp pieces against the Calvinists and papists, and died in 1645.—Moreri.

Hoech (John van), an historical and portrait painter, was born at Antwerp in 1600. He studied under Rubens, and afterwards at Rome. At the solicitation of Ferdinand II. he went to Vienna, where he died in 1650. He is not to be confounded with Robert van Hoeck, a painter of Antwerp, who excelled in battle pieces.—Pilkington.

Hoeltzlinus (Jeremiah), an eminent philologist, was born at Nuremberg, and settled at Leyden, where he died in 1641, in which year appeared his edition of Apollonius Rhodius.—Moreri.

Hoeschelius (David), a learned German, was born at Augsburg, in 1556. He became principal of St. Anne's college in that city, and librarian. He published editions of some of the Greek fathers, and composed a catalogue of Greek MSS. in the Augsburg library. He died in 1617.—Melch. Adam.

Hoel (Gerard), an historical and landscape painter, was born at Bommel in 1648. He settled at Utrecht, and became director of an academy of drawing and painting. He died in 1733.—Pilkington.

Hoffman (Maurice), an eminent physician, was born at Furstemberg, in 1621. He took his doctor's degree at Padua, and in 1648 was made professor of anatomy and surgery at Altdorf, and the year following professor of physic. In 1653 he obtained the professorship of botany, to which was added the direction of the physic-garden. He died in 1698. His works are: 1. Altdorfi Deliciæ Hortenses; 2. Appendix ad Catalogum Plantarum hortensium; 3. Deliciæ silvestres; 4. Florilegium Altdorfinum.—Halleri Bibl. Anat.

Hoffman (John Maurice), son of th above, was born at Altdorf, in 1653. H studied under his father, and in 1674 too his doctor's degree. In 1681 he was chose professor of physic. He was also ap pointed physician to the margrave of An pach, and on the death of his father he suc ceeded him. He died in 1727. He cont nued his father's work, entitled, Delici Hortenses Altdorfinæ, and wrote Acta La boratorii Chemici Altdorfini; and De Dif ferentiis Alimentorum, 4to.—Ibid.

Hoffman (Frederic), a celebrated phy sician, was born at Halle, near Magdeburg in 1660. He was chosen professor of phy sic at Halle in 1693, which situation he re tained to his death in 1743. His works hav been published at Geneva in 6 vols. folio.— Ibid.

Hoffman (Daniel), a Lutheran divin and professor at Helmstadt in the 16th cen tury, who wrote against Beza on the sub ject of the Eucharist. He died in 1611 aged 72.—Moreri.

Hoffman (John James), professor o Greek at Basle, where he was born in 1635 and died in 1706. He is known by a work of great labour and value, a Universal His torical Dictionary in Latin, published firs in 2 vols. folio, and afterwards enlarged to 4 vols. He also wrote a History of the Popes, in Latin.—Ibid.

Hogarth (William), a celebrated painter was born at London, in 1698, and bound apprentice to an engraver of arms on silver plate. About 1720 he set up for himself and his first employment was to engrave coats of arms and shop bills. He next un dertook to execute plates for booksellers the chief of which are the prints to Hu dibras. His first performance as a painter was a representation of Wanstead assembly the portraits being taken from life. In 1730 he married a daughter of sir James Thornhill, and shortly after embellished the gar dens of Vauxhall with some excellent paint ings, for which the proprietor complimented him with a perpetual ticket of admission. In 1733 appeared his Harlot's Progress, print which stamped his reputation, and were followed by other moral histories, admira bly executed. Soon after the treaty of Aix la-Chapelle he went to France, and whil at Calais began to sketch a drawing of the gate of the town, for which he was taken up, but was soon released. This circum stance he ridiculed in an excellent carica ture. In 1753 he published his Analysis of Beauty, in 4to. Hogarth was very vain and thought himself the first painter of the age. He was also remarkably absent, of which, the following is an instance: On set ting up his carriage he paid a visit to the lord mayor, and having protracted his stay till a heavy shower came on, he was let out by a different door from that by which he entered, and unmindful of his carriage, he set off on foot, and got home dripping wet

When Mrs. Hogarth asked him where he had left the carriage, he said that he had forgot it. He died in 1762, and was interred in the church-yard of Chiswick.—Life by Ireland.

HOHENLOHE (prince de), general of artillery in the service of the emperor. He distinguished himself in Transylvania against the Turks in 1789; and in the campaign against France in 1792 he gained great reputation, particularly in the battles of Famars and Mermal. He died in 1796 while commanding the army on the Rhine.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

HOLBACH (Paul Thierri, baron de), born in the Palatinate, and died at Paris, in 1789, aged 66 years. He was a member of the academies of Petersburg, Berlin, and Manheim, and was distinguished as an able mineralogist. He published L'Art de la Verrerie de Neri: Mineralogie de Wallerius, 2 vols.; Introduction à la Mineralogie; Elemens de la Morale Universelle, ou Catechisme de la Nature, &c.—Ibid.

HOLBEIN (John or Hans), a famous painter, was born at Basil in Switzerland, in 1498, and was instructed in his art by his father. In the town-house of Basil he painted a fine picture of our Saviour's passion: and in the fish-market there a dance of peasants, and Death's Dance, the last of which has been engraved in a series of plates. He visited England in the reign of Henry VIII. who liberally patronized him on the recommendation of sir Thomas More. He painted a number of portraits and historical pieces. Holbein died of the plague at London, in 1554.—Vertue. Pilkington.

HOLBERG (Louis de), a Danish writer; was born at Bergen in Norway, in 1685. He was assessor of the consistory court at Copenhagen, and distinguished himself by several ingenious works, as a History of Denmark, some comedies and miscellaneous pieces, for which he was created a baron. He died in 1754.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

HOLDEN (Henry), an English divine of the Roman church, who died at Paris in 1662. His works are: 1. Analysis Fidei, reprinted by Borbou in 1766; 2. Notes on the New Testament, 2 vols. 12mo.; 3. A Letter to White on his Treatise De Medio Animarum statu, 4to.—Moreri.

HOLDER (William), a learned divine, was born in Nottinghamshire, and educated at Pembroke hall, Cambridge. In 1642 he became rector of Bletchingdon, Oxfordshire. At the Restoration he took his doctor's degree, became fellow of the royal society, and sub-almoner to the king. He had great skill in teaching the deaf and dumb to speak, on which art he wrote a treatise. He also published a Treatise on Harmony, 1694, 8vo. His other works are: a Discourse concerning Time, 8vo.; and some papers against Dr. Wallis. He died in 1697.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

HOLDSWORTH (Edward), a learned writer, was born about 1688, and educated at Winchester school, from whence he was elected demy of Magdalen college, Oxford, where he took his degrees in arts. He afterwards became travelling tutor to young noblemen and gentlemen, and died at Colehill in Warwickshire, in 1747. He wrote, 1. Muscipula, or the Mouse-trap, a Latin poem; 2. Pharsalia & Philippi, or the two Philippi in Virgil's Georgics attempted to be explained and reconciled to History, 4to.; 3. Remarks and Dissertations on Virgil, published by Mr. Spence, 1768, 4to.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

HOLE (Richard), an English divine, was born and educated at Exeter, from whence he removed to the college of that name at Oxford, where he took his degree of bachelor of laws in 1771. In 1792 he was presented by the bishop of Exeter to the rectory of Farringdon in Devonshire, to which was afterwards added the vicarage of Inwardleigh. He died at Exmouth, in 1803. Mr. Hole published a poetical translation of Fingal, by Ossian, to which he subjoined an Ode to Imagination. In 1781 he produced a translation of the supposed Hymn of Homer to Ceres. Not long after appeared the epic romance of Arthur, with curious notes. He also published Remarks on the Arabian Nights' Entertainments, in which the origin of Sinbad's Voyages, and other oriental fictions, is considered, 12mo. 1797. In the Collection of Poems by Gentlemen of Devon and Cornwall, 2 vols. are some of his odes; and in the Essays by a Society at Exeter, 1796, are several ingenious pieces from his pen.—Gent. Mag. June 1803.

HOLINGSHED (Raphael), an English chronicler, who died in 1581, was a native of Cheshire. Nothing certain is known of his profession. His Chronicles were first published in 1577, in 2 vols. folio; and again in 1587 in three. In the last edition several sheets were castrated as containing passages offensive to the government, but they have since been printed separately.—Wood A. O.

HOLLAND. This country anciently belonged to the Belgæ, who submitted to Julius Cæsar about 47 B. C. The Franks held it in possession from 412 to 868, when Thierry became sovereign of it, under the title of count. His posterity enjoyed it till 1206, when it passed to the earls of Hainault, in which family it continued till 1417, when it became, by the surrender of Jacqueline, count of Hainault and Holland, the property of Philip duke of Burgundy. In 1534 the people, to avoid coming under the dominion of the bishop of Utrecht, surrendered their country to Charles V. who gave it to his son Philip of Spain. But the Spanish government being very oppressive, the seven provinces revolted in 1572, and established themselves an independent republic; they are now dependant on France.—Univ. Hist. Grotii Annales Belg.

HOLLAND (Philemon), an English physician, was born at Chelmsford about 1551, and educated at Cambridge under Dr. Whitgift. He settled at Coventry, and became master of the free school there; besides which he practised as a physician, having taken his doctor's degree at Cambridge. He died in 1636. Holland published a number of translations, particularly of Livy, Pliny's Natural History, Xenophon's Cyropedia, and Camden's Britannia.—Fuller.

Hollar (Wenceslaus), a celebrated engraver, was born at Prague in Bohemia, in 1607. The earl of Arundel, being on an embassy to the imperial court, took him into his suite, and brought him to England. His first performance here was a view of Greenwich. After this he etched a number of views and portraits. In 1640 appeared his fine set of figures in 28 plates, called, Ornatus Muliebris Anglicanus, containing the dresses of English women of all degrees. In 1645 he settled at Antwerp, where the earl of Arundel resided with his family. While there he etched many portraits and landscapes after Brenghel, Elsheimer, and Teniers. In 1652 he returned to England, and continued laboriously employed till his death in 1677.—Life by Vertue.

Holles (Thomas Pelham), duke of Newcastle, was born in 1693. He succeeded his father in the barony of Pelham, and in 1711, his uncle John Holles as duke of Newcastle. He was a strennous supporter of the Hanoverian succession, for which he obtained various honours and places. Soon after the accession of his present majesty he went out of office, and was succeeded by lord Bute. He died in 1768.—English Peerage.

Holles (Denzil, lord), one of the five members of the long parliament who were demanded by king Charles I. when he went to the house of commons. He was a man of austere severity, and the head of the presbyterian party in opposition to Cromwell and the independants. At the Restoration he was advanced to the peerage, and died in 1680, aged 83.—Clarendon. Burnet's Own Times.

Hollis (Thomas), an English gentleman, was born at London in 1720, and educated amongst the dissenters, and afterwards at Amsterdam. In 1740 he became a student at Lincoln's-inn, but never followed the law. He endeavoured to get into parliament, but being disappointed, he retired to his seat at Corscome in Dorsetshire, where he died suddenly in 1774. Mr. Hollis was a man of extensive liberality, and gave several benefactions to foreign libraries. He published editions of Toland's Life of Milton, and Sydney's Discourses on Government. His own Memoirs were splendidly published in 1780, in 2 vols. 4to.

Holmes (George), keeper of the records and barrack-master of the Tower, was a native of Yorkshire, and died in 1749, aged 87. He republished the first 17 volumes of Rymer's Fœdera, and formed a curious collection of books, prints, and coins, which was sold by auction after his death.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Holmes (Robert), a learned divine, was born in Hampshire, and educated at Winchester school, from whence he removed to New college, Oxford, where he took his degree of D. D. in 1786. He was appointed professor of poetry in 1790, and wrote an ode on the Installation of the duke of Portland as chancellor of the university. In 1795 he engaged in the great work of collating the MSS. of the septuagint version of the Old Testament, of which he printed 5 volumes in folio. He was made canon of Salisbury and Christchurch, and dean of Winchester. He died in 1806. Dr. Holmes's other works were, a sermon on the Resurrection of the Body, 4to.; Bampton Lectures in 1782, 8vo.; Divinity Tracts, 8vo.; Alfred, an Ode, with six Sonnets, 4to.; a Latin Letter to bishop Barrington respecting his collation of the septuagint, folio; and the Prophecy of Daniel according to Theodotian and the LXX, 4to.—Gent. Mag.

Holmes (Dr. Nathaniel), a nonconformist divine, ejected in 1662 from the living of St. Mary Staining, London. He was skilled in the Hebrew language, and among other works, wrote a book in defence of the Millennium, entitled, The Resurrection Revealed, folio, 1654. He died in 1678.—Calamy.

Holstein (Cornelius), the son and disciple of Peter Holstein, a painter on glass at Haerlem. He attained great excellence in historical painting, of which the cieling of the treasury at Amsterdam is a proof. He died at the end of the 17th century.—Pilkington.

Holstenius or Holstein (Lucas), a learned German, was born at Hamburg in 1596. After receiving a liberal education he went to Rome, where he obtained a canonry of St. Peter's, and the librarianship of the Vatican. Pope Alexander VII. sent him ambassador to Christina of Sweden, whom he reconciled to the church of Rome. He died in 1661. He wrote a Dissertation on the Life and Writings of Porphyry, and notes upon various authors.—Moreri. Niceron.

Holt (sir John), an eminent judge, was born at Thame in Oxfordshire, in 1642, and educated at Abingdon school, and afterwards at Oriel college, Oxford, from whence he went to Gray's-inn. In the reign of James II. he was made recorder of London, and in 1686 serjeant at law. He sat in the convention-parliament, and shortly after was made chief-justice of the king's bench, and a privy-counsellor. On all occasions he displayed an intrepid mind, as well as a profound knowledge of the common law; and a greater proof of his regard to the rights of the people cannot be given than in the following instance: There happened in his time a riot, occasioned by the practice of decoying young persons to the plantations, who were confined in a house in Holborn till they could be shipped off. Notice of the riot being sent to Whitehall, a party of the military were ordered out, but before they marched an officer was sent to the chief-justice to desire him to send some of his people with the soldiers. Holt asked the officer what he intended to do if the mob refused to disperse: "My lord (replied he), we have orders to fire upon them."—"Have you so?" said Holt, "then observe what I say; if one man is killed, I will take care that you and every soldier of your party shall be hanged. Sir, acquaint those who sent you, that no officer of mine shall attend soldiers; and let them know likewise, that the laws of this land are not to be executed by the sword: these things belong to the civil power, and you have nothing to do with them." So saying he dismissed the officer, proceeded to the spot with his tip-staves, and prevailed upon the populace to disperse, on a promise that justice should be done, and the abuse remedied. He died in 1710.—Biog. Brit.

Holwell (John Zephaniah), an ingenious English gentleman, who was governor of Bengal, and one of the persons confined in the black hole at Calcutta in 1756, of which he published a narrative. He wrote several pieces on India affairs, and died in 1798.—Europ. Mag.

Holyday (Barten), a learned divine, was born at Oxford in 1593, and educated at Christchurch, of which he became student. In 1618 he attended the English ambassador to Spain as chaplain, and on his return became archdeacon of Oxford. In the civil war he complied with the parliament, and retained his living of Chilton in Berkshire. He died in 1661. He wrote several sermons, and translated the Satires of Juvenal into English.—Wood.

Holyoake (Francis), a learned lexicographer, was born in Warwickshire about 1617, and educated at Oxford. He became rector of Southam in his native county, and suffered greatly for his loyalty in the civil wars. He died in 1653. His Etymological Dictionary of Latin words was first printed in 1606, 4to. and the fourth edition, enlarged, appeared in 1633. His son Thomas was doctor in divinity, and died in 1675. He enlarged his father's Dictionary, which was published in 1677, folio.—Wood.

Holywood (John), of Halifax, or Sacrobosco, an English mathematician and divine, was born at Halifax in Yorkshire. After receiving his education at Oxford he went to Paris, where he died in 1256. He wrote, Sphæra Mundi; De Anni Ratione; De Algorismo.—Ibid.

Homberg (William), a celebrated chemist, was born in 1652 at Batavia, where his father was governor of the arsenal. He at first entered into the army; but quitted that profession for the law, which he also abandoned, and applied to the sciences, particularly botany, medicine, and chemistry; to improve himself in which he travelled through various countries. In 1682 he settled in France, and abjured the protestant religion, but being disappointed in his expectations he went to Rome, and practised physic. He afterwards returned to Paris, where he became a member of the academy of sciences, and chemist and physician to the duke of Orleans. He died in 1715. He discovered the properties of the Bologna stone, and its phosphoric appearance after calcination. Some of his papers are in the memoirs of the academy.—Niceron. Moreri.

Home (David), a Scotch divine, who was employed by James I. to bring the protestants of Europe into one confession. He wrote, 1. Apologia Basilica, seu Machiavelli ingenium examinatum, 4to. 1626; 2. L'Assassinat du Roi, ou Maximes du Viel de la Montagne pratiquées en la Personne de defunt Henri le Grand, 8vo. 1617.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Home (Henry), lord Kaimes, a Scotch judge and elegant writer, was born in 1696, and became by his merit the senior lord of session in Scotland. He wrote, Essays upon several subjects concerning British Antiquities, 1764; Essays on the Principles of Morality and Natural Religion, 8vo.; Historical Law, 8vo.; The Principles of Equity, folio; Elements of Criticism, 3 vols. 8vo.; The Gentleman Farmer, 8vo.; Loose Hints upon Education, 8vo.; The History of Man, 4 vols. 8vo. He died in 1782.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Homer, the father of Greek poetry, was born on the banks of the river Meles, whence his mother called him Melesigenes. He was a natural child, but his mother afterwards married one Phenius, a citizen of Smyrna, who adopted the child as his son. His birth, however, is involved in so much obscurity that all this may be fable, for the ancients are not agreed as to the period in which he flourished, and seven cities disputed the honour of having given him birth. He is said to have kept a school at Smyrna, and that he afterwards accompanied Mentes, a master of a ship, in several voyages, and by him was left at Ithaca, where he gathered many particulars respecting Ulysses, which laid the foundation of the Odyssey. At length Mentes returned and took him on board again, but at Colophon he had the misfortune of losing his sight. He then became a strolling bard and obtained the name of Homer, which signifies a blind man. It is further added, that being at Phocæa, a school-master, named Thestorides, offered to maintain him, provided he would suffer him to transcribe his verses, which he agreed to from necessity. The school-master then went to Chios, where he acquired great wealth by Homer's poems, while the poet himself could scarcely get bread by reciting them.

Homer on this proceeded to Chios, and Thestorides, hearing of his arrival, fled before him. Here the poet opened a school of poetry, married, and had two daughters. He died about 907 years B. C. The only genuine works of his extant, are the Iliad and Odyssey. The Batrachomyomachia, or Battle of the Frogs and Mice, has been disputed, but many good critics deem it to be his. The Hymns which go under his name are questionable. The best editions of Homer are, that of Barnes, Cambridge, 2 vols. 4to. 1711; Clarke's, 4 vols.: that of Glasgow, 2 vols. folio, 1758; that of Oxford, 5 vols. 8vo. 1780; and what is called the Grenville edition, recently published from the same press. It is needless to enter into his character as a poet, as he was beyond a doubt the most exalted and universal genius the world has seen.—Herodotus. Plutarch. Moreri.

Hommel (Charles Frederic), a German writer, was born in 1722, and died in 1781. His principal works are: De Legum civilium et naturalium Natura; Oblectamenta Juris Feudalis, sive Grammaticæ Observationes jus rei clientelaris, et antiquitates Germanicas varie illustrantes: Corpus Juris Civilis cum notis variorum.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Hondekoeter (Gilles), an eminent painter, was born at Utrecht in 1583. He painted landscapes in an admirable style, and also flowers with singular truth and exactness. His son Gysbrecht was remarkable for painting birds. He also had a son called Melchior, who excelled in the same walk. He died in 1695.—Pilkington.

Hondius (Abraham), a Dutch painter of landscapes, animals, and huntings, was born at Rotterdam in 1638. He died in 1691.—Ibid.

Hondius (Josse), a geographer, was born in Flanders in 1563, and died in 1611. He constructed at London two globes of extraordinary size and elegance. He afterwards settled at Amsterdam, and acquired a great reputation by his maps. His works are: Theatrum Artis Scribendi; Orbis Terrarum descriptio Geographica; Gerhardi Mercatoris Atlas; Italiæ hoderniæ Descriptio.—Moreri.

Hone (George Paul), a German lawyer, was born at Nuremberg in 1622. He was counsellor to the duke of Meinungen, and bailiff of Cobourg, where he died in 1747. His principal works are: Lexicon Topographicum Franconiæ and a History of the Duchy of Saxe-Cobourg.—Nouv. Dict.

Honestis (Peter de), or Peter Damiani, an Italian prelate and cardinal. He was employed by pope Nicholas II. to reduce the church of Milan to celibacy, which he effected with difficulty. In 1061 he renounced his bishopric, and retired to a cell; but in 1069 he was called from his retirement by the pope, and sent on a mission to France. He died in 1072. His works are numerous, but in no esteem.—Moreri.

Honorius, emperor of the west, was the second son of Theodosius the Great, and associated in the empire with Arcadius his brother in 395. His guardian, Stilico, endeavouring to dethrone him, was slain. In 409 Alaric the Goth besieged Rome, and ravaged all the country, while Honorius remained indolent at Ravenna. He died of a dropsy in that city in 423, aged 39.—Univ. Hist. Moreri.

Honorius I. pope, succeeded Boniface V. in 626, and died in 638. He governed with zeal and prudence. Some of his letters are extant.

Honorius II. of Bologna, succeeded Calixtus II. in 1124, and at the same time Thibauld was chosen by another party, under the name of Celestin, but he resigned the chair to his rival, who died in 1130.

Honorius III. was made pope after Innocent III. in 1216. He confirmed the order of Dominicans, and died in 1227. He left several works.

Honorius IV. a Roman, ascended the chair in 1285, and died in 1287. He displayed great zeal for his church, and promoted the crusades.—Platina. Bower.

Hontan (baron de), a native of Gascony in the 17th century, who published his Travels in North America, written in a barbarous style. He was an officer in the French service, from which he was dismissed for bad conduct, and at length settled in Denmark.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Hontheim (John Nicholas de), suffragan to the archbishop of Treves, was born in that city in 1700. He died in 1790. He wrote, Historia Trevisensis diplomatica & pragmatica, 3 vols. folio; De præsenti statu Ecclesiæ, 5 vols. 4to. This work occasioned considerable noise among the catholics.—Ibid.

Honthorst (Gerard), a painter, was born at Utrecht in 1592. He was a disciple of Bloemart, and excelled in night-pieces. Sandrart mentions an unrivalled picture by him, the subject of which is Christ brought before Pilate, in which the light proceeding from the torches produced an uncommon lustre. He died in 1660. His brother William was an excellent historical and portrait painter. He died in 1683.—Houbraken.

Hooft (Peter Cornelius van), a Dutch writer, was born at Amsterdam in 1581. Louis XIII of France gave him the order of St. Michael, as a reward for his History of Henry IV. He died in 1647. His other works are: Poems and Comedies: the History of the Low Countries from the Abdication of Charles V. to 1598: a translation of Tacitus into Dutch.—Moreri.

Hoogeveen (Henry), a learned philologist, was born at Leyden of poor parents in 1712. At the age of 15 he became a teacher for the purpose of supporting his parents. In 1732 he was made under-master of the academy at Gorcum, and shortly after was appointed to the care of the academy at Woerden, from whence he removed to Culembourg. In 1745 he settled at Breda, which he left in 1761 for Dordt, but after a residence of three years there he went to Delft, where he died in 1794. His works are: an edition of Viegerus de Idiotismis Linguæ Græcæ: Doctrina particularum Linguæ Græcæ, 2 vols. 4to.; some Latin poems and discourses: and Dictionarium Analogicum Græcum.—Gen. B. D.

Hoogestraeten (Theodore van), a landscape-painter of Antwerp, who studied after nature. He died in 1640, aged 44. His son Samuel became excellent as a landscape and portrait painter. He died in 1678, aged 51.—Houbraken.

Hoogstraten (James), a Roman catholic divine, of the Dominican order, who wrote with bitterness against Luther, Erasmus, and Reuchlin. He was inquisitor-general, and by the violence of his temper was well suited to the office. He died at Cologne in 1527.—Moreri.

Hoogstraten (David van), professor of belles lettres at Amsterdam, was born in 1658, and died in 1724. He wrote Latin and Flemish poems, notes upon some of the Latin classics, and a Dictionary, Flemish and Latin.—Ibid.

Hooge (Romain de), a Dutch engraver, who had a lively imagination, though not much taste. His principal works are: Plates for Basnage's History of the Old and New Testament; for the Egyptian Hieroglyphics, published at Amsterdam, 1735, folio; and for Fontaine's Fables. His performances are much sought for.—Strutt.

Hooke (Robert), a celebrated mathematician, was born at Freshwater in the Isle of Wight in 1635, and having a taste for drawing, was placed under sir Peter Lely, but the oil-colours disordering his head he quitted painting, and was taken by Dr. Busby into his house, after which he went to Christchurch, Oxford. He assisted Dr. Willis in his chemical operations, and became assistant to Mr. Boyle. He was one of the first fellows of the royal society, the repository of which was entrusted to his care. In 1564 he was made professor of mechanics to that learned body, and at the same time elected Gresham professor of geometry. After the fire of London he produced a plan for rebuilding the city, which procured him the appointment of one of the city surveyors, but his plan was not adopted. In 1668 he had a dispute with Hevelius respecting telescopic sights, which he conducted with great asperity. In 1671 he attacked sir Isaac Newton's Theory of Light and Colours: and he afterwards pretended that the discovery made by that great man concerning the force and action of gravity was originally made by himself. In 1691 archbishop Tillotson created him M. D. He died at his lodgings in Gresham college in 1702. He wrote Micrographia, or Philosophical Descriptions of minute Bodies made by magnifying Glasses, with Observations and Enquiries thereupon, folio, 1665. Several of his papers are in the Philosophical Transactions: and after his death appeared his Posthumous Works, in folio, 1705. He was a man of great mechanical genius, and the sciences are indebted to him for several valuable instruments and improvements.—Ward's Lives of the Gresham Professors.

Hooke (Nathaniel), an English historian, who died in 1764. He was a Roman catholic, and when Mr. Pope lay on his death-bed, Hooke introduced a priest to him, which gave great offence to Bolingbroke. He wrote the duchess of Marlborough's account of her conduct, for which he received 5000*l.*, but his best work is a Roman history, in 4 vols. 4to.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Hooker (John,) a learned antiquary; was born at Exeter in 1524, and educated at Oxford, after which he travelled into Germany. On his return he settled at his native place, which he represented in parliament in 1571. He wrote a Description of Exeter, and some part of Holingshed's Chronicle, besides other pieces. He died in 1601.—Wood. Prince.

Hooker (Richard), an English divine, called the judicious, was nephew of the above, and born at Heavitree near Exeter in 1553. He received his education at the grammar-school of that city, from whence he was sent by his relation bishop Jewell to Corpus Christi college, Oxford, of which he was made bible-clerk, and in 1577 chosen fellow. In 1581 he took orders, and in 1584 he was presented to the rectory of Drayton-Beauchamp in Buckinghamshire, where he led an uncomfortable life with his wife Joan for about a year. Being found in this situation by his pupil, Mr. Edwin Sandys, son to the archbishop of York, he represented his case so pathetically to his father, that he procured for him the mastership of the Temple. But this place did not suit Hooker, who was fitted for a country retirement: he therefore applied to archbishop Whitgift for a removal to "some quiet parsonage," and he was accordingly presented to a living in Wiltshire, where he wrote part of his Ecclesiastical Polity. In 1595 the queen presented him to the rectory of Bishop's Bourne, where he finished that great work, and his life in 1600. Pope Clement VIII. said of his book, "that there were in it such seeds of eternity as will continue till the last fire shall devour all learning." His works have been frequently printed in folio, and at Oxford in octavo.—Life by Walton.

Hoole (Charles), an English divine, was born at Wakefield in Yorkshire, and educated at Lincoln college, Oxford, after which he became master of the free-school at Rotheram; but at the beginning of the civil wars he removed to London, where he gained great reputation as a schoolmaster. Bishop Sanderson gave him a prebend in the cathedral of Lincoln, and he had also a rectory of Stock in Essex, where he died in 1666. He published many useful school books, an excellent edition of the Greek Testament, and a translation of Terence's Plays.—Wood's A. O.

Hoole (John), an ingenious writer, was born in London in 1727. His father was a watch-maker, and a very able mechanic, who conducted many years the machinery at Covent-garden theatre. The son was educated under Mr. Bennet, the editor of Ascham's works; and at the age of seventeen became a clerk in the India House. He devoted his leisure hours to literary pursuits, particularly the study of the Italian language, of which he acquired a great knowledge, as appears by his excellent translations of Ariosto's Orlando Furioso, and Tasso's Jerusalem, into English. He also published two volumes of the Dramas of Metastasio: and was the author of three tragedies, viz. Cyrus, acted at Covent-garden in 1768, Timanthes performed the year following, and Cleonice in 1775. Mr. Hoole likewise wrote some pleasing poems, and the life of Mr. Scott of Amwell. He died in 1803.—Europ. Mag. 1792.—Gent. Mag. Oct. 1803.

Hooper (John), a pious bishop and martyr, was born in Somersetshire in 1495, and educated at Merton college, Oxford. He was for some time a member of the order of cistercians, but having imbibed the principles of the reformers he quitted the monastic life, and went to Switzerland where he married. At the accession of Edward VI he returned to England, and was made bishop of Gloucester, to which was added that of Worcester in commendam. Here he laboured with great zeal till the Restoration of popery under Mary, when he was condemned to the flames, which he endured with great resolution at Gloucester in 1555. His sermons and letters are extant.—Fox's Acts and Mon.

Hooper (George), an eminent English prelate, was born at Grimley in Worcestershire about 1640, and educated at Westminster school, from whence he removed to Christ church, Oxford, in 1656. He was successively chaplain to Dr. Morley, bishop of Winchester, and archbishop Sheldon, who gave him the rectory of Lambeth. In 1677 he became almoner to the princess of Orange, whom he attended to Holland. In 1691 he was appointed dean of Canterbury; and on the accession of queen Anne, bishop of St. Asaph, from whence he was translated to Bath and Wells. He died in 1727. He published several books against popery, some sermons and tracts, which evince great learning, particularly one entitled, An Inquiry into the State of the ancient Measures, the Attic, Roman, and especially the Jewish; with an Appendix concerning our old English Money, and Measures of Content, 1721, 8vo. All his works were printed at Oxford in one vol. folio, 1757.—Biog. Br.

Hoornbeek (John), a Dutch divine, was born at Haerlem in 1517. He was divinity professor first at Utrecht, and afterwards at Leyden, where he died in 1666. He wrote Apparatus ad controversiam Socinianam, 3 vols. 4to.; Treatises against the Jews; and other esteemed works.—Bayle.

Hopkins (Ezekiel), an exemplary prelate, was born at Sandford, in Devonshire, and in 1649 became chorister of Magdalen college, Oxford, of which he was aftrewards chaplain. In 1669 he went to Ireland as chaplain to lord Robartes (afterwards earl of Truro), who gave him his daughter in marriage, and the deanry of Raphoe. Lord Berkeley made him bishop of Raphoe, from whence in 1681 he was translated to Londonderry. In 1688 he was obliged to quit Ireland, then the seat of war, and the year following he was chosen minister of Aldermanbury, where he died shortly after. His works have been published in one volume folio. The chief of them is an Exposition of the Lord's Prayer.—Prince's Worthies.

Hopkins (Charles), son of the above, was born at Exeter, and educated at Dublin, and at Cambridge. In 1694 he published some epistolary poems and translations, and the year following produced a tragedy, called, Pyrrhus, King of Egypt. He translated Ovid's Tristia and Art of Love; and was greatly esteemed by Dryden and other poets, but died of intemperance in the 36th year of his age, in 1699. His brother John had also a poetical turn, and published a collection, entitled, Amasia, or the Works of the Muses, in 3 vols. 1700.—Biog. Dram.

Hopton (Arthur), an English mathematician, was the son of sir Arthur Hopton, and born in Somersetshire. He became a gentleman commoner of Lincoln college, Oxford, and after taking his degree of B. A. removed to the Temple, London, where he lived in great friendship with the learned Selden. He died in 1614, aged about 26. He wrote a Treatise on the Geodetical Staff, an old Instrument for surveying, 4to; The Topographical Glass, containing the uses of that Instrument, the Theodolite, plane table and circumferenter, 4to.; A Concordance of Years, containing a new, and a most exact computation of Time, according to the English accompt, 8vo.; Prognostications for the year 1607 to 1614.—Wood's A. O.

Hopton (Ralph lord), a brave and loyal English nobleman who served with great reputation in the Low Countries, and in the civil war attached himself zealously to the royal cause. He was so great a master of discipline that his army moved as one man, and was in every respect different from the republican rabbles, of which there were numerous instances in those troublesome times. He gained a great victory over sir William Waller, at Stratton, in 1643, but at last was obliged to retreat before Fairfax. He died at Bruges in 1652.—Clarendon. Granger.

Hopton (Susanna), an ingenious lady, was born in 1627 of an ancient family in Staffordshire. In her youth she was drawn over to the church of Rome by father Turberville, a priest, but a subsequent enquiry restored her to the protestant communion. She became the wife of Richard Hopton, esq. a Welsh judge, whom she survived several years. She died at Hereford in 1709. Mrs. Hopton reformed the Devotions in the Ancient Way of Offices, which book was published by Dr. Hickes; she also wrote Daily Devotions; an Hexameron, or Meditations on the Six Days of the Creation, &c.—Female Worthies.

Horapollo or Horus Apollo, an Egyptian grammarian, who taught first at Alexandria and afterwards at Constantinople in the time of Theodosius. There remain of his, two books on the Egyptian Hieroglyphics, printed by Aldus in Greek in 1505, folio, but the best edition is that of Pauw, at Utrecht, in 4to.—Noun. Dict. Hist.

Horatii, the name of three brothers, who fought against the three Curiatii of Alba, B. C. 667. Two of them were slain, but the third, by adding artifice to his courage, slew all his antagonists. On his return to Rome he met his sister, who had been betrothed to one of the Curiatii, and reproaching him for what he had done, he slew her also. His eminent services, however, were considered an extenuation of his crime, and he was pardoned.—Livy.

Horatius or Horace (Quintus Flaccus), an elegant Roman poet, was born at Venusinum, in Apulia, or Lucania, B. C. 65. His father was a freedman, but though poor he gave his son a good education, placing him first under the best masters at Rome, and then sending him to Athens, that he might study philosophy. Here he was taken notice of by Brutus, who took him into his army, and made him a tribune; but Horace had more wit than courage, and at the battle of Philippi he threw away his shield and fled. Being reduced to want, Virgil became his patron, and recommended him to Mæcenas, by which means he was introduced to Augustus, who offered him considerable preferments, which he declined, preferring a private life to the honours of the court. He was highly esteemed by the first people at Rome, particularly Mæcenas and Pollio. In the latter part of his life he retired to the country, where he indulged himself in a philosophical ease, which he has admirably described in his odes. He died eight years B. C. and was buried near his friend and patron Mæcenas, whose death it is said hastened his own. The best editions of Horace are those of Lips. 1752; and of Glasgow, 12mo, 1744. He has been well translated into English by Mr. Francis.—Moreri Horatius (Cocles), a Roman knight, who saved the city by gallantly defending, with only two others, a wooden bridge which was attacked by Porsenna, B. C. 597. These three opposed the enemy successfully till their fellow-citizens had cut away the bridge, on which Horatius jumped into the Tiber, and though wounded, swam across the river with his armour on. —Livy.

Horman (William), an English divine and botanist, was born at Salisbury, and educated at Winchester school, after which he became fellow of New college, Oxford. In 1485 he was chosen school-master and fellow of Eton, and at length vice provost of that college. Among other books he wrote one, entitled, Herbarum Synonyma. He also compiled indices to the ancient authors De Re Rustica. He died in 1535. —Pulteney's Sketches on Botany.

Hormisdas, a pope and saint of the Roman calendar, was elected to the pontificate chair in 514. He called a council at Rome against the Eutychians, and died in 523. Many of his letters are extant.—Moreri.

Hormisdas III. king of Persia, ascended the throne after the death of his father Chosroes the Great in 578. He lost most of his army in an engagement with the Romans; and his general, Varanes, having experienced a similar disaster, Hormisdas sent him a female dress, which so provoked him that he excited his subjects to revolt, and having seized Hormisdas, deprived him of his eyes. He died in 590.—Univ. Hist.

Horne (George), bishop of Norwich, was born in 1730, at Otham, in Kent, of which place his father was rector. He received his education at Maidstone school, and from thence was elected to a scholarship of University college, Oxford, where he took his degree of B. A. He was afterwards chosen fellow of Magdalen college, and applied with great diligence to sacred literature, particularly the study of the Hebrew language. In 1753 he entered into orders, and was distinguished as an excellent preacher. He appeared also as an acute writer, particularly in controversy, defending the principles of Hutchinson with singular dexterity. In 1768 he was chosen president of his college, on which he took his degree of D. D. and was appointed chaplain in ordinary to the king. The year following apppeared his Considerations on the Life of John the Baptist, being the Substance of Sermons preached annually at Magdalen College. In 1776 he served the office of vice-chancellor, and the same year produced his valuable commentary on the Psalms. In 1781 he was advanced to the deanry of Canterbury and in 1791 promoted to the bishoprick of Norwich, but died at Bath the year following. His remains rest at Eltham, and a monument has been erected for him in Norwich cathedral, but his best monument and praise are his works, which besides the above are: A fair, candid, and impartial State of the Case between Sir Isaac Newton and Mr. Hutchinson; The Theology and Philosophy in Cicero's Somnium Scipionis, explained, &c. 8vo.; Spicilegium Shuckfordianum, or a Nosegay for the Critics, in 8vo.; An Apology for certain Gentlemen in the University of Oxford, 8vo.; A View of Mr. Kennicott's Method of correcting the Hebrew Text, 8vo.; Considerations on the projected Reformation of the Church of England, 4to.; A Letter to Adam Smith, LL.D. on the Life, Death, and Philosophy, of David Hume, 12mo.; Letters on Infidelity, 12mo.; Letter to Dr. Priestley, 8vo.; Observations on the Case of the Protestant Dissenters, 8vo.; Five Volumes of Sermons; A Charge intended to have been delivered to the Clergy of Norwich at the primary Visitation, 4to. 1791.—Life by Jones.

Horneck (Anthony), a learned divine, was born in the Lower Palatinate, in 1641, and educated at Heidelberg under Spanheim. At the age of 19 he came to England, and entered of Queen's college, Oxford, of which he was chosen chaplain, and afterwards obtained the vicarage of Allhallows, Oxford. The duke of Albemarle gave him the rectory of Doulton, in Devon, to which was afterwards added a prebend in the cathedral of Exeter. In 1671 he became preacher at the Savoy, and in 1693 prebendary of Westminster. He died in 1696. Dr. Horneck was a man of great learning and piety. His works are judicious and well known.—Life by Bp. Kidder.

Hornius (George), professor of history at Leyden, was born in the Palatinate, and died in 1670. His principal works are, Historia Ecclesiastica ad ann. 1666; De Originibus Americanis, 8vo. Geographia vetus & nova; Historia Philosophica.—Moreri.

Horrebow (Peter), a Danish astronomer, who first discovered the aberration of the light of the fixed stars. He died in 1764, aged 85. He professed with great reputation many years philosophy, mathematics and astronomy, and wrote a book entitled, Copernicus triumphant.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Horrox (Jeremiah), an English astronomer, was born at Toxteth, in Lancashire, about 1619. He received his academical education at Emanuel college, Cambridge, after which he retired to Hool near Liverpool, where he devoted himself to astronomical observations; but was cut off by a sudden death in 1640. He was the first who observed the transit of Venus over the sun's disk, his account of which was published by Hevelius at Dantzic in 1661, under the title, Venus in Sole visa, anno 1639, Nov. 24. Dr. Wallis published his posthumous works in 1673.—Martin's Biog. Phil. Hutton.

Horsley (John), a learned antiquary, was born in Northumberland, and educated first at Newcastle, and next in Scotland, where he took his degree of M.A. He afterwards became pastor of a dissenting congregation in his native county, and died in 1731. His work, entitled, Britannia Romana, folio, gives a copious and exact account of the remains of the Romans in Britain.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Horstius (James), a German physician, was born at Torgau in 1537. In 1584 he became professor of physic at Helmstadt, where he died in 1600. He wrote Compendium Medicarum Institutionum; Herbarium, 8vo.; a Commentary on Hippocrates's Book of the Heart; De Noctambulionibus; De Dente aureo Pueri Silesii; Disputationes Catholicæ de rebus secundum et præter naturam; Epist. Philosophicæ et Medicinales. He was also distinguished by his piety, and always prayed to God to bless his prescriptions.—Bayle.

Horstius (Gregory), nephew of the above, was born at Torgau, in 1578. He was professor of physic at several universities, and lastly at Ulm, where he died in 1636. He published several medical works. His son Daniel became professor of medicine at Marpurg, and died in 1685. He published Zacchiæ Questiones Medico-legales, and the works of Riverius.—Moreri.

Horte (John), a learned prelate, was bred a dissenting minister under Mr. Thomas Rowe, and had for fellow-pupil Dr. Isaac Watts, with whom he corresponded to the doctor's death. After officiating to a congregation of dissenters at Marshfield in Gloucestershire, he conformed to the established church, and in 1708 preached a visitation sermon at Aylesbury. On going to Ireland as chaplain to the lord lieutenant he was made bishop of Leighlin and Ferns, from whence he was translated to Kilmore, and in 1742 to the archbishopric of Tuam. He died in 1751. His works are, a volume of excellent Sermons, printed at Dublin in 1733, 8vo. and at London in 1757. A Charge to the Clergy of the diocese of Tuam in 1742.—Monthly Mag. vol. xv.

Hortensius (Quintus), a Roman orator, who pleaded his first cause with great applause at the age of 19, B. C. 94. He became successively military tribune, prætor, and consul. He died immensely rich, B.C. 49. His daughter Hortensia inherited his eloquence, and when the Roman women were required to render on oath an account of their property, she pleaded the cause of her sex with such force that the decree was annulled.—Ibid.

Hortensius (Lambert), a philosopher, poet, and historian, who assumed that name because his father was a gardener, was born in the territory of Utrecht, in 1501, and studied at Louvain. He was for many years rector of the school at Naarden, where he died in 1577. He wrote De Bello Germanico, under Charles V. and several other works.—Moreri.

Hortensius (Martin), an astronomer, was born at Delft, in 1605, and died in the flower of his age in 1639. He wrote a dissertation, De Mercurio sub sole viso & Venere invisa; also two discourses, De utilitate & dignitate Matheseos, & de Oculo ejusque Præstantia.—Ibid.

Hosea, the most antient of the minor prophets, flourished in the reign of Jeroboam the second king of Israel, and in that of Uzziah, from A. M. 3194 to 3219.—Gray's Key to O. T.

Hosius, or Osius (Stanislaus), a cardinal, was born at Cracow, in Poland, in 1503, of poor parents, but the superiority of his abilities brought him into notice, and he became bishop of Warmia. Pius IV. made him a cardinal, and employed him as legate to preside at the council of Trent. He was a learned and zealous champion for the Roman church. His works make 2 vols. folio. He died in 1579.—Moreri.

Hoskins (John), an English portrait painter, who died in 1664. He painted the portraits of Charles II. and his queen, and most of the royal family. Alexander and Samuel Cooper were his disciples.—Vertue. Pilkington.

Hospinian (Rodolphus), a learned Swiss divine, was born at Altdorf, near Zurich, in 1547. In 1571 he was made provisor of the abbey school at Zurich, and afterwards minister of the abbey church. He died in 1626. His principal works are, De Templis, i. e. de origine usu et abusu Templorum; De Monachis De festis Judæorum & Ethnicorum; Festa Christianorum; Historia Sacramentaria; Historia Jesuitica the whole making 7 vols. folio.—Moreri.

Hospital (Michael de l'), chancellor of France, was the son of a physician, and born in Auvergne, in 1505. He became successively auditor of the Rota at Rome, counsellor in the parliament of Paris, ambassador at the council of Trent, superintendant of the finances of France, and at length chancellor, at a time of peculiar trouble, when faction and fury divided the kingdom. He was a strenuous advocate for toleration, on which account the rigid romanists accused him of being a protestant, and at the time of the massacre of St. Bartholomew, he narrowly escaped being murdered. He died in 1573. He wrote 1. Latin Poems, published at Amsterdam, in 8vo. 1732. 2. Memoirs, containing Treaties of Peace, &c.—Moreri.

Hospital (William Francis Antony, marquis de l'), a French mathematician, was born of a noble family in 1661. He discovered very early a genius for mathematical study, and at the age of 15 solved a difficult problem of Pascal's. He was some time in the army, which he left on account of a defect in his sight. In 1693 he was admitted an honorary member of the academy of sciences at Paris, and published a work on Newton's fluxions, entitled, Analyse des infinimens petits, being the first Frenchman who wrote on that subject. He afterwards engaged in another mathematical work, in which he included Les Sections Coniques, les Lieux Geometriques, la Construction des Equations, et une Théorie des Courbes Mécaniques, which was published after his death.—Moreri. Martin Biog. Phil.

Hossch (Sidronius) a Flemish jesuit, was born in 1596. He was famous for his Latin poetry, published at Antwerp, in 1656. The author died in 1653.—Moreri.

Hoste (Paul l'), a French jesuit, was born in 1652. He distinguished himself by his skill in the mathematics, and became professor of those sciences at Toulon, where he died in 1700. He wrote, 1. Traité des Evolutions Navales, folio, 1727; 2. Traités de Mathematiques les plus necessaires à un Officier, 3 vols. 12mo. This last was translated into English by William Webster. There was another French mathematician of this name, who wrote on the Artificial Sphere; Practical Geometry; Description and Use of Geometrical Instruments, &c. He died in 1634.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Hostus (Matthew), a German antiquary, was born in 1509, and died in 1587. He wrote De numeratione emendata, veteribus Latinis et Græcis usitata; De re nummaria veterum Græcorum, Romanorum et Hebræorum; De monomachia Davidis et Goliæ; De multiplici assis usu; De sex Hydriarum capacitate; Inquisitio in fabricum arcæ Noë.—Ibid.

Hotman (Francis), a French civilian, was born at Paris, in 1524. He studied at Orleans, where he took his degree of doctor in the civil law. He read lectures at Paris; but turning protestant he went to Switzerland, from whence he removed to Strasburg, where he obtained a professorship of civil law. Some years afterwards he returned to France and became professor at Bourges, but at the time of the massacre of St. Bartholomew he retired to Basil, where he died in 1590. His works were published at Geneva in 1599, in 3 vols. folio.—Moreri.

Hottinger (John Henry), a learned writer of Zurich in Switzerland, was born in 1620. His love of learning was so remarkable, that he was sent into foreign countries at the public expence. He visited several parts of Europe, and at his return was made professor of ecclesiastical history, and of the oriental languages. He was engaged by the elector palatine to restore the university of Heidelberg; and he was going on a public mission to Holland, when he was drowned in the river at Zurich, in 1667. His principal works are, Exercitationes Anti-Morinianæ de Pentateucho Samaritano, 4to.; Thesaurus Philologicus, seu clavis Scripturæ, &c. 4to.; Historia Orientalis, &c. 4to.; Promptuarium, sive Bibliotheca Orientalis, 4to.; Etymologicon Orientale, sive Lexicon Harmonicum Heptaglotton, 4to. His son, John James Hottinger, was professor of theology at Zurich, and died in 1735, aged 83. He wrote several practical pieces.—Moreri.

Houard de la Mothe (Antony), a law antiquary, was born at Dieppe, in 1725, and died at Abbeville, in 1803. He was a member of the academy of inscriptions, and an associate of the National Institute. His works are, 1. Anciennes Lois des François, conservées dans les coutumes Angloises, 2 vols. 4to. 2. Traité sur les coutumes Anglo-Normandes, &c. 4 vols. 4to.——Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Houbigant (Charles Francis), a learned French divine, was born at Paris, in 1686. He was a priest of the oratory, and distinguished himself by his profound knowledge of the Hebrew scriptures, which he translated into Latin, with notes, published at Paris, in 4 vols. folio, 1753. He died in 1783. Besides the above work he published a Dictionary French and Hebrew, 8vo.; Examination of the Psalter of the Capuchins; a translation of bishop Sherlock's Sermons; another of Leslie against the Deists and Jews, &c.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Houbraken (Arnold), a Dutch painter and poet, was born at Dordt, in 1660. He wrote the Lives of the Flemish Painters, printed in 1754, in 3 vols. 8vo. His son Jacob was an able engraver, and illustrated his father's work.—Ibid.

Hoveden (Roger de), an English historian in the reign of Henry II. He was a native of York, and an ecclesiastic and lawyer, two professions then commonly united. His Annals of English History from 731 to 1192, were printed at London in 1595, and at Frankfort in 1601.—Nicholson's Hist. Lib.

Hough (John), an English prelate, was born in Middlesex, in 1650. After going through his school education he was removed to Magdalen college, Oxford, of which in 1675 he was elected fellow. In 1681 he accompanied the duke of Ormond to Ireland, from whence he returned the year following, and in 1685 was made prebendary of Worcester. James II. having a design to introduce popery into the universities, commanded the fellows of Magdalen college, on a vacancy in the presidentship, to elect one Farmer, a convert to that religion. The fellows, however, resisted the mandate, and chose Mr. Hough, who was displaced by ecclesiastical commissioners, in 1687. But at the Revolution, he recovered his situation, and in 1690 was made bishop of Oxford, from whence in 1699 he was translated to Litchfield, and in 1717 to Worcester. He died in 1743. He was a very munificent prelate, and expended on his episcopal palaces 7000*l.*—Biog. Brit.

Houlieres (Antoinette du Ligier de Lagarde, widow of William de Lason sieur des), a French poetess, was born at Paris, in 1638. She was the pupil of Henault, whom she imitated not only in poetry, but in scepticism. She was a member of the academy of Ricovrati at Padua, and of that of Arles. She died in 1694. Her daughter, who died in 1718, was also an ingenious writer, and the works of both were published together in 1747, in 2 vols. 12mo.—Nouv. Dict.

Houseman (Cornelius), a painter, was born at Antwerp, in 1648. He settled at Mechlin, where he acquired great reputation as an artist. He excelled in painting landscapes with the figures of animals and plants executed in a beautiful manner. He died in 1727.—Pilkington.

Houseman (James), another painter, was born at Antwerp, in 1656. He came to England, and painted history and portrait. His greatest work is the altar piece in the chapel at St. James's. He died in 1696.—Ibid.

Houssaye, see Amelot.

Houston (William), an English physician and botanist. He went to the West Indies as surgeon, and on his return took his degrees at Leyden under Boerhaave; while there he instituted a set of experiments on brutes, in concert with Van Swieten. These were published in the Philosophical Transactions, vol 39. He was elected fellow of the Royal Society on his return from Holland, and went soon after to the West Indies, where he died in 1733. He left a MS. catalogue of plants, which has been published by sir Joseph Banks. He has also a description of the Dorstenia Contrayerva in the Philosophical Transactions, vol. 37.—Pulteney's Sketches of Botany.

Houteville (Claude Francis), a French ecclesiastic, was born at Paris in 1688. He became a member and secretary of the French academy, and also secretary to cardinal Dubois, who had a great esteem for him. He died in 1742, aged 54. His principal work is entitled, The Truth of the Christian Religion proved by facts, 3 vols. 4to. and 4 vols. 12mo.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

How (William), a physician and botanist, was born in London, in 1619, and educated first at Merchant Taylors' school, and afterwards at St. John's college Oxford, where he took his degrees in arts. In the civil war he entered into the royal army, and became a captain in a troop of horse; but on the decline of the royal cause he practised physic in London, where he died in 1656. He wrote Phytologia Britannica natales exhibens indigenarum Stirpium sponte emergentium, 12mo. He also edited Lobel's illustrations of plants.—Wood. Pulteney.

Howard (Thomas), earl of Surrey, and uke of Norfolk, a gallant English noble-an. He served with his brother, sir Ed-ard, against sir Andrew Barton, a Scotch irate, who infested the English coast in 511, but was killed and his ships taken.

e next accompanied the marquis of orset in his expedition to Guienne, hich ended in the conquest of Navarre
y Ferdinand. On the death of his brother, r Edward, he was made high admiral, and fectually cleared the channel of the French uizers. The victory of Flodden-field, in hich the king of Scotland was slain, was iefly owing to his bravery. For this s father was restored to the title of duke Norfolk, and the son created earl of Sur-
y. On the breaking out of the disturb-ces in Ireland, he was appointed lieutent of that kingdom, where he suppress-the rebellion. After serving there two ars, he returned, and had the command the fleet against France. Notwithstandg his great services, Henry, at the close life, caused the duke to be sent to the ower, on a charge of treason, and his n to be beheaded in his presence. The ath of the tyrant only saved the duke's
. He died in 1554, aged 66.—Campbell's dmirals.

HOWARD (Edward), younger brother of above, distinguished himself as a naval mmander. He entered early on the ma-ime service, and about 1494 was knight-In 1512 he was sent as lord high adral of England with a large fleet against ince, the coasts of which he ravaged.
also defeated the enemy's fleet off Brest;
t the year following he was slain in arding the French admiral's ship, and body thrown into the sea.—Ibid.

HOWARD (Henry), earl of Surrey, an omplished nobleman, was the son of omas duke of Norfolk above-mentioned, born about 1520. He had a passion a lady whom he celebrated in some ele-t sonnets under the name of Geraldina; late earl of Orford says that she was daughter of Fitzgerald earl of Kildare, afterwards the wife of Clinton earl of coln. Howard carried his affection to omantic a height, that in his travels he de a public challenge to maintain her uty at the point of the lance. After ing his country with great valour, he a victim to the jealousy of Henry VIII.
pretended to suspect him of a design narry his daughter Mary. He and his ter were sent to the Tower, and the son eaded on Tower-hill, in 1547. His son-are in Anderson's Collection of British ts.—Biog. Brit. Walpole's Noble Authors.

HOWARD (Charles), earl of Nottingham, lord high admiral of England, was the of lord William Howard, and born in 6. He served when young under his er, and in 1568 was appointed general he horse. The same year he displayed t valour in the north against the rebels commanded by the earls of Northumberland and Westmoreland. The year following he had the command of a squadron with which he escorted from Zealand to Spain, Anne of Austria, daughter of the emperor Maximilian, who was betrothed to Philip of Spain. In 1572 he succeeded his father as lord Effingham, and not long after was made knight of the garter. He had the important command of the English fleet when the Spanish armada entered the channel, and by his great skill and prudence contributed principally to its destruction. For these services he was created earl of Nottingham, and enjoyed the queen's confidence to her death. In the succeeding reign he was sent ambassador to Spain, but after his return he lost the king's favour, and resigned his post to the duke of Buckingham. He died in 1624.—Campbell.

HOWARD (sir Robert), an English writer, was the son of Thomas earl of Berkshire, and educated at Magdalen college, Oxford. He suffered considerable losses during the civil war, but at the Restoration he was knighted and made auditor of the exchequer. He was a zealous friend of the Revolution, and died about 1700. He wrote several plays; The History of the Reigns of Edward and Richard II.; The History of Religion, 1694. 8vo. &c.—Wood.

HOWARD (John), a philanthropic English gentleman, was born at Hackney, in 1726. His father was a tradesman in London, but died while his son was an infant, who was left in the hands of guardians, by whom he was apprenticed to a grocer. His constitution, however, being delicate, and having an aversion to trade, he purchased his indentures from his master, and went abroad. On his return he lodged with a widow lady at Stoke Newington, who attended him with such care in his illness that he conceived an affection for her, though she was much older than himself, and they were married. Mrs. Howard lived about three years, and he was a sincere mourner for her loss. In 1756 he embarked for Lisbon, but on the passage the ship was taken and carried to France. On his release he went to Italy, and at his return settled in Hampshire. In 1758 he married a second wife, but she died in childbed in 1765, leaving him one son. He was at this time fixed at Cardington, near Bedford, where he purchased an estate. In 1773 he served the office of sheriff, which, as he declared, "brought the distress of the prisoners more immediately under his notice," and led him to form the design of visiting the gaols through England, in order to devise means for alleviating the miseries of the sufferers. In 1774 he was examined before the house of commons on the subject of the prisons, and received the thanks of the house. He then extended his benevolent views to foreign countries, making excursions to all parts of Europe. In 1777 he published

The State of Prisons in England and Wales, with preliminary Observations, and an Account of some foreign Prisons, 4to. In 1780 he published an appendix to it, with an account of his travels in Italy; and in 1784 a new edition appeared, with considerable additions. About this time some admirers of Mr. Howard opened a subscription for erecting a statue to his honour, but at his request the design was dropt. In 1789 he published an Account of the principal Lazarettos in Europe, in 4to. In this work he signified his intention of visiting Russia, Turkey, and of extending his route into the East. "I am not insensible," he says, "of the dangers that must attend such a journey. Trusting, however, in the protection of that kind Providence which has hitherto preserved me, I calmly and cheerfully commit myself to the disposal of unerring Wisdom. Should it please God to cut off my life in the prosecution of this design, let not my conduct be uncandidly imputed to rashness or enthusiasm, but to a serious deliberate conviction, that I am pursuing the path of duty; and to a sincere desire of being made an instrument of more extensive usefulness to my fellow-creatures than could be expected in the narrower circle of a retired life." He fell a sacrifice to his humanity; for visiting a sick patient at Cherson, who had a malignant fever, he caught the infection, and died in 1790. A statue of Mr. Howard has been placed in St. Paul's cathedral, with an inscription.—Life by Aikin.

Howe (John), a non-conformist divine, was born at Loughborough in Lincolnshire in 1630, and educated at Cambridge, from whence he removed to Oxford, and became fellow of Magdalen college. He was ordained among the presbyterians, and appointed minister of Torrington, in Devonshire, and chaplain to Cromwell. In 1662 he lost his living for nonconformity, but in 1671 he went to Ireland as chaplain to lord Massarene, and the bishop of the diocese gave him a licence to preach. In 1675 he settled in London. He died in 1705. His principal performance is entitled, The Living Temple, in 2 vols. 8vo. All his works have been published in 2 vols. folio.—Life by Calamy.

Howe (John), an English writer, was born in Nottinghamshire, and sat in six parliaments. He was at first a friend of the Revolution, but afterwards conceived a great aversion to king William. On the accession of queen Anne he was appointed a member of the privy-council, and paymaster-general of the guards and garrisons, in which he continued till 1714, when he was succeeded by Mr. Walpole. He died in 1721. He wrote several songs and poems.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Howe (Richard, earl), a gallant admiral, was born in 1725, and entered the naval service at so early an age that at 20 he was appointed to the command of a sloop of war, in which he beat off two large French frigates, after a gallant action, for which he was made a post-captain. After a variety of active service he obtained the command of the Dunkirk of 60 guns, with which he captured a French 64 off Newfoundland. In 1757 he served under admiral Hawke, and the year following was appointed commodore of a squadron, with which he destroyed a number of ships and magazines at St. Malo. In 1759 prince Edward, afterwards duke of York, was put under his care, and the commodore on the 6th of August took Cherbourg and destroyed the bason. This was followed by the unfortunate affair of St. Cas, where he displayed his courage and humanity in saving the retreating soldiers at the hazard of his own life. The same year at the death of his brother, he became lord Howe, and soon afterwards had a great share in the victory over Conflans. When admiral Hawke presented him, on this occasion, to the king, his majesty said, "Your life, my lord, has been one continued series of services to your country." In 1763 he was appointed to the admiralty board, where he remained till 1765, when he was made treasurer of the navy. In 1770 he was appointed commander-in-chief in the Mediterranean. In the American war he commanded the fleet on that coast. In 1782 he was sent to the relief of Gibraltar, which service he performed in sight of the French and Spanish fleets, but who shunned an action, though far superior in numbers. The year following he was made first lord of the admiralty, which office he soon afterwards resigned, but at the end of the year he was re-appointed, and continued in that station till 1788, when he was created an English earl. In 1793 he took the command of the channel fleet, and June 1, 1794, he obtained a decisive victory over he French fleet. The same month he was visited on board his ship at Spithead by their majesties, when the king presented him with a magnificent sword, a gold chain and medal. He also received the thanks of both houses, the freedom of London, and the applause of the nation. In 1795 he became general of the marines, and in 1797 was honoured with the garter. His lordship died in 1799, and was succeeded by his brother.—Monthly Mag. Gent. Mag.

Howell (James), a miscellaneous writer, was born at Caermarthenshire, about 1596, and educated at Jesus college, Oxford, of which his brother Thomas (who died bishop of Bristol), was fellow. In 1618 he was employed as steward of sir Robert Mansel's glass-house in London, the proprietors of which sent him abroad to procure materials and workmen. He returned in 1621. The year following he went to Spain, and during his absence was chosen fellow of Jesus college. In 1624 he became secretary to lord Scrope, president of the north, and in 1627 was chosen member for Richmond in Yorkshire. He was afterwards employed in state affairs, and in 640 became clerk of the council; but in 648 his papers were seized by order of parliament, and he was committed to the Fleet, where he supported himself by his pen. His writings were numerous; but mostly of a temporary kind. That by which he is best known is, a Collection of Letters one vol. 8vo. containing much of the history of the times, written in a lively manner. At the Restoration he was made historiographer-royal. He died in 1666.—Wood.

Hozier (Peter d'), a French genealogist, was born at Marseilles, in 1592. He was judge of arms, certifier of titles, and a member of the council of state. He died in 660. He published a history of Brittany, and genealogical tables.—Moreri.

Huarte (John), a native of French Navarre, who distinguished himself in the 17th century by a Spanish work of great merit, intitled, A Trial of Wits, or a Treatise on the different Kinds of Genius among Men, with Rules and Directions shewing to what kind of Study any Person is best adapted. This book has been translated into English.—Moreri.

Huber (Samuel), professor of theology at Wittemberg, about 1592, was a native of Berne. He zealously opposed the doctrine of predestination, and wrote an explication of the 9th, 10th and 11th chapters of the Epistle to the Romans.—Ibid.

Huber (Ulric), professor of law at Franeker, was born in 1635, and died in 1694. His chief works are, Dissertationes de genuina ætate Assyriorum, et regno Medorum; Institutiones Historiæ civilis; De jure Civitatis. His son Zacharias succeeded him in his professorship, and died in 732. He wrote some learned tracts.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Huber (John Rudolph), an eminent painter, was born at Basil, in Switzerland, 1668. He studied in Italy after the works of the best masters, and painted a great number of portraits, and historical pictures. He died in 1748.—Pilkington.

Huber (Mary), a female writer, was born at Geneva, in 1710. She wrote Letters on the Religion essential to Man, which were attacked by the Romish divines. She was also the author of a work on the systems of the ancients and moderns respecting the state of the soul after death, and an abridgment of the Spectator from the English. She died in 1753.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Huber (Michael), a German writer, was born at Fronthausen, in Bavaria. He went to Paris very young, and became acquainted with many distinguished literary characters. In 1765 he was called to the university of Leipsic to teach the French language. He there acquired the friendship of many eminent men, particularly Gellert, Zollikofer, and Weisse. He published numerous translations, chiefly of German works, into French. He died in 1804.—Monthly Mag.

Hubert (Matthew), a priest of the Oratory in France, who was greatly distinguished as a preacher He died in 1772, aged 77. His sermons were published at Paris, in 6 vols. 12mo 1725.—Ibid.

Hubner (John), a German historian and geographer, was born in 1668. He became rector of the school at Hamburgh, where he died in 1732. He wrote geographical and historical compendiums, which have been translated into various languages; but his principal works are, 1. Bibliotheca Historica Hamburgensis; 2. Museum Geographicum.—Moreri.

Hudde (John), a burgomaster of Amsterdam, who was a considerable statesman and mathematician. He died in 1704. His mathematical works are highly esteemed.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Hudson (Henry), an English navigator, who made several voyages to find a passage by the north to India, in the last of which he discovered a bay, called by his name, where he wintered, but on his passage home some of his crew mutinied, and forced him, his son, and others, into a boat which was never after heard of. The mutineers arrived at Plymouth in 1611. There is a trading company called the Hudson's Bay company on account of their connection with that part of America discovered by him.—Hakluyt.

Hudson (John), a learned divine, was born at Wythop, in Cumberland, in 1662, and bred at Queen's college, Oxford, where he took his degrees in arts, and then removed to University college, on obtaining a fellowship. In 1701 he became keeper of the Bodleian library, and the same year took his degree of D. D. In 1712 he was appointed principal of St. Mary hall, through the interest of Dr. Radcliffe; and it was owing to Dr. Hudson that Radcliffe bestowed his liberal benefactions on the university. He married the daughter of sir Robert Harrison, by whom he left a daughter He died in 1719. Dr. Hudson published elegant editions of Velleius Paterculus, Thucydides, Geographiæ Veteris Scriptores Græci Minores, Dionysius Halicarnassensis, Longinus, Æsop, &c.; after his death appeared his beautiful edition of Josephus, 2 vols. folio.—Hutchinson's Hist. Cumberland.

Hudson (Thomas), an English portrait painter, was the scholar and son-in-law of Richardson, and though but an indifferent artist, he had the honour of being the preceptor of sir Joshua Reynolds. He died in 1779, aged 78.—Pilkington.

Huet (Peter Daniel), a learned French bishop, was born at Caen in Normandy, in 1630. He studied mathematics under Mambrun, a jesuit, and Greek and Hebrew under Bochart, whom he accompanied in 1652 to the court of Christina, queen of Sweden, who would have engaged him in her service, but he declined the honour, and returned to France. In 1661 he published an excellent work on the art of translation, entitled, De Interpretatione. In 1679 appeared his Demonstratio Evangelica, which was greatly admired. His reputation was now so great that the place of sub-preceptor to the dauphin was conferred on him, and he had for his colleague the illustrious Bossuet. In 1661 appeared his valuable edition of the works of Origen. He formed the plan of publishing editions of the classics "in usum Delphini," and superintended the execution. In 1678 he was presented to the abbey of Aunay, in Normandy, and in 1685 was nominated to the see of Soissons, which he exchanged for that of Avranches. In 1689 he printed his Censures on the Cartesian Philosophy, a system to which he had been zealously attached, but the fallacy of which he now sufficiently exposed. In 1699 he resigned his bishopric, and was presented to the abbey of Fontenoy, near Caen. He died at Paris, in 1721. Huet, considering the number and excellence of his works, may be considered as one of the most learned men that any age has produced. The following books of his have been translated into English: on the Origin of Romances; on the Situation of the Terrestrial Paradise; History of the Commerce and Navigation of the Ancients; and on the Weakness of Human Understanding.—Moreri.

Hupnagel (George), a Flemish painter, was born at Antwerp, in 1545. He became painter to some of the German princes; and his reputation recommended him to the emperor Rodolphus, for whom he executed four admirable books representing quadrupeds, insects, birds, and fishes. He was also a tolerable poet in Latin and German. He died in 1600.—Moreri.

Hugh-Capet, the chief of the third race of French monarchs, was count of Paris and Orleans. On account of his courage and other qualities he was proclaimed king of France at Noyon in 987. He died in 996, aged 57.—Henault. Moreri.

Hughes (John), an English poet, was born at Marlborough, in Wiltshire, in 1677. He received his education in London, and though he had a great love for literature, he applied himself to business, and obtained a place in the ordnance office. His first publication was an Ode on the Peace of Ryswick, 1697, which was well received, and introduced him to the acquaintance of several men of letters. In 1717 he was appointed secretary to the commissions of the peace, by lord chancellor Cowper. His last literary piece was the tragedy of the Siege of Damascus; but he expired on the first night of its performance, February 17, 1720. I 1735 his plays and poems were publishe in 2 vols. 12mo. He also wrote sever pieces in prose, particularly papers in th Tatler, Spectator, and Guardian: and h superintended an edition of Spenser's work in 6 vols. 12mo. His younger brothe Jabez Hughes published a translation fro Claudian of the Rape of Proserpine, an the story of Sextus and Erictho, from Lu can; also Suetonius's Lives of the Cæsar and some of Cervantes's novels. He die in 1731, aged 46. Another Jabez Hughe who was fellow of Jesus college, Cambridg published, in 1712, an excellent edition Chrysostom on the Priesthood.—Gen. Bio Dict.

Hugo of Cluni, a saint of the Roma calendar, was born in Burgundy, in 102 At the age of fifteen he entered into th abbey of Cluni, of which he was chose abbot in 1048. He reformed that mona tery, and died in 1108. Some of his epi tles are in Dacherius's Spicilegium.—Dupi

Hugo (Herman), a learned jesuit an Latin poet, was born at Brussels, in 158 and died of the plague at Rhinberg, 1629. He wrote, De Prima Scriben Origine, et universæ rei Literariæ Ant quitate, 8vo. 1617; Obsidio Bredana, su Ambrosio Spinola, Antwerp, 1629, folio Militia Equestris, Antiqua et Nova, foli 1630; Pia Desideria, 8vo.—Moreri.

Hugo (Charles Louis), a French write was abbot of Estival, and bishop of Ptol mais, and died in 1735. His works ar 1. Annales Premonstratensium, which, the history of a monastic order, is curiou 2. Vie de St. Norbert, Fondateur des Pr montres; 3. Sacræ Antiquitatis Monumen historica, dogmatica, diplomatica, 2 vo folio: 4. Traité Historique et Critique la Maison de Lorraine, 1711. This w condemned by the parliament: on whi he wrote, 5. Reflexions sur les deux O vrages concernant la Maison de Lorrain He had a controversy with Faydit on t doctrine of the Trinity.—Moreri.

Hugtenburgh (John van), a Dut painter, who excelled in painting batt and huntings. He painted the victories the duke of Marlborough and prince E gene. He died in 1733, aged 77. His b ther James, who died in 1696, excelled painting landscapes and animals.——A kington.

Hulpric (John James), a Swiss divi was born at Zurich, in 1683, and d there in 1731. He was professor of law his native city, and universally esteem for his public services. He published edition of the work, entitled, Sephor T ledot Jeschu, 1705; Miscellanea Tigur 3 vols.; and wrote a Commentary on H fendorf's Duty of Man.—Moreri.

Hulsemann (John), a Lutheran divi was born at Esens, in Friezland in 16 He became professor of divinity at Leip here he died in 1661. He wrote many works on theological subjects.—Moreri.

Hulsius (Anthony), a German divine, was born at Hilda, in 1615. After studying at Wesel and Devanter, he visited foreign universities, and acquired a considerable knowledge of oriental languages. He was minister at Breda twenty-five years, and afterwards professor of divinity at Leyden. He died in 1685. He wrote Theologia Judaica; Opus Catecheticum Didactico-polemicum: and a treatise, entitled, Non Ens Præadamiticum. He is not to be confounded with Henry Hulsius, who was professor of theology at Duisbourg, in 1723. He wrote Summa Theologiæ; de Principio credendi; de Vallibus Prophetarum Sacris, &c.—Moreri.

Hulst (Peter van der), a Dutch painter, was born at Dort, in 1652. He painted flowers, among which he introduced lizards, frogs, serpents, and insects. He died in 1708.—Pilkington.

Hume (David), a celebrated writer, was born at Edinburgh, in 1771. He was designed for the law, but having no inclination to that profession, he applied to mercantile pursuits, and became in 1734 clerk to an eminent house at Bristol. But he did not continue long in that line; for having a strong propensity to literature, he went to France, where he wrote his treatise of Human Nature, which he published at London in 1738. This metaphysical work, however, met with an indifferent reception; nor were his Moral Essays, which appeared in 1742, more successful. About this time he resided with the marquis of Annandale as a companion, but soon after he became secretary to general Sinclair, whom he attended to Vienna and Turin; and while he was abroad his Enquiry concerning the Human Understanding was published at London. In 1752 appeared his Political Discourses, and his Enquiry concerning the Principles of Morals, the latter of which he accounted the best of his writings. In 1754 he published the first volume of the History of England, from the accession of James I. to the Revolution. This work had little success; but the second, which came out in 1756, met with a better fate, and "helped (as the author says) to buoy up its unfortunate brother." About the same period he published his Natural History of Religion, which was shortly answered by Dr. Warburton in a pamphlet, which Mr. Hume attributed to the afterwards bishop Hurd. In 1759 appeared his History of the House of Tudor, and in 1761 the more ancient part of the English History. The work had now acquired considerable celebrity, and the writer gained largely by its popularity, for besides the profits it brought him he obtained a pension through lord Bute. In 1763 he accompanied the earl of Hertford on his embassy to Paris, where in 1765 he remained as charge d'affaires. The year following he returned home, and became under-secretary of state to Mr. Conway. In 1769 he retired to his native country on an independent income. He died in 1776. After his death appeared a work by him, entitled, Dialogues concerning Natural Religion. Mr. Hume was master of a good style of composition, and had the art of stating common objections in a new manner. His positions on religious points, however, are fallacious and frivolous. As a metaphysician he is sophistical and obscure, as a moralist lax and deceitful, and as an historian specious and partial.—Life by Adam Smith. Bp. Horn's Letters. Gen. Biog.

Humphrey (Laurence), a learned divine, was born at Newport Pagnel, in Buckinghamshire, about 1527, and educated at Cambridge, from whence he removed to Magdalen college, Oxford, where he became fellow and Greek lecturer. During the reign of Mary he resided abroad, but at the accession of Elizabeth he returned, and was restored to his fellowship. In 1560 he was made professor of divinity at Oxford, and the year following elected president of his college. He was successively dean of Gloucester and Winchester, and might have been a bishop but for his puritanical principles. He died in 1590. His writings are, 1. Epistola de Græci, Literis et Homeri Lectione et Imitatione; 2. De Religionis Conservatione et Reformatione, deque Primatu Regum; 3. De Ratione interpretandi Auctores; 4. Optimates; sive de Nobilitate, ejusque Antiqua Origine; 5. the Life of Bishop Jewel; 6. Sermons, &c.—Wood.

Hungary. This country, the ancient Pannonia, was reduced by Tiberius, B. C. 11. A. D. 376 the Huns conquered it, and about 460 were expelled by the Gepidæ, who submitted to the Lombards in 526. They quitted it in 568, and the Huns remained masters of it till they were conquered by Charlemagne in 794. Afterwards the Hungarians became an independant nation, for in 920 they were governed by Toxis, the father of Gerissa, their first christian king. This race continued till 1302, when Charles Martel succeeded to the crown. In 1383 Sigismund, emperor of Germany, and king of Bohemia, became king of Hungary in right of his wife; but in 1438 it became again independant of the empire under Uladislaus. In 1540 sultan Soliman seized the best part of the country, and Ferdinand, the emperor, took the rest; from which time it was the seat of frequent wars between the Germans and Turks till 1739, when the latter yielded all, except Belgrade; since which it has been annexed to the German empire.—Univ. Hist.

Huniades (John Corvinus), vaivode of Transylvania, and commander of the Hungarian armies, who forced Amurath the sultan of the Turks to retire from Belgrade, and defeated his generals in several battles. He became the terror of the Turks, but was defeated by them in 1448; and in 1456 he compelled Mahomet II. to raise the siege of Belgrade, and died the same year.—Moreri.

Hunneric, king of the Vandals in Africa, succeeded his father Genseric in 477. He was a violent arian, and though he at first gave the orthodox christians toleration, he afterwards commenced a persecution against them, which, for its cruelty, exceeded the heathen's. He died in 484. —Ibid.

Hunnius (Giles), a lutheran divine, was born at Winende, in the duchy of Wirtemberg, in 1550, and educated at Tubingen. In 1576 he became professor of divinity at Marpurg, from whence he removed to Wirtemberg. He wrote with bitterness against Calvin and Huber, and manifested a most intolerant spirit. He died in 1603. His son Nicholas was a learned writer, and professor of divinity at Wittemberg and Lubeck. He died in 1643.—Melch. Adam. Moreri.

Hunt (Walter), an English carmelite, who distinguished himself in a council held at Florence against the Greeks, at the time when an union was agitated between the two churches. He also wrote a book on the subject, and died in 1470.—Pits.

Hunt (Jeremiah), a learned dissenting divine, was born in London in 1678. He was educated under Mr. Thomas Rowe, a dissenting minister in the city, after which he studied at the universities of Edinburgh and Leyden; and at the latter place he applied to the Hebrew language, and Jewish antiquities, under an eminent rabbi. He preached to an English congregation at Amsterdam, and on his return home officiated some time at Tunstead in Norfolk, from whence he removed to London about 1710, as pastor of the congregration at Pinners' Hall. In 1729 the university of Edinburgh conferred on him the degree of D. D. He died in 1744. Dr. Hunt wrote, An Essay towards explaining the History and Revelations of Scripture in their several Periods, to which is annexed a Dissertation on the Fall of Man, 8vo. 1738; and several miscellaneous Sermons.—Fun. Serm. by Lardner.

Hunter (Robert), an English gentleman, who wrote the famous letter on Enthusiasm, which has been ascribed to Swift and to Shaftsbury. He was governor of New York and the Jerseys several years, and afterwards of Jamaica, where he died in 1734.—Gen. B. D.

Hunter (Willliam), a celebrated anatomist and physician, was born at Kilbride, in Lanerkshire, in 1718. His father was a farmer, and designed him for the church, but an acquaintance with Dr. Cullen inclining him to the study of physic, he resided with the doctor three years. In 1740 he removed to Edinburgh, where he followed his studies with intense application, and the year following visited London, soon after which he was taken by Dr James Douglas into his house as a dissector and also tutor to his son. In 1746 he succeeded Mr. Samuel Sharpe as lecturer to a society of surgeons in Covent-garden, and the year following was admitted a member of the corporation of surgeons. In 1750 he obtained his doctor's degree from Glasgow, and entered into an extensive line of practice as a physician, particulary in midwifery. In 1762 he was appointed physician extraordinary to the queen, and the same year he published his Medical Commentaries. In 1767 he was chosen a fellow of the royal society, and furnished the Transactions of that body with many valuable papers. In 1768 he was appointed professor of anatomy to the royal academy, which office he discharged with great reputation, adapting his anatomical knowledge to the arts of painting and sculpture. In 1781 he succeeded Dr. Fothergill as president of the society of physicians in London, and his name being now spread through Europe, he was chosen member of several foreign societies. Dr. Hunter formed a splendid anatomical museum in his house in Windmill-street, at an immense expence after which he extended his collection to natural history, learning, and science. He also possessed a magnificent treasure of Greek and Latin books, a cabinet of ancient medals, and a large stock of shells, corals, and other curious productions. This museum he bequeathed at his death which happened in 1783, to his nephew Dr. Baillie, and Mr. Cruikshank, for 30 years, and then to go to the university of Glasgow. His greatest performance is the Anatomy of the Gravid Uterus, contained in 34 capital plates, and dedicated to the king. After his death appeared an Anatomical Description of the Human Gravid Uterus and its Contents, 4to.—Life by Dr Simmons.

Hunter (John), younger brother of the preceding, was born in 1728, and brought up to a mechanical employment, of which being disgusted, he solicited his brother to take him as an assistant, which was granted and in 1748 he removed to London. The year following, by the favour of Mr. Cheselden, he became a student at Chelsea hospital, where he assiduously studied the rudiments of surgery. He afterwards attended St. Bartholomew's, and in 1756 was appointed house surgeon of St. George's hospital. About the same time his brother took him as a partner in giving anatomical lectures. He laboured for ten years on human anatomy, and not only made himself master of the science as it then stood, but added to it several important discoveries. He proceeded further in the examinatio of other animals, which laid the foundation of his collection of comparative anatomy. In 1760 he was appointed an army surgeon, and went in that capacity to Belleisle and Portugal. On his return to England he fixed his residence in London, and taught anatomy and surgery with the highest reputation. In 1767 he was admitted fellow of the royal society, and the year following his brother resigned to him his house in Jermyn-street. In 1768 he was chosen one of the surgeon's of St. George's hospital. In 1771 he married Miss Home, by whom he had two sons and two daughters. In 1776 he was appointed surgeon-extraordinary to his majesty. His collection having become extremely large, he took a house in Leicester-square, and erected a building adjoining to it for a museum. He succeeded Mr. Adair in 1790 as inspector-general of hospitals, and surgeon-general of the army. Mr. Hunter died suddenly in St. Gerorge's hospital, October 16, 1793. His contributions to the Philosophical Transactions were numerous and interesting. His other works are, A Treatise on the Natural History of the Human Teeth, 4to.; A treatise on the Venereal Disease, 4to.; Observations on the Animal Economy, 4to.; A treatise on the Blood, Inflammation, and Gunshot Wounds, 4to.—Hutchinson's Med. Dig.

Hunter (Henry), an ingenious divine of the church of Scotland, was born at Ayr, in Perthshire, in 1741. After receiving a school education he was sent to the university of Edinburgh, where he studied with great reputation, and in 1764 was licensed to preach by the presbytery of Dunfermline. In 1776 he was ordained at South Leith, where he continued to officiate till 1771, when he was invited to the charge of the Scotch church at London-wall. Dr. Hunter was a general scholar, a sound divine, very liberal in his principles, and an eloquent preacher. He died at Bristol wells, whither he had gone for his health, in 1802. His works are, Sacred Biography, or Sermons on the principal characters recorded in Scripture, 6 vol. 8vo; 2 vols. of Miscellaneous Sermons, translations of Lavater's Physiognomy, St. Pierre's Studies of Nature, Saurin's Sermons, &c.—Monthly Mag.

Huntingdon (Selina, countess of), was the second daughter of Washington Shirley earl Ferrers, and born in 1707. She married Theophilus earl of Huntingdon in 1721, by whom she had four sons and three daughters. A dangerous illness bringing her into a serious way of thinking, she turned methodist, and during the remainder of her life supported a number of itinerant preachers and built several chapels in various parts of the kingdom. Her sentiments were rigidly Calvinistic, and she was the foundress of all of that persuasion. She died in 1791.—Haweis's Church History.

Huntingdon (Robert), an English divine, was born at Deerhurst, in Gloucestershire, in 1636, and educated at Bristol, from whence he was sent to Merton college, Oxford, of which he became fellow. In 1670 he was appointed chaplain to the factory at Aleppo, where he improved himself in the Oriental languages, and collected many curious manuscripts. In 1682 he returned to England, and the year following took his degree of D. D. At the recommendation of bishop Fell, he was chosen master of Trinity college, Dublin, but he quitted Ireland in 7691. In 1701 he was nominated bishop of Raphoe, but lived only twelve days after his consecration. Some of his observations are in Ray's Collection of Voyages and Travels.—Life by Dr. Smith.

Huet (Charles), a French divine of the Jansenist persuasion, was born in 1639. He studied theology with avidity, and applied to the eastern languages with success. He became principal of the college at Bencourt, and died in 1717. His works are; A Dictionary of the Bible, 2 vols. folio. A Translation of the New Testament into French, with notes. A Sacred Grammar.—Nouv. Hist. Dict.

Huss (John), a martyr, was born in Bohemia, in 1376, and educated at Prague, where he entered into orders, and became rector of the university, and confessor to the queen. Meeting with some of the writings of Wickliffe, he perceived the errors of popery, and by his means a reformation was commenced in the university of Prague, to check which the archbishop issued two decrees, whereby the new doctrines spread the more. The pope then granted a bull for suppressing these errors, and Huss being cited to appear at Rome, was excommunicated for disobedience. He went on, however, propagating his principles, and was supported therein by Wenceslaus king of Bohemia, till 1414, when he was summoned to appear before the council of Constance. The emperor Sigismund sent him a safe conduct, promising to preserve him in going to and returning from the council; but the members of that assembly, in violation of this pledge, decreed, "that no faith is to be kept with heretics;" and as Huss refused to retract his opinions, he was degraded, and burnt alive in 1415. His works were printed together at Nuremburgh in 1558.—Rolt's Lives of the Reformers. Mosheim.

Hutcheson (Francis), an ingenious writer, was born in Ireland, in 1694. He received his education at Glasgow, after which he became pastor of a dissenting congregation in Dublin, where he also kept an academy with great credit till 1729, when he removed to Glasgow on being appointed professor of philosophy. He died in 1747. His works are, An Inquiry into the Ideas of Beauty and Virtue. A Treatise on the Passions. A System of Moral Philosophy, 5 vols. 4to.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

HUTCHINS (John), an English divine and topographer, was born in Dorsetshire, in 1693, and educated at Baliol college, Oxford. In 1747 he obtained the rectory of Wareham, in his native county, where he died in 1773. He was the author of the History and Antiquities of the County of Dorset, 2 vols. folio, 1774, and since reprinted.—Nichols's Anecdotes of Bowyer.

HUTCHINSON (John), an English philopher, was born at Spennythorn, in Yorkshire, in 1674. He received a liberal education, after which he became steward first to a country gentleman, and next to the duke of Somerset. Having a turn for natural history he made a large collection of fossils, which he put into the hands of Dr. Woodward, for him to digest and publish. The doctor deceived Hutchinson with fair promises, but never began the work, which induced him to rely on his own pen. He therefore quitted the duke's service, who being master of the horse to the king, made him his riding purveyor. He also gave him the presentation to the living of Sutton, in Sussex, which Hutchinson bestowed on his friend Mr. Julius Bate, a zealous defender of his doctrines. In 1724 he published the first part of his Moses's Principia, in which he ridiculed Woodward's Natural History of the Earth. He also attempted to refute Sir Isaac Newton's doctrine of gravitation. In the secoud part he maintained, in opposition to the Newtonian system, that a plenum and the air are the principles of scripture philosophy. In this work he intimated, that the idea of the Trinity might be taken from the grand agents in the natural system, fire, light, and spirit which is said to have made an impression on the mind of Dr. Clarke. Mr. Hutchinson was a great admirer of the Hebrew language, and maintained that all its radicals were to be explained by their etymologies, and therefore he totally renounced the maforetical points. By the aid of these etymologies, he fancied that he had discovered the true system of natural philosophy in the writings of Moses. For a time his notions occasioned some warm controversy, being supported by several ingenious and pious writers, as Mr. Jones, bishop Horne, Mr. Spearman and others, but they were zealously opposed in the universities. Mr. Hutchinson died in 1737. His works, which are abundantly curious, though obscurely written, have been printed in 12 vols. 8vo.—Floyd's Biog. Anecd. of Bowyer.

HUTCHINSON (John Hely), an Irish statesman and lawyer, was born in 1715. By great firmness and activity, he gained the places of prime serjeant at law, principal secretary of state, and provost of Trinity college, Dublin. He also accummulated a number of other lucrative employments, and so great was his ambition, that lord North said, "If England and Ireland were given to this man, he would solicit the Isle of Man for a potatoe garden." He possessed great talents and eloquence, and died in 1794.—Europ. Mag.

HUTTEN (Ulrice de), a German writer, was born at Steckelberg, in Franconia, in 1488. He studied at Cologne and Frankfort on the Oder, where he took the degree of M. A. at the age of eighteen. He then went to Italy, but receiving no supplies from his parents, he enlisted into the army, and served at the siege of Parma. In 1509 he returned to Germany, and was reduced to such poverty as to be obliged to beg his bread. In 1512 he published a Latin poem in praise of the emperor Maximilian, which gained him reputation and friends. The same year he went to Pavia to study the law; but falling into indigence he again entered the army. He soon obtained his discharge, and returned to his native country, where he espoused the doctrines of Luther, and wrote some elegant pieces in Latin. For his epigrams the emperor knighted him and made him poet laureat. In 1518 he discovered a manuscript of Livy, which he published, as he afterwards did Pliny, Quintillian, and Marcellinus. His writings against the church of Rome were so severe, that the pope sent orders to the inquisitor to seize him but Hutten fled into Switzerland with Erasmus. He died near Zurich in 1523. His letters and poems are very classical.—Bayle.

HUTTEN (Jacob), the founder of a religious sect, called after his name Huttites, in the 16th century. He was a native of Silesia, and procured a number of followers in the Tyrol, Bavaria, and parts adjacent. They affected peculiar sanctity, pretended to extradinary visions, and had all things in common. After the death of the founder the sect dispersed.——Mosheim.

HUTTER (Elias), a learned protestant divine, was born at Ulrich in 1553, and died at Nuremburg in 1602. He published a Bible in four languages, Hebrew, Greek, Latin, and German, 1597; afterwards he added to it the Italian, French, Sclavonic and Saxon. His New Testament, in two languages, was printed in 1600, but in an edition of 1603 he reduced it to four. The polygot is very scarce.—Bayle.

HUTTER (Leonard), a learned protestant divine, was born at Ulm in 1563. He became professor of theology at Wittenburg, and afterwards rector of that university, where he died in 1616. His principal work is entitled, Concordia concors five de origine & progressu formulæ Concordiæ Ecclesiarum Augustanæ Confessionis, folio. Besides this he wrote a number of books against the romanists.—Bayle.

HUTTON (Matthew), an English pre-was born of poor parents in Lancashire, in 1529, and sent to Cambridge in 1546. He became fellow of Trinity college, and was appointed Lady Margaret's professor of divinity in that university, and after obtaining a prebend in the cathedral of St. Paul, became master of Pembroke-hall. In 1567 he was preferred to the deanry of York, from which he was removed in 1589 to the bishopric of Durham, and in 1594 translated to the archbishopric of York. He died in 1605.—Le Neve's Lives of the Abps.

Huygens (Constatine), lord of Zuylichem, was born at the Hague in 1596, and died in 1617. He was secretary to the prince of Orange, and president of the council, and is known by 14 books of Latin poems, under the title of Momenta desultoria, consisting of epigrams and miscellaneous pieces.—Baillet. Jugemens des Savans sur les Poetes.

Huygens (Christian), an eminent mathematician, was son of the above, and born at the Hague in 1629. He discovered when young a great turn for mathematical science, and in 1651 gave a specimen of his abilities in a book entitled, Theoremata de quadratura Hyperboles, Ellipsis, et Circuli ex dato portionum gravitatis centro. Not long after, he published a treatise on horology, in which he discovered the model of a new-invented pendulum for clocks. In 1659 appeared his System of Saturn, giving an account of the discovery which he had made of a satellite attending that planet. In 1661 he visited England, and was chosen fellow of the royal society. He afterwards resided at Paris, on the invitation of Colbert, who gave him a pension, and he was also admitted a member of the academy of sciences. He died at his native place, in 1695. His Cosmotheoros, or a treatise on the plurality of worlds, was printed the same year, and in 1703 appeared his Opuscula Posthuma, in 1 vol. 4to. All his works have been collected in 2 vols. 4to.—Moreri. Hutton.

Huysum (Justus van), called the old, an eminent painter, was born at Amsterdam in 1659. He studied under Berchem, and became an excellent painter of flowers, landscapes, and battles. He died in 1716.—Pilkington.

Huysum (John van), son of the preceding, but a better artist, was born at Amsterdam in 1682. His reputation was so great that he fixed immoderate prices on his works He would never suffer any person to see him while he was painting, so that the method of mixing his colours was an impenetrable secret. His flower-pieces are exquisitely beautiful, as also are his landscapes and animals. He died in 1749. He had two brothers, who were good painters, Justus and Jacob; the first died at the age of 22, and the latter in 1740, aged 60.—Ibid.

Hyde (Edward), earl of Clarendon, and lord chancellor of England, was born at Dinton, in Wiltshire, of an ancient family, in 1608. In 1622 he was admitted of Magdalen hall, Oxford, from whence he removed to the Middle Temple. In 1640 he was chosen member of parliament for Wotton-Basset, and distinguished himself by his moderation and firm regard to the constitution. He sat in the long parliament for Saltash, and was appointed to carry up a charge to the lords against the judges Davenport, Weston, and Trevor, on which occasion he made an admirable speech. He was also employed to draw up the articles of impeachment against the earl of Strafford, but disapproving the measures pursued, he left the party, opposed the bill of attainder, and when the commons passed an ordinance for raising the militia against the king, he considered it as an act of rebellion, and went to his majesty at York. In 1642 he received the honour of knighthood and the chancellorship of the exchequer. In 1644 he was appointed one of the king's commissioners at the treaty of Uxbridge. When the royal cause was ruined, he went to Jersey, and from thence to Paris. In 1649 the exiled king sent him with lord Cottington to the court of Madrid. In 1657 he was made chancellor, which post was continued to him at the Restoration, when he was likewise chosen chancellor of the university of Oxford. He was also created a peer, and in 1661 earl of Clarendon. He conducted himself in his high station with great wisdom, moderation, and virtue; but his inflexible integrity procured him many powerful enemies in that dissolute court. The marriage of the duke of York with his daughter was made use of by them to alienate the king's regard from him, but ineffectually. In 1663 the earl of Bristol exhibited charges against him in the house of lords, but they were proved frivolous. The building, however, of Clarendon-house, which was considered as too superb for a subject, and the intrigues of a corrupt cabal succeeded, and in 1667 he was deprived of his place. He was also impeached of treason and other misdemeanors, on which he withdrew secretly to France; and as soon as his flight was known an act of banishment was passed against him. In 1668, while he was at Evreux, confined to his bed, a party of English seamen broke into his chamber, and dragged him into the yard, where they were about to dispatch him, when their lieutenant arrived and disarmed them. He died at Rouen in 1673, and his remains were brought to England, and interred in Westminster abbey. Anne, his eldest daughter, was married to the duke of York, by whom she had two daughters, Mary and Anne, who were successively queens of England. Lord Clarendon's History of the Rebellion, which is the noblest history in our language, was printed at Oxford in 1704, in folio and 8vo. He also wrote: Animadversions upon

Mr. Cressy's book, entitled, Fanaticism, fanatically imputed to the Catholic Church, by Dr. Stillingfleet, &c. 8vo. 1672; A Survey of Mr. Hobbes's Leviathan, 4to.; Miscellaneous Tracts, collected and printed in one volume folio; An Account of his own Life, printed in 1759.—Biog. Brit. Lives of the Chancellors.

Hyde (Henry), earl of Clarendon, the son of the above, was born in 1638. He assisted in bringing about the Restoration, after which he was made chamberlain to the queen's household. The persecution experienced by his father led him to join in opposition to the court, but in 1680 he was made a privy-counsellor. James II. appointed him lord lieutenant of Ireland, but he was recalled soon afterwards to make room for lord Tyrconnel. For refusing the oaths to king William he was confined some time in the Tower, and on his release retired to the country, where he died in 1709. His State Letters and Diary were printed at Oxford, in 2 vols. 4to. 1763.—Biog. Brit.

Hyde (Lawrence), second son of the chancellor, was early employed in public affairs, and in 1661 made master of the robes to the king. In 1676 he was sent ambassador to Poland, from whence he went to Nimeguen as plenipotentiary at the settling of the peace. In 1679 he was appointed first commissioner of the treasury. He opposed the bill for excluding the duke of York from the succession, and in 1681 was created viscount Hyde, and shortly after earl of Rochester. In 1684 he was made president of the council, lord treasurer, and the year after knight of the garter. He was pressed by James II. to change his religion, but refused, on which he was displaced. He became a member of the ecclesiastical commission, but concurred in the Revolution, and in 1700 was made lord lieutenant of Ireland. In the reign of queen Anne he was appointed president of the council. He died in 1711. His lordship wrote the dedication of his father's History of the Rebellion.—Memoirs of Illustrious Persons who died in 1711.

Hyde (Thomas), a learned divine, was born at Billingsley in Shropshire, in 1636, and educated under his father, who was a minister, and then removed to King's college, Cambridge, where he applied to the study of the Oriental languages. Dr. Walton employed him in his great work, the Polyglot Bible, and in the preface gratefully acknowledged his assistance. In 1658 he was admitted of Queen's college, Oxford, where he took the degree of M.A. and was made under keeper of the Bodleian library. In 1665 he translated from the Persian into Latin, Ulugh Beg's Observations on the Longitude and Latitude of the fixed Stars, with notes; and soon after he obtained a prebend in the church of Salisbury. In 1678 the archdeaconry of Gloucester was conferred on him; in 1682 he took his degree of D D. In 1691 he was chosen Arabic professor. In 1700 appeared his great work, universally known and admired, entitled, Historia Religionis Veterum Persarum, eorumque Magorum, &c. 4to. Besides the above preferments he was made regius professor of Hebrew, and canon of Christ Church. Dr. Hyde died at Oxford in 1703.—Wood. Biog. Brit.

Hyder-Aly-Khan, a celebrated Indian chieftain, was born in 1728 at Divanelli, in the Mysore country. His father was a general, under whom he served, and on his death in 1751 he joined his brother, who had allied with the French. He succeeded his brother as generalissimo of the king of Mysore's armies, and distinguished himself in a number of daring exploits, for which he was raised to the princely rank of suba of Servia. He carried on a successful war against the Mahrattas many years, and even threatened the annihilation of the English settlements in India. A treaty was concluded in 1769, which was broken in 1780, and the war renewed with vigour; but the skill of sir Eyre Coote proved superior to Hyder, who left the military operations to his son Tippoo Saib. He died in 1782.—Europ. Mag.

Hyginus (Caius Julius), an old Latin writer, who was a native of Spain, and a freedman of Augustus. He wrote many books, but the only one extant is his Poeticon Astronomicon, published at Amsterdam in 1681, in 2 vols. 8vo.—Vossius de Hist. Lat.

Hyginus, a pope and saint of the Roman calendar, succeeded Telesphorus in 153, and was martyred in 156. He had been a philosopher at Athens. There are two decretals under his name, but they are not genuine.—Moreri.

Hyll (Albayn), a physician of the 16th century, was according to some a Welshman, and to others a native of Scotland. He studied at the university of Oxford, after which he went abroad and took his doctor's degree. He died in London in 1559. He wrote several pieces upon the works of Galen.—Wood.

Hypatia, an illustrious female, was the daughter of Theon, an eminent philosopher at Alexandria, whom she succeeded in the government of that school, and had a number of disciples. Synesius in particular, who afterwards became a christian bishop, has celebrated her praises in the most lively terms. Orestes, the governor of Alexandria, had a high respect for Hypatia, and frequently consulted her on matters of importance. Between the governor and the patriarch Cyril there was a bitter enmity which broke out into open war, and the monks siding with their chief, assembled in a riotous manner against Orestes, who was obliged to fly from the city. They then seized Hypatia, and having torn her in pieces, burnt her mangled limbs to ashes. This happened A. D. 415. She wrote a Commentary on Diophantus, and other works, which are lost.—Synesius Epist. Socrates Hist. Eccl.

HYPERIDES, an Athenian orator, who was a disciple of Plato and Isocrates about 35 B. C. Though he was the intimate friend of Demosthenes, he accused him of bribery, for which that great man was banished. Hyperides was put to death by Antipater about 322.—Plutarch.

HYPERIUS (Andrew Gerard), a learned divine of Ypres in Flanders. He received his education in France, but having embraced the principles of the Reformation he was obliged to quit that country; on which he came to England, and afterwards settled as divinity professor at Marpurg, where he died in 1564. His works on philosophy, mathematics, and theology, make 7 vols. in fo.—Bayle. Melch. Adam.

HYPSICLES of Alexandria, an ancient mathematician, who flourished under M. Aurelius and L. Verus. There is ascribed to him a work, entitled, Anaphoricus, or a book of Ascensions, printed in Greek and Latin at Paris, in 1680.—Vossius.

HYRCANIUS (John), high priest and prince of the Jews, succeeded his father Simon Maccabæus, who was murdered by his son-in-law Ptolemy. This traitor then invited Antiochus into Judæa, and that monarch accordingly laid siege to Jerusalem, which held out against all his attempts. At length a peace was concluded on condition of the Jews becoming tributary to Antiochus, after whose death Hyrcanus restored his country to independence. He died 106 B. C. He was succeeded by his son Hyrcanus II. who died B. C. 30.—Josephus.

HYWEL ab Owain Gwynedd, a prince of North Wales, some of whose poems are in the Welsh Archæology. On the death of his father, in 1169, he endeavoured to ascend the throne in preference to his brothers, but was defeated and wounded, on which he went to Ireland, where he died in 1171.—Owen's Camb. Biog.

HYWEL ab Morgan Mawr, prince of Glamorgan in 1030. He died in 1049, at the extraordinary age of 130 years. He is represented as having been one of the wisest and best of British princes. In this line we have the following instances of longevity: Morgan Mawr, aged 129; Hywel ab Rhys, 124; and Arthvael ab Rhys, 120.—Ibid.

HYWEL Dada, or Howel the Good, a celebrated prince and legislator of Wales, who died in 948. He went to Rome on purpose to revise the code of laws for the government of his country.—Ibid.

I.

IAMBLICHUS, king of Arabia, who was deprived of his estates by Augustus after the battle of Actium, for supporting the cause of Mark Antony; but his son was restored to the throne by the same emperor A. D. 22.—Moreri.

IAMBLICHUS, a Greek author and a musician by profession, who lived in the second century under Marcus Aurelius. He was the author of some works in Greek, and, among others, one entitled Babylonicus, in the library of the Escurial in Spain, and of which Leo Allatius has published a fragment.—Photius in Biblioth. Vossius de Hist.

IAMBLICHUS, a Platonic philosopher, was native of Chalcis in Syria, and studied under Porphyry. He gained many disciples by his eloquence and probity. He died in the reign of Constantine.—Eunapius in Vit. Sophist.

IAMBLICHUS, a Greek author, was a native of Apamea in Syria, and flourished in the reign of Julian, by whom he was greatly esteemed. He was poisoned under Valens A. D. 363. He was the author of the Life of Pythagoras; an Exhortation to Philosophy; and a piece against Porphyry's Letter to the Egyptian Mysteries.—Ibid. Moreri.

IBARRA (Joachim), printer to the king of Spain, was a native of Saragossa, and died in 1785, aged 60. He carried the typographic art to a degree of perfection which had been unknown in that country. His presses produced fine editions of the Bible, the Mozarabic Missal, Mariana's History of Spain, Don Quixote, and Gabriel's Spanish translation of Sallust. He invented a superior kind of printing ink.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

IBAS, bishop of Edessa in the fifth century. He was at first a nestorian, but afterwards quitted that persuasion and became orthodox. In the council of Ephesus in 449 he was deposed and banished, but that of Chalcedon in 451 restored him to his dignity.—Dupin. Moreri.

IBBOT (Benjamin), an English divine, was born at Beachamwell, in Norfolk, in 1680, and educated at Clare hall, Cambridge, from whence he removed to Corpus Christi college, where he obtained a fellowship. In 1708 archbishop Tenison appointed him treasurer of the cathedral of Wells, and George I. made him one of his chaplains; and when that monarch visited Cambridge, he was created D. D. by mandamus. In 1713 and 1714 he preached the Boyle's lecture sermons. In 1724 he was installed prebendary of Westminster, but died the year following. His posthumous works were published by Dr. Clarke, in 2 vols. 8vo.—Gen Biog. Dict.

IBEK (Cotheddin Ibek), the slave of Schehabeddin, sultan of India, on whose death he usurped the throne, and added to his dominions many provinces of Hindostan. An account of his conquest was written in a volume, entitled, Tage al Mather.—D'Herbelot.

Ibek (Azzeddin Ibek, or Ibeg), first sultan of the Mameluke Turks in Egypt. He was an officer in the court of Malek Al Saleh, sultan of Egypt, on whose death he married his widow, and became partner with her in the throne; but she caused him to be assassinated, A. D. 1257.—Ibid.

Ibek, an Arabian author, who wrote a book on the duties and qualifications of a secretary. He died in 1348.—Ibid.

Ibrahim, son of Valid, the third caliph of the race of Ommiades, succeeded his brother Jezid A. D. 748; but Marvan, governor of Mesopotamia, revolted against him, took Damascus, and reduced him to a private life two years afterwards. One author says, that he was slain three months after his being deposed.—D'Herbelot.

Ibrahim Imam, the chief priest of the Mohammedan religion, was a descendant of the illustrious house of the Abbassides. His reputation and authority were so great, that Marvan or Hemar, the last caliph of the Ommiades, caused him to be put to death by thrusting his head into a bag of lime A. D. 748.—Ibid.

Ibrahim, the son of Massoud, eighth caliph of the dynasty of Gaznevides, succeeded his brother Ferokzad. He acquired great reputation as a just and pious prince, notwithstanding the frequent wars which he made on the borders of Hindostan, in which he gained such advantages as to acquire the name of the Conqueror. He reigned 42 years, and died in 1098. Ibrahim erected a number of cities, mosques, and hospitals, and he was a liberal encourager of arts and letters.—Ibid.

Ibrahim, the son of the caliph Mahadi, brother of Haroun Raschid, and uncle of Amin and Mamon. He was an excellent poet and musician, and the first orator of his time. He was proclaimed caliph at Bagdad, on the death of his nephew Amin, in 617; but Mamon marching from Khorassan to Bagdad with a powerful army, Ibrahim thought it prudent to abdicate the throne. He died at Samara in 839.—Ibid.

Ibrahim of Schiraz, a mussulman doctor of law, who wrote several works in Arabic on jurisprudence. There was another of the same name, surnamed Merouzi, some of whose works are extant.—Ibid.

Ibrahim, emperor of the Turks, was the son of Achmet, and succeeded his brother Achmet IV. in 1640. He besieged and took the capital of Candia in 1644, but his cruelties and debaucheries were so great that the soldiers strangled him in 1649.—Moreri.

Ibrahim Effendi, a native of Poland, who was raised by his courage and talents to the first dignities in the Ottoman empire. He established the first printing-press in Turkey in 1728. The count de Bonneval furnished him with the characters. The first work which he produced was on the military art: he afterwards published the Account of an expedition against the Afghans, a Turkish Grammar, and a History of Turkey.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Ibycus, a Greek lyric poet, who flourished about 540 B.C. He was murdered by some robbers, and in the moment of dying he observed cranes flying over his head, whom he implored to be his avengers. Some time after these murderers walking in Rhegium, seeing some cranes in the air, one of them said to his companions, "those are the witnesses of the death of Ibycus." These words being overheard excited suspicion, the wretches were apprehended, and being tortured, confessed their crime, for which they were put to death.—Pliny

Idacius, a Spanish bishop of the fifth century, who wrote a chronicle commencing with the first year of the reign of Theodosius, and ending with the 11th of that of Leo. The Consular Fasts are also attributed to him. His works were published by Sirmond in 1619, 8vo. at Paris.—Moreri.

Idris Gawr, a Welsh astronomer, who is ranked with Gwidion ab Don and Gwyddab Nudd, as the three great astronomers of Britain. A high mountain in Wales is still called Cader Idris, or the seat of Idris. When he flourished is unknown.—Owen Camb. Bieg.

Ignatius (St.), an eminent father of the church and a martyr, was a native of Syria and a disciple of St. John the Evangelist, by whom he was made bishop of Antioch A.D. 68. After discharging the episcopal office with great zeal 40 years, the emperor Trajan coming to Antioch in his Parthian expedition, sent for him, and endeavoured to prevail on him to renounce his religion. Ignatius continued inflexible, on which the emperor sent him with a guard of soldiers to Rome, where he was exposed to the wild beasts in the amphitheatre for the amusement of the people. The holy martyr heard his sentence with joy, and endured his sufferings with fortitude. Two pious deacons of his church gathered up his bones, and conveyed them to Antioch, where they were carefully preserved. Seven of his genuine epistles remain, and were published by Usher at Oxford in 16[illegible]. The best edition is that of 1708. There are some others which go under his name, but they are generally accounted spurious, though Whiston endeavoured to prove that they were the true ones, and that the others were forgeries or abridgments.—Cave. Dupin. Pearson. Vind. Ignat.

Ignatius, patriarch of Constantinople, was the son of the emperor Michael C[illegible] palata, and of Procopia, daughter of the emperor Nicephorus. When his father was deposed by Leo the Armenian, he and his brother were thrown into a monastery and made eunuchs. Ignatius, whose for[illegible] name was Nicetas, took the religious habit, and in 847 was raised to the patriarchate; but having rebuked Bardas, one of the principal lords of the court, for incest, he was banished to the isle of Terebinthus, and Photius appointed in his place. A council was called at Constantinople to compel Ignatius to resign, which he refused for some time, but close confinement and rigorous usage induced him to yield. On the advancement of Basil to the empire he was restored, and immediately excommunicated Photius, and procured the 8th general council to be called at Constantinople. He died in 878.—Dupin.

IGNATIUS. See LOYOLA.

IGOR, sovereign of Russia, succeeded his father Rurick; and after making war a long time on his neighbours, he proceeded to ravage the East, deluging with blood Pontus, Paphlagonia, and Bithynia. He died in 945, leaving the throne to his wife Alga, who in her old age embraced christianity.—Univ. Hist.

ILDEFONSE (St.), a Spanish bishop in the seventh century, was the disciple of St. Isidore of Seville, after whose death he went to Toledo, where he became abbot of a monastery, and on the death of the bishop Eugenius he was elected to succeed him. He died in 667, aged 62. He wrote an account of ecclesiastical writers, and other works.—Dupin.

ILIVE (Jacob), an English printer and letter-founder, who published some strange pieces, as a pretended translation of the book of Jasher, an oration proving that this world is hell, that men are fallen spirits, and that the fire to destroy them at the day of judgment will be immaterial, &c. He died in 1768.—Anec. of Bowyer.

ILLESCAS (Gonsalvo), a Spanish ecclesiastic and historian, who died in 1580. He wrote the History of the Catholic Pontifical, containing the lives of the popes, in Spanish, 2 vols. folio, 1570. This work was continued by Louis de Babia to 1605, and Clark de Guadalaxara, a carmelite, added another volume.—Nicolas Antonio. Biblioth. Hisp.

ILLTYD VARCHOG, or Iltutus the Knight, a saint who accompanied Garmon to Britain, and was placed at the head of the congregation of Theodosius, so called from being established by that emperor. He introduced an improved method of ploughing among the Welsh, and died about A.D. 520.—Owen's Camb. Biog.

ILLYRIUS (Matthias Flaccus), a lutheran divine, was born at Albona, in Istria, in 1520, and educated at Venice, where he acquired a great knowledge of Greek and Hebrew. Having embraced the doctrines of the Reformation he went to Wittemburg, and prosecuted his studies under Luther and Melancthon. He had a share in the Centuriæ Magdeburgenses, and wrote several learned works. He died in 1575.—Melch. Adam. Vit. Germ. Theol.

IMBERT (Bartholomew), a French poet, was born at Nismes in 1747. He became a member of the academy in his native city, and cultivated literature, particularly poetry, with success. His poem on the judgment of Paris has been much admired. He also published a volume of fables, which though excellent cannot be compared to Fontaine's. He was likewise the author of an agreeable novel, entitled, les Egaremens de l'Amour, and some other pieces. He died of a malignant fever in 1790.—N. D. H.

IMBERT (John), an advocate, was born at Rochelle, and died at the close of the 16th century. He published Enchiridion juris scripti Galliæ, 4to., 1539; Institutiones Forenses, 8vo.; 1541.—Nouv. Dict.

IMBERT (Joseph Gabriel), a French painter, was born at Marseilles, and instructed by Vander Meulen and le Brun. At the age of 34 he entered into the order of St. Bruno, but still continued painting. He died in 1740, aged 83.—Ibid.

IMHOFF (James William), a celebrated genealogist, was born of a noble family at Nuremburgh, in 1651, and died in 1728. He published, 1. De Notitia Procerum Germaniæ, 2 vols. fol.; 2. Historia Genealogica Italiæ et Hispaniæ; 3. Familiarum Italiæ, Hispaniæ, Galliæ et Portugalliæ, all in folio; 4. Magnæ Britanniæ cum appendice, 2 vols. fol.; 5. Recherches sur les Grandes d'Espagne, 8vo.—Moreri. Nouv. Dict.

IMPERIALI (John Baptist), an Italian physician, was born at Vicenza, in 1568, of a noble family. He studied at Verona and Bologna, and became professor of philosophy and physic at Padua. He died at Vicenza in 1623. He published a volume, entitled, Exoticarum Exercitationum, Venet. 1603.—Ibid.

IMPERIALI (John), the son of the above, was also a famous physician. He was born in 1602, and died in 1652. His works are, 1. Musæum Historicum; 2. Musæum Physicum, sive de humano ingenio, Venet. 1640.—Ibid.

IMPERIALI (Joseph Renatus), a Roman cardinal, who was a great encourager of learning, and collected one of the first libraries in Europe. In 1730 he was a candidate for the pontificate, and lost the election by one vote. He died in 1737, aged 86. A description of his library was printed at Rome in 1711, in folio.—Ibid.

INA, king of the West-Saxons, acquired fame by his expeditions against the neighbouring princes. In 726 he went on a pilgrimage to Rome, where he erected an English college, which he endowed by a yearly tax on his kingdom, called Romescot, and afterwards Peterpence.—Bede. Rapin.

INACHUS, founder of the kingdom of Argos, B. C. 1858. Josephus and other antient Historians make him contemporary with Moses, but Eusebius places his reign 346 years before the Exodus of the Israelites, —Petavius. Moreri.

Inchoffer (Melchior), a German jesuit, was born at Vienna in 1584. He at first studied the law, but quitted that profession and entered among the jesuits at Rome in 1607. He wrote a book, entitled, The Virgin Mary's Letter to the People of Messina proved to be genuine, folio, 1630. He died at Milan in 1648. Having received some injuries from his brethren, he wrote a satire against them, which was printed after his death under the title of Monarchia folipsorum. He also wrote the Ecclesiastical History of Hungary, &c.—Petavius. Moreri.

Indulphus, the seventy-seventh king of Scotland, began his reign A. D. 959. The first seven years of his reign were peaceable, but afterwards his kingdom was invaded several times by the Danes, who were enraged against him for making an alliance with the English. Having landed in the north in great force, Indulphus marched against them, and compelled them to fly to their ships, but pursuing them too eagerly he was slain by an arrow.—Buchanan.

Inghen (William van), an historical painter, was born at Utrecht in 1651. After being the disciple of Anthony Grebber, he studied in Italy; and on his return settled at Amsterdam. His works are held in great esteem.—Houbraken.

Ingenhousz (John), an eminent physician and chemist, was born at Breda in 1730. He came early to England, and having learnt the Suttonian method of inoculation, went to Vienna on the recommendation of sir John Pringle, to inoculate the daughter of the emperor, for which he was made imperial physician, and obtained a pension. He was a fellow of the royal society, and died in 1799. Dr. Ingenhousz published, 1. Experiments upon Vegetables, 8vo.; 2. A translation into Latin of Hulme's Treatise on the Stone, Scurvy, and Gout; 3. Several Chemical Treatises on Impregnating Water, &c. with Fixed Air; 4. Papers in the Philosophical Transactions.—Gent. Mag.

Ingoult (Nicholas-Louis), a French jesuit, was born at Gisors, and died in 1753, aged 64. He was an eloquent preacher, and published the 8th volume of the Memoirs of the Missions of the society of Jesus in the Levant. Some of his sermons are in print.—Nouv. Dict.

Ingram (Robert), an English divine, was born in Yorkshire, and educated at Beverley school, from whence he removed to Corpus Christi college, Cambridge, of which he became fellow, and took there his degrees in arts. His first preferment was the perpetual curacy of Bridhurst, in Kent, after which he obtained successively, the small vicarage of Orston, in Nottinghamshire, and the vicarages of Wormington and Boxted, in Essex. He died in 1804. Mr. Ingram wrote, 1. A View of the Great Events of the Seventh Plague, or Period when the Mystery of God shall be finished, Rev. x, 7, which concludes and adds confirmation to an explanation of the Seven Last Plagues, Rev. xv, xvi, lately offered to the public, 1785; 2. Accounts of the Ten Tribes of Israel being in America, originally published by Menasseh Ben Israel; with observations thereon, &c. 1792; 3. A Complete and Uniform Explanation of the Prophecy of the Seven Vials of Wrath, or the Seven Last Plagues, &c. 1804.—Monthly Mag.

Ingrassia (John Philip), a physician of Palermo, who delivered his country in 1575 from the fury of the plague. He wrote Veterinaria Medicina, Venice, 1568, and other works. He died in 1581, aged 70.—Nouv. Dict.

Inguimberti (Dominic Joseph Mari d'), bishop of Charpentras, was born in that city in 1683. He became a member of the order of Dominicans, which he quitted for that of the Cistercians. Clement XII. gave him his bishoprick in 1733, and in that situation he conducted himself in an exemplary manner, employing his wealth to serve the public, or to relieve the poor. He built a large hospital, and erected a magnificent library for public benefit. This worthy prelate died in 1757. He published pieces on religious subjects.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Ingulphus, abbot of Croyland in the 15th century, was in great favour with William the Conqueror, to whom he was secretary. He rebuilt his monastery, and obtained for it many privileges. He died in 1109. There is extant by him a History of Croyland Abbey, published by Saville in 1596, and at Oxford in 1684.—Pits. Bal.

Innocent I. pope, was a native of Albany, and elected to the pontifical chair in 402. He condemned the Novatians and Pelagians, and died at Ravenna in 417. Some of his epistles are extant.

Innocent II. ascended the throne in 1130. He was elected by a part of the conclave, the rest choosing Peter de Leon, the son of a Jew, who took the name of Anacletus II. and was acknowledged by the kings of Scotland and Sicily, but Innocent was received by the other princes of Europe. Being driven from Italy, he fled to France, where he held several councils. On the death of his rival and the abdication of his successor Victor IV. he returned to Rome, and held the second Lateran council in 1139. He died in 1144.

Innocent III. was called Lothario Conti, and born of a noble family at Anagni in 1161. On account of his learning he was made a cardinal, and in 1198 elected pope. He encouraged the crusades to the Holy Land, promoted one against the Albienses, laid the kingdom of France under interdict, and excommunicated John king of England. He greatly extended his temporal dominions, and carried the papal authority to a high pitch. He died in 1236 His works were printed at Cologne, in 1515.

INNOCENT IV. was a Genoese, and became chancellor of the Roman church. Gregory IX. honoured him with the purple in 1227. He succeeded Celestin IV. in 1243, at which time the court of Rome was engaged in a contest with the emperor Frederic II. Innocent was obliged to retire to France, where he held the council of Lyons, in which Frederic was excommunicated. The pope died at Naples in 1254. He is said to have been the first who gave red hats to the cardinals.

INNOCENT V. a dominican, became archbishop of Lyons, cardinal, and lastly pope in 1276, but died a few months after his election. Some religious pieces of his have been printed.

INNOCENT VI. cardinal bishop of Ostia, was born in France, and advanced to the papacy in 1352. He was a man of great learning and liberality, and died in 1362 Some of his letters are extant.

INNOCENT VII. born at Abruzzo, was elected pope in 1404, but not without great opposition. He died in 1406.

INNOCENT VIII. a noble Genoese of Greek extraction, obtained the tiara in 1484. He endeavoured to procure another crusade, but without success. He died of an apoplexy in 1492, aged 60.

INNOCENT IX. was born at Bologna in 1519, and ascended the papal throne in 1591, but died two months afterwards. He distinguished himself at the council of Trent, and was made cardinal by Gregory XIII.

INNOCENT X (John Baptist amphilus), a Roman, succeeded Urban VIII. in 1644, in the age of 72. He condemned the doctrines of Jansenius, and prosecuted the Barberini family with great violence. He died in 1655.

INNOCENT XI. was born at Como, in the duchy of Milan, in 1611 Innocent X. gave him a cardinal's hat, and a bishopric. He was elected pope in 1676, and reformed many abuses in the ecclesiastical state. He had a contest with Louis XIV. of France about the right of disposing of benefices and church lands, claimed by that monarch, and confirmed to him by an assembly of the clergy, which nearly terminated in a separation of the Gallican church from the Roman communion. This pope effected a coalition between Germany, Poland, and Venice, against the Turks, and died in 1689.

INNOCENT XII. (Antony Pignatelli), a Neapolitan of a noble family, who succeeded Alexander VIII. in 1691. He abolished the extraordinary distinctions paid to the nephews of popes, and condemned the Maxims of the Saints, written by Fenelon. He died in 1700, aged 85.

INNOCENT XIII. (Michael Angelo Conti), a Roman, and the eighth pope of his family, was elected to the papal chair in 1721, and died in 1724, aged 69. He gave a pension to the grandson of James II. and is said to have died of chagrin for having been persuaded to bestow a cardinal's hat on Dubois.—Platina. Bower. Moreri.

INSTITOR (Henry), a German Dominican, and inquisitor-general of Mayence, Treves, and Cologne. He and his colleague James Springer composed a work, entitled, Malleus Maleficarum, printed at Lyons in 1484, and several times afterwards. He also wrote a book on monarchy, and another against errors on the sacrament.—Moreri.

INTAPHERNES, one of the seven lords of Persia, who conspired to dethrone Smerdis, the usurper, 521 B. C. He afterwards endeavoured to seize the crown, for which Darius condemned him to death with all his family. The wife of Intaphernes presented herself before Darius in a suppliant posture, and not only obtained a pardon for herself, but for any one of her relations that she should fix upon. She chose her brother, saying she might have another husband and other children, but that, as her father and mother were dead, she could not have another brother. On this Darius pardoned her brother and son, but Intaphernes was executed.—Herodotus.

INTERIAN DE AVALA (John), a Spanish monk of the order of mercy, who died at Madrid, in 1770, aged 74. He published a work on the errors of painters in representing religious subjects; it is entitled Pictor Christianus eruditus, folio, 1720. He also wrote some poems.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

INVEGES (Augustin), a Sicilian jesuit and historian, was born in 1595, and died at Palermo, in 1677. He wrote the History of Palermo, 3 vols. folio, 1649; 2. Historia Paradisi terrestris, 4to. 1641; 3. La Cartagine Siciliana 1651, 4to.—Ibid.

IOLO GOCH, a Welsh bard, who flourished from A. D. 1370 to 1420. He lived with Owen Glendower, who employed him to compose warlike songs to rouse his countrymen against the English.—Owen's Camb. Biog.

IPHICRATES, a famous Athenian general, who defeated the Thracians and Lacedemonians, and restored the Seuthes. He died B. C. 380.—Corn Nepos IRAIL (Augustin-Simon), a French ecclesiastic, was born at Puy, in Valay, in 1719, and died in 1794. He wrote a tragedy called the Triumph of Heroism; Memoirs for a History of the Revolutions of the Republic of Letters, 4 vols. 12mo. and a History of the Re-union of Brittany to France, 2 vols. 12mo.—Nouv. Dict.

IRELAND. The original inhabitants of this island were probably Britons. In 795 the Danes seized a part of it, and were never completely subdued till the English took possession; till which period it was generally divided into a number of petty sovereignties. The first settlements of the English were made in 1169, by private adventurers, but under the sanction of Henry II. who in 1172 conquered the whole country. In 1314 the Scots excited a rebellion in Ireland, and in 1315 Edward Bruce, king of Scotland, expelled the English from almost all the places they held there, and was proclaimed king of Ireland, but the Scots were driven out in 1318. There were still, however, frequent rebellions of the natives, so that the English did no thoroughly establish their power till 1614. The Irish catholics revolted again in 1641, and committed a dreadful massacre of the protestants; but they were reduced by Cromwell in 1653. In 1798 another rebellion broke out which was not suppressed without much bloodshed. In 1800 an act of parliament was passed, by which that kingdom was united to Great Britain.—Leland's Hist. Ireland.

Ireland (Samuel), a miscellaneous writer, who was originally a mechanic in Spital Fields, but having a turn for drawing and engraving, he sought to turn it to account by publishing travels adorned with prints. With this view he published a Picturesque Tour through Holland, Brabant, and part of France, in 1790, which was followed in 1792, by Picturesque Views on the river Thames, vols. 8vo.; and in 1793, Picturesque Views on the river Medway. In 1794 he published Graphic Illustrations of Hogarth. The next affair which brought Mr. Ireland before the public was not quite so respectable. This was the publication of the disgraceful forgery of letters, and papers, purporting to be Shakespeare's, in one volume folio. But the fraud was discovered, and exposed soon after. His son has published a narrative of this affair, and taken all the ingenuity and management upon himself. Mr. Ireland's last work was Picturesque Views with an historical account of the Inns of Courts. He died in 1800.—Gent. Mag.

Irenæus (St.), bishop of Lyons, was a native of Greece, and the disciple of Polycarp, by whom it is supposed he was sent into Gaul in 157. He was at first a priest in the church of Lyons, and on the martyrdom of Pothemius succeeded him in the bishopric in 177. He had a disputation with Valentinus at Rome, and held a council at Lyons in which the Gnostic heresy was condemned. Irenæus was a great lover of peace, and laboured to allay the controversy, which raged with violence, respecting the time of celebrating Easter. He was beheaded at Lyons in the persecution under Severus, in 202. His books on heresies were edited by Grabe at Oxford, in 1702, folio, and all his works by Massuet, at Paris, 1710, folio.—Dupin. Cave.

Irene, empress of Constantinople, the wife of Leo IV. after whose death she was acknowledged sovereign in conjunction with her son Constantine V. She displayed great talents, but committed some atrocious murders on the relations of her husband, and at last she put her own son to death. The people, irritated by her conduct, placed Nicephorus on the throne, who banished her to Lesbos, where she died in 803.—Moreri.

Ireton (Henry), a republican general, who distinguished himself in the great rebellion on the side of parliament. He was appointed to command in Ireland, where he died at the siege of Limerick, in 1651. His body was conveyed to England and interred in Westminster abbey, but at the Restoration it was taken up and hung at Tyburn, with those of Cromwell and Bradshaw. He had by his wife Bridget, eldest daughter of Oliver Cromwell, a daughter named also Bridget, who married Thomas Bendish, esq.—Granger. Clarendon.

Irevisa (John), a native of Cornwall, and vicar of Berkeley in Gloucestershire in the 14th century. He translated the Polychronicon, by the direction of Thomas lord Berkeley, in 1387.—Gen. B. D.

Irnerius or Wirnerus, a German civilian of the 12th century. He became a professor at Ravenna, and afterwards at Bologna, where he died about 1150. He is said to have introduced the degree of doctor into universities. He is also called the father of glossators.—Bayle.

Ironside (Gilbert), an English prelate, was born at Hawksbury, in Oxfordshire, in 1588, and educated at Trinity college, Oxford, and on entering into orders, obtained the rectory of Winterburn, in Dorsetshire. At the Restoration he was made bishop of Bristol, where he died in 1671. He wrote Seven Questions of the Sabbath, 4to, and a Sermon, 1660.—Wood.

Isaac, the son of Abraham and Sarah, was born 1896 B. C. His father being commanded to offer him up as a sacrifice, was about to obey the divine command on Mount Moriah, when an angel stopped him. Isaac had two sons, Esau and Jacob the eldest of whom became the father of the Edomites, and the other of the Israelites. He died 1716 B. C.—SS.

Isaac (Comnenus), a Greek emperor, was proclaimed in 1057 in the room of Michael Stratioticus, who was deposed. His reign was marked by valour and prudence till he meddled with the property of the ecclesiastics, who excited a general discontent against him. He then retired to a monastery, and ceded the crown to Constantine Ducas in 1059. He died two years after.—Moreri.

Isaac (Angelus), a Greek emperor, who tained the crown after putting to death ndronicus Comnenus in 1185. He was a oluptuous prince, and his brother Alexius aving gained over his officers, seized the rone, and threw him into prison, where was deprived of his eyes in 1195. fter the death of Alexius he was released om confinement, and placed again on the rone. He died in 1204.—Moreri.

Isaac Karo, a Spanish rabbi, who as forced to quit Spain in consequence f the edict of Ferdinand and Isabella in 489, which compelled the Jews to leave iat country within four months, or turn ristains. He first went to Portugal, and om thence to Jerusalem, where he led retired life. He wrote a Commentary on e Pentateuch, printed at Amsterdam in 708.—Basnage.

Isaacson (Henry), a learned chrono- ger, was born in London in 1581. He ecame secretary to the learned bishop ndrews, and died in 1654. He compil- d a large work on Chronology in folio.—Wood.

Isabella of Arragon, was the daugh- r of Alphonso, duke of Calabria, the n of Ferdinand, king of Naples. In 489 she was espoused to John Galeazzo forza, then a minor under the guardian- ip of his uncle Lewis Sforza, who on eeing Isabella fell in love with her. The vers having been married only by proxy, ewis contrived various means to keep em asunder, and declared his passion Isabella, who repulsed him, and exhort- d her husband to shake off his uncle's oke. The love of Lewis turned into atred, and he married Alphonsina, daugh- r to the duke of Ferrara, a woman of an mbitious and intriguing spirit, and by heir contrivance John Galeazzo was poi- oned. Lewis then assumed the sove- eignty, and Isabella sought refuge at Na- les, which not long after was taken by he French, and she had to lament the loss f all her family. She then retired to a mall town in the kingdom of Naples, which had been assigned her for a dower, nd died in 1524. Her daughter married igismund, king of Poland.—Bayle.

Isabella of Castile, queen of Spain, was the daughter of John II. and married Ferdinand V. king of Arragon. The con- uest of Grenada, and the discovery of America by Columbus, distinguished their eign. She was a woman of great abili- ies, and died in 1504.—Moreri.

Isabella, daughter of Philip the Fair, ing of France, was married in 1308 to Edward, prince of Wales, afterwards Edward II. She was a woman of licentious manners, and after various adventures was mprisoned by her son Edward III. in the castle of Rising, where she died after a con- finement of 28 years.—Rapin.

Isabella, queen of Hungary, was the ister of Sigismund Augustus, king of Po- land, and in 1539 married John Zapolita, king of Hungary, in 1526. In 1540 she was delivered of a son while her husband was besieging the castle of Fogarras, and he was so transported at the news, that he gave a splendid feast to his troops, and died of intemperance on the occasion. Isabella, unable to cope with the forces of Ferdinand of Austria, with whom her husband had engaged in war, called to her aid Solyman, sultan of the Turks, who treacherously seized the capital of her dominions, and obliged her to retire to Transylvania, which country she was then forced to yield to Ferdinand. She was then obliged to re- treat to Cassovia, and on the road wrote these Latin words on a tree, sic fata volunt, "so fate decrees." In 1556 she recovered Transylvania, but when her son came to maturity she refused him a share in the go- vernment. She died in 1551.—Bayle.

Isæus, a Greek orator, was born a Chalcis, in the isle of Eubœa. He was the disciple of Lysias, and preceptor of Demos- thenes, at Athens, where he kept a famous school of eloquence. We have only ten of his orations remaining, which were translated into English by sir Willliam Jones in 1779. There was another Greek orator of this name, who went to Rome about A. D. 97. The younger Pliny speaks highly of his powers.—Plutarch. Moreri.

Isaiah, the principal of the four great prophets, was the son of Amos, of the royal family of David. He prophesied in the reigns of Ozias, Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah, from 735 to 681 B. C. in which last year Manasseh is said to have caused him to be cut in two with a wooden saw. He is called the evangelical prophet, from the clear and constant view he has taken of the Messiah throughout his pre- dictions, which are composed in a style beautiful and sublime.——Grady's Key to O. T.

Isdecerde, king of Persia, succeeded his uncle Sapor. He was debauched, cruel, and avaricious. He made war on the eastern emperors who refused to pay him tribute, and obliged Theodosius the younger to make peace. He persecuted the christains with severity, and died, as is said, by the kick of a horse in 420.—Univ. Hist.

Iselin (James Christopher), a learned writer, was born at Brasil in 1681. He be- came professor of history and antiquities in that university, and died in 1737 He wrote. 1 De Gallis Rhenum transeuntibus Carmen heroicum; 2. De Historicis Latinis melioris ævi dissertatio; 3. Dissertations on various subjects.—Nouv. Dict.

Ishmael, the son of Abraham and Hagar, was born 1910 B. C. Abraham at the desire of Sarah discarded him and his mother, and Ishmael having settled in Paran, mar- ried an Egyptian. He was the father of the Arabs, who glory in being descended through him from Abraham.—Bible.

Ismael I. Sophy of Persia, was a descendant of Ali, son-in-law of Mohammed. He began his reign in 1505, and died in 1523, after gaining many victories, and having established the Persian throne upon a solid basis.—Univ. Hist.

Ishmali II. Sophy of Persia, succeeded Thamas in 1575. He was a bloody prince, and murdered eight of his brothers. He was poisoned in 1579 by his sister, out of zeal for the Turkish religion, Ishmael being of a sect held heretical by the other Mohammedans.—Ibid.

Isidore (St.), surnamed de Pelusium, from his retiring to a cell near that place. He was the disciple of St. Chrysostom, and when young embraced the monastic life. He wrote letters and other pieces, some of which are extant, and were printed at Paris in 1588, in folio, Greek and Latin. He died about 440.—Dupin.

Isidore of Charax, a Greek author in the time of Ptolemy Lagus, about 300 B.C. He composed several historical works and a description of Parthia, which has been published by Heschelius, and also at Oxford among the collection of the lesser geographers, 1703.—Moreri.

Isidore of Alexandria (St.), was born in Egypt about A. D. 318. He passed many years in solitude, but was ordained by Athanasius, and placed over a monastery, whence he was called Isidore the Hospitaller. He defended that father against the Arians, for which he was banished by the patriarch Theophilus. He then went to Constantinople, where he died in 403.—Dupin.

Isidore of Cordova (St.), bishop of that city under Honorius and Theodosius the the younger. He wrote Commentaries on the books of Kings, dedicated to Paul Orosius the disciple of Augustine.—Ibid.

Isidore of Seville (St.), was bishop of that city 40 years, during which he approved himself the father of the poor and the oracle of Spain. He died in 636. The council of Toledo called him the doctor of his age, and the ornament of the church. He wrote Commentaries on the Scriptures, a Treatise of Ecclesiastical Writers; a Chronicle from Adam to 626, and other works.—Ibid.

Isingrinius (Michael), a celebrated printer of Basil in the 16th century, who printed in Greek the works of Aristotle, with paper and types superior so those of Aldus Manutius. He published also with the same elegance and correctness the History of plants by Fuchs.—Nouv. Dict.

Ismenias, a Theban general, who was sent on an embassy to the king of Persia. No person being admitted to the royal presence without prostration, Ismenias was resolved not to commit an action so degrading to his country. But on being introduced, he dropped his ring on the ground, and the act of taking it up it was mistaken for submissive homage, in consequence of which he was favourably received. There was a Theban musician of this name, who being taken prisoner by the Scythians, and playing before their king, he observed that he liked the music of Ismenias better than the braying of an ass.—Plutarch. Moreri.

Isocrates, a celebrated Greek orator, was born at Athens, 436 B C. He had no skill to speak in public, and therefore applied himself to the instruction of others. We have 21 orations by him, a good edition of which was published by Battie, at Cambridge, in 1749, in 2 vols. 8vo.—Plutarch de Orat.

Ittigius (Thomas), a German divine, was born at Leipsic in 1644. He became professor of divinity in that university, and died there in 1710. He wrote 1. Dissertatio de hæresiarchis ævi apostolici eique proximi; 2 Prolegomena ad Josephi Opera; 3. Historiæ ecclesiasticæ primi et secundi seculi selecta capita, &c.—Moreri.

Ives or Yves, bishop of Chartres, was born in 1035, and raised to that see in 1073. He died in 1115. There are extant by him, 1. A Collection of Decrees; 2. Excerptiones Ecclesiasticarumregularum; 3. Sermons, &c.—Ibid.

Ives (John), an English antiquary, was born at Yarmouth. He became Suffolk-herald extraordinary, and fellow of the royal and antiquarian societies. He published three numbers of select papers from his own collection; also Remarks on the Garianonum of the Romans, the Scite and Remains fixed and described, 12mo. 1774. He died in 1776.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Ivetaux (Nicholas Vauquelin, seigneur de), a French poet, was born at Fresnaye. He became preceptor to the duke de Vendome, son of Gabrielle d'Estrees, and afterwards to Louis XIII. when dauphin; but his life was so irregular, that he was banished the court, on which he took a house in the Fauxbourg Saint Germain, where he lived in luxury and debauchery. He died in 1649, aged 90. He wrote The Institution of a Prince; stanzas, sonnets, and other pieces of poetry, in the Delices de la Poesie Françoise, 1620, 8vo.—Nouv. Dict.

Iwan V., or John Alexiowitz, czar of Russia, was the second son of Michaelowitz, born in 1661, and succeeded to the throne on the death of his brother Feodor Alexiowitz in 1682. But being of weak intellects he was placed in a monastery, and the sceptre given to his brother Peter. The princess Sophia, hoping to reign in the room of Iwan, excited a sedition, which finished by appointing Iwan and Peter joint sovereigns, and Sophia co-regent. This government lasted six years, when Sophia having projected the death of Peter that she might reign alone, the conspiracy was discovered, and the princess confined in a convent. From that time Peter reigned sole monarch. Iwan died in 1696, leaving five daughters.—Univ. Hist. Nouv. D. Hist.

Iwan VI. of Brunswick Bevern, was delared czar after the death of his great unt Anne Iwanova in 1740. Anne left im to the guardianship of the duke de iren, who being deposed shortly after, he regency was transferred to the empe-or's mother. In 1741 he was dethroned nd confined in a fortress, from whence he scaped by the contrivance of a monk; but was retaken and placed in a monastery, where he was put to death in 1764.—Univ. Hist.

Izaacke (Richard), an English antiquary, was born at Exeter and educated at Exeter college, Oxford. He afterwards became chamberlain and town clerk of his native city, the History and Memorials of which he wrote. The first edition was printed in 1677, 8vo, and the last in 1724 at which time the author was dead, and the work was continued by his son.—Wood.

J.

JAAPHAR EBN TOPHAIL, an Arabian philosopher, supposed to have been the ame with Averroes. He died about 1198. e wrote a philosophical romance, called e History of Hai Ebn Yokhdan, which as published in Latin by Pocock at Oxord, in 1671, and in English by Ockley in 708, 8vo.—New. Dict. Hist.

Jablonski (Daniel Ernest), a Polish diine, was born at Dantzic, in 1660. He adied in various universities, and came to agland, where he was greatly esteemed for s learning and virtues. He became ecclesiastical counsellor at Berlin, and president the society of sciences. He laboured ithout success, to promote a union beeen the Lutherans and Calvinists. He d in 1741. He translated into Latin . Bentley's sermons at Boyle's lecture, d wrote several works in that lanage on theological subjects.—New. Dict. ist.

Jablonski (Paul Ernest), the son of the ove, was born at Berlin, and became proor of divinity at Frankfort-on-the-Oder, here he died in 1757. His works are, Disquito Linguæ Lycaonica; 2. De emnone Græcorum; 3. Institutiones Hisriæ Ecclesiasticæ, 2 vols. 8vo; 4. Panon Ægyptiacum, 3 vols. 8vo. He it not be confounded with Charles Gustavus Jaonski, member of the society at Hall, d author of a Natural History of Insects, died in 1787.—Ibid.

Jablonski (Theodore), counsellor of the irt of Prussia, and secretary of the royal demy of sciences at Berlin. He pubed, 1. A French and German Dictionary, 1; 2. A Course of Morality; 1713. 3. Universal Dictionary of Arts and Sciences. Moreri.

Accetius (Francis de Cataneis, or Diatius), an Italian writer, was born at Flonce in 1465. He was the disciple of rsilius Ficinus, whom he succeeded in professorship of philosophy. He died 1522. His works are, A Treatise on uty, and another on Love.—Ibid.

Achaia (Ben Joseph), a Portuguese bi, born at Lisbon, and died in 1589. wrote a Paraphrase on Daniel, in which he promised his brethren a speedy restoration to their ancient inheritance.—Ibid.

Jackson (Thomas), a learned divine, was born in the bishopric of Durham, in 1579. he became president of Corpus Christi college, Oxford, and dean of Peterborough, and died in 1640. His works, the principal of which is a commentary on the Apostles' Creed, were printed in 3 vols. folio, 1673. —Life Prefixed to his Works.

Jackson (Arthur), a nonconformist divine, who was ejected from the living of St. Faith's in London, in 1662. He was fined 500*l* for refusing to give evidence against Cristopher Love, and also imprisoned. At the Restoration he was chosen by the assembly of ministers to present a bible to king Charles. He was also one of the commissioners at the Savoy conference, and died in 1666. He wrote a Commentary on the Bible, 3 vols. 4to.—Calamy.

Jackson (John), an English divine, was born at Lensey in Yorkshire, in 1686, and educated at Jesus college, Cambridge. He obtained the rectory of Rossington in his native county, and the mastership of Wigston's hospital in Lancashire. He was an acute metaphysician, but a zealous advocate for arianism, and wrote some tracts against the doctrine of the Trinity, and others against Collins and Tindal; but his best work is his Chronological Antiquities, 2 vols. 4to. 1752. He died in 1768.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Jackson (William), a musical composer and ingenious writer, was born at Exeter, in 1730. Having received a liberal education, he was placed under the tuition of the organist of Exeter cathedral, and afterwards with Mr. Travers, an eminent musician in London. In 1777 he was appointed organist of the cathedral in his native city, where he died in 1803. He published several books of songs, canzonets, hymns, and sonatas, of his composition, which are held in great esteem. His literary productions are; 1. Thirty Letters on various Subjects, which have gone through three editions; 2. On the Present State of Music, 12mo. 2 editions; 3. The Four Ages, 8vo.; 4. Papers in the Collection of Essays published by a Society at Exeter. One of Mr. Jackson's sons was secretary to lord Macartney in his embassy to China, another was ambassador to the king of Sardinia, and afterwards at Paris and Berlin.—Public Characters vol. I.

JACOB, the son of Isaac and Rebecca, was born about 1836 B.C. He was the favourite of his mother, by whose advice he imposed upon his father, and obtained his blessing, having before taken an advantage of Esau, by purchasing his birthright. To avoid his brother's fury he fled to Padan-aran, where he resided with his uncle Laban, whom he served fourteen years for his daughters Leah and Rachael. He afterwards returned to Canaan with great wealth, and a reconciliation took place between him and his brother. He died in Egypt, in the arms of his son Joseph, 1689 B. C. His name was altered to Israel by an angel, and from thence his posterity were called Israelites.—Bible.

JACOB (Henry), a learned divine, was born in Kent, and educated at Oxford, where he took his degree of M. A. after which he obtained a living. He died in 1621, aged 60. He wrote against the Brownists or puritans, and a work on the sufferings of Jesus Christ.—Wood.

JACOB (Henry), son of the above, was educated under Erpenius, and acquired a considerable knowledge, of the oriental languages. On his return to England he entered of Merton college, Oxford, of which he became fellow, but was deprived in the civil wars. He died at Canterbury in 1652 at the age of 44. He wrote some works which were never printed; but Wood ascribes to him the Delphi Phæniciantes, published by Dickenson. Wood.

JACOB (Giles), an industrious English lawyer, who published, among a great variety of works, a Law Dictionary, and the Lives and Characters of English poets. He died in 1744, aged 54.—Mortimer.

JACOB (Ben Naphthali), a learned Jew of the 5th century, was educated in the school of Tiberius in Palestine. The invention of the Masoretic points and accents is ascribed to him and Ben Aser.—Moreri.

JACOB, a cistercian monk of Hungary, who quitted his order in 1212, under the pretence of being called to deliver the Holy Land from the infidels. He gathered a prodigious number of fanatics in Germany and France, who being chiefly peasants, obtained the name of the shepherds. When St. Louis, king of France, was taken by the Saracens, Jacob pretended that the holy Virgin had commanded him to preach a crusade for his deliverance. The queen for some time tolerated this extravagance, but at last she caused the rabble to disperse, and Jacob was shortly after slain by a butcher.—Moreri.

JACOB (Ben Haim), a rabbi of the 16th century, who published a collection of the Masora at Venice, in 1525, in 4 vols folio, with the text of the Bible, a work greatly esteemed by the Jews.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

JACOB (Al Bardai), a disciple of Severus patriarch of Constantinople. He was one of the principal leaders of the Eutychians on which account that sect gained the name of Jacobites.—D'Herbelot.

JACOBÆUS (Oliger), a Danish physician was born in the isle of Jutland, in 1650. He became professor of philosophy and physic at Copenhagen, where he died in 1701. He wrote, Compendium Institutionum Medicarum; De Ranis et Lacerta Dissertatio; Musæum Regium; and some Latin poems.—Nouv. Dict.

JACOBS (Jurian), a painter, was born in Switzerland, in 1610. He was the disciple of Francis Snyders, whose manner he imitated. In his historical pieces he introduced animals painted in a masterly manner. He died in 1664.—Pilkington.

JACOMB (Thomas), a nonconformist divine, was born in Leicestershire, in 1622, and educated at Magdalen hall, Oxford, and afterwards at Cambridge, where he became fellow of Trinity college. In 1641 he removed to London, and had the living of St. Martin, Ludgate, of which he was deprived for nonconformity in 1662. He was then taken into the family of the countess of Exeter, where he died in 1687. Dr. Jacomb wrote a Commentary on Romans viii.; a Treatise of Holy Dedication and Sermons. He had also a share in the Continuation of Pool's Annotations.—Calamy.

JACOPONE (Da Todi), an old Italian poet, celebrated for his sacred Canticles and for being the author of the Stabat Mater. He died in 1306. His Canticles were printed at Venice in 1617, 4to.—Moreri.

JACQUELOT (Isaac), a learned French protestant, was the son of a minister at Vassy, and born in 1647. At the age of 21 he became assistant to his father, but on the revocation of the edict of Nantes he went to Heidelberg, and from thence to the Hague. The king of Prussia invited him to his capital, where he became his majesty's chaplain, and had a pension. He died in 1708. He wrote Dissertations on the Existence of God, 4to.; three pieces against Bayle's Dictionary; Dissertations on the Messiah; a Treatise on the Inspiration of the Scriptures; Letters to the Bishops of France; Sermons; a work against Socinianism, &c.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

JACQUET (Louis), a French writer and ecclesiastic, was born at Lyons in 1732, and died in 1793. He wrote an ingenious parallel between the Greek and French agic poets, and some prize essays, which ere rewarded by the academy of Besançon. e was an enthusiastic admirer of Rousseau, ose disposition and manners he greatly embled.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

JACQUIER (Francis), a learned ecclesiastic d mathematician, was born at Vitry in 11, and died at Rome in 1788. His rks are; 1. Newtoni philosophiæ naralis principipia mathematica, 4 vols. .; 2. Institutiones philosoph. ad Stua theol. potissimum accomm. 5 vols. mo. In these two works he was assisted father Lesueur. 3. Riflessoni sovra une difficolta spettanti i danni della ppola di S. Pietro, 4to; 4. Descrizione n istromento per far conogni facilita oroi solari; 5. Trattato di Algebra.—Nouv. t. Hist.

JADDUS, high priest of the Jews, who, en Alexander the Great intended to pile Jerusalem and the temple, went meet him in his pontifical habits, and sight so struck the victor that he ered his sentiments, and offered sacrifices the God of Israel.—Josephus.

JADELOT (Nicolas), a French physician, s born at Nancy, in 1736, and died there 1793. He wrote the Picture of Animal nomy, 8vo.; a Complete Course of atomy, folio; Physica hominus sani, ols. 12mo.; and a Pharmacopœia for the r, 8vo.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

JAEGER (John Wolfgang), a lutheran ine, was born at Stutgard in 1647. He ame preacher of the cathedral in his ive city, chancellor of the university, provost of the church of Tubingen. died in 1720. His principal works are; Ecclesiastical History compared with ofane; 2. A Compendium of Divinity, The life of Spinoza.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

JAGO (Richard), an English poet, was n in Warwickshire in 1715, and edud at University college, Oxford. He ered into orders, and in 1724 obtained vicarage of Snittersfield in Warwicke. In 1771 he was presented to the ng of Kilmcote, in Leicestershire. He in 1781 His Elegy on the Blackbirds, lished first in the Adventurer, was ibuted to different writers. His princi performance is a descriptive poem, tled, Edgehill.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

JAILLOT (Alexis-Hubert), geographer to French king, was at first a sculptor, but ing espoused the daughter of a mapurer, he turned his attention to geoohy. He engraved many of the maps he Sansons, particulary the great maps rance; but that of Lorraine is supd to be his best. He died in 1780. work, entitled, Recherches critiques, oriques, et topographiques, sur la Ville aris, 5 vols. 8vo. 1772, is esteemed a ous book.—Nouv. Dict. Hists.

JAMES (St), the Great, was the son Zebedee and Salome, and called to apostleship with his brother John the Evangelist, while they were mending nets with their father. He was put to death by Herod Agrippa, A. D. 44.—Cave.

JAMES (St.), the Less, another of the apostles, obtained the name of Just on account of his virtues. He was the first bishop of Jerusalem, and was put to death at the instigation of Ananias the high-priest, A. D. 62. An epistle of his, addressed to the dispersed converted Hebrews, is among the canonical epistles of the New Testaments.—Ibid.

JAMES I. king of Scotland, the son of Robert III. was taken by the English on his passage to France, and kept in confinement 18 years. In 1424 he obtained his liberty on condition of marrying the daughter of the earl of Somerset. He severely punished those who had governed his country in his absence, for which he was murdered in his bed, in 1437.—Buchanan.

JAMES II. king of Scotland, succeeded the preceding king, his father, at the age of seven years. He assisted Charles VII. of France against the English, and punished rigorously those lords who had revolted against him. He was slain at the siege of Roxburgh, in 1460.—Ibid.

JAMES III. was the son and successor of the above. He put to death his brother John, and committed so many cruelties, that his subjects revolted, and he was slain in battle in 1488.Ibid.

JAMES IV. succeeded his father, the last-mentioned, at the age of 16 years. He defeated the rebellious lords, and assisted Lewis XII. king of France, against the English, but was slain at the battle of Flodden Field, in 1513.—Ibid.

JAMES V. the son of the above, was only a year old at the time of his father's death. At the age of 17 he assumed the government, and assisted Francis I. of France against Charles V. for which that prince gave his daughter Margaret in marriage. On her decease he married Mary of Lorraine, daughter of Claude, duke of Guise. James died in 1545, leaving his crown to Mary Stuart his daughter. He was a prince of great virtues.—Robertson's Hist. of Scotland.

JAMES VI. of Scotland, and the first of England, was the son of Henry Stuart, lord Darnley, by Mary daughter of the preceding king, and was born in 1566. The year following he was proclaimed king on the forced resignation of his mother, and in 1603 he succeeded queen Elizabeth on the English throne A plot was soon after discovered, to seize on him and prince Henry, for which lords Cobham and Grey, and sir Walter Raleigh, were indicted But the year following a more dreadful one was devised by some desperate papists, to blow up the king, the prince, and parliament, and for which several persons were executed. In 1606 he established episcopacy in Scotland, and made peace with Spain. In 1612 his son, prince Henry by Anne of Denmark, died, and the same year his daughter was married to Frederic the elector-palatine. James stretched the prerogative as far as he could, and left the consequences to be felt by his son Charles, whom he imprudently suffered to visit Spain, to marry the infanta, which did not succeed. One of the greatest blots of his reign was the execution of sir Walter Raleigh fifteen years after sentence. James was a man of learning, and affected to be a universal scholar, particularly in theology, being not indifferently acquainted with polemics, of which he was so fond as to found Chelsea college, for the maintenance of learned men, who were to employ themselves in managing controversies, especially with the church of Rome. Charles II. applied it to a better purpose. James died at Theobalds in 1625, and was interred at Westminster. He wrote many books; as, a Commentary on the Revelations, in which he calls the pope Antichrist; Basilicon Doron, or advice to his son; Dæmonology, or a Discourse on Witchcraft; a Counterblast against Tobacco, &c. all printed in one vol. folio.—Wilson. Hume. Rapin.

James II. king of England, was the second son of Charles I. and born at London in 1633, in which year he was created duke of York. He resided during the rebellion in France, where he imbibed the principles of popery. At the Restoration he returned to England and married secretly Anne Hyde, daughter of the earl of Clarendon, by whom he had two daughters, who afterwards became queens of England, viz. Mary and Anne. In the Dutch war he signalized himself as commander of the English fleet, and shewed great skill and bravery. On the death of his first wife he married the princess of Modena. He succeeded his brother in 1684, but his zeal for his religion leading him into measures subversive of the constitution, the prince of Orange, who married his daughter Mary, was invited by several of the English nobility; and the king, finding himself abandoned by his friends, withdrew to France, where he died at St. Germains in 1701. His son James, commonly called the Pretender, died at Rome in 1766. His son Charles Edward, who invaded Scotland in 1745, died in 1788. and Henry Benedict Stuart, cardinal York, the last surviving branch of this unfortunate race, died lately.—Ibid.

James I. king of Arragon, called the Warrior, succeeded his father Peter the Catholic in 1213. He conquered the kingdoms of Majorca and Minorca, Valence, and other countries, from the Moors. He died at Valence, in 1276. Besore he expired he resigned the crown to his successor, and took the habit of the cistercians, according to the supersittion of the age.—Moreri.

James II. king of Arragon, succeeded his brother Alphonsus III. in 1291. He carried on a long war againt Navarre and the Moors; and united Catalonia to h crown. He died at Barcelona in 1327.— Moreri.

James of Voragine, a dominican and b shop, was born at Genoa about 133 He became provincial of his order, an archbishop of Genoa. He compiled Golden Legend, which is full of pious fable and has gone through numerous edition The first and most esteemed was printe in 1470. The author died in 1298.—M reri.

James (Thomas), a learned divine, w born at Newport, in the isle of Wight, an educated first at Winchester school, an next at New college, Oxford, where h was chosen fellow, and proceeded to th degree of D. D. He was appointed fir keeper of Bodley's library, and made sub dean of Wells. He collated MSS. of th ancient fathers, with a view of publishin them, but failed in his design for want c encouragement. He wrote several learne books, the chief of which is, A Treatis of the Corruption of the Scriptures, Cou cils, and Fathers, &c. 1611, 4to, reprinte in 8vo. 1638. He died at Oxford, in 163 —Wood.

James (Richard), nephew of the above was educated at Exeter college, fro whence he removed to Corpus Christi, o which he became fellow. He travelled in to Russia, on which country he wrote som observations in 1619. He was of grea service to Selden and sir Robert Cotton being a man of extensive learning, an profoundly acquainted with ancient MSS He published several books in Latin, an died in 1631.—Ibid.

James (Robert), an English physician was born at Kinverston, in Staffordshire, i 1703, and educated at St. John's college Oxford. After practising in the country he removed to London, and in 1743 pub lished his Medical Dictionary, in 3 vols folio, a work of considerable merit, i which he was assisted by Dr. Johnson; Dr James also published other works in th line of his profession, but he is best known by a valuable medicine, universally celebrated under the name of James's powder which has been a fortune to his family. He died in 1776.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

James (Thomas), a learned divine, was born at St. Neot's, in Huntingdonshire, and educated at Eton, from whence he was elected to King's college, Cambridge, where he obtained a fellowship, and proceeded to his degree of D. D. in 1786. He was for many years a public tutor in that college. In 1776 he became master of Rugby school, which station he filled with great honour and satisfaction till 1793, when he resigned it. For his great services he was preferred to a prebend in Worcester cathedral, and the living of Harrington in the same county. He died at his rectory in 1804. Dr. James published a Compendium of Geogra-shy for the use of Rugby school; an Explanation of the fifth Book of Euclid by Algebra; and two Sermons.—Public Characters.

JAMET (Peter Charles), a French writer, was born in the diocese of Sens in 1701. He furnished notes and remarks to the dictionary of Trevoux, and was the author of Metaphysical Essays; Dissertation on the Creation; Letters on Taste and the Doctrine of Bayle; Daneche Menkan, the Moral Philosopher, &c. He died at the end of the 18th century.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

JAMYN (Amadis), a French poet, and secretary to Charles IX. He died about 1585. Besides his poetical works, he wrote academical discourses in prose, and completed the translation of the Iliad into French verse, which was left imperfect by Adel.—Ibid.

JANEWAY (James), a nonconformist divine, was born in Hertfordshire, and educated at Christ church college, Oxford. Being deprived after the Restoration, he opened a meeting-house at Rotherhithe, when the act of indulgence was passed, and died there in 1674. He wrote Heaven upon Earth, 8vo.; a Token for Children, 12mo.; this has gone through numerous editions; the Saint's Encouragement to diligence, 8vo. After his death was printed his Legacy to his Friends, 8vo.—Calamy.

JANICON (Francis Michael), a French protestant writer, was born at Paris in 1674. He settled in Holland, and died at the Hague in 1730. He wrote the Dutch Gazettes in a manner which discovered him to possess great political knowledge. He was also the author of The present State of the Republic of the United Provinces, and their Dependencies, 2 vols. 12mo. 1729.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

JANSENIUS (Cornelius), bishop of Ghent, was born at Hulst, in Flanders, in 1513. Philip II. of Spain sent him to the council of Trent, where he distinguished himself by his learning and modesty. On his return he was made bishop of Ghent, where he died in 1576. He wrote a Harmony of the Gospels, and other works.—Moreri.

JANSEN or JANSENIUS (Cornelius), a celebrated Roman-catholic prelate, was born in 1585 at Leerdam, in Holland, and educated at Utrecht, from whence he removed to Louvain, where he was chosen principal of the college of St. Pulcheria. Being deputed to go on a mission to the court of Spain, by his university, that monarch employed him to write a book against France, for which he was rewarded, in 1635, with the bishopric of Ypres in Flanders, where he died of the plague in 1638. He wrote several books, but that by which he is most known is his Augustinus, which was published after his death, and occasioned a fierce contest among the divines of the Romish church, which even the papal see could not suppress. In 1641 the inquisitors prohibited the perusal of the book. Urban VIII. censured it as heretical; and Innocent X. in 1653 condemned the following propositions extracted from it: 1. That there are divine precepts which even good men cannot obey without the assistance of God.—2. That no man can resist the influence of divine grace on his mind.—3. That to render human actions meritorious, it is not necessary for them to be free from necessity but constraint.—4. That the doctrine of free-will is a gross error.—5. That Jesus Christ died not for all men, but only for the elect. These doctrines the pope declared heretical, and a violent persecution was excited against all who maintained them; notwithstanding this, jansenism had numerous disciples in France and the Low Countries.—Bayle. Dupin.

JANSON or JANSONIUS (James), a doctor of Louvain, professor of theology, and dean of the college of St. Peter in that city, was a native of Amsterdam, and died in 1625, aged 78. He wrote Commentaries on the Psalms, Song of Solomon, Job, and the Gospel of St. John, and other works.—Moreri.

JANSSENS (Abraham), a painter, was born at Antwerp in 1569. A picture of his representing the descent from the cross, in the church of Ghent, has been taken for the work of Rubens, and is not inferior to the works of that painter.—De Piles.

JANSSENS (Victor Honorius), an historical painter, was born at Brussels in 1664. He was patronised by the duke of Holstein, who sent him to Rome for improvement. On his return to his own country he adorned the churches and convents with his works. He died in 1739.—Pilkington.

JANSSENS (Cornelius), a Dutch painter, who resided in England many years, and in several respects was equal to Vandyck. He painted portraits, and died in 1665.—Vertue. Granger.

JANUARIUS (St.), bishop of Benevento, who was beheaded in Puzzuoli in the persecution under Diocletian. His body was removed to Naples, where a beautiful chapel is erected to his memory in the cathedral. What renders his name remarkable is a pretended miracle exhibited yearly by the priests, who have what they call his blood in a phial. This at other times is congealed, but on bringing out what is called the head of the saint, the blood liquifies. This mummery is always practised when Vesuvius shews signs of a convulsion, and the people devoutly believe that the influence of the saint will prevent an earthquake.—Moreri. Addison's Travels in Italy.

JAPHET, the son of Noah, was born B. C. 2448. His posterity peopled part of Asia and Europe.—Bible.

JARCHAS, the most learned of the Indian philosophers, called brachmans, and a great astronomer, according to Jerome. He is said to have given Apollonius Tyaneus seven magical rings called by the names of the planets.—Moreri.

JARCHI (Solomon Ben Isaac), a celebrated rabbi, was born at Troyes in France in 1104. He spent thirty years in travelling through Europe and the Eastern countries. He wrote Commentaries on the Bible, Mischna, Gemara, and Pirke Avoth, 4 vols. 12mo. They are highly esteemed by the Jews.—Moreri.

JARDINS (Mary Catherine des), an ingenious French lady, was born at Alençon in Normandy in 1640. She was obliged to quit her native place in consequence of an intrigue; on which she went to Paris, where she subsisted by her pen. But she still gave way to her passions, and formed various connections. Her works, consisting of novels and plays, form 10 volumes in 12mo. She died in 1683.—Moreri.

JARDYN (Karel du), an excellent painter of landscapes and animals, was born at Amsterdam in 1640. He studied in Italy, where he acquired a great reputation. He died at Venice in 1678; and so greatly was he esteemed, that, though a protestant, his remains were interred in consecrated ground.—Pilk. Houbraken.

JAROSLAW, grand duke of Russia in the 10th century. He invited learned men to his court, and caused several books to be translated from the Greek into Russian. He also framed a code of laws for his subjects, and founded a public school.—Univ. Hist.

JARRIGE (Peter), a famous jesuit, who quitted his order and turned protestant. He then published a book entitled, The Jesuits exposed upon a Scaffold; but afterwards he returned to his society at Antwerp, and printed a retractation of what he had advanced. He died at Tulles in France in 1670.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

JARRY (Laurence Juillard du), a French divine and poet, was born about 1658. He gained the poetical prize of the French academy in 1679, and again in 1714, on which last occasion he had Voltaire for a competitor. He was made prior of Nôtre Dame du Jarry, in the diocese of Saintes, where he died in 1730. His works consist of theological treatises, sermons and poems. —Ibid.

JARS (Gabriel), a mineralogist, was born at Lyons in 1732. He visited with Duhamel the mines of Saxony, Bohemia, Austria, Hungary, and Carinthia, also those of England and other countries. In 1768 he was received into the academy of sciences, but died the year following. His brother published his Observations under the title of Voyages Metallurgiques, 3 vols. 4to.—Ibid.

JAUCOURT (the chevalier Louis de), member of the royal society of London, and of the academies of Berlin and Stockholm, died at Compeigne in 1780, aged 76. He furnished the Encyclopedie Françoise with many valuable articles, and conductetd the Bibliothêque raisonnée. He also assisted in publishing the Musæum Sebæanum, 4 vols folio, and composed a Lexicon Medicum universale, the MS. of which, in 6 vols. folio, perished on board a ship which foundered on her passage to Amsterdam. Jaucourt was the disciple of Boerhaave.—Ibid.

JAULT (Augustus Francis), a French physician, and professor of Syriac in the royal college at Paris, died in 1757, aged 50. He translated Sharp's Surgery, Ockley's History of the Saracens, and Floyer on the Asthma, into French, also Astruc on the Venereal Disease, and other works.—Ibid.

JAY (Gui Michel le), an advocate of the parliament of Paris, who printed a Polyglot Bible at his own expence, and thereby impoverished himself. On entering into orders he was made dean of Vezelai. He died in 1675. His polyglot is elegantly printed in 10 vols. and has the Syriac and Arabic versions, which are not in that of Ximenes.—Moreri.

JEACOCKE (Caleb), a baker, in High-street St. Giles's, who distinguished himself many years as president of the first disputing society at the Robin Hood, in the Butcher-row, Temple-bar. He had considerable powers as a speaker, and is said to have often opposed with success, the celebrated Burke and other persons, who afterwards distinguished themselves at the bar and in the senate. Mr. Jeacocke published, in 1765, a pamphlet entitled, "A Vindication of the Moral Character of the Apostle Paul from the Charge of Insincerity and Hypocrisy brought against it, by Lord Bolingbroke, Dr. Middleton, and others." He was one of the directors of the Hand-in-Hand fire-office, and had retired from business many years before his death, in 1786.—Europ. Mag.

JEANES (Henry), an English divine, was born at Albersay in Somersetshire in 1611. He received his education at Hart-hall, Oxford, and afterwards became rector of Beer-crocomb and Capland in Somersetshire. He sided with the presbyterians, and obtained the living of Chedzoy, after the deprivation of Dr. Walter Raleigh. He died in 1662. His works are, Treatise on Abstinence from Evil, 8vo.; Want of Church Government no Warrant for an Omission of the Lord's Supper, 8vo.; Treatise on the Indifferency of Human Actions, 4to.; of Original Righteousness, and its Contrary Concupiscence, 4to.; Polemical Tracts against Dr. Hammond, Jeremy Taylor, and John Goodwin.—Wood.

JEANNIN (Peter), a French statesman, was born in Burgundy, and bred to the bar. He became president of the parliament of Dijon. Henry IV. made him member of his council, and kept him at court, where nothing was undertaken without consulting him. He died at the age of 82, in 1622.

his Negotiations and Memoirs were published in 1659, folio, and in 1695, 4 vols. 12mo.—Moreri.

JEAURAT (Sebastian), a French mathematician, was born at Paris in 1704, and died 1803. He was a member of the academy of sciences, and also of the national institute. He founded the observatory at the military school, and wrote a Treatise on Perspective, 4to.; New Tables of Jupiter, 4to.; Observations on the Comet of 1759; Graphical Method of Trisecting the angle; Observations on the Solar Eclipse 1793; Memoire sur les Lunettes diplandiennes, &c.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

JEBB (Samuel), a learned physician, was born at Nottingham, and bred at Peterhouse, Cambridge. He was some time librarian to the famous Jeremy Collier, and quitting the university settled as physician at Stratford in Middlesex, where he resided till a short time before his death. He died in 1772, leaving several children, one of whom was sir Richard Jebb, physician to his majesty. He published, 1. S. Antini Martyris cum Tryphone Dialogus, 8vo.; 2. De Vita et Rebus gestis Mariæ Scotorum Reginæ; also the same work in Eng., 8vo.; 3. An edition of Aristides, with notes, 2 vols. 4to.; 4. An edition of Bacon's Opus Majus, folio, &c.—Anecd. of Bowyer.

JEBB (John), brother of sir Richard Jebb, was born in London, in 1736. He received his academical education at Peterhouse, Cambridge, where he obtained a fellowship. He was in orders, but quitted the church preferments on turning Socinian. He then studied physic, in which faculty he took his doctor's degree, and acquired considerable reputation. He died in 1786. His miscellaneous works were published in 1787, in 3 vols. 8vo.—Life by Disney.

JECHONIAS, king of Judah, began to reign at the age of 18, about 599 B. C. He enjoyed the throne, however, but a short time, being carried prisoner to Babylon by Nebuchadnezzar when he took Jerusalem. He remained in captivity till the year 562 and was then placed by Evil Merodach among the princes of his court. Zedekiah his uncle succeeded him.—Bible. Josephus.

JEFFERY (Thomas), a dissenting minister, was born at Exeter about 1700. He received his education under Mr. Hallet, to whom he became assistant, and in 1726 was called to the care of a congregation at Littleaddow in Essex. In 1728 he returned to his native city, and died there soon after. He wrote the True Grounds and Reasons of the Christian Religion, in opposition to Collins the Deist, 8vo.; the Divinity of Christianity proved from Holy Scripture, a Sermon; a Review of the Controversy between the Author of a Discourse of the Grounds and Reasons of the Christian Religion, and his Adversaries, 8vo.; Christianity the Perfection of all Religion, 8vo.—Monthly Mag. March 1803.

JEFFERY (John), an English divine, was born at Ipswich in 1647, and educated at Catherine hall, Cambridge. Archbishop Tillotson appointed him archdeacon of Norwich, in 1694. He died in 1720. Dr. Jeffery published a volume of Sermons, and was the editor of Christian Morals, a posthumous work by sir Thomas Browne; and the sermons of Dr. Whichcote.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

JEFFERIES (George lord), a noted English judge, was born at Acton, in Denbighshire, and educated at Westminster school, after which he removed to the Inner Temple, where he studied the law with great application. By attaching himself to the duke of York, he obtained the place of a Welsh judge, the honour of knighthood, and the chief-justiceship of Chester. In 1683 he was appointed chief justice of the king's bench, and in 1685 lord chancellor. His cruelties on the western circuit upon the deluded followers of the duke of Monmouth were excessive; yet they gave great satisfaction to king James, who merrily called this Jefferies's Campaign. He supported all the arbitrary acts of the court, and rendered himself so obnoxious to the people, that when James abdicated the throne he attempted to leave the kingdom in the disguise of a sailor, but was recognized while drinking in a cellar in Wapping. Perceiving himself discovered, he feigned a cough, and turned to the wall with his pot of beer in his hand; but information of his being there being communicated to the mob, they rushed in, and carried him before the lord mayor, who sent him to the lords of council, by whom he was committed to the Tower, where he died in 1689.—Lives of the Chancellors.

JEFFERYS (George), a dramatic and miscellaneous writer, was born at Weldron in Northamptonshire, and educated at Westminster school, and Trinity college, Cambridge, where he obtained a fellowship. He afterwards studied the law, and was called to the bar, but never practised. He died in 1755, aged 77. His miscellanies in verse and prose, containing, among other pieces, the tragedies of Edwin and Merope, were published in 1754, 1 vol. 4to.—Biog. Dram.

JEHU, the son of Jehosaphat, and the 10th king of Israel, began his reign about 885 B. C. He slew Joram with the family of Ahab, and put to death the priests of Baal, in the temple of their idol, but afterwards he fell into idolatry, on which he was punished by the delivery of his kingdom to Hazael, king of Syria. He died 856 B. C.—Bible. Stackhouse.

JEKYL (sir Joseph), an English lawyer and patriot, was the son of a clergyman in Northamptonshire, and born in 1663. He distinguished himself in the reign of William III. by his attachment to the whigs, and was one of the managers on the trial of Dr Sacheverel. At the accession of George I. he was knighted, made master of the rolls, and a privy counsellor. He successfully maintained the independence of his office against lord chancellor King, in a pamphlet, entitled, The Judicial Authority of the Master of the Rolls stated and vindicated. He died in 1738. His brother Thomas JEKYL, D. D. was educated at Trinity college, Cambridge, and became vicar of Rowd in Wiltshire, lecturer at Newland in Gloucestershire, and minister of St. Margaret's chapel, Westminster. He published Peace and Love recommended, in 2 Sermons preached at Bristol, 1674; Popery a great Mystery of Iniquity, a Fast Sermon, 1680; Righteousness and Peace the best Means to prevent Ruin, preached before the lord mayor 1681; True Religion the best Loyalty, 1682; Exposition of the Church Catechism, 8vo.—Wood.

JELLINGER (Christopher), a presbyterian divine, was born in Germany, and studied at Basil and Leyden. He was some time a soldier, after which he went to Geneva, from whence he was invited to England, where he acquired great knowledge of the language, and obtained the living of Brent in Devonshire, of which he was deprived for nonconformity in 1662. He died at Kingsbridge at the age of 83. He wrote, Disputatio Theologica de Sacra Cœna; Fifteen Conferences with Christ; A New and Living Way of Dying; The Spiritual Merchant; and other works of a like nature.—Calamy. Palmer.

JENISCHIUS (Paul), a learned writer, was born at Antwerp in 1558. He was persecuted and banished for writing a book, entitled, Theatrum Animarum. He died at Stutgard in 1647.—Moreri.

JENKIN (Robert), a learned English divine, was born in the Isle of Thanet in 1656, and educated at the king's school at Canterbury. In 1674 he was admitted of St. John's college, Cambridge, of which society he was elected fellow in 1680. In 1711 he became master of his college, and lady Margaret's professor of divinity. He died in 1727. Dr. Jenkin wrote some esteemed pieces, the best known of which is entitled, the Reasonableness and Certainty of the Christian Religion, in 2 vols. 8vo.; a work of great merit.—Biog. Brit.

JENKIN (William), a nonconformist divine, was the son of a puritan minister, and born at Sudbury in Suffolk in 1612. He was educated at St. John's college, Cambridge, and in 1641 was chosen minister of Christ church, near Newgate, London, of which he was deprived for nonconformity in 1662. He was sent to the Tower for being concerned in Love's plot, but was released on petitioning Cromwell. In 1684 he was committed to Newgate on the conventicle act, and died there four months afterwards. His works are; An Exposition on the Epistle of Jude, folio; Celeusma, seu Clamor ad Theologos Hierarchiæ Anglicanæ; and some sermons and controversial pieces.—Calamy. Palmer.

JENKINS (Henry), a native of Yorkshire, rendered remarkable for having lived to the extraordinary age of 169 years. He remembered the battle of Flodden Field, and gave evidence at the assizes to a circumstance within his recollection of one hundred and forty years. He retained his faculties to the last, but as he was born before parochial registers were kept, no parish would support him, so that he subsisted by begging. He died in 1670; and in the parish church of Bolton, Yorkshire, to which in reality he belonged, is a monument recording these particulars.

JENKINS (sir Leoline), a civilian and statesman, was born in Glamorganshire, in 1623, and educated at Cowbridge school, from whence he was sent to Jesus college, Oxford, where he continued till the death of the king. He afterwards became tutor to some young gentlemen, with whom he travelled through France, Holland, and Germany. At the Restoration he returned to his college, of which he was chosen fellow, and in 1662 elected principal. In 1668 he was appointed judge of the prerogative court of Canterbury, and in 1670 he received the honour of knighthood. He had a principal share in negociating the peace of Nimeguen, and on his return to England was chosen one of the representatives of the university of Oxford in parliament, where he opposed the bill for the exclusion of the duke of York. He was soon after made secretary of state and a privy counsellor. He died in 1685, and was buried in the chapel of Jesus college, to which he was a great benefactor. He bequeathed to charitable uses all his property. His letters and papers were printed in 2 vols. folio, 1724.—Biog. Brit.

JENKS (Benjamin), a pious divine of the English church, was a native of Shropshire, rector of Harley in that county, and chaplain to the earl of Bradford. He died in 1724, aged 78, and was buried in Harley church, of which he had been minister 56 years. He wrote 2 vols. of Meditations; Family Devotions, 12mo.; Submission to the Righteousness of God, 12mo; and other religious pieces of considerable merit and usefulness.—Orton's Letters.

JENKYNS (David), an intrepid judge, was born at Pendoylen, in Glamorganshire, and admitted a commoner of Edmund hall, Oxford, in 1597. After taking his bachelor's degree he removed to Gray's Inn, and became eminent as a counsellor. King Charles I. appointed him a Welsh judge. In 1645 he was taken prisoner at Hereford, for his activity in the royal cause, and sent to the Tower. Being brought to the bar of the house of commons, he denied their authority and refused to kneel, for which he was fined 1000*l.* and remanded to prison. In 1650 an act was passed for his trial, but Harry Martin, it is said, prevented the measure by a droll speech. Jenkyns, who expected to be hanged, declared that he would die with the Bible under one arm, and Magna Charta under the other. In 1656 he obtained his liberty. He died in 1663. His tracts on legal and political subjects were printed in 1681, 12mo.——Wood.

JENNENS (Charles), an ingenious English gentleman, who died at Gopsal in Leicestershire in 1773. He composed the words of some of Handel's oratorios, particularly the Messiah, and published part of an intended edition of Shakspeare.—Biog. Dram.

JENNINGS (David), an eminent dissenting minister, who officiated forty-four years as pastor to a congregation in Old Gravel-lane, Wapping, and superintended the dissenting academy founded by Mr. Coward. He obtained the degree of doctor of divinity from Scotland, and died in 1762, aged 71. Dr. Jennings wrote An Introduction to the use of the Globes and Orrery, 8vo.; Introduction to the Knowledge of Medals, 12mo.; Jewish Antiquities, 2 vols. 8vo.; and several sermons.—Toulmin's Life of Neal.

JENSON, or JANSONIUS (Nicholas), a French printer and letter-founder, who resided at Venice. He was the first who fixed the form and proportion of the Roman character, and his editions are highly valued on account of the beauty of the printing. The first book which came from the press was a volume in quarto, entitled, Decor Puellarum, 1471. He died about 1481.—Moreri.

JENYNS (Soame), an ingenious English writer, was born in London in 1704, and educated at a private school, from whence he was sent to St. John's college, Cambridge. In 1728 he published a poem on the Art of Dancing. He was elected into parliament in 1741, and enjoyed a seat in that house till 1780. In 1755 he was appointed one of the lords of trade, which place he held till that board was abolished. He died in 1787. His works are; 1. Poems, 2 vols. 12mo.; 2. A Free Enquiry into the Origin of Evil, 8vo.; 3. A View of the Internal Evidence of the Christian Religion, 12mo.; 4. Political Tracts; all collected into four vols. 8vo. with his life prefixed.

JEPHSON (Richard), a dramatic writer, and a native of Ireland. He was an officer in the army, and many years master of the horse to the lord-lieutenant. He was also for some time a member of the Irish house of commons. He died near Dublin in 1803. Mr. Jephson's first dramatic piece, Braganza, was read with success at Drury-lane, and printed in 1775. The Law of Lombardy, a tragedy, was performed nine nights at Drury-lane in 1779. The Court of Narbonne was well received. He wrote also, The Campaign, or Love in the East Indies, an Opera; Julia, or the Italian Lover, a tragedy; Two Strings to your Bow, a farce; and the Conspiracy. In 1794 he published, The Confessions of James Baptiste Conteau, citizen of France, 2 vols. 12mo. a severe satire on French depravity. In the same year appeared his Roman Portraits, a poem in heroic verse, with historical remarks and Illustrations, 1 vol. 4to.—Monthly Mag.

JEPHTHAH, one of the judges of Israel, who is rendered famous by a remarkable vow which he made before he marched against the Ammonites, that if he proved victorious he would offer to the Lord the first living thing which should come to meet him on his return. This happened to be his only daughter; whom he is said to have sacrificed to fulfil his rash vow. But many learned writers contend that the text does not warrant the assertion, and that the daughter of Jephthah, instead of being sacrificed, was devoted to perpetual virginity. And this seems most probable, since human sacrifices were held in abomination by the Israelites.—Judges.

JEREMIAH, the second of the greater prophets, was the son of Hilkiah, and a native of Anathoth, of the tribe of Benjamin. He was born about 629 years B. C. Having predicted the miseries which should fall on his country for the sins of the rulers, priests, and false prophets, he was thrown into prison. When Nebuchadnezzar took Jerusalem, Jeremiah was permitted to remain in Judæa, but Johanan, and other fugitive Jews, being resolved to go into Egypt contrary to the prophet's advice, compelled him to accompany them. Some say he was slain there by his countrymen, but others assert that he died at Babylon about 586 B. C. The style of Jeremiah is elegiac, and pathetic, especially the Lamentations. In his prophecies he foretold the Babylonish captivity, the return of the Jews, and the destruction of Babylon. He also predicted the conception and atonement of the Messiah. —Gray's Key to O. T.

JEROBOAM I. king of Israel, was appointed by Solomon governor of Ephraim and Manasseh, but when a prophet predicted that he would reign over ten tribes, Solomon ordered him to be arrested, on which he fled to Egypt, where he remained till the people revolted against Rehoboam. Ten tribes separated from the house of David, and chose Jeroboam for their king, who abandoned himself to idolatry. He died 954 B. C. after reigning 22 years.—Bible.

JEROBOAM II. was the son of Joash king of Israel. He ascended the throne 826 B. C. and regained the lands which had been taken by the Syrians. But he was guilty of idolatry, and the prophets Hosea and Amos predicted the destruction of his family. The Assyrians defeated him at Jezreel, and carried many of his people into captivity. He died 784 B. C.—Bible.

Jerome (St.), a father of the church, was born of Christian parents near Dalmatia, about 340. After receiving a good education under his father, he was sent to Rome, where he studied almost every branch of learning, particularly rhetoric, Hebrew, and theology. Being of a pious and sedentary turn, he was disgusted with the capital, and resolved to lead a solitary life. He accordingly retired to the deserts of Syria, where he spent four years in severe study and mortification. He then went to Antioch, and was ordained priest. In 381 he went to Constantinople, from whence he passed to Rome, where pope Damasus consulted him on several passages of the holy writings. His eloquence, learning, and virtues, procured him several female disciples of rank, which excited the envy of the priests, who propagated gross calumnies against his character. Jerome then quitted Rome, and retired to the Holy Land, where he superintended several monasteries, particularly at Bethlehem. He there wrote the principal of his works; which are: a Latin Version of the Bible from the Hebrew; Learned Commentaries on several books of the Scripture; Polemical Treatises against Montanus, Helvidius, Joviniani, Pelagius, Rufinus, and the partisans of Origen; A Treatise on the Lives and Writings of Ecclesiastical Authors; History of the Fathers of the Desert; and Epistles. The best editions are those of Erasmus, 1526, and Paris, 1693. He died in 420.—Dupin.

Jerome of Prague, so called from the place of his birth, was the disciple of Huss, and a man of learning. The council of Constance cited him with his master, but finding that Huss was thrown into prison, retired to Uberlingen, where he applied for a safe-conduct, which was refused. On his journey to his own country he was arrested, and sent to Constance in chains. After being cruelly tortured he was consigned to the flames which he endured with great constancy and triumph, in 1416.—Moreri. Mosheim.

Jerome of Saint Faith, a Spanish Jew, named before his conversion to christianity, Joshua Larchi. He became physician to Peter de Runa, afterwards pope Benedict XIII. in whose presence, and that of many cardinals and prelates, he disputed with some learned rabbins at Tortosa in 1414. The result of that conference, and of a Treatise on the errors of the Talmud by him, is said to have been such, that about 5000 Jews were converted. Jerome's book was printed at Frankfort in 1602.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Jervas (Charles), a portrait painter, was born in Ireland, and studied under Kneller. By the generosity of a friend he was enabled to visit France and Italy, and at his return obtained considerable employments, more perhaps from the friendship of Pope and other celebrated men than from his own merit. He published a translation of Don Quixote, to which Dr. Warburton added an appendix on the Origin of Romances, and of Chivalry. He died about 1740.— Gen. Biog. Dict.

Jessy (Henry), a nonconformist minister, was born at West Rowton in Yorkshire in 1627, where he took his degrees in arts. He joined the independents, for which he was imprisoned in 1641, but was released by the parliament. In the rebellion he officiated at St. George's in Southwark, but was ejected at the Restoration, and sent to prison. He died in 1663. His works are; The Glory and Salvation of Judah and Israel; a Description of Jerusalem; A Narrative of Mrs. Sarah Wright; A Looking-glass for Children; The English-Greek Lexicon, &c.—Calamy. Palmer.

Jestyn ab Gwrgant, prince of Glamorgan, who was rejected by his country from the sovereignty on the death of his father in 1030, on account of the violence of his temper, his uncle Howel being chosen in his room, but on his death in 1043 he succeeded him. Having made war on Rhys ab Tudor, a neighbouring prince, he sent Einion, his ally, to invite the English to his assistance, who defeated Rhys, but Jestyn refusing to give his daughter to Einion, agreeably to promise, he applied to the English, who turned their arms against Jestyn, and obliged him to quit his dominions, which they divided among themselves.—Owen's Camb. Biog.

Jesua (Levita), a Spanish rabbi in the 15th century, who wrote a curious book called Halichot Olam, or the Ways of Eternity, an edition of which in Hebrew and Latin appeared at Hanover in 1714, 4to.—Moreri.

Jesus the son of Sirac, and author of the book, entitled, Ecclesiasticus, was a native of Jerusalem. He lived about 200 B. C. His grandson, Jesus, translated this book into Greek, which is the version now extant in the Apocrypha. It is full of excellent moral reflections and lively sentiments. —Dupin.

Jesus-Christ, the Saviour of the world, and Son of God; was miraculously conceived by the Holy Ghost, and born of the Virgin Mary in a stable at Bethlehem, A.M. 4004. His birth was announced to shepherds by angels; and a star appeared in the east which guided the magi to Jerusalem, who inquired of Herod where the Messiah was born, as they were come to worship him. This threw the king and his court into consternation. The magi, following the direction of the star, went to Bethlehem, where they found the child, to whom they made their offerings, and being divinely warned, did not go back to Herod, but returned home a contrary way. Herod, full of wrath, determined on the death of the infant; but Joseph, the husband of Mary, being divinely warned in a dream, fled with the child and his mother into Egypt. While they were on their journey, Herod made a horrid slaughter of all the children in Bethlehem. On the death of the tyrant, Joseph returned towards home, but finding that Archelaus reigned in the room of his father, he went to Nazareth, by which that prophecy was fulfilled which called Jesus a Nazarene. Here he dwelt with his parents, working probably at his father's trade, which was that of a carpenter, till he came to the age of 33, when he commenced his public labours; and having been baptized by John the Baptist, he called a few poor, unlearned disciples, and then went about declaring the purposes of his mission, and confirming his authority by numerous miracles. The Jews were filled with astonishment at his doctrine and works, but their hearts were hardened, and instead of receiving him as the promised Messiah, they persecuted him with the utmost malignity, and attributed his miracles to diabolical agency. The sanhedrim, or council of priests, often consulted to destroy him, and at last he was betrayed into their hands in the garden of Gethsemane, by his disciple Judas Iscariot, for thirty pieces of silver. After an examination before Caiaphas the high-priest, he was remitted to Pontius Pilate, the Roman governor, who made several attempts to save him from the fury of the priests and people; but being charged as an enemy of Cæsar if he let Jesus go, he caused him to be first scourged and then put to death. He was crucified between two malefactors on Mount Calvary, Friday, April 3, A. D. 36. His body was entombed by Joseph of Arimathea in a new sepulchre; and as Jesus had declared that he would rise again the third day, the Jews obtained a guard from Pilate to watch the tomb. But on the third day he arose, and the soldiers went and gave information to their employers, who bribed them to say that the body was stolen by his disciples. In confutation of this calumny Jesus remained six weeks among his followers, and then conducting them to Mount Olivet, ascended into heaven. The christian religion has subsisted to the present day, uninjured by all the attacks which have been made against it. The evidences upon which it stands are irrefragable, and its doctrines are of the most exalted nature. They teach that man is a miserable creature in consequence of the fall, but that he is restored to the divine favour by the obedience, death, and mediation of Christ, who came from heaven to make an atonement for the sins of the world, and to bring that life and immortality to light by the gospel, which had been lost by the fall of Adam. The precepts of christianity are agreeable to its doctrinal system; tending to make men humble, virtuous, patient, and contented in this world, and to fit them for a state of endless purity.—New Testament.

Jesus, a man who, before the taking of Jerusalem by Titus, announced to the Jews the calamities about to fall upon them. Four years before the war he went about proclaiming, "Woe, woe to Jerusalem." Being taken and brought before the rulers, and interrogated, his only answer was, "Woe to Jerusalem!" At the time of the siege he continued crying, Woe to the temple! Woe to the city! Woe to the people! and at last he cried, Woe to myself! and at that instant was killed by a dart.—Josephus.

Jethro, surnamed Raguel, king and priest of the Midianites, who received Moses into his family when he fled from Egypt, and gave him his daughter Zipporah. When Moses had delivered the Israelites from their bondage, Jethro met him, and delivered him his wife and children, with much good advice.—Exodus.

Jeune (John le), a French priest of the oratory, who quitted a rich canonry to lead a life of devotion. He was a celebrated preacher, and indefatigable in the exercises of his calling. He died in 1672, aged 80. His Sermons were printed in 10 vols. 8vo., and were much studied by Massillon.—Moreri.

Jewel (John), a learned prelate, was born at Berry Narber, in Devonshire, and educated at Barnstaple school, from whence he removed to Oxford, where he was first entered of Merton, and afterwards of Corpus Christi college. In the reign of Edward VI. he avowed the protestant religion, and became an admired preacher, which in the succeeding reign brought him into imminent danger. Finding that bishop Bonner was devising means to apprehend him, he went abroad, and resided with Peter Martyr at Strasburg and afterwards at Zurich. On the death of Mary he returned home, and was appointed one of the sixteen protestant divines to dispute with as many romanists before queen Elizabeth. In 1559 he was preferred to the bishopric of Salisbury, and in 1565 he received the degree of D. D. from the university of Oxford. His conduct as a bishop was exemplary, and he paid great attention to the work of reformation in his diocese. His application to study was so intense as to lay the foundation of an illness of which he died in 1671. His remains were interred in Salisbury cathedral. His learning and abilities were celebrated over Europe, by his admirable Apology for the Church of England, which was attacked by his countryman and schoolfellow, Thomas Harding, and unanswerably defended by the author. His works were collected into one volume folio, and deemed of so much importance as to be placed in the churches for the edification of the people.—Life by Humphrey. Biog. Brit.

JEZID I. the 5th caliph, or successor of Mahomet, and the second of the race of Ommiades, began his reign in 680. The Arabs, in the second year of his reign, elected Hussein, son of Ali, to the caliphate, whom Jezid caused to be assassinated. He also persecuted the whole house of Ali, and put a number of persons to death. He died in 683. Jezid, though a cruel tyrant, had a taste for poetry, and wrote some amatory verses of merit.—Moreri.

JOAB, the general of David king of Israel, distinguished himself equally by his valour and his cruelties. He treacherously slew Abner the general, and stabbed Absalom the son of David. That monarch, in consideration of his services, did not punish him; but Solomon put him to death for taking part with Adonijah, B. C. 1014. —Stackhouse.

JOACHIM, a celebrated monk, was born at Celico, near Cosenza. He went on a pilgrimage barefoot to the Holy Land, and on his return entered into the order of cistercians. He founded several monasteries, which he governed with discretion. He was regarded as a prophet, and many of his predictions were printed, in a book entitled, The Everlasting Gospel. He wrote many other books, and died in 1202, aged 90. His followers pretended that miracles were wrought at his tomb, and applied to the pope to canonize him, but this was rejected on account of some supposed errors in his works.—Moreri.

JOACHIM (George), a mathematician, otherwise named Rheticus, was born in the country of the Grisons in 1514. He obtained the mathematical chair at Wittemberg, where he zealously espoused and defended the astronomical system of Copernicus. He died in 1576. His works are; Ephemerides; de Doctrina Triangulorum; Orationes de Astronomia, &c.——Melch. Adam in vit. Phil. Germ. Vossius de Math.

JOAN OF ARC, or the maid of Orleans, a French heroine, was born about 1412 at Domremy in Lorraine, of mean parents. She was servant at an inn when she imagined that St. Michael, the tutelary angel of France, had commanded her to raise the siege of Orleans, then closely pressed by the English, under the duke of Bedford. Her pretended visions made a great noise, and she was introduced to Charles VII., whom she is said to have discovered amidst his courtiers though he was dressed like them. She promised to relieve Orleans, and to procure the coronation of Charles at Rheims. Her offers were accepted, though the parliament treated her as an impostor. Clad in armour she headed the troops, who were animated by her professions and example. The siege of Orleans was raised, after which she marched to Rheims, and assisted at the coronation of the king, who ennobled her family, to which he gave the name of Du Lys and large grants of land. Joan was wounded in an attack on Paris, and was taken prisoner at the siege of Compeigne: when the English, to their disgrace, tried and condemned her for sorcery. She was burnt at Rouen in 1431.—Mezeray. Nouv. Dict.

JOAN (pope), a fictitious character, though the contrary is asserted by Platina, who calls this pope John VIII. It is said that about the middle of the 9th century a woman named Joan, born at Mentz, and who had long worn men's clothes, obtained so great a reputation as a doctor, as to be elected to the papal chair on the death of Leo IV. It is further stated, that having had an intrigue with her confidential friend, and not knowing her time, she was taken in labour as she was going in a procession, and died in the street. In order to avoid the like disgrace, it has been said that every new pope was placed in a perforated chair to be examined. The whole of this ridiculous story, however, is now abandoned as fabulous by protestants as well as catholics. David Blondel, in particular, published an able refutation of it.—Platina. Moreri.

JOAN I. queen of Naples, was the daughter of Charles king of Sicily, and born in 1326. At the age of 19 she assumed the government, and married Andrew of Hungary, whom she murdered, and espoused another. Lewis of Hungary, brother of Andrew, marching to avenge his death, Joan took refuge in Provence. She afterwards recovered her capital, and having destroyed her second husband married a third, who dying shortly after, she gave her hand to a fourth. Having no children, she adopted her relation Charles de Duras, who revolted against her at the instigation of the king of Hungary. She then adopted Louis of France, duke of Anjou, for her heir, which produced a bloody war. Charles rendered himself master of Naples, and caused the queen to be put to death in 1381. —Univ. Hist.

JOAN II. queen of Naples, succeeded her brother Ladislaus in 1414. She was twice married, but lived a scandalous life. Her second husband, John count of March, put to death her paramour Pandolfus, and imprisoned the queen. The Neapolitans released her, and her husband became a prisoner in his turn. On recovering his liberty, he went to France, where he took a religious habit and died. Joan died in 1434, after adopting Alphonsus king of Arragon for her heir.—Moreri. Univ. Hist.

JOASH, the son of Ahaziah king of Judah, escaped by means of his aunt Jehoshiba from the fury of Athaliah his grandmother, who destroyed the other princes of the family. At the age of seven Jehoiada the high-priest caused him to be proclaimed king, and Athaliah was put to eath. During the life of Jehoiada he go-rned well, but afterwards fell into idol-ry. He was slain by his servants B.C. 3.—Bible.

JOASH, the son of Jehoahaz king of ael, succeeded his father. He apostatized idolatry, but paid great respect to the ophet Elisha in his last sickness. He de-ated the Syrians in three battles, and re-vered several cities from them. He also eated and made prisoner Amaziah, king Judah, and took the city of Jerusalem. e died B. C. 826, having reigned sixteen ars.—Ibid.

JOB, a celebrated patriarch, was born in e country of Uz, between Idumea and Ara-a. His history makes the subject of a autiful book in the sacred canon, and is ubtless the most ancient poem in the orld. He is there distinguished for his shaken integrity in the midst of the se-rest trials, after which he was restored to alth and honour, and died about 1500 C. Some attribute this book to Isaiah, t others with more probability to Moses. Gray's Key to O. T.

JOBERT (Louis), a French jesuit, who s distinguished for his knowledge in the ence of medals, on which subject he ote an elaborate treatise, printed in 1739, 2 vols. 12mo. He died in 1719, aged 72. Nouv. Dict. Hist.

JODELLE (Stephen), lord of Limodin, rench poet, was born at Paris in 1532. was the first who wrote plays in that guage, but they were so long, that one them took ten mornings for its repre-itation. He also wrote sonnets, elegies, es, and tragedies. He died in 1579.—oreri. Bayle.

JOEL, the second of the minor prophets, urished about 789 years B.C. His pro-ecy, written in a vehement style, regards efly the desolation of Judea by the Chal-ns St. Peter in the Acts applies a pas-e from this prophet to the establishment christianity, and the pouring out the rit on the day of pentecost.—Gray's Key O. T.

JOHN the Baptist, the forerunner of the ssiah, was the son of Zacharias, a priest, l Elizabeth. His birth was foretold by angel. After passing his early years in rement, he came forth publicly as a acher of repentance, baptizing all who fessed their sins. Our Saviour was tized by him in Jordan, and John bore imony to his divinity. He was behead-by Herod at the instigation of Herodias, lip's wife, with whom Herod lived in ltery, A. D. 29.—New Testament. See Heron's Life of the Baptist.

JOHN the Evangelist, or the divine, was son of Zebedee and Salome, and the ther of James the Great. Their occupa-n was fishing, in which they were en-ed when Jesus called them. John was beloved disciple of his master, and leaned on his breast at the last supper. Before the ascension of our Lord, Peter asked him what should become of John, to which he answered, "If I will that he tarry till I come, what is that to thee?" whence some have inferred that he would not die, but remain on earth till the Messiah's second advent. He preached the gospel in several parts of Asia, and fixed his principal residence at Ephesus. In the persecution by Domitian, he is said to have been plunged into a cauldron of boiling oil, but coming out unhurt, he was banished to the isle of Patmos, where he received the visions contained in his Apocalypse. In the reign of Nerva he was released, and returned to Ephesus, where he died A.D. 100, aged 94. He wrote his gospel to complete what had been omitted by the other evangelists, and to refute the errors of Cerinthus and Ebion. In the New Testament there are likewise three epistles by him.—Cave.

JOHN, surnamed Mark, a disciple of the apostles, who accompanied Paul and Barnabas in their journeys for the propagation of the gospel. A difference arising between the two apostles, they separated, and Mark went with Barnabas to Cyprus. The other particulars of his story are unknown.—Ibid.

JOHN, secretary to the emperor Honorius, seized on the throne after his master's death in 423. He was taken prisoner at Ravenna, and beheaded in 425.—Moreri.

JOHN I. emperor of Constantinople, surnamed Zimisces, was of an illustrious family. He stabbed the emperor Nicephorus Phocas in 969, and obtained many victories over the Russians, Bulgarians, and Saracens. He was poisoned by Basil the eunuch in 976.—Moreri. Univ. Hist.

JOHN II. (Comnenus), succeeded Alexis Comnenus his father in 1118. He gained several advantages over the Turks, and governed with great prudence and liberality. He died in 1143 of a wound which he received from a poisoned arrow.—Ibid.

JOHN III. (Ducas), was crowned at Nice in 1222, at the time when the Latins were in possession of Constantinople. He was a prince of great virtue, gained many battles, defeated the Scythians, Tartars, and Bulgarians, and extended his empire on all sides. He died in 1255.—Ibid.

JOHN IV. (Lascaris), son of Theodore the younger, whom he succeeded in 1259 at the age of six years; but the despot Michael Palæologus deprived him of his crown and his eyes in the same year, and imprisoned him for life.—Ibid.

JOHN V. (Cantacuzenus), was the minister and favourite of Andronicus Palæologus, who made him guardian of his children John and Emanuel, with whose mother, Jane of Savoy, he governed for some time with great wisdom and moderation. But in 1345 he assumed the imperial title in Thrace, and in 1347 took Constantinople, compelling John Palæologus, who had been crowned in 1341, and who married his daughter, to retire to Salonica. The exiled monarch, with the help of the Genoese, defeated the fleet of the usurper, and obliged him to quit his throne and capital. He then retired to the monastery of Mount Athos, where he took the religious habit. He there devoted himself to literary studies, and wrote a valuable history of the empire, and a defence of Christianity against the Mohammedans. He died in 1410.—Univ. Hist.

JOHN VI. (Palæologus), succeeded his father Andronicus the younger in 1341, but he was deprived by John Cantacuzenus, whose daughter he married after recovering his throne. His son Andronicus revolted against him, and the Genoese made themselves masters of the Isle of Lesbos, and Amurath I. took the city of Adrianople. He died in 1391.—Ibid.

JOHN VII. (Palæologus), succeeded his father Emanuel in 1425. His reign was very unfortunate, and the Turks made such progress in his dominions as to reduce him to the necessity of imploring the succour of the Latins. He consented to a union between the two churches, which was performed at the council of Ferrara in 1439, at which John assisted in person. He died in 1448, after a reign of 29 years.—Ibid.

JOHN, king of England, surnamed Lackland, was the fourth son of Henry II. and born in 1199. He deprived his nephew Arthur of the throne, to which he was heir, and confined him in prison at Rouen, where he was murdered. The states of Brittany demanded justice of Philip Augustus of France against the murderer, who was condemned to lose all his lands in that country. The pope also excommunicated him, and absolved his subjects from their allegiance. He for some time resisted the papal authority, but in 1213 he made his submission. The English barons invited over Lewis the son of Philip, and crowned him at London in 1216, but he did not continue long in England. John signed the Magna Charta in 1215, being compelled to it by the barons. He died at Newark the year following, and was buried at Worcester.—Rapin. Hume.

JOHN, surnamed the Good, king of France, succeeded his father Philip of Valois in 1350. He obtained a victory over the English in 1355, but the year following he was defeated and taken prisoner at Poitiers, by Edward the Black Prince, who sent him to London, where he remained till the peace of Bretigni in 1360. The ransom was three millions of crowns of gold, and eight provinces; but before the sum could be raised, John died suddenly in the Savoy in London, 1364, aged 52. He was a prince of great courage and virtue.—Mezeray.

JOHN III. king of Sweden, son of Gustavus Vasa, succeeded in 1568 his brother Eric XIV. who was deprived of his crown on account of his tyranny and cruelties. The first acts of his reign were the restoration of the public tranquillity, and the settlement of a peace with Denmark. He died in 1592.—Univ. Hist.

JOHN II. son of Henry III. was proclaimed king of Castile in 1406, at the age of two years. He shewed a warlike spirit, and combated with success the forces of Navarre and Arragon. Having made peace with these powers, he turned his arms against the Moors of Grenada and obtained great advantages over them. He died in 1454, aged 50.—Ibid.

JOHN II. king of Navarre and Arragon, succeeded his brother Alphonsus in the latter kingdom in 1458. He sustained for a long time a war with Henry IV. king of Castile, and died at Barcelona in 1479, aged 82.—Ibid.

JOHN, king of Bohemia, the son of the emperor Henry VII. was elected to the throne in 1309, at the age of 14. He was a warlike prince, and after defeating the Lithuanians assumed the title of king of Poland. He lost an eye in that expedition, and a Jew doctor, who pretended to restore him to sight, deprived him of the other. His military spirit, however, continued, and he accompanied Philip of France in 1346 to the battle of Cressy, where he was guided between two brave knights, each holding his bridle. He fell in that action, and was buried at Luxembourg.—Moreri.

JOHN I. king of Portugal, was the natural son of Peter the Severe, and in 13[illegible] ascended the throne, to the prejudice of Beatrice, daughter of Ferdinand I. his brother. John I. king of Castile, the husband of that princess, disputed the crown, but was defeated at the battle of Aliubarota. He then turned his arms against the Moors of Africa, and took Ceuta and other places. He died in 143[illegible] aged 88.—Univ. Hist.

JOHN II. was born in 1455, and succeeded his father Alphonsus V. in 1481. He defeated some conspiracies which were formed against him at the beginning of his reign and put the principal parties to death. He gained some places in Africa, and distinguished himself in the battle of Toro against the Castilians, in 1476. His actions procured him the titles of the Great and the Severe. He encouraged navigation, and under him Portugal obtained settlements in India. He died in 1495.—Ibid.

JOHN III. succeeded his father Emmanuel on the throne of Portugal in 1521. He greatly encouraged navigation, commerce and the arts. His navigators discovered Japan, and he sent Francis Xavier into the Indies as a missionary. John died in 155[illegible] aged 55.—Ibid.

John IV. called the Fortunate, was born 1604. The Spaniards rendered themves masters of Portugal in 1580, and ot possession till 1640, when the Portuse revolted, and placed the crown on head of the duke of Braganza, John who held it to his death in 1656.—Univ.

John V. successor of Peter II. was owned king of Portugal in 1707. He gued with other powers in favour of arles of Austria, who laid claim to the wn of Spain. His government was e, and his virtues great. He died in 0.—Ibid.

John I. pope, was a native of Tuscany, ascended the papal chair on the death Hormisdas, in 523. Theodoric king of Goths, a violent arian, threw him into on at Ravenna, where he died in John II. was a Roman, and succeeded iface II. in 533. He opposed the eutyns and nestorians, and died in 535.

John VIII. a Roman, was elected to the tificate on the death of Adrian II. in He crowned the emperor Charles Bald in 875, and three years after went rance, where he held a council at yes. In his time Italy was greatly rad by the Saracens, who obliged the e to pay tribute. He corresponded Photius, patriarch of Constantinople, had driven Ignatius from his seat, and ped the dignity. John, imposed upon he pretences of the intruder, acknowd him patriarch, but on discovering error he excommunicated him. The e died in 882. Many of his letters are nt.

John X. archbishop of Ravenna, was ted to the papacy in 914. He was a ulent prelate, and defeated the Saracens, had desolated Italy a long time; but was himself driven from Rome by Guy e of Tuscany, who was supported by Roman people. He was put to death 28.

John XI. was the son of Alberic, duke poletta, but some say his father was Sergius III. He was made pope at ge of 25, in 931, through the influence is mother Marosia, wife of Guy duke Tuscany; but afterwards his brother eric threw both him and her into the e of St. Angelo, where John died in John XII. a Roman of noble birth, was ed pope in 956. He was the first who ged his name on that occasion. At time Berenger tyrannized over Italy, the pope implored the assistance of emperor Otho I. who delivered the try. John crowned Otho at Rome, promised him fidelity, which, how, was of short duration, for he united the son of Berenger against his deli. Otho returned to Rome in 963, and called a council, in which the pope was accused of adultery, sacrilege, and other crimes, which being proved, he was deposed. On the departure of the emperor, John entered Rome, and exercised dreadful cruelties on his enemies. He was assassinated in 964, by a man whose bed he had violated.

John XIII. was appointed pope in 965, by the emperor, against the will of the Roman people. Peter, præfect of Rome, drove him from thence in 966, but the emperor restored him, and Peter became an exile in his turn. John died in 972.

John XIV. bishop of Pavia, and chancellor to the emperor Otho II., obtained the papal chair after Benedict VII. in 983, but three months after his election he was sent to the castle of St. Angelo by the antipope Boniface, and died of poison in 984.

John XVII. an illustrious Roman, was elected pope after Sylvester II. in 1003, and died the same year. There was an antipope of the same name, who was before called Philagathus. The troops of Otho III. having seized him, deprived him of his hands, ears, and tongue, in 998.

John XXI. was a Portuguese, and the son of a physician. He became pope in 1276, but died eight months after his election. Some works of his on philosophy, medicine, and divinity, are extant.

John XXII. was elected pope at Lyons in 1316. He founded several abbeys and bishoprics, but his pontificate was disturbed by quarrels with the emperor and the cordeliers, which order the pope endeavoured to suppress. He died at Avignon in 1334. By his works he seems to have been better fitted for a physician than a pope. They are: 1. Thesaurus Pauperum, or a Collection of Remedies; Treatise on Disorders of the Eyes; On the Formation of the Fœtus; On the Gout; Advice for Preserving Health.

John XXIII. (Balthasar Coffa), a Neapolitan, studied at Bologna, and became chamberlain to Boniface IX. who made him cardinal. He was elected pope after the death of Alexander V. during the great schism, and promised to renounce the pontificate if Gregory XII. and Peter de Luna would drop their pretensions. Not fulfilling his engagements, he was deposed by the council of Constance in 1415, and imprisoned at Heidelberg, where he remained three years, and was then released at the request of Martin V. He died in 1419. The other popes of this name were not remarkable.—Platina. Bower. Moreri.

John of Salisbury, a learned Englishman of the 12th century, who in 1177 was chosen bishop of Chartres in France. He died in 1181. He wrote the Life of Thomas à Becket, and several other works.—Moreri.

John Sobieski, king of Poland, was the youngest son of James Sobieski, governor of Cracow, and educated at Paris. In 1665 he was made grand marshal and general of the Polish armies, after which he was appointed master of the royal house, and prelate of Cracovia. He retook several cities from the rebellious Cossacks in the Ukraine, and distinguished himself in many gallant actions. In 1673 he gained the memorable battle of Choczim upon the Niester, in which the Turks lost 28,000 men. The year following he was elected king of Poland on the death of Michael, and the same year he compelled the Turks to sue for peace. In 1683 he forced them to raise the siege of Vienna, which without him would inevitably have been taken. He died at Warsaw in 1696, aged 72. He was a lover of learning, and patronized men of letters.—Moreri. Univ. Hist.

JOHN of GAUNT, or Ghent, duke of Lancaster, was the third son of Edward III. king of England, and born at Ghent in 1340. He took for his second wife Constance, a natural daughter of Peter the Cruel, king of Castile and Leon, and on the death of that monarch, he laid claim to the throne in right of his wife, in opposition to Henry of Transtamare, but without success. He served with great glory in France with his brother the Black Prince, and on his death had the management of affairs during the life of his father. On the accession of Richard II. he retired, but the envy of the courtiers, particularly the ecclesiastics, who hated him for protecting Wickliffe, followed him with false accusations of a design to usurp the throne, from which he satisfactorily cleared himself. In 1386 his only daughter was married to the heir apparent of the king of Castile, and John renounced his claim to that crown in consideration of a considerable sum and a pension. He took for his third wife, Catherine Swinford, sister to the wife of his friend Chaucer, the poet. He died in 1399. John of Gaunt was a man of great valour, prudence, and generosity. His son afterwards became king, by the title of Henry IV.—Collins's Life of John of Gaunt. Godwin's Life of Chaucer.

JOHN of Austria (don), the natural son of the emperor Charles V., was bred up without the knowledge of his birth till his father on his death-bed had revealed the secret to his son Philip II. king of Spain, who caused him to be brought to his court, and publicly acknowledged him as his brother. In 1569 he was sent into Grenada against the Moors, where he terminated the war with great glory: the year following he was appointed commander of the fleet against the Turks, and gained the celebrated battle of Lepanto. In 1573 he took Tunis, and in 1576 he was made governor of the Low Countries, then in a state of revolt. After taking Namur, Charlemont, and Marienburg, he was vigorously opposed by the archduke Mathias and the prince of Orange. He, however, gained a great battle at Gemblours in 1578, and died the same year, as is supposed of poison, aged 32.—Moreri.

JOHN of Paris, a dominican and professor of theology in the 13th century. In the dispute between pope Boniface VIII. and Philip the Fair, king of France, he took the part of the latter, and defended his cause with zeal and ability. He also started objections to the doctrine of transubstantiation, for which he was cited to Rome where he died in 1304. He wrote Tractatus de Regia potestate & Papali; Determinatio de modo existendi corporis Christi in Sacramento Altaris; Correctionum doctrinæ S. Thomæ.—Cave's Hist. Lit.

JOHN of Leyden. See BOCCOLD.

JOHNSON (Samuel), an English divine was born in Warwickshire, in 1649, and educated at St. Paul's school, London, and Trinity college, Cambridge. In 1670, he obtained the living of Corringham in Essex but resided in London, where he made himself conspicuous against the succession of the duke of York and the measures of the court. Having written a book against the doctrine of passive obedience, under the title of Julian the Apostate, in which the duke was attacked, he was condemned to pay a fine of five hundred marks. When the army was encamped on Hounslow heath, he published a remonstrance to the soldiers in behalf of the protestant religion, for which he was sentenced to stand twice in the pillory, to pay a heavy fine, to be degraded from his function, and whipped from Newgate to Tyburn. This sentence was rigorously inflicted; but at the Revolution the parliament declared the proceedings illegal. He was also rewarded with a pension, and was offered the deanry of Durham, which he considered as inadequate to his merits. He was an unquiet and ungrateful man, and died in 1703. His works were printed in 1 vol. folio, 1710.—Biog. Brit.

JOHNSON (John), a learned divine, was born in 1662, near Rochester, and educated at Cambridge, where he became fellow of Corpus Christi college. Archbishop Sancroft gave him two livings in Kent, and Tenison presented him to that of Margate. He had also the vicarage of Cranbrook. He was twice chosen proctor in convocation for the diocese of Canterbury. On the accession of George I. he refused to take the oaths; but afterwards he submitted. He died in 1725. His works are: The Clergyman's Vade Mecum, 2 vols. 12mo.; A Collection of Ecclesiastical Laws, Canons, &c. 2 vols. 8vo.; The unbloody Sacrifice and Altar unveiled and supported, 8vo.; A Paraphrase on the Psalms in the Liturgy, 8vo.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

JOHNSON (Martin), a landscape painter of great merit in the reign of James II. His views in England are scarce and valuable.

d only to be found in the collections of curious.—Vertue. Walpole.

OHNSON (Samuel), a learned critic, lexrapher, and miscellaneous writer, was n in 1706 at Litchfield, where his father a bookseller. He was educated partly he free school of Litchfield, and in 1728 admitted of Pembroke college, Oxd, which he left in 1731 without a degree. soon after lost his father, who left him uch poor circumstances that he became er of the school at Bosworth, where he not continue long. We next find him ding with a printer at Birmingham, ere he translated Lobo's account of Abysa. In 1735 he married a widow lady of t town, and the same year opened a ool at Edial near Litchfield, but he obed only three scholars, one of whom David Garrick. About this time he an his tragedy of Irene. In 1737 he out for the metropolis accompanied by rick. On fixing his residence in Lonhe formed a connection with Cave, publisher of the Gentleman's Magaz, for which work he continued to write eral years, his principal department g an account of the parliamentary deis. At this period he contracted an inacy with Richard Savage, whose name has immortalized by one of the most ructive pieces of biography ever written. 738 appeared his imitation of Juvenal's d Satire, under the title of London, a m. In 1747 he printed proposals for dition of Shakspeare, and the plan of English Dictionary, addressed to lord sterfield. The price agreed upon been him and the booksellers for the last k was 1575*l.* In 1749 Garrick brought friend's tragedy on the stage of Drury, but it was unsuccessful. In 1750 he menced his Rambler; a periodical er of uncommon merit, and which was inued till 1752. In this work only five ers were the productions of other ers. Soon after the close of this paper lost his wife, a circumstance which tly affected him, as appears from his litations, and the sermon which he te on her death. In 1755 appeared his ionary, and the same year the univerof Oxford conferred on him the degree M. A. Lord Chesterfield also endeaed to assist it by writing two papers in vour in the World, but as he had hito neglected the author, Johnson treated with contempt. The publication of great work did not relieve him from embarrassments, for the price of his ur had been consumed in the progress s compilation, and the year following ind him under an arrest for five gui, from which he was released by Ridson the printer. In 1758 he began Idler, a periodical paper, which was ished in a weekly newspaper. On the h of his mother in 1759 he wrote the romance of Rasselas to defray the expences of her funeral, and to pay her debts. In 1762 the king granted him a pension of 300*l.* per annum, without any stipulation with respect to his literary exertions. Johnson had the honour of a conversation with the king in the royal library, in 1765, when his majesty asked if he intended to publish any more works? To this he answered, that he thought he had written enough; on which the king said, "so should I too, if you had not written so well." About this time he instituted the Literary Club, consisting of some of the most celebrated men of the age. In 1773 he went on a tour with Mr. Boswell to the western islands of Scotland, of which journey he shortly after published an account, which occasioned a difference between him and Macpherson relative to the poems of Ossian. In 1775 the university of Oxford sent him the degree of LL. D. by diploma, which before had been conferred on him by the university of Dublin. In 1779 he began his Lives of the English Poets, which work is a treasure of sound criticism, and a model of literary biography. After a long illness, during part of which he had fearful apprehensions of death, but at last his mind became calm, composed, and resigned, he died full of that faith which he had so vigorously defended and inculcated by his writings, December 13, 1784. His remains were interred in Westminster-abbey, and a statue with an appropriate inscription has been erected to his memory in St. Paul's cathedral. His works have been published in 12 volumes 8vo. As a writer few have done such essential service to his country, by fixing its language and regulating its morality. In his person he was large, robust, and unwieldy. In his dress he was singular and slovenly; in conversation positive, and impatient of contradiction. But with his singularities he had an excellent heart, full of tenderness and compassion, and all his actions were the result of principle. He was a stout advocate for truth, and a zealous champion for the christian religion as professed in the church of England. In politics he was a tory, and at one period of his life a friend to the house of Stuart. He had a noble independence of mind, and would never stoop to any man however exalted, or disguise his sentiments to flatter another. His judgment was uncommonly acute, his imagination quick and ready, his memory tenacious, and his conversation brilliant and instructive.—Life by Boswell; also by Hawkins and Murphy.

JOHNSON (Richard), a grammarian, who was head master of the new school at Nottingham from 1707 to 1720. He published Noctes Nottinghamicæ; Grammatical Commentaries; Aristarchus Anti-Bentleianus; and Cursus Equestris Nottinghamiensis, carmen hexametrum, &c. He was master of arts, but of what university does not appear. He drowned himself in a fit of despondency in a rivulet near Nottingham, in 1720.—Wakefield's Memoirs.

JOHNSON (Charles), a lawyer and dramatic writer. He acquired some wealth by his plays, and having married a wealthy widow, set up a tavern in Bow-street, Covent-garden. He died about 1744. Pope ridicules him in his Dunciad on account of his immoderate size.—Biog. Dram.

JOHNSON (Maurice), an English antiquary, was born at Spalding in Lincolnshire, of a good family, and bred a barrister. He established a literary society at Spalding in 1712, and was one of the revivers of the antiquarian society, in 1717, to which he sent numerous contributions. He died in 1755.—Biblioth. Topog. Brit.

JOHNSON (Thomas), an English botanist, was born at Selby, in Yorkshire. He was bred an apothecary in London, and became, says Wood, the best herbalist of his age. He wrote, Iter in Agrum Canturarium, 1629, and Ericetum Hamstedianum, 1632, which were the first local catalogues of plants published in England. But his great work was an improved edition of Gerard's Herbal. In the civil wars he entered into the royal army; and the university of Oxford conferred on him the degree of M. D. At the siege of Basinghouse he received a wound of which he died in 1644. Besides the above, he wrote on the hot springs of Bath, and other pieces. —Wood. Pulteney. Granger.

JOHNSON (Arthur), a physician, was born near Aberdeen, in Scotland, and educated at that university; but he took his doctor's degree at Padua in 1610. In 1637 he published a translation of David's Psalms into Latin verse, dedicated to archbishop Laud, who procured him the appointment of physician to Charles I. He died at Oxford in 1641.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

JOHNSTONE (George), a naval commander, was the son of a Scotch baronet, and devoted himself to the sea service. After passing through the subordinate stations, he was, in 1760, made master and commander, and in 1762, a post-captain. At the peace he was appointed governor of West Florida; and on his return to England he took an active part in the affairs of the East India company, particularly in opposition to lord Clive. In 1771 he wrote Thoughts on our Acquisitions in the East Indies, particularly respecting Bengal, 8vo. He sat in parliament first for Cockermouth, and afterwards for Appleby, and had a duel with lord George Germaine, for some reflections which fell from him in the house respecting his lordship. He was one of the commissioners sent to treat with the Americans. He died in 1787.—Europ. Mag. Nov. 1789.

JOINVILLE (John, sire de), a French historian, was born at Champagne, about 1260. He was one of the lords of the court of Louis IX. whom he accompanied in most of his expeditions. He died in 1318. Joinville wrote the History of St Louis in French, published by Du Cange in 1668, folio, and again in 1761.—Moreri.

JOLY (Claude), a French writer, was born at Paris in 1607. He was made precentor of the cathedral at Paris, and died there in 1700. He wrote a book entitled Maxims for the Education of a Prince which was burnt by the hangman in 1663. He was the author of some other pieces chiefly religious. He is not to be confounded with Guy JOLY, secretary to cardinal de Retz, and who wrote Memoirs of his Own Times.—Moreri.

JONAH, the fifth of the minor prophets, lived under Joash and Jeroboam II. king of Israel. Being sent to prophesy against Nineveh, he disobeyed, and embarked in a ship for Tarshish. A storm arising, the mariners at his request threw him into the sea, and he was instantly swallowed up by a large fish, which three days after discharged him again on dry land. On going to Nineveh, and delivering his message, the people repented, and the Lord's anger was averted. The gourd under which Jonah sat to watch for the destruction of the city, was probably the plant called palma Christi. He died about 761, B. C.—Gray's Key to O. T.

JONAS (Anagrimus), a native of Iceland and a writer of merit. He was coadjutor to Gundebrand, bishop of Holum, who was a disciple of Tycho Brahe. Jonas refused that see after the death of his friend, and died in 1640, aged 95. He wrote, Idea veri Magistratus; Brevis Commentarius de Islandiâ; Anatome Blefkeniana; Vita Gundebrandi Thoracii Islandia, seu Descriptio Populorum et Memorabilium hujus Insulæ; Specimen Islandiæ historicum, &c.—Bayle.

JONAS (Justus), a learned protestant, was born at Northausen in Thuringia in 1493. He became principal of the college of Wittemberg, and assisted Melancthon at Marpurg. He zealously defended the doctrines of Luther, and died in 1555.—Moleb. Adam. vit. Germ. Theol.

JONATHAN, the son of Saul, and the intimate friend of David, whom he saved from his father's fury at the hazard of his own life. He fell with Saul in fighting against the Philistines, 1056 B. C.—Bible.

JONATHAN, son of Matthias, and brother of Judas Maccabæus, a famous Jewish general. He compelled Bacchides, the Syrian commander, to sue for peace; defeated Demetrius Soter, and his general Apollonius. At length he fell by treachery into the hands of Tryphon, who after receiving a large sum as a ransom for him put him to death, B. C. 144.—Josephus Maccabees.

NES (Inigo), a famous architect, was in London about 1572. He was ght up a carpenter, but the earl of broke sent him to Italy, where he ac- d a great knowledge of architecture. s I. appointed him surveyor-general e works, and in the succeeding reign ad the charge of rebuilding St. Paul's edral. He was also made manager ie masques and interludes at court, h brought upon him the satire of Ben on, who ridiculed him in his comedy artholomew Fair, under the name of ern Leatherhead. He suffered consi- ly for his loyalty in the time of the rebellion. He died in 1652. In 1655 ared his Discourse on Stonehenge, in h he attempts to prove that it has been man temple. He designed the palace Whitehall, and the Banqueting-house, hurch and piazza of Covent-garden, ther fine buildings. His designs were shed in 1727, folio, and some in 1744, —Biog. Brit.

NES (William), a mathematician, was in the isle of Anglesea in 1675. He d in London as a schoolmaster, and g instructed lord Macclesfield's son mathematics, that nobleman made his secretary, and appointed him y teller of the exchequer. He was intimate with sir Isaac Newton, and hosen a fellow of the royal society. ed in 1749. His works are: A Com- um of the Art of Navigation, 8vo. Synopsis Palmariorum Matheseos, New Introduction to the Mathematics, 1706; several papers in the Philoso- l Transactions; an Analysis of several r Isaac Newton's papers, entitled ysis de quantitatum Serie, Fluxione, ifferentia; cum enumeratione Li- m Tertii Ordinis.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

ES (sir Wiliam), a judge and learned r, was the son of the preceding, and in London in 1748. Losing his father infancy, the care of him devolved on other, a woman of great virtue and standing, from whom he learned the ents of knowledge, and was then ed to Harrow school, where he made at a progress in his studies, that Dr. ter, the master, affirmed that his knew more Greek then himself. In he was entered of University college, d, where to his classical pursuits he the study of the Persic and Arabic ages, also the Spanish, Italian, and guese. At the age of 19 he became to lord Althorpe, now earl Spencer, during his residence at Wimbledon at noble family he read the greatest of the Old Testament in Hebrew. 769 he made the tour of France, about the same time undertook, at equest of the king of Denmark, to ate the history of Nadir Shah from Persian into French. In 1770 he entered on the study of the law at the Temple, but continued his application to oriental learning and general literature. In 1774 he published his Commentaries on Asiatic Poetry, dedicated to the university of Oxford. In 1779 appeared his translation of the Speeches of Isæus, from the Greek, with notes; and the year following, An Inquiry into the legal Mode of suppressing Riots, occasioned by the disgraceful scenes which happened that year in the metropolis. About this time he was invited to offer himself a candidate to represent the university of Oxford in parliament; which he declined. In 1793 he obtained the appointment of a judge of the supreme court at Calcutta, a situation which had been the object of his anxious wishes. The honour of knighthood was on this occasion conferred on him, and he soon after married Anna Maria Shipley, daughter of the bishop of St. Asaph. In April of that year he embarked for India, leaving his native country, to which he was never to return. On the voyage his active mind projected the establishment of a society in Bengal for the purpose of illustrating oriental antiquities and literature. This scheme he saw carried into effect, and under his auspices, and by his direction, the Society acquired a high reputation. The volumes of its Transactions are inestimable, and are enriched by several valuable productions from his pen. As a judge he was indefatigable and impartial. He studied the native laws of the country, and became so versed in the Sanscrit and the codes of the Brahmins, as to gain the admiration of the most learned men in that country. To his vast acquirements and enlarged mind he added the humility and faith of a christian. He was firmly persuaded of the truth of the scriptures, to whose divine authority he bore testimony, and supported it by proofs and researches that are invincible. This excellent man died in India in 1794. His works were collected and published in 6 vols. 4to. 1799, and his Life written by sir John Shore, lord Teignmouth, in one volume, 4to. in 1804. A beautiful monument has been erected to his memory in St. Paul's cathedral by the East India Company.

JONES (William), an English divine, was born at Lowick in Northamptonshire, in 1726. He received his education at the Charterhouse, from whence he removed on an exhibition to University college, Oxford, where he took his degrees in arts, and in 1749 entered into orders. His first situation was on the curacy of Finedon in Northamptonshire, where in 1753 he wrote his excellent Answer to bishop Clayton's Essay on Spirit. The year following he married the daughter of the Rev. Brook Bridges, and went to reside at Wadenhoe as curate to his wife's brother. Here he wrote his Catholic Doctrine of the Trinity, which has been repeatedly printed, and never answered. In 1762 he published an Essay on the first Principles of Natural Philosophy, in which he espoused the Hutchinsonian system. This work he completed in 1781 by his Physiological Disquisitions, or Discourses of the Natural Philosophy of the Elements. Archbishop Secker gave him the vicarage of Bethersden in Kent in 1764, and soon after the rectory of Pluckley in that county. Some years afterwards he removed to Nayland in Suffolk, and exchanged Pluckley for Paston in Northamptonshire, though he continued to reside at Nayland. When Dr. Horne became bishop of Norwich he appointed his old friend Mr Jones his domestic chaplain, and he has embalmed the memory of his patron by an excellent memoir of his life. At the desire of that pious prelate he published two volumes of sermons in 1790. When the French revolution broke out, and democratical principles began to spread in this country, Mr. Jones wrote some seasonable pamphlets, and published a valuable collection of tracts entitled, The Scholar Armed, 2 vols. 8vo. To him also that excellent work the British Critic owed its origin. At the request of lord Kenyon he became tutor to his sons, the eldest of whom, a promising young man, died not long after, to the great grief of both his father and tutor. In 1798 the archbishop of Canterbury presented Mr. Jones to the rectory of Hollingbourne in Kent. This worthy and pious divine died on the morning of the Epiphany in 1801. His works have been published in 12 vols. 8vo. with his life prefixed.

Jones (Jeremiah), a learned dissenting divine, is supposed to have been a native of the north of England. He received his education under his uncle, the Rev. Sam. Jones, of Tewksbury, the tutor of bishops Chandler, Butler, and Secker. He afterwards became minister of a congregation at Avening in Gloucestershire, but resided at Nailsworth, where he kept an academy. Though a deep scholar and hard student, he was a man of pleasant manners, and regularly attended a bowling party near his residence. He died in 1724, aged 31. His works are: 1. A Vindication of the former part of St. Matthew's Gospel from Mr. Whiston's Charge of Dislocations, &c. 1719; 2. A new and full Method of settling the Canonical Authority of the Old Testament, 3 vols. 8vo. 1726. These volumes having become scarce, were lately reprinted at the Clarendon press, Oxford.—Monthly Mag. April 1803.

Jones (Paul), a naval adventurer, was a native of Selkirk in Scotland, but settling in America he obtained in 1775 the command of a ship under commodore Hopkins, and distinguished himself in several engagements, for which he received his commission as captain of the marine. He then sailed to France, and being well acquainted with the Irish coast, and the northern part of England, he conceived the design of effecting a descent. He accordingly landed at Whitehaven, and having dismantled a fort, set fire to some shipping in the harbour. From thence he sailed for Scotland, where he landed on the estate of the earl of Selkirk, and plundered his lordship's house of all the plate. He next took the Drake sloop of war, with which he returned to Brest. He afterwards sailed round Ireland to the North Sea with three ships, the Richard, Pallas and Vengeance. Having committed great mischief on that coast, he fell in with the Baltic fleet, convoyed by the Serapis frigate, and the Countess of Scarborough armed ship, both which, after a severe action, he captured off Flamborough-head. For these services the king of France conferred on him the order of merit, and gave him a gold-hilted sword. The career of his exploits finished with the American war, and some private affairs calling him to Europe, he died at Paris in 1792.—Monthly Mag. Sept. 1802.

Jones (John), a medical writer, who was born in Wales, and took his doctor's degree at Cambridge. He died about 1580. He wrote; The Dial of Agues, 1556; A Discourse of the natural Beginning of all growing and living Things; A translation of Galen's four books of Elements.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Jones (sir William), an English judge who wrote Reports of Cases in the king's bench and common pleas, folio. He was made a justice of the common pleas in 16 and removed to the king's bench in 16 He is not to be confounded with sir Thomas Jones, lord chief justice of the common pleas in the reigns of Charles II. and James II. When this last monarch consulted him on his dispensing power, and said that he could soon have twelve judges of his opinion, sir Thomas answered, "Twelve judges you may possibly find, sir, but not twelve lawyers." He was also author of Reports.—Granger.

Jones (Henry), a dramatic writer, was born at Drogheda in Ireland, and was originally a bricklayer. Some of his poetical attempts attracting the notice of lord Chesterfield, then lord lieutenant, he took him under his patronage, and brought him to London, where he published his poems by subscription, and produced his tragedy of the Earl of Essex, which gained him wealth and reputation. He died poor in 1770, and was buried by charity. One John Jones wrote in the time of Charles I. a play called Adraste, or the Woman's Spleen.—Biog. Dram.

Jones (Griffith), a writer, was born in 17 and died in 1786. He was many years editor of the London Chronicle, and other

ers. He had also a concern in the Literary Magazine, and with a brother of his, pro-ected those useful publications for chil-ren, which were successfully printed by Ir. John Newberry.—Gen. B. D.

JONES (Richard), a Welsh divine, who ompiled in his native language a curious ork, called Gemma Cambricum, contain-g a summary of all the books and chap-rs of the bible. He was matriculated of sus college, Oxford, in 1621, and died in eland, about 1652.—Wood.

JONES (John), an English monk, was rn in London, and educated at Merchant aylors' school, from whence he was ected to St. John's college, Oxford, in 91. but his inclination leading him to Roman catholic religion, he went to ain, where he entered into the order of Benedict, changed his name to Leander Sancto Martino, and became D. D. He s afterwards professor of Hebrew and inity, and vicar-general of his order. died in London in 1636. His works ; Sacra ars Memoriæ ad Scripturas di-is in promptu habendas memoriterque cendas accommodata, 8vo.; Conciliatio orum communium totius Scripturæ; the Bible with Glosses, in 6 vols. fol.— d, A. O.

ONES (David), a Welsh poet, was a na- of Caernarvonshire, and flourished 1750 to 1780. He edited two collec-s of Welsh poetry, and formed a large ction of antient MSS. in that language. wen's Cambr. Biog.

ONES (John), a Welsh antiquary, who inued transcribing old manuscripts for t forty years, as appears from some of olumes dated from 1590 to 1630. Of collection above fifty large volumes still in existence—Owen's Cambrian

NES (Rice), a native of Merioneth-, and an eminent Welsh poet, died in aged 86. In 1770 he published a h Anthology, in quarto, containing ions from the poets of different periods. l.

O (Ludolph de), a painter, was born lland in 1619. His abilities were great trait painting, and he acquired a con-ble fortune by his profession. He died 7.—Pilkington.

GHE (Baldwin), or Junius, a francis-onk, was born at Dordt, in Holland, ed at Brussels in 1634. He wrote, Concionatorum, Sentum Catholicum and several books of practical divi-—Moreri.

IN (Gilbert), a jesuit and poet, was n 1596, and died at Tournon in 1638. rote odes, epodes, elegies, and as, in elegant Latin, and translated eonin to that language.—Baillet, Juge-s Savans.

LIUS (John), a learned writer of th century, was born at Holstein. and educated at Frankfort-on-the-Maine, where he died young in 1659. He wrote The History of Philosophers, in Latin, a work exact and judicious—Moreri.

JONSON (Benjamin), an English comic poet, was born in Westminster in 1574. His father was a clergyman, and died about a month before the birth of our poet, who received his education at Westminster school; but his mother marrying again, his father-in-law, who was a bricklayer, compelled him to work at his business. On this he listed for a soldier, and went to the Netherlands, where he distinguished himself by his courage. After his return he went to St. John's college, Cambridge, but did not remain there long, owing to his extreme poverty. He then turned his attention to the stage, and became a player and dramatic writer, with indifferent success till Shakspeare gave him his assistance. His first printed play was his comedy of Every Man in his Humour, after which he produced a new piece annually for several years. He engaged with Chapman and Marston in writing a comedy called Eastward Hoe, which being deemed a satire on the Scotch nation, had nearly brought the authors to the pillory. At the accession of James I. Jonson had the conducting of a spectacle for his entertainment in his passage from the Tower to Westminster-abbey, and he continued to have the management of all the masques and public shows during that and the succeeding reign. In 1615 he was made poet laureat; the salary of which he afterwards procured to be raised from a hundred marks to as many pounds, with a butt of Canary wine. In 1617 the university of Oxford conferred on him the degree of M. A. Notwithstanding his pension and the profits of his performances, he was generally poor, and was frequently relieved by the king's bounty. He died in 1637, and was buried at Westminster-abbey: on his grave-stone is the following inscription:

O! rare Ben Jonson!

His works, consisting of plays, poems, and some pieces in prose, were published in 1756, in 7 vols. 8vo.—Biog. Brit.

JONSTON (John), an eminent naturalist and physician, was born at Sambler, in Poland, in 1603, and died at Silesia, in 1675. He published the Natural History of Birds, Fishes, Quadrupeds, Insects, &c. 5 vols. folio, 1651; a Treatise on Trees and Fruits, fol. 1662.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

JORAM, king of Israel, succeeded his brother Ahaziah, 896 B. C. He defeated the Moabites; but the Syrians under Benhadad besieged him so closely in Samaria, that the people were reduced to the last stage of famine. In this exigency the king sent to slay Elisha, as the author of his calamity, but the prophets predicted a speedy deliverance, which accordingly happened. Joram fell into idolatry, and cruelty, and was wounded in fighting against Hazael, king of Syria, and fled, but was slain by his own general Jehu, 884 B. C.—Bible.

JORAM, king of Judah, succeeded his father Jehoshaphat, 889 B. C. He married Athaliah, daughter of Ahab, and was an idolater and tyrant. The Edomites revolted from him, and he was also attacked by the Philistines. He died of a tormenting disease, B. C. 885.—Bible.

JORDÆNS (James), a celebrated painter, was born at Antwerp, in 1594. He was the disciple of Adam van Oort, and of Rubens. He painted with extraordinary freedom, and expedition; there is a brilliancy and harmony in his colouring, and a good understanding of the chiaro-scuro. His composition is rich, and his expression natural and strong, but his designs want elegance and taste. Many of his pieces are in the churches of Antwerp, and other cities of the Netherlands. He died in 1678.—Pilkington.

JORDAN (sir Joseph), a gallant English admiral, who by his presence of mind and valour, gained the battle of Solebay, in 1672. The advantage was long on the side of the Dutch fleet, as the English were overpowered by numbers; but sir Joseph fell into the midst of the enemy, and throwing them into confusion, the fortune of the day was reversed, and the English gained the victory.—Granger.

JORDAN (Charles Stephen), a Prussian writer, originally of a French family, was born at Berlin in 1700. He became vice-president of the academy of sciences at Berlin, where he died in 1746. Frederick the Great caused a monument to be erected to his memory with this inscription: "Here lies JORDAN, the friend of the muses, and of the king." That monarch also composed a eulogy upon him, in which he bestows a great encomium upon his talents and virtues. He wrote, Travels in France, England, and Holland, with Satirical Anecdotes, 12mo; A Miscellany of Literature, Philosophy, and History, 12mo; and the Life of de la Croze.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

JORDAN (Thomas), a dramatic writer in the reign of Charles I. He wrote two comedies and a masque, mentioned by Langbaine with respect.—Biog. Dram.

JORDAN (John Christopher), an able antiquary, was privy consellor to the king of Bohemia. He wrote several chronological works, and illustrated some of the antient historians. He died in 1740.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

JORDANO (Luca), a famous painter, was born at Naples in 1632. He studied the manner of Pietro da Cortona, but chiefly the works of Paul Veronese. The king of Spain employed him to paint the Escurial, and in several other great works, by which he acquired considerable wealth. He died at Naples in 1705.—Pilkington.

JORDEN (Edward), an English physician was born at High Halden, in Kent, in 1569 and educated at Hart hall, Oxford, but he took his doctor's degree at Padua, and afterwards settled in London, from whence he removed to Bath, where he died in 1632. He wrote, a Brief Discourse of Disease, called the Suffocation of the Mother, 4to.; Discourse of Natural Baths, and Mineral Waters, 4to. 1631; afterwards reprinted in 8vo. by Guidott, who added thereto a Treatise concerning the Bath wherein the Antiquity both of the Bath and the City is discovered, 1662.—Wood.

JORNANDES, a Goth, who in the reign of Justinian wrote a work, entitled, De Mundo, et de Rerum et Temporum successione, 1617, 8vo.—Moreri.

JORTIN (John), an eminent divine, was born in London, in 1698, and educated at the Charter-house, from whence he removed to Jesus college, Cambridge, where he was elected fellow. While under-graduate he translated for Mr. Pope some of Eustathius's Notes on Homer. In 17 he was appointed moderator, and taxor t year following. In this year he publish Latin poems, in quarto, under the title Lusus Poetici, which went through thr editions. About this time he entered in orders, and in 1726 was presented by college to the living of Swavesey, near Ca bridge, which he resigned in 1730 on settli in London, where he officiated at a cha in Bloomsbury. In 1730 he published fo Sermons on the truth of the Christian Re gion; and the year following, Miscellanec Observations upon Authors, Ancient a Modern, 2 vols. 8vo. In 1734 appea his Remarks on Spenser's Poems, and Milton. In 1737 he obtained the rect of Eastwell, in Kent, which he resigned, air of that place not agreeing with health. In 1746 he was appointed afterno preacher at Oxendon chapel in the paris St. Martin in the Fields. This year he p lished six Discourses on the Truth of Christian Religion, 8vo. The next yea became assistant to Dr. Warburton in L coln's-inn. In 1749 he was appointed preach the Boyle's lecture which he for three years. In 1751 archbishop H ring gave him the rectory of St. Dunsta the East; and about this time he publis the first volume of his Remarks on Ecc astical History, which he continued t vols. In 1755 appeared his six Disse tions on Different Subjects, and the s year the archbishop conferred on him degree of D. D. In 1758 appeared his of Erasmus, in 2 vols. 4to. Dr. Osbaldis bishop of London, made him his chap and gave him a prebend in St. Pa with the archdeaconry of London. died in 1770, and was buried in Kens ton church-yard. Seven volumes o sermons were published after his de and two volumes of tracts. A uni tion of his works is now printing—Nobbs's Anecd. of Bowyer.

JOSEPH, the favourite son of Jacob, by chel, was hated by his brethren, to whom ng sent by his father when they were nding their flocks, they intended to put to death, but were diverted from the ject by Reuben. In Reuben's absence y sold him to some Midianitish mer- nts, and having dipped Joseph's coat in od, carried it to his father, who lament- grievously, thinking he had been slain a wild beast. Joseph was sold in Egypt Potiphar, a lord of the court, who made steward of his affairs; but his mistress ng in love with him, and he resisting criminal desires, she accused him of ing attempted her virtue, on which he thrown into prison, where he inter- ed the dreams of the king's butler and er. Pharaoh being perplexed by an ex- rdinary dream, the butler mentioned ph who explained the mystery, and made prime minister of Egypt. His hren coming thither during a famine, trated themselves before him. After rent interviews he discovered himself nem, and sent for his father and all his ly, whom he settled in the province of nen. Joseph married the daughter of the st or prince of On, by whom he had raim and Manasseh. He governed Egypt great wisdom till his death, B.C. 1636. es carried his bones out of Egypt, and them with Jacob's in Canaan.—Genesis. Ibid.

SEPH, the husband of Mary, mother sus Christ, was of the tribe of Judah, of the family of David. St. Matthew his father Jacob, and St. Luke gives the name of Heli, which is thus explain- Heli and Jacob were brothers, and the dying without children, the second mar- the widow according to the law of Mo- Thus Jacob was his natural father, but ssed for the son of Heli, agreeably to ewish law.—New Testament.

SEPH of Arimathea, a counsellor, who to Pilate, and begged the body of Je- which he laid in his own sepulchre. fterwards joined the disciples, and died rusalem.—Ibid.

SEPH I. emperor of Germany, of the of Austria, was the son of the empe- Leopold, and crowned king of Hunga- 1687, elected king of the Romans in and ascended the imperial throne on eath of his father, in 1705. He en- d in his interests Savoy, England, and nd, against France, in support of the of the archduke Charles to the crown ain, in which war the allies were suc- l. In 1706 he put the electors of Ba- and Cologne to the ban of the empire aking part with France, and having ved those princes of a great part of estates, he bestowed the same on his ons and favourites. He made himself master of Italy, and levied contributions on Mantua, Parma, Modena, Lucca, Genoa, and other places. His armies also defeated the revolted Hungarians, headed by prince Bagotzki, who was forced to take refuge in Turkey. In the midst of these successes Joseph was taken off by the small-pox in 1711, aged 33.—Univ. Hist. New. Dict. Hist.

JOSEPH II. emperor of Germany, was the son of the emperor Leopold and of Maria Theresa, queen of Hungary, and archduchess of Austria. He was crowned king of the Romans in 1764, and the year following succeeded his father. He early displayed great talents and activity by new modelling the armies, and reforming all the departments of government. He also travelled through his dominions, and visited Prussia, Italy, France, and Russia. Among other excellent regulations which he adopted, was the setting apart one day every week to receive petitions, and to hear complaints. In 1771 Germany suffered the horrors of a famine, yet amidst this calamity the emperor joined Prussia and Russia in the dismemberment of Poland. In 1780, by the death of the empress-queen, he succeeded to the crown of Hungary and Bohemia. The year following he issued a decree in favour of the liberty of the press, which was followed by others equally liberal, particularly one of toleration. In a journey to the Netherlands the emperor gained the love of the people by his courtesy and generosity. On this visit he declared Ostend a free port, and ordered several improvements to be made in the harbour at his own expence. He afterwards demanded from the Dutch the free navigation of the Scheldt, but in this design he failed. On his return to Vienna he abolished the system of vassalage. This measure was followed by an imperial edict, disclaiming all secular subjection to the court of Rome, and the suppression of many monasteries, and the regulation of others. On this occasion pope Pius VI. made a journey to Vienna, to alter the emperor's designs, but though pompously received, he could not effect his purpose. In 1786 the emperor followed his attack on the papal authority, by an assembly of the ecclesiastical princes at Ratisbon, in which it was resolved to withdraw from the jurisdiction of the pope. In 1788, a declaration of war was published against the Turks, and the same year the emperor in person reduced Schabatz; but this was followed by the defeat of prince Linchenstein, who fell in the action. Soon after this a bloody battle was fought between the Imperialists and Turks, on the heights of Rohadin, in which neither could claim the victory. Joseph next made an attempt to possess himself of Belgrade, but without success. But marshal Laudohn taking upon him the command of the army, took Durbieza and Novi, and in 1789 reduced Belgrade; soon after a peace was concluded, chiefly occasioned by the discontented spirit in Germany at such a waste of men and treasure. In February following the emperor died of a lingering illness, which he endured with christian fortitude and resignation. He was succeeded by his brother Peter Leopold, grand duke of Tuscany.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Joseph king of Portugal, of the family of Braganza, was born in 1717, ascended the throne in 1750, and died in 1777. A conspiracy formed against him in 1751, occasioned the expulsion of the jesuits from his dominions. He had afterwards a dispute with the court of Rome, and a war with Spain, in which he was supported by England.—Univ. Hist.

Joseph (Ben Gorion), a Jewish historian, whom the rabbins falsely confound with Josephus. He lived in the 5th century, and wrote in Hebrew a History of the Jews, which bears evident marks of being an abridgement of Josephus's larger work. It was published in a Latin version by Gagnier at Oxford, in 1706, 8vo. and in Hebrew and Latin at Gotha, in 1707, 4to.—Moreri.

Joseph of Paris, a famous capuchin, commonly called Father Joseph, who was employed by cardinal Richelieu in most of his political intrigues. Louis XIII. procured him a cardinal's hat, but he died of an apoplexy before he received it, in 1638.—Moreri.

Joseph (father), an apostate monk of Hungary, who headed a numerous banditti, about 1678, whom he called the people of God, assuming to himself the name of Joshua. He entered the Austrian dominions, where he committed dreadful outrages, burning churches, putting priests to death, and defiling nuns, under pretence of zeal for true religion. The motley crew were at last dispersed on the sudden death of their leader.—Ibid.

Josephus (Flavius), a Jewish historian, was born of a priestly family at Jerusalem, about A. D. 37. He received a liberal education among the Pharisees, after which he went to Rome, where he cultivated his talents to great advantage. On his return to his own country, he commanded the troops employed to defend Jotapat against Vespasian and Titus, which he maintained bravely seven weeks. Vespasian took him into favour, and he was held in great esteem by Titus, whom he accompanied to the siege of Jerusalem, at the taking of which he obtained the sacred books, and many favours for his countrymen. When Vespasian became emperor he gave Josephus a palace, with a pension, the freedom of the city, and a grant of lands in Judea. Titus added to these favours, and Josephus out of gratitude assumed the name of Flavius. During his residence at Rome he wrote his History of the Wars of the Jews, first in Syriac, and afterwards in Greek. Its style approaches nearest to that of Livy. He also wrote the Antiquities of the Jews, in which it is supposed are some interpolations of modern transcribers, particularly with regard to what is said of our Saviour. He wrote likewise two books in defence of the Jews against Apion, and his own Life. The best editions of his works are Hudson's at Oxford, 2 vols. fol. 1720, and Havercamp's at Amsterdam, 1727, 2 vols. fol. Josephus died A. D. 93.—Moreri.

Joshua, the son of Nun, of the tribe of Benjamin. He succeeded Moses as the leader of the Israelites, whom he conducted into Canaan, and signalized himself by his valour and his prudence. He died in the 110th year of his age, B. C. 1424. The book bearing his name is ascribed to him, also the concluding part of Deuteronomy.—Gray's Key O. T.

Josiah, king of Judah, succeeded his father Ammon, B. C. 641, at the age of eight years. He destroyed the idols, and restored the worship of the true God, established virtuous magistrates, for the administration of justice, and repaired the temple. He also caused the law of Moses to be sought for and preserved. He was wounded in a battle fought at Megiddo, against Necho king of Egypt, and died, B. C. 610.—Bible.

Joubert (Laurence), physician to the king of France, was born at Valence, in Dauphiny, in 1529. On the death of Rondelet in 1562, he became regius professor of physic at Montpelier, and Henry III. appointed him his physician. He died in 1582. His works make 2 vols. folio.—Moreri.

Joubert (Francis), a priest of Montpelier, was born in 1689. He was a zealous jansenist, and on that account was confined for some time in the Bastile. He wrote a Commentary on the Revelations, and other works, and died in 1763.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Joubert (Bartholomew Catherine), a French general, was born at Pont-de-Vaux in the department of Ain, in 1769. He was bred to the law, which profession he quitted for the army, and in 1789 commenced his military course as a grenadier, from whence he rose by degrees to be general in chief. He seconded Buonaparte in the conquest of Italy, and signalized himself at Millesimo, Ceva, Montebaldo, Rivoli, and in the Tyrol. He was opposed to general Suwarrow, but was slain at the battle of Novi in 1799.—Ibid.

Jousse (Daniel), a French lawyer, was born at Orleans, in 1704, and died in 1761. He published many works in the line of his profession.—Ibid.

Jouvency (Joseph), a French jesuit, was born in 1643, and died at Rome, in 1719. He published an apology, in which he defended Chastel, who attempted the life of Henry IV. and calls him a martyr. He continued the History of the Jesuits, and wrote some other works.—Moreri.

Jouvenet (John), a French painter, was scended from an Italian family of that ofession, and born at Rouen, in 1641. s first instructions were derived from his her, but he improved himself under le n. He passed through all the offices of academy, and became one of the per- ual rectors. He died in 1717.—D'Ar- ville.

OVIANUS (Flavius Claudius), a Roman peror, was born in Pannonia, of a noble ily, in 331. He was elected emperor by Roman soldiers after the death of Julian, refused the dignity unless they turned istians, to which they consented. He le a disadvantageous peace with Persia, up the heathen temples, and recalled banished clergy. He died after reign- seven months, owing to the suffocating our of burning charcoal in his room, 0.368. He disgraced himself by burn- a famous library at Antioch.—Ammia- Marcellinus. Crevier.

OVINIAN, a monk of Milan in the 4th ury, who after leading a life of great erity, debauched a number of women, procured many disciples. He held that body of our Saviour was not real flesh, a phantom, and that it was lawful to ge in sensual pleasures, with others lly offensive to good morals, on which nt the emperor Honorius ordered him is followers to be scourged and ba- d. Jovinian died in Dalmatia of a de- , A. D. 406. He wrote several books were refuted by Jerome. Cave.

rius (Paul), an eminent historian, was t Como, in Lombardy, in 1483. Having ed an excellent education, he went to , where he wrote his piece, De Pisci- omanis. He received a pension from is I. king of France, and Clement VII. him the bishopric of Nocera, which y he disgraced by his course of life, much given to women. He died in and was interred at Florence. His st work is a history of his own time, in 3 vols. Strasburg, 1556. It is written dmirable style, but must be read with . He also wrote the Lives of Illus- Men. His brother Benedict wrote the y of Switzerland.—Moreri.

USE (Anne de), a French duke, and l of France, who distinguished him- many gallant exploits. He was kill- n expedition against the Huguenots —Moreri.

ER (William), otherwise Lyde, was Oxford, in 1622, and became fellow dalen college, but on turning Roman he went abroad. He returned at toration, and retired to a village in ghamshire, where he led a life of de- and died in 1706. He wrote, 1. man Empress, a comedy, 1670, 4to.; ervations on the Life of Cardinal vo. 1686; 3. Miscellaneous Poems, and Latin.—Wood, A. O.

JUAN (George), a knight of Malta, who accompanied don Anthony de Ulloa and the French mathematicians to Peru to ascertain the figure of the earth. He published, Astronomical Observations on this voyage, prefixed to Ulloa's Historical Narrative. He also wrote a treatise on the Construction and Management of Ships. He died at Madrid in 1773.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

JUBA, king of Mauritania and Numidia. He took the part of Pompey against Cæsar, for which he was driven from his throne, and killed himself, B. C. 42.—Suetonius. Plut.

JUBA, son of the preceding, was carried prisoner to Rome by Cæsar. He there became the favourite of Augustus, who gave him for a wife Cleopatra, daughter of Antony, and restored him to his throne. He wrote the History of Arabia, on the Antiquities of Syria, the History of Rome, and other works in Greek, fragments of which are extant.—Vossius de Hist. Grac. Bayle.

JUDA (Leo), a protestant minister at Zurich, was the son of a priest in Alsace, by his concubine, born in 1482, and died in 1542. He translated the Old Testament from the Hebrew, and wrote against Erasmus, who had reproached him for changing his religion.—Melch. Adam. in Vit. Theol. Germ.

JUDA-HAKKADOSH, or the saint, a famous rabbi in the time of the emperor Antoninus, to whom he was preceptor. He is said to have been the original compiler of the Mischna, or the Talmudical text, of which the best edition is that of Surenhusius, 1698, 3 vols. folio.—Moreri.

JUDAH-CHIUG, a celebrated rabbi, and grammarian of the 11th century. He was a native of Fez, and wrote many works, particularly an Arabic Dictionary. He was called the prince of Jewish grammarians.—Ibid.

JUDAH, the fourth son of Jacob and Leah, was the head of a tribe, to which his father gave this famous promise, "that the sceptre should not depart from it till Messiah or Shiloh should come," which was fulfilled in Jesus Christ. He died 1636 B. C. aged 119 years.—Bible.

JUDAS ISCARIOT, so called from the place of his birth, a city in the tribe of Ephraim. He was one of the disciples of Jesus Christ, and purse-bearer. His avaricious disposition led him to betray his master to the Jews for thirty pieces of silver, but when he found that Jesus was condemned, he was seized with remorse, gave back the wages of his iniquity, and hanged himself.—New Testament.

JUDE (St.), an apostle of Jesus Christ, was called Lebbeus, Thaddeus, or the Zealous. He was the brother of St. James the Less, and preached the gospel in Mesopotamia, Arabia, Syria, Idumea, and Libya. He is said to have suffered martyrdom at Berytus, A. D. 80. An epistle of his stands in the sacred canon as the last of the seven general epistles.—Cave.

JUDEX (Mathew), a learned German, was born at Misnia, in 1528. He became a teacher in the university of Magdeburg, and also a minister. He died in 1564. He was the author of many books, and had a considerable share in the two first Centuries of Magdeburg, a famous work, in 8 vols. folio, Basil.—Bayle.

JUGLARIS (Aloysius), an Italian jesuit, was born at Nice, became preceptor to prince Charles Emanuel of Savoy, and died at Messina, in 1653. He wrote Panegyrics on Jesus Christ, on Louis XIII. and several bishops.—Moreri.

JUGURTHA, the natural son of Manastabal, brother of Micipsa, who were the sons of Masinissa king of Numidia. Jugurtha was brought up by Micipsa with his children Adherbal and Hiempsal, after which he served under Scipio. Micipsa at his death left him his successor in conjunction with his two sons; but Jugurtha murdered Hiempsal, and forced Adherbal to fly to Rome, where his cause was at first espoused, but the bribes of the usurper proved more effectual with the senate, and the unhappy fugitive was treacherously destroyed by Jugurtha. At length Metellus was sent against him, and forced him to fly from his dominions, and to seek refuge among his neighbours. He was betrayed to Sylla by his father-in-law Bocchus, and carried in triumph to Rome, where he died in prison six days after his arrival, B. C. 106.—Sallust in Bell. Jugurth.

JUIGNE BROISSINIERE (D. de, sieur de Moliere), a French gentleman and an advocate in parliament, who wrote, Dictionnaire Theologique, Historique, Poetique, Cosmographique, et Chronologique, Paris, 1644, 4to. and Rouen, 1668. This work is censured by Moreri.

JULIA, a virgin martyr of Carthage. When that place was taken by Genseric she was sold to a heathen merchant, and carried into Syria. Refusing to take a part in some of the festivals instituted in honour of the female deities, she was put to death about 440.—Baillet Vies des Saints.

JULIA, the daughter of Cæsar and Cornelia, was one of the best of the Roman ladies. She married first Cornelius Cæpion, and afterwards Pompey, who had an uncommon tenderness for her. She died in childbed about 53 B.C.—Plutarch in Vit. Pomp.

JULIA, the daughter of Augustus. Her beauty and accomplishments were very great, on which account she was her father's favourite, till her licentious conduct alienated his affections. She was successively the wife of Metellus, Agrippa, and Tiberius. Augustus sent her into banishment, and when Tiberius came to the throne he suffered her to perish for want. She had a daughter of the same name who was as vicious as her mother.—Suetonius.

JULIA, the daughter of Titus the Roman emperor, and wife of Sabinus. She committed incest with her brother Domitian, who after her death caused her to be deified.—Suetonius.

JULIA DOMNA, a native of Syria, and the wife of Severus emperor of Rome, was a woman of great accomplishments, and well acquainted with philosophy and the sciences. On the death of Severus in 211, her sons Caracalla and Geta succeeded to the imperial throne, the latter of whom was murdered by his brother in the arms of his mother, who was wounded in defending him. After the death of Caracalla, she is said to have starved herself on finding that Macrinius had assumed the imperial title.—Gibbon's Decline of the Roman Empire.

JULIAN, emperor of Rome, surnamed the Apostate, was the younger son of Julius Constantius, brother of Constantine the Great, and born in 331. In the massacre made of his family by the sons of Constantine, he and his brother Gallus narrowly escaped. The two princes were educated in the principles of christianity under Mardonius, but with different effects, for though Gallus possessed real piety, the attachment of Julian to that religion was merely affected having secretly a strong inclination to paganism. Being sent to Athens at the age of twenty-four, he discovered this disposition by his application to astrology, magic, and other illusions. He attached himself particularly to a philosopher named Maximus, who flattered his ambition by promising him the empire. He commanded with reputation in Gaul in the reign of Constantius, who, jealous of his success and popularity, sent to recall him, which gave so much offence to his soldiers that they proclaimed him emperor; and on the death of Constantius in 361, he found himself in full possession of the imperial throne. He was then in the East where his title was recognized as readily as it had been in the West. He then threw off the mask, publicly renounced christianity, and opened the temples of the gods, in which he offered sacrifices. On this account he is called the Apostate. Soon after his accession he resolved to chastise the Persians, who had frequently made inroads on the empire in the preceding reigns. When he crossed the Tigris he burned his ships that his soldiers might proceed with firmness and resolution. On his return, after marching through Assyria without opposition, his army encountered that of Sapor king of Persia, and Julian was mortally wounded, A. D. 363, aged 32. Theodoret asserts, that he took some of the blood from his wound, and casting it towards heaven, exclaimed, Thou hast conquered, Galilean! a story which is hardly credible. Julian was virtuous and modest in his manners, and liberal in his disposition. He abolished the luxrious and indecent practices of the court of Constantinople, and is averse to public amusements. His story of the Cæsars is the most celebrated his writings, though it is very partial. s works were published by Spanheim at ipsic in 1696, folio.—Eutropius. Gibbon. vier.

JULIAN (St.), archbishop of Toledo, in ain, was a man of learning and piety. He d in 690. His works are, 1. A Treatise inst the Jews; 2. Testamentum xii Pro-etarum; 3. Prognostica futuri Seculi; Historia Wambæ.—Moreri.

JULIANA, an anchoret of Norwich in reign of Edward III. who assumed the ophetical character. She was the author a singular book entitled, "Sixteen Revelations of Divine Love, shewed to a devout vant of our Lord. called Mother Juliana, Anchoret of Norwich, who lived in the s of King Edward III." published by F. . Cressy, 1610. She led a life of remarkable austerity, immuring herself between r walls many years.—Biog. Brit.

ULIUS I. pope, and saint of the Roman ndar, succeeded Mark in 337. He nuously supported the cause of Athana-, and was a man of great learning piety. He died in 352. Some of his ers are extant.

ULIUS II. (Julian de la Rovere), was n at Abizuola about 1440. Sixtus IV. uncle made him cardinal and comman- of his troops, a post which suited his rprising genius. He was chosen pope 503 through simony, yet he published a to prevent similar practices in future. emperor Maximilian, with the kings of nce and Arragon, endeavoured to de- e him, but he frustrated their design, formed an alliance with them, at Cam- y, in 1508. He then demanded of the netians the territories of Faenza and ini, which had been originally taken n them by Alexander VI. and on the h of that pontiff recovered by the Vene-s, who, for refusing Julius's unjust claim, e put under an interdict. At last being ced to the greatest extremities, the state Venice was obliged to submit. The e then turned his armies against France besieged Mirandola, which he entered riumph in 1511: but fortune turning, was driven to Rome, and the council of declared him suspended. He died in 3. He was a man of courage and ad-s, but his manners were dissolute and temper turbulent.

ULIUS III. an Italian, obtained the tiara 550. He presided at the council of nt under Paul III. and on being elect-o the papacy joined the emperor against avius Farnese, duke of Parma. He was n of no firmness and of a narrow mind. died in 1555.—Moreri.

UNCKER (Christian), a celebrated me-ist, was born at Dresden, about 1668. wrote, 1. Schediasma de diariis Erudi-m; 2. Centuria Fœminarum eruditione et scriptis illustrium; 3. Vita Lutheri ex nummis; 4. Theatrum Latinitatis universæ Rehero-Junckerianum; 5. Lineæ eruditionis universæ et Historicæ Philosophicæ; 6. Vita Ludolphi, &c.—Moreri.

JUNCTIN, or Giuntino, (Francis), a mathematician of Florence, was for some time a carmelite, but quitted his order, and going to France abjured the Roman catholic religion. He became a corrector of the press, and afterwards a manufacturer of paper and a banker, by which means he gained a large fortune. He died about 1580. He wrote some arithmetical works; commentaries on the sphere of Sacrobosco; on the Reformation of the Calendar, and on the Age of the Loves of Petrarch.—Bayle.

JUNGERMAN (Godfrey), a learned German, was born at Leipsic. He published a good edition of Julius Pollux, and other works. He died at Hanau, in 1610. —Moreri.

JUNGERMAN (Lewis), brother of the above, was a good botanist, and published Catalogus Plantarum quæ circa Altorfinum nascuntur, 8vo., 1616; Cornucopia Floræ Giessansis, 1623, 4to. He died at Altdorf, in 1653.—Bayle.

JUNGIUS (Joachim), a learned German, was born at Lubeck, in 1359. He studied at Giessen, where he applied to metaphysics and mathematics, and wrote Latin tragedies. He was some time professor of mathematics, but quitted that station and studied physic at Augsburg. He took his doctor's degree at Padua, and died at Hamburg, in 1657.—Moreri.

JUNILIUS (St.), bishop of Africa, in the sixth century. He wrote two books on the divine law by way of dialogue.—Moreri.

JUNIUS (Adrian), a learned Dutchman, was born at Hoorn, in 1511. He studied physic, and took his doctor's degree at Bologna, after which he came to England, where he wrote several works, particularly a Greek and Latin lexicon, which he dedicated to Edward VI. He afterwards returned to his own country, and practised physic. He died at Middleburgh, in 1575. His works are, 1. Commentaries on various Latin Authors; 2. A Poem on the Marriage of Philip II. King of Spain with Mary Queen of England; 3. Translations from the Greek; 4. Critical Animadversions, which Gruter has inserted in his Theatrum Criticum; 5. Phalli ex fungorum descripto; 6. Nomenclator omnium Rerum.—Moreri.

JUNIUS (Francis), professor of divinity at Leyden, was born at Bourges, in 1545. He studied at Geneva, and in 1565 became minister of the Walloon church at Antwerp, and afterwards chaplain to the prince of Orange, at last he was made theological professor at Leyden, where he died of the plague, in 1602. He is chiefly known by a Latin version of the Bible with notes, in which he was assisted by Tremellius.—Melch. Adam. Vit. Theol.

Junius (Francis), son of the preceding, was born at Heidelberg, in 1589. In 1620 he visited England, and was taken into the family of Thomas earl of Arundel. Here he studied the northern languages, in which he acquired an uncommon skill. He died at Windsor, in 1677, and left his MSS. to the public library at Oxford. His works are, 1. Glossarium Gothicum; 2. De pictura veterum, 1637; this book he afterwards published in English; 3. Observationes in Willerami Francicam paraphrasin Cantici Canticorum. His Etymologicon Anglicanum was published in 1743 in folio.—Bayle.

Junius, the assumed name of a political writer, who published letters to celebrated characters, on public affairs, in the Public Advertiser in 1769. For that addressed to the King, the printer and a bookseller were prosecuted, but the author has eluded all enquiry, though various conjectures have been started on the subject. The letters have been ascribed to Mr Burke, who solemnly disclaimed the imputation; Mr. William Gerard Hamilton, commonly called Single-speech Hamilton, was also suspected, but he likewise denied the charge. Other persons to whom they have been imputed are, John Wilkes, Mr. Dunning (afterwards lord Ashburton), Mr. Serjeant Adair, the Rev. J. Rosenhagen, John Roberts esq., Mr. Charles Lloyd, Mr. Samuel Dyer, general Lee, and Hugh Boyd esq. The matter, however, is still hidden in obscurity. The letters are written in a nervous and clear style, but they are sarcastic, intemperate, and oftentimes illiberal and abusive.—Preface to Almon's edition of Junius.

Junta (Philip and Bernard), Italian printers in the 15th and 16th centuries. They printed at Lyons the Letters of Leo X. by Bembo, and the works of Sancti Pagninus. They had also printing offices at Genoa, Venice, and Florence. Philip began printing at Genoa in 1497, and died about 1519. Bernard was either his brother or cousin. Philip printed some excellent editions of Greek authors, as Plutarch, Xenophon, Aristophanes, Sophocles, and Homer.—Moreri.

Junta (Thomas), a Venetian physician, who published in 1554 a learned book on the Battles of the Ancients.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Juret (Francis), a French divine, and canon of Langres, was a native of Dijon, and died in 1626, aged 73. He wrote notes on Symmachus, and poems in the Deliciæ Poetarum Gallorum.—Moreri.

Jurieu (Peter), a French protestant divine, was the son of Daniel Jurieu, pastor of the reformed church at Mer in the diocese of Blois, and born there in 1637. His mother was sister to the famous Peter du Moulin. He received his education partly in Holland, and partly in England, and while here received episcopal ordination. On his return home he became assistant to his father, and professor of divinity and Hebrew at Sedan, where he gained great reputation by his lectures and preaching. He wrote against Bossuet's Exposition of the Doctrine of the Catholic Church, and defended the moral character of his sect against the accusations of Arnauld. On the revocation of the edict of Nantes he retired to Holland, and was chosen pastor of the Walloon church at Rotterdam. He there applied so assiduously to the study of the Revelations, as to fancy he had discovered most of the mysteries therein; and particularly with regard to Antichrist; he addressed William III. king of England, as the instrument appointed to destroy the kingdom of the beast. He embroiled himself in controversy with Bayle and Beauval, who had objected to the extravagance of his opinions. He also offended his best friends by the irascibility of his temper in charging M. Saurin and other eminent persons with heterodoxy. He died at Rotterdam, in 1713. The principal of his works are, the History of Calvinism and Popery, with a Parallel between them; Pastoral Letters; On the Unity of the Church; Treatise of Nature and Grace; Critical History of the Doctrines and Worship of the Church, and those of the Pagans; this is a curious book, and has been translated into English in 2 vols. 8vo.; On the Revelations, and the Accomplishment of the Prophecies.—Moreri. Bayle.

Jurin (James), secretary to the royal society of London, and president of the college of physicians, died in 1750, at a very advanced age. He wrote papers on philosophical and medical subjects in the Philosophical Transactions, and a tract of his on Vision is appended to Smith's Optics. He had a dispute with Michelloti on the motion of currents; with Keill and Senac on the motion of the heart; with Robins upon distinct vision; and with the partisans of Leibnitz on the active forces.—Gen. B. D.

Jussieu (Anthony de), a French botanist and physician, was born at Lyons, in 1686. After travelling through Europe he settled at Paris, where he became a member of the academy of sciences, professor of botany in the royal garden, and secretary to the king. He enriched the memoirs of the academy with several valuable papers the result of observations made in his travels, on botany and mineralogy. He also wrote the appendix to Tournefort, and abridged Barrelier's work upon the Plants of France, Spain, and Italy; he was likewise the author of a Discourse on the Progress of Botany. He died in 1758.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Jussieu (Bernard de), brother of the above, was born at Lyons, in 1699. He distinguished himself as an able physician and botanist. He became professor and demonstrator in the royal garden, and was chosen a member of the academy of sciences and of several foreign societies. He published an edition of Tournefort's History

Plants about Paris, 2 vols. 12mo. and as the author of a book entitled, the Friend Humanity, or the advice of a Good tizen to the Nation. He died in 1777. is brother Joseph was also a member of the ademy of sciences at Paris, and accomnied Condamine to Peru in 1735. He was t only a good naturalist and physician, but excellent engineer, He published a urnal of his Voyages, and died in 1779.—uv. Dict. Hist.

JUSTEL (Christoper), counsellor and setary to the king of France, was born at ris, in 1580. He published, 1. The Code Canons of the Universal Church, and e Councils of Africa, with notes; 2. The enealogical History of the House of Aurgne. He died in 1649.—Moreri.

JUSTEL (Henry), the son of the above, d his successor as counsellor and secrery, was born in 1620. He was a man of rning and liberality, and so partial to gland that he sent his father's MSS. to e university of Oxford, which learned dy complimented him in return with the gree of LL. D. On the revocation of the ict of Nantes, he came to London, and s appointed keeper to the king's library. died in 1693. He published, chiefly m his father's collections, Bibliotheca nonici veteris, 2 vols. folio. He was the thor of some learned works.—Moreri. ood's A. O.

JUSTI (N. de), a German mineralogist, o was educated on charity at Jena in 20. He was there taken notice of by nk, professor of political economy, who rected his studies. Devoting himself th assiduity to the study of mineralogy, acquired such a knowledge therein as be named member of the council of nes. He afterwards became professor political economy and natural history at ttingen, where he died some time since. s books are, 1. a Treatise on Mineralogy, 57. 2. a Treatise on Moneys; for some e remarks in which on the states of Prus- and Wittemberg he was confined a conerable time in the castle of Breslaw; it owever a work of merit, and deserv- attention. 3. Miscellanies on Chemis- and Mineralogy, 2 vols. 4to. He had ojected a German Encyclopædia, and ote some pamphlets against eminent naralists.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

JUSTIN I. emperor of the East. He rose the rank of general from being a prite soldier: before, he was a swineherd. e soldiers of the prætorian band forced n to accept the imperial dignity on the ath of Anastasius in 518. He recalled the hops who had been banished by the ans, and published several severe edicts ainst that sect. Hearing of the destrucn of Antioch by an earthquake, he laid de the imperial robes, clothed himself in kcloth and passed several days in fasting d prayer to avoid the divine judgments. He rebuilt that city and other places which were destroyed by the same calamity. He died A. D. 527 aged 57.—Univ. Hist. Mor

JUSTIN II. was the nephew and successor of Justinian in 565. He caused his cousin Justin to be strangled, and put to death some of his senators from a suspicion of their being disaffected. He made war against Persia, and Chosroes, king of that country, being defeated at the head of a numerous army, was obliged to sue for peace. Justin married Sophia niece of Theodora, wife of the emperor Justinian, a woman of high spirit, who taking the advantage of her husband's weakness, governed the empire in conjunction with Tiberius. Justin, who was of a debauched and indolent character, died in 578.—Ibid.

JUSTIN, a Latin historian of the second century who made an abridgement of the Universal History written by Trogus Pompeius. This work remains, but the original is lost. It is composed in an excellent style, clear and interesting. The best editions are that of Oxford, 8vo. 1705, and that of Barbou, Paris, 1770, 12mo.—Voss. de Hist. Lat.

JUSTIN (St.), a christian philosopher and martyr in the second century, was a native of Sichem or Sichar in Samaria. His parents were heathens, and himself a zealous adherent to the platonic system, but disputing with a christian in 132, he was converted to that faith, though he still continued to wear the pallium, or cloak of the Grecian philosophers. He was an equal honour to christianity by his knowlege, his firmness, and the purity of his life. A persecution breaking out against the christians, under Antoninus, Justin presented to that emperor an admirable apology in their behalf, which had the desired effect. He afterwards addressed another apology to Marcus Aurelius, in which he defended those of his religion against the calumnies of Crescentius, a Cynic philosopher. This last is said to have gained him the crown of martyrdom in 166. Besides these apologies, we have extant of his a dialogue with Trypho a learned Jew; and some other pieces in the Greek language. The best edition of his works is that of Paris, fol. 1636.—Cave. Dupin.

JUSTINIAN I. emperor of Rome, succeeded his uncle Justin I. in 527. He was the protector of christianity, and carried his arms with success against his enemies, for which he was chiefly indebted to his general Belisarius, who also preserved him from a formidable conspiracy. Peace being restored, Justinian set himself to form into a body all the Roman laws, which was executed under the title of Digests or Pandects. After this great work was finished, the laws of modern date were collected into one volume, called the Novellæ. He exerted himself against the ecclesiastical encroachments of popes Sylverius and Vigilius, and died in 565, aged 83. He built many churches particularly the famous Sancta-Sophia at Constantinople, and abolished the consulate.—Univ. Hist. Gibbon.

JUSTINIAN II. was the elder son of Constantine Pogonatus, whom he succeeded in 685. He recovered several provinces from the Saracens, and made an advantageous peace with them, but his exactions, cruelties, and debaucheries, tarnished the glory of his arms. He formed the design of destroying all the inhabitants of Constantinople, which being discovered, the tyrant was deposed in 694, and banished to the Chersonesus. Leo the patrician gained the throne, but he was displaced by Tiberius. About 704 Justinian being aided by the Bulgarians regained his seat, but he was slain with his son Tiberius in 711, by Philippicus Bardanes, his successor.—Ibid.

JUSTINIANI (St. Lawrence), the first patriarch of Venice, was born there of a noble family, in 1381. He obtained the patriarchate in 1451, and died in 1455. He wrote Lignum Vitæ; De Disciplina & Spirituali Perfectione; de Casto Connubio; Fasciculus Amoris; de Triumphali agno Christi; which were printed together in 1 vol. folio, at Lyons, in 1568, and at Venice, in 1755. He was canonized in 1698.—Moreri.

JUSTINIANI (Bernard), nephew of the preceding, was born in 1408. He obtained several honourable employments, and was sent ambassador to Louis XI. of France who conferred on him the honour of knighthood. In 1474 he was made procurator of St. Mark, the second dignity of the republic. He died in 1489. He wrote De Origine urbis Venetiarum, 1492, fol. the Life of his uncle Lawrence the patriarch; a History of Venice in Italy, and other works. —Ibid.

JUSTINIANI (Augustin), bishop of Nebio, in Corsica, was born at Genoa, in 1476. Francis I. of France made him his almoner, and royal professor of Hebrew at Paris. He perished in a shipwreck in sailing from Genoa to Corsica, in 1536. He published, Psalterium Hebræum, Græcum, Arabicum et Chaldæum, cum tribus Latinis Interpretationibus et Glossis, and other works. Bayle. Moreri.

JUSTINIANI (Fabio), bishop of Ajaccio, was born at Genoa, in 1568, and died in 1627. He wrote a Commentary on Tobit, and an Index of all the writers who had written commentaries on the whole or any part of the Bible.—Moreri.

JUVARA (Philip), an Italian architect, was born at Messina, in 1568. He was the disciple of Fontana, and employed by the king of Sardinia to build some fine structures at Turin. In 1734 the royal palace at Madrid being burnt, Philip V. king of Spain, sent for Juvara to erect another more magnificent; he accordingly formed an approved plan, but the commencement of the work being delayed from day to day, it is supposed the architect died of chagrin in 1735.—D'Argenville.

JUVENAL (Decius Junius) a Roman poet, was born at Aquinum, in Italy. He went to Rome when young and was for some time a declaimer, after which he applied himself to writing satires with great success. Domitian sent him into honourable exile by making him governor on the frontiers of Egypt. He died at Rome in the reign of Trajan, A. D. 128. His writings are animated, pointed and humorous, but at the same time highly offensive to decency, and rather tend to encourage than repress licentiousness. The best editions are those of Casaubon, L. Bat 1695, 4to. and Grævius, 8vo. 1684. He has been translated into English by Dryden and others.—Vossius de Poet. Lat.

JUVENAL de Carlencas (Felix de), an ingenious French writer, was born at Pezenas in 1669, and died in 1760. He wrote, 1. The Principles of History. 2. Essays on the History of the Sciences, the Belles Lettres, and the Arts.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

JUVENCUS (Cassius Vectrius Aquilinus), a Latin poet, was born in Spain of an illustrious family in the fourth century. He wrote a poem in four books on the Life of Christ, of which there have been several editions, though it possesses no other merit than the subject.—Moreri.

JUXON (William), archbishop of Canterbury, was born at Chichester, and educated at Merchant Taylors' school, from whence he was removed to St. John's college, Oxford, of which he became fellow in 1598, and in 1621 was elected president. In 1627 he was promoted to the deanry of Worcester; in 1633 appointed clerk of the closet to the king, and the year following nominated to the bishoprick of Hereford, but before consecration he was advanced to the see of London. In 1635 he was appointed lord high treasurer, which excited great indignation against archbishop Laud, as the means of it, but the conduct of bishop Juxon in that dignity was irreproachable. He suffered in the rebellion, the loss not only of his ecclesiastical revenues, but a great part of his temporal estate. In 1648 he attended the king upon the scaffold, after which the regicides caused him to be taken into custody, to make him reveal what his majesty had secretly entrusted to him, but his integrity and prudence were superior to their craft and tyranny. At the Restoration he was made archbishop of Canterbury. He died in 1663, and was buried in St. John's college chapel, Oxford.—Wood. Le Neve Lives of the Archbishops.

K.

KAHLER (John), a Lutheran divine, was born at Wolmar, in the landgravate of esse Cassel, in 1649. He became profess- of poetry, mathematics and theology at inletz, and member of the society at Got- igen. He died in 1729. He wrote seve- l dissertations on theology and philoso- hy, collected into 2 vols. 12mo.—Nouv. ict. Hist.

KAIN (Henry Louis le), a celebrated rench actor, called the Garrick of France, as born at Paris, in 1729. He was origin- ly a cutler for making surgeons' instru- ents, but having a great turn for dramatic presentation, Voltaire took him under s direction. He made his first appear- ce on the stage in 1750, and acquir- a wonderful reputation. He obtained pension, and died in 1778.—Nouv. D. H.

KALE (William), a Dutch painter, was orn in 1630, and died in 1693. He painted old, silver and crystal vases, gems, glasses, d agates, with an extraordinary lustre. -Pilkington.

KALGREEN (N.), a Swedish dramatic, sa- rical, and lyric poet, who wrote an opera, titled Gustavus Vasa. He died in 1793. Nouv. Dict. Hist.

KALRAAT (Barent van), a landscape inter, was born at Dort, in 1650, and died 1721, He painted several fine views of e banks of the Rhine, and adorned his adscapes with figures —Ibid.

KALUBRO (Vincent), a Polish prelate d historian. The chapter of Craco elect- him their bishop, and he founded several w prebends in that and other churches. he cathedral being destroyed by lightning 1218, he retired to a monastery of the or- r of Cistercians, where he wrote his Chro- con Regni Poloniæ in the form of a dia- gue. He died in 1223.—Moreri.

KAM-HI, emperor of China, was the andson of a Tartar prince, who conquer- that country in 1644, and ascended the rone in 1661. He had a great love for e arts and sciences of the Europeans, and erally patronized the missionaries, but ough he was fond of geography and di- cted the construction of maps and charts, would suffer none to laid before him less China was represented therein as the iddle of the world. He died in 1722, ed 71.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

KAMPEN (Jacob van), an historical paint- of Haerlem, was born in 1658. The ures in his pieces were as large as life, ell designed and coloured.—Pilkington.

KANDLER (John Joachim), master-model- in the porcelain manufactory at Meissen, as born in 1706 at Selingstadt in Saxony, d died in 1776. He executed many beau- ul figures particularly of the apostle Paul, e death of St. Xavier, the scourging of our Saviour, the twelve apostles, &c. Au- gustus king of Poland employed him to make an elegant groupe for Louis XV. who liberally rewarded him.—Nouv. Dict.

KANOLD (John), a German physician, who died at Breslaw, in 1729, aged 50. He wrote some works on the plague, and other sub- jects; but he is best known by a curious periodical publication, entitled, Memoirs upon Nature and Art, in German.—Mo- reri.

KANT (Immanuel), a Prussian philoso- pher, was born at Konigsberg, in 1724. His father who was a sadler, descended from a Scotch family, the name of which was spelt Cant, but it was altered by our philosopher to Kant. He received his first education at the charity school of the parish, from whence he was removed to the college Fredericia- num, and in 1740 to the university. On the completion of his studies he became tutor in a clergyman's family, and afterwards in that of a nobleman, on quitting which he returned to the university, and subsisted by teaching private pupils. In 1755 he obtained the degree of M. A. commen- ced public lecturer and obtained a number of scholars. He now became a prolific wri- ter, and it is impossible within these limits to give a list of his publications in natural philosophy, on the Theory of the Winds, Sketch of physical Geography, New Prin- ciples of Motion and Rest; Examination of the Prize Question, Whether the Earth, in turning round its Axis, by which the Succession of Day and Night was produ- ced, had undergone any change since its origin? what were the Causes of it, and how we could be assured of it? and on Volcanoes in the Moon. But it was in metaphysics that he chiefly excelled, and upon which he published a prodigious number of works, which are extremely refined and obscure. His principles made considerable noise in Germany, and though they obtained many followers, were also attacked by several able writers. He died in 1804.—Monthly Mag. May 1805.

KATEB, a Persian poet, who distinguished himself at the court of the sultans of the race of Samanides. He wrote some elegant moral poems.—D'Herbelot.

KAUNITZ-RITBERG (the prince of), an eminent statesman, who died at Vienna, in 1794, aged 84 years, during forty of which he was chancellor and prime minister of Austria. He commenced his political career by an embassy to France, and obtained suc- cessively the confidence of Maria Theresa, Joseph II. and Leopold II. Under his pru- dent administration the cabinet of Vienna obtained a great influence in the other courts of Europe.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

KAY (William), a portrait and historical painter, was born at Breda, in 1520, and died in 1668. His death was occasioned by grief, caused by the duke of Alva's sentencing counts Egmont and Hoorn to death, while the duke was sitting to him for his picture.—De Piles.

KEACH (Benjamin), a baptist teacher, who died at the close of the seventeenth century. He wrote an allegorical piece, entitled, the Travels of True Godliness, in the manner of Bunyan; but his greatest work is a folio volume on the Scripture Metaphors, reprinted in 1777. It exhibits much reading and considerable learning.

KEATE (George), a miscellaneous writer, was born at Trowbridge in Wiltshire, in 1729, and educated at Kingston school, after which he went to Geneva, where he contracted an intimacy with Voltaire. Having completed the tour of Europe, he returned to England, became a student in the Inner Temple, and was called to the bar, but not meeting with much encouragement in the law, he abandoned that profession. His first literary performance was Ancient and Modern Rome, a poem, 1650. His publications after this were very numerous: the principal is an Account of the Pelew islands, which he compiled from the papers of captain Wilson. He died in 1797.—Gent. Mag.

KEATING (Jeffrey), an Irish ecclesiastic of the Roman church, and doctor of divinity, was a native of Tipperary. He wrote a history of the poets of Ireland, and the genealogies of the principal families. He died in 1650.—Gen. Dict.

KEBLE (Joseph), an English lawyer, was the son of Richard Keble, serjeant-at-law, and born in Suffolk, in 1632. He was educated at Oxford, where he took his degree of bachelor of law, and became fellow of All Souls college. Afterwards he settled in Gray's-inn, was called to the bar, and became a bencher. He died in 1710. His works are; An Explanation of the Law against Recusants, 8vo.; An Assistance to Justices of the Peace, folio; The Statutes at Large in paragraphs and sections, &c. folio; Reports in the Court of the King's Bench, 3 vols. folio; two essays, one entitled, Human Nature, or the Creation of Mankind, the other on Human Actions. He also left a number of folio and quarto volumes in MS.—Wood, A. O. Gen. Biog. Dict.

KECKERMAN (Bartholomew), a learned divine of Dantzic, was born in 1541. He became professor of Heidelberg, and of philosophy at Dantzic, where he died in 1608. His works were published at Geneva, in 1614, 2 vols. fol—Moreri.

KEENE (Edmund), an English prelate, was born at Lynn in Norfolk, of which place his father was alderman. He received his education at Caius college, Cambridge, and in 1740 obtained the rectory of Stanhope, in the bishopric of Durham. In 1750 he was chosen master of St. Peter's college, and two years after served the office of vice-chancellor, in which he promoted the regulations for improving the discipline of the university. In 1752 he was made bishop of Chester, from whence he was translated in 1770 to Ely. He obtained an act for selling Ely House, in Holborn, by which that bishoprick was released of a great incumbrance, and considerably enriched. He also nearly rebuilt the palace at Ely. He died in 1781. His brother was several years ambassador to the court of Madrid.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

KEILL (John), a learned mathematician, was born at Edinburgh, in 1671. After taking his degree of M. A. at that university, he followed his tutor Mr. David Gregory, to Oxford, where he entered of Baliol college, and is said to have been the first who taught sir Isaac Newton's principles by experiments. In 1698 he published an Examination of Barnet's Theory of the Earth, to which he subjoined Remarks on Whiston's Theory. The year following he was appointed deputy professor of natural philosophy, and in 1701 he published his Introductio ad veram Physicam, as a preparation for the study of Newton's Principia. In 1708 he defended Newton's claim to the invention of Fluxions, which brought him into a dispute with Leibnitz. In 1709 he was appointed treasurer to the Palatines, and attended them in that capacity to New England. In 1714 he was chosen Savilian professor of astronomy at Oxford, and the year following appointed decypherer to the queen. In 1714 the university conferred on him the degree of M.D. and in 1715 he published an edition of Commandinus's Euclid, with an admirable preface. In 1718 apeared his Introductio ad veram Astronomiam; which treatise he translated into English. He died in 1721.—Biog. Brit. Martin's Biog. Phil.

KEILL (James), younger brother of the preceding, was born in Scotland in 1673. He obtained the degree of M.D. at Cambrige, and settled as a physician at Northampton, where he died of a cancer in his mouth in 1719. His works are: The Anatomy of the Human Body, 8vo.; An Account of Animal Secretion, the Quantity of Blood in the Human Body, and Muscular Motion, 8vo.; Papers in the Philosophical Transactions; and a translation of Lemery's Chemistry, 8vo.—Ibid.

KEITH (James), field-marshal in the Prussian service, was the younger son of George Keith, earl-marshal of Scotland, and born in the county of Kincardine, in 1696. He attached himself to the Pretender in 1715, and was wounded at the battle of Sheriffmuir. He however escaped to Spain with his brother, and became an officer in the Irish brigade, where he served ten years. He afterwards went to Russia, and was made a general. He signalized himself in all the battles between the Russians and Turks, and was the first who ened the breach at the taking of Oxakow. also displayed great military skill against Swedes, and on the restoration of peace s appointed field marshal, and sent on se- al embassies. Conceiving, however, that services had not been compensated, accepted an invitation from the king of ussia, who gave him a considerable pen- n, and made him governor of Berlin, and d-marshal. That monarch also took him o his confidence, and made him the com- nion of his travels. He was killed at the ttle of Hockerchen, in 1758.—Nouv. Dict. ist.

KELLER (James), a German jesuit, was rn at Seckingen, in 1568. He was con- sor to the prince of Bavaria, and the con- nt of the emperor Maximilian. He d at Munich, in 1631. He wrote se- al books under fictitious names. That itled, Mysteria politica, 1625, 4to. itten against France, was censured by Sorbonne, and sentenced to be burnt.— le.

KELLER (John Balthasar), an excellent nder in brass, was a native of Zurich. cast the equestrian statue of Louis XIV. ich was set up at Paris in the Place of is the Great. Keller was made inspect- of the foundry at the arsenal, and died in 2. His brother John James, who died Colmar in 1700, excelled in the same art. Moreri.

KELLEY (Edward), an English alchemist, born at Worcester in 1555. He received education at Oxford, which he quitted hout taking a degree, and rambling ut the country for some offence or other his ears at Lancaster, after which he ame assistant to Dr. Dee whom he ac- panied abroad. The emperor Rodol- is II. was so much deceived by Kelley's tensions to making gold, that he con- ed the honour of knighthood on him. afterwards sent him to prison at Prague, n whence in endeavouring to make his pe by tying the sheets together, he fell broke both his legs, of which he died in 5. He wrote a poem on chemistry, and ther on the philosopher's stone.—Wood, 9.

KELLY (Hugh), an Irish dramatic writer, bred a staymaker which profession he ted in London, and became writer to an rney. Afterwards he turned author h considerable success, and died in 1777. works are, False Delicacy; A Word he Wise; The School for Wives; The nance of an Hour, comedies; Clemen- a tragedy; Thespis, a poem in the ner of Churchill's Rosciad; Memoirs Magdalen, a novel; and the Babbler, ollection of essays.—Life prefixed to his ks.

KEMPIS (Thomas à), a pious writer of 14th century, was born at a village of name, in the diocese of Cologne, in 0. At the age of 19 he entered into a society of canons regular, of mount St. Agnes, near Ywol, where his brother was prior. He led a life of strict devotion, and died in 1471. The Treatise De Imitatione Christi, or of the Imitation of Christ, so universally known under his name, has been variously contested; some asserting it to be his, and others attributing it to Abbot Gerson. The style, however, comports with the acknowledged works of Kempis. —Dupin. Moreri.

KEN (Thomas), an English bishop, was born at Berkhamstead in Hertfordshire, in 1637. He was educated at Winchester school, from whence he removed to New college, Oxford, where he was elected fellow. About 1680 he was appointed chaplain to the princess of Orange, whom he accompanied to Holland. He afterwards went with lord Dartmouth to Tangier, and on his return was made chaplain to Charles II. whom he attended in his last illness, but was hindered from exercising the duties of his function by the Romish priests. That monarch, who had a great regard for him, nominated him to the bishopric of Bath and Wells, which was confirmed by James II. The bishop governed his diocese in an exemplary manner. He opposed the endeavours of James to introduce popery, and was one of the seven bishops sent to the Tower for resisting that monarch's dispensing power. He refused, however, to take the oaths of the Revolution, for which he was deprived. Queen Anne granted him a pension of 200*l.* a year, and he was universally esteemed for his amiable manners and unaffected piety. He died suddenly at the seat of lord Weymouth, in Wiltshire, in 1710. He published some pious manuals; and wrote several hymns; an epic poem entitled, Edmund; and two sermons: published by his nephew Mr. Hawkins, with his life prefixed, in 4 vols. 8vo.—Biog. Brit.

KENDAL (George), a nonconformist divine, was born at Dawlish, in Devonshire, and educated at Exeter college, Oxford. Bishop Brownrigg gave him a prebend in the cathedral of Exeter, and in 1647 he became rector of Blissland, in Cornwall, from whence he removed to London. In 1654 he took his doctor's degree. At the Restoration he recovered his prebend, but lost that and his living in 1662, for nonconformity. He died in 1663. Dr. Kendal wrote, A Vindication of the Doctrine generally received in the Churches concerning God's Intentions of special Grace and Favour to his Elect in the Death of Christ, fol.; the Doctrine of the Perseverance of the Saints, against John Goodwin, folio, &c.—Calamy. Palmer.

KENNEDY (John), a learned physician, was a native of Scotland, and resided at Smyrna some years. He died in 1760. He had a valuable collection of pictures and coins, which after his death was sold by auction. He wrote a dissertation on the Coins of Carausius, which occasioned a controversy between him and Dr. Stukely. He is not to be confounded with John KENNEDY, a divine of the church of England, and rector of Bradley in Derbyshire, who wrote Scripture Chronology, 8vo. 1751; An Examination of the Rev. Mr. Jackson's Chronological Antiquities, 8vo. 1753; and the Doctrine of Commensurability between the Diurnal and Annual Motions Illustrated, 8vo. 1753.—Anecd. of Bowyer.

KENNEDY (James), archbishop of St. Andrews and chancellor of Scotland, was the son of sir William Kennedy by Margaret, daughter of Robert III. king of Scotland, and born in 1404. He was a great encourager of learning, and founded the college of St. Mary, in the university of St. Andrews. He died in 1472.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

KENNET (White), an English prelate, was the son of Basil Kennet, vicar of Postling in Kent, and born at Dover, in 1660, and educated at St. Edmund hall, Oxford, where he distinguished himself by his abilities, and published several pieces, particularly a translation of the Moriæ Encomium of Erasmus. In 1684 he took his degree of M. A. and was presented to the vicarage of Amersden, in Oxfordshire. As he was shooting, the gun burst, by which accident his skull was laid open, so that he was ever after obliged to wear a patch of black velvet. In 1693 he obtained the rectory of Shottesbrook in Berkshire. In 1695 he commenced D. D. and the year following was presented to the living of St. Botolph, Aldgate, being then archdeacon of Lincoln. In 1701 he engaged in the controversy on the rights of convocation against Dr. Atterbury. In 1707 he was made dean of Peterborough, but he was at this time very unpopular, owing to his whig principles, and his opposition to Dr. Sacheverel. Dr. Welton, rector of Whitechapel, presenting an altar-piece, representing the last supper, to his church, caused the figure intended for Judas Iscariot to be drawn like the dean of Peterborough, with a black patch. This giving great offence, the bishop of London ordered it to be taken down. In 1718 he was preferred to the bishopric of Peterborough. He died in 1728. He published a collection of English historians, under the title of the Complete History of England, in 3 vols. folio, the last of which was written by himself. He also wrote the Life of William Somner, the Antiquary, 8vo.; Historical Account of Appropriations; and several sermons and miscellaneous tracts.—Wood's A. O. Biog. Brit.

KENNET (Basil), brother of the above, was born at Postling in Kent, in 1674, and educated at Corpus Christi college, Oxford. In 1696 he published his Romæ Antiquæ Notitia, or the Antiquities of Rome, 8vo. a book of considerable utility. The year following he was chosen fellow of his college, and published the Lives of the Grecian Poets. In 1706 he was appointed chaplain to the English factory at Leghorn, where he ran a great risk of his life from the inquisition. In 1714 he returned to England, and commenced D. D. but he died at the close of the same year. He published sermons, and several translations of foreign writers.—Ibid.

KENNETH II. the 69th king of Scotland, succeeded Alpin his father, in 823. He made war upon the Picts, and subdued their dominions beyond the North, which he divided among his soldiers. He translated the stone chair to Scone, where his successors were crowned, till it was removed to England by Edward I. He died in 854.—Buchanan.

KENNETH III. was the son of Malcolm. He subdued the Britons of Strathcluyd, and was equally successful against the Danes, who had invaded his dominions. But attempting to alter the succession of the crown in favour of his family, the people assassinated him in 994.—Ibid.

KENNICOTT (Benjamin), a learned divine, was born in 1718, at Totness, in Devonshire, of which place his father was parish-clerk. By the liberality of some gentlemen, he was sent to Exeter college, Oxford, where he applied to his studies with such diligence, that while an undergraduate he published two dissertations on the Tree of Life, and Cain and Abel, for which the university presented him his bachelor's degree, without fees, and before he had completed his terms. He next undertook to publish a correct edition of the text of the Hebrew Scriptures, collated from ancient manuscripts. In this great work, for which he was admirably fitted by patience, industry, and learning, he met with extensive encouragement, and many sovereigns and other illustrious personages appeared in his list of subscribers. To enable him to perfect his design, he was made keeper of the Radcliffe library, and canon of Christ church. The first volume he published in 1776, and the last, which is the 8th, in 1780. He died at Oxford, in 1783. After his death appeared his Remarks on certain Passages of the Old Testament.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

KENRICK (William), a miscellaneous writer, was born at Watford, in Hertfordshire, and bred a rule-maker, which profession he abandoned for literature. To improve himself he went to Leyden, and afterwards settled in London, where he published in 1759 Epistles philosophical and moral in verse, a work of little merit. In 1766 appeared his comedy of Falstaff's Wedding, which is an admirable imitation of Shakspeare. He was some time a writer in the Monthly Review, but differing with the proprietors, he set up another Journal opposition to it, called the London Re-

w. He was also editor of the Morning ronicle; but a quarrel with the proprieinduced him to start a paper against it, hout success. He translated Rousseau's ilius and Eloisa, and other works, from French, and published several original ces. He died in 1779.—Biog. Dram.

KENT (William), an English painter and hitect, was a native of Yorkshire, and d to the profession of coach-painting, ich he quitted for the higher branches of art. In 1710 he went to Italy, where became acquainted with the earl of Bur-gton, through whom he gained considere employment, and was appointed prin-al painter and architect to the king. He s however an indifferent painter, though good architect. He was the great im-ver of modern gardening. He died in 8, aged 48.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

KENTIGERN, or St. Mungo, a Scotchman, s the disciple of Palladius in the sixth tury. Camden says he was bishop of sgow, and a member of the university Oxford. He is also said to have founded monastery of St. Asaph.—Moreri.

KENYON (Lloyd, lord), an eminent ge, was born at Gredington, in Flint-re, in 1733, being the eldest son of Lloyd nyon, esq. of Bryno in that county. He eived his education at Ruthin school in nbighshire, after which he was articled
Mr. Tomlinson, an attorney at Nanth, in Cheshire. After serving his clerk-p he became a member of the society of ncoln's Inn, and was called to the bar in
1. Having practised as a conveyancer ne years, his reputation as a sound law-brought him into great notice at the ncery bar; but he does not appear to ve made a conspicuous figure till 1780, en he led the defence, with Mr. Erskine, lord George Gordon. In 1782 Mr. nyon was made attorney general and ef justice of Chester. He was also re-ned to parliament for Hindon in Wilt-re. In 1784 he was appointed master of rolls; and on the resignation of the earl Mansfield in 1788, by the interference of d Thurlow, he was raised to the office chief justice of the king's bench, and ated baron Kenyon. As a judge his dship conducted himself with strict inrity, and though he was occasionally rm, it was never from petulance, but m his ardent love of justice. Lord nyon was a steady friend to the estabed church, correct in his mode of liv-
; and resolutely punished fashionable e whenever it came before him. The ath of his eldest son, a very promising ung man, in a decline, is supposed to ve produced the black jaundice, of which died at Bath, April 2, 1802. He left o sons, George, the present lord, and
hon. Thomas Kenyon.—Gent. Mag. onthly Mag.

KEPLER (John), a famous astronomer, was born at Weil in the duchy of Wirtemberg in 1571. He received his education at Tubingen, and in 1593 was appointed professor of mathematics at Gratz. In 1600 he went to Bohemia on the invitation of Tycho Brahe, by whom he was introduced to the emperor Rudolphus, who appointed him his mathematician.
Kepler completed the tables left unfinished by Tycho, and which he called the Rudol-phine Tables. In 1613 he was at the assembly at Ratisbon, and assisted in the reformation of the calendar. He died there in 1630. He was the author of many works on astronomy, besides his Tables and Ephemerides, as, 1. Physica Celestis, Tradita Commentarius de Motibus Stella Martis; 2. Epitome Astronomiæ Coper-nicanæ; 3. Somnium Astronomicum, de Astronomia Lunari, &c. His son Lewis was a physician at Konigsberg. He published his father's Somnium Astronomicum, and died in 1663.—Bayle. Hutton.

KEPPEL (Augustus viscount), a celebrated English admiral, was the second son of William earl of Albemarle. He accompanied commodore Anson in his voyage round the world, and afterwards raised himself to the first honours of his profession. In 1778 he commanded the channel fleet, and July 12 that year fell in with the French under count d'Orvilliers off Ushant. A partial action ensued, which the English admiral thought to have renewed in the morning, but the enemy had retired. This affair gave great dissatisfaction to the nation, which was aggravated by sir Hugh Palliser, second in command, preferring a charge against admiral Keppel, who was honourably acquitted by a court martial at Portsmouth. Sir Hugh was then tried and censured. In 1782 admiral Keppel was raised to the peerage: he was also at two separate periods first lord of the admiralty. He was a thorough seaman, and a man of great humanity and integrity.
He died in 1786.—Gent. Mag.

KERKHOVE (Joseph van der), an historical painter of Bruges, was born in 1669, and died in 1724. In the town hall of Ostend there is a fine piece by him, representing the council of the gods.—Pilkington.

KERCKRING (Thomas), a learned physician, who was the duke of Tuscany's resident at Hamburgh, and fellow of the royal society of London. He died in 1693. His works are, 1. Spicilegium Anatomicum, 4to.; 2. Anthropogeniæ Ichnographia;
this last is a curious work.—Moreri.

KERGUELIN DE TREMARA (Yves Joseph), a French naval commander, who wrote, 1.
Relation of a Voyage in the North Sea, 1767-8, 1 vol. 4to.; Relation of the Naval Events of the War between France and England, in 1778, &c. He died in 1797.—
Nouv. Dict.

KERI (Francis Borgia), an Hungarian jesuit, who published a History of the Emperors of the East, and another of the Ottoman princes. He was likewise a good astronomer, and made some improvements on the telescope. He died in 1769.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Kerkherdere (John Gerard), historiographer to the emperor Joseph I. was born near Maestricht in 1678, and died in 1738. He wrote in Latin a Commentary on Daniel, and a treatise on the Seat of the Terrestrial Paradise.—Ibid.

Kersey (John), an English mathematician, was born at Bodicot, near Banbury in Oxfordshire, in 1616, and died about 1790. He wrote an excellent work on algebra, in 1 vol. folio, honourably noticed in the Philosophical Transactions. He also published an improved edition of Wingate's Arithmetic; and a Dictionary of Hard Words.—Granger.

Kervillars (John Marin de), a French jesuit, who published a translation of Ovid's Fasti and Elegies. He had also a concern in the Memoirs of de Trevoux. He died in 1745.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Kessel (John van), an eminent painter, was born at Antwerp, in 1626 He was famous as a painter of flowers, birds, and insects, which he executed according to the different seasons of the year. His pieces are very scarce. He was also eminent in portrait painting, and imitated Vandyck. His son Ferdinand painted in the same line, but not with equal ability. He lived in the royal palace at Warsaw, being patronized by John Sobieski. He had a nephew who lived at Antwerp, and painted in the manner of Teniers.—Houbraken.

Ketel (Cornelius), a Dutch painter of history and portrait, who came to England, and painted the picture of queen Elizabeth and the portraits of several of the nobility. After his return to Holland he laid aside his pencils, and painted with the tops of his fingers, and even his toes. He died in 1602. —Granger.

Kett (William), a tanner of Norfolk, who in the reign of Edward VI. excited a revolt against the government. The insurgents, amounting to near twenty thousand, marched to Norwich, which they took, and Kett formed a tribunal under a large oak, called the tree of reformation. They first protested only against inclosures and the exactions of the nobility and gentry, but they afterwards inveighed against innovations in religion, and demanded the restoration of popery. After defeating the marquis of Northampton they wese routed by the earl of Warwick, and Kett with several others were hung upon the tree of reformation in 1549.—Rapin. Camden.

Kettlewell (John), a pious divine, was born at North Allerton, in Yorkshire, in 1653. He was educated at St. Edmund hall, Oxford, and afterwards chosen fellow of Lincoln college, Oxford, where he became an eminent tutor. In 1681 he published his book, entitled, Measures of Christian Obedience, which brought him considerable reputation, and the vicarage of Coleshill, in Warwickshire, was given him by lord Digby. At the Revolution he refused the oaths, and in consequence was deprived of his preferment. He then settled in London, where he was held in great esteem by all good men. He died in 1695. Besides the above he wrote a Help and Exhortation to worthy Communicating, or a Treatise describing the Meaning, worthy Reception, Duty and Benefits, of the Holy Sacrament, 12mo. The Practical Believer 8vo. Of Christian Prudence 8vo. The Duty of Allegiance settled, 8vo. Death made Comfortable, and other pieces; collected into two vols. folio, with his life prefixed.—Biog. Brit.

Keulen (Janssen van), a portrait painter, was born in London of Dutch parents, and before Vandyck came to England, was in great favour with Charles I. Though that great painter supplanted him in his profession, a warm friendship subsisted between them. He died in 1665.—Vertue.

Keysler (John George), a German antiquary, was born at Thornau, in 1689. On coming to England he entered of Edmund hall, Oxford, where he applied to the study of the civil law. On leaving the university he became travelling tutor to some young noblemen, and spent many years in that capacity. He was a fellow of the royal society, and was found dead in his bed in 1743. He wrote an interesting account of his travels, translated into English in 1756. He was also the author of a work entitled, Antiquitates selectæ Septentrionales et Celticæ, and a Dissertation on the Antiquity and Origin of Stonehenge.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Kheraskof (Michael), a Russian poet in the 18th century, who published a poem on the use of science, and an epic, called the Rossiado, the subject of which is the conquest of Casan by Iwan Vasselievitch II. He was vice-president of the college of mines, counsellor of state, and curator of the university of Moscow.—Coxe's Travels.

Khilkof (prince), a Russian nobleman, and ambassador to Charles XII. who threw him into prison when war broke out between the two countries. In this confinement he wrote an abridgment of the Russian History. He died as he was about to be restored to his liberty after an imprisonment of eighteen years. His work was published in 1770, 8vo. by Muller.—Ibid.

Kick (Cornelius), a flower painter of Amsterdam, was born in 1635, and died in 1675. His manner of painting was delicate, and his colouring brilliant, shewing all the freshness of nature.—Houbraken.

Kidder (Richard), a learned prelate, was born in Suffolk, and educated at manuel college, Cambridge, by which society he was presented to a living in Huntingdonshire, from whence he was ejected or nonconformity in 1662, but afterwards e complied, and obtained the rectory of aine in Essex. In 1674 he was presented the living of St. Martin Outwich, London: and in 1689 made dean of Peterborough. On the deprivation of Dr. Ken, ishop of Bath and Wells, for refusing the aths, he was promoted to that see. He as killed in bed with his lady by the fall a stack of chimneys on his palace at Vells, in the great storm Nov. 3, 1703. esides several sermons and religious tracts, published a valuable work, entitled, a emonstration of the Coming of the Mesh, 3 vols. in 8vo. and 1 vol. folio.—Biog. it.

KIEN LONG, emperor of China, who ed at the end of the eighteenth century, ed ninety, having reigned above sixty ars. He wrote some poetical pieces, and nen lord Macartney went thither as ambassador he gave him some of his verses to esent to the king. He favoured the misnaries, and was in all respects a very iable monarch.—Staunton's Embassy to Chi-Nouv. Dict.

KIERINGS (Alexander), a landscape painter of Utrecht, was born in 1590, and died in 46. His views were copied from nature, l he finished them with amazing paice, even the bark and the fibres of the s being distinctly marked.—Pilkington.

KILBYE (Richard), an English divine, was n at Radcliffe in Leicestershire, and beme fellow of Lincoln college, Oxford, in 7. In 1590 he was elected rector of college, and afterwards was made Hew professor, and prebendary of Lincoln. was one of the translators of the present ion of the Bible, and printed some ers. He died in 1620. There was ano- divine of both his names who was mier of Allhallows in Derby, and died in 7. He wrote the Burthen of a loaden science, which book went through se- l editions.—Wood.

KILBURN (Richard), an English topogra-, is supposed to have been a native of t, of which county he wrote a Survey, ished in 1659 in 4to. at which time the or was fifty-four years of age.—Kennet's of Somner.

KILIAN (Cornelius), a native of Brabant, was corrector of the press to Plantin alf a century. He published an Apofor Correctors of the Press, against ors; also Etymologicon Linguæ Teue, and some Latin Poems. He died in .—Bayle.

KILLIGREW (Katherine), the daughter of Anthony Cooke, was born at Giddyin Essex, about 1580. She married sir y Killigrew of Cornwall, and was a of great accomplishments, being mis- of the Hebrew, Greek, and Latin languages. She had also a turn for poetry, and died about 1600.—Ballard's British Ladies.

KILLIGREW (William), a dramatic writer, was the son of sir Robert Killigrew, and born at Hanworth in Middlesex in 1605. He received his education at St. John's college, Oxford, after which he went on his travels. At his return he was made governor of Falmouth and Pendennis castle. For his faithful services to Charles I. he suffered considerably in his estate. At the Restoration he was knighted, and made vice-chamberlain to the king. He died in 1693. Besides the following plays, viz. the Siege of Urbin, Selindra, Ormasdes, or Love and Friendship, he wrote Midnight and Daily Thoughts in prose and verse, 8vo.; the Artless Midnight Thoughts of a Gentleman at Court, 8vo.—Wood, A. O. Biog. Dram.

KILLIGREW (Thomas), brother of the preceding, was born in 1611. He was page to Charles I. and groom of the bedchamber to Charles II. He wrote nine plays, which were collected into a folio volume in 1664. He died in 1682. This is the man who is commonly called king Charles's jester. He had however more wit in conversation than in writing.—Ibid.

KILLIGREW (Henry), brother of the above, was born in 1612, and educated at Christ church, Oxford, where he proceeded doctor in divinity in 1642, in which year he was made prebendary of Westminster. He suffered much for his loyalty in the Rebellion, but at the Restoration recovered his prebend, and was appointed master of the Savoy, and rector of Wheathamstead in Hertfordshire. He wrote the Conspiracy, a tragedy, 1638, 4to.; Pallantus and Eudora, a tragedy, 1652 fol.; and sermons on several occasions. He died about 1690. —Ibid.

KILLIGREW (Anne), a beautiful and accomplished lady, was the daughter of the last-mentioned, and born in Westminster. She received a liberal education, and distinguished herself in painting, and drew the portraits of the duke and duchess of York in a beautiful manner. She was also eminent for her piety, and died of the smallpox in 1685, aged 25. The year after appeared her poems in 4to. with an elegiac ode by Dryden prefixed.—Ibid.

KILWARDEN (Arthur Wolfe, lord), chief justice of the king's bench in Ireland, was born of an obscure family, but educated at Trinity college, Dublin, and in 1766 called to the bar. He was soon appointed king's counsel, and brought into parliament. In 1787 he was made solicitor general, and two years afterwards attorney general. On the death of lord Clonmell he was appointed chief justice of the king's bench, in which dignity he conducted himself with impartiality and moderation. Notwithstanding this he fell a victim to a ferocious mob, who dragged him from his coach, with his nephew, the rev. Richard Wolfe, and barbarously piked them in Thomas-street, Dublin, July 23, 1803. Miss Wolfe, his lordship's daughter, was in the coach, but one of the mob took her under his protection, and conveyed her to a place of safety. —Gent. Mag.

KIMBER (Isaac), a dissenting divine, was born at Wantage in Berkshire, in 1692, and died in London in 1758. He was editor of the London Magazine many years, and wrote, 1. The Life of Oliver Cromwell, 8vo.; 2. The Life of Bishop Beveridge, prefixed to his works; 3. The History of England, 4 vols. 8vo.; 4. Twenty posthumous Sermons, 8vo. &c.

KIMBER (Edward), son of the above, was born in 1719. He was brought up a bookseller, but entered into the army, and served in America with reputation. He succeeded his father as editor of the London Magazine, and compiled the Pocket Peerage of England, Scotland, and Ireland, and a History of England in 10 vols. 8vo. He was also the author of Joe Thompson, a novel, and other works. He died in 1769.

KIMCHI (David), a Jewish rabbi and commentator of the thirteenth century. He was a native of Spain, and had two brothers, Joseph and Moses, both men of learning. David's Commentary on the Old Testament is a work of great value. He was appointed in 1232 to arbitrate the differences between the French and Spanish synagogues respecting the books of Maimonides. His Hebrew grammar was printed at Venice, in 1545, and his Talmudical dictionary in 1506, fol.—Basnage.

KINASTON (Francis), the son of sir Edward Kinaston, was born in Shropshire, and educated at Oriel college, Oxford, but took his degree of M. A. at Cambridge. Being introduced at court, he received the honour of knighthood. He was the first regent of an academy or society called the Musæum Minervæ, the constitutions of which he published in 1636. He translated from English into Latin Chaucer's Troilus and Cressid. He died in 1642.—Wood, A. O.

KING (John), a learned prelate, was born at Wornal, in Buckinghamshire, about 1559, and educated at Westminster school, from whence he removed to Christ church, Oxford. On entering into orders he obtained various preferments, and in 1611 was made bishop of London. He died in 1621. He published letters on Jonah, and several sermons.—Wood. Biog. Brit.

KING (Henry), son of the preceding, was born at Wornal in 1591. He became student of Christ church, Oxford, in 1608, and after obtaining several stations in the church, was made bishop of Chichester in 1641, but suffered considerably in the civil wars. At the Restoration he recovered his bishopric, and died in 1569. His works are, Sermons; Exposition of the Lord's Prayer; A poetical Version of the Psalms of David; Poems in Latin, Greek, and English.—Biog. Brit.

KING (John), second son of the bishop of London, was a student of Christ church, Oxford, public orator of the university, and canon of Christ church and of Windsor. He died in 1639. He wrote Oratio panegyrica de auspicato Caroli principis in regnum Hispanicum adventu; Gratulatio pro Carolo reduce Oxoniensium nomine recitata; Cenotaphium Jacobi, sive laudatio funebris piæ & felicis memor. Jac. Mag. Brit. Reg. and some sermons.—Ibid.

KING (Edward), an ingenious and promising young man, who was fellow of Christ college, Cambridge, in 1633, and was drowned not long after in his passage from Chester to Ireland, which melancholy event occasioned Milton's beautiful poem of Lycidas. Some of Mr. King's poems are in Nichols's collection of the poets.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

KING (William), an ingenious writer, was born in London, in 1663, and educated at Westminster school, from whence he was elected to Christ church, Oxford, of which he became student, and entered on the law line. His first performance was a Vindication of Wickliffe from the aspersions of Varillas. In 1692 he accumulated the degrees of bachelor and doctor in civil law, and the same year was admitted a member of Doctors' Commons. In 1694 he published Animadversions on Lord Molesworth's Account of Denmark, for which he was appointed secretary to the princess Anne. In 1696 he joined in the controversy relative to Phalaris's Epistles, and was rudely handled by Bentley on that occasion. Being more a man of pleasure than business, he involved himself in difficulties, to relieve him from which he was appointed judge to the admiralty at Dublin, commissioner of prizes, and keeper of the records there. He returned from thence not much richer than he went, in 1708. Being a zealous tory he interested himself greatly in the cause of Dr. Sacheverel, and wrote some humorous pamphlets on that occasion. In 1711 he was appointed gazette-writer, but resigned the post in 1712, in which year he died, and was buried in the cloisters of Westminster abbey. He was a writer of considerable humour both in prose and verse. Besides his fugitive pieces, which have been collected into 3 vols. 8vo. he published an Account of the Heathen Gods, 12mo. for the use of Westminster school.—Biog. Brit.

KING (William), an Irish prelate, was born at Antrim, in 1650, and brought up at Trinity college, Dublin. He resisted popery in the reign of James II., for which at the Revolution he was made dean of St. Patrick's, and in 1690 bishop of Derry. The year following he published The State of the Protestants in Ireland, and in 1694 a Discourse concerning the Inventions of Men n the Worship of God, against the Dissent-rs, which brought him into a controversy vith Mr. Boyse. In 1702 appeared his reatest work, on the Origin of Evil, in atin, which was animadverted upon by layle, Leibnitz, and others. In that ear he was promoted to the archbishop-ic of Dublin, where he died in 1729.)r. Edmund Law, bishop of Carlisle, pub-shed a corrected and enlarged edition of is book on the Origin of Evil, in English, vith notes.—Biog. Brit.

KING (Peter), chancellor of England, as born at Exeter, in 1669. His father as a grocer in that city, and intended him r the same business; but a love of learn-g rendered him superior to trade, id he was suffered to follow his inclina-on. Mr. Locke, who was his maternal ncle, left him half his library at his death, hich was of great service to him. By the vice of the same great man he went to eyden; and at his return entered of the ner Temple, where he applied to the law th great assiduity. He also devoted ne time to other studies, particularly eology, and in 1691 published, without name, An Enquiry into the Constitu-n, Discipline, Unity, and Worship of Primitive Church, that flourished with-the first 300 years after Christ, 8vo. is work was well received, and soon ched a second edition. In 1699 he was osen member of parliament for Beeral-n, in Devonshire. In 1702 appeared his tory of the Apostles' Creed, 8vo. It is a k of considerable information, and well itten. In 1708 he was chosen recorder London, and knighted. In 1709 he s appointed one of the managers of house of commons on the trial of Sache-el. At the accession of George I. he s made chief justice of the court of com-n pleas, and in 1725 created lord King, on of Ockham in Surrey, and shortly r was appointed lord chancellor. He gned the seals in 1733, and died the e year, leaving four sons and two ghters.—Biog. Brit.

KING (William), an English civilian, and nious writer, was born at Stepney in 5, and educated at Baliol college, Ox-l. In 1718 he was chosen principal of Mary hall; but, on offering himself a didate to represent the university, he gned that place. Being disappointed vent to Ireland, but how long he re-ed there is not known. While in Ire-he wrote a satirical poem, entitled, Toast. In 1749 he spoke the oration e theatre at Oxford, on the dedication adcliffe's library. Dr. King was a ous tory, and generally considered as fected to the Brunswick family, which ught upon him much abuse. He pub-d several curious tracts of his own, five volumes of South's Sermons. He in 1763.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

KING (sir Edmund), an English physician and chemist. Charles II. used frequently to amuse himself in his laboratory. He attended that monarch in his last illness, and was ordered one thousand pounds, which he never received. In the Philosophical Transactions, are some observations by him on ants, and the animalcula in pepper, also a paper on transfusing blood from a calf to a sheep. The time of his death is not known.—Granger.

KING (Thomas), an eminent comedian, was born in Westminster in 1730. He received a good education, and was intended for trade, which he renounced for the stage before he was twenty. He first rose to fame in Dublin, after which he appeared at Drury-lane to great advantage. The principal character which stamped his reputation was that of Lord Ogleby. In dry sarcastic humour no man excelled him. His performance of Sir Peter Teazle in the School for Scandal was admirable. By an unfortunate propensity to gaming, he lost all that he had acquired in many years. He died in 1805.—Monthly Mag. European Mag.

KING (John Glen), an English divine, and chaplain to the factory at Petersburg, was a native of Norfolk, and educated at Caius college, Cambridge, where he took his degree of D.D. He became medallist to the empress of Russia, and died in 1787. His works are, 1. The Rites and Ceremonies of the Greek Church, containing an Account of its Doctrine, Worship, and Discipline; 2. Observations on the Climate of Russia and the Northern Countries, with a View of the Flying Mountains near Petersburgh; 3. Observations on the Barberini Vase.—Gent. Mag.

KIPPINGIUS (Henry), a learned lutheran, was born at Rostock, and took the degree of M.A. at the university. He was pressed for a soldier, but a Swedish counsellor of state observing him with a Latin book in his hand, took him from the army, made him his librarian, and procured him the place of sub-rector of the university of Bremen. He died in 1678. He wrote Supplement to the History of John Pappus; a Treatise of Roman Antiquities; and another on the Creation.—Moreri.

KIPPIS (Andrew), an English divine and biographical writer, was born at Nottingham in 1727, and educated under Dr. Doddridge, at Northampton. His first settlement, as a minister, was at Boston, in Lincolnshire, in 1746. From thence he removed to Dorking, in Surrey, in 1750, and in 1753 became pastor of a congregation in Princes-street, Westminster. He was a writer in the Monthly Review some time; and in 1761 had a share in a periodical work, called the Library, which failed. Two years afterwards he was chosen philological tutor in the academy for the education of dissenting ministers, supported by the friends of Mr. Coward. In 1773 he published a Vindication of the Protestant dissenting Ministers, with regard to their late Application to Parliament, which brought him into a controversy with dean Tucker. In 1777 he became the editor of the new edition of the Biographia Britannica, in which capacity he greatly distinguished himself. Five volumes of this work were published in his life-time, and the greatest part of the sixth was prepared before his death. In 1788 he published the Life of Captain Cook, in one volume, 4to., and the same year a Life of Dr. Lardner prefixed to his works. Dr. Kippis was also the writer of the History of Knowledge, &c. in the New Annual Register, and a variety of other pieces, particularly sermons and tracts. He received the degree of D. D. from the university of Edinburgh, and was a fellow of the royal and antiquarian societies. He was an intelligent and industrious writer, and his style is pure and perspicuous. He died in 1795, and was interred in the burying-ground of Bunhill-fields.—Necrology.

Kirch (Mary Margaret), a learned woman who distinguished herself by her skill in astronomy, was the daughter of Mathias Winkelman, a lutheran divine, and born near Leipsic, in 1670. She married M. Godfrey Kirch, an able astronomer, who was a native of Luben in Lower Lusatia. Madame Kirch assisted her husband in his astronomical observations, and in the calculation of his Ephemerides. When the king of Prussia founded the academy of sciences at Berlin in 1700, M. Kirch was appointed astronomer, with a pension. There his lady acquired the friendship and admiration of all the learned. In 1702 she discovered a comet, of which her husband published their observations. In 1707 she made a discovery of a remarkable aurora borealis, of which mention was made by the academy of sciences at Paris. Mr. Kirch died in 1710, and the year following his widow published a discourse on the approaching conjunction of Saturn, Jupiter, &c. She died at Berlin in 1720. Her son Christian Frederick was astronomer to the academy of sciences at Berlin, and acquired great reputation by his observations. He died in 1740, aged 46.—Moreri. Nouv. Dict.

Kircher (Athanasius), a learned jesuit, was born at Fulde, in Germany, in 1601. He settled at the Jesuits' college at Avignon about 1635, and was called from thence to Rome to teach the mathematics, where he died in 1680. His works evince a great extent and depth of learning: the principal are, 1. Œdipus Ægyptiacus: hoc est, Universalis Hieroglyphicæ veterum doctrinæ temporum injuria abolitæ instauratio, 1652, 4 vols. folio; 2. Ars Magnesia; 3. Lingua Ægyptiaca restituta; 4. Mundus Subterraneus, in quo universæ naturæ majestas et divitiæ demonstrantur; 5. Organon Mathematicum ad disciplinas mathematicas facili methodo addiscendas.—Niceron.

Kircher (Conrad), a protestant divine of Augsburg, who published a Greek Concordance of the Old Testament in 1602. He has inserted the Hebrew words alphabetically, and under them the corresponding Greek words.—Moreri.

Kirchman (John), a learned German was born at Lubec, in 1575. He studied at various universities, after which he became tutor, and in 1613 rector, of the college at Lubec. He died in 1643. His principal works are, 1. De Funeribus Romanorum; 2. De Annulis.—Bayle.

Kirchman (N.), professor of philosophy at Petersburg, was celebrated by his electrical experiments, and particularly the manner of his death. Being engaged in attracting, by his apparatus, the electric fluid from the clouds, a ball of fire struck him on the head and killed him on the spot August 6, 1753.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Kirchmayer (George Gasper), professor of logic at Wittemberg, who died in 170[illegible] aged 65. He published commentaries on Tacitus, Cornelius Nepos, Cicero. Pliny and Sallust; also Latin poems, and dissertations on different subjects.—Moreri.

Kirk (colonel), an English officer, notorious for his brutality. Being sent against the followers of the duke of Monmouth in 1685, he committed the most inhuman barbarities in the west of England. But the story related of him by Pomfret in his poem of Cruelty and Lust does not appear to be well authenticated. James II. stooped so low as to solicit this butcher to turn Catholic, but Kirk roughly replied "that when he was at Tangiers he had promised the dey that if he ever changed his religion, he would turn mahometan." He afterwards served in the army of king William, and died at the close of the 17th century.

Kirkland (Thomas), an eminent physician, and member of the royal medical society at Edinburgh, and of the medical society at London. He died at Ashby de la Zouch, in Leicestershire, in 1798, aged [illegible]. He was ardent in the cultivation of medical science, and a successful practitioner. He published, An Enquiry into the State of Medical Surgery, 2 vols. 8vo.; Observations on Pott's Remarks on Fracture; a Treatise on Child-bed Fevers, 8vo.; Thoughts on Amputation, 8vo.; and a Commentary on Apoplectic and Paralytic affections, 8vo.—Gent. Mag.

Kirstenius (Peter), an eminent physician, and professor of medicine at Upsal in Sweden, was born at Breslaw, in Silesia, in 1577. He was well skilled in Arabic, and understood twenty-five other languages. He died in 1640. His principal works are, 1. Grammatica Arabica, 1608; 2. [illegible] quatuor evangelistarum ex antiquissimo dice MS. Arabico erutæ, 1609, folio. He s not to be confounded with George KIRSENIUS, a native of Stettin, in Pomerania, who was physician to Christina, queen of weden, and died in 1660, aged 48. He as an excellent botanist, and published Disquisitiones philologicæ, 4to.: Adversaria t Animadversiones in Joannis Agricolæ ommentaria in Pappium, et Chirurgiam arvam, 4to.—Bayle. Moreri.

KLEBER (J. B.), a French general, was orn at Strasburg in 1750. He was bred an rchitect, and sent to Paris to improve himelf under the celebrated Chalgrin. Being a coffee-house where some strangers ere insulted, he took their part with so uch spirit that they prevailed on him to ccompany them to Munich, where Kaunitz, n of the Austrian minister, gave him a utenancy in his regiment. After eight ars service he returned to his own country, d became inspector of public buildings Upper Alsace. The revolution in France kindled his military ardour, and he obined a commission in that service. He played great skill and bravery at the ge of Mayence, after which he was emoyed in La Vendee, but the sanguinary enes there so disgusted him that he obned his recall, and was engaged in the rth, where he defeated the Austrians, ok Mons, and drove the enemy from ouvain. He also captured Maestricht, d contributed to the taking of Dusselrf and Frankfort, and to the victory of tzbach. Discontented with the directo- he left the army and returned to Paris, ere he led a private life, writing his Miry Memoirs, till Buonaparte being apnted general of the army of Egypt chose eber as his companion. At the siege of exandria, he was wounded in the head ile scaling the ramparts, and did not re- till he received a second wound. He eated the Turks in several actions, and onaparte on quitting Egypt left Kleber the chief command. Soon afterwards signed the treaty of El-Arish with sir ney Smith, by which the French agreed eave Egypt, but it was annulled by the ish government, and hostilities were ewed Kleber, though greatly reduced, osed to his unfavourable circumstances etermined mind, and defeated the Turks he obelisk of Heliopolis. He next took ro by storm, and formed an alliance Murat Bey; but he was assassinated Turk named Soljman, who gave him stabs with a dagger, in 1800.—Nouv. Hist.

LEIST (Ewald-Christian de), a Prussian er and poet, was born at Zeblin, in Pomania, in 1715. He was major of the reent of Haussen, and died of the wounds eceived in the battle of Kunnersdorff, ght between the Russians and Prussians 759. He wrote Idylls in the manner of ner, which possess great simplicity and neatness. He was also the author of moral treatises; and Reflections on the Art of War, printed in 1759.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

KLINGSTADT, a painter, was born at Riga, in Livonia, in 1657, and died at Paris, in 1734. He excelled in miniature painting, particularly in pictures on snuff-boxes, for which he had extravagant prices.—Pilk.

KLOCKER (David), an historical and portrait painter, was born at Hamburg, in 1629. He travelled to Italy for improvement, after which he settled at Stockholm, where he was patronised by the king, so that few of his paintings are to be seen out of Sweden. He died in 1698.—Ibid.

KNAPTON (George), an English portrait painter in crayons, was the scholar of Richardson, and surveyor and keeper of the king's pictures. He died at Kensington in 1778, aged 80.—Ibid.

KNELLER (sir Godfrey), an eminent painter, was born at Lubeck, in 1648, of a noble family, and educated at Leyden for the military profession, but having a strong inclination to drawing he resolved to apply himself to painting. He studied first under Rembrandt, and afterwards went to Rome, where he greatly improved himself, and then visited England, where he soon acquired unrivalled distinction as a portrait painter. King William conferred on him the honour of knighthood, and the university of Oxford the degree of LL.D. He painted a prodigious number of portraits of illustrious personages, and to a striking likeness he always added grace and elegance in his figures. He was created a baronet by Geo. I. and the emperor Leopold gave him a patent of nobility. He died in 1723.—Walpole. Gen. Biog. Dict.

KNIGHT (Samuel), a learned English divine, was born in London, and educated at St. Paul's school, from whence he removed to Trinity college, Cambridge. He obtained several church preferments, and was chaplain to George II. Dr. Knight wrote the lives of Dr. Colet and Erasmus, both in 8vo. and died in 1746.—Anecd. of Bowyer.

KNOLLES (Richard), an English historian, was born in Northamptonshire. In 1564, he became fellow of Lincoln college, Oxford, and afterwards master of the grammar school at Sandwich, in Kent, where he died in 1610. He wrote the History of the Turks, folio, 1610. Of this book there have been several editions and continuations, particularly by Ricaut. Knolles also wrote the Lives and Conquests of the Ottoman Kings; a Discourse of the Greatness of the Turkish Empire: and a Compendium of Latin, Greek, and Hebrew Grammar.—Wood.

KNOLLES (sir Robert), an English commander in the reign of Edward III. was of low origin in Cheshire, but being of an enterprising mind, obtained the rank of general, and the order of knighthood. His name was formidable in France, where he took several places. He was made grand seneschal of Guienne, and by his prudence quelled an insurrection in that province. At the close of life he retired to his estate in Kent, where he built Rochester bridge. He died in 1407, aged 90.—Rapin. Moreri.

KNOLLIS (Francis), an English statesman, was born at Grays, in Oxfordshire, and after receiving a university education, he went to court, and became a zealous friend to the Reformation in the reign of Edward VI. at whose death he went abroad. On the accession of Elizabeth he returned, and was made a privy-counsellor and vice-chamberlain of the household. He was also employed in several important matters of state. He was one of the commissioners who sat in judgment on Mary queen of Scots; was appointed treasurer of the royal household, and knight of the garter. He died in 1596. Sir Francis wrote a Treatise against the Usurpation of Papal Bishops, printed in 1608, 8vo.; a General Survey of the Isle of Wight. This last was never printed.—Wood, A. O.

KNORR VON ROSENROT (Christian), a learned German, who passes for the author of a curious and scarce book, entitled, Kabbala denudata, seu doctrina Hebræorum transcendentalis, &c.; opus antiquissimæ philosophiæ barbaricæ, translatum ex Hebræo, Sultzbach, 1677, and Frankfort, 3 vols. fol. 1684. He died in 1689, aged 53.—Nouv. Dict.

KNOTT (Edward), an English jesuit, whose real name was Mathias Wilson. He was born in Northumberland, in 1580, and entered among the jesuits in 1606. He taught divinity in the English college at Rome, and was afterwards appointed provincial of his order in England. He died at London, in 1656. Knott was the antagonist of Chillingworth, and occasioned him to write his Religion of Protestants.—Bayle. Alegambe. Bibl. Scrip. Soc. Jes.

KNOWLER (William), a learned English divine, who translated Chrysostom's Commentary on St. Paul's Epistle to the Galatians. He died in 1767, aged 68.—Anecd. of Bowyer.

KNOWLES (Thomas), an English divine, was a native of Ely, and after receiving his education at the grammar school there, was removed to Pembroke hall, Cambridge, of which he became fellow. He obtained the lecturership of Bury St. Edmunds, and a prebend in Ely cathedral. He died at Bury, in 1802. His works are: 1. The Scripture Doctrine of the Existence and Attributes of God, in twelve Sermons, 8vo.; 2. Answer to Bishop Clayton's Essay on Spirit, for which archbishop Secker gave him the degree of D.D.; 3. Lord Hervey's and Dr. Middleton's Letters on the Roman Senate: 4. Observations on the Tithe Bill; 5. Dialogue on the Test Act; 6. Primitive Christianity, in defence of the doctrine of the Trinity; 7. Observations on the divine Mission of Moses; 8. Advice to a Young Clergyman; 9. The Passion, a Sermon; 10. On Charity Schools, Sunday Schools, and a discourse on Confirmation.—Monthly Mag.

KNOWLTON (Thomas), an English botanist, who was gardener to Dr. Sherard, and afterwards to the earl of Burlington, at Lanesborough, in Yorkshire. He died in 1782, at the age of 90. Mr. Knowlton discovered that singular production, the globe conferva, or moor balls (conferva Ægagropila, Lin.), which he first found in Wallengfen mere. Some extracts of letters by him to Mr. Catesby are in the Philosophical Transactions, one concerning the situation of the ancient town of Delgovicia, and of two men of extraordinary bulk and weight, and another giving an account of two extraordinary deers' horns found in Yorkshire. —Pulteney's Sketches of Botany.

KNOX (John), the Scotch reformer, was born at Giffard, in East Lothian, of an ancient family, in 1504. He received his education at St. Andrews, under the celebrated John Major, and entered into priest's orders, but the writings of St. Augustine and the conversation of a monk are said to have occasioned his renunciation of popery. Being accused of heresy to cardinal Beaton, he addressed to him a confession of faith, which was condemned. In 1548 he went to France, and soon after landed in England, where he was well received, and made chaplain to Edward VI. who offered him a bishopric, which he declined, being averse to episcopacy and the common prayer. In the reign of Mary he went to Frankfort, where he occasioned a schism amongst the English exiles by his opposition to the liturgy. Being accused to the emperor as a seditious person, he retired to Geneva, where he was greatly esteemed by Calvin, to whose doctrines he was zealously attached. He there wrote his Blast of a Trumpet against Female Government, which contains very pernicious principles. In 1559 he returned to his native country, and commenced his ministerial office at Edinburgh by violent invectives against the queen and clergy. His sermons produced a general commotion, and the cathedrals and parish churches were not only deprived of their ornaments, but reduced almost to ruins. This furious zealot wrote the History of the Reformation in Scotland, in which he defended all the atrocious actions which were committed there, particularly the murder of cardinal Beaton. Knox died at Edinburgh in 1572, and was buried with great ceremony.—Biog. Brit.

KNOX (John), a bookseller of London, who wrote a Systematic View of Scotland, and planned a herring-fishery and settlement on the north-east coast of that country. He died in 1790.—Gen. Biog. Brit.

KNUPPER (Nicholas), an eminent painter, was born at Leipsic, in 1603, and died in

50. He excelled in painting battle ces and conversations.—Pilkington.

KNUTZEN (Matthias), a famous atheist, s born in Holstein. He publicly defended eism, and took journeys to make prose- s. His followers were called conscien- ies, because they held that there is no er deity than conscience. He died at close of the seventeenth century. He te a letter and two dialogues in defence his principles.—Moreri.

KNUTZEN (Martin), professor of philo- hy at Konigsburg, was born in 1713, died in 1751. He wrote an able de- e of christianity.—Nouv. Dict.

KNYGHTON (Henry), an English ecclesi- c and historian, who wrote a Chronicle he English History from 959 to 1395, a History of the Deposition of Richard They are in the collection of English orians, printed in 1652. Knyghton was non regular at Leicester.—Pits.

OEBERGER (Wenceslaus), an historical ter, was a native of Antwerp. In the rch of Notre Dame, at Antwerp, is a ure of his representing the martyrdom t. Sebastian, which is beheld with plea- by every lover of the art. He died in , aged 70.—Houbraken.

ŒMPFER (Engelbert), a German physi- and naturalist, was born in Westphalia, 651. He became secretary of the em- y sent from Sweden to Persia in 1683, which journey he had ample opportu- s of gratifying his curiosity; and when ambassador returned, Kœmpfer re- ed as surgeon to the Dutch East India . In this capacity he visited various ds, particularly Japan, of which he te an excellent account. He returned urope in 1693, and settled in his own try, where he died in 1716. Sir Hans ne purchased of his executors the ma- ripts and drawings of Kœmpfer. His ry of Japan was published at London 727, in 2 vols. folio. He was also the or of a work, entitled, Amœnitates ex- , 1712.—Niceron. Moreri.

OENIG (Daniel), a Swiss, who died at erdam, aged 22, of the ill usage he met from the populace of Franeker, who ok him for a French spy. He trans- Arbuthnot's Tables of Coins into La- rinted at Utrecht, in 1756.—Nouv. Dict.

OENIG (Samuel), brother of the prece- , was professor of philosophy and law at eker, and librarian to the prince of ge. He was a great mathematician, had a dispute with Maupertuis. He in 1757.—Ibid.

OERTEN (Joanna), an ingenious wo- , was born at Amsterdam, in 1650. She a fine taste for drawing in water-co- and embroidery. She also modelled ax, and made artificial ornaments and ers; but her principal excellence was tting figures out of paper with scissars, and her portraits and landscapes in this way were so much talked of that foreigners visited Amsterdam to see them, among whom was Peter the Great of Russia. She made a magnificent work for the consort of the emperor Leopold, consisting of trees, arms, eagles, and crowns, for which she received above 4000 guilders. She also executed the portrait of that emperor. She died in 1715. —Houbraken.

KOETS (Roelof), an eminent portrait painter, was born at Zwoll, in 1655. He was distinguished by several princes, particularly William III. of England, and it is said he painted 5000 portraits, all well finished. He died in 1725.—Pilkington.

KONIG (George Matthias), a learned German, was born at Altdorf in Franconia, in which university he became professor of poetry and Greek, and library-keeper. He died in 1699, aged 88. His principal work is a Biographical Dictionary in Latin, printed in 1678, 4to.—Niceron.

KONIG (Emanuel), a physician, and professor at Basle, in Switzerland, where he was born in 1658. He was highly esteemed as a learned man, and so eminent in his profession as to be called another Avicenna. He died in 1731. His works are, Regnum vegetabile & animale; Regnum minerale; Scholia in Observationes Chirurgicas; Augmentum Hippocratis Helvetici; Thesaurus remediorum; De triplici regno; Observationes Miscellaneæ, Medicæ, Physicæ, Chymicæ, &c.—Moreri.

KORNMANN (Henry), a German lawyer of the 17th century, who published some curious works, as, 1. De Miraculis Vivorum; 2. De Miraculis Mortuorum; 3. De Virginitatis Jure; 4. De Lyra Amoris.—Bayle.

KORTHOLT (Christian), professor of divinity at Kiel, in Holstein, was born in 1633. After studying at various universities, he became Greek professor at Rostock, and professor of divinity and ecclesiastical antiquities at his native place. He died in 1694. He wrote de Veracitate & Taciturnitate; de Natura Philosophiæ ejusque in Theologia usu; and a celebrated work on Christ as God Man.—Bayle.

KORTHOLT (Christian), grandson of the last-mentioned, was professor of divinity at Gottingen. He wrote many works, and edited the Epistles of Leibnitz in 5 vols. He died in 1751.—Nouv. Dict.

KOTTER (Christopher), a fanatic, whose visions are in a book printed at Amsterdam in 1657, entitled, Lux in Tenebris. He prophesied terrible judgments about to fall upon Europe, and he formed a close friendship with Comenius. He was pilloried in Silesia, and banished. He died in 1647.—Bayle.

KOUCK (Peter), a Dutch painter, was born in 1500. He visited Constantinople, and drew some fine views in the neighbourhood of that city, some of which have been engraved. He settled at Antwerp, and became principal painter to Charles V. He died in 1550.—De Piles.

KOULI-KHAN (Thamas), or Nadir Schah, was born in the province of Khorasan, and his father was chief of a branch of the Afghans, which rank descended to Nadir when he was a minor, but his uncle usurped the government. On this Nadir entered into the service of the Beglerbeg, governor of Muschada, in Khorasan, who appointed him to command an army sent against the Tartars. Nadir gained a complete victory with an inferior force, and took the Tartar general prisoner. The Beglerbeg at first treated Nadir with great distinction, but being jealous of his aspiring spirit, he refused him the rank of lieutenant-general which he had promised him; and when Nadir complained of his breach of faith, he caused him to be bastinadoed. Exasperated at this ungrateful and dishonourable treatment, he joined a banditti of robbers. With this troop, consisting of five hundred well mounted men, he committed great ravages. The Afghans having made themselves masters of Ispahan, and the Turks and Muscovites ravaging other parts of Persia, Schah Thamas applied to Nadir for his assistance. He accordingly entered into the service of the Schah, but one of his first actions was to murder his uncle who had usurped his title. He distinguished himself against the Turks, whom he defeated in several actions, for which he was made a general, and the Schah conferred upon him the title of Thamas Kouli, or the slave of Thamas; he was also ennobled with the title of Khan. Notwithstanding these distinctions, he deposed Thamas, and placed a son of that prince on the throne, to whom he became regent. In 1735 he gained the battle of Erivan, in which the Turks lost above 50,000 men. After this he assumed the royal title, and was acknowledged by the grandees of the empire. The year following he took Candahar, and in 1739 conquered the Mogul empire, making himself master of Delhi, where he acquired immense riches. He then assumed the title of empire of the Indies; but disgraced himself by ordering a massacre of the inhabitants of Delhi, in revenge for an insult offered to some of his troops. The cruelties and tyranny of Kouli-Khan at length excited general hatred, and a conspiracy being formed by some Persian officers, he was assassinated in 1747.—Life by Sir W. Jones.

KRACHENINNIKOW (Stephen), a Russian naturalist, was born in 1713. He was educated in the academy of Petersburg, and when young went to Kamschatka to make researches. He returned in 1743 with a number of observations made in ten years travels. The academy nominated him an associate, and in 1753 he was made professor of botany and natural history. He died in 1755. He wrote an account of his travels and discoveries, in Chappe d'Auteroche's Account of Siberia.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

KRANTZ (Albert), an historian and divine, was a native of Hamburgh, and rector of the university of Rostock; he also became dean of the cathedral in his native city, where he died in 1517. He wrote an ecclesiastical history under the title of Metropolis; a History of the Saxons; also of the Vandals; a Chronicle of Sweden, Denmark, and Norway. He was likewise the author of a small book, de Officio Missæ, printed at Rostock in 1505.—Moreri.

KRAUSE (Francis), an historical painter, was born at Augsburgh in 1706. He was a disciple of Piazetta, who often mistook the works of Krause for his own. He resided in France several years, but died poor in 1754.—D'Argenville.

KRESA (father), a learned ecclesiastic and mathematician, was a native of Moravia, and became confessor to the king and queen of Bohemia, where he died in 1715, aged 67. Besides his native tongue he understood Hebrew, Latin, Greek, French, Italian, Spanish, and Portuguese. He wrote Analysis speciosa Trigonometriæ sphæricæ, &c.—Moreri.

KRUGHER (John Christian) a German author and actor, who died at Hamburgh in 1750, aged 28. He wrote poems and comedies, and translated into German the Theatre of Marivaux.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

KUHLMAN (Quirinus), a German fanatic, was a native of Silesia, and a man of learning but a violent sickness disordered his brain, and he pretended to be a prophet. The writings of Behmen added fuel to the fire, and he had no doubt of being inspired. He published several visions which he pretended to have received, and was at last burnt as a heretic in Muscovy, in 1689.—Bayle.

KUHNIUS (Joachim), professor of Greek and Hebrew at Strasburgh, was a native of Pomerania, and distinguished himself by editions of Ælian's Various History, Pausanias's Description of Greece, and some original pieces of his own. He died in 169[illegible] aged 59.—Niceron.

KUIC (John van), an historical and portrait painter of Dort, was born in 153[illegible]. Having given offence to the jesuits, he was accused of being a heretic, and burnt in 1572.—Houbraken.

KUNCKEL (John), a German chemist, who died in 1702, aged 72. He published at London, Observationes Chemicæ, 167[illegible] 12mo. Kunckel discovered the phosphorus of urine, and made many other improvements in chemistry.—Moreri.

KUPIESKI (John), a Bohemian painter, was born in 1667. After learning the rudiments of his art in his own country, he went to Italy, where he gained a great reputation. He was employed by the emp[illegible] or Charles III. the czar Peter, and other illustrious personages.—Pilkington.

Kuster (Ludolph), a learned critic, was born at Blomberg in Westphalia in 1670. He studied at Berlin, and afterwards travelled into foreign countries, particularly England, where he completed his edition of Suidas, printed at Cambridge in 1705, 3 vols. folio, and for which that university conferred on him his doctor's degree. From hence he went to Berlin, where he became professor and librarian to the king. He did not however long retain these honours, but went to Amsterdam, where he published Jamblichus's Life of Pythagoras, the works of Aristophanes, and an edition of Mill's Greek Testament. In 1713 he went to Paris, and abjured the protestant religion, and obtained a pension. He died in 1716. Besides the above he published Historia Critica Homeri; Bibliotheca nova rum librorum ab 1697 usque 1699, 5 vols.; De vero usu Verborum mediorum apud Græcos, &c.—Niceron. Moreri.

Kuyp (Jacob), a celebrated landscape painter, who founded the academy of painting at Dort, in 1643. He copied after nature with great exactness. His son Albert was also an eminent artist, and excelled his father both in variety and the style of his painting.—Houbraken.

Kyd (Thomas), an English writer in the reign of Elizabeth, who published in 1595, a play called Pompey the Great, taken from the French of Garnier.—Biog. Dram.

Kydermyster (Richard), a native of Worcester, and abbot of a monastery of benedictines at Winchcombe, in Gloucestershire, of which abbey he wrote the history; also some pieces against the Reformation. He died in 1531.—Wood, A. O.

Kynaston (John), an English divine, was born at Chester, in 1728, and educated at Brasenose college, Oxford, of which he was chosen fellow in 1751. He wrote De Impietate C. Cornelio Tacito falso objectata; Oratio habita in sacello Collegii Æneï Nasi, Oxon. 1761. He died in 1783.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Kynwelmarsh (Francis), an Essex gentleman, and a member of Gray's inn in the 16th century. He was a friend of Gascoigne, with whom he was concerned in translating Euripides's Tragedy of Jocasta. He and his brother Anthony were accounted good poets, and some of their pieces are in the collection called the Paradise of dainty Devises, 1576.—Theat. Poet. Angl.

Kyrle (John), a benevolent Englishman, was born at Ross, in Herefordshire. Though he had only an estate of five hundred pounds a year, he bestowed large sums in the course of his life in charity, and built a church, but towards this last good work he obtained subscriptions from other pious and charitable persons. On all accounts, however, he deserved the fine eulogium bestowed upon him by Mr. Pope, who emphatically calls him the Man of Ross.—Europ. Mag. Gen. B. D.

L.

Labadie (John), a famous enthusiast, was born at Bourg, in Guienne, in 1610. He received his education among the jesuits, and was admitted a member of that order, which, however, he quitted, and became an itinerant preacher. The austerity of his manners, his zeal, and affected piety, procured him many admirers, particularly at Amiens, where he obtained a canonry, but being detected in some criminal intrigues, the bishop ordered him to be put under arrest. Labadie, however, escaped to Toulouse, and became director of a convent of nuns, among whom he introduced a new rule, and the notions of the quietists, with some additions of his own, viz. that the Scriptures are not necessary to salvation; that outward worship is of no use, but that all prayer should be mental; and that there are two churches, that of Christians in degeneracy, and the other regenerate, or Labadists, as his followers were called. He renounced the Romish religion at Montauban, in 1650, and after exercising the ministry there some time he went to Geneva, from whence being expelled he removed to Middleburg, where he gained many followers, among whom was the famous Anna Maria Schurman. Labadie sent disciples to propagate his doctrines, and to gather contributions, in different parts of Holland, on which account he was obliged to withdraw to Erfurt, and from thence to Altona, where he died in 1674. His works, which are full of mysticism, are now disregarded.—Bayle. Moreri.

Labat (John Baptist), a dominican, who was professor of philosophy at Nancy, and sent by his superiors to America as a missionary in 1693. He returned to France in 1705, and died at Paris, in 1738. His works are, Voyage to the American islands, 8 vols. 12mo.; Travels in Spain and Italy, 8 vols; New relation of Western Africa, 5 vols.; Voyages of the Chevalier Merchais to Guinea, &c.; Historical Relation of Western Æthiopia; Memoirs of Chevalier d'Arvieux.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Labbe (Philip), a jesuit, was born at Bourges in 1607, and died at Paris, in 1667. He was a man of great learning, and of prodigious memory. His principal works are, 1. De Byzantinæ Historiæ Scriptoribus, fol.; 2. Nova Bibliotheca Manuscriptorum, 2 vols. fol.; 3. Bibliotheca Biblicarum, fol. 4. Concordia Chronologica, 5 vols. fol.;

5. Le Chronologue François, 6 vols. 12mo.; 6. Concordia Sacræ et Profanæ Chronologiæ ab orbe condito ad annum Christi, 12mo.; 7. Bibliotheca Anti-Janseniana, 4to.; 8. Notitia dignitatum omnium Imperii Romani, 12mo.; 9. De Scriptoribus Ecclesiasticis dissertatio, 2 vols. 8vo.; 10. Conciliorum Collectio maxima, 17 vols. fol. 11. Lives of Jesuits who have distinguished themselves in the world of letters. He also wrote some books on grammar.—Moreri.

Labbe (Louisa-Charly), a French poetess, surnamed the fair rope-maker, on account of her marriage with a manufacturer of cables at Lyons, who left her at his death a large fortune. Her first passion was that of arms, and she distinguished herself in a masculine dress at the siege of Perpignan. She had a taste for literature, and her library was enriched with the best writers, French, Italian, and Spanish; but her fine qualities were tarnished by a libertinism which equalled that of Lais. Her poems were printed at Lyons, in 1555, and again in 1762, in 12mo. She died in 1566, aged 40. —Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Labeo (Quintus Fabius), a Roman consul, B.C. 184. He was a soldier, and a man of liberality and talents, and is said to have assisted Terence in writing some of his plays.—Livy. Moreri.

Labeo (Antistius), a Roman lawyer, who refused the consular dignity when offered him by Augustus, whose projects he opposed. He composed several works which are lost. His father was one of the conspirators who assassinated Cæsar; and was killed at the battle of Philippi. There was another Labeo who was tribune of the people, B. C. 184. He caused the censor Metellus to be thrown from the Tarpeian rock.—Ibid.

Laberius (Decimus), a Roman knight, who wrote mimes or satirical productions for the stage. Cæsar obliged him to perform one of his own mimes against his will; on which occasion Laberius spoke a satirical prologue against Cæsar, which is preserved in Aulus Gellius; fragments of his other works are also extant. He died B.C. 44.—Bayle.

Laboureur (John le), a French writer, was born at Montmorency, in 1623. He was at first a gentleman's servant, but afterwards entered into orders, and became prior of Juvingé, commander of the order of St. Michael, and almoner to the king. He died in 1675. He wrote the history of the Marshal of Guebriant, with the genealogy of Budos, and some other houses in Brittany; he also published an edition of the Memoirs of Michael du Castelnau, and other works. His uncle, Claud le Laboureur, an ecclesiastic, published several books of merit.—Moreri.

Lacarry (Giles), a French jesuit, was born in 1605, and died in 1684. He wrote, 1. Historia Galliarum sub prefectis Prætorii Galliarum, 4to.; 2. Historia Coloniarum a Gallis in exteras nationes missorum, 4to.; 3. De Regibus Franciæ et Lege Salicâ; 4. Historia Romana, 4to.; 5. Notitia Provinciarum Imperii utriusque cum Notis, 4to.—Moreri.

La Colonie (John Martin de), a marshal of the army in the Austrian service, was born at Perigord, and died at Bourdeaux, in 1759, aged 85. He published his military memoirs, at Frankfort, in 1730, and at Brussels, in 1739, 2 vols. 12mo. He was also the author of the History of Bourdeaux, 3 vols. 12mo.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

La Combe (Guy du Rousseau de), an advocate in the parliament of Paris, who died in that city in 1749, aged 44. He published several works on jurisprudence in French and Latin.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

La Combe (Francis), a French miscellaneous writer, was born at Avignon, and died at Paris in 1793. He published Orrery's Life of Swift, Shaftsbury's Letters on Enthusiasm, from the English; the Letters of Christina Queen of Sweden; a Dictionary of the old French Language; Observations on London, &c.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Lactantius (Lucius Cælius Firmianus), an eloquent father of the church, was according to some an African, and to others a native of Fermo in Italy. He studied under Arnobius, and became so famous as a rhetorician, that Constantine appointed him preceptor to his son Crispus. He formed his style upon the model of Cicero; but though he wrote with great purity and force, particularly in confuting the pagan errors and follies, he was more of a rhetorician than a theologian. He blended philosophy with divinity, and thereby involved the truths of religion in a mist of obscurity. His works were published at Rome in 1468, folio; but the best edition is that of Paris, 2 vols. 4to. 1748.—Cave. Dupin.

Lacy (John), an English actor and dramatic writer in the reign of Charles II. with whom he was a great favourite. His plays are, 1. The Dumb Lady; 2. The Old Troop, or Monsieur Ragou; 3. Sir Hercules Buffoon. He is not to be mistaken for John Lacy, an English gentleman, who became the zealous friend of the French impostors, who called themselves prophets, at the beginning of the 18th century. He wrote some incoherent tracts on that subject, and was imprisoned for his zeal.—Biog. Dram. Gen. Biog. Dict.

Lacydas, a Greek philosopher of Cyrene, and disciple of Arcesilaus, whom he succeeded as master of the second academy. Attalus gave him a garden in which to read his lectures. He foolishly mourned the loss of a favourite goose, which he caused to be buried magnificently. He died of intemperance, B. C. 212.—Diog. Laërtius.

Ladislaus I. king of Hungary, the son of Bela I. succeeded his brother Geiza in ). He added to his dominions Dalma- and Croatia, reduced the Bohemians had revolted, expelled the Huns, and quered part of Bulgaria and Russia. He defeated the Tartars, and was as distin- ed by his piety as his valour. He died 095, and was canonized in 1198.—— eri.

ADISLAUS III. succeeded Stephen V. his er in 1272. He was a debauched prince, rced his lawful wife, and kept a number omen. He also ill used the clergy, and ering himself an object of universal ha- was assassinated in 1290.—Univ. Hist.

ADISLAUS IV. called also Uladislas, was d duke of Lithuania, and king of Po- , and elected to the throne of Hungary 440. He declared war against the s, and employed as his general John ades, who was very successful. Ladis- however, made peace, which gave dissatisfaction to the pope, and other tian princes, that he was induced to t it; but he was very unfortunate af- ards, and lost his life in the battle of a in 1444.—Ibid.

DISLAUS V. the son of Albert of Aus- was made king on the death of Ladis- IV. under the guardianship of John ades. He was very zealous against Hussites, by whom he is said to have poisoned in 1457.—Ibid.

DISLAUS VI. was the son of Casimir, of Poland, and elected king of Hun- on the death of Mathias Corvinus 90, in opposition to his own brother rt, and to John the natural son of his cessor, and to Maximilian of Austria. eign was very turbulent, being con- y at war with the Turks, and other bouring powers. He died in 1516.

DISLAUS, or LANCELOT, king of Na- called the Liberal and Victorious, suc- d his father, Charles Duras, in 1386. as before count of Provence, and king ngary. He obtained the latter crown 03, during the imprisonment of Sigis- , who compelled him to return to On the death of his father he was ed by Louis II. duke of Anjou, which oned some bloody wars. Pope John I. at first espoused the cause of Louis, terwards took the part of Ladislaus, however, marched against Rome, having taken it, turned his arms on lorentines, whom he compelled to r peace in 1413. He died at Naples 14, aged only 38, being poisoned, as said, by his mistress, who was the ter of a physician, and bribed to trate the deed by the Florentines.— Dict. Hist.

DISLAUS I. king of Poland, succeeded other Boleslaus II in 1081. He defeat- e armies of Prussia and Pomerania, ied in 1102.—Univ. Hist.

DISLAUS II. king of Poland, succeeded her Boleslaus III. in 1139. He made war against his brothers on frivolous pre- tences, and after several battles was driven from his throne, but Boleslaus IV. his suc- cessor gave him Silesia at the request of Frederic Barbarossa. He died at Olden- burg in 1159.—Univ. Hist.

LADISLAUS III. king of Poland, came to the throne in 1296. He pillaged his sub- jects, and seized the goods of the clergy, for which he was expelled, and the crown given to Wenceslaus king of Bohemia. Ladislaus retired to Rome, but on the death of Wenceslaus he was recalled to Poland, where he governed with moderation and wisdom. Pomerania having revolted, he called to his aid the Teutonic knights, who repaid themselves by seizing Dantzic and other places, but Ladislaus marched against the knights and defeated them. He died in 1333.—Ibid.

LADISLAUS V. surnamed Jagellon, grand duke of Lithuania, obtained the crown of Poland in 1386, by his marriage with Hed- wige, daughter of Louis king of Hungary. That princess was elected queen of Poland on condition of marrying the person whom the states of the kingdom should choose. Their choice fell on Ladislaus, who was then a pagan, but was baptized previous to the marriage. He added Lithuania to Poland, and defeated the Teutonic knights in several battles. He refused the throne of Bohemia, which was offered to him by the Hussites. Ladislaus died with the re- putation of a wise, upright, and generous prince, in 1434, aged 80.—Univ. Hist.

LADISLAUS SIGISMUND VII. king of Po- land and Sweden, succeeded Sigismund III. his father, in 1632. Before his advancement to the throne he signalized himself against the Turks, whom he defeated in several ac- tions. He also repulsed the Russians, and forced them to make peace. He died in 1468.—Ibid.

LADVOCAT (John Baptist), a French je- suit, was born in 1709, in the diocese of Toul, and became doctor, librarian, and professor, of the Sorbonne. The good duke of Orleans having founded a Hebrew pro- fessorship in the Sorbonne, appointed Lad- vocat to it in 1752. He died at Paris, in 1765. His works are, a Geographical Dic- tionary, 8vo.; an Historical Dictionary, 2 vols. 8vo. which has since been repeatedly enlarged; a Hebrew Grammar; a tract on Councils; a Dissertation on the 67th Psalm; a Critique on some new Transla- tions of the Scripture, &c.——Nouv. Dict. Hist.

LADVOCAT (Louis Francis), a philosophi- cal writer, and dean of the chamber of ac- counts at Paris, where he died in 1735, aged 91. His principal work is entitled, Entre- tiens sur un nouveau systeme de morale et de physique.—Ibid.

LÆLIUS (Caius), consul of Rome, B. C. 140. He distinguished himself as a soldier in Spain, and was no less celebrated for his eloquence and poetical genius. He was the intimate friend of Scipio Africanus the Younger, and is said to have assisted Terence in his comedies. There was another consul of this name, B.C. 190. He accompanied the elder Scipio to Africa, and bore a part in the victories over Asdrubal and Syphax.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

LAET (John de), director of the Dutch East India company, was a native of Antwerp, where he died in 1640, leaving behind him some useful works, as, 1. Novus Orbis, 1633, folio; 2. Historia Naturalis Brasiliæ, folio; 3. De Regis Hispaniæ Regnis et Opibus, 8vo.; 4. Respublica Belgarum; 5. Gallia; 6. Turcici Imperii Status; 7. Persiæ Imperii Status; 8. An Edition of Vitruvius.—Moreri.

LÆVINUS (Torrentinus), or van der Beken, or Torrentin, a prelate of the Roman church, was a native of Ghent. He studied at Louvain, and was afterwards employed as an ambassador by Philip II. of Spain, who gave him the bishopric of Antwerp, from whence he removed to the archbishopric of Mechlin, where he died in 1595. He founded the Jesuits' college at Louvain. He wrote lyric poems in Latin, and published an edition of Suetonius.—Ibid.

LÆVIUS, a Roman poet, who is supposed to have flourished before Cicero. He wrote a poem called Love Games, and another entitled The Centaurs, which are lost.—Voss. de Poet. Lat.

LAFITAU (Joseph Francis), a French jesuit, who was a missionary among the Iroquois in America. He wrote the Manners of the Native Americans compared with those of the Primitive Times, 2 vols. 4to.; a History of the Discoveries of the Portuguese in the New World, 4 vols. 4to.; Remarks upon Ginseng, 12mo. He died in 1755.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

LAFITAU (Peter Francis), brother of the above, was a native of Bourdeaux. He entered among the jesuits, and distinguished himself as a preacher. Being sent to Rome on some negotiations, he became so great a favourite with the pope as to be promoted to the bishopric of Sisteron. He died in 1764, aged 79. He wrote a History of the Constitution Unigenitus, 2 vols. 12mo.; History of Clement XI. 2 vols.; Sermons; Spiritual Letters, &c.—Ibid.

LAGALLA (Julius Cæsar), a learned physician, was born at Padulla in the kingdom of Naples, in 1576. He studied at the university of Naples, where he received his doctor's degree, and at the age of eighteen was appointed physician to the pope, who also made him professor of logic at Rome, which place he filled with reputation till his death in 1623. He wrote a treatise, entitled, Disputatio de Cœlo animato.—Moreri.

LAGERLOOF (Peter), a learned Swede, who was professor of eloquence at Upsal, and wrote the Ancient and Modern History of the Northern Parts of Europe. He died in 1599, aged 61.—Moreri.

LAGNY (Thomas Fantet, sieur de), a mathematician, was born at Lyons, in 1660. He was designed for the bar, but he preferred geometry to jurisprudence, and was educated accordingly at Paris by the liberality of the duke de Noailles. He became a member of the academy of sciences, and Louis XIV. appointed him royal hydrographer at Rochefort; but sixteen years afterwards he was recalled to Paris, and made librarian to the king with a considerable pension. He died in 1734. He wrote, 1. New Methods for the Extraction and Approximation of Roots, 4to.; 2. Elements of Arithmetic and Algebra, 12mo; 3. La Cubature de la Sphere, 12mo.; 4. a General Analysis, or Method of Resolving Problems, 4to.; 5. Several papers in the Memoirs of the Academy.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

LAGUNA (Andrew), a Spanish physician, was born at Segovia in 1490. He was a favourite with Charles V. at whose court he resided, and died in 1560. He published Annotations on Dioscorides; an epitome of the Works of Galen; and a treatise on weights and measures.—Moreri.

LAINEZ (Alexander), a French poet, was born at Chaimay in Hainault, in 1650. After travelling through Greece, Asia Minor, Egypt, Sicily, Italy, and Switzerland, he returned to his native place, where he lived in great poverty, till the abbé Fautrier became his patron. He died in 1710. His manners were gay, and his conversation brillant. His Poems were published in 1753, 8vo.—Nouv. Dict.

LAINEZ (James), a Spaniard, and one of the companions of Loyola, whom he succeeded in the generalship of the jesuits in 1558. He assisted in the council of Trent, where he supported the papal authority to an extravagant degree. He obtained from Paul IV. the perpetual generalship of the order, and the following extraordinary privileges; the right of making all manner of contracts without the privity or consent of the society; that of giving authority and authenticity to all comments and explanations of the constitutions; the power of making a new, and altering the old; and that of having prisons independantly of the secular power. Lainez refused a cardinalship, and died at Rome in 1565, aged 53.—Ib.

LAIRESSE (Gerard), a celebrated painter and engraver, was born at Liege, in 1640. He studied painting under his father, whom he far excelled. After residing some years at Utrecht, he was persuaded by a merchant of Amsterdam to remove to that city, where he gained a great reputation, and died in 1711. He excelled in historical subjects, and his principal performance is said to be the Child Moses trampling on the Crown of Pharaoh. While painting a picture he used to relieve himself by playing on the violin. Lairesse was also a good engraver;

d wrote an excellent work on the prin-ples of painting. Before his death he came blind. His brother James was a wer painter, and John and Ernest paint-insects. Two of his sons were also nters.—Pilkington.

LAIRE (Francis Xavier), a learned bibliopher, was born at Vadans, in France, 1739, and died at Sens in 1800. He was ebrated for his knowledge of bibliogray, and published, 1. Memoirs towards History of Great Men of the fifteenth ntury, with a Supplement to Maittaire's nals of Typography, 4to.; 2. Specin Historicum Typographiæ Romanæ n Indice librorum, 8vo.; 3. Epistola ad ate Ugolini, 8vo.; 4. On the Origin and ogress of Printing in Franche-Comté, no.; 5. Seire delle Edizioni Aldini, 12mo.; Index librorum ab inventa Typogra-ia ad an. 1500, 2 vols. 8vo.—Nouv. Dict.
st.

LAIS, a celebrated courtesan, was a nae of Hyccara in Sicily. She was taken m thence at the age of seven years by cias the Athenian, who carried her to eece. She afterwards resided at Corinth, ere she had Aristippus and Diogenes ong her admirers. The price for her fa-urs was so enormous as to occasion the overb, "It is not in every man's power visit Corinth." Even Demosthenes him-f, attracted by the fame of Lais, repaired Corinth with an intent to visit her; but ng informed by the courtezan that her ours were not to be purchased at a less n than 200*l.* English money, the orator parted, observing that he would not buy entance at so dear a price. The charms ich had thus attracted Demosthenes to rinth, lost their influence upon the sage nocrates. Seeing the philosopher un-ved by her beauty, the artful Lais con-ved to visit him in his house, but had no son to boast of her reception. Going h a lover to Thessaly, she is said to have n stoned to death by the women, out of lousy, in the temple of Venus.—Plutarch.
yle.

LAKE (Arthur), an English prelate, was n at Southampton, and bred at Wyken's school, from whence he was elected New college, Oxford, where he became ow. In 1608 he obtained the deanry of rcester, and in 1616 the bishopric of h and Wells. He was a learned man, a nd divine, and an exemplary bishop.
died in 1626. After his death was print-a large volume, in folio, of his sermons
l meditations.—Wood, A. O.

LALANDE (Michael Richard de), a French sician, was born at Paris in 1657, and d at Versailles in 1726. When young became a chorister in the church of St. rmain l'Auxerre, but on arriving to nhood he lost his fine voice, and apd to the violin in hopes of being emyed by Lulli at the opera, but being refused he broke his instrument and studied the organ. The duke de Noailles recommended him to Louis XIV. who appointed him musical instructor to two of the princesses. He was also composer to the king, and master of the chapel. His compositions, in 2 vols. folio, have been greatly admired.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

LALLI (John Baptist), an Italian poet, who was employed by the duke of Parma and the pope in the government of several cities. He died at Norsia in Ombria, in 1637, aged 64. He wrote, 1. Domiziano moscheida; 2. Il mal Francese; 3. La Gierusalemme desolata; 4. L'Eneide travistata; 5. a volume of poems.—Tiraboschi.

LALLY (Thomas Arthur, count), a gallant general in the French service, was a native of Ireland, whose family suffered by their attachment to the house of Stuart. He signalized himself at the battle of Fontenoy, and was appointed brigadier in the field by Louis XV. In 1756 he was sent to the East Indies as governor of the French possessions. He took Gondalore and fort St. David, but was defeated before Madras, on which he retired to Pondicherry, which he was obliged to surrender to the English in 1761. On his arrival in France the popular clamour was so great that he was sent to the Bastille, and afterwards tried by the parliament, which condemned him to be beheaded, on the absurd charge of having sold Pondicherry to the enemy. He suffered with great fortitude in 1766. His son, M. Lally de Tollendal, obtained a reversal of the sentence, and a grant of his father's estates, in 1783.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

LAMBALLE (Maria Theresa Louisa of Savoy Carignan, princess de), was born at Turin, in 1749, and married to the duke de Bourbon-Penthievre, but became a widow in the flower of youth and beauty. Being appointed superintendant of the housbold to Maria Antoinette queen of France, she became the particular favourite of that unfortunate princess. On the flight of Louis XVI. and his family she came to England. Her attachment, however, to the queen was so great that she returned to France, and entered the prison of the Temple with her royal friend. From thence she was dragged to another, and lastly, Sept. 3, 1792, brought before a ferocious tribunal, where her courage and calmness would have excited respect in any but tygers. She was there butchered with sabres, her head and breasts cut off, and her heart taken out. These borne on pikes were carried about in savage triumph, and inhumanly taken to the king and his family. —Ibid.

LAMBECIUS (Peter), a learned writer, was born in 1633 at Hamburgh. At the age of 19 he published Remarks on Aulus Gellius. In 1652 he was appointed professor of history at Hamburgh, and in 1660 was chosen rector of the college. He married a rich old woman, but so peevish and covetous that he went to Rome, where he turned Roman catholic. He afterwards became librarian to the emperor of Germany, and died at Vienna, in 1680. He was the author of Origines Hamburgenses, 2 vols. 4to.; and other works.—Moreri.

LAMBERT of Schawemburg, a celebrated German benedictine, who in 1058 made a journey to Jerusalem, and on his return to Europe composed a chronicle from Adam in 1077; the greatest part of it, however, is a history of Germany. It was printed at Basil in 1660, folio.—Moreri.

LAMBERT (Anne Theresa, marchioness of), an ingenious French lady, was born at Paris, in 1647. She married Henry Lambert, marquis of St. Bris, in 1666, and lost him in 1716. She died universally esteemed in 1733. Her works are, 1. Advice of a Mother to a Son and Daughter, full of good rules; 2. Reflections on Women; 3. Treatise on Friendship; 4. On Old Age; 5. The Female Hermit; 6. Miscellanies. All her writings shew a fine taste and an excellent heart.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

LAMBERT (John), major-general in the parliament army in the reign of Charles I. He distinguished himself at the battles of Naseby and Fife, and assisted Cromwell in his advancement to the Protectorate, but opposed his taking the title of king. For this Cromwell deprived him of his commission, but from prudential motives granted him a pension of 2000*l.* a year. Being now divested of all employment, he withdrew to Wimbleton-house in a situation of mind but ill calculated to enjoy the tranquillity of domestic retirement, for on the death of the Protector he joined Fleetwood, Desborough, and others, in restoring the members of the long parliament, who had been dismissed, and for this was appointed one of the council of state, and colonel of a regiment of horse. The parliament, however, growing jealous of his influence in the army, directed him to resign his commission; this he absolutely refused, and marching up to London, dislodged the parliament by force in October 1659. He was then appointed major-general of the army, and sent to command the forces in the north; but general Monk having defeated him, and restored the parliament, he was deserted by his army, submitted, and was committed prisoner to the Tower. At the Restoration he was tried and condemned, but was pardoned and died in exile at Guernsey. —Granger.

LAMBERT (Charles Francis), a French ecclesiastic, which profession he quitted, and went to Paris, where he wrote for the booksellers. He died in 1765. He wrote the new Telemachus, 3 vols.; Memoirs of a Woman of Quality, 3 vols.; History of all Nations, 14 vols. &c.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

LAMBERT (George), an English landscape painter, was instructed by Hassel, and imitated Wooton, but he afterwards adopted the manner of Gasper. He painted scenes for the theatres, and some pictures for the India-house. He died in 1765.—Pilkington

LAMBERT (John Henry), an eminent mathematician, was a native of Mulhausen in Alsace. He wrote a Treatise on the Orbits of Comets; a Treatise on the Properties of Light; another on Perspective &c. He died at Berlin, in 1777, aged 49.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

LAMBIN (Dennis) a learned Frenchman was born in Picardy, in 1516. He was professor of the belles lettres at Paris, and published Commentaries on Plautus, Lucretius, Cicero, and Horace. He also translated into Latin Aristotle's Morals and Poetics, and some of the orations of Demosthenes and Æschines. He died of grief for the death of Peter Ramus, in 1572.—Moreri.

LAMBRUN (Margaret), a Scotch heroine was a servant of Mary Stuart, as was her husband, who died of grief for the death of that queen. Margaret, resolved to avenge the death of her husband and mistress upon Elizabeth, to accomplish her purpose assumed a man's habit, and repaired to the English court, but as she was pushing through a crowd to get near the queen, she dropped one of her pistols. This being observed she was seized and brought before Elizabeth, who examined her strictly and Margaret replied, "Madam, though I appear in this habit I am a woman; I was several years in the service of queen Mary whom you have unjustly put to death you have also caused that of my husband who died of grief to see that innocent queen perish so iniquitously Now, as I had the greatest love for both, I resolved to revenge their deaths by killing you. I have made many efforts to divert my resolution from this design, but in vain; I found myself necessitated to prove by experience the truth of the maxim, that reason nor force can hinder a woman from vengeance, when she is impelled by love" The queen calmly heard this discourse and answered "You are then persuaded that in this action you have done your duty, and satisfied the demands which your love for your mistress and your spouse required from you; but what think you is my duty to you?" Margaret asked if this question was put as a queen or a judge; and on the majesty's saying as a queen, "Then," said Margaret, "your majesty ought to grant me a pardon." "But what assurance can you give," said the queen, "that you will not repeat the attempt?" "Madam," Lambrun rejoined, "a favour which is given under restraints, is no favour; and in so doing your majesty would act as a judge." The queen was so struck with her behaviour, that she gave her a pardon and a duct till she got out of the kingdom.—

's Life of Elizabeth.

AMI (Bernard), a Cartesian philosopher, priest of the oratory, was born at ns of a noble family in 1645. He was rived of a professorship at Saumur, and of some ecclesiastical preferment, for zeal in behalf of the doctrines of Des tes. He died at Rouen, in 1715. He te, 1. Elements of Geometry and Manatics, in 2 vols. 12mo.; 2. Treatise on spective; 3. Discourses on the Sciences the Manner of Study, 12mo.; 4. Destration of the Holiness and Truth of istian Morality, 5 vols. 12mo.; 5. Appa-s Bidlicus, 4to. [this is a work of t merit]; 6. De Tabernaculo fœderis, incta Civitate Jerusalem et de Templo folio; 7. Harmonia sive Concordia ngelica, 2 vols. 4to; 8. The art of king, with Reflections on Poetry, 12mo.
*icero*n.

AMI (Dom-Francis), a French ecclesi-, of the congregation of St. Maur, was ive of Chartres and an elegant writer.
book on Self-knowledge, 6 vols, 12mo., been greatly valued. He died in 1711, 75. Besides the above work he wrote ist Spinosa; Philosophical Letters; a ise on the Effects of Thunder, and se-other pieces —Moreri.

AMI (John), professor of ecclesiastical ry at Florence. He published the s of Meursius, in 12 vols. folio, and e a book on the Trinity, which was ired by the jesuits and defended
e author, who died in 1774.—Nouv.

AMIA, a courtesan of Greece, was born hens, and became concubine to Pto-
I. king of Egypt, with whom she was prisoner by Demetrius Poliorcetes, made her his mistress. The Athenirected a temple to this courtesan, under ame of Venus Lamia.—Plutarch.

MOIGNON (Christian Francis de), an ent French lawyer and magistrate, was n of the marquis de Basville, and born ris, in 1644. His father would not en-the education of his son to another, ook it upon himself, and entered into inutest particulars of his first studies:
ve of letters and a solid taste were uits the scholar reaped from this va-education. He learned rhetoric in suits' college, made the tour of Eng-nd Holland, and returned home the ation of those meetings regularly held rsons of the first merit at his father's . The several branches of literature however only an amusement: the as his real employ; and the eloquence bar at Paris owes its reformation bombast and affected erudition to ain and noble pleadiugs of M. Lamoi-
To a fine and cultivated understand-added the charms of eloquence, and rged the important duties of advocate-general and president of the parliament of Paris with the greatest reputation.
He died in 1709. Louis XIV. who had a great respect for his talents and virtues, gave him many proofs of his regard. He wrote a work entitled Le Playdoier, and a letter on the death of Bourdaloue. His father was president of the parliament of Paris, and a patron of literary merit. He died in 1677.—Moreri.

LAMPE (Frederic Adolphus), professor of divinity, and rector of the university of Bremen, where he died in 1729, aged 46.
He wrote, 1. De Cymbalis Veterum, 12mo.;
2. History sacred and ecclesiastical, 4to.;
3. Commentary on the Gospel of St. John,
&c.—Nouv. Dict.

LAMPLUGH (Thomas), an English prelate, was born in Yorkshire, and educated at Queen's college, Oxford, of which he became fellow. He complied with the presbyterians in the civil war, but conformed at the Restoration and became D. D. principal of Alban-hall, and vicar of St. Martin-in-the-Fields. In 1672 he was made dean of Rochester, and in 1676 bishop of Exeter.
When the prince of Orange landed, the bishop made a speech to the clergy and gentry, exhorting them to be loyal to James, who gave him the archbishoprick of York.
Notwithstanding this he took the oaths to William and Mary, and died at Thorp castle, in 1691, aged 76.—Wood.

LAMPRIDIUS (Ælius), a Roman historian of the 4th century. He wrote the Lives of the Emperors Commodus, Antonius, Dia-dumenius, Heliogabalus, and Alexander Severus, which are in the Historiæ Augus-tinæ Scriptores, 2 vols. 8vo. Leyden, 1671.
—Vossius de Hist. Lat.

LAMPRIDIUS (Benedict), a Latin poet of the 16th century, was a native of Cremona, and became professor of Greek and Latin at Rome, from whence he removed to Padua. At the invitation of Frederick Gonzaga he went to Mantua as tutor to his son. He wrote epigrams and lyric poems with elegance. He died in 1540.—
Moreri.

LANA (Francis de), an eminent mathe-matician, was born at Brescia, in Italy, in 1637, and entered into the society of jesuits. He was the first who conceived the idea of aërostation, as appears in his work entitled Magisterium Naturæ, Artis, published at Brescia, in 1684, in 3 vols. folio.
A particular dissertation on the subject, entitled Navis Volans, tending to abate the claims of Montgolfier to this discovery, was published, from Lana's work, at Naples in 1784.

LANCASTER (Dr. Nathaniel), an English divine, was born in Cheshire, and became rector of Stamford Rivers in Essex, where he died in 1775. He wrote an essay on Delicacy, 8vo; a sermon entitled, Public Virtue, or the Love of our Country; and a poem against methodism.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Lancaster (James), an English navigator, who in 1591 sailed as commander of a squadron to the East Indies, where he touched at Ceylon and Sumatra, and after taking several vessels and losing some of his own, shaped his course for England, but in the voyage meeting with adverse winds he was driven on the coast of America. Lancaster landed on a small island, and the crew taking advantage of his absence, cut the cable and sailed to England. He afterwards got a passage on board a French ship, and arrived at Rye, in 1594. He went out again with another fleet, with which he committed many depredations on the coast of Brazil, and took the town of Fernambuco, where he obtained immense treasure, which he brought to England in 1595. He next commanded the fleet sent out by the East India company, and obtained the grant of a settlement at Achen, and also at Bantam, after which he returned to England. He died about 1620.—Harris's Voyages. Hackluyt.

Lancelot (Claude), a learned Frenchman, was a benedictine of the abbey of St. Cyran, from whence he was banished to Lower Brittany, on account of disturbances which broke out in his monastery. He died in 1695, aged 79. He wrote, a new Method of learning the Latin and Greek Languages, published under the title of Port Royal Grammars. They have been translated into English by Nugent, and are very valuable. Lancelot was also the author of Spanish and Italian Grammars, on a similar plan; and an Universal Grammar. His other works are: Delectus Epigrammatum, 2 vols. 12mo.; Memoirs of the Life of St. Cyran; Observations on Sacred Chronology; and religious pieces.—Moreri.

Lancelotti (John Paul), a famous canonist, who was employed by pope Paul IV. in compiling the Institutions of Canon Law, in imitation of the Civil Institutions of Justinian. He was born at Perugia, in 1511, and died in 1591. There are other writings of his in print besides the above.—Moreri.

Lancisi (John Marcia), a physician, was born at Rome in 1654, and died professor of anatomy, and physician to the pope, in 1720. He published several books on medical subjects, and his extensive library he gave to the hospital of the Holy Ghost for public use.—Niceron.

Lancjean (Remi), a painter, was a native of Brussels, and the best of Vandyke's pupils. He died in 1671. His works are mostly on religious subjects, and painted in a fine style.—D'Argenville.

Lancret (Nicholas), a French painter, was born at Paris, in 1690. He copied the manner of his master Watteau, but did not equal him in taste or expression. He was a member of the academy of painting at Paris, and died in 1743.—D'Argenville.

Lancrinck (Prosper Henricus), an eminent landscape painter, was born at Antwerp, about 1688. He came to England when young, and was patronised by the nobility and gentry. He represented broken rude, and uncommon views. He died of intemperance in 1692.—Vertue.

Landa (Catherine), a learned lady, who wrote a Latin letter to Peter Bembo, in 1526. She was the sister of count Augustin Landon, and the wife of count John Fermo Trivulcio.—Tiraboschi.

Landen (John), an eminent mathematician, was born in Northamptonshire, in 1719. He was a self-taught genius, and acquired a profound knowledge of abstract mathematics. He wrote some curious papers in the Philosophical Transactions, and in 1755 he published a volume, called Mathematical Lucubrations. He was appointed agent to earl Fitzwilliam, which employment he fulfilled till within two years of his death. In 1766 he was chosen a fellow of the royal society. He published two volumes of Mathematical Memoirs, full of curious matter, calculated for the highest mathematicians. He died in 1790.—Hutton.

Landini (Christopher), a learned Venetian of the 15th century, who translated Pliny's Natural History into Italian, and wrote commentaries on Horace.—Nouv. Diet. Hist.

Lando (Hortensio), an Italian physician of the 16th century, was a native of Milan and author of several works under fictitious names, particularly two dialogues, one called Cicero Relegatus, and the other Cicero Revocatus, which have been falsely attributed to cardinal Aleander. He is not to be confounded with Bassino Lando, a physician of Padua, who was assassinated by a robber in 1562. He wrote several medical works.—Bayle.

Landri, bishop of Paris, was a man of unbounded charity and eminent piety. He founded the hospital called Hôtel Dieu, and died in 660.—Moreri.

Lane (Jane), an English heroine, who was the principal instrument in effecting the escape of Charles II. after the battle of Worcester. That monarch, disguised in her father's livery, rode before her on horseback from Bentley-hall the seat of Mr. Lane, about twelve miles from Boscobel wood, in which Charles had been concealed in an oak, to Mr. Norton's near Bristol, and from thence he went to Brighthelmstone, where he embarked for France. She was well rewarded at the Restoration and married sir Clement Fisher, bart. of Warwickshire.—Clarendon.

Lanfranc, archbishop of Canterbury, was born at Pavia, and studied at Bologna, after which he went to France, and retired to the abbey of Bec, of which he was elected prior in 1044. William duke of Normandy gave him the abbey of St. Stephen at Caen nd after his conquest of England advanced im to the archbishoprick of Canterbury.

1071 he went to Rome to receive the allium from pope Alexander II. but it ust be observed to his honour, that he sisted the encroachments of Gregory VII.
ho cited him to Rome to answer the arge of heresy. He rebuilt the cathedral Canterbury, and founded several urches and hospitals. He died in 1089.
e wrote against Berenger on the Eucharist, d other works, published together in 47.—Dupin.

LANFRANC (John), an Italian painter, s born at Parma in 1581. He became a mestic in the service of count Horatio otti, who perceiving his taste for drawing ced him under Augustin Caracci, after ose death he went to Rome and studied der Annibal, who employed him in seve-great works. He excelled in painting nes and ceilings in fresco. He died in 47, leaving several children all very in-ions. He studied Correggio's manner
h success.—Felibien vies des peintres.

LANFRANC, a physician and surgeon of lan. He was persecuted in his own ntry, on which he retired to France, ere he died about 1300. He restored gery to respectability, for which he in-red the hatred of the ignorant pretend-to the art. His Chirurgiæ Magna et va was printed at Venice, in 1490, in o, and at Lyons, in 1553.—Moreri.

LANG (John Michael), professor of divi-at Altdorf, and the author of Philoa Barbaro-Græca, Nurimb. 1708. 4to.; ertationes Botanico-Theologicæ, Altorf,
5, 4to; and De Fabulis Mohammedicis,
7, 4to. He died in 1731, aged 67.—
v. Dict. Hist.

LANGALERIE (Philip de Gentils, marquis first baron of Saintonge, was a famous ral, and served his country with repu-n many years. This however did not ent his being disgraced by the persecu-s of his enemy Chamillant the minister, which he went into the service of the eror and the king of Poland; the for-of whom caused him to be arrested at t, on a charge of having concerted a with the Turks to make a descent on
. He died in prison at Vienna, in 1717, 66. The Memoirs under his name, ed in 1708 in French, is a mere ro-ce.—Nouv. Dict.

LANGBAINE (Gerard), a learned divine, born in Westmoreland, about 1608, educated at Queen's college, Oxford, e he obtained a fellowship and prod to the degree of D. D. He printed dition of Longinus at Oxford, and al other learned works. In 1645 he hosen provost of his college, which, the office of keeper of the archives, eld to his death in 1657. He was med by Selden, Usher, and other men, his correspondence with whom has been printed. His son Gerard LANGBAINE, born in 1656, became beadle of law at Oxford, and published an Appendix to the University Catalogue of Graduates, and an Account of the English Dramatic Poets, 8vo. He died in 1692.—Wood.

LANGDALE (Marmaduke), a gallant English gentleman, who in the civil war raised a troop in the king's service, gained some advantage over Fairfax, raised the siege of Pontefract castle, and made himself master of Berwick and Carlisle. On the ruin of the royal cause he went to Flanders, and was created by Charles II. lord Langdale. He died in 1681.—Clarendon.

LANGE (Joseph), professor of Greek at Friburg, in the year 1610. He quitted the protestant communion and turned catholic. He composed several works, and among others, one entitled, Elementale Mathematicum, reprinted in 1625. He was also the editor of the famous Poleanthea, 2 vols. folio.—Bayle.

LANGE (Charles Nicholas), an ingenious Swiss naturalist, who published, 1. Historia Lapidum figuratorum Helvetiæ; 2. Origo eorundem. 3. Methodus Testaceæ Marinæ distribuendæ, in 1722, 4to.—Nouv. Dict.

LANGE (Rudolphus), a German Latin poet, was nephew of Herman Lange, dean of the church of Munster, who gave him a canonry in that cathedral. He went to Italy, where he studied the Greek and Latin languages. He composed a poem on the Taking of Jerusalem, and others. He died in 1519, aged 81.—Melch Adam, vit. Germ. Phil.

LENGELAND (Robert), an old English poet, and one of the first disciples of Wickliffe, who distinguished himself by a curious poem, entitled, The Visions of Pierce Plowman, written about 1369, intended as a satire on almost every description of men, but especially the clergy. It is written in blank verse with force and humour, in an alliterative measure.—Gen. Biog.

LANGHAM (Simon), an English prelate and cardinal, was abbot of Westminster, afterwards bishop of Ely, and lastly archbishop of Canterbury, in 1366. Edward III. made him treasurer of England, and Urban VIII. gave him a cardinalship with the title of legate. He died at Avignon, in 1376.—Godwin de Presulibus.

LANGHORNE (Dr. John), an ingenious divine and poet, was the son of a clergyman, and born at Kirby Steven, in Westmoreland, but where educated is not ascertained. On entering into orders he became tutor to the sons of a Lincolnshire gentleman, whose daughter he married. He held the living of Blagden, in Somersetshire, and was besides a justice of the peace, and prebendary of Wells. He died in 1779. He was a writer in the Monthly Review, and published, 1. Poems, in 2 vols. 12mo.; 2. Letters of Theodosius and Constantia, 2.

vols. 12mo.; 3. Solyman and Almena, a tale; 4. Frederick and Pharamond, 12mo.; 5. Sermons, 2 vols.; 6. Effusions of Fancy, 2 vols.; 7. Fables of Flora, in verse; 8 A translation of Plutarch's Lives.—Europ. Mag.

LANGIUS (John), a physician of Silesia, was born in 1485, and died in 1565. He took his degree at Pisa, after which he practised at Heidelberg, and became physician to the elector palatine. He published at Basil in 4to. 1554, Medical Epistles, which are very curious.—Moreri.

LANGLE (John Maximilian de), a French protestant minister, was born at Evreux in 1590. He served the reformed church at Rouen twenty-five years and died in 1674. He wrote a Defence of Charles I. King of England; 2 volumes of Sermons; and translated from the English the Whole Duty of Man.—Bayle.

LANGLE (Samuel de), son of the above, was born at London, but taken to France when a year old. He was minister of the church at Rouen, from whence he removed to Charenton, where he was greatly esteemed for his learning and virtues. On the persecution breaking out against the protestants he removed to England, and obtained a prebend of Westminster. The university of Oxford conferred on him the degree of D.D. He died in 1699. Bishop Stillingfleet printed a letter of his on the difference between the church of England and the dissenters.—Ibid.

LANGLEY (Batty), an English architect, who died in 1751. He published many useful practical books, as the Builder's Jewel; the Builder's Price-Book; and other works for masons, bricklayers, and carpenter's.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

LANGTON (Stephen), archbishop of Canterbury, was born in England, but educated at Paris. He was chancellor of Paris, cardinal, of Rome, and made archbishop by the pope in opposition to king John and the clergy. John forbade Langton from entering his dominions, and banished the monks of Canterbury, for which the kingdom was laid under the papal interdict. The king was afterwards excommunicated, and his subjects absolved from their allegiance; on which he made his submission by complying with the papal terms, after which he received the papal absolution from Langton, who, however, refused the pope's bull of excommunication against the barons for leaguing against John, for which he was suspended at Rome, where he suffered also many mortifications. At length he purchased his pardon, and was permitted to return to England, where he died in 1228. He composed some theological works.—Pits. Rapin.

LANGTON (John), an English monk of the order of Carmelites, who appeared with advantage at the council of Basil, and wrote a Chronicle of England.—Pits.

LANGUET (Hubert, minister of state to Augustus elector of Saxony, was a native of France, and converted to the protestant faith by Melanchthon. He was at Paris during the massacre of St. Bartholomew, as ambassador from the elector, and narrowly escaped with his life, after saving that of Wichelus the printer, in whose house he lodged and also the famous de Mornay. He was employed in several other embassies; but being suspected of favouring the Zuinglians, he quitted the service of the elector, and entered into that of the prince of Orange. He died at Antwerp in 1581. His principal works are; a Collection of Letters in Latin to the Elector of Saxony printed at Halle in 4to. 1699; Letters to sir Philip Sidney, 12mo. 1646.—Bayle. Mor.

LANGUET (John Baptist Joseph), doctor of the Sorbonne, and vicar of St. Sulpice, at Paris, wa sa relatio nof the above, and born at Dijon, in 1675. He built a new church for his parish, and founded the house of the Infant Jesus, which consisted of two divisions, the first of thirty-five ladies descended of decayed but noble families, the second of above 400 poor women and children. The young ladies received a suitable education, and were employed in domestic concerns. The others worked at the spinning-wheel, and made a quantity of linen and cotton cloths. The order and economy in this house, for the education and employment of so many persons, gave cardinal Fleury so high an idea of the vicar of St. Sulpice, that he proposed to make him superintendant-general of all the hospitals in the kingdom, which was however declined. Nothing indeed could be more excellent than this institution, which the revolution has swept away in common with every thing else that was great or good. Never man took more pains to procure charitable donations and legacies, which he distributed with admirable discretion, to the amount, it is said on good authority, of nearly one million of livres annually. During the general dearth in 1725, he sold in order to relieve the poor, his household goods, pictures, and some curious pieces of furniture that he had with difficulty procured. In a word, Languet devoted himself to the service of the poor, and spent his all on works of charity. He refused several bishopricks, and died in 1750.—Nouv. Dict.

LANGUET (John Joseph), brother of the above, was archbishop of Sens. He translated the Psalms into French, and published several polemical treatises. He died in 1753.—Ibid.

LANIER, a painter who was employed to collect pictures in foreign countries for Charles I. He placed a particular mark on all which he brought to England. No further account is known of him.—Vertue.

LANSBERGHE or Lansbergius (Philip), a learned mathematician, was born at Ghent 1561. He was a preacher at Antwerp, it on the taking of that city by the Spaards he removed to Holland, and died at iddleburg in 1632. He wrote Sacred ronology, 1626; Essays on the Restitution Astronomy; Four Books of Geometrical iangles; On Measuring the Heavens; On e Diurnal and Annual Motion of the rth, &c. His son James was also a good thematician, and published a defence of e works of his father against Fromond, a ofessor at Louvain, who maintained that e earth stands still. He died in 1657.—Martin Biog. Phil. Nouv. Dict. Hist.

LANZANO (Andrea), an Italian painter, s born at Milan, and educated under rlo Maratti. He was esteemed for the cellence of his composition and the beauty his colouring. He died in 1712.—Pilkton. D'Argenville.

LAPARELLI Francis, an eminent architect mechanic, was born at Cortona, in 1521. s knowledge of the military science mechanics recommended him to Cosgrand duke of Tuscany; and pope Pius entrusted him with the defence of Civi-Vecchia, which place he strongly fortified. chael Angelo confided to him the execua of his designs for the church of St. er. In 1565 he was sent to fortify Malta inst the attempts of Solyman, and there planned the city of Valette. He next aged in the service of the Venetians, died of the plague before Candia, in 0.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

LANZONI (Joseph), a learned physician professor at Ferrara, was born in 1663, died in 1730. He was the restorer of academy of his native place, and be-e secretary to it. He was also an asiate of many other societies. To great l as a physician, he added a knowledge of quities, and taste for polite litere. His works were printed in 3 vols. Latin, 1738.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

LAPIDE (Cornelius à), a learned jesuit, died at Rome in 1637, aged 71. He oted himself to the critical elucidation he scriptures, and his works amount to vols. folio.—Moreri.

LAPO (Arnulphus di), a famous architect, was born at Florence, in 1232, and died 300. He was the first who revived the principles of architecture, and united is structures elegance with solidity. He t the cathedral at Florence, and other it works.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

LARDNER (Nathaniel), a learned dissenting divine, was born at Hawkhurst, in t, in 1684. After receiving his academal education at London, he went to echt, and from thence to Leyden, re he followed his studies with close apation, and then returned to England. n afterwards he became tutor to the of lady Treby, in which comfortable ation he continued until her ladyship's h, in 1721. This event threw him into circumstances of some perplexity, having preached to several congregations during his residence with lady Treby, without the approbation or choice of any one of them. In 1723 he was engaged with other ministers in a course of lectures at a meeting in the Old Jewry, but he did not obtain a fixed settlement till 1729, when he became pastor of a congregation in Crutched Friars. He wrote an excellent answer to Woolston on the Miracles, and about the same time, a Letter on the Logos. In 1733 appeared the first part of the Credibility of the Gospel History, a work admirably executed. The university of Aberdeen conferred on him the degree of D. D. for his useful labours. He died at his native place in 1768. His works have been published in 11 vols. 8vo. They abound in critical elucidations of the scripture, and early ecclesiastical history, evincing profound learning and intense application. Applauded as his works were, Lardner received but little recompence for them. Some of the latter volumes of the Credibility were published at a loss, and at last he sold the copy-right, and all the remaining copies, to the booksellers for the trifling sum of 150*l.*; his object however was not private emolument, but to serve the interests of truth and virtue.—Life by Kippis.

LARGILLIERE (Nicolas de), a French painter, was born at Paris, in 1656. He lived some time in England, and was employed by Charles II.; but a regard for his family induced him to return to France, where he obtained the friendship of Le Brun, and the post of historical painter to the academy. On the accession of James II. he again visited England and painted the portrait of that monarch and that of his queen, after which he returned to Paris, where he became director of the academy, and died in 1746.—D'Argenville.

LAROON (Marcellus), a Dutch painter, was born at the Hague, in 1653. He accompanied his father to England. He drew correctly, and painted drapery so well that Kneller employed him to clothe his figures. But his greatest merit is the exactness with which he copied the works of eminent masters. He died in 1705.—Vertue.

LARREY (Isaac de), a French protestant who was obliged to quit his country at the revocation of the edict of Nantes, on which he went to Holland, where he was made historiographer to the States. He wrote, the History of England, 4 vols. folio; the History of Louis XIV. 3 vols. 4to; the History of Augustus, 8vo.; the History of the Seven Wise Men, 2 vols. 8vo. He died in 1712.—Moreri.

LARROQE (Matthew de), a French protestant divine, was born at Lierac, in 1619. The duchess de la Tremouille chose him for minister at Vitré in Brittany, where he lived twenty-seven years, and then removed to Rouen. He died in 1684. His principal works are; A History of the Eucharist, 4to.; An Answer to Bossuet, bishop of Meaux, on Communion of two kinds, 12mo.; A Treatise upon the Regale. His son Daniel, on the revocation of the edict of Nantes, went to London, from thence to Copenhagen, and afterwards to Amsterdam. Having resolved to turn catholic, he went to Paris, but writing a satirical piece against Louis XIV. on occasion of the famine in 1693, he was sent to prison, where he was kept five years. On his release he obtained a place and a pension. He died in 1731. He wrote the Life of Mahomet; the Life of Mezeray; and translated Echard's Roman History into French.—Nouv. Dict Hist.

Lascaris (Constantine), a learned Greek, who went to Italy on the taking of Constantinople by the Turks in 1453. He settled at Messina, where he taught Greek with reputation, and had a number of scholars. He died there at the end of the 15th century, and left his library to the senate. He wrote a Greek grammar, printed at Milan, in 1476, 4to.—Ibid.

Lascaris (Andrew-John), surnamed Rhyndacenus, a learned Greek who was employed by Lorenzo de Medici to collect books in Greece, and the grand-signior allowed him to examine his libraries, whereby he acquired inestimable treasures. On his return he was invited to France by Louis XII. who employed him as ambassador to Venice. When Leo X. ascended the papal chair Lascaris went to Rome, and became director of the Greek college. He died in 1535. He revived the use of the capital letters of the Greek alphabet, and wrote epigrams in that language.—Ibid.

Lascena (Peter), a learned Neapolitan, was born in 1590. He lived at Rome with cardinal Barberini, and died in 1636. He wrote Nepenthes Homeri, seu de abolendo luctu; Cleombrotus; Dell'Antico Ginnasio Napoletano, 4to.—Ibid.

Lassels (Richard), a priest of the Romish communion, was born of a good family in Yorkshire, and bred first at Oxford and afterwards at Douay. He died at Montpellier in 1668, aged 65. He wrote Travels in Italy, 2 vols. 8vo. A gentleman of his name and family was a cornet in the royal army during the civil wars, and contributed to the escape of Charles II. after the battle of Worcester.—Wood, A. O.

Lassus, or Lasus, a dithyrambic poet, born at Hermione, in Peloponnesus, about 500 years B. C. He is particularly known by the answer he gave to a man who asked him what could best render life pleasant and comfortable? "Experience." He wrote an ode upon the centaurs, and an hymn to Ceres without inserting the letter S in the composition.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Latimer (Hugh), an excellent prelate and martyr, was born at Thurcaston, in Leicestershire, of humble parentage, in 1475. He received a good education at Cambridge, where at the beginning of the Reformation he was very zealous for popery, but on conversing with Bilney the martyr, he renounced the Romish tenets, and became as ardent on the other side. He now laboured earnestly in preaching the gospel, and his fame reaching Henry VIII. he sent for him, and was so pleased with his discourses as to confer on him the bishopric of Worcester. But Latimer was no time-server: on the contrary he expostulated with the king for his cruelties, and went so far as to present him a New Testament with a leaf doubled down to the text "whoremongers and adulterers God will judge." He afterwards resigned his bishopric; and on the fall of lord Cromwell, his patron, he was sent to the Tower, where he remained till the accession of Edward VI. who would have restored him to his diocese, which he refused. He then resided with Cranmer, whom he assisted in framing the homilies, and in completing the work of reformation. When Mary came to the throne he was committed to the Tower, from whence he was sent with Ridley and Cranmer to Oxford, to have a conference with some popish divines. In that dispute he conducted himself with remarkable clearness and simplicity; and when it was over, sentence was passed upon him and Ridley, who were burnt at the same stake, A. D. 1555. Latimer, after recommending his soul to God, thus cheered his brother-sufferer: "We shall this day, my lord, light such a candle in England as shall never be extinguished." His sermons have been often printed.—Biog. Brit.

Laud (William), a learned and celebrated prelate, was the son of a clothier at Reading, in Berkshire, and born there in 1573. From Reading school he was removed to St. John's college, Oxford, of which he was elected fellow in 1593. In 1601 he entered into orders, and having opposed the innovations of the puritans, he fell under the displeasure of Dr. Abbot then vice-chancellor, which continued during the life of that divine. His first preferment was the living of Stamford, in Northamptonshire, and in 1608 he obtained that of North Kilworth in Leicestershire, at which time he took the degree of D. D. and became chaplain to Neile, bishop of Rochester. In 1611 he was elected president of his college, and in 1616 preferred to the deanry of Gloucester. The year following he attended king James to Scotland; in 1620 he obtained a prebend of Westminster, and about the same time was made bishop of St. David's. In 1622 he held a conference with Fisher the jesuit in the presence of the marquis of Buckingham and his mother to confirm them in the protestant religion. An account of this conference was printed but never answered. At the coronation of Charles I. he officiated as dean of Westminster, and in 1626 was translated o the see of Bath and Wells, and in 1628 o London. The university of Oxford in 630 elected him chancellor, than whom it ever had a more liberal patron. He ornamented St. John's college, erected the uilding at the end of the divinity-school, ounded an Arabic lecture, and gave a colction of MSS. and coins to the university. He succeeded archbishop Abbot in 1633 in he see of Canterbury, and began a work f reformation not more necessary than popular. The puritans had increased to extraordinary degree, and in the church ere was a great want of conformity to e liturgy, owing to the laxity of his precessor. Archbishop Laud not only paid inute attention to the state of the Anglin church, but also to that of Ireland, for hich he obtained the impropriations that mained in the hands of the crown. On e breaking out of the rebellion his palace as assaulted by the mob; and in 1640 he as impeached by the house of commons, d sent to the Tower, but not brought to al till three years after, when he made a st able defence of himself. Though no ason was proved, the house of commons ssed an act of attainder against him, ich the lords were compelled to confirm. was beheaded on Tower-hill, January 1644, and his behaviour was calm and repid. His corpse was interred in the urch of Allhallows, Barking, but afterrds removed to the chapel of St. John's lege, Oxford. Archbishop Laud was a n of quick passions, but of strict integ and unaffected piety. He possessed at learning and extensive abilities, and s the firm friend of the church of Engd, though the puritans maliciously reented him as inclined to popery. After death appeared his sermons in 1 vol. o.; Devotions, 1 vol.; and in 1694 Mr. arton published his Diary and Remains, ls. folio.—Biog. Brit.

LAUDER (William), a native of Scotland. taught Latin at the university of Edingh, where he published in 1739 an edi of Johnston's Psalms. From thence he e to London, and published an Essay Milton's Use and Imitation of the Mos in his Paradise Lost. His alleged tations from Grotius and others passed genuine for some time, but at length were detected and proved forgeries of der's own by Mr. Douglas, since bishop alisbury. Lauder, on being discovered, cribed a confession of his offence dicd by Dr. Johnson, after which he went arbadoes, where he kept a school. He in 1771.—Anecd. of Bowyer.

LAUDOHN (Gideon Ernest), or Loudon, an ient German general, was born at Tootin 1716, of a noble family, which came inally from Scotland. In 1731 he end into the Russian service, but though behaved with great gallantry he only obtained a lieutenancy, on which he went into the Austrian service in 1742, and had a captain's commission. After the peace in 1748 he was raised to the rank of major. At the beginning of the seven years' war he was appointed lieutenant-colonel of Croats, and displayed brilliant military talents against the king of Prussia. In 1757 he was made major-general, and the year following invested with the military order of Maria Theresa. The same year was gained the great battle of Hochkerchen, the merit of which is generally attributed to Laudohn, who also gained the battle of Kunnersdorf, for which the empress Elizabeth of Russia presented him with a m nificent sword. He afterwards defeated the Prussians at Dandshut, and took the town of Glatz. At the conclusion of the war in 1763 he was rewarded with a pension and a barony. In 1766 he was nominated a member of the aulic council of war, and in 1778 elevated to the dignity of field-marshal. In the last Turkish war he served with additional reputation, and in 1789 added Belgrade to the imperial dominions. Being seized with a fever at his head-quarters in Moravia, in consequence of an operation he underwent for an obstruction in the urethra, his impatience under the medical applications, the impetuous ardour of his character, and the knowledge, above all, of his importance in the war, contributed to irritate his mind, and promote the violence of the disorder. He resisted the application of cataplasms, before and after the incisions were made, with a fatal obstinacy, which raised the inflammation to such a height, that he expired on the 14th July, 1790, aged 74.—Nouv. Dict. Hist LAUGIER (Mark Antony), an ingenious French writer, was born in Provence, in 1713. He entered into the order of jesuits, which he quitted on account of some dissatisfaction. He died in 1769. His works are, an Essay on Architecture; the History of Venice, 12 vols. 12mo.; the History of the Peace of Belgrade, 2 vols. 12mo.; Apology for the French Music, &c.—Ibid.

LAUNAY (Francis de), a French advocate, who wrote a Commentary on the Institutes Coutumieres of Loysel, and Remarks on the Roman and French Jurisprudence. He died in 1693, aged 81.—Ibid.

LAUNOY (John de), a learned French divine, was born in Normandy, in 1603, and died at Paris, in 1678. He wrote several books on ecclesiastical history, and defended the liberties of the Gallican church against the papal claims. He also exposed legends and canonizations.—Bayle.

LAUNOY (Charles de), a celebrated commander, who served the emperor Charles V. and was made governor of Tournay, and viceroy of Naples. He took Francis I. prisoner at the battle of Pavia, and treated him with the greatest respect. He was afterwards appointed to conduct the French king back to his dominions. He died in 1527.—Moreri.

LAURA. See PETRARCH.

LAURENS (Andrew), a French physician, was a native of Arles, professor of medicine at Montpellier, and physician to Henry IV. He died in 1609. His anatomical works were printed at Paris, in 1600, folio. His brother Honorius was an advocate in the parliament of Paris, and a distinguished partizan of the League. Having embraced the ecclesiastical state, Henry IV. gave him the archbishopric of Embrun. He died in 1612. He wrote the edict of Henry III. for re-uniting the protestants to the Romish church, and other works.—Moreri.

LAURENT (Peter Joseph), an eminent mechanic, was born in Flanders, in 1715. At the age of eight years he constructed an hydraulic machine, and at twenty-one he was entrusted with the superintendance of several public works. He had also the direction of the canals in the Low Countries and Hainault. He formed a grand design of joining the Somme with the Scheldt; and performed other admirable and almost insurmountable schemes, for which he was rewarded with the order of St. Michael. He died in 1773.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

LAURI (Philippo), a painter, was born at Rome, in 1623. His father and elder brother were also eminent artists. He studied under Angelo Carofelli, whom he excelled. He painted historical pieces, with landscapes in the back-ground, also large pictures for churches, but his chief subjects were metamorphoses and Bacchanals. He died at Rome in 1694.—D'Argenville.

LAVATER (John-Gaspard-Christian), a Swiss divine and ingenious writer, was born at Zurich, in 1741. He became pastor of the principal church of St. Peter, at his native place, and was distinguished for his unwearied zeal in behalf of practical christianity. He died in 1801, in consequence of a wound which he received in 1799, when the French troops under Massena took Zurich by storm. Lavater was a man of brilliant talents, mingled with much mystic enthusiasm. He wrote, 1. a Treatise on Physiognomy, which has been translated into English and other languages; 2. Poems; 3. the Journal of a Self-Observer; 4. Jesus the Messiah, in 4 vols.; 5. Fraternal Letters, 8vo.; 6. Letters supposed to have been written by St. Paul before his Conversion, &c.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

LAVINGTON (George), an English prelate, was born at Heavitree, in Devonshire, and educated at Exeter college, Oxford, where he proceeded to the degree of LL.D. He successively became prebendary of Worcester, canon-residentiary of St. Paul's, and lastly bishop of Exeter. He died in 1762, aged 79, and lies buried in Exeter cathedral. His lordship wrote a curious book, entitled, the Enthusiasm of Methodists and Papists compared, 8vo.; another on the Moravians, and some single sermons.—Polwhele's Hist. Devon.

LAVIROTTE (Louis Anne), a French physician, was born at Nolay in the diocese of Autun, and died in 1759, aged 34. He translated Maclaurin's Account of Newton's Discoveries, and wrote Observations on the Hydrophobia, with some other works.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

LAVOISIER (Anthony, Laurence), a celebrated French chemist, was born at Paris, in 1743. In 1766 he obtained a prize from the academy for a dissertation on the best mode of lighting the streets, so as to combine the several properties of economy, distinctness of vision, and facility of operation. Two years after he was chosen a member of the academy, to which he contributed a number of curious papers. He invented a new theory of chemistry, which was received with applause in Germany and France, though strenuously opposed by Dr. Priestley, whose phlogistic hypothesis it tended to overthrow. In 1789 he published his Elements of Chemistry, a work of merit and importance. He succeeded Buffon and Tillet as treasurer of the academy; he became also farmer-general, and commissary of the national treasury, in which offices he conducted himself with strict integrity, but notwithstanding his talents and virtues he was dragged before the revolutionary tribunal, who sentenced him to death, and though he only asked for a little time to complete some experiments, he was guillotined in 1794. Besides his Elements he wrote Chemical and Philosophical Miscellanies, 2 vols. 8vo.; Report of the Commissioners charged to examine Animal Magnetism; Instructions for making Nitre, &c.—Eloge by Fourcroy; and Life by Lalande.

LAW (John), a famous projector, was born at Edinburgh, in 1671. He acquired a considerable knowledge of practical mathematics, and particularly excelled as an accountant. Having seduced the daughter of a gentleman in England, he slew the brother of his mistress, and to avoid being hanged went to Holland, and from thence to Italy. He is said afterwards to have returned to his own country, and to have made proposals to parliament for a paper currency, which were rejected. Law then went abroad again, and after residing in different places, settled at Genoa. In 171[illegible] he established a bank at Paris under his own name, but with the authority of the regent duke of Orleans. To this was joined the company of the Mississippi, a pretended scheme for paying off the national debt, and for enriching subscribers. The project became extravagantly popular, and every one was anxious to convert his gold and silver into paper. In 1720 Law was made comptroller of the finances. The bubble, however, burst; and the people raged, besieged the palace of the regent, ving out as they held up their hands full bills, "See the fruit of your system." w was exiled to Pontoise, from whence escaped to Italy, and died at Venice, in 29. He wrote a small book on Money l Paper Credit.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Law (William), a pious English divine, s born at King's-cliffe, in Northâmpton-re, in 1686, and ed cated at Oxford, ere he took his degrees, and entered in-orders, but entertaining scruples respect- the oaths, he remained a nonjuror, and s missed preferment which was repeat- y offered to him. He lived for the most t a retired life at the house of Mrs. Hes- Gibbon, aunt of the celebrated histo- n, in Northamptonshire, where he died 761. He wrote against bishop Hoadley, some valuable practical books, as, a ious Call to a Devout and Holy Life; a atise on Christian Perfection, &c. In latter days he fell into the mystic reve- of Jacob Behmen, whose works he pub- ed.—Gibbon's Posth. Works.

Law (Edmund), a learned prelate, was ative of Westmoreland, and educated at John's college, Cambridge, but became ow of Christ's college. He was mber of a society at the university call- the Zodiac, consisting of several learn- and ingenious young men. In 1739 he presented to the living of Graystock, n whence he removed to Salkeld. In 5 he was chosen master of St. Peter's ege; in 1767 he obtained a prebendal l in the cathedral of Durham, and in 9 the bishopric of Carlisle. He was a n of great softness of manners, and of mildest and most tranquil disposition. voice was never raised above its or- ary pitch; his countenance seemed ne- to have been ruffled; it preserved the e kind and composed aspect, truly in- ating the calmness and benignity of his per. He had an utter dislike of large mixed companies. Next to his books, his f satisfaction was in the serious conver- on of a literary companion, or in the pany of a few friends. In this sort of iety he would open his mind with at unreservedness, and with a peculiar n and sprightliness of expression. The desty or rather bashfulness of his na- e, together with an extreme unwilling- s to give pain, rendered him sometimes firm and efficient in the administration authority than was requisite; but it is condition of human morality. There an opposition between some virtues, ich seldom permits them to subsist to- her in perfection. He died in 1787, d 84. He published, 1. The Theory of ligion, 8vo.; 2. Archbishop King's Ori- of Evil, with notes, 8vo.; 3. A Review the Controversy concerning an inter- diate State, 12mo.; and some Sermons. Encyc. Brit.

Lawes (Henry), a musician, was born at Salisbury, in 1600. He became a gentleman of the chapel royal, and one of the band of Charles I. In 1653 he published his Ayres, Dialogues, &c. folio. He set to music the Comus of Milton, with whom he was intimate. He also set most of Waller's songs, and died in 1662. His brother William was an excellent performer. He was commissary in the royal army, and was killed at the siege of Chester.—Hawkins. Burney.

Lawrence (Stringer), an eminent general, in the service of the East India company, was born in 1697, and died in 1775. The company, out of gratitude for his services, erected a fine monument to his memory in Westminster abbey.—Mortimer.

Lawson (sir John), a brave English admiral, was born at Hull, and rose from the lowest station to the command of a ship. He served the parliament with great fidelity, but co-operated with Monk in effecting the Restoration, for which he received the thanks of both houses. He served under the duke of York as rear-admiral in 1665, and was killed in the engagement with the Dutch fleet.—Campbell.

Lazard (Charles Peter), a pious divine, was the son of an eminent physician at Greenwich, and educated at Westminster school, from whence he removed to St. John's college, Cambridge, where, in 1773 and 1775, he obtained the prize for the best Seatonian poem. He was for several years minister of Oxendon chapel, and keeper of archbishop Tenison's library in St. Martin's parish. In 1800 he was made dean of Bristol, where he died in 1803. Dr. Lazard published some single sermons; and since his death a volume of his discourses has been published by subscription. —Monthly Mag.

Lazarelli (John Francis), an Italian poet, was born at Gubio. He wrote sonnets and satirical poems, which have been often printed. He died in 1694, aged 80. —Tiraboschi.

Leake (Richard), master-gunner of England, was born at Harwich, in 1629. He distinguished himself in several naval actions, particularly in the engagement with Van Tromp, in 1673. He was then on board the Royal Prince, which had lost all her masts, most of her guns were dismounted, and 400 of her men killed or wounded; notwithstanding which he defended the ship against a superior force, and brought her to Chatham. In this action his son Henry was killed by his side. He was afterwards made master-gunner of England, and store-keeper of the ordnance at Woolwich. He had a great skill in fireworks, and was the inventor of a new method of firing a mortar. He died in 1686.—Life by S. M. Leake.

Leake (sir John), son of the above, was born at Rotherhithe, in 1656, and was with his father in the memorable engagement just mentioned. In 1688 he was appointed to the command of a fire-ship, and after the Revolution distinguished himself in the relief of Londonderry. In 1702 he expelled the French from Newfoundland, and on his return was made rear-admiral of the blue. The year following he assisted admiral Rooke in taking Gibraltar, for which he was knighted. In 1705 he saved that important fortress from the combined attacks of France and Spain. The same year he was engaged in the reduction of Barcelona, and in 1706 he so seasonably relieved that place, that king Philip was obliged to raise the siege. This was followed by the reduction of Carthagena, Alicant, and Majorca. On the death of sir Cloudesly Shovel he was appointed admiral of the white, and commander-in-chief of the fleet. In 1708 he convoyed the queen of Spain to her consort king Charles, after which he reduced Sardinia and Minorca. Having terminated the campaign he returned to England, and was chosen member of parliament for Rochester. On the death of the queen he lost his places, after which he led a retired life, and died in 1720.—Life by the following.

Leake (Stephen Martin), son of captain Martin, who married a sister of admiral Leake, which gallant officer being without issue, bequeathed his property to the captain, and his son out of gratitude took upon him the name of Leake. He was garter king at arms, and published, 1. A History of British Coins, 8vo.; 2. The Life of Sir John Leake, 8vo.; 3. The Statutes of the Order of the Garter, 4to. He died in 1773.—Anecd. of Bowyer.

Leake (John), an eminent English physician, was the founder of the Westminster lying-in-hospital, and died in 1792. He published several esteemed books on midwifery and female diseases.—Gent. Mag.

Leapor (Mary), an ingenious woman, was born in 1722. Her father was gardener to judge Blencowe at Marston, in Northamptonshire, and the only education she received was under her parents. She died in 1746, a few days after her mother. Two volumes of her poems were printed after her death, in the last of which is a tragedy entitled the Unhappy Father.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Lebid, an Arabian poet, who was employed by Mohammed to answer the satires which were written against him. He died at the age of 140.—D'Herbelot.

Leblanc (Marcel), one of the fourteen jesuits sent by Louis XVI. to Siam. He laboured for the conversion of the Talapoins, and embarked for China, but the vessel was taken by the English, and he continued a prisoner till 1690. He died at Mosambique in 1693, aged 40. He wrote a History of the Revolution of Siam, 2 vols. 12mo.—Moreri.

Leclair (John), a French musician, was born at Lyons, in 1697. He was assassinated in the night at Paris, in 1764. He excelled on the violin, and his compositions are much admired, being sonatas, duets, trios, and concertos, with an opera called Scylla and Glaucus.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Lectius (James), syndic of Geneva, was a respectable poet and critic. His greatest work is a Collection of the Ancient Greek Poets, in 2 vols. folio. He died in 1611, aged 53.—Moreri.

Ledesma (Alphonsus), a Spanish poet, called by his countrymen the divine. He died in 1623, aged 71. The title given him seems to have been more from his writing on sacred subjects, than from the sublimity of his genius.—Ibid.

Ledyard (John), an American, who is rendered remarkable by his adventures. After going round the world with captain Cook, he formed the design of traversing the north of Europe on foot, which he accomplished even to the straits of Behring and Hudson's-bay. This romantic enterprize he executed alone and unarmed. He next undertook to explore the regions of Africa, but died at Cairo, in 1786.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Lee (Samuel), a nonconformist divine, was born in London, and educated at Wadham college, Oxford, where he proceeded to the degree of M. A. He obtained the living of Bishopsgate, London, from whence he was ejected at the Restoration. About 1686 he went to New England, but on hearing of the Revolution he embarked for his native country, and was taken by the French. He died in confinement, aged 64. He wrote a Description of Solomon's Temple, folio; a Discourse on the Ten Tribes; Israel redux; the Life of Mr. John Rowe; and other works.—Calamy. Palmer.

Lee (Nathaniel), an English dramatic writer, was the son of a clergyman, and educated at Westminster school, from whence he removed to Trinity college, Cambridge, where he took his bachelor's degree. Being disappointed of a fellowship, he came to London, and made an attempt as an actor, but without success, on which he commenced tragic poet. His first piece was Nero, Emperor of Rome, which came out in 1675, and had a favourable reception. He now continued to write a play every year till 1681, when he began to shew symptoms of insanity. These increasing he was confined in Bedlam, from whence he was discharged in 1688. He wrote two plays after this, but never entirely recovered his senses, and died in 1690, in consequence of a drunken frolic. Lee had a great power over the passions, but his language is rant and bombast. His al Queens and Theodosius are still occa-nally performed.—Biog. Dram.

LEECHMAN (Dr. William), a learned tch divine, and principal of the college Glasgow, who wrote two volumes of ex-ent Sermons, and an Essay on Prayer. died in 1785, aged 78.—Gent Mag.

LEEPE (John Anthony van der), a cele-ted painter, was born at Bruges, in 1664. painted landscapes after nature, and views. He died in 1720.—Pilkington.

LEEUW (Gabriel van der), a Dutch paint-was born at Dort, in 1643. He painted nals, particularly droves of oxen and p. He died in 1688. His brother Pe-was a good artist in the same line.—braken.

LEGGE (George), baron of Dartmouth, an eminent naval commander, was ught up under admiral Spragge, and ne age of twenty obtained the command ship. In 1673 he was appointed go-nor of Portsmouth, master of the horse, gentleman to the duke of York. In 2 he was raised to the peerage, and the following sent to raze the fortifica-s of Tangier. James II. appointed him ter of the horse, general of the ord-ce, and constable of the Tower. He also the command of the fleet at the of the prince of Orange's invasion, but prevented from acting by contrary ls. At the Revolution he was committed ne Tower, where he died in 1691, aged —English Peerage.

LEGGE (Elizabeth), the eldest daughter dward Legge, esq. an ancestor of the of Dartmouth, was born in 1580. studied the Latin, French, Spanish, and languages, and had a fine poetical ge-but became blind by midnight read-She lived chiefly in Ireland, and died arried at the age of 105. Her family remarkable for longevity. One of rothers lived to be 109, one sister to nore than a century, and another in her 112th year.—Ballard's British s.

LEGUANO (Stefano Maria), an historical ter, was born near Bologna, in 1660, educated under Cignani and Carlo tti. His works display a fine imagi-n, a charming diffusion of light, and ed with a free and sweet pencil. He in 1715.—Pilkington.

LEIBNITZ (William Godfrey baron de), ebrated philosopher, was born at Leip-n 1646. His father was professor of l philosophy in that university, but when his son was six years old. At ge of fifteen he began his studies at nc, from whence he removed to Jena. 64 he was admitted M. A. at the for-university, and about the same time ed to the study of the Greek philoso-, but having chosen the law for his ssion, he took his doctor's degree in that faculty, after which he obtained a post at the court of the elector of Mentz. In 1672 he was at Paris, where he formed an acquaintance with several mathematicians. The year after he visited England, and while here Mr. Collins gave him some hints of sir Isaac Newton's discovery of fluxions, to the merit of which invention Leibnitz afterwards laid claim. The elector of Hanover, George I. employed him in writing the History of the House of Brunswick. In 1700 he was admitted a member of the academy of sciences at Paris, and on the erection of that of Berlin, was appointed perpetual president. In 1711 he was made aulic counsellor to the emperor, and Peter the Great of Russia appointed him privy counsellor of justice, with a pension. Leibnitz was engaged in a controversy at the time of his death in 1716, with Dr. Samuel Clarke, on free-will, space, and other abstruse subjects. He was a good mathematician, an acute philosopher, and a man of lively genius, but vain and avaricious. His works are, Scriptores Rerum Brunswicarum, 3 vols. folio; Codex Juris Gentium Diplomaticus, 2 vols. fol.; De Jure Suprematûs ac Legationis Principum Germaniæ, under the fictitious name of Furstener; Miscellanea Berolinensia; Notitia Opticæ promotæ; De Arte Combinatoria; Miscellaneous Questions of Philosophy and Mathematics; Essays of Theodicea on the Goodness of God, and the Liberty of Man, 2 vols. 12mo.; Metaphysical Tracts; Theoria Motus Abstracti, et Motus Concreti; Accessiones Historicæ, 2 vols. 4to.; De Origine Francorum Disquisitio; Poems, Latin and French, &c. His entire works were published by the Rev. Mr. Dutens, in 6 vols. 4to. in 1767.—Moreri.

LEIGH (sir Edward), an English critic, was a native of Leicestershire, and educated at Magdalen hall, Oxford. He sat in the long parliament, and in the assembly of divines at Westminster. He was a man of great erudition, as his Critica Sacra, and Annotations on the New Testament, abundantly prove. He died at Rushall in Staffordshire, in 1671. He also wrote, Observations on the Twelve Cæsars; a Body of Divinity; Illustration of Terms of Law; Treatise of Religion and Learning, &c.—Wood, A. O.

LEIGH (Charles), a physician and naturalist, was a native of Lancashire. He was a fellow of the royal society, and published the Natural History of Lancashire, Cheshire, and Derby; a History of Virginia, and Exercitationes de Aquis Minerali-bus, 8vo. He died at the beginning of the 18th century.—Gen. B. D.

LEIGHTON (Alexander), a Scotch presbyterian divine, was born at Edinburgh, in 1587. He became noted for his sufferings on account of libels which he published against Charles I. and the church of England. For these his nose was slit, his ears cut off, and a public whipping was inflicted on him. In 1640 the parliament appointed him keeper of Lambeth palace, then converted into a state prison. He died insane in 1644.—Neale's Hist. Pur.

Leighton (Robert), archbishop of Glasgow, was son of the preceding, and born at Edinburgh. He became an exemplary parish priest, and the magistrates of Edinburgh chose him president of their college. Soon after the Restoration he was consecrated bishop of Dunblane, which diocese he governed with great moderation. On account of the violent animosities between the episcopalian and presbyterian parties, he resigned his see, but the king constrained him to accept the archbishopric of Glasgow, in which station he made another effort to restore moderation, but in vain, on which he resigned his dignity. He then led a retired life in Sussex, and died suddenly at London, in 1684. His principal work is a Commentary on St. Peter's Epistles.—Life prefixed to his works.

Leisman (John Antony), a German painter, who died in 1698, aged 94. He painted two excellent pictures: one a landscape with dreary mountains and thick woods, from which issues a gang of robbers to assault some unfortunate travellers; the other is a sea-port enriched with views of elegant buildings and antiquities.——Pilkington.

Leland (John), a famous antiquary, was born in London, and educated at St. Paul's school, from whence he was sent to Christ's college, Cambridge, but afterwards he removed to All Souls college, Oxford. On entering into orders he became chaplain to Henry VIII. who gave him the title of his antiquary. By virtue of the royal commission he searched various cathedrals and religious houses for curious records and other pieces of antiquity, in which employment he spent six years, travelling over every part of the kingdom. Having completed his labours he was presented to the valuable living of Hasely in Oxfordshire, and to a prebend in the church of Salisbury. In 1545 he presented his collections to the king under the title of a Newe Yeare's Gifte. This, however, was only the beginning of what he proposed to execute, but while he was intent on his studies he was seized with a phrenzy, in which state he continued to his death in 1552. His Itinerary and Collectanea were published by Hearne.—Biog. Brit.

Leland (John), a learned dissenting divine, was born at Wigan, in Lancashire, in 1691. His parents going to settle at Dublin, he received his education there, and in 1716 became assistant to Mr. Nathanael Weld, in the pastoral charge of a congregation of dissenters. His labours in this character, and above all his invaluable writings in defence of christianity, procured him the degree of D. D. from two universities in Scotland. He died at Dublin, in 1766. His works are, a Defence of the Christian Religion against Tindal, 8vo.; a View of the Deistical Writers that have appeared in England, 2 vols. 8vo.; the Advantage and Necessity of the Christian Revelation, 2 vols. 4to.; Family Devotions, 12mo.—Fun. Serm. by Weld.

Leland (Dr. Thomas), a divine of the established church, was a native of Dublin, and senior fellow of Trinity college. He wrote a History of Ireland, 4to.; the Life of Philip of Macedon; and the Principles of Human Eloquence, which last was attacked by Warburton. He also translated the Orations of Demosthenes. Dr. Leland died in 1785, aged 83.—Gent. Mag.

Lely (sir Peter), a famous painter, was born in Westphalia, in 1617, and studied under Grebber, after which he came to England, where he at first painted landscapes and historical subjects, but finding more encouragement given to portrait painting he turned his attention that way, and became unrivalled in the graceful airs of his heads, the pleasing variety of his postures, and the elegance of his draperies. The hands of his portraits were remarkably fine and elegantly turned, and he frequently added landscapes in the back-grounds of his pictures, in a style peculiar to himself, and admirably suited to his subjects: he excelled likewise in crayon-painting. He fell in love with a beautiful English lady, to whom he was soon after married, and purchased an estate at Kew, to which he often retired in the latter part of his life. He was in great favour with Charles the First and Second by the latter of whom he was knighted. He died in 1680, and was buried in St. Paul's church Covent garden.—Vertue.

Lemens (Balthasar van), an historical painter, was born at Antwerp, in 1637. He settled in London, and died in 1704. He had a free pencil with a ready invention, and sometimes shewed elegance in his figures. —Pilkington.

Lemery (Nicolas), a French chemist, was born at Rouen, in 1645, and bred an apothecary. He studied chemistry at Montpellier, and made so great a proficiency as to become a lecturer. In 1683 he visited England, being of the reformed religion, then violently persecuted in his own country. He was well received by Charles II. and great offers were made to induce him to continue here, but in 1686 he returned to France and turned Roman catholic. In 1699 he was made associate chemist to the royal academy, and the same year became a pensionary. He died in 1715. He wrote, 1. a Course of Chemistry, which went through many editions; 2. a Universal Pharmacopœia; 3. a Treatise on Simple Drugs; 4. a Treatise of Antimony. His son Louis became physician to the king to the Hotel Dieu at Paris. He was a member of the academy of sciences, died in 1743. He wrote a treatise on ents; another on Worms in the Hu- Body; and several papers in the Me- s of the Academy.—Moreri.

EMNIUS (Lævinius), a learned physician, born in Zealand, in 1504. On the death is wife he entered into orders, and ob- ed a canonry. He died in 1568. He te an account of the plants mentioned cripture; a book on astrology, and an- r De occultis Naturæ Miraculis.—Mo-

EMOINE (Francis), a French painter, born at Paris. His chief performances : The Nativity; a Transfiguration: the ht into Egypt; and the Apotheosis Hercules at Versailles, the saloon of ch took him four years in painting. put an end to himself in 1737.—D'Ar- ille.

EMON (George William), an English ne and lexicographer, who published in 9 an Etymological English Dictionary in vol. 4to., which shews considerable in- try and learning. He died in 1797, aged —Gent. Mag.

E MONNIER (Peter Charles), a French onomer, was member of the academy of nces, and of the national institute. He born at Paris, in 1715, and accompa- d Maupertuis in his tour towards the th pole for measuring a degree of the ridian. His principal works are, Astro- nical Institutions; Lunar Nautical As- nomy; Tables of the Sun, and Correc- ns for those of the Moon. He died in 0.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

LE MONNIER (Louis William), brother the above, was also a member of the idemy of sciences, of the national insti- e, and of the royal society of London. was an able physician and experiment- philosopher, and contributed several ar- les to the Encyclopædia on Electricity, . He died in 1799. Neither of these is be confounded with an abbé of that name o translated Terence and Persius into ench, and wrote fables, tales, and epistles. died in 1796.—Ibid.

LENCLOS (Ninon de), a celebrated French dy, was born at Paris, of a noble family, 1615. Her mother wanted to place her a convent, but was prevented by her ther, who was a man of gaiety. Ninon t her parents at the age of fifteen, and ssessing great charms and a lively tem- r, she was followed by some of the reatest men, but would never unite her- lf in marriage. She studied the works Montaigne and Charron, and had a ne understanding, but it is truly observed at though she thought as Epicurus, she ved like Lais. She did not, however, rostitute herself for gain; and her wit and ehaviour was such, that even virtuous dies courted her acquaintance. She was held in great respect by men of genius, who consulted her upon their works. This extraordinary woman died in 1706, aged 90. She left some children. One of her sons died before her; and the circumstance of his death is singular: having been bred without knowing his mother, he conceived a passion for her; and when she discovered to him the secret of his birth, he stabbed himself in her presence. There are a few genuine letters by her in the works of St. Evremond; but those under her name addressed to the marquis de Sevigné are fictitious.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

LENFANT (James), a French protestant divine, was born in 1691. He was educated at Geneva, and became minister of the French church at Heidelberg; but when the palatinate was invaded by the French, he retired to Berlin, where he died in 1728. He published histories of the councils of Constance, Basle, and Pisa, very faithfully written. He likewise translated the New Testament into French, with notes, in conjunction with Beausobre. His other works are: a History of Pope Joan; Sermons; a Preservative against Uniting with the Church of Rome, &c.—Moreri.

LENGLET (Nicolas du Fresnoy), a French writer, was born at Beauvais, in 1674. He became secretary to the French ambassador at Cologne, and librarian to prince Eugene. He was burnt to death by falling into the fire at the age of 81, in 1755. His works are voluminous, but incorrect. The best is his Method for Studying History, which has been translated into English.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

LENNARD (Samson), an English soldier, who was with sir Philip Sidney at the battle of Zutphen. He published some translations from the Latin and French, and had a good knowlege of heraldry. He died about 1630.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

LENNOX (Charlotte), an ingenious lady, was born at New York. She was the intimate friend of Dr. Johnson and Mr. Samuel Richardson; and wrote a popular novel entitled, "The Female Quixote," which was followed by "Shakspeare Illustrated," 3 vols. 12mo. In this work she gave the novels and Histories on which the plays of Shakspeare are founded. Her other works are: Memoirs of Harriet Stuart; Memoirs of the Countess of Berci; Philander, a dramatic pastoral; Henrietta, a novel of merit; Sophia, a novel; The Sister, a comedy; Old City Manners, a comedy; Euphemia, a novel; Translations of Sully's Memoirs, and Burmoy's Greek Theatre. She died poor in 1804.—Monthly Mag.

LENS (Bernard), a miniature painter, and enameller to George II. He published some drawing-books, and several views. He died about 1741.—Ibid.

LENTHALL (William), an English lawyer, and speaker of the long parliament, was born at Henley on Thames, in Oxfordshire, in 1591, and educated at Alban hall, Oxford, from whence he removed to Lincoln's Inn, where he was called to the bar. In 1639 he was elected into parliament for Woodstock, and in 1640 he was chosen speaker, in which capacity he made a considerable fortune by joining the ruling party. He was also master of the rolls, a commissioner of the great seal, and chancellor of the duchy of Lancaster. He was turned out by Cromwell in 1653, but the year following he became speaker of the parliament called by the usurper, as he did also of the Rump. At the Restoration he was exempted from the act of indemnity, but obtained a pardon from the king. He died expressing great penitence for the part he had borne in the Rebellion, in 1662. Several of his speeches and letters are in print.—Wood, A. O.

Lentulus (Cneius), surnamed Gæticulus, a Roman of an illustrious family, who was raised to the consulate, A. D. 26, but was put to death by Tiberius, who was jealous of his popularity. He wrote a history mentioned by Suetonius, and Martial calls him a poet.—Moreri.

Leo I. or the Elder, emperor of the East, ascended the throne in 457. He is said to have been a Thracian of obscure birth. He confirmed the council of Chalcedon's decrees against the Eutychians, and renewed the war with the Vandals; but was unfortunate through the treachery of his general Aspar, whom he put to death with his family in 471. The Goths, to revenge the fate of Aspar, poured into the empire, which they ravaged to the walls of Constantinople. Leo died in 474, leaving a dubious character, being praised by some for his virtues, and censured by others for his avarice and cruelty.—Univ. Hist.

Leo II. or the Younger, was the son of Zeno, and of Ariadne daughter of Leo I. He succeeded his uncle in 474 under the guardianship of his father, who caused himself to be proclaimed emperor. Leo died the same year, having ruined his health by his debaucheries.—Ibid.

Leo III. called the Isaurian, from the country of his birth, where his parents were poor mechanics. Leo entered into the army, and became one of the guard to Justinian II. Anastasius II. made him a general, and took him as a coadjutor in the empire in 717. The Saracens, having ravaged Thrace, laid siege to Constantinople, which was bravely defended by Leo, who compelled them to retire. His reign, however, was tyrannical, and he drove the patriarch Germanus from his seat, in which he placed Anastasius. He was also guilty of burning the library at Constantinople, containing a quantity of medals, and above 30,000 volumes. The popes Gregory II. and III. having excommunicated him, he prepared an armament to invade Italy; but the ships were destroyed by a storm. He died in 741.—Univ. Hist.

Leo IV. the son of Constantine Copronymus, succeeded his father in 775, at the age of 25. In his time the controversy raged between the iconoclastes, or the image-breakers, and their adversaries, both of whom he protected by turns. He repulsed the Saracens in Asia, and died in 780. He married the famous Irene.—Ibid.

Leo V. or the Armenian, from the country of which he was a native. He rose to the rank of general by his valour; but the emperor Nicephorus disgraced him, and sent him into exile. Michael Rhangabus recalled him, and Leo, profiting by the misfortunes of his master, was elected emperor by the troops in 813. He was assassinated in 820.—Univ. Hist.

Leo VI. or the Philosopher, was the son and successor of Basil the Macedonian. The Hungarians, Saracens, and Bulgarians having united against the empire, he called to his assistance the Turks, who entered Bulgaria, which they ravaged with fire and sword. Leo drove the patriarch Photius from his seat; and Nicholas, one of the successors of Photius, excommunicated the emperor, for which Leo deposed him. He died in 911, after a reign of 25 years. He wrote some books, the most interesting of which is a treatise on Tactics, printed at Leyden, in 1612.—Ibid. Moreri.

Leo I. pope, surnamed the Great, was an Italian by birth, and had been employed by Celestin I. and Sixtus III. in several important affairs. He succeeded the latter in 440, and distinguished himself by his zeal against the Manichees, Pelagians and Eutychians. In his time the council of Chalcedon was called; and while sitting in the East, Attila and the Huns ravaged the West, and advanced towards Rome. The emperor Valentinian, alarmed, applied to the pope, who went to meet Attila, and by the power of his eloquence prevailed with him to leave Italy. Genseric, however, sacked Rome in 455. The pope died in 461. His works have been printed in 2 vols. 4to. and also in folio.—Moreri. Bowyer. Dupin.

Leo II. was born in Sicily, and succeeded Agatho in 682. He pretended to have an authority over the eastern church, and he also instituted holy water. He died in 683.—Ibid.

Leo III. succeeded in 795 Adrian I. the nephews of whom formed a conspiracy against Leo, and having seized him in a procession, dragged him to a monastery, where they sadly mangled him, but he recovered, and retired to France. Charlemagne restored him to his seat, and he crowned that monarch emperor of the West. On the death of Charlemagne a plot was formed against the pope, who ed the conspirators to be put to death. lied in 816.—Moreri.

o IV. a Roman, succeeded Sergius II. 7. The Saracens having invaded the siastical state, he marched against them, obtained a complete victory; after h he put the city of Rome into a state fence. He died in 855.—Ibid.

o VIII. was elected pope on the depo- of John XII. in 963, by the authority e emperor Otho, whence Baronius thers treat him as an intruder, but his icter stands so high that many catholics d him as a legitimate pontiff, and an ur to the chair. He died in 965.—Ibid.

o IX. who bears the distinction of a in the calendar, was born of an illus- s family, and became bishop of Toul, n 1048 was chosen pope. He conve- everal councils to reform the manners e ecclesiastics and to condemn the er- of Berenger. The Normans having hed into Italy in 1053, he went against at the head of a German army; but defeated and taken prisoner. The erors conducted him to Rome, where d the year following. Some sermons tters of his are extant.—Ibid.

o X. (John de Medicis), was born at nce, in 1475. At the age of eleven he ade an archbishop by Louis XI. king ance, and at fourteen Julius II. in- l him with the dignity of legate, and ved as such in the army which was ed by the French near Ravenna, in He was taken prisoner after that ; but the soldiers shewed the most stitious veneration for his person, as epresentative of the pope. He was d to the papacy in 1513, and his co- on was celebrated with unusual pomp. was fond of magnificence, but he taste for letters, and liberally pa- ed men of learning and genius, parti- y poets. He terminated the disputes had subsisted between his predeces- d Louis XII. of France. He conclud- council of Lateran, and formed a lid library, which he enriched with nable manuscripts. A conspiracy rmed against him by the cardinals ci and Sauli, which being discovered, vo principals were condemned to Petrucci died in prison, but the purchased his pardon. Leo formed reat projects, the one to effect a ge- association of the Christian powers t the Turks, and the other to com- he church of St. Peter. To aid these es he issued plenary indulgences, by the purchasers procured the pardon ir sins. These indulgences being car- nto Germany, occasioned the seces- om the church of Rome, begun by r, whom the pope anathematized in A war also broke out between the or Charles V. and Francis I. of France, who both courted the alliance of the pope, and were both deceived by his promises. He died of a fever in 1521.—Life by Roscoe.

Leo archbishop of Thessalonia, was one of the revivers of Greek literature, and a good mathematician. He flourished in the 9th century.—Moreri.

Leo (Pilatus), the first professor of Greek at Florence, about 1360. He was a learned man, and read Homer's poems in the schools of Florence. He perished by shipwreck on his return to Italy from Constantinople.—Moreri.

Leo of Modena, a learned rabbi of Venice, in the 17th century, who wrote a History of the Jewish Rites and Ceremonies; also a Dictionary, Hebrew and Italian, Venice, 1612, 4to. and Padua 1640.—Ibid.

Leo the grammarian, who lived in the 12th century. He compiled a chronicle of Constantinople from Leo the Armenian to Constantine VII.—Moreri.

Leo (John), an able geographer, was a native of Grenada, after the taking of which he went to Africa, whence he is by some called the African. He abjured Mohammedanism under pope Leo X. who gave him several marks of his esteem. He died about 1526. We have by him the Lives of Arabian Philosophers, and a Description of Africa.—Moreri.

Leonclavius (John), one of the most learned men of the 16th century, was a native of Westphalia. Travelling into Turkey, he collected materials for an Ottoman History: and it is to him we are indebted for the best account of that empire. To his knowledge of the learned languages he added that of the civil law. He died in 1593, aged 60.—Biog. Brit.

Leone (Arto), called also Conario, an historical painter, was born in 1498, and the disciple of Cornelius Engelbright. He died in 1564.—Pilkington.

Leoni (Jacomo) a Venetian architect, who settled in England, and published at London an excellent edition of Palladio's Architecture, in folio, 1742. He died in 1746.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Leonicenus (Nicolas), professor of physic at Ferrara, was the first who translated Galen's works, to which he added commentaries. He also translated Hippocrates's Aphorisms, and other works. He died in 1524, aged 96.—Moreri.

Leonicus Thomæus (Nicholas), a learned Venetian who studied Greek at Florence under Demetrius Chalcondyles. He revived a taste for literature at Padua, where he read Lectures on Aristotle, and died in 1531, aged 75. He translated the Commentary of Proclus on the Timæus of Plato, and other works.—Moreri.

Leonidas, king of Sparta. He opposed Xerxes when he invaded Greece, and fought the whole Persian army at the straits of Thermopylæ with such bravery as to compel them to retire. At last a detachment of the Persians was led by Ephialtes the Trachinian, by a secret path, up the mountains, and coming down on the rear of the Spartans, obtained a complete victory. Out of the three hundred, only one man escaped, and he was treated with ignominy by his countrymen, for leaving so glorious a field, where death was more honourable than life. This battle happened B. C. 480. —Plutarch.

Leontium, an Athenian courtesan, who was remarkable for her attachment to the philosophy of Epicurus, and had a son by Metrodorus, one of his disciples. She wrote a book against Theophrastus, which is commented on by Cicero, but it is lost. —Bayle.

Leopold I. emperor of Germany, was the second son of Ferdinand III. and of Mary Anne of Spain. He was born in 1640, became king of Hungary in 1655, king of Bohemia in 1656, and emperor in 1658. He contended against France and the Turks, and suffered in his war with both: France took from him Alsace, and many frontier places of the empire; and the Turks would have captured Vienna had they not been compelled to raise the siege by John Sobieski king of Poland. Prince Eugene of Savoy, gave also a turn to the affairs of Leopold; whose tyranny, however, was so great, that his Hungarian subjects were on the point of revolt when he died in 1705.—Univ. Hist.

Leopold II. the son of the emperor Francis I. and Maria Theresa of Austria, was born at Vienna, in 1747, and succeeded his father in 1765 in the duchy of Tuscany, which he governed with great wisdom; but the toleration which he granted to the protestants occasioned discontent among the people, excited by the priests. In 1790 he succeeded the emperor Joseph II., and on his removal to Vienna, the malcontents shewed themselves in opposition to the measures he had adopted; but, by a summary punishment of the ringleaders, this insurrection was soon quelled. In 1790 Leopold concluded a peace with the Turks. He was preparing for a war with the French when he was carried off by a fever in 1792. He was succeeded by his son Francis.—Nouv Dict. Hist.

Leopold, duke of Lorraine, was the son of Charles the fifth duke, and of Eleanora of Austria. He distinguished himself as a soldier, and at the peace of Ryswick in 1697, was restored to his estates, which had been taken from his father by the French. He restored his country to a flourishing condition, maintained the poor, and assisted the nobility who had been reduced. He founded a university at Cuneville, and was a liberal patron of the arts and sciences. He died in 1729, aged 50.—Ibid.

Leotaud (Vincent), a French jesuit and mathematician, who published a work entitled, Examen Circuli Quadraturæ, in which he proves the impossibility of demonstrating the quadrature of the circle. He died in 1672.—Moreri.

Leowicz (Cyprian), or Leovitius, a Bohemian astrologer, was born in 1504. He published ephemerides, and some pieces of a like kind, in which he inserted many bold predictions; particularly that the end of the world would be in 1584, which occasioned great alarm in Germany, and made many people very religious for a short time. He died in 1574.—Ibid.

Lepante (John Andrew), a French clock and watch-maker, who died in 1802. He made several improvements in his art, and wrote some books, particularly a Treatise on Clock-making, published in 1755, and again in 1768, 4to.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Lepicie (Bernard), a French engraver who was also secretary and historiographer to the academy of painting at Paris, where he died in 1755. His engravings of portraits and historical subjects are very fine. He compiled a catalogue of the pictures in the possession of the king, 2 vols. 4to. His son Nicholas Bernard was a professor in the academy of painting and sculpture, and died at Paris in 1784, aged 49. He painted several fine pictures after the manner of his master, Carlo Vanloo.—Ibid.

Lepidus (Marcus Æmilius), one of the triumvirs with Anthony and Octavius. He obtained Africa for his part, but was deprived of it by Augustus. He spent the remainder of his days in Italy, in obscurity. —Freinshemius's supplem. to Livy.

Leprince (John), a French painter and musician; who, in his voyage to Holland in order to proceed to Petersburgh, was taken by an English privateer, the crew of which plundered him of all his effects except his violin, on which he began to play with so much skill, that the sailors gave him back the whole of his property. He was employed at Petersburgh in ornamenting the imperial palaces, but on the accession of Catherine II. he returned to France and became a member of the academy. He died in 1781, aged 48. His pictures are mostly in the manner of Teniers and Wouvermans.—Nouv Dict. Hist.

Le Quien (Michael), a French ecclesiastic of the order of St. Dominic, who wrote against Courayer on the validity of the consecrations of English bishops. He was well read in ecclesiastical history, and died in 1703, aged 42.—Moreri.

Lernutius (John), a modern Latin poet was born at Bruges, in 1545. His works were published by Elzevir, with this title: Jani Lernutii Basia, Ocelli, et alia Poemata. He died in 1619.—Ibid.

Lesbonax, a philosopher of Mitylene in the first century. There are two orations under his name in Aldus's edition ient orators, and a treatise de Figuris mmaticis, printed at Leyden, in 1739.—ius. Fabricius.

ESCAILLE (Catherine), a native of Hol-l, and called by some the Dutch Sappho the tenth muse, was the daughter of a and an engraver. She died in 1711, 62. Her works chiefly consist of tra-es, very irregular, but discovering ng marks of genius.—Moreri.

ESLEY (John), bishop of Ross in Scot-l, was born of a noble family in 1527, educated at Aberdeen, in the cathedral which place he was made canon in 1547, he did not enter into orders till 1554. accompanied queen Mary from France cotland, and soon after became bishop oss and a privy counsellor. He zeal-ly defended the Romish religion, and n queen Elizabeth appointed commis-ers to meet at York to consider the plaints made against Mary by her sub-, Lesley appeared in behalf of his mis-, whose cause he pleaded with great ty. He also tried many expedients to ure her liberty, for which he was com-ed to the Tower; but in 1573 he re-red his liberty on condition of quitting kingdom. While abroad he endea-ed to interest many foreign princes in interest of Mary, and wrote several es in her defence. Being appointed r-general by the bishop of Rouen, while as visiting that diocese he was seized e Huguenots, who would have sent him agland but he recovered his liberty by ng a ransom. He afterwards obtained ishoprick of Constance, and died in . His principal work is a history of land, entituled, De Origine, Moribus, ebus gestis, Scotorum, 1578, 4to.—Biog.

ESLIE (John), bishop of Clogher, was in Scotland, and educated at Aber-and Oxford. His first preferment was ishopric of the Orkneys, from whence moved to Raphoe, in Ireland, where he a stately palace, in which he endured g siege against Cromwell, but was at orced to surrender. In 1661 he was lated to Clogher. He died in 1671, above 100 years.—Ibid.

ESLIE (Charles), son of the last-men-d, was born in Ireland, and educated ublin, where he took his degree of . and on entering into orders became cellor of Conner. He rendered him-bnoxious to the Romanists by disput-with some of their priests, and convert-everal persons of consequence. But gh he opposed popery and the arbi-measures of James II., he continued legiance to that monarch, and thereby is preferments at the Revolution. He wrote against the doctrine of resist-and in defence of hereditary right; hich account he was under the neces-f retiring to France, where he espoused the cause of the Pretender, and had the liberty of officiating in a private chapel to several protestant exiles. He went with that prince to Italy; but not being well treated, he returned to his paternal estate, at Glaslough, in the county of Monaghan, in Ireland, where he died in 1722. Mr. Leslie was an admirable controversialist, and wrote with success against deists, Jews, Socinians, and quakers. His theological works have been collected into two volumes, folio.—Biog. Brit.

LESSING (Golthold Ephraim), a German writer, was the son of a protestant divine at Kametz, and educated at Meissen, from whence he removed to Leipsic, where he applied chiefly to dramatic poety, and composed a comedy called the Young Scholar. He led a wandering life, writing chiefly for the booksellers, till he became secretary to general Tanenzien. He afterwards became librarian at Wolfenbuttle, where he undertook a periodical publica tion, called Contributions to Literary History, which was suppressed for its frequent attacks on religion. He died at Hamburg in 1781. His principal dramatic performance is entitled Nathan the Wise.—Monthly Mag.

LESSIUS (Leonard), a learned jesuit, was born near Antwerp, in 1554. He became professor of philosophy at Douay, and afterwards of divinity at Louvain, where some propositions by him on scholastic points were censured. Lessius appealed to Sixtus V., who reversed the censure. He died in 1623. His principal works are, De Justitia et Jure, folio; De Potestate Summi Pontificis; Higiasticon, seu vera Ratio Valetudinis bonæ Vitæ, &c. His books on the Existence of a Deity, and the Immortality of the Soul, have been translated into English.—Moreri.

L'ESTRANGE (sir Roger), an English writer, was born in Norfolk, in 1616. His father was sir Hammond L'Estrange, a zealous royalist, who published an elaborate work on the liturgy, entitled, the Alliance of Divine Offices, folio; also a History of Charles I., and other works. The son had a liberal education, and in 1639 attended Charles I. in his expedition to Scotland. He adhered to the royal cause, and in 1646 was condemned as a spy, but after remaining in confinement four years he made his escape, and went abroad. In 1653 he returned to England, under the shelter of Cromwell's act of indemnity. After the Restoration he was appointed licenser of the press. He also set up a newspaper, called, the Public Intelligencer, which was dropped on the publication of the London Gazette in 1665. In 1679 he commenced another paper, called the Observator, designed to vindicate the court measures. This procured him the honour of knighthood. He died in 1704, and was buried in the church of St. Giles in the fields. Sir Roger was an industrious writer, and besides his own pamphlets, which were numerous, he published translations of several books, particularly Josephus, from the French version of D'Andilly; Seneca's Morals; Erasmus's Colloquies; and Quevedo's Visions.—Biog. Brit.

Lethieuller (Smart), an English antiquary and virtuoso, was born in Essex, and educated at Trinity college, Oxford. He made a noble collection of antiquities, fossils, and other curiosities, and died in 1760, aged 59.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Leti (Gregorio), an Italian writer, was born at Milan, in 1630, and received his education among the jesuits, after which he went to Swisserland, and at Lausanne embraced the protestant religion. He resided for some time at Geneva, from whence he removed to London, and finally settled at Amsterdam, where he died in 1701. John Le Clerc married his daughter. Leti wrote the History of Louis XIV,: of Philip II. of Spain; of the emperor Charles V.; queen Elizabeth; Oliver Cromwell; and pope Sixtus V.; also the History of Geneva.—Moreri.

Leucippus, a philosopher of Abdera, who flourished about 428 years B. C. He was the disciple of Zeno, and invented the atomical system of philosophy, or that the world was formed by the casual union of a quantity of particles of matter, called atoms. —Life by Diogenes Laertius.

Leuenclavius (John), a learned German, who travelled into Turkey, and wrote a History of the Ottoman Empire, and other works. He died at Vienna, in 1598, aged 60.—Moreri.

Leusden (John), a professor of Hebrew at Utrecht, of which city he was a native. He acquired great reputation for his learning and virtues, and died in 1699, aged 75. His works are, 1. Onomasticon Sacrum; 2. Clavis Hebraica et Philologica veteris Testamenti; 3. Novi Testamenti Clavis Græca; 4. Compendium Biblicum veteris Testamenti; 5. Compendium Græcum Novi Testamenti; 6. Philologus Hebræus; 7. Philologus Hebræo-Græcus; 8. Philologus Hebræo-mixtus; 9. Notes on Jonah, Joel, and Hosea, &c.—Moreri.

Leuwenhoek (Anthony de), a celebrated physician, was born at Delft in Holland, in 1632. He acquired a great reputation on account of his microscopical experiments and discoveries. He died in 1723. Leuwenhoek wrote a work entituled, Arcana Naturæ detecta, 1714, 4 vols. 4to.; and Letters to the Royal Society of London, of which he was a member, 1722, 4to.—Moreri.

Lever (sir Ashton), a curious collector, was the son of sir D'arcy Lever, knt. of Alkington near Manchester. He became a gentleman commoner of Corpus Christi college, Oxford, where he was greatly distinguished by his skill in horsemanship. On leaving the university he went to resi with his mother, and afterwards settled his family seat, which he rendered famo by the best aviary in the kingdom. H next extended his views to all branches natural history, and became possessed one of the finest museums in the wor sparing no expence in procuring specime from the most distant regions. This m seum was disposed of by lottery in 17 but did not pay the proprietor one-four of the original cost. It is now dispersed, t articles having been lately sold separate by auction. Sir Ashton died in 1788.— Gen. Biog. Dict. Europ. Mag.

Levesque de Pouilli (Louis), a mem ber of the French academy of inscriptio He died governor of Rheims, in 1746. H established schools for mathematics a design, and greatly ornamented and i proved the city of Rheims. He wrote ingenious book entituled, the Theory agreeable Sensations, which has been tra lated into English.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Levi, the third son of Jacob and Leah, was born B. C. 1748. He was guil of a dreadful massacre of the Sichemit whose prince had violated the chastity his sister Dinah. He went into Egypt wi his father and brethren, and died there 1612 B. C. His family were consecrated the service of God.—Genesis.

Levingston (James, earl of Callendar) famous soldier of Scotland, was gentlem of the bedchamber to Charles I., who creat him lord Levingston of Almont, in 163 and afterwards earl of Callendar. In t civil war he at first joined the parliame but soon returned to his duty, and disti guished himself by his activity in the king service. He took Carlisle, where he fou a considerable supply of ammunition, a endeavoured to rescue Charles from h confinement in the Isle of Weight. H died in 1672.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Lewis (John), a learned divine, was bo at Bristol, in 1675, and received his acad mical education at Exeter college, Oxfo where he took his degrees in arts. Arc bishop Tenison gave him the vicarage Minster, in the Isle of Thanet, with t mastership of Eastbridge hospital, in Ca terbury. He died at Margate in 1746. H published, 1. The Life of Wickliffe, 8v 2. Wickliffe's Translation of the New Te tament, folio; 3. The History and An quities of the Isle of Thanet, 4to.; 4. T History of the Abbey and Church of Fev sham, 4to.; 5. The Life of William Caxt 8vo.; 6. History of the Translations of t Holy Bible and New Testament into En lish, 8vo.—Biog. Brit.

Ley (sir James), a learned English jud was the son of Henry Ley, esq. of Jesso in Wiltshire, and for his extraordinary me made lord chief justice, first in Ireland, a afterwards in England. He was also cre ed baron Ley, lord high treasurer, a rl of Marlborough. Herne has published ne pieces by him, and his Reports were inted in 1659.—Granger.

LEYBOURN (William), an English mathetician, was originally a printer in Lon-n. His Course of Mathematics, in 1 vol. io, was once held in esteem. He also ote a Treatise on Surveying, folio, which s re-published and improved by Cunn; a book on Dialling, 4to. and a useful ok called, the Trader's Guide. Leybourn d about 1690.—Granger.

LEYDECKER (Melchior), a protestant die, was born at Middleburg, in 1652. He ame professor of theology at Utrecht, ere he died in 1721. He wrote a Trea- on the Republic of the Hebrews, 2 vols. o, which is curious; an Analysis of the ipture; a History of Jansenism; a Con-nation of the Ecclesiastical History of rnius; History of the Church of Af-, 4to.; and other works.—Nouv. Dict. t.

LEYDEN (Lucas Van), a Dutch painter oil, distemper, and on glass, also an emit engraver. His picture of the history St. Hubert procured him a great re-ation. He died in 1533, aged 39.—bien. De Piles.

LEYSSENS (N.), an historical painter of twerp, was born in 1661, and died in 0. He resided at Rome some time, but rned to Antwerp to support his aged er, and Providence rewarded his good- of heart, for he had more employment all the painters in that city.—Pilk.

LHWYD (Edward), a Welch antiquary, a native of Caermarthenshire, and edu-d at Jesus college, Oxford, where he his degree of M. A. in 1701. He suc-led his tutor, Dr. Plot, as keeper of the molean museum, and had the use of all ghan's collections. With incessant la- r and great exactness he employed a siderable part of his life in searching the Welsh antiquities: had perused or ected a great deal of ancient and valua- matter from their MSS.; transcribed all old characters of the monasteries that could meet with; travelled several s over Wales, Cornwall, Scotland, Ire-, Armoric Bretagne, countries inha- by the same people, compared their quities, and made observations upon the le; but died in 1709, before he had di-d them into the form of a discourse, as tended, on the ancient inhabitants of island. Many of his observations were rted in Gibson's edition of Camden's annia. He also published the Archæo- Britannica, or an Account of the guages, Histories, and Customs, of the nal Inhabitants of Great Britain, &c. Oxford, 1707. He left in MS. a Scottish Irish-English Dictionary, and other fs of his learning and industry.—Biog.

LHWYD, or LLWYD (Humphry), a learned antiquary, was born at Denbigh, and educated at Brasenose-college, Oxford, where he studied physic, and practised with reputation at his native town. He died about 1570. His principal works are, 1. Commentarioli Britannicæ Descriptionis Fragmentum, 1572; a new edition of which book appeared by Moses Williams in 1731, 4to. and an English translation was published by Thomas Twyne in 1753, under the title of the Breviary of Britain; 2. De Monâ Druidum Insulâ, Antiquitati suæ restitutâ, 1568; 3. Chronicon Walliæ, a Rege Cadwalladero, usque ad A. D. 1294, MS.; 4. The History of Cambria, now called Wales; which was published by Dr. Powel in 1584, 4to.—Wood, A. O.

LIBANIUS, an ancient sophist, was born at Antioch on the Orontes, in 314. He became so eminent a teacher at Constantinople, that some other professors procured his banishment, on the charge of magic. He then went to Nicomedia, where he obtained a great number of disciples, amongst whom was Julian, afterwards called the Apostate. He died at Antioch about 390. His remains were published in 2 vols. folio, at Paris, in 1606 and in 1627. At the time of Julian's Persian expedition, Libanius impertinently asked a christian grammarian, "What the carpenter's son was then about?" "He is making a coffin for your master," replied the other.—Moreri.

LIBAVIUS (Andrew), a physician, was born at Hall, in Saxony, and died at Cobourg, in Franconia, in 1616. His works are, Syntagma selectorum Alchemiæ Arcanorum, 2 vols. fol.; Epistolarum Chymicarum, 1595. He wrote zealously against Paracelsus and his followers.—Moreri.

LIBERI (Peter), an Italian painter, was born at Padua, in 1600, and died in 1677. There are several fine pictures by him in different churches in Italy; the principal is a representation of Moses striking the rock. —Pilkington.

LIBERIUS (pope), was a native of Rome, and succeeded Julius I. in 352. He was compelled by the emperor Constantius to consent to the condemnation of Athanasius. He died in 366.—Platina. Dupin.

LICETUS (Fortunius), a physician, was born in the state of Genoa, in 1577, and became professor of philosophy and physic at Padua, where he died in 1656. His book De Monstris is curious and scarce. He wrote some other works.—Moreri.

LICHTENBERG (George Christopher), a learned German writer, was professor of philosophy in the university of Gottingen, and died there in 1799.—Monthly Mag.

LICINIUS (Tegula), a comic Latin poet, who lived about 200 years B. C. His fragments have been published by H. Stephens, and in the Corpus Poetarum of Maittaire. There was an orator and poet of this name, who lived at the same time with Cicero.—Vossius de Poet. Lat.

Licinius (C. Flavius Valenarius), a Roman emperor, was the son of a peasant in Dalmatia: he became a soldier in the Roman army, and Galerius Maximianus made him his coadjutor in the empire, and gave him the government of Pannonia and Phæacia. Constantine had a great esteem for him, and bestowed his sister on him in marriage; but afterwards so serious a difference broke out between the two emperors, as ended in the death of Licinius, after several battles, A. D. 324. His son was put to death two years afterwards.—Moreri.

Licinius (Caius), a Roman tribune, of a plebeian family, who rose to the rank of tribune, when he obtained the surname of Stolo, or Useless Sprout, on account of the law which he enacted forbidding any one to possess more than 500 acres of land, alleging as his reason, that when they cultivated more they could not pull up the useless shoots (Stolones) which grew from the roots of trees. He also made another law, which allowed the plebeians to share the consular dignity with the patricians; and he himself became one of the first plebeian consuls, B. C. 364.—Livy. Pliny. Eutropius.

Liddel (Dr. Duncan), professor of mathematics and medicine in the university of Helmstadt, was born in 1561 at Aberdeen, where he received the first part of his education in language and philosophy. At the age of 18 he repaired to Frankfort, where he made uncommon progress in the mathematics. From Frankfort he removed to Helmstadt, where after being appointed to the mathematical chair, he obtained in 1596 the degree of M. D. and began publicly to teach physic. But neither academical honours, nor the profits of an extensive practice abroad, could make Dr. Liddel forget his native country; he travelled through Germany and Italy, and at length settled in Scotland, where he died in 1613, aged 52. By his last will he bestowed certain lands purchased by him near Aberdeen upon the university there, for the education and support of six poor scholars. His works are, 1. Disputationes Medicinales, Helmstadt, 1608, 4to.; 2. Ars Medica succincte et perspicue explicata, Hamburghi, 1607, 8vo.—Encycl. Brit.

Lievens (John), an historical and portrait painter, was born in 1607 at Leyden. Charles I. of England invited him to his court, where he painted portraits of the royal family and most of the nobility. After remaining here three years he returned to Antwerp, where he died.—Pilkington.

Lieutaud (Joseph), a physician, was born at Aix, in Provence, and became first physician to the king, and in 1752 member of the academy of sciences. He died in 1780. He wrote Anatomical Essays; Elements of Physiology; Synopsis of the Practice of Medicine; and Historia Anatomico Medica, 2 vols 4to.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Ligarius (Quintus), proconsul in Africa, who conducted himself so well in that station, that, at the desire of the people, he was appointed perpetual governor. He opposed Cæsar, who pardoned him after the defeat of Scipio. Not thinking himself safe he kept from Rome, on which account Tubero accused him, but Ligarius was defended by Cicero and acquitted. He was one of the conspirators with Brutus and Cassius against Cæsar.—Cicero Orat. pro Ligario. Plutarch in Vit. Cicer.

Liger (Lewis), a French horticulturist, was born at Auxerre in 1658. He published a Paris Guide, and some works on gardening. He died in 1717.—Nouv. Dict.

Lightfoot (John), a learned divine, was born at Stoke-upon-Trent, in Staffordshire, in 1602, and educated at Christ's college, Cambridge. He became chaplain to sir Rowland Cotton in Shropshire, from whom he learnt the rudiments of the Hebrew language, in which he afterwards acquired a great knowledge and reputation. In 1631 his patron presented him to the living of Ashley, in Staffordshire, which he resigned to his brother in 1642, and removed to London, where he was chosen minister of St. Bartholomew, behind the Exchange. During the civil war he complied with the ruling party, and became member of the assembly of divines, at Westminster, in which he was a frequent speaker. In 1653 he was appointed master of Catherine-hall, Cambridge, and in 1655 he served the office of vice-chancellor. He retained his preferments at the Restoration, and was chosen one of the assistants at the Savoy conference. Dr. Lightfoot died in 1675. His works, which are a treasure of biblical learning, were published in 2 vols. 1684; and a third volume was published by Leusden, at Utrecht, in 1699, folio. His remains, or posthumous tracts and notes on scripture, were published in 1790, in one volume, 8vo.—Life prefixed to his Works. Biog. Brit.

Lignac (Joseph Adrien de), a French priest of the oratory, was born at Poitiers of a noble family. He published Letters to an American on Buffon's Natural History, 2 vols. 12mo.; and other works. He died in 1762.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Ligonier (John earl of), field-marshal of the English army. He served in all the wars of queen Anne, under the duke of Marlborough, with distinguished glory, and was employed in every succeeding war. He died in 1770, aged 92.—Gent. Mag.

Ligorio (Peter), a painter and architect of Naples, who died in 1580. His Designs after the Antique make thirty volumes in folio. Ligorio was nominated architect of the church of St. Peter at Rome, in the pontificate of Paul IV.; but was deprived of that post afterwards, and succeeded by Michael Angelo.—D'Argenville.

Lilburne (John), an enthusiast, was born in the county of Durham in 1618, and bound apprentice to a draper in London.

where he studied puritanical books. In 1636 he became assistant to Dr. Bastwick, and was employed by him in circulating his seditious pamphlets, for which Lilburne was whipped, pilloried, and imprisoned. In his confinement he wrote several virulent tracts against the church, but in 1640 he regained his liberty, and was rewarded by parliament with a grant of 2000*l.* out of the estates of the royalists. He then entered into the army, and became a colonel, in which capacity he behaved gallantly at the battle of Marston-moor; but publishing a libel against the earl of Manchester, he was confined in the Tower. In 1648 he was released and remunerated, but he still continued writing libels, particularly against parliament, for which he was heavily fined and banished. Lilburne withdrew privately to Holland, where he joined the royalists, and proposed to restore the king for 10,000*l.* which offer was treated with contempt. After this he turned quaker, and became a preacher. He died in 1657. Lilburne wrote a number of tracts not worth naming.—Biog. Brit.

Lilienthal (Michael), a learned Prussian, and professor at Konigsberg, who wrote several dissertations in the Memoirs of the academy at Berlin; and other works. He died in 1750.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Lillo (George), a tragic writer, was born in London in 1693. He carried on the business of a jeweller many years with great reputation. His plays, though founded on common incidents, are more affecting than loftier productions. He well knew how to touch the heart, and his pieces, which are subservient to the cause of virtue, are, George Barnwell; Fatal Curiosity; and Arden of Feversham. He died in 1739, aged 47.—Biog. Dram.

Lilly (John), an English writer, was born in Kent, about 1553, and educated at Magdalen college, Oxford, from whence he removed to Cambridge, after taking his degrees in arts. On his arrival in London he became acquainted with some of queen Elizabeth's courtiers, by whom he was caressed as a poet and a wit; and her majesty on particular festivals, honoured his dramatic pieces with her presence. He attended the court for thirteen years; yet notwithstanding his reputation as an author, he was under the necessity of petitioning the queen for some small stipend to support him in his old age. He died about 1600. He wrote Euphues, a description of different characters; also some plays, as Endimion; Campaspe; Midas, acted before queen Elizabeth; the Maid's Metamorphosis; Woman in the Moon, &c.—Ib.

Lilly (William), an English astrologer, was born in Leicestershire, in 1602. After receiving a common education he came to London, and became book-keeper to the master of the salters' company, on whose death he married his widow. In 1632 he became the pupil of Evans the astrologer, and soon excelled his master. He was employed by both parties during the civil wars, and even Charles I. is said to have made use of him. Lilly was certainly consulted respecting the king's projected escape from Carisbrook castle. He, however, gained more from the parliament party; and the predictions contained in his almanacks had a wonderful effect upon the soldiers and common people. After the Restoration he was examined respecting the king's executioner, who he affirmed was cornet Joyce. He died at Hersham in 1681. His principal works are, 1. Christian Astrology, 4to.; 2. A Collection of Nativities; 3. Observations on the Life and Death of Charles, late King of England; 4. Annus Tenebrosus, or the Black Year.—Biog. Brit.

Lily (William), a famous grammarian, was born at Odiham, in Hampshire, about 1466, and educated at Magdalen college, Oxford, where he took his degree of B. A., and then went on a pilgrimage to the Holy Land. In this journey he learned the Greek language at Rhodes. On his return to England in 1509 he was appointed master of St. Paul's school; which trust he discharged with great reputation, and brought up many eminent scholars. He died of the plague in 1522. His Latin Grammar, which was ordered by royal authority to be used in all schools, was not wholly of his own composition, part of it being written by cardinal Wolsey, and part by Erasmus and Colet. Though still the foundation made use of in public seminaries, it has been severely censured by Ascham and others. Lily wrote several grammatical pieces.—Biog. Brit.

Lily (George), eldest son of the above, was born in London, and educated at Magdalen college, Oxford, after which he became prebendary of Canterbury. He was the first who published an exact map of Britain, and died in 1559. He also wrote some books on the English history.—Biog. Brit.

Limborch (Philip), a learned divine, was born at Amsterdam, in 1633, and educated among the remonstrants, and in 1654 became a minister of Haerlem, from whence he removed to Amsterdam, and the following succeeded Episcopius in the professorship. In 1686 he published through four editions, folio, which he had a dispute with Orobio, a Spanish Jew, an account of which was published under the title of Collocatio Amicorum Tractatus de Veritate Religionis Christianæ Amico Eruditio Judæo. In 1694 he recovered a young woman to christianity, who had been perverted to judaism. Limborch died in 1712. Besides the above he published the History of the Inquisition, and several of the works of Episcopius, his great uncle.—Le Clerc's Funeral Discourse on Limborch. Mor.

LINACRE or LYNACER (Thomas), an English physician, was born at Canterbury, about 1460, and educated at the King's school there, from whence he was sent to All Souls college, Oxford, of which he became fellow. After completing his academical studies he travelled to Italy, where he learned Greek. On his return he took his doctor's degree, and was made professor of physic at Oxford. Henry VII. appointed him preceptor to prince Arthur; he also became physician to the king, and to Henry VIII. He founded two medical lectures at Oxford and one at Cambridge; but that which most effectually immortalized his name among the faculty, is his being the first founder of the college of physicians in London. Vexed at the wretched state of physic in England, he applied to cardinal Wolsey, and obtained a patent by which the physicians of London were incorporated, that illiterate and ignorant medicasters might no longer be allowed to practise the art of healing. Linacre was the first president, and held the office as long as he lived. In 1509 he entered into orders, and obtained the precentorship of York, which he resigned on being made prebendary of Westminster. He died in 1524, aged 64, and was buried in St. Paul's. He was a man of great natural sagacity, a skilful physician, a profound grammarian, and one of the best Greek and Latin scholars of his time. He published, 1. A Latin Translation of Proclus's Sphere, 1499; 2. The Rudiments of Grammar, for the use of the princess Mary; 3. De emendata Structura Latini Sermonis: 4. A Translation of some of the works of Galen.—Wood. Biog. Br.

LINANT (Michael), a French poet, who obtained the prize of the academy three times, and published some pieces of merit. He was the intimate friend of Voltaire; and died in 1749, aged 41.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

LIND (James), an English physician, who tict some excellent medical treatises, par- 8vo. v one on the Diseases of Seamen,

LIND died in 1794.—Europ. Mag was born (William), a Dutch divine, Philip II. kin Dordt, and appointed by Ruremonde, fr Spain, the first bishop of removed to the se hence in 1588 he was same year, aged 63. Ghent. He died the logical works in Latil wrote some theothe tenets of the Romanie fly in defence of LINDENBRUCH (Fred arch.—Moreri.

Flemish critic of the 17th cen), a learned lished editions of Virgil, Terer, who publassic authors; he also compose and other work entituled, Codex Legum an curious folio. He died in 1688.—Nouv. Di rum, LINDSAY (John), a learned nonjuri Hist. vine, who was educated at St. Mary Hi- Oxford. He officiated many years to a co gregation of his own sentiments in Alders gate-street, and was corrector of the press to Mr. Bowyer. He died in 1768, aged 82. He translated Mason's Vindication of the Church of England, folio, 1726: and wrote a Short History of the Royal Succession; and Remarks on Whiston's Scripture Politics.—Anecd. of Bowyer.

LINDSAY (sir David), a Scotch poet, was a native of the county of Fife, and educated at the university of St. Andrews. He was at the battle of Pavia, and on his return to Scotland James V. appointed him master of the heralds' office. He wrote several poems, some of which have been printed, particularly his satires on the clergy. He died in 1557, aged 61.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

LINDSAY (David), a relation of the above, was born in 1527. He was a zealous promoter of the Reformation, and died in 1593. He wrote the History of Scotland from 1437 to 1542.—Ibid.

LINDWOOD (William), an English prelate, was a professor at Oxford, in the reign of Henry V. who sent him ambassador to Spain in 1422. In 1434 he was made bishop of St. David's, and died in 1446. He compiled the Constitutions of the Archbishops of Canterbury from Stephen Langton to Archbishop Chichely, printed at Paris in 1505, and at Oxford in 1663.—Dupin. Wood.

LINGELBACH (John), a German painter, was born at Frankfort, in 1625. He travelled into Holland, France, and Italy, for improvement, and in 1650 settled at Amsterdam. He painted landscapes, enriched with views of antiquity and figures.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

LINGUET (Simon-Nicholas-Henry), a French political writer, was born at Rheims, in 1736. In his early years he was in the suite of the French general who commanded the army against Portugal, and while in Spain he acquired a knowledge of the language. On his return to France he studied the law, and practised with reputation; but his brethren of the profession, jealous of his success, framed an accusation against him, and he was forbidden to plead. He then published a periodical journal, which was suppressed; and apprehending danger to himself, he withdrew to Holland, and from thence to England. He next went to Brussels, and wrote to the count de Vergennes, requesting leave to return to France, which was granted; but new complaints being made against him he was sent to the Bastile. On his release he came to England, where he wrote his Memoirs of the Bastile: from England he went to Brussels, and recommenced his political annals; an article in which, on the liberty of the navigation of the Scheldt, gave so much satisfaction to the emperor Joseph II. that he rewarded him with a present, and permitted him to settle at Vienna. But Linguet joined the revolutionists of Brabant, for which he was expelled from Germany; and in 1791 he returned to Paris, where he declaimed at the bar of the national assembly in behalf of the negroes of St. Domingo. He was guillotined in 1794. Besides the above he wrote a Theory of Laws; History of the Age of Alexander; the Fanaticism of Philosophers; History of the Revolutions of the Roman Empire; History of the Jesuits; Reflections on Light; and several other works.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Linière (Francis), a French poet, whose verses are elegant, and his satires pointed; but he was a man of dissolute life, and an atheist. He died in 1704, aged 76.—Ibid.

Linley (Thomas), a celebrated English musician and composer, who was also one of the proprietors of Drury-lane theatre. He died in 1795.—Europ. Mag. Gent. Mag.

Linnæus (Charles von), or Linné, a celebrated naturalist, was the son of a clergyman, and born at Roeshult, in the province of Smaland in Sweden, in 1707. He studied physic at Leyden, and in 1735 took his doctor's degree in that faculty, after which he settled at Stockholm. At the age of 34 he was appointed professor of physic and botany in the university of Upsal. He also became physician to the king, who created him a knight of the polar star, and conferred on him a pension with a patent of nobility. He was the founder and first president of the academy of Stockholm, and a member of several foreign societies. Linnæus travelled into Norway, Dalecarlia, Lesert Lapland, Germany, Holland, France, and England, in eager pursuit of his favourite science. In this country he was greatly noticed by our most famous naturalists, and brought a letter of introduction to sir Hans Sloane from Boerhaave. He invented a new method of dividing plants into classes, and he extended the same to animals. The ardour of Linnæus's inclinations to the study of nature, and the uncommon application which he bestowed upon it, gave him a most comprehensive view both of its pleasures and usefulness. Availing himself of the advantages which he derived from a large share of eloquence, and an animated style, he never failed to display, in a lively and convincing manner, the relation subsisting between the study of nature and the public good, to incite the great to countenance and protect it; to encourage and allure youth into its pursuits, by opening manifold sources of pleasure to their view, and shewing them how greatly this agreeable employment would add both to their comfort and emolument. He also laboured to inspire the opulent with a taste for his favourite study; and wished that those who were devoted to an ecclesiastic life should share a portion of natural science, not only as a means of sweetening their rural situation, confined as many are to a country residence, but as what would most inevitably lead, in a variety of instances, to discoveries which only such situations could give rise to, and which the learned in great cities could have no opportunities to make. Linnæus lived to enjoy the fruit of his own labour in an uncommon degree. Under his culture natural history raised itself in Sweden to a state of perfection unknown elsewhere, and was from thence disseminated throughout Europe. His pupils dispersed themselves all over the globe, and, with their master's fame, extended both his science and their own. He lived to see the sovereigns of Europe establish several public institutions for the study of natural history, and even professorships appointed in divers universities for a similar purpose, which do honour to their founders and patrons, and which have excited a curiosity for the science, and a sense of its worth, that cannot fail to further its progress, and in time raise it to that rank which it is entitled to hold among the pursuits of mankind. He died in 1778. His works are, 1. Systema Naturæ, sistens Regna tria Naturæ, 1735, folio, and 1756, 2 vols. octavo; 2. Bibliotheca Botanica, octavo; 3. Hortus Cliffortianus, folio; 4. Critica Botanica, octavo; 5. Flora Laponica, octavo; 6. Genera Plantarum, earumque Characteres Naturales, octavo; 7. Flora Suecica; 8. Fauna Suecica, octavo; 9. Flora Zaylanica, quarto; 10. Hortus Upsaliensis, octavo; 11. Amœnitates Academicæ, 5 volumes octavo; 12. Materia Medica, octavo; 13. Animalium Specierum in Classes, octavo; 14. Oratio de Incrementis Telluris habitabilis, octavo; 15. Nemesis divina; 16. Plantæ Surinamenses. His son Charles Linnæus was professor of medicine at Upsal, and died in 1783, aged 45: he was the last of the family.—Life by Pulteney.

Lint (Peter Van), an historical and portrait painter of Antwerp, was born in 1609. He painted in Italy several years, and returned to his own country increased in wealth and reputation. A relation of his, Hendrick van Lint, was an eminent painter in landscape, and executed some fine views about Rome. Two of his pictures are in the possession of the earl of Moira.—Pilkington.

Lintrusi (Severinus), bishop of Wiburg in Jutland, and professor of divinity and eloquence at Copenhagen. He wrote several theological books in Latin. He died in 1732.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Linus (St.), said to have been the successor of St. Peter in the bishopric of Rome, but Tertullian asserts that St. Clement succeeded that apostle; the Roman church enrols Linus among her prelates and martyrs.—Dupin. Moreri.

Liotard (John Stephen), a painter in crayons, was born at Geneva, in 1703, and studied at Paris, after which he went to Rome, and travelled into the East. In 1772 he visited England, where he disposed of his pictures by auction. There is a portrait of him in Walpole's Anecdotes of Painting. He died about 1780.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Liotard (Peter), a French botanist, was originally a peasant in Dauphiny, and afterwards a common soldier; but being wounded at the taking of Mahon, he left the army and went to live with his uncle, an herbalist at Grenoble. Liotard was above 40 years old when he began to study botany, but he applied to it with such ardour that in 1782 he was appointed director of the public garden at Grenoble, where he died in 1796. He was intimate with Rousseau, and had Linnæus's System of Plants by heart.—Ibid.

Lippi (Philip), called the Old, an historical painter, was born at Florence, in 1421, and died in 1488. He had been a monk of the order of Carmelites, but quitted the habit and applied to painting, under Massacio, whose style he adopted. He was a man of loose character, and left a son named Philip, who was also a painter. He died in 1505, aged 45.—De Piles.

Lippi (Laurence), a painter and poet, was born at Florence, in 1606, and died in 1664. He painted many grand designs for the chapels and convents of his native city, by which he acquired great reputation; yet although he was fond of imitating simple nature without any embellishments from invention, his works are held in the highest esteem for the graceful airs of the heads, for the correctness of his outline, and for the elegant disposition of the figures. As a poet he is known by a burlesque piece entituled, Malmantile Raquistato, printed at Florence in 1688, quarto, under the name of Perloni Zipoli. It was re-printed in 1731, with notes, quarto; and at Paris in 1768, 12mo.—Moreri.

Lipsius (Justus), a learned critic, was born near Brussels, in 1547. He studied the civil law at Louvain, and in 1567 became secretary to cardinal Granville at Rome, but two years afterwards he returned to Louvain, where he read lectures in history and belles-lettres with great reputation. He was some time a professor at Cologne, and next at Leyden; but in 1596 he returned to Louvain, and died there in 1606. His changes in religion were remarkable; being a Roman catholic, then a Lutheran, afterwards a Calvinist, and lastly a catholic again. His learning was great, but his superstition contemptible, attributing some of his pieces to the inspiration of the Virgin Mary. His works were published at Antwerp in 6 volumes, folio, 1637. The principal are, a Commentary on Tacitus; Saturnalia; De Militia Romana; Electorum; Satira Menippæa; De Amphitheatris; De rectâ pronunciatione Linguæ Latinæ.—Bayle. Moreri.

Liron (John), a benedictine of the congregation of St. Maur, who published, 1. Bibliotheque des Auteurs Chartrains; 2. Les Amenités de la Critique; 3. Les Singularités Historiques et Litterairés, 4 volumes, 12mo. He was born at Chartres in 1665, and died at Mans in 1749.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Lis (John van der), a painter, was born at Oldenburgh, in 1570. His subjects were usually taken from the sacred history, and he also delighted in representing moral sports. He died in 1629. There was another painter of this name, a native of Breda, and the disciple of Poelemberg. He painted historical subjects.—Houbraken.

Lisle (sir George), a gallant English officer, was the son of a bookseller in London, but on the breaking out of the civil wars he entered into the royal army, where he behaved so well as to rise to a command. At the battle of Newbury, when it grew so dark that his men could not distinguish him, he put his shirt over his clothes that they might be encouraged by his presence and example. He bravely held out the town of Colchester a long time against the parliament's forces, and surrendered as prisoner of war, but was basely put to death by the victors, in 1648.—Clarendon.

Lisle (Claude de), a French writer on geography and history, was born at Vaucouleurs in Lorraine, in 1644. He was bred to the law, but quitted that profession and became a teacher of geography, and had for a pupil the duke of Orleans, afterwards regent of France. He died in 1720. His works are, Historical Relation of the Kingdom of Siam, 12mo.; an Abridgement of Universal History, 7 volumes, 12mo.; Introduction to Geography, with a Treatise on the Sphere, 2 volumes, 12mo.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Lisle (William de), the son of the above, was born at Paris, in 1675. In 1699 he published an accurate map of the world, for which he was elected a member of the academy of sciences. He was geographical tutor to Louis XV. for whose use he executed several valuable works. He died in 1726. He wrote an Introduction to Geography.—Ibid.

Lisle (Joseph Nicholas de), an eminent astronomer, was brother of the above, and born at Paris in 1688. At the age of eighteen he made an accurate observation of the great total eclipse of the sun, and in 1714 was admitted a member of the academy of sciences. In 1724 he visited England, and was greatly esteemed by Newton and Halley; he was also chosen a fellow of the royal society. In 1726 he was invited to Petersburgh, where he obtained a considerable pension and the charge of the observatory: in 1747 he returned to Paris, and died in 1768. His greatest work is the History of Astronomy, 2 vols. quarto.—Ibid.

Lisola (Francis baron de), a French statesman, was born at Salins, in 1613. He resided four years in England as ambassador from the emperor Ferdinand III., and was rwards envoy at the court of Madrid. died in 1677. He wrote a work enti- l, Bouclier d'Etat et de Justice; and Letters and Memoirs have been pub- d in 12mo.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

STER (sir Matthew), an eminent phy- n and president of the college, was born hornton, in Yorkshire, and bred at Ox- , where he became fellow of Oriel col- but took his doctor's degree at Basil. is return to England he was appointed cian to Anne, queen of James I., and e accession of Charles I. he became ician to that monarch, who conferred m the honour of knighthood. He suf- considerably for his loyalty in the ci- ars, and died near Louth, in Lincoln- , in 1657, aged 92.—Wood. Biog. Brit.

STER (Martin), nephew of the above, born in Buckinghamshire, and edu- under his uncle, who sent him to St. 's college, Cambridge, of which he be- fellow. He settled at York as a phy- n, and on account of his skill in na- history, was elected fellow of the society. He then removed to Lon- and became a member of the college ysicians. In 1699 he published an nt of his journey to Paris, which idiculed by Dr. King in his Journey ondon. In 1709 he was appointed cian to queen Anne. He died in 1712. rote several books on natural history, cularly shells, in Latin.—Biog. Brit.

THGOW (William), an extraordinary n, was born in Scotland. He travelled gh various parts of Europe and the on foot, and in his travels experienced singular adventures. At Malaga he eized by the Inquisition, and put to rture, but escaped with his life, and s arrival in England was presented to I. on a feather-bed, being so man- as to be incapable of standing. On covery he applied to count Gondo- he Spanish ambassador, who promised reparation, but deceived him; which ovoked Lithgow that he assaulted t court, for which he was sent to the alsea, where he remained a prisoner nonths. He published a curious ac- of his travels.—Granger.

TLE (William), an ancient English ian, known also by the name of Gu- is Naubrigensis, was born at Bid- n, in Yorkshire, A. D. 1136, and ted in the abbey of Newborough, in me county, where he became a monk. advanced years he composed a His- f England, in five books, from the an Conquest to A. D. 1197, which racity, regularity of disposition, and of language, is one of the most va- productions of that period.—Encycl.

TELTON, or LYTTLETON (Thomas), us judge, was born in Devonshire, family of Westcott, but he changed his name to oblige his maternal grandfather, in Worcestershire, about the beginning of the 15th century, and after receiving a liberal education, was entered of the Inner Temple. His abilities procured him from Henry VI. the place of steward of the court: and in 1455 he went the northern circuit as a judge. Edward IV. appointed him one of the judges of the court of common pleas, and in 1475 he was created knight of the bath. He died in 1481, and was interred in the cathedral of Worcester. He left three sons, who became eminent in the law. It was for the use of one of them, namely, Richard, that he wrote his famous book on Tenures, which was printed first about 1477. His 3d son Thomas was knighted by Henry VII. for apprehending Lambert Simnel. The eldest son, sir William, died at his seat in Worcestershire in 1508. Sir Thomas Littleton's book of Tenures has been often printed, with sir Edward Coke's Commentary.—Biog. Brit.

LITTLETON (John), a descendant from the judge, sat in parliament for Worcestershire, in the 27th of Elizabeth; but being a zealous follower of the earl of Essex, was taken up, fined, and condemned for a conspiracy, with some others. By the interest of sir Walter Raleigh, to whom he wrote an admirable letter, he was pardoned, and died in prison in 1600. Several of his epistles are in the Biographia Britannica.

LITTLETON (Edward), an English judge, was of the same family as the preceding, and born in Shropshire, in 1589. He received his education at Christ Church college, Oxford, from whence he removed to the Inner Temple. In 1628 he was in parliament, and was one of the members sent up to the lords with the petition of right; he was also a manager of the accusation against the duke of Buckingham. In 1639 he was made chief justice of the common pleas, and the year following lord keeper of the great seal, at which time he was created a peer by the title of lord Littleton He lost the king's confidence, however, by leaning too much to the opposition party, who were also equally jealous of him. He died at Oxford in 1645.—Biog. Brit.

LITTLETON (Adam), a learned divine, was born at Hales Owen, in Shropshire, in 1627, and educated at Westminster school, from whence he was elected student of Christ church, Oxford, but was ejected by the parliamentary visitors in 1648. He then became usher to Dr. Busby, and in 1658 was appointed under-master. In 1674, being D. D. he obtained the living of Chelsea, and a prebend of Westminster. He died in 1694. He composed a Latin and English Dictionary, several sermons, and other works.—Ibid.

LITTLETON (Edward), an ingenious divine, was educated at Eton, from whence he removed to King's college, Cambridge.

In 1720 he was appointed under-master of Eton school, and in 1727 elected fellow of the college. In 1730 he was appointed chaplain to the king, and the same year took his degree of LL. D. He died in 1734, and was buried in his parish church of Maple Derham, in Oxfordshire. Two volumes of his Sermons were printed after his death, and some of his poems are in Dodsley's collection.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Livia, the wife of Tiberius Claudius Nero, by whom she had the emperor Tiberius, and Drusus Germanicus. Augustus fell in love with her, and married her while she was pregnant. She prevailed on Augustus to adopt her children by Drusus: but she was suspected of poisoning the emperor to procure the throne for her son Tiberius, who treated her with ingratitude, and when she died, A. D. 29, refused her funeral honours.—Crevier.

Livinæus (John), a learned divine of the 16th century, was a native of Dendermonde, and a canon of Antwerp, where he died in 1599. He translated into Latin some of the works of Gregory Nyssen, St. Chrysostom, and other fathers. He also edited the Panegyrici Veteres, Antwerp, 1599, 8vo.—Moreri.

Livingston (John), a Scotch presbyterian divine, was born in 1603, and educated at Glasgow, where he took the degree of M. A. He was banished from Scotland, in 1663, for refusing to take the oath of allegiance, on which he went to Holland, where he died in 1672. He published some theological works.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Livius (Andronicus), a Roman comic poet, who flourished B. C. 240. He was the freedman of M. Livius Salinator, and preceptor to his children. He acted in his own plays, which are lost.—Moreri.

Livius (Titus), an illustrious historian, was born at Patavium, or Padua, of an ancient family. He resided at Rome in the time of Augustus, to whom he read his History as he composed it. That emperor appointed him tutor to his grandson Claudius. On the death of his patron he returned to his native place, where he died, A. D. 17, in the 67th year of his age. The best editions of his Roman History are that of Gronovius, Leyden, 1679, 3 vols. 8vo., and that of Crevier, Paris, 1735, 6 vols. 4to. An English translation has been published by Mr. Baker, in 6 vols. 8vo.—Vossius de Hist. Lat. Moreri.

Lloyd (William), a learned prelate, was born at Tilehurst, in Berkshire, in 1627, and entered, in 1638, at Oriel college, Oxford, from whence he removed to Jesus college, where he took his bachelor's degree in 1642, and was elected fellow. At the Restoration he was appointed chaplain to the king, and in 1676 he obtained the living of St. Martin in the Fields. In 1680 he was promoted to the bishopric of St. Asaph, and in 1688 he was sent to the Tower with six other bishops, for addressing the king against the declaration for liberty of conscience. Soon after the Revolution he was made almoner to king William and queen Mary. In 1692 he was translated to the see of Litchfield and Coventry, from whence, in 1699, he was removed to Worcester. He died in 1717. Bishop Lloyd wrote several tracts against popery; sermons; the History of the Government of the Church of Great Britain; a Chronological Account of the Life of Pythagoras; a Dissertation on Daniel's seventy Weeks; and other works.—Biog. Brit.

Lloyd (Robert), an English poet, was the son of Dr. Pierson Lloyd, second master of Westminster school, where Robert received his education, and from whence he was elected to Trinity college, Cambridge. He was some time an usher in Westminster school, and while in that situation published a poem called the Actor, which possessed considerable merit. On account of his irregularities he was obliged to resign his place in the school, after which he subsisted almost wholly on charity, particularly that afforded by his friend Churchill. He died in 1764. His poems were published in 2 vols. 8vo. 1774. Lloyd was the author of the Capricious Lover, a comic opera, 1764, 8vo., and other dramatic works.—Biog. Dram. Gen. B. D.

Lloyd (Nicholas), an English divine, who was rector of St. Mary, Newington, Surry, where he died in 1680, aged 49. He compiled an Historical, Geographical, and Poetical Dictionary, to which Hoffman and the editors of Moreri were much indebted. It was printed at Oxford, in 1670, 1 vol. folio, and in 1695, in 4to.—Gen. Hist. Dict.

Llywarch ab Llywelyn, an ancient Welsh bard, who flourished from about A. D. 1160 to 1220. Many of his pieces are in the Welsh Archaiology, and contain several historical notices of value.—Owen's Cambr. Biog.

Llywarch Hen, a celebrated Welsh poet who flourished about 630. Many of his compositions are extant, and were collected and printed by Mr. Owen, who says that he came from the north of England. He distinguished himself in the defence of his country against the Saxons; and he lost twenty-four sons in the same cause. He died in a solitary cell in the parish of Llanvor, near Bala, aged 150.—Ibid.

Llywelyn ab Grufydd, the last sovereign of Wales, who reigned from A. D. 1254 to 1282. He was a brave prince, and resisted the ambition of Edward I. king of England, a long time, but he at last fell, and with him the independence of the Welsh as a distinct nation.—Ibid.

Llywelyn ab Jorwerth, a prince of North Wales from A. D. 1194 to 1240. He obtained the throne by deposing his uncle ryd ab Owain, who had rendered him- odious to his subjects by his cruelties. welyn was distinguished by his enter- e and bravery.---Owen's Camb. Biog.

LYWELYN ab Sitsylt, a Welsh prince succeeded to the principalities of South les and Powys, in 998. In 1021, Anlaff, he head of a Scotch army, invaded his itories, and was joined by Hywil and redydd, sons of Edwin ab Einion. welyn marched against them, and de- ed them, but fell in the battle.—Ibid.

LYWELYN VAEDD, the son of Cywryd, elebrated Welsh poet, who flourished ween A. D. 1230 and 1280. Some of poems are in the Welsh Archaiology.---

LYWELYN O LANGEWYDD, or Llywelyn , an eminent poet of Glamorgan, who ected the System of Bardism, which ections are now preserved. He presided veral meetings of the bards, and died 616.---Ibid.

LYWELYN (Thomas), a Welsh divine, a native of Glamorganshire, and died 796. He published a History of the erent editions of the Welsh Bible ---Ibid.

OBB (Theophilus), an English physician, the son of a dissenting minister, and l at London in 1763, aged 87. He te some medical books, and some on ious subjects.---Mortimer.

OBEL (Mathias), an eminent botanist physician, was born at Lisle, in 1538. studied at Montpelier, and while there lied with great assiduity to botanical arches. After travelling through Swit- and, Germany, and Italy, he visited land about 1570, and was greatly es- ned by several noblemen and appointed sician and botanist to James I. He died 616. Lobel had the superintendance large garden at Hackney, cultivated he expense of lord Zouch. He wrote, Stirpium Adversaria, first printed at don in 1570; 2. Observationes, sive pium Historiæ, cui annexum est Adver- orum Volumen, fol. 1576; 3. Dilucidæ plicium Medicamentorum Explicati- s, &c.---Pulteney.

OBINEAU (Guy Alexis), a French eccle- tic and historical writer, was born at nes, in 1666. He became a benedictine, died in 1727. His works are, a His- of Britanny, 2 vols. folio; History of Conquest of Spain by the Moors, 12mo.; tory of Paris, 5 vols. fol.; History of Saints of Britanny, fol.---Moreri.

OBKOWITZ (Bolesias de Hassenstein, ba- de), a Bohemian nobleman and man of ers. After travelling into various coun- s, and bearing arms with reputation, mbraced the ecclesiastical state, and employed in public affairs. He died in 0. His Latin poems were printed at gue, in 1563, and 1570.---Moreri.

OBO (Jerome), a Portuguese jesuit, who velled through Abyssinia as a missionary, published a curious account of that country, which was rendered into French by Le Grand, from whence it was trans- lated into English by Dr. Samuel John- son. Lobo died rector of the college of Coimbra in Portugal, in 1678, aged 85.— Moreri.

LOBO (Rodriguez Francis), a Portu- gueze poet, was born in Estramadura. He wrote a comedy called Euphrosyne, which is a great favourite among his countrymen. He was also the author of a folio volume of poems, printed in 1721.—Ib.

LOCKART (Alexander), a Scotch writer, was born near Edinburgh, in 1673, and bred to the law. He was a member of parlia- ment at the time of the union, which mea- sure he violently opposed; as he also did the Hanoverian succession. He was killed in a duel in 1732. His Memoirs of Scot- land were published at London in 1714.— Gen. Biog. Dict.

LOCKE (John), a celebrated philosophee, was born at Wrington, in Somersetshire, in 1632, and educated at Westminster school, from whence he removed to Christ-church, Oxford, of which he became student. After taking his degrees in arts, he entered on the study of physic, in which he made great proficiency. Lord Ashley, afterwards earl of Shaftesbury, became his patron and urged him to apply to the study of politics. Mr. Locke followed his advice, and rendered himself serviceable to his lordship and his party; who, having obtained the grant of Carolina, employed him in drawing up the constitution for the government of that province. Lord Shaftesbury being ap- pointed chancellor in 1672, made Mr. Locke secretary of presentations, which place he lost the year following, when his patron was deprived of the great seal. He con- tinued, however, his secretaryship of the board of trade, of which lord Shaftesbury was president. In 1674 that commission was dis- solved, and Mr. Locke being in an ill state of health went to Montpellier, and contin- ued abroad till 1679, when he was sent for by lord Shaftesbury who was appointed president of the council; but in 1682 that nobleman, to avoid a prosecution for high treason withdrew to Holland, and was ac- companied by his friend. In 1684 Mr. Locke was removed from his students place at Christ church, by the king's com- mand; and the year following the English envoy demanded him of the states of Hol- land, on suspicion of his being concerned in Monmouth's rebellion, which occasioned him to keep private several months, during which he was employed in finishing hit Essay on Human Understanding, which however was not published till after the Revolution, when he returned to England, and was made commissioner of appeals. In 1695 he was appointed one of the commis- sioners of trade and plantations, and he might have had other preferment, but the state of his health led him to decline the advantageous offers that were made him

He spent the latter years of his life at Oates, in Essex, the seat of sir Francis and lady Masham, who invited him to reside in their family. Mr. Locke lived in as much ease as if the house had been his own: he found besides in lady Masham a friend and companion exactly suited to his taste; a lady of contemplation and studious turn, and particularly inured from her youth to deep and refined speculations in theology, metaphysics and morality: he had the additional satisfaction of seeing her only son bred up on the plan which he had laid down as the best method of education, the success of which seemed to sanction his judgment in the choice of that method. He published his letters on Toleration, to promote the scheme which king William had so much at heart, of a comprehension with the dissenters. This drew him into a controversy which was scarcely ended, when he entered into another in defence of his Essays; but the asthma, his constitutional disease, increasingwith his years, began to subdue him, and he became so inferior, that 1700 he resigned his seat at the board of trade. He could no longer bear the air of London, so as to insure a regular attendance. After this resignation he continued altogether at Oates, devoting himself to study particularly of the scriptures. In this retirement he also wrote several of his works, and died there in 1704. His remains were interred in the church of Oates, where a monument has been erected to his memory. His principal works are, an Essay on Human Understanding, 2 vols. 8vo.; Letters on Toleration, 4to.; Treatise on Civil Government, 8vo; and Thoughts concerning Education, 12mo. These with his Letters and miscellaneous pieces have been printed together in 3 vols. folio, and 9 vols. 8vo.—Biog. Brit.

Locker (John), a learned gentleman, was born of a good family in Middlesex, and educated at merchant-taylors school, from whence he removed to Merton college, Oxford, and afterwards to Gray's Inn, where he studied the law, and was called to the bar. He translated the two first books of Voltaire's life of Charles XII. and wrote the preface. He also made collections towards a life of lord Bacon, which he communicated to Dr. Birch and Mr. Mallett. He died in 1760.—Anecd. of Bowyer.

Lockman (John), an English writer, was the author of Rosalinda, a musical drama; and David's Lamentations, an oratorio. He was also one of the compilers of the Great Historical Dictionary, and died in 1771.—Biog. Dram.

Lockyer (Nicholas), a puritan divine, who was chaplain to Cromwell, and provost of Eton college, but at the Restoration he was ejected from that place and from a living in the city. He died in 1684. He published some sermons.—Calamy.

Lodbrog (Regner), king of Denmark, was a warrior, poet, and painter. He flourished in the 9th century. His poems are extant, but considered as wild and fanatical. —Gen. Biog. Dict.

Lodge (Thomas), an English physician and poet, was educated at Oxford, but took his doctor's degree at Avignon. He settled in London and being a Roman-catholic, had great practice among people of that persuasion. He died in 1625. He wrote two dramatic pieces: 1. Wounds of Civil War, a tragedy; 2. Looking-glass for London and England, a tragi-comedy. He also assisted Robert Green in writing some of his works.—Langbaine.

Loewendal (Ulric Frederic Woldemar count de), a brave general, was born at Hamburgh, in 1700. He began his military career in the Polish service, from whence he passed into that of Denmark against Sweden. He next joined the imperial army, and distinguished himself in the famous battle of Peterwaradin, and at the sieges of Temeswar and Belgrade. He had a part in most of the actions of that great war, after which Augustus king of Poland made him field-marshal and inspector-general of the Saxon infantry. He was next in the service of the Russians, as commander in chief: and his reputation was so great that the king of France invited him into his employ, which he accepted. He displayed his skill and valour on many occasions particularly at the battle of Fontenoy in 1745; but his greatest exploit was the taking Bergen-op-Zoom by assault, Sept. 16, 1747. This place had hitherto been deemed impregnable. For this he was created field-marshal of France. He died in 1755.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Logan (John), a Scotch divine and poet, was born in the county of Mid Lothian, about 1748, and educated at Edinburgh. In 1770 he was ordained minister at South Leith. In 1781 he published the Philosophy of History, which he had delivered as lectures at Edinburgh. The same year he printed his poems in one volume, of which a second edition appeared in 1782. The year following he offered his tragedy of Runnamede to the manager of Covent-garden theatre, but it was refused a licence on account of some political observations. It was however performed at Edinburgh with applause. His last publication was a pamphlet, entitled, A Review of the Principal Charges against Mr. Hastings, for which the publisher was tried and acquitted. Mr. Logan died in London in 1788. Two volumes of his Sermons have been published since his death.—Gent. Mag.

Logan (Frederic baron de), a German poet, was born in 1604, and died in 1655. Lessing and Ramler have published a new edition of his Epigrams, which are much esteemed.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Loges (Mary Bruneau), an eminent lady, was the wife of the signior , gentleman of the bedchamber to . She was a protestant, and greatned by Malherbe, Balzac, and other and ingenious men, for her great ta- She died in 1641, but left no pros of her mind by which to judge she merited the encomiums passed of being a divinity, and the tenth Moreri.

ENSTEIN (Daniel Gaspard de), a German nobleman, was born at ch, in Silesia, in 1638, and died in He wrote some dramatic pieces; an l romance, entitled Arminius, or ender of Germanic Liberty, 2 vols, etical Reflections on the 53d Chapiah, &c.—Ibid.

(Nicholas), painter, was born at 1624. He studied under Le Brun, ted figures, landscapes, architecornaments. He died professor of emy in 1679. His son Alexis was ngraver.—D'Argenville.

AN, an Abyssinian philosopher, hardly any authentic particulars vn. He appears to have been of in, and some say he was a slave. ed that he obtained his liberty on wing occasion. His master having m a bitter melon to eat, he eat Surprized at his exact obedience, er asked how it was possible for eat such a nauseous fruit? The lied that he had received so many rom the kindness of his master, that e no wonder, if once in his life he er melon from his hand. This genswer immediately procured him y. There are so many circumelated of him that agree with id of Æsop, and their fables are alike, that both are conjectured to n one and the same person. Lokles were printed in a collection id at Paris in 1724.—Moreri.

RD (Walter), the founder of a rect in Germany about 1315. After many followers on the continent o England, where he also had nuisciples. The Lollards were, aco some, grossly licentious and hereof this we have only the testimoir enemies. Lollard himself was Cologne in 1322.—Moreri. Dupin.

LOMMIUS (Josse van), an ingesician, was born at Buren, in Guel- 1500, and died in 1562. He pubommentarii de Sanitate tuenda; onum Medicinalium Libri tres; lis Febribus. All his works were gether at Amsterdam in 3 vols. 5. His Latin style is pure and Moreri.

zo (John Paul), a painter, was lan, in 1558, and died in 1598. l in history, landscape, and portrait; and wrote, 1. A Treatise on Painting, in Italian, 1585, 4to.; 2. Idea de Tempio della Pittura, 1590, 4to.—Tiraboschi.

LOMBARD (Peter), called the master of the sentences, was born at Novara in Lombardy, and educated at Paris. He was tutor to prince Philip, son of Lewis the big king of France, who gave him the bishopric of Paris. He died in 1164. His work on the Sentences has been commented upon by many scholastic writers. He also left Commentaries on the Psalms and St. Paul's Epistles.—Dupin.

LOMBARD (John Louis), an eminent writer on military tactics, was born at Strasburg, in 1723. He was bred to the law, which profession he quitted and became professor of artillery first at Metz, and afterwards at Auxonne in the military school. He died in 1794. He translated into French Robins's Principles of Gunnery; and wrote, 1. Aide Memoire à l'Usage des Officiers d'Artillerie de France, 2 vols. 8vo.; 2. Tables du Tir des Cannons et des Obusiers, 8vo.; 3. Instruction sur la Manœuvre et le Tir du Cannon de Bataille, 8vo.; 4. Traité du Mouvement des Projectiles, 8vo.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

LOMBART (Lambart), a painter, was born at Liege, in 1500. He studied at Rome, and then returned to his own country, where he exercised his profession with reputation. He had also a good knowledge of architecture. He died in 1560.—Pilk.

LOMBART (Peter), an eminent engraver, who flourished about the year 1660. He was a native of Paris, where he learnt the art of engraving. He came to England before the Revolution, because some of his plates for English publication are dated prior to that event. He executed many emblematical and historical plates, but his best works are portraits; of these he produced a considerable number, which are highly esteemed, and are after the manner of Vandyck.—Ency. Brit.

LOMENIE (Henry Augustus, count de Brienne), a French statesman, was the son of Anthony Lomenie, ambassador extraordinary in England, and secretary of state, who died in 1638. The son succeeded him in his places, and managed public affairs with great prudence during the minority of Louis XIV. He died in 1666, aged 71. His memoirs were printed at Amsterdam in 1719, 3 vols. 12mo. His son, Henry Louis count of Brienne, succeeded his father as secretary of state, though very young; but the death of his wife had such an effect on his spirits that he was rendered incapable of discharging the duties of his office, and he was placed under confinement, after committing many extravagances. He died in 1698, aged 56. He wrote Memoirs of his own Life, 3 vols. folio; Satires and Odes; an Account of his Travels; and other works.—Moreri.

Lomenie de Brienne (Stephen Charles de), a French prelate and statesman of the same family as the preceding, was born at Paris, in 1727. In 1760 he became bishop of Sens, and in 1788 a cardinal and prime minister of France. He contributed to the disgrace of Calonne, and yet adopted his plans without having his talents or resolution. In his episcopal character he deserved praise by reforming many abuses, particularly among the monks. At the commencement of the French Revolution, to which he contributed, he returned the cardinal's hat to the pope. He died at Sens in 1798.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Lomonozof, a Russian poet of merit, was the son of a fishmonger, and having fled from his father, he took refuge in a monastery, where he received his education, which he afterwards improved at a German university. In 1741 he returned to his native country, and became member of the academy of Petersburgh, and professor of chemistry. In 1761 he was honoured with the title of counsellor of state but died the same year aged 54. The odes of Lomonozof are greatly admired for originality of invention, sublimity of sentiment, and energy of language, and compensate for the turgid style which, in some instances have been imputed to them, by that spirit and fire which are the principal characteristics in this species of composition. Pindar was his great model. He enriched his native language with various kinds of metre, and seems to have merited the appellation bestowed upon him of the father of Russian poetry. His works in 3 vols. 8vo. consist of pieces in verse and prose, the last being chiefly philosophical dissertations.—Cox's Travels. Gen. Biog. Dict.

Londe (Francis de la), a French poet, was born at Caen, in 1685. Besides his poems, which are much esteemed, he wrote some pieces on moral subjects, and on education and antiquities. He died in 1765. —Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Long (James le), a priest of the oratory, was born at Paris, in 1665, and died librarian of St. Honoré in that city in 1721. His chief works are, 1. Bibliotheca Sacra, 2 vols. folio, 1723; 2. Bibliothèque Historique de France, folio; 3. An Historical Discourse on Polyglott Bibles, 8vo.—Ibid.

Long (Roger), a learned divine, was a native of Norfolk, and educated at Cambridge, where he became master of Pembroke hall, and Lowndes's professor of astronomy. Dr. Long is known as the author of a valuable treatise of Astronomy in 2 vols. 4to. and as the inventor of a curious astronomical machine. This is a hollow sphere 18 feet in diameter, and capable of containing 30 persons. Within side the surface, which represents the heavens, are painted the stars and constellations, with the zodiac, meridians, and axis, parallel to the axis of the world, upon which it is easily turned round by a winch. He also wr an answer to Dr. Gally's tract on Gr Accents. He died in 1770, aged 81.—Biog. Dict. Hutton.

Long (Thomas), a learned divine, born in 1621, at Exeter, and educated the college of that name in Oxford, wh he proceeded to the degree of bachelor divinity. He obtained a prebend in Ex cathedral, of which he was deprived at Revolution for refusing the oaths. He d about 1700. Mr. Long wrote a Histor Donatists, 8vo.; Examination of Mr. Hal Treatise on Schism, 8vo.: The Life of lian, 8vo.; History of all the Popish Fanatical Plots and Conspiracies, 8 Vindication of the Claim of King Cha I. to the author of the Eikon Basilike, —Wood.

Longbeard (William), a priest in reign of Richard I. who assembled a about 1196, and by his eloquence irrita them against the government, for which was torn in pieces by horses, with som his companions.—Rapin.

Longpierre (Hilary Bernard signior a French writer, was born at Dijon, in 1 of a noble family. He wrote three tra dies on the Grecian model, Medea, Elec and Sesostris; also Idylls, and he transl into French, Anacreon, Sappho, Bion, Th critus, and Moschus. He died in 172 Moreri.

Longinus (Dionysius), a celebrated p losopher and rhetorician, was a nativ Athens. He was related to Plutarch, spent the early part of his life in trav ing, after which he settled at Athens, wh he taught the Platonic philosophy and r toric with great reputation, but was ca from thence by Zenobia queen of Palm to be tutor to her children. He soon g ed an uncommon share of her esteem, spent the leisure hours of her life in conversation, and modelled her sentim and conduct by his instructions. queen was then at war with the emp Aurelian, and being defeated by him Antioch, was compelled to shut herself in Palmyra. The emperor summoned to surrender, and she returned an ans drawn up by Longinus, which filled with anger: he laid siege to the city, wh was surrendered to him, A. D. 278. queen and Longinus endeavoured to into Persia, but were unhappily overta and made prisoners. The queen, int dated, laid the blame of vindicating liberty of her country on its true aut and the brave Longinus, to the disgra the conqueror, was carried away to im diate execution. He composed critical marks on the ancient Greek authors, only a part of his inestimable Treatis the Sublime exists. The best edition is of Toup, 8vo. 1778, Oxford. It has b well translated into English by Dr. Sm 8vo.—Vossius.

GLAND (John), an English bishop, native of Henley in Oxfordshire, and ed at Magdalen college. In 1505 he e principal of Magdalen-hall, and in ean of Salisbury. In 1521 he was bishop of Lincoln. He is said to ecommended the divorce between VIII. and queen Catherine. He died . His works were printed in 1 vol. 1532.—Wood, A. O.

GOMONTANUS (Christian), a celeastronomer, was born in Jutland, in f mean parents; but the minister of ish, observing his capacity, gave him tions, and the youth divided his tween the plough and his book. At of 15 he went to the university of g, supporting himself by labour to him to follow his studies. He afterbecame an assistant to Tycho Brahe, d a great regard for him. In 1605 appointed professor of mathematics enhagen, where he died in 1647. ote, 1. Astronomia Danica, folio; 2. a Mathematicum, 8vo.; 3. Problecometrica, 4to.; 4. Disputatio Ethi- Animæ Humanæ Morbis, 4to.— Hutton.

GUEIL (Gilbert de), a learned physiwas born at Utrecht, in 1507. He ed a Greek and Latin Lexicon; Reon Ovid, Plautus, Cornelius Nepos, Laurentius Valla, &c. 4 vols. 8vo. translated some of the works of h into Latin; and wrote a Dialogue ing Birds, with their names Greek, and German. He died in 1548.—

GUEIL (Christopher de), an eminent was born at Malines, in 1490. He favour with several crowned heads, larly pope Leo X., who set him to gainst Luther. He also wrote Comes in Latin on Pliny's Book of and Observations on the Civil Law. at Padua in 1522.—Ibid.

GUBRUE (Louis Dufour de), a French stic, was born at Charleville, in nd died in 1733. He wrote, 1. A Dissertation upon Tatian; 2. HisDescription of France, folio; 3. AnArsacidarum; 4. A Discourse on stantiation; 5. Remarks on the Cardinal Wolsey.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

UEVAL (James), a French jesuit, n at Peronne, in 1680, and studied ens and Paris, where he died in He wrote a History of the Church e; a Treatise on Schism; a Dison Miracles; and other works.—

US, a Greek sophist, of whom we r books of Pastorals, in prose, on of Daphnis and Chloe, the best edihich is that of Franeker, 1660, 4to.

(Alexander), an Italian painter, n at Florence, in 1655, and died in 1702. He was a disciple of Carlo Dolce, whose style he imitated with great felicity. —Pilkington.

LONICERUS (John), a learned German, was born at Orthern, in 1499. He taught the languages and sciences at Marpurg, where he died in 1569. He compiled a Lexicon Greek and Latin, and published an edition of Dioscorides, &c. His son Adam LONICERUS was an able physician, and died at Frankfort in 1586. He wrote Methodus Rei Herbariæ, 4to.; Historia Naturalis Plantarum, Animalium, et Metallorum, 2 vols. fol.; Methodica Explicatio omnium Corporis humani Affectuum; Hortus Sanitatis.—Moreri.

LOON (Theodore van), an historical and portrait painter, was born at Brussels, in 1630. Many of his pictures adorn the churches and palaces at Rome and Venice. —Pilkington.

LOREDANO (John Francis), a Venetian nobleman of the 17th century, who wrote the Life of Adam; a History of the Kings of Cyprus, and some Italian comedies. His works make 6 vols. 12mo. He was born in 1606, but the time of his death is uncertain. —Tiraboschi.

LORENZETTI (Ambrozio), an Italian painter, was born at Sienna, in 1267. He was the disciple of Giotti, and painted rain storms and boisterous scenes. He died in 1350.—D'Argenville.

LORENZINI (Laurence), a Tuscan mathematician, was born at Florence, in 1652. He was a pupil of Viviani, and afterwards in the service of prince Ferdinand, son of the grand-duke Cosmo III. He was for some offence confined in the tower of Volterra twenty years; during his confinement he wrote his twelve books of Conical and Cylindrical Sections, in Latin. He died in 1721.

LORIT (Henry), or Glareanus, from his being born at Glaris, in Switzerland, in 1488. He was particularly intimate with Erasmus, and died in 1568. He wrote discourses on classical subjects, and notes on ancient authors.—Moreri.

LORME (Philibert de), an eminent architect, and master of the works to the king of France, was born at Lyons. He built the palace of the Tuilleries, and the Louvre. He died in 1570. He wrote ten books of Architecture, folio.—D'Argenville.

LORME (John de), a French physician, was born in 1541, at Moulines, and took his degree at Montpelier. He became physician to the queen of Henry IV., at whose court he was greatly esteemed. He died in 1634. His son Charles was physician in ordinary to Louis XIII. and died in 1678, aged 94. He published a work entitled, Laureæ Apollinaris, 8vo.—Moreri.

LORRAIN (Robert le), a famous sculptor, was born at Paris in 1666. In 1701 he became a member of the academy of sculpture, on which occasion he produced his Galatea, which is reckoned his greatest work. He died rector of the academy in 1748.---Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Lorraine (Charles of), cardinal and archbishop of Rheims, was the son of the first duke of Guise, and born in 1525. He was covetous and ambitious, and enjoyed almost unlimited power under Henry II. and Francis II. He displayed his abilities at the council of Trent, and in the conference at Poissy. The war of Italy is attributed to him. He died in 1574.---Moreri.

Lorris (William de), a French poet, who died about 1260. He wrote the Romance of the Rose, the best edition of which is that of Lenglet at Amsterdam, in 1736, 3 vols. 12mo.---Moreri.

Lorry (Anne Charles), a French physician, was born at Crosne, in 1725, and died in 1783. He published an Essay on the Use of Aliments; of Melancholy and its Disorders, 2 vols. 8vo; a Treatise on Cutaneous Diseases, 4to. He also superintended a Latin edition of the works of Mead, &c. ---Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Losa (Isabella), a learned Spanish lady, was a native of Cordova. She understood the Latin, Greek and Hebrew languages, and was admitted to the degree of doctor in divinity. On becoming a widow she took the habit of St. Clare, and going to Italy, founded an hospital at Loretta, where she died in 1546, aged 73.—Moreri.

Lot, the son of Haran, and nephew of Abraham, by whom he was brought up. He afterwards settled at Sodom, where he was taken prisoner by the king of Edom, but was rescued by Abraham. When Sodom was about to be destroyed, two angels came to Lot and obliged him to quit the place, with his wife and daughters, the former of whom, for looking back, was converted into a pillar of salt. He then retired to a cave, where his daughters, after throwing him into sleep by intoxicating liquor, lay with him, and the fruits of this incest were Moab and Ammon.—Bible.

Loten (John), a Swiss landscape painter, who lived many years in England. He painted craggy rocks with cataracts and torrents, and land storms with rain. He died 1681.---Vertue.

Lothaire I. emperor of Germany was the son of Louis le Debonaire, associated with him in the empire in 817, and named king of Lombardy in 820. He afterwards dethroned his father, and shut him up in a monastery, on which his brothers, Louis and Charles, joined their forces against him, and obtained a great but bloody victory at Fontenai in 841. Two years after a treaty was concluded between them at Verdun, by which Lothaire obtained the empire, Italy, and some of the provinces between the Rhine and the Rhone; Louis had a tract of country bordering on the Rhine; and Charles became king of France. Ten years after this partition, Lothaire abdicated the crown, and died in a monastery 855.---Univ. Hist.

Lothaire II. emperor of the West, a duke of Saxony, was the son of Gerh count of Supplemburg, elected king Germany after the death of Henry V. 1125, and crowned at Rome in 1133. died in 1137.---Ibid.

Lothaire, king of France, was the of Louis IV, whom he succeeded in He made war against the emperor Otho with success, and died in 986, as it is s of poison administered by his wife Emma Henault.

Lothaire, king of Lorraine, was the of the emperor Lothaire I. He ab doned his wife, and espoused his mistr By bribery he procured two councils, at Mentz, and the other at Aix la Chape to confirm his divorce and new marri but pope Nicholas I. reversed their dec and compelled him to take back his law wife. He died in 869.---Moreri.

Louis I. emperor of the West, called Debonair, was the son of Charlema born in 778, and proclaimed emperor in In 817 he associated his eldest son Loth with him in the empire; and to his o two sons Pepin and Louis, he gave kingdoms of Aquitaine and Bavaria. T division gave such offence to Bernard k of Italy, the bastard of Pepin, eldest son Charlemagne, that he raised an army aga the emperor, who put himself at the h of his troops and marched into Italy, on his approach the soldiers of Bern fled, and the unfortunate king submitte his uncle, who deprived him of his e and he died of the operation. In 829 L made his younger son Charles, whom had by Judith of Bavaria, king of Ger ny; on which his other sons rose aga him, and being supported by the cle they deprived their father of his cro and placed him in a monastery, where died in 840.---Univ. Hist.

Louis II. the Young, was the only so Lothaire I., created king of Italy in and ascended the imperial throne in He died in 875 He was a brave and tuous prince.---Ibid.

Louis III. was the son of Boson king Provence, and Ermengarde daughter of emperor Louis the Young. He succee his father at the age of ten, and in 90 contested the imperial throne with Be ger, who, having surprized him at Ver deprived him of his eyes. He died in ---Ibid.

Louis IV. the son of the emperor nulphus, whom he succeeded in 900 the age of seven years. The empire w scene of desolation in his reign, b constantly ravaged by the Hungar He died in 911. He was the last prin Germany of the Carlovingian race. --

Louis V. commonly called Louis of varia, was the son of Louis the Se of Bavaria, and of Matilda, daughter e emperor Rodolphus I. He was d emperor in 1314, and at the same Frederic le Bel was chosen at Cologne nother party of electors, which occa- l a war between them. Frederick was prisoner, and gained his liberty by ncing his claim in favour of his rival. John XXII. in 1322 issued his bull position against Louis, who in return léd to a general council, and marched taly, where he procured Peter de ere to be elected pope, and by whom s crowned at Rome. Five electors, other hand, chose Charles of Lux- g to be emperor, on which the civil as about to be renewed, when Louis lled by a fall from his horse in 1347. v. Hist.

is I. king of France; see Louis I. em-is II. the Stammerer, so called from a in his speech, was the son of Charles ld, crowned king of Aquitaine in 867, ceeded his father as king of France He was obliged to deliver up Pro- to Boson, by whom it was erected kingdom. Louis died in 879. His n were Louis and Carloman, who l the kingdom between them, and a mous son, who was afterwards Charles ple.—Henault.

is III. the son of the preceding, and r of Carloman, enjoyed the kingdom is brother. He defeated Hugh the l, son of Lothaire, marched against king of Provence, and opposed the s of the Normans. He died without n in 882.—Ibid.

s IV. was the son of Charles the and ascended the throne in 936. aded Normandy, but was defeated ken prisoner in 944. He regained rty the following year, after being to concede Normandy to Richard, duke William, and the county of o Hugh le Blanc. He afterwards ed the latter territory, and died of a n his horse 954.—Ibid.

s V. succeeded his father Lothaire and soon after took the city of . He was preparing to march to stance of the count of Barcelona, as pressed by the Saracens, when as poisoned by his queen, May 21, fter his death the crown devolved to his uncle Charles, duke of Lower e, but that prince being disliked by ch, it was conferred on Hugh Ca- id.

VI. called the Big, the son of Philip orn in 1081, and succeeded to the n 1108. His reign was disturbed by th the emperor and the Normans, by feuds among his vassals. He he qualities necessary to constitute ing, and he regulated the jurispru- f his country, in which he was greatly assisted by his minister Segur. He died in 1137.—Henault.

Louis VII. was the son and successor of the preceding. He had a dispute with pope Innocent II. on the right of presenting to benefices, and was excommunicated by that pontiff, who also laid his kingdom under interdict. Thibault, count of Champagne, being devoted to the pope, Louis declared war against him and ravaged his country. A reconciliation afterwards took place between them, and Louis, by the persuasions of St. Bernard, engaged in a crusade, but was defeated by Saladin, and on his return to Europe he was taken at sea by the Greeks, and delivered by the general of Roger, king of Sicily. His wife Eleanor, the heiress of Guienne and Poitou, who had been the companion of his romantic expedition, committed adultery with her uncle Raymond of Antioch, and afterwards with a young Turk named Saladin, for which she was divorced from Lewis; who took for his second wife the daughter of Thibault, count of Champagne. Eleanor married Henry of Normandy, afterwards king of England, to whom she brought as her dower the provinces of Poitou and Guienne. This produced a new war between England and France; which lasted, with a little intermission, twenty-one years. Louis died in 1180, aged 60.—Ibid.

Louis VIII. surnamed the Lion, was the son of Philip Augustus, and born in 1187. He signalized himself in several expeditions during the life of his father, and ascended the throne in 1223. He took Avignon and several places from the English; but died of a pestilential disease in his camp at Montpensier in Auvergne, in 1226, aged 39. —Ibid.

Louis IX. or Saint Louis, was the son of the preceding, by Blanche of Castile. He was born in 1215, and ascended the throne in 1226. He maintained a successful war against Henry III. king of England, which ended in a peace favourable to Louis; who having been seized with a dangerous illness, made a vow that if he recovered, he would take the cross for the purpose of regaining the holy land from the infidels. Being restored to health he spent four years in preparing for this expedition, and in 1248 he embarked for the East with a great force, leaving his kingdom to the care of his mother. After taking Damietta he passed the Nile in view of the Saracens, and obtained two great victories over them. At length famine and disease attacked his army, and the king with his nobles fell into the hands of the infidels. Louis, to recover his liberty, consented to pay a large ransom, to deliver up Damietta, and to conclude a truce for ten years. After spending four years in Palestine he returned to France; where, in 1269 he established the liberty of the Gallican church by a pragmatic sanction. In 1270 he undertook another expedition against the infidels, but died in his camp before Tunis in Africa, August 25, the same year. He was canonized in 1297.—Henault.

Louis X. succeeded Philip the Fair, his father, in 1314, being before king of Navarre in right of his mother. He recalled the Jews to his kingdom, and made a successful war against the count of Flanders. He died at Vincennes in 1316, aged 26.—Ibid.

Louis XI. son of Charles VII. by Mary of Anjou, was born in 1423. He distinguished himself by his valour in his youth, particularly against the English, whom he compelled to raise the siege of Dieppe in 1443; but the glory he hereby acquired was tarnished by his rebelling against his father, who died of a broken heart in 1461. Louis on ascending the throne treated France as a conquered country, for which several of the nobility formed a league against him, and some of his own family joined the malcontents. After a severe but indecisive battle at Montlheri in 1465, a peace was concluded, by which Louis gave to the leaguers all their demands; but not fulfilling his engagements the war was rekindled, and he was made prisoner by the duke of Burgundy, who compelled him to make a peace still more disadvantageous than the former. The duke of Berry, brother of the French king, having entered into a treaty of marriage with the daughter of the duke of Burgundy, was poisoned together with his mistress, by the king's almoner: to avenge this murder the duke of Burgundy marched into Picardy, which he ravaged with fire and sword. In 1474 the duke formed a league with Edward IV. king of England, and the king of Brittany, against Louis, who, by negociation, contrived to disengage the English monarch from the alliance, by a treaty at Amiens in 1475. The duke of Burgundy was, in consequence, obliged to conclude a peace for nine years. Louis had next a war with the emperor Ferdinand III. who had espoused the only daughter of the duke of Burgundy, which ended without any great advantage on either side in 1482. A horrible melancholy seized upon the king of France, who shut himself up from the sight of his subjects, and died in 1483.—Ibid.

Louis XII. surnamed the Just, was the son of Charles duke of Orleans, by Maria of Cleves. He succeeded Charles VIII. in 1498, and conquered the Milanese, Genoa, and Naples. Frederick, the king of the latter country, was sent to France, and had a pension allowed for his support; but after ravaging Italy the French were expelled in 1513. The emperor Maximilian, Henry VIII. of England, and the Swiss, attacked Louis in his own dominions, and he was obliged to sue for peace. He died in 1515.

Louis XIII. was the son of Henry IV. and born in 1601: being only nine years old at the death of his father, the care of him and of the kingdom was entrusted to his mother Mary de Medicis. The marshal d'Ancre had an uncontrouled sway at court till 1617, when he was assassinated with the king's consent, and his wife was condemned to death as a sorceress. Vitry, the perpetrator of this act, was made a marshal of France; and the bishop of Luçon, afterwards cardinal Richelieu, became prime minister, who persuaded his master that the destruction of the protestants was necessary to his security. This produced a civil war in which the protestants were unsuccessful; Rochelle, the strongest place in their hands, was taken by the cardinal after a long siege in 1628, during which the English made two ineffectual attempts to relieve the town. After this event so fatal to the protestant interest in France, Louis assisted the duke of Mantua against the emperor, and entered on the campaign in person, in which he shewed skill and bravery. In 1631 a treaty was concluded by which the duke was confirmed in his estates. The year following Gaston of Orleans, only brother of the king, revolted, out of dislike to Richelieu, and was assisted by the duke de Montmorency, who being wounded and taken prisoner at the battle of Castelnaudari in 1632 was beheaded at Toulouse. Gaston took refuge with the duke of Lorraine, who for protecting him lost his whole dominions. This was followed by a war with Spain which lasted twenty-five years, and was attended with various success; but greatly impoverished the nation and discontented the people. Louis and his minister, the cardinal, were attacked with a mortal disease nearly together: the latter died in December 1642, and the king in May following.—Henault.

Louis XIV. son of the preceding, was only five years old on the death of his father: the regency was in the hands of the queen-mother, Anne of Austria, under whom Mazarine acted as prime minister. The nation was then involved in a war with Spain and the emperor, which was maintained with glory to the French arms by the prince of Condé and the famous Turenne. France pushed her conquests into Flanders, Artois, Lorraine, and Catalonia. The Swedes, who were in alliance with Louis, gained a great victory over the imperialists in Bohemia; Turenne took Treves and re-established the elector; Condé gained the battle of Northlingen, took Furnes and Dunkirk, and defeated the archduke on the plains of Sens in 1648, after reducing Ypres. The Spanish fleet was defeated on the coast of Italy by the French. This year a separate peace was made between Louis Ferdinand III. Christina queen of Sweden and the states of the empire. By this treaty Metz, Toul, Verdun, and Alsace were attached to France; but while Louis was successful abroad his kingdom was distracted by internal divisions: the Parisians, irritated against Mazarine and the queen-mother, and set on by the duke de Beaufort and the prince of Condé, took up arms; and the king, his mother, and the cardinal were obliged to fly. The Spaniards, profiting by these troubles, made several conquests in Champagne, Lorraine, and Italy. In 1651 the king assumed the government, but Mazarine returning to power the year following, the civil war was renewed: Condé headed the malcontents, and defeated the marshal d'Hocquincourt at Blenau, but soon afterwards he was attacked by the royal army and made prisoner. In the mean while the archduke Leopold took from the French, Gravelines and Dunkirk; Don John of Austria made himself master of Barcelona, as did the duke of Mantua, of Casal; but domestic tranquillity being restored, these losses were repaired, and Turenne gained several battles, and took a number of places, which produced a peace between France and Spain in 1649: The principal article in this treaty was the marriage of the king with the infanta Maria Theresa. The superintendant Foucquet, being condemned to banishment for peculation, was succeeded by Colbert, one of the ablest ministers and financiers that ever lived; arts and commerce were cherished and flourished; foreign colonies were established; and at home was founded the academy of sciences and another of painting and sculpture. On the war breaking out between England and Holland, Louis joined with the latter, but after a few naval actions the peace of Breda was concluded in 1667. On the death of Philip IV. father of the queen, Louis laid claim to the vacant throne, and marched into the Low-countries, where he took a number of towns, particularly Lisle; his progress gave such alarm, that a treaty was entered into between England, Holland, and Sweden, to check his ambition, but just as the treaty was completed, peace was restored between Louis and Spain. In 1672 the French king made an attack on Holland, and reduced some of the provinces in a few weeks: This invasion produced a new confederacy against Louis, between the emperor, Spain, and the elector of Brandenburg, in which all the allies were unsuccessful, and which terminated, in 1678, by the treaty of Nimeguen. The Algerines having committed great depredations, a fleet was sent against them under the command of Du Quesne, who bombarded Algiers and reduced the dey to submission. Louis next avenged himself upon Genoa for selling powder to the Algerines: On this occasion the doge and four senators repaired to Versailles to sue for peace. Amidst all his glory, Louis committed an act of impolitic cruelty by the revocation of the edict of Nantes, granted by Henry IV. in favour of the protestants. This measure drove from France a vast number of ingenious mechanics and others, who settled in England and Holland. About this time another league was formed against France by the prince of Orange, the duke of Savoy, and the electors of Bavaria and Brandenburg. To this league were afterwards added the emperor of Germany and the king of Spain. The dauphin had the command of the French army, and he opened the campaign by taking Philipsburg in October 1688, but he was soon forced to retreat before a superior force. In 1690 the French were more successful: Luxemburg gained the battle of Fleurus, and Catinat took Nice, and gained a victory over the troops of the duke of Savoy; this was followed by the taking of Mons in Flanders, Valence in Catalonia, Carmanole and Montmelian in Savoy. These successes were counterbalanced by the defeat of Tourville's squadron off La Hogue, by admiral Russel, June 2, 1692. Louis in person took Namur, and Luxemburg gained the battles of Steenkirk and Nerwinde. In 1626 Savoy made a separate peace with France, which was followed by a general one at Ryswick in 1697 The tranquillity of Europe, however, was again broken by the death of Charles II. king of Spain, in 1700: He left his crown to Philip of France, duke of Anjou, who assumed the title of Philip V. In opposition to him the archduke Charles laid claim to the throne; and he was supported by the emperor of Germany, Holland, and England. Prince Eugene had the command of the Imperial forces, with which he took Cremona. In 1704 Eugene and Marlborough gained the great battle of Hochstet; the year following Nice and Ville-Franche were taken by the French, who also gained a dear victory at Cassane over Eugene; on the other hand, Barcelona surrendered to the archduke, and Gironne declared in his favour; the battle of Ramilies was gained by the duke of Marlborough, and prince Eugene saved Turin by defeating the duke of Orleans. In 1708 Lisle was re-taken by the allies, who also gained the battle of Oudenarde, and the Imperialists made themselves masters of Naples. The year following the French lost Tournay, and suffered a defeat at Malplaquet. In 1713 a treaty of peace was signed at Utrecht by France, Spain, England, Savoy, Portugal, Prussia, and Holland; and the next year peace was concluded with the emperor of Radstadt. Louis died September 1 1715, aged 77: by his first wife he had issue one son, Louis, dauphin of France, who died in 1711, leaving three sons, Louis, Philip, and Gaston. Louis XIV. had several illegitimate children by his mistresses. At the close of life he became serious and even devout, through the influence of Madame de Maintenon, whom he secretly married.—Voltaire's Age of Louis XIV. Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Louis XV. was the great-grandson of the preceding, and succeeded him in 1715, at the age of five years, under the regency of Philip duke of Orleans. In 1723 he was declared of age: The beginning of his reign was rendered very distressing by the Mississippi scheme of the famous Law, which ruined thousands of people. On the death of the duke of Orleans, in 1723, he was succeeded, as prime minister, by the duke of Bourbon, who was displaced in 1725, when cardinal Fleury entered upon that station. The same year the king married the daughter of the king of Poland: On the death of the last-mentioned monarch in 1733 Louis supported the election of his queen's relation Stanislaus, against the elector of Saxony, which occasioned a war between France and the emperor: Stanislaus, however, was forced to abandon the throne; but the French were successful in Italy, on which a peace was concluded in 1738. The death of the emperor Charles opened a new scene The succession of the house of Austria was disputed by four persons, and Louis declared himself against Maria Theresa, daughter of the late emperor, contrary to his own engagements. He supported the pretensions of the elector of Bavaria, who called himself Charles VII. That prince took Prague, where he was crowned king of Bohemia, but in 1742 that city was retaken; and the allies, with the king of Great Britain at their head, gained the battle of Dettingen. In 1744 Louis took the field in person, and captured Courtray, Menin, and Ypres; he was also present at the battles of Fontenoy and Lawfeld. These advantages were accompanied by the taking of Ghent, Ostend, Brussels, Bergen-op-Zoom, and other places. On the other hand the troops of the duke of Saxony and of the queen of Hungary ravaged Provence, and the English completely ruined the French commerce at sea, which effected the peace of Aix-la-Chapelle in 1748. In 1755 a new war broke out between France and England, in which the latter power had Prussia for an ally, while Austria leagued with France. At first the French were very successful, by taking Port Mahon, defeating the duke of Cumberland at Hastinbeck, and forcing the English general and his army to capitulate at Closter-seven; the electorate of Hanover was conquered; but in 1757 the French and Austrians were defeated at Rosbach; this was followed by other losses both by land and sea, particularly of Canada. Nor was the face of affairs altered for the better by the famous family compact in 1761, by which all the families of the house of Bourbon allied as in a common cause. A treaty of peace was signed at Paris in 1763: the year following the order of Jesuits was abolished in France. Louis died of the small-pox in 1774, aged 65; he composed a little book on the Course of the principal Rivers in Europe, 8vo.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Louis XVI. the son of Louis the dauphin, and of Maria Josephine, daughter of Frederic Augustus, king of Poland: He was born August 23, 1754, and immediately created duke of Berry. On the death of his father in 1765 he became the heir to the throne, and in 1770 he married Maria Antoinette of the house of Austria. In 1774 he succeeded to the crown of France, on which occasion he is said to have exclaimed, "How unfortunate for me!" It is certain that he ascended the throne at an unfavourable time; the finances were in an exhausted state, commerce was nearly ruined, the marine dismantled, and the national debt enormous. To repair the condition of public affairs, Vergennes was made secretary of state, and Turgot had the direction of the finances; Malesherbes was appointed a member of the council; Sartine had the management of the marine department; and Maurepas was placed at the head of the administration. The first act of Louis was very popular; he dispensed with the customary tax paid by the people at the beginning of every new reign. In 1774 the parliament was recalled, and affairs began to assume a favourable aspect, when, unfortunately, the French government, always jealous of England, took part with the revolted Americans, and a ruinous war ensued between the two countries; which, though it terminated in the loss of the colonies to the English, brought about a bloody revolution in France. The finances of the latter country were completely exhausted, and the cardinal de Brienne, who succeeded Calonne as minister, framed imposts which laid such intolerable burdens upon the people, that the parliament refused to register them. For this the members were exiled to Troyes, but were afterwards recalled by Louis, who, at their request, convened the states-general of three orders: This assembly met in May 1789; the public mind was now agitated, and artful demagogues took the advantage of diffusing the worst of principles. Mirabeau was the leader of these men; a violent republican, and an atheist. At his voice the people of Paris arose, and the 14th of July, that year, stormed the Bastile. This is called the æra of French liberty! In October the armed mob, with a prodigious number of women, marched to Versailles, which palace they forced, murdered the guards, and searched in vain for the queen, who would have shared the same fate, had she not escaped from her bed, which the miscreants pierced with their sabres. The result of this insurrection was, the leading of the king and his family in triumph to Paris, amidst all the insults of a lawless rabble. In February 1790 Louis was forced to accept the new constitution; but, notwithstanding all his concessions, finding himself a mere prisoner at Paris, and exposed daily to new injuries, he reolved to escape: Accordingly in the night of June 21, 1791, he and his family quitted he Thuilleries; but at Varennes his person was recognized, and he was conducted back o Paris, where he became a prisoner in his wn palace, and suffered the vilest indignies. War was declared against France by he emperor and the king of Prussia, and the uke of Brunswick marched into the country ut was forced to retreat. In the mean ime the people were wrought up to a pitch f savage ferocity by the factious leaders, nd assaulted the Thuilleries; in storming which they murdered the brave and loyal wiss guards. The king and family sought efuge in the national assembly, who ordered them to be sent to the Temple. The egislative assembly gave way to the national convention which brought Louis to a mock trial; his defence was conducted by Malesherbes, Tronchin, and Deseze, and is own deportment was, as it had uniformly been during his confinement, firm and modest, dignified and resigned. January 17, 1793, he was adjudged to death for conspiring against the public good: his separation from his family was uncommonly affecting, yet in every scene he manifested he spirit of a christian. January 21 he ascended the fatal scaffold, and would have addressed the people, but was prevented by he noise of drums, purposely placed there. He was accompanied by his confessor, he abbé Edgeworth; who, as the monarch aid his head on the fatal block, exclaimed with energetic force, "Ascend, O son f St. Louis, ascend to heaven!" The etters of Louis, which have been published by Helen Maria Williams, with notes which would have disgraced his greatest persecutors, manifest an amiable heart, an upright mind, and a refined and enlarged understanding. His son, Louis Charles, the last dauphin of France, was, at he death of his father, only eight years old; he inhuman murderers caused him to be laced with a shoemaker named Simon; who treated him with savage barbarity. The innocent victim died shortly after, and was generally believed of poison. The daughter of Louis, after the murder of her parents and brother, was suffered to quit France, and she married her cousin, the uke of Angouleme.—Nouv. Dict. Hist Louis I. king of Germany, was the third on of Louis le Debonnaire, and proclaimed ing of Bavaria, in 817: He joined his brothers in rebellion against his father, and afterwards assisted Charles the Bald in defeating Lothaire in 841. He died in 876, ged 70. His son Louis II. succeeded him, ut was defeated by his uncle Charles, and ied in 882.—Univ. Hist.

Louis I. of Anjou, king of Hungary and oland, was born in 1326, and succeeded is father, Charles Robert, in 1342: He xpelled the Jews from Hungary, and made war on the Transylvanians, Croats, Tartars, and Venetians. In 1370 he was chosen king of Poland, and died in 1382. —Univ. Hist.

Louis II. king of Hungary, succeeded his father Ladislaus, in 1516. He was drowned in the Carasse, a river in Hungary, in 1526, aged 26.—Ibid.

Louis (Anthony), secretary of the academy of surgeons at Paris, was born at Mentz in 1723, and died in 1792. He was a very able anatomist and surgeon, and wrote a Course of Practical Surgery, 8vo.; Essay on the Mind and on its Union with the Body, 12mo.; Observations on Electricity and its Effects on the Animal Economy, 12mo.; Obser vations on the Effects of the Cancero is Virus; Positiones Anatomico-chirurgicæ de Capite, quarto; De Partium externarum generatione in mulieribus, quarto; Dissertatio de apoplexia curanda; and several memoirs and eulogies. —Nouv. Dict. Hist Louptiere (John Charles de Relongue de la), a member of the academy of arcades at Rome, was born in the diocese of Sens in 1727, and died in 1784. He is known by a collection of Poems in 2 volumes 12mo. written with spirit and grace. We have also by him six parts of a Journal for Ladies, 1761.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Louvet (Peter), a French advocate and master of requests to queen Margaret, was the author of the History and Antiquities of Beauvais, octavo; Nomenclatura et Chronologia rerum Ecclesiasticarum Diœcesis Bellovacensis, octavo; Remarks on the Nobility of Beauvais, and of the principal Families of France, octavo; &c. There was another writer of this name, who was a physician, and wrote several historical pieces of no merit.—Ibid.

Louvet De Couvray (John Baptist), a writer, and one of the members of the national convention of France: He had the courage to oppose Robespiere when at the height of his power; yet he escaped the vengeance of the tyrant and died at Paris in 1797. He wrote a romance entituled, The Amours of the Chevalier Faublas; a Political Journal called the Sentinel; a Justification of Paris, 1789, octavo; Emily de Varmont, or the necessary Divorce, 8 volumes, 12mo.; an Account of himself, and of the Dangers which he passed through, 1795, octavo —Ibid.

Louville (Eugenie D'Allonville, chevalier de), a French astronomer, was born of a noble family in 1671, and died in 1732. He had been a colonel in the Spanish service, but after the peace of Utrecht he quitted the army, and applied to the study of the mathematics, particularly astronomy. In 1715 he went to London to observe the great total eclipse; there he was admitted a member of the royal society, as he also was of the academy of sciences at Paris. He wrote several curious Dissertations on Philosophy and Astronomy in the memoirs of the academy.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Love (Christopher), a presbyterian divine, who was beheaded on Tower-hill in 1651, for conspiring against the government of Cromwell. He wrote some books on practical divinity.—Neale's Puritans.

Love (James), an English actor and dramatic writer: His real name was Dance, and his father was surveyor to the city of London; his son was a performer on Drury-lane stage many years, and excelled in the character of Falstaff, but was not equal to Henderson. He wrote Palema, a comedy; and some other pieces. He died in 1774.—Biog. Dram.

Lovelace (Richard), an English poet, was born in Kent about 1618, and educated first at the Charter-house, and next at Gloucester-hall, Oxford, where he took his degree of M. A. He was a zealous royalist, and suffered much for his attachment to Charles I. He died in 1658. His poems are elegant, and he wrote also two plays, The Scholar, a comedy, and The Soldier, a tragedy.—Wood.

Lovibond (Edward), an English poet, was born in Middlesex and educated at Kingston school. He wrote some papers in the periodical paper called The World, and some pleasing poems, which were collected and published in a volume in 1785. He died at his seat near Hampton in 1775. —Anderson.

Lowe (Peter), an English surgeon of merit, who was many years in the service of foreign states, as an army-surgeon: In 1612 he settled at Glasgow, and had an authority from the king of Scotland to examine all practitioners in surgery, in the western parts of that kingdom. He wrote several books in the line of his profession.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Lowen (John-Frederic), a German poet, was born at Klansthal in 1729, and died at Rostock in 1773. We have by him a collection of Poems, printed at Hamburg in 1765; Romances, at Leipsic in 1774. The last is a work of reputation.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Lower (sir William), a zealous royalist in the reign of Charles I., was born at Tremare in Cornwall. On the decline of the royal cause he retired to Holland; but returned at the Restoration. He wrote six plays, and died in 1662.—Biog. Dram.

Lower (Richard), an English physician, was the son of the above: He was educated at Westminster school, and at Christ church, Oxford. At the university he studied under Dr. Willis, and assisted him in his anatomical dissections. When that great man removed to London, Dr. Lower followed him, and became a fellow of the royal society and of the college of physicians. He wrote a celebrated Treatise on the Heart, in Latin; and several papers in the Philosophical Transactions. He died in 1691.—Wood.

Lowman (Moses), an eminent dissenting minister, who was more than 40 years pastor of a congregation at Clapham in Surrey. He was a man of great learning, and well versed in Jewish literature and antiquities: His book on the Revelations is still held in high repute; and a tract by him, proving mathematically "The Unity and Perfections of God à priori," has been esteemed demonstrative, but is now very scarce. After his death were published his three Treatises on the Shechinah and Logos. He died in 1752, aged 72.—Toulman's Life of Neale.

Lowth (William), a learned divine, was born at London in 1661, and educated at Merchant Taylors' school, from whence he was elected to St. John's college, Oxford. where he took the degree of B. D. Dr. Mew, bishop of Winchester, appointed him his chaplain, and gave him a prebend in his cathedral, and the rectory of Buriton, with the chapelry of Petersfield, in Hampshire. He died in 1732. He wrote Commentaries on all the Prophets, published first in quarto and afterwards in one volume folio; 2. Directions for the profitable Reading of the Holy Scriptures, 12mo.; 3. A Vindication of the Divine Authority and Inspiration of the Old and New Testament, in answer to Leclerc, 12mo.; A Sermon on the Characteristics of an Apostolical Church, which brought him into a short controversy with one Norman, a dissenting teacher at Portsmouth.—Biog. Brit.

Lowth (Robert), a learned prelate, was the son of the above, and born at Winchester in 1710. After receiving his education at Winchester school, he went to New college, Oxford, where he prosecuted his studies with ardour and reputation. In 1741 he was elected professor of poetry, on which occasion he delivered his admirable lectures, which were printed at Oxford in 1753, under this title, De Sacra Poesi Hebræorum, quarto. A second edition appeared in octavo; and Michælis re-printed this valuable work in Germany, with additions. While at college he was appointed tutor to the marquis of Hartington, with whom he made the tour of Europe. In 1750 bishop Hoadley gave him the archdeaconry of Winchester: and in 1754 the university of Oxford conferred on him the degree of D.D. The year following he went to Ireland as chaplain to his pupil, then appointed lord lieutenant: While there he was promoted to the bishopric of Limerick, but having a greater inclination to settle in England, he exchanged that dignity for a prebend of Durham. In 1766 he was advanced to the bishopric of St. David's, from whence he was translated the same year to Oxford, and in 1777 to the see of London. On the death of Dr. Cornwallis, archbishop of Canterbury, in 1783, he was offered the metropolitical chair, which he declined on account of his infirmities. The same year his daughter died while sitting with him and bishop Newton at the tea-table. This learned and excellent prelate died in 1787. Learning and taste, however, did not constitute bishop Lowth's highest excellence. Eulogium itself can scarcely ascend to extravagance when speaking of him, either as a private individual, or as a pastor of the church of Christ. His amiable manners rendered him an ornament to his high station, whilst they endeared him to all with whom he conversed; and his zeal for the interests of true religion made him eager to promote to places of trust and dignity such clergymen as he knew were best qualified to fill them. He united in an eminent degree the qualities of the gentleman with those of the scholar; he conversed with elegance as he wrote with accuracy. As a husband, a father, or the father of a family, he was as nearly faultless as the imperfections of humanity will permit. His temper when roused by what he thought improper conduct, was indeed susceptible of considerable warmth; but if he could be highly offended, upon a slight concession he could likewise forgive. His heart was tender and sympathetic: he possessed a mind which felt its own strength, and decided upon whatever came before it with promptitude and firmness. In those trials where affliction was to be suffered or subdued he behaved as a man and a christian. His piety had no tincture of moroseness; his charity no leaven of ostentation. To his whole diocese he was endeared by his laudable discretion and his useful zeal. To the world he was a benefit by his exemplary life and splendid abilities; and whilst virtue and learning are reverenced among men, his memory will be respected and admired. Besides the above work, bishop Lowth published a translation of Isaiah from the Hebrew; an English grammar, universally esteemed; the Life of William of Wykeham, octavo; the Life of his father in the Biographia Britannica; a poem on the Genealogy of Christ; some controversial Letters with bishop Warburton; and Sermons on public occasions.—Gent. Mag. Gen. Biog. Dict.

LOYER (Peter le), a learned French writer, was born at Anjou in 1550, and died at Angiers in 1634. He wrote a curious history of Spectres, 4to.; a treatise entitled, Edom, or the Idumean Colonies in Europe and Asia, 8vo.; and some miscellaneous works in prose and verse.—Moreri.

LOYOLA (Ignatius), the founder of the order of Jesuits, was born of a considerable family, in the province of Guipuscoa in Spain, in 1491. He was brought up to the military profession, and obtained a commission in the Spanish army; but breaking his leg at the siege of Pampeluna, he made a vow to the Virgin, that if he recovered he would go on pilgrimage to Jerusalem, and devote himself to a religious course of life, which resolution he fulfilled. After studying Latin a short time at Barcelona, he commenced preacher and began to gather disciples, for which he was imprisoned; but still persevered in adding to the number of the brethren of the order of Jesus, as they were called, and for which at length he obtained a confirmation by pope Paul III. This order encreased prodigiously during the life-time of Loyola, who, however, was not the author of the pernicious maxims which afterwards disgraced it. He died in 1556, and was canonized by Gregory XV. in 1622. The order of jesuits, after being expelled from Portugal and France, was finally suppressed by pope Clement XVI. in 1773, but has since been revived in Russia, and subsists secretly in several countries.—Moreri. Nouv. Dict. Hist.

LUBIENETSKI (Stanislaus), a Socinian minister and writer, was born at Cracow, in Poland, of a noble family, in 1623, and received his education at Thorn. Being persecuted in his own country he went to Dehmark, from whence he removed to Hamburgh, where he was poisoned with his two daughters, by a servant maid, in 1675. He wrote a History of Comets, 2 vols. folio; and the History of the Reformation in Poland, 1. vol. 8vo.—Moreri.

LUBIENETSKI (Theodore), a Polish painter of portrait and history, was born at Cracow, in 1659, and died in 1716. His brother Christopher was also a good painter.—Pilkington.

LUBIN (Eilhard), a protestant divine, was born at Westerstede in Germany, in 1565. He died at Rostock, where he was professor of divinity, in 1621. His principal work is a treatise, entitled, Phosphorus, on the Cause and Nature of Evil, in which he maintained the strange notion that there are two co-eternal principles, God and Nothing; the first good and the other evil. He added that sin was only a tendency towards nothing, and that it is necessary to make known the nature of good.—Moreri.

LUBIN (Augustin), geographer to the king of France, was a monk of the Augustin order. He wrote several works, as a Description of Lapland; Sacred Geography, &c. He died in 1695, aged 72.—Ibid.

LUCA (John Baptist de), a learned cardinal, was a native of Venosa in the kingdom of Naples. He was at first a lawyer of eminence, but entered into orders, and arrived to the dignity of cardinal. His forensic works are uncommonly numerous; but his greatest performance is an Analysis of the Civil Law, 4 vols. 4to.; which may justly be called the philosophy of jurisprudence. The author died in 1683, aged 66. —Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Lucan (Marcus Annæus), a Latin poet, was born at Cordova in Spain, about A. D. 39. His father was Annæus Mela, brother of Seneca. He was for some time a favourite of Nero, but being discarded by him he joined in a conspiracy with Piso, for which he was sentenced to death, and was suffocated in a bath, A.D. 65. His Pharsalia is an epic poem of merit, though harsh and irregular. The best edition is that of Strawberry hill, 1760, 4to.—Biog. Classica.

Lucas (Tudensis), bishop of Tudæ, or Tuy, in Gallicia, in the 13th century, who wrote; 1. a work against the Albigenses, printed at Ingoldstadt in 1612; 2. A History of Spain from the Creation to 1236; 3. The Life of Isidore of Seville.—Moreri.

Lucas of Leyden, a painter and engraver, was born in 1494. Albert Durer went to Holland to see him. Lucas spent the last six years of his life in bed, under an apprehension that he had been poisoned; but he still employed himself in painting and engraving, saying that he chose to die in the bed of honour. He died in 1533.—De Piles.

Lucas (Brugensis Francis), dean of St. Omer, was a learned divine, and well skilled in the Oriental languages. He died in 1619, aged 67. He wrote a Commentary on the Gospels; Remarks on Latin Bibles; and other works of a like kind.—Moreri.

Lucas (Richard), a pious divine, was born at Presteign, in Radnorshire, in 1648, and educated at Jesus college, Oxford, where he took his degree of D.D. In 1683 he became vicar of St. Stephen, Coleman-street, London, and lecturer of St. Olave, Southwark. In 1691 he was installed prebendary of Westminster. He was blind some years before his death, which happened in 1715. He wrote, 1. Practical Christianity; 2. An Enquiry after Happiness, 2 vols. 8vo.; 3. Five volumes of Sermons, 8vo.—Wood, A. O. Great Hist. Dict.

Lucas (Paul), a French traveller, was born at Rouen in 1664. He went several times to the East, where he collected a quantity of curiosities, with which he enriched the cabinet of Louis XV. who appointed him his antiquary. He died at Madrid in 1737. His travels have been published in 7 vols 12mo. but are inaccurate.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Lucas (Charles), an Irish patriot, was at first an apothecary, and afterwards a physician. He became a member of the Irish house of commons, and distinguished himself by his zeal on the side of opposition. He wrote some pieces on medical subjects, and died in 1771, aged 58. His funeral was attended by the corporation of Dublin, who settled a pension on his widow. —Mortimer.

Lucchesini (John Vincent), an historian, was a nobleman of Lucca, where he was born in 1660. He was educated first in the college of Tolommei at Sienna, and afterwards at Pisa, after which he obtained the office of papal secretary, and a canonry of St. Peter's at Rome. His translation of Demosthenes, published in 1712, was in the opinion of Rollin an unrivalled piece of modern latinity; and his Historia sui Temporis, published in 1738, 3 vols. 4to. is much admired. He died in 1744.

Lucian, a Greek writer, was born at Samosata. His father, who was poor, placed him with a sculptor, but disliking that business he applied to the law, which profession he also abandoned, and devoted himself to philosophy and eloquence. Marcus Aurelius had a great esteem for his talents, and appointed him registrar of Egypt. He died A.D. 180, in his 90th year. His works, which are written in the Attic dialect, consist mostly of satirical dialogues, abounding with witticisms, but profane and obscene. The best editions of Lucian are that of Gravius, 2 vols. 8vo. Amsterdam, 1687, and that of Reitzius, 4 vols. 8to. Amsterdam, 1743.—Biog. Classica.

Lucifer, bishop of Cagliari in Sardinia, was the author of a schism in refusing to acknowledge the decree of the council of Alexandria, A.D. 362, which enacted that arians recanting their errors should be admitted to communion. Inflexible in his sentiments, he retired from his see, and gathered followers, who assumed the name of Luciferians. He died in 370. His works were printed at Venice in 1779.—Dupin. Moreri.

Lucilius (Caius), a Roman satirist, who served under Scipio in his expedition against the Numantians. He is considered by some as the author of a poetical satire; but only a few of his verses remain, which are in the Corpus Poetarum of Maittaire. He died at Naples B. C. 108.

Lucius I. pope and saint, succeeded Cornelius in 253, and was martyred the year following.—Dupin. Moreri.

Lucius II. a native of Bologna, succeeded Celestin II. in 1144, and died in 1145, of a blow which he received in a popular commotion.—Ibid.

Lucius III. succeeded Alexander III. in 1181. The Roman people having risen against him he retired to Verona, but afterwards returned to Rome, and by the help of the Italian princes subdued his enemies. A new commotion compelled him, however, to retire again, and he died at Verona in 1185. He made a constitution for the extirpation of heresies, which laid the foundation of the inquisition.—Ibid.

Lucretia, a celebrated Roman lady, was the daughter of Lucretius, governor of Rome, and the wife of Collatinus, a relation of Tarquin. Her husband being at the siege of Ardea, a conversation took place one evening at supper between him and the three sons of Tarquin, respecting the prudence of their wives. At length it was agreed upon to ride to Rome to see how the ladies were employed. The daughters-in-law of Tarquin were regaling with some companions of their own age, while Lucretia was engaged with her maidens in working upon wool. The dispute having terminated in her favour, the young men returned to the camp, but Sextus, the eldest of the king's sons, conceived a violent passion for Lucretia, which he was determined to gratify without any regard to the principles of honour. Accordingly some days after, he secretly left the camp and visited Lucretia, who treated him with the civility due to his rank. After supper he was conducted to his chamber, and when he thought that the family were asleep he stole softly, with a sword in his hand, to Lucretia's room. And made use of every effort to prevail over her virtue. Finding his artifices fruitless, he threatened, that after slaying her he would kill a slave, and lay the body by her's, then report that, having caught them together, he had slain them both. This menace succeeded, for the dread of dishonourable reproach prevailed over Lucretia, and the base seducer in the morning returned to the camp. Lucretia the next day sent for her father and her husband, to whom she related the shocking circumstance. They endeavoured to console her, but in vain, for drawing forth a dagger she plunged it into her breast. Lucretia's death occasioned the liberty of the Romans, who, excited by Brutus, expelled the Tarquins from their city. Sextus fled to a town of the Gabii, where he soon after perished, B.C. 509.—Bayle.

Lucretius (Titus Carus), a Roman poet and philosopher, was born of a good family, and educated under Zeno and Phædrus, both of the epicurean sect. Cicero highly commends him for his learning and eloquence. He is said to have been thrown into a phrenzy by his mistress Lucilia, who gave him a philtre, or love potion, of which he died or killed himself, B. C. 54, aged 42. His poem on the Nature of things is elegant, but is founded on the atheistic doctrine of atoms or materialism. The best editions are that of Havercamp, 2 vols. 4to. L. Bat. and that of Wakefield, 3 vols. 4to. London. Lucretius has been translated into English with curious notes by Creech.—Biog. Classica.

Lucullus (Lucius Licinius), a celebrated Roman general and consul, who gained a great victory over Mithridates on the borders of the Granicus, B. C. 74, and conquered Bithynia. He also defeated Tigranes king of Armenia, father-in-law of Mithridates, and took his capital. But the severity of Lucullus to his soldiers gave such offence, that he was recalled, and the command given to Pompey. On his return to Rome he obtained a triumph, and then retired to a private life, possessed of immense riches. He collected a prodigious library, and patronised ingenious men. He died at the age of 68.—Univ. Hist.

Ludlow (Edmund), an English general and regicide, was born at Maiden Bradley, in Wiltshire, about 1620. He studied first at Oxford, and afterwards in the Temple, but the civil wars breaking out, he quitted the law for the army, and served under the earl of Essex. He was a firm republican, and was one of the members of the pretended high court of justice which sentenced Charles I. to the scaffold. On the death of Ireton he had the command of the army in Ireland; but was deprived of it for opposing the usurpation of Cromwell. In the parliament under Richard Cromwell he obtained a seat, and was restored to his station in Ireland, but was again recalled. Just before the restoration of the king he went to Vevay in Switzerland, where he resided till 1688, when he ventured to return to England, but the house of commons applying to king William to cause him to be apprehended, he withdrew again to Vevay, where he died in 1693. His Memoirs, which are curious and accurate, were printed after his death in folio and octavo.—Biog. Brit.

Ludolph (Job), a learned German, was born at Erfurt, in Thuringia, in 1624. He applied with great assiduity to the study of the Oriental languages, and travelled into several countries, where he acquired the acquaintance of the most learned men. On his return home he was made counsellor of state, which office he discharged with great reputation eighteen years, and then resigned it. He died at Frankfort in 1704. His principal works are; 1. A Grammar and Dictionary of the Abyssinian or Ethiopic Language; 2. History of Æthiopia, with an Appendix, 1691, folio; 3. Dissertatio de Locustis, folio. His nephew, Ludolph (Henry William), being secretary to prince George of Denmark, who espoused queen Anne of England, settled at London, where he died in 1710, aged 54. He wrote a Grammar of the Russian language, printed at Oxford in 1696; he also published the New Testament in modern Greek, and other works.—Moreri.

Ludwig (John Peter), a privy counsellor to the king of Prussia, chancellor of the duchy of Magdeburg, and professor of law, who died in 1743, aged 73. He published, Scriptorum Rerum Germanicarum, 2 vols.; Manuscripta omnis ævi, Diplomata ac Monumenta Inedita, 12 vols, 8vo.; The Lives of Justinian and Tribonian; Miscellaneous Works, 2 vols.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Lugo (John), a Spanish jesuit and cardinal, was born in 1583 at Madrid, and educated at Salamanca. He was successively divinity professor at Valladolid and Rome, where Urban VIII. made him a cardinal. He died in 1660. Cardinal Lugo wrote several theological works, making seven volumes folio. His brother Francis was also a jesuit, and after being a missionary in India, became rector of two colleges in Spain, where he died in 1652. He wrote a Commentary on Thomas Aquinas, 2 vols. folio. He introduced the jesuit's bark into Europe. —Moreri.

Luisino or Luisini (Francis), a native of Venice, who taught Greek and Latin with reputation at Reggio, and was secretary to the duke of Parma. He died in 1568, aged 45. He wrote, 1. Illustrations of obscure Passages in classic Authors, which are to be found in Gruter's Fax Artium; 2. De Componendis Animi Affectibus; 3. A Latin Commentary on Horace. In his time and country lived a physician of the same name, who turned the Aphorisms of Hippocrates into Latin verse, 8vo. 1552.—Ibid.

Luitprand, king of the Lombards, succeeded his father Ansprand in 712. He made several conquests in Italy, and formed a code of laws for his country. He died in 744.—Moreri. Univ. Hist.

Luitprand, a Lombard historian of the tenth century, was a native of Pavia. He was secretary to Berenger II. king of Italy, who also employed him as his ambassador; but falling into disgrace he fled to the emperor Otho, and was sent by him, in 968, as his ambassador to Constantinople; where he was thrown into prison by the orders of Nicephorus Phocas, for his zeal in defending the interest of his master. After continuing in confinement some months, he returned to Italy, where he had the bishopric of Cremona. He wrote the History of the Affairs of Europe in his time, and other works, printed at Antwerp in 1640, folio. —Moreri.

Luke (St.), the evangelist, was a native of Antioch, the capital of Syria, and bred a physician, and according to some a painter. He was the companion of St. Paul, by whom he was converted to the christian faith. He wrote the gospel under his name, and also the Acts of the Apostles. His Greek is remarkable for its purity. St. Jerom says that he lived to the age of 83. —Cave.

Lulle (Raymond), called, according to the custom of his age, the Illuminated Doctor, was a native of Majorca. Falling in love with a young woman who had a cancer, he applied to the study of chemistry and physic, for the purpose of discovering a remedy for her complaint, in which he is said to have succeeded. He afterwards became a preacher, and went on a mission into Mauritania, where he was stoned to death by the natives in 1315, at the age of 80. His works on theology, physic, philosophy, chemistry, and law, have been frequently printed, but are very obscure.—Moreri.

Lulli (John Baptist), a celebrated musician, was born at Florence, in 1634. He became page to madame Montpensier, niece of Louis XIV. who caused him to be taught music, in which he acquired such excellence as to be made superintendant of music to that king. He died of a gangrene in his foot in 1687. Lulli composed a number of operas and the music of several of Moliere's plays.—Burny.

Lumley (Joanna, lady), an ingenious English lady, was the eldest daughter and co-heiress of Henry Fitz-Allan, earl of Arundel, and the first wife of John lord Lumley, who died in 1609. She translated from Greek into Latin three Orations of Isocrates, the MS. of which is still preserved in the Westminster library. She also translated the Iphigenia of Euripides into English. She died about 1620.—Ballard.

Luneau de Boisjermain (Peter Joseph Francis), a laborious and voluminous French writer, who died in 1802. His principal works are, 1. a Course of History and Geography, 2 vols. 12mo.; 2. the True Principles of Reading and Orthography, 4 vols. 8vo.; 3. Course of the Italian Language; 4. Course of the English Language, 2 vols.; 8vo.; 5. a complets edition of the Works of Racine, 7 vols. 8vo.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Lusignan (Guy de), a celebrated French nobleman, who went to the Holy Land in the time of the crusades, and espoused Sibylla, daughter of Amaury king of Jerusalem, whom he succeeded, but he afterwards conceded that title to Richard I. king of England, and received the isle of Cyprus in return. He died in 1194.—Ibid.

Lussan (Margaret de), a French romance writer, was the daughter of a coachman, and born in 1682. Attracting the notice of the famous Huet, bishop of Avranches, he gave her an education which she highly improved. She died in 1758. Her works are numerous, the best of which is entitled, Anecdotes of the Court of Philip the August, 6 vols. 12mo.—Moreri.

Luther (Martin), the great reformer, was born at Isleben in Saxony, of mean parentage, in 1483. In 1501 he was sent to the university of Erfurt, where he studied philosophy and the civil law, but walking one day in the fields with a fellow-student, his companion was struck dead with lightning, which so affected Luther, that he determined to retire from the world. He accordingly went into a monastery of the order of St. Augustine, where he led a pious and studious life; and happening to meet with a Latin bible in the monastery, he read it with the utmost care and avidity, and was struck with the manifest difference between the doctrines of the Gospel and the practices of the Roman church. This impression became deeper in 1512, when he ent to Rome on some business belonging his monastery. On his return he was eated D.D. and became professor of divi- ty at the university of Wittemberg, then inded by Frederic elector of Saxony. In 17 Leo X. published plenary indulgences r all sins committed by those who should rchase them. These pardons were sold Germany by the dominicans in the most meful manner, and gave offence to all igious persons, and to Luther in particu- ; who published a Thesis on Indulgences Wittemberg, in which he exposed in the ongest manner the iniquity of this odi- s traffic. The propositions of Luther's esis were opposed by Tetzel, the papal ent; but the people at large were con- ced that the truth lay on the side of Lu- er. The dispute growing serious through- t Germany, the emperor earnestly press- the pope to exert his influence to t a stop to it; and accordingly Luther s cited to appear at Rome, which he dently declined. Leo also demanded of elector Frederic to deliver Luther up to papal legate, which he refused; at the ne time requesting that the cause might heard in Germany. To this the pope con- ted, and Luther appeared before the car- al Cajetan, at Augsburg, to whom he ve a full account of his faith, but being quired to make an implicit submission to decrees of the pope, he zealously re- ed. On this Leo issued a brief, threat- ng to excommunicate all who should pre- ne to deny his power to grant plenary ulgences. Luther on the other hand ap- aled in a public declaration from the pope a general council. The followers of Lu- r encreased rapidly. Erasmus approved his conduct in a great measure, and cor- ponded with him, but had not the cou- e to declare himself fully. The learned l amiable Melancthon attached himself nly to Luther, and by his prudence and deration rendered him essential service. 1519 Luther had a dispute at Leipsic h Eccius, professor at Ingoldstadt. In 0 the pope issued a formal condemna- n of Luther, who immediately wrote a k, in which he called it "the execra- bull of Antichrist;" and calling the stu- nts of Wittemberg together, he flung the e's bull and decretals into the fire. The r following he attended the diet of rms, by virtue of a safe-conduct from emperor, and when his friends endea- red to dissuade him from going, by urg- the case of Huss, he said, that "If re were as many devils at Worms as tiles n the houses he would go." He was e required to retract his opinions, and romise submission to the pope, both ich he resolutely refused On his return ough a wood he was seized by a party of se, who conveyed him to a castle belong- to the elector of Saxony, where he was ecretly kept, that no one knew what was become of him except the persons concerned in the affair. In the mean time the empe- ror Charles V. published an edict against him, and put under the ban of the empire those who should defend him. Luther, however, was secure in his retreat, which he called his Hermitage and his Patmos; and employed his time in conferences with his chosen friends, and in writing books. After an absence of ten months he made his appearance again at Wittemberg, where he wrote a severe and uncourtly reply to Hen- ry VIII. of England, who had published a book against him on the doctrine of the eucharist. About this time he published a translation of the New Testament into Ger- man, which was universally read, though proscribed by imperial authority. In 1524 Erasmus was prevailed on to write against Luther, and chose for his subject the free- dom of the human will, which he defended against our reformer, who replied in a trea- tise entitled, De Servio Arbitrio, which was answered by Erasmus in another, called Hy- peraspistes. In 1525 Luther married Ca- therine de Bore, a nun, who had escaped from a convent, on which his enemies ac- cused him of immorality and impiety, but Luther defended his act on scriptural grounds. In 1529 the emperor convened a diet at Spires, to procure aid from the Ger- man princes against the Turks, and to de- vise means for allaying religious disputes. In this assembly it was ordered that the mass should be universally observed throughout the empire. Against this decree the electors of Saxony and Brandenburg and other princes entered their protest, on which account the reformed party acquired the name of pro- testants. These princes then entered into a league for their mutual defence against the emperor. In 1530 was drawn up by Me- lancthon the confession of Augsburg, which was received as the standard of the protes- tant faith in Germany. In 1535 Luther's translation of the bible into German was published. In 1537 an assembly for religi- ous affairs was held at Smalcald, at which Luther and Melancthon were present. At this meeting Luther was seized with so se- vere a fit of the stone, that his life was de- spaired of. He however recovered, and went on writing books, and labouring to promote the great work for which he was raised up by Providence. He died at Isle- ben in 1546, and his remains were interred with great solemnity at Wittemberg. By his wife Catherine de Bore, who died in 1552, he had three sons, and several of his descendants were living latterly in Germa- ny. The mind of Luther was ardent and impetuous, but honest, and earnestly bent to the discovery and propagation of religi- ous truth. His manners were becoming his profession, and his whole life evinced a zeal for the glory of God, and the wel- fare of man. His works were collected in- to seven vols. folio, at Wittemberg, after his death.——Life by Seckendorf. Mosheim. Dupin.

LUTTI (Benedict), a painter, was born at Florence in 1666. The emperor of Germany conferred on him the honour of knighthood. His paintings are rare and valuable. The principal is a miracle of St. Peter, in the palace of the Albani at Rome. He died in that city in 1724.—D'Argenville.

LUXEMBOURG (Francis Henry de Montmorency, duke of), a famous general and marshal of France, was the posthumous son of Francis de Montmorency, count of Boutteville, beheaded under Louis XIII. for fighting a duel. He was born in 1628, and at the age of 15, was at the battle of Rocroi, under the great Condé. He served as lieutenant-general at the taking of Franche-Comté, in 1668, and in the Dutch campaign of 1672, about which time he effected a famous retreat with an army of 20,000 men against 70,000. In 1675 he was made marshal of France. In 1690 he gained the battle of Fleurus, which was followed by the victories of Leusen, Steinkirk, and Nerwinde. He died in 1695.—Moreri.

LUYKEN (John), a Dutch engraver, whose works are in considerable estimation. He was born at Amsterdam in 1649, and died in 1712. His plates, illustrative of a Bible, and a Theatre of Martyrs, are much valued.—Moreri.

LUYTS (John), a philosopher and astronomer, was born in North Holland, in 1655. He became professor of philosophy and mathematics at Utrecht, where he died in 1721. He wrote, 1. Astronomica Institutio, 4to.; in which he rejected the Copernican System. 2. Introductio ad Geographiam novam & veterum, 4to.—Ibid.

LYCOPHRON, son of Periander, king of Corinth about 628, B. C. His mother Melissa, having been put to death by Periander, the young prince and his brother were taken by their maternal uncle Proclus, king of Epidaurus, who informed them in time of the manner of their mother's death. This made such an impression on the mind of Lycophron, that on his return to Corinth he would not speak to his father, who banished him to Corcyra. He afterwards relented, and offered to resign the throne to Lycophron, while he himself should live at Corcyra, but in the mean time Lycophron was put to death by the Corcyrans.

LYCOPHRON, a Greek poet and grammarian, was a native of Chalcis, in Eubœa, and slain by an arrow, B. C. 304. He wrote an obscure poem called Alexandra; the best editions of which are that of Basil, 1546, fol. and that of Potter, Oxon, 1702, fol.—Vossius de Poet. Græc. Fabricius.

LYCURGUS, the famous Spartan legislator, was the son of Eunomus, king of Sparta, and brother of Polydectes, who succeeded his father. After the death of Polydectes, his widow offered the crown to Lycurgus, though she was then with child, but he refused, and faithfully discharged the duty of regent and guardian during the minority of his nephew, Charilaus. When the young prince came of age, Lycurgus left Sparta, and travelled into several countries, to observe their laws and manners. On his return home he found the kingdom in a state of confusion; the king endeavoured to reign despotically, and the people would not obey. Lycurgus undertook to reform the government, and he introduced the most rigorous laws; yet such as were admirably adapted to civilize a disordered people. After this he quitted Sparta, and is supposed to have died in Crete, at an advanced age, about 870, B. C.—Plutarch.

LYCURGUS, an Athenian orator, born 408 years B. C. and died about 328. He studied philosophy under Plato, and rhetoric under Isocrates. He was the friend of Demosthenes, and a zealous advocate for liberty. There is an oration of his in Reiske's collection of Greek Orators. He died B. C. 356.—Vossius de Script. Græc.

LYDGATE (John), an Augustine monk of St. Edmund's Bury, in the reign of Henry VI. He was a disciple of Chaucer, and wrote some poems, which possess merit. He died in 1440, aged 60. He is said to have been a good mathematician, and an accomplished scholar.—Pits. Bayle.

LYDIA. This was a very ancient nation, and governed by a succession of kings, till Crœsus, who in 544 B. C. was conquered by Cyrus. After this Lydia underwent the revolutions of the Persian empire, till 283 B. C., when it became part of the kingdom of Pergamus, and was seized by the Romans in consequence of the will of king Attalus, 133 B. C. It remained a part of the eastern Roman empire till about 1326, when it was conquered by the Turks.—Univ. Hist.

LYDIAT (Thomas), an English mathematician, was born at Okerton, in Oxfordshire, in 1572, and educated at Winchester school, from whence he was removed to New college, Oxford, where he obtained a fellowship. Archbishop Usher appointed him to a situation in the college at Dublin, where he continued two years. In 1612 he was presented to the rectory of Okerton. He was a great sufferer for his loyalty in the civil wars, and died poor in 1646. He wrote, 1. De variis annorum formis, 1605, octavo, against Clavius and Scaliger, and the latter having replied to it, Lydiat published a Defence in 1607; 2. On the Origin of Fountains, octavo; 3. Several Treatises on Philosophy and Astronomy. Some of his Letters have been also printed.—Wood. A. O.

LYE (Edward), a learned antiquary, was born at Totness, in Devonshire, in 1704; and educated at Hart-hall, Oxford, where he took his degree in arts. He died rector of Yardley, in Northamptonshire, in 1769. In 1772 appeared his Anglo-Saxon and Gothic Dictionary, 2 vols. folio, with a grammar of the two languages. He was also the litor of Junius's Etymologicon Anglicanum.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

LYNDE (sir Humphrey), an English gentleman, was born in Dorsetshire, and educated at Westminster-school, from whence he removed to Christ-church, Oxford. He sat in parliament many years, and died in 1636. Sir Humphrey wrote some smart books against popery.—Wood.

LYONNET (Peter), an eminent naturalist, was born at Maestricht, in 1707. He acquired a knowlege of several languages, ancient and modern; he also understood music, and was a good engraver and sculptor. Being bred to the law, he became one of the secretaries to the states of Holland; and their law translator from the Latin and French. In his latter years he applied to the study of natural history, particularly insects; on which subject he wrote several esteemed books. He died at the Hague, in 1789, aged 81. Lyonnet was a member of the royal society of London, and of several foreign academies.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

LYONS (Israel), was born in 1739 at Cambridge; where his father, a Polish Jew, taught the Hebrew language. Israel acquired a good education, and distinguished himself by his knowlege in mathematics and botany. In 1758 he published a good Treatise on Fluxions, and in 1763, a work entituled, Fasciculus plantarum circà Cantabrigium nascentium, 8vo. He was appointed by the board of longitude to go with captain Phipps (since lord Mulgrave), in his voyage of discovery to the north, in 1773. He also calculated the Nautical Almanack, for which he had a salary of 100l. per annum. He died about 1775. His father published a Hebrew Grammar, and Observations on the Scripture History.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

LYSANDER, a famous Spartan commander in the Peloponnesian war. He prevailed on Ephesus to withdraw from its alliance with Athens, and he entered into a league with Cyrus the younger. He also defeated the Athenian fleet, after which the city itself fell into his hands; and thus terminated the Peloponnesian war, which had lasted twenty-seven years. Lysander overturned the democracy, and restored the government of the Archons. After this he endeavoured to seat himself on the throne of Sparta, but was unsuccessful. He was slain, fighting against the Thebans, B. C. 366.—Univ. Hist.

LYSERUS (Polycarp), a learned divine, was born at Winendeen, in Germany, in 1552. He became minister at Dresden, and died there in 1601. He wrote voluminous commentaries on the Scriptures.—Melch. Adam. Vit. Germ. Theol.

LYSERUS (John), a protestant divine, of the same family as the preceding. He published several books in behalf of Polygamy, and died at Paris in 1684.—Moreri.

LYSIAS, an Athenian orator. He distinguished himself by his eloquence and probity. He died B. C. 378, aged 81. Only thirty-four of his orations are extant, the best edition of which is that of Taylor, Cantab. octavo, 1740.—Vossius de Script. Græc.

LYSIMACHUS, one of the generals of Alexander the Great, after whose death he made himself master of part of Thrace, where he built a town called by his own name. He afterwards seized Macedonia, and expelled Pyrrhus from the throne. He was killed in battle by Seleucus, 281 B. C.—Univ. Hist.

LYSIPPUS, a Grecian sculptor, who flourished B. C. 350, was a native of Sicyon. He was first a blacksmith, which business he quitted and studied painting, and afterwards sculpture. His greatest works were, the statue of a man wiping and anointing himself after bathing, which was placed before Agrippa's baths at Rome; and a statue of the sun, represented in a car, drawn by four horses, at Rhodes. His three sons were all eminent in the same line, and his brother, Lysistratus, was the inventor of plaister moulds.—Pliny. Nat. History.

LYSIS, a Pythagorean philosopher, and the preceptor of Epaminondas. Some attribute to him the golden verses of Pythagoras, and there also passes under his name a letter to Hipparchus. He lived about 388 B. C.—Vossius de Phil. Græc.

LYSONS (Daniel), a physician. He was entered a gentleman commoner of Magdalen-college, Oxford, and was afterwards chosen fellow of All Souls, where he took the degree of bachelor of laws in 1755: that of doctor in the same faculty, in 1759. He commenced doctor in medicine in 1764. He practised first at Gloucester, and afterwards at Bath, where he died in 1800. Dr. Lysons published, 1. An Essay upon the Effects of Camphire and Calomel in Fevers, 8vo. 2. Practical Essays upon intermitting fevers, dropsies, diseases of the liver, the epilepsy, cholic, dysenteric fluxes, and the operation of Calomel, 8vo. 3. Further considerations on the Effects of Camphire and Calomel, 8vo.—Europ. Mag.

LYTE (Henry), an English botanist, was born in Somersetshire, in 1529, and received his education at Oxford, after which he travelled abroad, and on his return settled in his native country, where he greatly improved his paternal estate, and formed one of the first botanical gardens in England. He died in 1607. Mr. Lyte published at Antwerp, in 1578, quarto, a Translation of Dodoen's Herbal, with many additions of his own. This edition has figures, but the subsequent ones, printed in England, are without prints. His son drew up a genealogy of James I., for which that monarch gave him his picture in gold, set with diamonds.—Pulteney's Sketches of Botany.

LYTTELTON (Edward), lord Lyttelton, keeper of the great seal in the reign of Charles I., was eminent for his probity and moderation at the commencement of that monarch's disputes with his subjects. Without forfeiting his fidelity to the king, he preserved the esteem of the parliament till 1644, when he was made colonel of a regiment in the king's army at York. He died in 1645. Besides several of his speeches which have been printed, he wrote Reports in the Common Pleas and Exchequer, printed at London in 1683, folio; several arguments and discourses, &c.—Biog. Brit.

LYTTELTON (George lord), a noble writer, was the eldest son of sir Thomas Lyttelton, of Hagley, in Worcestershire, and born there in 1709. He was educated at Eton, from whence he removed to Christ-church, Oxford. In 1723 he went on his travels, and on his return he obtained a seat in parliament, where he distinguished himself as a frequent speaker on the side of opposition, on which account he became secretary to Frederick prince of Wales, who adhered to the opposition party. In 1741 he married miss Lucy Fortescue, sister of lord Fortescue, by whom he had a son and two daughters. This amiable woman died in 1747, and Mr. Lyttelton wrote a beautiful monody to her memory. In 1749 he took for his second wife the daughter of sir Robert Rich. On the change of ministry, by the resignation of sir Robert Walpole, he was made one of the lords of the treasury. In 1747 he published his Observations on the Conversion of St. Paul, a work of inestimable value. He acknowledges that in his younger years he had been led into scepticism; but maturer research made him a christian. In 1751 he succeeded to the title of baronet by the death of his father; and in 1754 he was made cofferer and privy-counsellor. He was raised to the peerage in 1757. His last work was the History of Henry II. which appeared in 1764, in quarto; and a third edition in 1768. His lordship died the death of a christian in 1778. Besides the performances abovementioned, he wrote Poems, Persian Letters, and Dialogues of the Dead.—Dodsley's Ann. Reg.

LYTTELTON (Thomas lord), son of the preceding, was a young nobleman of promising talents, but of dissipated manners: his death is said to have been preceded by a very extraordinary circumstance: he saw in a dream, or otherwise, a young woman dressed in white, who warned him of his dissolution in three days from that time. On the third day, his lordship had a party to spend the evening with him, and about the time predicted said, he "believed he should jockey the ghost," but a few minutes afterwards he was taken faint, and carried to bed, from whence he rose no more. He died in 1779, aged 35.—London Mag.

LYTTELTON (Charles), an English prelate and antiquary, was third son of sir Thomas, and brother to George lord Lyttelton. He received his education at Eton, from whence he went to University college, Oxford, and afterwards entered of the Inner Temple, where he was called to the bar. He, however, quitted the law, entered into holy orders, and in 1747 was appointed chaplain to the king. The year following he was made dean of Exeter, and in 1762 promoted to the bishopric of Carlisle. He was many years president of the society of antiquaries, and contributed several valuable articles to their Archæologia. His lordship died in 1768.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

M.

MAAS (Dirk), a Dutch painter, was born at Haerlem in 1656. He excelled in painting landscapes and battles. There were two others of this name, Arnold and Nicolas: the first painted conversations in an admirable style, and the other portraits. The last died in 1693, aged 61.—Houbraken.

MABILLON (John), a learned writer, was born in the diocese of Rheims in 1632. He took the habit among the benedictines of St. Remy in 1653, and assisted father d'Acheri in compiling his Spicilegium. The congregation of St. Maur appointed him to superintend their edition of the works of St. Bernard. He afterwards published the Acts of the Saints of the Order of Benedictines, in 9 vols. folio. Colbert sent him to Germany in 1683, to search for manuscripts and other works, tending to illustrate the history of France. Mabillon returned with several valuable literary treasures, of which he published an account in a relation of his journey. Afterwards he went to Italy for the same purpose, and was gratified at Rome with many honourable marks of distinction. Though his learning and acquirements were immense, he was extremely modest and diffident. He died at Paris in 1707. His principal works besides the above are, 1. Analecta, four volumes, octavo; 2. De re Diplomatica, two volumes, folio; 3. Musæum Italicum, two volumes, quarto.—Moreri.

MABLY (Bonnot de), a French abbé, was born at Grenoble in 1709, and died at Paris in 1785. His chief works are, 1. Observations on the Greeks: 2. Observations upon the Romans; 3. Parallel of the Romans and ench, 2 volumes, 4to.; 4. Observations on e History of France, 2 volumes, 12mo.; Discourses on History, 12mo. This last s been translated into English.—Nouv. t. Hist.

MABUSE (John), a painter of Hungary, called from the village of which he was a ive. Several of his pictures are at Amrdam, particularly one representing the capitation of St. John. He died in 1562. De Piles.

MAC ARDELL (James), an excellent Eng- engraver in mezzotinto, who died in 5. He engraved several admirable portits with great expression and accuracy; some fine prints after Rembrandt, and er masters.—Strutt's Dict. Engravers.

MACARIUS (St.), the elder, a famous anret of the fourth century, was a native Alexandria. He spent 60 years in a motery, and died in 391, aged 90. His Hoies were published at Leipsic, 2 volumes, avo, 1698.—Dupin. Moreri.

MACARIUS, the younger, a celebrated k, was a native of Alexandria, and had r 5000 monks under his direction. The ans banished him to an island inhabited heathens, whom he converted to chrisity. He died about 394.—Ibid.

MACARTNEY (George, earl), a distinshed nobleman, was the only son of rge Macartney, esq. of Auchinleck, in tland, but the son was born in Ireland, 1737. His education was liberal, and he early part of his life he travelled the two sons of the late lord Holland. 1764 he was appointed envoy extraorry to the empress of Russia. In 1767 was constituted embassador extraorry to the same court: but soon afterds he returned, and was employed as etary to lord Townsend, viceroy of nd. In 1768 he represented Cockerth in parliament. In 1772 he was noated a knight of the bath: and in 1775 t out as governor of Grenada and bago. He continued there till 1779 n on the capture of those islands by French he was made prisoner and sent rance. In 1776 he was created an peer by the title of lord Macartney. 780 he was appointed governor of Ma, where his conduct obtained such unial approbation that in 1785 he was inted governor-general of Bengal. this office he declined accepting, and rned to England. In 1786 he received ttering testimony of respect from the t of directors, who granted him an any of 1500*l.* for his life. The same year ught a duel with general Stuart, whom ad superseded in India. In this affair lordship was slightly wounded. In he was selected to go on an embassy he emperor of China, which mission loyed near three years. After his rn he was created an earl of Great Britain. His lordship died at London in 1806.—Europ. Mag.

MACAULAY (Catherine), a female historian, was the daughter of John Sawbridge, esq. of Ollantigh in Kent, and born in 1733. In 1760 she married Dr. George Macaulay, a physician, who left her a widow. In 1778 she married Mr. Graham, a clergyman, and brother to the noted empiric of that name. In 1785 she went to America, for the purpose of visiting general Washington, with whom she maintained a correspondence during her life. She died in 1791. Her works are, 1. The History of England from James I. to the Accession of the House of Hanover, 8 volumes, octavo, once very popular, but now sunk into contempt; 2. The History of England from the Revolution to the present time, 1 volume, quarto, 1778; 3. Remarks on Hobbes's Rudiments of Government and Society; 4. Observations on a Pamphlet, entituled, Thoughts on the Causes of the present Discontents, octavo; 5. A Treatise on the Immutability of Moral Truth, octavo; 6. Letters on Education, octavo; 7. An Address to the People of England, Scotland, and Ireland, on the present important Crisis of Affairs, 1775, octavo; 8. A modest Plea for the Property of Copy-right, quarto; 9. Observations on the Reflections of Mr. Burke on the French Revoluton, octavo. Dr. Wilson, prebendary of Westminster, had so great an esteem for her as to place her statue, in the character of Liberty, in his parish church of Walbrook; but afterwards he caused this instance of folly to be removed.—Hay's Fem. Biog.

MACBETH, a usurper and tyrant of Scotland in the 11th century. He murdered his kinsman Duncan at Inverness, and then seized upon the throne. He also put to death Mac Gill and Banquo, the most powerful men in his dominions; Macduff next becoming the object of his suspicions, he escaped into England, but the inhuman tyrant wreaked his vengeance on his wife and children, whom he caused to be butchered. Macduff, and Malcolm, son of Duncan, having obtained assistance from the English, entered into Scotland, and forced Macbeth to retreat into the highlands, where he soon afterwards was slain in battle by Macduff. —Buchanan.

MACBRIDE (Dr. David), an eminent physician and philosopher, was descended from an ancient Scottish family. He was born at Ballymony, in Ireland, in 1726. After a proper school education, he was sent to the university of Glasgow to study medicine. He entered into the navy as a surgeon's mate, but his merit soon raised him to the rank of surgeon; and in this situation he turned his thoughts to the discovery of a remedy for the sea-scurvy, with the result of which he afterwards communicated to the world in a treatise upon that subject, which added considerably to his reputation. In 1749 he settled in Dublin, where his industry and genius were directed to medical researches, and were productive of discoveries which will transmit his name with honour to the latest posterity. Though some of them might have been successfully turned to his own emolument, they were freely given to the world in different publications; and he did not shew greater ingenuity in making discoveries, than liberality of sentiments in publishing them for the advantage of others. He is celebrated for his discoveries in the art of tanning leather. His most extensive publication, more immediately in the line of his profession, was a "Methodical Introduction to the Theory and Practice of Medicine," a valuable work, which afforded a concise and connected view of the principles and practices of the healing art, as best established by sound reason, and confirmed by accurate observation. His reputation, and consequently his employment, encreased so rapidly, that he found himself incapable of undergoiug the fatigue inseparable from the duties of his station. His health began to be impaired, and he was attacked by a fever, which put a period to his valuable life in December 1788. After his death, several of the playful trinkets of his infants were found among his papers, with the signature of dulces exuviæ: an incontrovertible proof that in him at least the great mind of the philosopher was conjoined with the feeling heart of the affectionate father. His conduct was exemplary, his manners amiable, and his polite and benevolent conduct, joined to his taste for the fine arts, conciliated the affection and esteem of all who knew him. Encyc. Brit.

Maccabees, seven brothers of Judæa, who suffered martyrdom at Antioch, in the persecution of Antiochus Epiphanes, with their mother and Eleazar, 168 B.C. There were several princes of this name, who displayed great courage in the defence of their country, particularly Judas and Simon Maccabæus.

Macé (Francis), a French divine, who died at Paris in 1721. He wrote, 1. A Chronological Abridgment, Historical and Moral, of the Old and New Testament, 2. volumes, quarto. 2. A Moral History entituled, Melania; History of the four Ciceros; 4. An Analysis of the Works of Saint Augustine.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Mace (Thomas), an English musician, who was an excellent performer on the lute. He published a work, entituled, Music's Monument, or a Remembrance of the best Practical Music, &c. folio. He was about 63 when this book was published in 1676, but when he died is not known.—Burney. Hawkins.

Macedo (Francis), a learned Jesuit, was born at Coimbra, in Portugal. He renounced the habit of his order for that of the Cordeliers. Pope Alexander VII. made him master of controversy in the college of the propagandists, professor of ecclesiastical history, and consultor of the inquisitson of Rome. He afterwards fell into disgrace, on which he went to Venice, where he gave offence by meddling with the affairs of government, and was thrown into prison. He died in confinement in 1681. He wrote a great number of pieces, of little or no value. His brother Anthony was a Jesuit, and was entrusted by Christina, queen of Sweden, with her design of renouncing the protestant religion. He wrote Lusitania insulata et purpurata, quarto.—Moreri.

Macedonia. This kingdom was founded by Ceranus and Perdiccas B. C. 596. Under Philip and Alexander the Great it became considerable; subdued its neighbours, and destroyed the Persian empire. Macedonia continued in the family of Alexander, or under some of his generals, till 168 B.C.; when, by the defeat of Perseus, it became a Roman province; and so continued till 1393, when the Turks under Bajazet IV. invaded Macedonia, which was finally conquered by them in 1429.—Univ. Hist.

Macedonius, patriarch of Constantinople, in which see he was placed by the Arians in 341, in opposition to Paul; the council of Constantinople deposed him in 360, and he died soon afterwards. He held that the Holy Ghost was a mere creature, and he had many followers.—Dupin. Mosheim.

Macer (Æmilius), an ancient Latin poet, was born at Verona, and flourished under Augustus. He wrote a poem on birds, serpents, and herbs, and another on the ruin of Troy, which are lost. One which passes under his name, on the quality of herbs, is spurious.—Vossius de Poet. Lat.

Macer (Lucius Claudius), proprætor of Africa in the reign of Nero, on whose death he assumed the imperial dignity, and committed many cruelties. By order of Galba he was arrested and put to death, A.D. 68.

Macfarlane (Henry), an historical writer, was a native of Scotland, and educated at Edinburgh. He came when young to London, and was for some years a reporter of speeches in parliament. He afterwards kept a respectable seminary at Walthamstow, in which some very eminent characters were brought up. Mr. Macfarlane published the History of George III. in 4 vols. 8vo.; and translated the poems of Ossian into Latin. He died in 1804.—Monthly Mag.

Macham (Robert), an Englishman, in the reign of Edward III. who having conceived a passion for Anne Dorset, a lady of rank, and her parents being against their union, Macham eloped with his mistress on board a ship to go to France. At sea the wind blew the vessel out of the channel, d she was driven to the westward, when y discovered the island of Madeira. The t of the crew went from thence, and ched the coast of Morocco, where they re made prisoners. They recounted ir adventures to a Spaniard named John Morales, who, on his return to his own ntry, related the Englishmen's narrative; consequence of which ships were sent in rch of the island, where the remains of acham and his mistress were discovered erred at the foot of a great tree.—Moreri.

Machault (John de), a French jesuit, d rector of the college of Clermont, at ris, died in 1619, aged 58. He wrote tes on the history of Thuanus, 4to. There re two other jesuits of this name, John ptist, and James, both writers of ability; e first died in 1640, and the latter, who d in 1680, wrote De missionibus Paragua- e & aliis in America meridionali; De re- s Japonicis; De Provinciis Goana Mala- rica, & aliis; De Regno Cochincinensi; missione Religiosorum Soc. Jesu in Per- , &c.—Moreri.

Machavel (Nicholas), a celebrated poli- ian, was born at Florence, in 1469, of a ble family. He at first distinguished him- f as a dramatic writer, and produced ays which were performed at Rome; but ing suspected of taking part in the con- iracy against Julius de Medicis, after- rds pope Clement VII. he quitted Rome. e then became secretary and historiogra- er of the republic of Florence, where he ed in 1530. Besides his plays, he wrote, 1. he Golden Ass, in imitation of Lucian d Apuleius; 2. Discourse on the First De- de of Livy; 3. A History of Florence, o.; 4. Life of Castruccio Castracani; 5. Treatise on the Military Art; 6. A Trea- e on the Emigration of the Northern Na- ons; 7. a Treatise entitled, the Prince. his last work contains the most pernicious axims of government, founded on the lest of principles. A translation of his orks appeared in English in 1761, in 2 ols. 4to.—Bayle.

Mackenzie (sir George), an ingenious riter, was born at Dundee in 1636, and ducated at St. Andrew's and Aberdeen. le became an eminent advocate, and was ppointed judge in the criminal court. When James II. abrogated the papal laws, e resigned, but was afterwards restored by hat prince. Not approving the measures f the prince of Orange, he again retired, nd went to London, where he died in 691. He wrote several pieces on the laws f Scotland; A Defence of the Antiquity f the Royal Line of Scotland; Essays on Moral Subjects; and some Poetical Pieces. —Biog. Brit.

Mackey (John), an Englishman, who ollowed James II. to France after the Revo- ution, and was admitted by that unfortu- nate monarch to his confidence, which he basely betrayed, by giving information of every secret with which he was entrusted to William. He died at Rotterdam in 1726. His Picture of the Court of St. Germain was published in 1691; and his Memoirs of the Court of England, in the reigns of William and Anne, at the Hague in 1733. They abound with many curious Anecdotes. —Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Macklin (Charles), a comedian and dramatic writer, was born in the north of Ireland in 1690. His real name was Mac Laughlin, which he altered to Macklin. He became a performer in the Lincoln's-inn company in 1725, and not long after was tried for killing another player in a quarrel, and found guilty of manslaughter. He had so strong a set of features, that Quin exclaimed, "If God writes a legible hand, that fellow's a villain." His greatest character was Shylock, his performance of which drew from Mr. Pope this remarkable compliment:

This is the Jew
That Shakspeare drew.

Macklin wrote two plays, Love-à-la-Mode, and the Man of the World, which possess considerable merit, and are frequently performed, though very satirical upon courtiers and the Scotch. His last appearance on the stage was at Covent-Garden theatre, Jan. 10, 1790, in the character of Shyock, at his own benefit; but his memory failed, so that he could not go through with the part. He died in 1797.—Gent. Mag. Europ. Mag.

Maclaine (Archibald), a learned divine, was born at Monagham, in Ireland, where his father was a dissenting minister. He was also educated for that profession at Glasgow, after which he went to the Hague as assistant to his uncle Mr. Milling, minister of the English church, whom he succeeded in the office. He married the daughter of M. Chais a distinguished minister of the French church by whom he had four children. Dr. Maclaine left Holland in 1796, and settled at Bath where he died in 1804. He is advantageously known by Letters to Soame Jennyns on his View of the Internal Evidence of Christianity; a Translation of Mosheim's Ecclesiastical History; and a volume of Miscellaneous Sermons.—Fun. Sermon by Gardiner.

Maclaurin (Colin), an eminent mathematician was born at Kilmoddan, in Scotland, in 1698, and educated at the university of Glasgow, where he applied himself assiduously to the study of the mathematics. In 1717 he obtained the mathematical professorship in the Marischal college of Aberdeen, and two years afterwards became a fellow of the Royal Society of London In 1725 he was chosen to supply the place of Mr. James Gregory, professor of mathematics at Edinburgh. In 1742 he published his System of Fluxions, 2 vols. 4to. the most considerable of his works. In 1745, having been active in fortifying Edinburgh against the rebels, he was compelled to fly, on which he took refuge with archbishop Herring at York. He died of a dropsy the year following. Maclaurin was a good as well as great man. His peculiar merit as a philosopher was, that all his studies were accommodated to general utility; and in many places of his works are found an application even of the most abstruse theories to the perfecting of the mechanical arts. It may be said of such a man "that he lived to some purpose;" which can scarcely be said of those, how uncommon soever their abilities and attainments, who spend their whole time in abstract speculations, and produce nothing to the real use and service of their fellow-creatures. Besides the above work, he wrote several papers in the Philosophical Transactions; Geometria Organica; on the Percussion of Bodies; a Treatise of Algebra; And an account of sir Isaac Newton's Philosophical Discoveries, 4to. and 8vo.—Biog. Brit. Martin's Biog. Phil.

Macpherson (James), a Scotch writer, was born in 1738. His first work, and that which brought him mostly into notice, was a translation of poems attributed by him to Ossian. These poems possess great beauty; but their authenticity has been disputed by Dr. Johnson and other writers, and as zealously maintained by the editor and Dr. Hugh Blair. Mr. Macpherson was greatly irritated at Dr. Johnson's remarks, and wrote him a threatening letter, which the doctor answered in indignant terms. In 1773 our author published a translation of the Iliad into heroic prose, which fell into contempt. He was also the author of an Introduction to the History of Great Britain and Ireland; a History of Great Britain from 1660 to the Accession of the House of Hanover; 2 vols. 4to.; and of some political pamphlets in defence of lord North's administration, for which he obtained a place and a seat in the house of commons. He died in 1796.——Gent. Mag.

Macquer (Philip), a French advocate in the parliament of Paris, was originally of a Scotch family, who quitted that country on account of their attachment to the house of Stuart, and the catholic religion. He wrote an abridgement of Ecclesiattical History, 3 vols. 8vo.; Roman Annals, 8vo.; Abridgment of the History of Spain and Portugal, 2 vols. 8vo. He died in 1770, aged 50.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Macquer (Peter Joseph), brother of the last-mentioned, was born at Paris in 1718. He studied physic, and became professor in the king's garden at Paris. He was also member of the academy of sciences, and died in 1784. He wrote elements of Chemistry, theoretical and practical, 3 vols.; a Dictionary of Chemistry, 2 vols.; and other works.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Macrinus (Titus Fulvius Julius), an Egyptian, who, from being a private soldier, rose to the rank of general, and when Valerian was taken prisoner by the Persians in 258, Macrinus, though in the decline of life, assumed the imperial title, and distributed large sums among the soldiers. He maintained the war with great success against the Persians, but marching into the west to dethrone Gallianus, he was defeated and put to death with his son, A. D. 262.—Univ. Hist.

Macrinus (Marcus Opilius Severus), a native of Africa, who rose from the meanest station to be emperor, on the death of Caracalla, in 217. The beginning of his reign was popular, but at last his soldiers mutinied, and he fled in disguise to Cappadocia, where he was taken and beheaded, A. D. 218.—Ibid.

Macinus (John), a Latin poet, whose real name was Salmon. He was born at London, and died there in 1557, aged 67. He wrote Hymns, Næniæ, and other pieces of Latin poetry. His son Charles surpassed his father in his knowledge of the Greek, and equalled him in his Latin poetry. He was tutor to Catharine of Navarre, sister of Henry IV. and perished in the massacre of St. Bartholomew, 1572.—Moreri Macrobius (Ambrosius Aurelius Theodosius), a Latin writer of the 4th century, is supposed to have been a Greek, but whether a Christian or pagan is unknown. He wrote a Commentary on Cicero's piece, entitled, The Dream of Scipio; and also Saturnalia, or Miscellanies. The best edition of Macrobius is that of London, 1694 8vo. —Vossius de Lat. Script.

Madan (Martin), an English divine, was born about 1726, of a respectable family, and brought up to the bar, which profession he quitted for the church. The chapel at the Lock Hospital was built chiefly by his means, and he officiated as the chaplain for many years, without any emolument. He brought upon himself some considerable obloquy for defending the conduct of Mr. Haweis, his assistant, who retained the rectory of Aldwincle, as was said, centrary to a previous agreement; but he suffered more for publishing a famous book, called Thelypthora, or a Treatise on female Ruin, 3 vols. 8vo. 1781. In this work he maintained the lawfulness of polygamy, in cases of seduction. Mr. Madan afterwards published a translation of Juvenal and Persius, 2 vols. 8vo. He was also the author of a pamphlet, entitled, Thoughts upon Executive Justice; Letters to Dr. Priestley; and some sermons. He was of the Calvinistic class, and died in 1790.—Gent. Mag. Monthly Mag.

MADDEN (Samuel), an Iriſh divine, of French extraction. In 1731 he projected a ſcheme for promoting learning in the college of Dublin, by premiums. The year following he printed Memoirs of the Twentieth Century, being original Letters of State under George VI. 8vo.; but this work was immediately ſuppreſſed. In 1740 he ſet apart the annual ſum of 100l. to be divided into premiums, for the encouragement of arts and manufactures in Ireland. He had ſome preferment, and died in 1765. Dr. Madden was the author of a poem called Boulter's Monument.—Europ. Mag.

MADDERSTEG (Michael), a Dutch painter, was born at Amſterdam in 1659. He was a diſciple of Ludolph Backhuyſen, and painted ſea pieces with great ſucceſs. He died in 1709.—Pilkington.

MADDOX (Iſaac), an eminent prelate, was born at London in 1697. He ſerved his apprenticeſhip to a cook, which profeſſion he quitted, and entered of Queen's college, Oxford, where he took his degrees, and entered into orders. In 1729, he was appointed clerk of the cloſet to queen Caroline, and in 1733 dean of Wells; in which year he publiſhed a Vindication of the Church of England, againſt Neale's Hiſtory of the Puritans. In 1736 he was made biſhop of St. Aſaph, from whence he was tranſlated to Worceſter in 1743. His lordſhip was a great benefactor to ſeveral hoſpitals, and other public charities, and died in 1759. He publiſhed ſermons on public occaſions.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

MADOG, the ſon of Owain Gwynedd, a Welſh prince, who is ſaid to have gone to ſea in ten ſhips with three hundred men, in 1170, after which no tidings were ever heard of him. It is ſuppoſed that Madog reached the American continent, as, it is ſaid, there is a tribe of white Indians on the northern branches of the Miſſouri river, who ſpeak the Welſh language.—Owen's Cambr. Biog.

MADOX (Thomas), an Engliſh antiquary, and hiſtoriographer royal, who publiſhed, in 1702, a Collection of antient Charters and Inſtruments of divers kinds, taken from the Originals, from the Conqueſt to the End of the Reign of Henry VIII. In 1711 appeared his Hiſtory and Antiquities of the Exchequer, which was reprinted in 1769. His laſt work was the Firma Burgi, or Hiſtorical Eſſay concerning the Cities, Towns, and Boroughs of England.—Gen Biog. Dict.

MÆCENAS (Caius Cilnius), the intimate friend of Auguſtus, and ſo great a patron of men of letters, that his name has been proverbialized to expreſs perſons of the ſame diſpoſition. According to Horace, he was deſcended from the kings of Etruria. Auguſtus one day being on the tribunal, paſſing ſentence of death on ſeveral perſons, Mæcenas ſent him a paper with this inſcription, 'Come down, butcher;" which ſtruck the emperor ſo forcibly that he immediately deſcended from his ſeat. He was the great friend of Virgil and Horace, who immortalized him in their works. He diſtinguiſhed himſelf alſo in the field, particularly at the battles of Modena and Philippi. When Auguſtus and Agrippa went to Sicily, Mæcenas had the adminiſtration of the government, though he was not a man of ambition. He died eight years B. C. He wrote ſome tragedies, which are loſt.—Bayle. Voſſius.

MAES (God'rey), an hiſtorical painter, was born at Antwerp in 1660. He became director of the academy in his native city. His pictures are held in great eſteem.—Pilkington.

MÆSTLINUS (Michael), a German aſtronomer, was born in the duchy of Wirtemberg, and became mathematical profeſſor at Tubingen, where he died in 1590, aged 48, leaving ſeveral works on mathematics and aſtronomy.—Martin's Biog. Phil.

MAFFÆUS (Vegio), a Latin poet, was born at Lodi in the Milaneſe, in 1407. He blended the charms of poetry with the gravity of juriſprudence. After profeſſing law at Pavia he was called to Rome, where he was appointed datary and canon of St. John de Lateran. He died in 1458. His works are: 1. De Educatione Liberorum, 4to.; 2. Of Perſeverance in Religion; 3. Lives of Saints; 4. Poetical Pieces, the moſt remarkable of which is a Latin poem, called a Continuation of the Æneid of Virgil. It has been tranſlated into Engliſh burleſque by Mr. John Ellis.—Tiraboſchi.

MAFFÆUS (Bernardin), a learned cardinal, who died at Rome in 1553, aged 40. He wrote a Commentary on Cicero's Epiſtles, and a Treatiſe on Medals and Inſcriptions.—Moreri.

MAFFÆUS (John Peter), a learned jeſuit, was born at Bergamo in 1536, and died at Tivoli in 1603. He wrote the Life of Ignatius Loyola; Hiſtory of the Indies; and other works, in Latin.—Ibid.

MAFFÆUS or MAFFEI (Francis Scipio), an Italian marquis, was born at Verona in 1675. He ſerved as a volunteer at the battle of Donawert in 1704; but quitted the military profeſſion and returned to his own country, where he ſet himſelf to reform the ſtage, for which purpoſe he produced his excellent tragedy of Merope. He died in 1755. He wrote, beſides the above, a valuable work in Italian againſt Duelling, 4to; Hiſtory of the Diplomatic Science; Muſæum Veronenſe, folio; Verona Illuſtrata, fol.; a Tranſlation of the Firſt Book of the Iliad, and ſeveral other works.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

MAGALOTTI (count Lorenzo), an elegant poet and learned naturaliſt, was born at Florence in 1637. He was member of the academy of Cruſca, and of that of Cimento. He wrote many philoſophical and poetical works, of which latter the moſt valued is his Canzonette Anacreontiche, publiſhed under his Arcadian name, Lindoro Elateo, in 8vo. He died in 1712.—Tiraboſchi.

MAGANZA (John Baptiſt), an Italian painter of hiſtory, was born at Vicenza in 1577, and died in 1617.—Pilk.

MAGELHAENS (John Hyacinth de), a learned Portugueſe eccleſiaſtic, who was a member of the royal ſociety, and of ſeveral foreign academies. He reſided in London the greateſt part of his life, and died in 1790. He was well acquainted with every branch of natural philoſophy, and publiſhed ſome uſeful tracts on experimental ſubjects. —Gent. Mag.

MAGELLAN (Ferdinand), a famous Portugueſe navigator. In 1510 he ſerved under Abuquerque, and diſtinguiſhed himſelf by his bravery, and by his exact knowledge of the Indian ſeas. On his return to Portugal he aſpired to the rank of commander, but being diſappointed he entered into the ſervice of the emperor Charles V. who gave him the command of a fleet, with which, in 1519, he diſcovered the ſtraits called by his name at the extremity of South America, after which he took poſſeſſion of the Philippine iſlands, in the name of the king of Spain. He was ſlain at thoſe iſlands in a ſkirmiſh with the natives in 1521. One veſſel only of this expedition, with eighteen men, returned to Europe.—Moreri.

MAGINUS (John Anthony), profeſſor of mathematics at Bologna, was born at Padua, and died in 1617. He is ſaid to have predicted his own death by aſtrological calculation. He wrote Aſtronomical Tables, Ephemerides, and other works.—Moreri.

MAGGI (Jerome), or Magius, a learned Italian, was a native of Tuſcany. He ſtudied juriſprudence, to which he added a great knowledge of mathematics and military architecture. The Venetians appointed him judge of the admiralty in the iſland of Cyprus, where by his ſkill the city of Famagouſta reſiſted a long time the attacks of the Turks. When it was taken he was carried in chains to Conſtantinople, and thrown into priſon, where he wrote a Treatiſe on Bells, and another on the Wooden Horſe, which he dedicated to the French and Imperial ambaſſadors, his correſpondence with whom being diſcovered, he was ſtrangled by order of the vizir in 1573. Beſides the above he wrote De Mundi exitio per combuſtionem; Commentaries on the Inſtitutes of Juſtinian, and a Treatiſe on Fortifications, folio. His brother Bartholomew was a phyſician, and died at Bologna in 1552. He wrote a book on Gun-ſhot wounds, 4to.

MAGGI (Charles Maria), an Italian poet of the 17th century, and one of the reſtorers of good taſte in Italy, after the barbarous ravage of the ſchool of Marini. He was born at Milan in 1630, and was ſecretary to the ſenate of that city. He died in 1699. His works and life were publiſhed by Muratori at Milan in 4 vols. 12mo. in 1700.

MAGLIABECCHI (Anthony), a learned Italian, was born at Florence in 1656. He was deſigned by his parents for the buſineſs of a goldſmith, but having a ſtrong inclination to learning, he abandoned that profeſſion, and acquired ſuch a ſtore of knowledge as to be appointed librarian to the grand duke of Tuſcany. He correſponded with moſt of the learned men in Europe, and aſtoniſhing things, bordering on the marvellous, are told of his memory. His delight was wholly in books and manuſcripts, and he refuſed preferments and riches. An old cloak ſerved him for a garment by day and a covering by night. He had one ſtraw chair for his table, and another to ſleep on. He died in 1714. A Collection of Letters to him was publiſhed at Florence in 1745 in 8vo.—Life by Spence. Moreri.

MAGNENTIUS, a German, who roſe from being a private ſoldier to the firſt employments in the empire. The emperor Conſtans had a great eſteem for him, and in a mutiny among the troops delivered him from the fury of the ſoldiers by covering him with his robe. Magnentius murdered his benefactor in 350, and aſſumed the title of Emperor; but Conſtantius II. avenged the death of his brother, and after a bloody battle took Magnentius priſoner, and put him to death at Lyons in 353.—Univ. Hiſt.

MAGNON (John), a French poet and advocate, was born at Tournus. He exerciſed his profeſſion ſome time at Lyons, and then quitted it for dramatic writing. His plays however are very indifferent. He was aſſaſſinated in the night in 1662, by ſome ſtreet robbers at Paris. He projected but never completed an Encyclopedie in verſe.—Moreri.

MAGNUS (John), archbiſhop of Upſal in Sweden, was born in 1488. He oppoſed the reformation in Sweden, and finding his efforts ineffectual, he retired to Rome, where he died in 1544. He wrote a Hiſtory of Sweden, and Lives of the Archbiſhops of Upſal, in folio.—Moreri. Bayle.

MAGNUS (Olaus), brother and ſucceſſor of the preceding. He was at the council of Trent, where he diſplayed conſiderable abilities. He died at Rome in 1560. His greateſt work is a Hiſtory of the Northern Nations, fol. 1555.—Ibid.

MAHOMET, or MOHAMMED, a famous impoſtor, was born in 570, at Mecca, a city of Arabia, of the noble family of Koreiſh. Loſing his father in his infancy, the guardianſhip of him devolved on his uncle Abu Taleb, who employed him to go with his caravans from Mecca to Damaſcus. In this employment of camel driver he continued till he was twenty-eight years of age, when he married Cadiga, a rich widow. Becoming hereby one of the wealthieſt men in Mecca, he formed the deſign of obtaining the ſovereignty; and judging there was no way ſo likely to gain his end as by effecting a change in the religion of his countrymen, he ſuddenly aſſumed a very ſanctified appearance. Having remarked in his travels the infinite variety of ſects which prevailed, he conceived that his project was not impracticable. He accordingly ſpent much of his time in a cave near Mecca, ſeemingly alone, and employed in meditation and prayer, but in reality he called to his aid a Perſian jew, well verſed in the hiſtory and laws of his perſuaſion, and two Chriſtians, one of the Jacobite and the other of the Neſtorian ſect. With the help of theſe men he framed his Koran, or the book which he pretended to have received at different times from heaven by the hands of the angel Gabriel. At the age of forty he publicly aſſumed the prophetical character, calling himſelf the apoſtle of God. At firſt he had only his wife and eight other followers; but in three years his diſciples were conſiderably numerous. On theſe he impoſed the moſt marvellous tales, but well adapted to deceive ignorant and ſuperſtitious minds. He pretended to have paſſed into the higheſt heavens in one night, on the back of a beautiful aſs called Al Borak, and accompanied by the angel Gabriel. There he had an interview with Adam, Abraham, Moſes, David, and Jeſus Chriſt, who acknowledged his ſuperiority, which was confirmed to him by the Deity himſelf. This romance ſtaggered even ſome of his beſt friends, and a powerful confederacy being formed againſt him, he was forced to quit Mecca, and to ſeek a refuge in Medina. This retreat occaſioned the foundation of his empire, and of his religion. The Mohammedans adopt it as their chronological ſtandard, calling it the Hegira, that is the Flight or Perſecution, being the firſt day of our July, A D. 622. Mahomet had ſtill a number of diſciples, upon whom he inculcated this principle, that they were not to diſpute for their religion by word but by the ſword. This was a doctrine well adapted to a lawleſs and wandering people, and was ſoon carried into practice by them. The jewiſh Arabs were the firſt who experienced its effects. Mahomet committed upon them the moſt ſhocking cruelties, put numbers to death, ſold others for ſlaves, and diſtributed their goods among his ſoldiers. A faith thus propagated could not but ſucceed in a country like Arabia. He rewarded his adherents here by plunder, and held out to them a certain happineſs of the moſt ſenſual kind hereafter. In 627 he made a treaty with the inhabitants of Mecca, which two years afterwards he violated, and ſtormed the place with fire and ſword. Having made himſelf maſter of Arabia, he extended his conqueſts into Syria, where he took ſeveral cities, and laid ſome of the princes under tribute. While engaged in this victorious career, a jeweſs poiſoned a ſhoulder of mutton which was laid before him, and of which he and his companions ate heartily. One of them died immediately, but the prophet lingered ſome time. When the woman was examined, ſhe declared, that ſhe had perpetrated the deed on purpoſe to try whether he was really a true prophet. Of the effects of this poiſon he died, A.D. 632, and of the hegira 8, aged 62. After the death of Cadiga he had ſeveral wives and concubines, by whom he had many children, but left only a daughter named Fatima, who married his ſucceſſor Ali. It is a vulgar error, that the body of Mahomet was laid in a ſteel coffin, and ſuſpended in his tomb at Medina between two magnets. The Koran of this impoſtor contains a good deal of practical morality, drawn from the ſcriptures, but blended with extravagant tales, and blaſphemous doctrines. The beſt printed edition is that of Maracci, in Arabic and Latin, Padua, 2 vols. fol. 1698. It has been well tranſlated into Engliſh by Sale, in 2 vols. 4to. and 2 vols. 8vo. and into French by Du Ryer and Savary.—Prideaux's Life of Mahomet. Great Hiſt. Dict.

MAHOMET I. emperor of the Turks, was the ſon of Bajazet I. and ſucceeded his brother Moſes in 1413. He re-eſtabliſhed the glory of the Ottoman empire, which had been ravaged by Tamerlane, and fixed the ſeat of government at Adrianople, where he died in 1421, aged 47.—Rycaut's Hiſt. of the Turks.

MAHOMET II. was born at Adrianople in 1430, and ſucceeded his father Amurath II. in 1451. He made many conqueſts, and was the firſt who aſſumed the title of grand ſignior. His death in 1481 occaſioned public rejoicings at Rome and Italy. Mahomet is ſaid to have been a free-thinker, and to have ridiculed throughout the religion in which he was brought up. His letters, collected by a knight of Rhodes, have been printed.—Ibid.

MAHOMET III. ſucceeded his father, Amurath III. in 1595. He commenced his reign by ſtrangling nineteen of his brothers, and drowning ten of his father's wives. He entered Hungary, took Agria by capitulation, and then maſſacred the whole garriſon. The archduke Maximilian marched againſt him, and nearly obtained a complete victory, when Mahomet, who had made a falſe retreat, ſuddenly returned to the charge, and routed the Imperialiſts. He was afterwards leſs ſucceſsful, and obliged to ſue for peace to the chriſtian princes, whoſe ſtates he had ravaged. He died in 1603.—Ibid. Univ. Hiſt.

MAHOMET IV. was born in 1642. He became emperor in 1649, after the tragical death of his father, Ibraham I. The Turks were at this time engaged in a war with the Venetians, and made themſelves maſters of the iſle of Candia in 1669, after loſing 100,000 men. Mahomet marched in perſon againſt Poland, and having taken ſeveral places, made peace with that country on condition of an annual tribute being paid to him. Sobieſki, irritated at this treaty, raiſed an army, and the year following defeated the Turks near Choczim. He alſo obtained a number of other advantages over them, and a peace was concluded favourable to Poland in 1676. In 1683 the Turks laid ſiege to Vienna, on which Sobieſki marched to its relief, and routed the beſiegers. The year following a league was entered into againſt the Turks between the emperor, the king of Poland, and the Venetians. The janiſſaries, attributing their misfortunes to the indolence of the ſultan, depoſed him in 1687, and gave the ſceptre to his brother Solyman III who ſent him to the ſame priſon from whence he had himſelf been taken. Mahomet died there in 1691.—Univ. Hiſt.

MAHOMET V. or rather MAHMOUD, the ſon of Muſtapha II. was born in 1696, and placed on the throne in 1730, after the depoſition of his uncle Achmet III. Thamas Kouli Khan took from him Georgia and Armenia. He died in 1754.—Ibid.

MAHUDEL (Nicolas), a learned writer, was born at Langres in 1673. He was at firſt a jeſuit, afterwards a monk of the order of La Trappe, and laſtly a phyſician at Paris, where he was confined in the Baſtille for ſome time. He died in 1747. He wrote an Hiſtorical Diſſertation on the Antient Money of Spain, and a Letter on a Medal of the City of Carthage.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

MAIER (Michael), a German alchemiſt and roſycrucian of the 17th century, who ruined himſelf by his ridiculous purſuits. He wrote many books on alchemy and the roſycrucian reveries.—Moreri.

MAIGNAN (Emanuel), a French eccleſiaſtic and philoſopher, was born at Toulouſe in 1601, and educated among the jeſuits, but afterwards he took the habit among the minims. In 1636 he went to Rome, and occupied a profeſſor's chair with great reputation. In 1650 he returned to his native city, where he died in 1676 He publiſhed, 1. De Perſpectiva Horaria; 2. a Courſe of Philoſophy, 4 vols 8vo —Ibid.

MAIGROT (Charles), a doctor of the Sorbonne, who was made biſhop of Conon, and vicar apoſtolic, and ſent to China. He ſtrenuouſly oppoſed the jeſuits, who permitted the Chineſe converts to pay religious adoration at the tombs of their anceſtors. Maigrot died at Rome, about 1720 He wrote an Examination of the Chineſe Worſhip, &c. —Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

MAILLA (Joſeph Anne Marie de Moyriac de), a learned jeſuit, was born in Savoy in 1670. Having made himſelf acquainted with the Chineſe language, he was ſent miſſionary to that country in 1703, and was greatly eſteemed by the emperor Kang-Hi, who employed him to make a map of China and Chineſe Tartary. He tranſlated the annals of China into French, part of which has been publiſhed by Groſier. He died at Pekin in 1748.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

MAILLARD (Oliver), a French cordelier and doctor in divinity, who was celebrated both as a ſtateſman and a preacher. He died at Toulouſe in 1502. His ſermons were printed at Paris in 1730, in 3 vols. 8vo.—Moreri.

MAILLEBOIS (John Baptiſt Deſmarets, marquis of), a French general, was the ſon of Nicholas Deſmarets, comptroller general of the finances. He reduced Corſica to the dominion of France, for which he afterwards received a marſhal's ſtaff. He afterwards ſerved with reputation in Germany, but in 1746 was defeated at the battle of Placentia. He died in 1762, aged 80. The account of his campaigns was publiſhed in 1755, in 3 vols. 4to. There was another French general of this name, who commanded with ſucceſs in Germany, and in 1784 was ſent to Holland, to ſupport the party there oppoſed to Pruſſia. Being obliged to leave France at the beginning of the revolution, he died at Maeſtricht in 1792.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

MAILLET (Benedict de), a French writer, was born in 1659. He was ſixteen years conſul-general in Egypt, and enjoyed afterwards the ſame poſt at Leghorn. He died at Marſeilles in 1738. He wrote a work on the Origin of the Earth, publiſhed under the name of Telliamed, in 1 vol. 8vo. and a Deſcription of Egypt, 2 vols. 12mo —Ibid.

MAIMBOURG (Louis), a learned French writer, was born of a noble family at Nancy in Lorrain in 1610. He entered into the ſociety of jeſuits, but was expelled by order of pope Innocent XI. in 1682, for defending the liberty of the Gallican church. But Louis XIV. gave him a conſiderable penſion. He retired to the abbey of St. Victor at Paris, where he died in 1686. He wrote hiſtories of Arianiſm, of the Croiſades, of Calviniſm, Lutheraniſm, and other works.—Moreri.

MAIMONIDES (Moſes), or Moſes the ſon of Maimon, a jewiſh rabbi, was born at Cordova in Spain in 1131. He is commonly called Moſes Egyptus, becauſe he lived in that country as phyſician to the ſultan. He was verſed in ſeveral languages and ſciences, but particularly mathematics and medicine. He was alſo learned in theology, and the jews account him as ſecond only to Moſes the legiſlator. He expoſed the fabulous traditions of the rabbins, and explained the ſcriptures in a rational manner. His principal works are, the Jad, or Miſchna: Terah; the More Nevochim; and the Peruſchim, or Commentaries on the Miſchna. He died at the age of 70.—Buxtorf.

MAINFROY, prince of Tarento, was the natural ſon of the emperor Frederic II. After the death of Conrad IV. king of Sicily, he had the guardianſhip of his ſon Conradin, from whom he took the throne, and cauſed himſelf to be crowned at Palermo. Having quarrelled with pope Innocent IV. he invaded the eccleſiaſtical eſtates, and laid ſiege to Rome. The pope excommunicated him, and gave his kingdoms of Naples and Sicily to Charles of Anjou. A war enſued, and Mainfroy was ſlain on the plains of Beneventto in 1266.—Univ. Hiſt.

MAINTENON (Frances D'Aubigné, marchioneſs de), was the grand-daughter of Theodore Agrippa D'Aubigné, and born in 1635 in the priſon of Niort, where her father was confined. When he recovered his liberty he went to Martinico with his family for the purpoſe of recruiting his fortune; but a propenſity to gaming proved his ruin. On his death his widow returned to Europe, leaving Frances behind, but ſhe was ſoon after ſent to France by thoſe who had the care of her. She was at firſt patronized by her paternal aunt, madame de Villette, from whom ſhe was removed by an order of court, leſt ſhe ſhould be brought up a proteſtant. In 1651 ſhe married the celebrated Scarron, from whom ſhe learned the Latin, Spaniſh, and Italian languages. In 1660 ſhe became a widow in very narrow circumſtances, but the queen allowed her a penſion, with which ſhe retired to a convent at Paris. The death of her patron deprived her of her penſion, and reduced her to great difficulties; but by means of her old friend madame de Monteſpan, the king's miſtreſs, ſhe obtained the renewal of her penſion. By the command of his majeſty ſhe undertook the education of the children he had by madame de Monteſpan, which truſt ſhe diſcharged with great fidelity. In this ſituation ſhe acquired the eſteem of the king, who in 1674 purchaſed for her the eſtate of Maintenon, which name ſhe aſſumed. The royal inſtitution of St. Louis, for the young and indigent female nobility, was founded by madame de Maintenon, and liberally endowed by the king. This was afterwards called the ſociety of St. Cyr, and was diſtinguiſhed by many excellent regulations. In 1685 the king, over whom ſhe had a complete aſcendancy, made her his wife; but the marriage was never publicly avowed. She has been accuſed of moving him to revoke the edict of Nantes, but this is improbable, as it is certain ſhe exerted all her influence in behalf of the ſuffering proteſtants. At her requeſt Racine wrote his religious dramas of Eſther and Athaliah, which were originally performed by the young ladies of St. Cyr. For a conſiderable time ſhe lived on terms of intimacy with Fenelon, and on his recommendation patronized madame Guyon; but afterwards ſhe joined the perſecutors of that excellent man. On the death of Louis ſhe retired to St. Cyr, where ſhe died in 1718. Many of her letters have been publiſhed.—Memoirs of Madame de Maintenon. Moreri.

MAJOR (John), a Scotch divine and hiſtorian, was born near North Berwick, in 1469. He ſtudied at Paris, where he took his doctor's degree, and on his return to Scotland became profeſſor of divinity at St. Andrew's, of which univerſity he was appointed provoſt. He died about 1550. He wrote the Hiſtory of Scotland; the Mirror of Examples; a Commentary on the Goſpels, &c.—Moreri.

MAJOR (John Daniel), a phyſician and naturaliſt, was born at Breſlaw in 1634. He became profeſſor of medicine at Kiel, where he founded a botanic garden. He died at Stockholm in 1693. His principal works are, 1. Lithologia curioſa ſive de animalibus et plantis in lapidem converſis, 4to.; 2. De Cancris et ſerpentibus petrefactis, 4to.; 3. Hiſtoria anatomiæ, folio.—Moreri.

MAJORAGIO (Marc Anthony), ſo called from a village of that name in the Milaneſe, where he was born in 1514. He became profeſſor of belles lettres at Milan, and died there in 1555. He wrote Commentaries on Ariſtotle's Rhetoric, Cicero's Orator, and on Virgil, folio; and other works.—Moreri.

MAJORIANUS (Julius Valerius), emperor of the weſt, was raiſed to the throne in 457. He was of a good family, and his virtues rendered him deſerving of his elevation. He made war againſt the Vandals with ſucceſs, and concluded an advantageous peace with them. He was murdered by Ricimer, one of his generals, in 461.—Crevier. Gibbon.

MAIRAN (John James d'Ortous de), an ingenious Frenchman, was born at Beziers in 1678. He was a member of the academy of ſciences, and ſucceeded Fontenelle as ſecretary in 1741. He died at Paris in 1771. His principal works are, a Diſſertation on the cauſe of the phoſphoric Light; Hiſtorical and Philoſophical Treatiſe on the Aurora Borealis; Letters concerning China; Diſſertation upon Ice; and a number of Memoirs and Elogies.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

MAIRE (John le), a French poet, was born in Hainault in 1473, and died in 1524. He wrote among other pieces an allegorical poem called the Three Tales of Cupids and of Atropos, &c. Paris 1525, 8vo.—Ibid.

MAIRE (James le), a Dutch navigator, who ſailed from the Texel in 1615 with two veſſels. In the following year he diſcovered the ſtraits which bear his name in South America. After viſiting New Guinea, he ſailed to Batavia, where he was made priſoner, and the only veſſel he had left was confiſcated, under the pretence of his having infringed on the rights of the Dutch Eaſt India Company. He died on his paſſage to Europe in 1617.—Moreri.

MAIRET (John), a French poet, was born at Beſançon in 1604. He was page to the duke of Montmorency, who gave him a penſion, and he alſo received ſome conſiderable favours from cardinal Richelieu. He died in 1686. Beſides his poems he wrote twelve tragedies of little merit.—Moreri.

MAISTRE (Antony le), a French writer, was born at Paris in 1608. He was brought up to the bar, which profeſſion he quitted, and entered into the ſociety of Port Royal, where he died in 1658. He publiſhed a tranſlation of Chryſoſtom on the Prieſthood; the Life of St. Bernard; and other works.—Moreri.

MAISTRE (Louis Iſaac le), better known by the name of Sacy, was brother of the preceding, and born at Paris in 1613. He entered into orders, but being a zealous janſeniſt he was ſent to the Baſtille, where he continued two years, and wrote ſome works, particularly one entitled, the Figures of the Bible. He alſo began there his tranſlation of the Scriptures. In 1668 he recovered his liberty. He died in 1684. Beſides his tranſlation of the Bible in 3 vols. 4to. and 4 vols. folio, he wrote Letters of Piety; an Attack on the Jeſuits, and other works.—Ibid.

MAITLAND (John), lord of Thyelſtane, and chancellor of Scotland, was born in 1545. In 1589 he attended king James VI. to Norway, where his conſort the princeſs of Denmark was detained by contrary winds. He died in 1595. He wrote Epigrammata Latina, publiſhed in the Delicæ Poetarum Scotorum, Amſterdam, 1637.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

MAITLAND (William), a Scotch writer, was born at Brechin about 1693. He was originally a dealer in hair, which profeſſion he quitted for that of literature. He compiled a Hiſtory of London, in 2 vols. folio; another of Edinburgh, folio; alſo the Hiſtory and Antiquities of Scotland, 2 vols. folio. He died at Montroſe in 1757.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

MAITTAIRE (Michael), a learned grammarian and bibliographer, was born in London in 1668, and educated at Weſtminſter ſchool, from whence he was removed to Chriſt church, Oxford, where he took his degrees. In 1695 he was appointed ſecond maſter of Weſtminſter ſchool, which place he held only four years. He died in 1747. Mr. Maittaire publiſhed accurate editions of the Latin Claſſics; an edition of the New Teſtament in Greek; the Corpus Poetarum Latinorum, 2 vols. fol.; Annales Typographici, 5 vols. 4to.; Hiſtoria Typographorum, 2 vols. 8vo.; Hiſtoria Stephanorum, 8vo.; Græcæ Linguæ Dialecti, 8vo; Miſcellanea Græcorum aliquot Scriptorum Carmina, 4to. He was alſo the author of two pamphlets againſt Whiſton on the Trinity.—Nichols's Anecd. of Bowyer.

MAIUS, or MAY, (John Henry), a lutheran divine, was born in 1653 at Pfortzheim. He became profeſſor of the Oriental languages at Gieſſen, and died there in 1719. His works are, 1. Hiſtoria Animalium Scripturæ Sacræ, 8vo.; 2. Vitæ Johannis Reuchlini, 8vo.; 3. Synopſis Theologiæ Symbolicæ; 4. Hiſtoria Reformationis Lutheri, &c.—Moreri.

MALACHI, the laſt of the twelve prophets. He lived in the time of Nehemiah, in the reign of Artaxerxes Longomanus, and is ſaid to have died young. He propheſied the coming of John the Baptiſt, under the name of Elias.—Gray's Key O. T.

MALACHY (St.), was born at Armagh in Ireland, in 1094. He was ſucceſſively abbot of Benetor, biſhop of Connor, and archbiſhop of Armagh. The laſt dignity he reſigned, after greatly reforming his dioceſe, in 1135. He died at Clairvaux, in the arms of his friend St. Bernard, in 1148. Several predictions have been attributed to him, but thoſe which paſs under his name are mere inventions.—Moreri.

MALAGRIDA (Gabriel), an Italian Jeſuit, who was ſent by his ſuperiors as a miſſionary to Portugal, where he gained great popularity by his eloquence. When the king baniſhed the jeſuits from his dominions, he ſuffered Malagrida, Alexander, and Mathos, to remain, who are ſuppoſed to have joined in the duke of Alveiro's conſpiracy. Malagrida publiſhed an extravagant book, entitled, The Life of St. Anne; he alſo pretended to be a prophet, and preached ſome viſionary notions, for which he was taken up by the inquiſition, and burnt as a heretic, in 1761, aged 75.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

MALCOLM IV. king of Scotland, was the grandſon of David, and aſcended the throne in 1153. He founded ſeveral churches and monaſteries, and died in 1165.—Buchanan.

MALDONAT (John), a Spaniſh jeſuit, was born at Eſtramadura, in 1534. He ſtudied at Salamanca, and entered among the jeſuits at Rome in 1562. The year following he went to France, where he became profeſſor of divinity and philoſophy. But being accuſed of holding heretical notions, he retired to Bourges, from whence he was called to Rome to ſuperintend the publiſhing of the Septuagint verſion of the Bible. He died there in 1583. He wrote Commentaries on the Prophets, and on the Goſpels, which are highly eſteemed. He was alſo the author of a Treatiſe on Grace, another on Original Sin; a Treatiſe on Angels and Demons, and other works.—Moreri.

MALEBRANCHE (Nicolas), a philoſopher, was born at Paris in 1638. He was admitted into the congregation of the Oratory in 1660, and died in 1715. He wrote ſeveral books, the principal of which is the Search after Truth, printed at Paris in 1674. His object in this work is to ſhew, that the only way of diſcovering truth is to obſerve every thing in God; or, in other words, to abſtract the mind from all objects but in reference to the Fountain of Exiſtence. His ſubſequent works are all on the ſame principle.—Moreri.

MALEGUZZI-VALERI (Veronica), an ingenious lady, was born at Reggio in Italy. She ſupported two theſes in public on the liberal arts, which have been publiſhed; alſo a drama entitled, Innocence Recognized. She died in 1690, in the convent of Modena.—Tiraboſchi.

MALELAS (John), a teacher of rhetoric at Antioch, in the year 900. He wrote a Chronicle from the Creation to the Reign of Juſtinian, which was printed at Oxford in 1691.—Voſſ. de Script. Græc.

MALERMI or MALERBI (Nicolas), a Venetian monk of the 15th century, who tranſlated the Bible into the Italian language, which was printed at Venice, in 2 vols fol.

1471, under the title of Biblia Volgare Iſtoriato. He alſo wrote La Legenda di Tutti Santi, Venet. 1474 fol.—Tiraboſchi.

MALESHERBES (Chriſtian William Lamoignon), an eminent French counſellor, was born at Paris in 1721. His talents procured him the place of preſident of the court of Aids in 1750, which place he held with great reputation above twenty years, and then retired to his paternal eſtate. In 1775 he was recalled from his retreat, and made miniſter of ſtate for the interior. Under his adminiſtration priſons were viſited, and numerous abuſes removed; but the year following he reſigned. Maleſherbes then travelled into different countries, in a plain attire, and under an aſſumed name. At the beginning of the revolution he conceived a hope that it would have been productive of good; but the illuſion ſoon vaniſhed. He voluntarily pleaded the cauſe of the virtuous and unfortunate Louis XVI. and defended him with all the ardour of conſcious rectitude. This excellent man was condemned to death, with his daughter and grand-daughter, by the revolutionary tribunal, April 22, 1793. He wrote a treatiſe on Rural Economy; Thoughts and Maxims; Two Memoirs on the Civil State of the Proteſtants.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

MALEZIEU (Nicolas de), a learned Frenchman, was born at Paris in 1650. He was preceptor to the dukes of Maine and Burgundy, a member of the French academy, and alſo of that of ſciences. He died in 1727. He wrote, 1. Elements of Geometry, 8vo.; 2. Miſcellanies in verſe, 1712.—Moreri.

MALHERBE (Francis de), a French poet, was born at Caen about 1555, and died at Paris in 1628. Balzac and Boileau give him a high character. His works conſiſt of Paraphraſes on the Pſalms, Sonnets, Odes, and Epigrams; the beſt edition of which is that of Paris, in 1757, 8vo. He alſo tranſlated ſome of Seneca's letters, and part Livy.—Ibid.

MALINGRE (Claude), a French hiſtorian, who publiſhed ſeveral works of little merit. He was a native of Sens, and died at the beginning of the 17th century. His beſt work is a Hiſtory of the Honorary Dignities of France, 8vo.—Ibid.

MALIPIERRA (Olympia), an Italian lady, was born of a noble Venetian family, and died about 1559. Her poems are in a collection, publiſhed at Naples by Bulifon.—Tiraboſchi.

MALLEMANS (Claude), a French prieſt and mathematician, was born at Beaune. He was a member of the congregation of the oratory, and was many years profeſſor of philoſophy at Paris. He died in 1723, aged 77. His principal works are; A New Philoſophical Syſtem of the World, 12mo.; the Famous Problem of the Quadrature of the Circle, 12mo. His brother John was a captain of the dragoons, and afterwards entered into orders. He died in 1740, aged 91. He tranſlated Virgil into French, and wrote Diſſertations on Difficult Paſſages of Scripture; a Hiſtory of Religion from the Beginning of the World to the Reign of Jovian, &c.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

MALLET, or MALLOCH (David), a Scotch writer, was born about 1700, and educated at Edinburgh. He was tutor to the ſons of the duke of Montroſe, with whom he travelled, and on his return ſettled in London, where he became an author by profeſſion. In 1740 he publiſhed a Life of Lord Bacon, which is a very inſignificant work, and totally unworthy of the ſubject. The ducheſs of Marlborough employed him to write the life of her huſband, on which it was obſerved, that as he had forgot Bacon was a philoſopher, ſo he would probably omit to notice Marlborough as a general. This life, however, never appeared. Frederick prince of Wales appointed him his under-ſecretary; and he aſſiſted Mr. Thompſon in compoſing the maſque of Alfred, which was performed before his royal highneſs at Cliefden-houſe. Lord Bolingbroke left him his philoſophical works, which he publiſhed after the author's death. Mallet died in 1765. His poetical performances are indifferent.—Gen. B.D.

MALLET (Edmund), a French divine, was born at Melun, in 1713. He became profeſſor of theology in the college of Navarre at Paris, where he died in 1755. He wrote ſome works on the principles of Poetry and Eloquence; Eſſay on the beſt Orators; Hiſtory of the Civil Wars of France, tranſlated from Davila; the articles in Divinity, and the Belles Lettres in the French Encyclopédie, were alſo by him.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

MALLET DU PAN (James), was born at Geneva in 1750. Voltaire became his patron, and obtained for him the profeſſorſhip of belles lettres at Caſſel. After diſcharging the duties of this ſituation with applauſe, he engaged in politics, and continued the Annals of Linguet. He alſo conducted the political part of the Mercure de France. When the revolution broke out he eſpouſed the royal cauſe, and defended it at the riſk of his life. Being driven from his country he came to London, where he publiſhed his Mercure Britannique, a Journal of great merit and moderation. He died at Richmond in 1800, and being in low circumſtances, a liberal ſubſcription was formed for his widow and children. Beſides the above, he wrote a Diſcourſe on the Influence of Philoſophy upon Letters, 8vo.; Diſcourſe on Eloquence and Political Syſtems, 12mo; Conſiderations upon the French Revolution, 8vo.; Correſpondence for a Hiſtory of French Republicaniſm.—Monthly Mag. Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

MALLINKROTT (Bernard), dean of the cathedral of Munſter, to which ſee he aſpired, but was diſappointed; and conſpiring againſt the biſhop, he was degraded from his dignity, and impriſoned in the caſtle of Ottelnzheim, where he died in 1664. He wrote 1. De Natura et uſu Literarum, 4to.: 2. De Ortu et Progreſſu artis Typographicæ, 4to.; and ſome other works.—Moreri.

MALOUIN (Paul James), profeſſor of medicine in the royal college of Paris, and phyſician to the queen, was born at Caen in 1701, and died at Paris of an apoplexy in 1777. His principal works are; a Treatiſe on Chemiſtry, 12mo.; another on Medical Chemiſtry. He was alſo the author of the articles on that ſubject in the Encyclopédie. There was another phyſician of the ſame name and family, who died in 1718. He wrote a Treatiſe on Solid and Fluid Bodies. —Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

MALPIGHI (Marcello), an Italian anatomiſt, was born in 1628, and educated at Bologna, where he applied to the ſtudy of phyſic, and took his doctor's degree. In 1656 he obtained a profeſſorſhip in that univerſity; but removed from thence to Piſa, on an invitation from the grand duke of Tuſcany. In 1659 he returned to Bologna; but in 1691 pope Innocent XII. ſent for him to Rome, where he died in 1694. His works were printed in folio at London in 1697, and at Amſterdam in 1698, 4to. He made ſome anatomical diſcoveries.—Halleri Bibl. Anat.

MALVASIA (Charles Cæſar), an Italian eccleſiaſtic, was a native of Bologna, of which cathedral he was a canon. He wrote in Italian a Hiſtory of the Painters of Bologna, 2 vols. 1678, alſo a work entitled, Marmora Fulſinea, 4to. 1660.—Tiraboſchi.

MALVEZZI (Virgilio, marquis of), was born at Bologna in 1599. In 1619 he took his degree of doctor of laws, after which he turned ſoldier, and was admitted into the council of war by Philip IV. of Spain. He died at Cologne in 1654. His diſcourſes upon Tacitus have been tranſlated into Engliſh. He was the author of ſeveral other works.—Tiraboſchi.

MAMBRUN (Peter), a French jeſuit, was born in the dioceſe of Clermont in 1581, and died in 1661. He is celebrated for his Latin Eclogues and Georgics, in which he has imitated Virgil —Moreri.

MAMMEA (Julia), was the daughter of Julius Avitus, and mother of the emperor Alexander Severus, to whom ſhe gave an excellent education. In his minority ſhe governed with great judgment, baniſhed flatterers, and filled the public ſtations with men of merit. She embraced the chriſtian religion, and patronized Origen; but ſhe is charged with being cruel and avaricious. In an inſurrection of the ſoldiers ſhe was murdered with her ſon at Mayence, in 235. —Crevier. Gibbon.

MAN (Cornelius de), a Dutch painter, was born at Delft in 1621. He ſtudied nine years in France and Italy, where he copied after the beſt maſters, and then returned to his own country. He died in 1706. He painted hiſtory, converſations, and portraits. —Pilkington.

MANASSEH, king of Judah, ſucceeded his father, Hezekiah, at the age of 12 years. The commencement of his reign was diſgraced by all manner of crimes and idolatrous abominations. In 677 B.C. Aſarhaddon king of Aſſyria invaded his dominions, and carried Manaſſeh captive to Babylon, where his misfortunes produced repentance. The king of Babylon gave him his liberty and reſtored him to his kingdom. On his return to Jeruſalem he eſtabliſhed the worſhip of the true God, and died in 643 B. C. There is a fine prayer by him in the Apocrypha.—Gray's Key O. T.

MANCINELLI (Antonio), an Italian writer, was born at Velletri in 1452, and died about 1506. He wrote ſome Italian and Latin poems, and notes on claſſic authors.—Tiraboſchi.

MANCO-CAPAC, founder and firſt inca of the empire of Peru. He civilized and reunited the different tribes of Peruvians, to whom he pretended that the ſun was his father. After his death they worſhipped him as a deity.—Univ. Hiſt.

MANDEVILLE (ſir John), an Engliſh traveller, was born at St. Alban's about the beginning of the 14th century. He ſpent thirty-four years in viſiting various countries. And on his return publiſhed a Relation of his Voyages, which abound in much curious matter, but blended with the moſt extravagant fictions. The firſt edition is dated Liege in 1455, with this title, Itinerariis à terra Angliæ ad Partes Jeroſolymitanis, 4to. The author died at Liege in 1372. Great. Hiſt. Dict.

MANDEVILLE (Bernard), a Dutch phyſician, was born at Dort about 1670. He ſettled in London at the beginning of the 18th century, and publiſhed in 1709 a licentious book entitled, The Virgin Unmaſked. In 1711 appeared his treatiſe on Hypochondriac and Hyſteric Paſſions, 8vo. But the work by which he is moſt known, is his Fable of the Bees; or, Private Vices Public Benefits, 2 vols. 8vo. This book was attacked by ſeveral writers on account of its pernicious principles, equally offenſive to religion and government. He died in 1733. —Gen. Biog. Dict.

MANES, an hereſiarch of the third century. He was a native of Perſia, and taught that there were two principles of all things, co-eternal and co-equal, that all good proceeded from the former, and all evil from the latter; that the good being was the author of the New Teſtament, and the bad of the Old; the one the creator of the body, and the other of the ſoul. His followers became numerous, and were denominated Manichees. Manes was flayed alive by order of Sapor king of Perſia, for failing to cure his ſon.—Bayle. Moſheim.

MANETHO, an Egyptian hiſtorian, who flouriſhed in the time of Ptolomy Philadelphus, about 304 B.C. He was high prieſt of Heliopolis, and compoſed in Greek a Hiſtory of Egypt, which is loſt, but ſome extracts remain, as alſo does a poem of his on the influence of the ſtars, publiſhed by Gronovius at Leyden in 1698.—Voſſius de Hiſt. Græc.

MANETTI (Gianozzo), a celebrated Italian, who was the ſcholar of Chryſoloras, and one of thoſe who in the 15th century contributed to the revival of letters. He was a native of Florence, in which univerſity he explained the philoſophy of Ariſtotle. He was alſo employed on affairs of government, in which he ſhewed conſiderable ſkill and prudence: but being purſued by envy he retired to Rome, where pope Nicholas V. made him his ſecretary. He afterwards became the confidential miniſter of Alphonſus, king of Naples; he died in 1459, aged 63. He tranſlated the New Teſtament into Latin; and wrote pieces on the works of Ariſtotle; a Treatiſe againſt the Jews; the Lives of Dante, Petrarch, Boccacio, and pope Nicholas V., and a Latin Treatiſe on the Dignity of Man.—Tiraboſchi.

MANETTI (Rutilio), an hiſtorical painter, was born at Sienna in 1571. His works were highly eſteemed at Florence and Piſa. He died in 1639.—Pilkington.

MANETTI (Xavier), profeſſor of medicine and botany at Florence, where he died in 1785. He was keeper of the Imperial Garden, and wrote Catalogues horti academiæ Florentinæ, and Viridarium Florentinum, 8vo.; Ornithologiæ, tomus quintus et ultimus, 1775, folio.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

MANFREDI (Euſtachio), an eminent mathematician, was born at Bologna in 1674, and became profeſſor of mathematics in the univerſity of that city. He was member of ſeveral foreign academies, and died in 1739. He publiſhed Ephemerides, in 4 vols. 4to.; De Tranſitu Mercurii per Solem, anno. 1723; De Annuis inerrantium Stellarum aberrationibus, 4to. He was alſo an ingenious poet, and his ſonnets and canzonets were publiſhed in 1713.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

MANFREDI (Bartolomeo), an eminent painter, was born at Mantua in 1574. He was the diſciple of Caravaggio, whoſe manner he imitated. His ſubjects were ſoldiers, or peaſants, gaming ſcenes, and fortune-tellers.—D'Argenville.

MANGEART (Thomas), a learned benedictine, who was antiquary, librarian, and counſellor, to the duke of Lorraine. He died in 1763. His great work is, an Introduction to the Science of Medals, folio.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

MANGENOT (Louis), a French eccleſiaſtic and poet, was born at Paris in 1694, and died in 1768. He wrote Eclogues, Fables, Tales, and Madrigals, publiſhed at Amſterdam, in 1776.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

MANGET (John James), an eminent phyſician, was born at Geneva in 1652. He was firſt phyſician to the elector of Brandenburg, and died at Geneva in 1742. He publiſhed, Bibliotheca Anatomica; Bibliotheca Pharmaceutico Medica; Bibliotheca Chemica; Bibliotheca Chirurgica; Bibliotheca Scriptorum Medicorum, all in 13 vols. folio.—Haller's Bibl. Anat.

MANGEY (Thomas), a learned Engliſh divine, was bred at St. John's college, Cambridge, where he took his degree of D. D. He became prebendary of Durham, and publiſhed an edition of Philo Judæus, 2 vols. folio; an Anſwer to Toland's Nazarenus, 8vo.; a volume of Sermons on the Lord's Prayer. He died in 1755.—Anecd. of Bowyer.

MANILIUS (Marcus), a Latin poet in the time of Tiberius. His Aſtronomicon was diſcovered by Poggius in the 16th century. The beſt editions are that of Bentley, 4to. London, 1739, and that of Stoebur, Straſburg, 1787, 8vo.—Voſſius de Poet. Lat.

MANLEY (Mary), an Engliſh writer, was born in the iſland of Guernſey. She was deceived into a falſe marriage by a relation of the ſame name, but who, it afterwards appeared was already married. She wrote a tragedy called the Royal Miſchief, which was performed with ſucceſs at the theatre in Lincoln's inn-fields. After this ſhe publiſhed Memoirs of the New Atalantis, a ſatirical and indecent romance, in which ſhe expoſed the firſt characters in the kingdom. She was taken up for this publication, and examined by the privy-council; but the proſecution was dropped. She was alſo the author of Lucius, the firſt Chriſtian King of Britain, a tragedy; a volume of Letters; and other works. She became the miſtreſs of Mr. Barber, alderman of London, and died in 1724.—Biog. Dram.

MANLIUS TORQUATUS, a famous Roman, who diſplayed great courage in his youth as military tribune. In a war againſt the Gauls he accepted a challenge given by one of the enemy, and having ſlain him took his collar from his neck, on which account he aſſumed the name of Torquatus. He was the firſt Roman advanced to the dictatorſhip without being previouſly a conſul. But he tarniſhed his glory by putting his ſon to death for defeating the enemy without having received orders to attack them. This gave great diſguſt to the Romans, and on account of his ſeverity in his government, all edicts of extreme rigour were called Manliana Edicta. He flouriſhed B.C. 340.—Univ. Hiſt.

MANLIUS CAPITOLINUS (Marcus), a celebrated Roman conſul and commander, who when Rome was taken by the Gauls retired into the capitol and preſerved it from a ſudden attack made upon it in the night. The dogs which were kept in the capitol made no noiſe, but the geeſe by their cry awoke Manlius, who had juſt time to repel the enemy. Geeſe from that period were always held ſacred among the Romans, and Manlius was honoured with the ſurname of Capitolinus. He afterwards endeavoured to obtain the ſovereignty of Rome, for which he was thrown from the Tarpeian rock 384, B.C.—Univ. Hiſt.

MANNORY (Louis), an advocate in the parliament of Paris, where he died in 1778, aged 82. His Memoirs and Pleadings in 18 vols. 12mo. are full of curious and ſingular caſes. Having been engaged in a cauſe againſt Voltaire, he became the object of the poet's ſatire.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

MANNOZZI (John), an Italian painter, was born near Florence. He ornamented the palace of Lorenzo de Medici with ſeveral admirable pictures in freſco, and died in 1636, aged 46.—D'Argenville.

MANSARD (Francis), a French architect, was born in 1598, and died in 1666. He built ſeveral edifices at Paris and other places, was appointed firſt architect to the king, and ſuperintendant of the royal buildings, in which offices he was ſucceeded by his nephew of the ſame name, who was honoured with the order of St. Michael. He died in 1708, aged 69.—D'Argenville Vies des Architects.

MANSFELD (Peter Erneſt count de), a German ſtateſman and commander. He was made priſoner in 1552 at Ivoy, which place he governed. He afterwards became governor of Luxemburg, where he maintained tranquillity, while the reſt of the Low Countries was in a ſtate of civil war. He had afterwards the entire command of Brabant. He died in 1604, aged 87.—Moreri.

MANSFELD (Erneſt de), natural ſon of the above, by a lady of Mechlin. He ſerved with ſuch reputation in the army, that the emperor Rodolph II. declared him ligitimate. But being diſappointed of his father's places and poſſeſſions, he joined the proteſtant party, and ravaged ſeveral of the provinces belonging to the houſe of Auſtria. He died in 1626.—Ibid.

MANSFIELD. See Murray.

MANSTEIN (Chriſtopher Herman de), a Ruſſian general and writer, was born at Peterſburg in 1711. He entered into the Pruſſian ſervice, and was ſhot in a battle in 1758. His Hiſtorical Memoirs of Ruſſia, in 2 vols. 4to, are curious and faithful. They were publiſhed in Engliſh by Mr. Hume, 2 vols. 4to. The French edition appeared at Leipſic in 1781.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

MANTEGNA (Andrew), an Italian painter, was born in 1451, near Mantua. He was at firſt a ſhepherd; but his genius being diſcovered, he was placed with a painter, and at the age of fourteen he painted an alterpiece for the church of St. Sophia at Padua. He alſo painted the triumph of Julius Cæſar, which picture is at Hampton-court. He died in 1517.—D'Argenville Vies des Peintres.

MANTICA (Francis), a learned writer, was born at Udina in 1534. He profeſſed law with great reputation at Padua, from whence pope Sixtus V. called him to Rome, and Clement VIII. made him a cardinal. He died in 1614. His works are, De conjecturis ultimarum voluntatum, 6vo.; Lucubrationes Vaticinæ; Deciſiones Rotæ Romanæ.—Tiraboſchi.

MANTINUS (James), a learned Spaniſh phyſician, who practiſed with great repute at Venice in the 16th century. He tranſlated ſome of the works of Averroes and Avicenna into Latin; and wrote a book on the Republic of Plato.—Moreri.

MANTON (Thomas), an Engliſh nonconformiſt divine, was born at Lawrence Lydiard, in Somerſetſhire, and received his academical education at Wadham college, Oxford. He was epiſcopally ordained and entered upon the miniſtry at Colyton in Devonſhire. Afterwards he ſettled at Stoke Newington, and frequently preached before the parliament. He was appointed chaplain to Charles II. at the reſtoration; but was deprived in 1662 for non-conformity. In 1671 he was impriſoned for preaching in a conventicle, but was ſoon releaſed. Dr. Manton died in 1677, aged 57, and was buried in the church of Stoke Newington. His works, in five vols. folio, conſiſt chiefly of Sermons in a high Calvaniſtic ſtrain.—Calamy.

MANTUAN (Baptiſt), a celebrated Italian poet, was born at Mantua in 1448, and was the natural ſon of Peter Spagnolo, a perſon of great conſequence. He entered among the Carmelites, of which order he became general, but afterwards quitted that dignity. He died in 1516. His works were publiſhed at Paris in 1513, in 3 vols. folio; but the beſt edition is that of Antwerp in 1576, in 4 vols. 8vo.—Tiraboſchi.

MANUEL (Comnenus), emperor of the Eaſt, was the ſon of John Comnenus, and born in 1120. He was crowned in 1143 to the prejudice of Iſaac his eldeſt brother, whom his father had diſinherited. Roger king of Sicily invaded the empire in his reign, but Manuel expelled him, and then turned his arms againſt Dalmatia and Hungary, with various ſucceſs. He alſo marched into Egypt, which country he would have conquered, had he not been betrayed by Amaury, king of Jeruſalem, his ally. He died in 1180.—Univ. Hiſt.

MANUEL (Palæologus), emperor of Conſtantinople, was the ſon and ſucceſſor of John IV. The Turks having invaded his dominions, he applied to the Latins for ſuccour, but without effect, on which he reſigned his ſceptre to John VII. his ſon, and took a religious habit. He died in 1425, aged 75.—Ibid.

MANUTIUS, the name of three celebrated printers of Venice; ALDUS, the father, and his two ſons, Paul and Aldus. The firſt died in 1516. His editions of the Claſſics are held in great eſtimation. He introduced the form ſtill called Italic printing. Paul had for ſome time the care of the Vatican library at Rome, and acquired, by reading Cicero often, an elegant Latin ſtyle.

He wrote Commentaries upon that author, in 4 vols. folio. He publiſhed ſeveral other works, the beſt of which is his treatiſe De Legibus Romanorum. He died in 1574. Aldus Manutius, the younger, was alſo a learned printer, and had the care of the Vatican preſs, notwithſtanding which he died poor in 1597. He wrote a Treatiſe on Orthography; Commentaries on Cicero; three books of Epiſtles; the Lives of Coſmo de Medicis, and Caſtruccio Caſtricani.—Tiraboſchi.

MANZUOLI (Tomaſo), an Italian painter, was born in 1531. He painted hiſtorical ſubjects and portraits, with beautiful landſcapes. He died in 1570.—Pilkington.

MANZO (John Baptiſt), marquis de Villa, an Italian ſoldier and writer. He ſerved in the Spaniſh army with reputation, and afterwards retired to his native city of Naples, where he was one of the principal founders of the academy degli Oziosi. He died in 1645, aged 84. He wrote, 1. Dell amore Dialoghi, 8vo.; 2. Rime, 12mo.; 3. Vita dell Taſſo, 12mo.—Tiraboſchi.

MAPES (Walter), an old Engliſh poet, who was chaplain to Henry II. He wrote in Latin, and ſome of his verſes, which are light and ſatirical, are ſtill extant.—Pits.

MAPLETOFT (John), a learned Engliſh divine, was born in Huntingdonſhire in 1631, and educated at Weſtminſter ſchool; after which he went to Trinity college, Cambridge, of which he was choſen fellow. He ſtudied phyſic, and having taken his doctor's degree in that faculty, he commenced practice in London, where he lived on terms of intimacy with Willis, Sydenham, Locke, and other eminent men. In 1675 he was choſen profeſſor of phyſic at Greſham college; but, in 1682, he entered into orders, and obtained the rectory of Braybrooke, in Northamptonſhire. In 1685 he was appointed vicar of St. Lawrence Jewry, London. He died in 1721. Dr. Mapletoft publiſhed a Latin tranſlation of Sydenham's Medical Obſervations; and a uſeful book, entitled, the Principles and Duties of the Chriſtian Religion, 8vo.—Gen. Hiſt. Dict.

MARACCI (John), an hiſtorical painter, was born at Lucca in 1637. His invention was good, his figures elegantly diſpoſed, and his colouring agreeable. He died in 1701.—Pilkington.

MARACCI (Louis), a learned eccleſiaſtic, was born at Lucca in 1612. He acquired a great reputation by his edition of the Koran, printed at Padua, in Arabic and Latin, 1698, 2 vols. folio. He alſo aſſiſted in publiſhing the Arabic Bible, 3 vols. folio, at Rome. He died in 1760.—Moreri.

MARALDI (James Philip), a celebrated mathematician, was born in the county of Nice in 1665. He was employed under Caſſini, in conſtructing the great meridian through France, and died in 1729, leaving behind him a valuable catalogue of the fixed ſtars.—Martin's Biog. Phil.

MARANA (John Paul), the author of the Turkiſh Spy, a work once in great repute, and which produced a number of imitations, was born at Genoa in 1642. He reſided many years at Paris; but, in 1683, retired to his own country, where he died in 1693. —Moreri.

MARAT (John Paul), an incendiary, was born in 1744 in Switzerland. He went to Paris, where he ſtudied phyſic, and ſet up as an empyric, ſelling his noſtrums at an extravagant price. On the breaking out of the revolution, he became a leader among the moſt violent of the revolutionary factions. In his firſt journal, the Publiciſte Pariſien, he attacked Necker, and other eminent men. This was followed by his Friend of the People, in which he recommended revolt, pillage, and murder. Marat excited the troops againſt their generals, the poor to plunder the rich, and the people at large againſt the king. Named deputy of the department of Paris in the convention, he appeared there armed with piſtols. The moſt atrocious murders were committed by his means, and he appeared to delight in nothing but the effuſion of blood, when he was aſſaſſinated in the midſt of his career, as he came from the bath, by Charlotte Corday, July 14, 1793. Marat publiſhed a work on man, or Principles of the reciprocal Influence of the Soul and Body, two volumes, 12mo.; and tracts on Electricity and Light, in which he attacked the Newtonian ſyſtem. —Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

MARATTE (Carlo), an excellent Italian painter, was born at Camerino, in the march of Ancona, in 1625. He became the pupil of Andrea Sacchi, and chiefly applied himſelf to painting female ſaints. Pope Clement XI. gave him a penſion, and conferred on him the order of knighthood. He was alſo painter in ordinary to Louis XIV. He died in 1713.—D'Argenville.

MARBACH (John), a German proteſtant divine, was born at Lindau in 1521, and died at Straſburg in 1581. He was the author of a ſingular book publiſhed in 1578 with this title, "Fides Jeſu et Jeſuitarum; hoc eſt Collatio Doctrinæ Domini noſtris Jeſu Chriſti cum Doctrina Jeſuitarum."—Moreri.

MARBODUS, or MARBODÆUS, biſhop of Rennes in 1096. He wrote De Gemmis, and ſacred poems; alſo the Life of Magnoboldus, biſhop of Angers He died in 1123, having reſigned his biſhopric ſome time before.—Ibid.

MARCA (Peter de), a French divine, was born in 1594, in the province of Bearn, and educated among the Jeſuits. He was for ſome time counſellor of ſtate, but having defended the liberties of the Gallican church, he was made biſhop of Conſerans; after which he publiſhed a book to prove that St. Peter was the only head of the church, to ingratiate himſelf with the court of Rome. In 1652 he was nominated to the archbiſhopric of Toulouſe, and the year following diſtinguiſhed himſelf in an aſſembly of the French clergy againſt the janſeniſts. He was afterwards made archbiſhop of Paris, but died in 1662, on the day the bulls for his promotion arrived. He wrote the Hiſtory of Bearn, folio; Marca Hiſpanica, folio; and other works.—Moreri.

Marcel (N.), a painter, was born at Frankfort in 1628. He painted vaſes, filled with different kinds of fruits and flowers, and alſo curious ſhells. He died in 1683.—Pilkington.

Marcel (William), a French advocate and commiſſary at Arles, where he died in 1708, aged 61. He wrote a Hiſtory of the Origin and Progreſs of the French Monarchy, four volumes, 12mo.; Chronological Tables of Profane and Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory. —Moreri.

Marcelli (Benedict), an eminent compoſer, and denominated in Italy the Prince of Muſic, was born at Venice in 1686, of a noble family. What is very remarkable of this extraordinary man is his having been as eminent a poet and philoſopher as a muſician. His compoſitions in muſic are numerous; and his beſt poetical performance is the comedy Toſcaniſmo, o la Cruſca, o ſia il Cruſcante impazzito. His principal proſe work is his Teatro alla moda (the Faſhionable Stage), intended as a ludicrous criticiſm on modern operas. He died in 1739. Tiraboſchi.

Marcellinus, a pope and ſaint, ſucceeded Caius in 296. He ſignaliſed himſelf by his courage in a ſevere perſecution. The Donatiſts charged him with having ſacrificed to idols; from which he was vindicated by Auguſtine. He died in 304.—Dupin.

Marcellus, ſurnamed Sidetes, from Side, a town in Pamphylia, where he was born. He flouriſhed under Adrian and the Antonines, and was by profeſſion a phyſician. He wrote a Poem on Medicine, of which only a few fragments remain. There was another phyſician of this name, who flouriſhed at Bourdeaux about 381, and wrote poems on medical ſubjects.—Moreri.

Marcellus I. pope, ſucceeded Marcellinus in 308. The emperor Maxentius baniſhed him from Rome for excommunicating an apoſtate. He died in 310.—Dupin. Platina.

Marcellus II. was a native of Montepulciano, and became ſecretary to Paul III. who made him a cardinal, and one of the preſidents at the council of Trent. He ſucceeded Julius III. in 1555, but died a few weeks after his election.—Ibid.

March (Auſias), a Spaniſh poet in the 15th century. He wrote amatory poems, but he and Petrarch are accuſed of having ſtolen from each other; however, it is ſuppoſed that they both copied ſome earlier poet.—Moreri.

Marchand (Proſper), a French writer, who quitted France on account of his religion, and ſettled in Holland, where he conducted a Literary Journal. He died in 1756. He was alſo the author of a Hiſtory of Printing, an Hiſtorical Dictionary, and other works.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

Marche (Oliver de la), a French author of the 15th century, was gentleman to Philip the Good, duke of Burgundy. He afterwards ſerved under Charles the Raſh, who fell at the battle of Nancy in 1477. He was next employed by Maximilian of Auſtria. He died in 1501. His works are, 1. Memoirs or Chronicles, Bruſſels, 1616, quarto; 2. A Treatiſe on Duels, octavo; 3. Triomphe des Dames d'Honneur, 1528, octavo.—Ibid.

Marchetti (Alexander), a phyſician of Piſa, was born in 1633. He ſucceeded his friend Borelli as profeſſor of mathematics at Piſa, and died in 1714. He wrote, 1. Poems, quarto; 2. Several Philoſophical Treatiſes; 3. A tranſlation of Lucretius into Italian, quarto; 4. A tranſlation of Anacreon.—Life prefixed to his poems.

Marcianus, a Thracian of obſcure family, who obtained the imperial throne on the death of Theodoſius II. A.D. 450. He made great preparations againſt the barbarians who had invaded Africa, and conducted himſelf in ſuch a manner as to give promiſing hopes of a glorious reign. But in the midſt of his popularity he died in 457, aged 69.—Univ. Hiſt.

Marcilius (Theodore), a learned German, was born at Arnheim in 1548, and educated at Deventer and Louvain. He afterwards became profeſſor of belles-lettres at Toulouſe, and laſtly royal profeſſor of the Latin tongue at Paris, where he died in 1617. He publiſhed Pythagoras's Golden Verſes, with a Latin verſion and commentaries, and alſo ſome works of his own, as Hiſtoria Strenarum, &c —Moreri.

Marcion, a heretic of the ſecond century, was a native of Sinope on the Euxine, where his father was biſhop, who excommunicated him for incontinence. He then withdrew to Rome; but not being received to communion, he eſpouſed the notions of Cerdo, to which he added the doctrine of Manes, and ſome peculiarities of his own. The year of his death is unknown.—Dupin.

Mardonius, the ſon-in-law of Darius, and the general of Xerxes, who entruſted him with the conduct of the war in Greece, where he took Athens, but was ſlain at the battle of Platæa, B. C. 479.—Stanyan.

Mare (William de la), or Mara, a modern Latin poet, was born of a noble family in Normandy. He became rector of the univerſity of Caen, and canon of the church of Coutances. He died about 1520. His poems are, Chimæra, printed at Paris in 1514, quarto; De tribus fugiendus venere, Ventre et Pluma, 1512, quarto.—Moreri.

MARE (Philibert de la), counſellor in the parliament of Dijon, and an elegant Latin writer, died in 1687, after publiſhing ſeveral works, the chief of which are the Hiſtoricorum Burgundiæ conſpectus, quarto; and Commentarius de Bello Burgundiæ conſpectans, quarto.—Ibid.

MARE (Nicolas de la), chief magiſtrate of the Châtelet under Louis XIV. with whom he was in favour. He died in 1723, aged 82. He wrote an elaborate Treatiſe on the Police, in 3 volumes, folio, to which a fourth volume was added after his death.—Ibid.

MARECHAL (George), an eminent French ſurgeon, was born at Calais in 1658. He was diſtinguiſhed by his ſkill in cutting for the ſtone, and in 1696 attended Louis XIV. who had an abſceſs in his neck. He became principal ſurgeon to that monarch, who appointed him maître d'hôtel, and gave him a patent of nobility. He died in 1736. He preſented the academy of ſurgery at Paris ſeveral papers, but publiſhed no ſeparate work. There was a miſerable writer of this name, who figured in the revolution by ſeveral indecent and irreligious books, and one entitled, the Voyage of Pythagoras, in imitation of the Travels of Anacharſis.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

MARETS (Rolland des), a French advocate, was born at Paris in 1594, and died in 1653. He wrote Latin letters of conſiderable merit. They were publiſhed with this title, Rollandi Mareſii Epiſtolarum Philologicarum, lib. ii.—Bayle.

MARETS (John des), brother of the above, was born at Paris in 1595, and died in 1676. He led a diſſolute life in his youth, but in his advanced years he became a fanatic, and predicted that Louis XIV. was ordained by Providence to overturn the Turkiſh empire, and to unite all Chriſtians to the Papal ſee. He wrote ſome poems and plays, a paraphraſe of the pſalms of David; romances; and religious pieces.—Ibid.

MARETS (Samuel des), a French proteſtant divine, was born in Picardy in 1599. He ſtudied at Saumur and Geneva, and after officiating as miniſter in different places, became profeſſor of divinity at Groningen, where he died in 1673. He wrote ſeveral books againſt the Roman Catholics and Socinians, and alſo againſt Grotius. His Collegium Theologicum, quarto, is moſt eſteemed. He left two ſons, Henry and Daniel: the former publiſhed an edition of the Bible in French, with notes, 3 volumes, folio; and a Latin Catechiſm on Grace.—Ibid.

MARGARET, daughter of Waldemar III. king of Denmark, and wife of Haquin king of Norway, was placed on the throne of both kingdoms, on the death of her ſon Olaus in 1387. The Swedes, diſſatisfied with their king Albert, offered their crown to Margaret, who accepted it, and defeated Albert in 1394. Three years afterwards the ſtates of Denmark, Sweden, and Norway, paſſed a law known by the name of the Union of Calmar, by which the three kingdoms were united, and the monarchy limited. Margaret, however, violated the conditions of the union, and was called the Semiramis of the North. She died in 1412, aged 59.—Univ. Hiſt.

MARGARET, daughter of René of Anjou, king of Sicily, and wife of Henry VI. king of England. The duke of Glouceſter having oppoſed this marriage, ſhe effected his ruin and he was ſtrangled in priſon. In the civil wars between the houſes of York and Lancaſter ſhe diſplayed the character of a heroine. Her huſband being taken priſoner in 1455 by the duke of York, ſhe levied forces, defeated the duke, ſet Henry at liberty, and entered London in triumph. But in 1460 her army was defeated at Northampton by the Earl of Warwick, and Henry again became a priſoner, but the queen eſcaped, and gathered another army, with which ſhe marched againſt the duke of York, who fell in the battle of Wakefield. She next defeated Warwick at St. Alban's, but was routed after a bloody conteſt at Tawton, on which ſhe fled to France to implore ſuccour from Louis XI. who refuſed her any aſſiſtance. This intrepid woman then returned to England, where ſhe was joined by ſeveral of her party, but was defeated at Hexham. In 1471 ſhe was taken priſoner, and in 1475 ſhe purchaſed her liberty by a large ranſom. She then returned to France, where ſhe died in 1482, aged 59.—Rapin. Moreri.

MARGARET, counteſs of Richmond and Derby, was born at Bletſoe in Bedfordſhire, in 1441. She married Edmund Earl of Richmond, by whom ſhe had a ſon, who became king of England by the title of Henry VII. After being a widow ſome time, ſhe married ſir Henry Stafford, on whoſe death ſhe united herſelf to Thomas lord Stanley, created earl of Derby in 1485. He died in 1504. The counteſs was a liberal patron of learning, and founded two colleges at Cambridge, Chriſt's and St John's. She alſo inſtituted in that univerſity a theological profeſſorſhip, and endowed a ſchool at Torrington in Devonſhire. She tranſlated from the French a work entitled, the Mirroure of Golde for the Sinful Soule; alſo the fourth book of Gerſon's or Kempis's treatiſe of the imitation and following the bleſſed Life of our Saviour Chriſt, printed in 1504. She died in 1509.—Biog. Brit. Fun. Serm. by Bp. Fiſher.

MARGARET of Valois, queen of Naples, and ſiſter to Francis I. king of France, was the daughter of Charles of Orleans, duke of Angoulême, and born in 1492. In 1509 ſhe married Charles duke of Alençon, who died in 1525. Her next huſband was Henry d'Albert, king of Navarre, by whom ſhe had Joan d'Albert, mother of Henry IV. Margaret aſſiſted her huſband in improving his dominions, and ſhe greatly encouraged the proteſtants. She wrote a tract, entitled, "The Mirrour of the Sinful Soul," which was condemned as heretical by the Sorbonne. This excellent woman died in 1549 of a catarrh caught while ſhe was obſerving a comet Beſides the above work, ſhe wrote poetical pieces, printed in 1540, under the title of Marguerites de la Marguerite des Princeſſes très-illuſtre Reine de Navarre, quarto. She alſo wrote, in the manner of Boccace, a heptameron of novels, printed in 1560.—Bayle.

MARGARITONE, an Italian painter, was born at Arezzo in 1198. He invented the art of gilding with leaf-gold upon Armenian bole, and painted hiſtorical ſubjects in freſco and diſtemper. He died in 1275, aged 77.—Pilkington.

MARGON (William de), a French eccleſiaſtic, was a native of Languedoc. He wrote againſt the janſeniſts, and ſatirized ſeveral perſons of diſtinction with ſo much acrimony, that he was baniſhed and afterwards impriſoned. He obtained his liberty in 1746, on condition of retiring to a monaſtery of Bernardins, where he died in 1760. His principal works are, Memoirs of Marſhal Villars, 3 volumes, 12mo.; Memoirs of the duke of Berwick, 2 volumes, 12mo.; Memoirs of Tourville, 3 volumes, 12mo.; Letters of Fitz Morris.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

MARGRAAF (Andrew Sigiſmund), an eminent chemiſt and director of the academy of Berlin, was born in that city in 1709. He ſtudied under Newman, Juncker, and Henckel. He applied aſſiduouſly to mineralogy, which ſcience he enriched by the diſcovery of a demi metal called manganeſe. He alſo made numerous experiments on precious ſtones and platina, and introduced into chemical operations a ſimple and intelligible ſyſtem. He died in 1782.—Memoirs of the Academy of Sciences at Paris.

MARGUNIO (Maſſineo), the ſon of a marſhal of Candia, went to Venice with his father in 1547. He there eſtabliſhed a printing office, and publiſhed ſeveral Greek works. His houſe having been burnt by an incendiary, he returned to his own country, and became biſhop of Cerigo. He died in 1602, aged 80. We have by him in Greek, Anacreontic odes, printed at Augſburg in 1592, 8vo. Some of his poems are in the Corpus Poetarum Græcarum, Geneva, 2 vols. fol. 1606.—Moreri.

MARIA THERESA, empreſs, queen of Hungary and Bohemia, was the daughter of the emperor Charles VI. and of Elizabeth Chriſtina of Brunſwick Wolfenbuttle. Her father having loſt his only ſon, the archduke Leopold, conſtituted Maria Thereſa the heireſs of his eſtates. In 1713 was formed the famous pragmatic ſanction, by which, in default of male iſſue, the ſucceſſion paſſed to the eldeſt of his daughters. Maria Thereſa married, in 1736, Francis Stephen of Lorraine, afterwards emperor by the name of Francis I. In 1740 her father died, which event plunged Europe into war. The king of Pruſſia laid hold of the advantage offered him of invading Sileſia, to which conqueſt he added Moravia. Charles Albert aſpired to the crowns of Bohemia and the empire, and was ſupported by France in violation of the pragmatic ſanction. He was crowned emperor at Frankfort in 1742. In the mean while Maria Thereſa threw herſelf upon her Hungarian ſubjects; to whom, with her child in her arms, ſhe made this pathetic addreſs: "Abandoned by my friends, perſecuted by my enemies, attacked by my neareſt relations, I have no other reſource than in your fidelity, in your courage, and my conſtancy; I commit to your hands the child of your kings." At this ſpectacle the Hungarians, a warlike people, drew their ſabres and exclaimed, as with one voice, "We will die for our queen, Maria Thereſa." A powerful army was formed, with Kevenhuller at their head, who recovered ſeveral important places. Maria formed a treaty with England, which ſupplied her with money and troops, and what was of greater conſequence, detached Pruſſia from the league, on condition of his retaining Sileſia and Gratz. Maria Thereſa was crowned queen of Bohemia at Prague, May 11, 1743. On the 11th of June the king of England and his ſon the Duke of Cumberland, in perſon, gained a great victory at Dettingen. The king of Sardinia now declared himſelf for the queen of Hungary; who, in 1745, had placed the imperial crown on the head of her huſband at Frankfort. After eight years of war a peace was concluded at Aix-la-Chapelle, by which Maria Thereſa was ſecured in her rights. She employed the interval of peace in organizing her armies, repairing or conſtructing fortifications, regulating and encouraging commerce, founding military ſchools, and in erecting colleges of learning. She alſo cauſed obſervatories to be built at Vienna, Gratz, and Tyrnau, which ſhe ſupplied with the beſt inſtruments. The wounded and infirm ſoldiers were provided for in hoſpitals, and the widows and children of officers were liberally provided for. In 1756 this calm was diſturbed by the king of Pruſſia, who marched into Saxony and Bohemia. Marſhal Brown oppoſed him under the walls of Prague, but being wounded he was obliged to retire into that city, which was immediately bombarded. Count Daun, however, forced the Pruſſians to raiſe the ſiege, by gaining the victory of Chotzemitz. On this occaſion Maria Thereſa inſtituted the military order called by her name. After a variety of engagements, by the peace of 1763, Auſtria was placed in the ſtate in which ſhe was before the war. The year following Joſeph, ſon of Maria Thereſa, was elected king of the Romans. In 1765 ſhe loſt her huſband. In 1772 ſhe joined the king of Pruſſia, and the empreſs Catherine, in the diſmemberment of Poland. By the death of Maximilian Joſeph, elector of Bavaria, in 1777, war was re-kindled between Auſtria and Pruſſia, but was terminated in 1779, by the peace of Teſchen, which added to the former ſtate a ſmall portion of Bavaria. Maria Thereſa died, after a long and a glorious reign, at Vienna in 1780, aged 63. She left at her death all her children on thrones, or nearly ſo. Antoinette was queen of France; Charlotte queen of Naples; Maria Amelia allied to the duke of Parma; Joſeph II. ſucceeded to the hereditary eſtates of Auſtria; Leopold poſſeſſed the crown of the Medicis; Ferdinand was governor of Lombardy; Maximilian grand maſter of the Teutonic order, and coadjutor of the electorate of Cologne; and Maria Thereſa, wife of the duke of Saxe-Teſchen, governed the Low Countries. Such was the ſtate of the houſe of Auſtria when Maria Thereſa deſcended to the grave, after meriting the name of mother of her country.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

Maria Antoinette, queen of France and archduchеſs of Auſtria, was the daughter of the emperor Francis I. and of Maria Thereſa. She was born at Vienna in 1755, and married to the dauphin of France, afterwards Louis XVI., in 1770. At the celebration of the ceremony on the 16th of May, two tremendous thunder-ſtorms happened; and at the fête given by the city of Paris on the 30th of the ſame month, above 1200 perſons periſhed by the falling of a building erected for the letting off fire-works; and a great number of ſpectators who were on the pont-royal fell into the Seine and were drowned. The dauphineſs, on that melancholy occaſion, ſent all the money ſhe poſſeſſed to the lieutenant of police for the relief of the diſtreſſed. A number of other benevolent actions of this amiable and injured princeſs are alſo recorded, and ſome have been made the ſubject of beautiful pictures. At the death of a monarch in France it was the cuſtom for the people to pay a tax to the new queen, this ſhe cauſed to be diſpenſed with, when by the demiſe of Louis XV. ſhe aſcended the throne. In the great froſt of 1788 ſhe diſplayed the tendereſt ſenſibility for the calamities of the people, and diſtributed all the money ſhe could raiſe to ſupply their wants. Notwithſtanding this the baſeſt calumnies and moſt atrocious libels were circulated againſt her character. In the revolution which commenced the following year the public fury was directed againſt her, but ſhe ſupported herſelf amidſt the vileſt indignities and brutal ſcenes with unſhaken fortitude. On the famous 6th of October, when the cannibals led the royal family in triumph from Verſailles to Paris, and uttered dreadful exclamations againſt the queen, ſhe preſented herſelf before them alone, when her intrepid air diſarmed the wretches, and turned their menaces into applauſe. On that memorable journey the mob carried before the carriage the heads of two of the king's guard on pikes. The courage of the queen, after being arreſted at Varennes and conducted back to the Thuilleries, was calm and heroic. In the Temple her behaviour was ſtill greater. When apprized of the condemnation of her huſband ſhe felicitated him on the termination of his ſufferings, and upon his near approach to an immortal crown. July 4, 1793, ſhe was ſeparated from her ſon, which excited in her the moſt affecting ſenſations. The 5th of Auguſt ſhe was conducted in the night to the Conciergerie, where ſhe was confined in a dark and damp dungeon. In October ſhe was brought to trial on the charge of having embezzled the public property, correſponded with foreign enemies, and tranſmitted large ſums to the emperor. Accuſations of crimes the moſt unnatural were alſo produced; to which ſhe oppoſed a ſpirit and reſolution of conſcious innocence. Though nothing was proved, ſentence of condemnation was paſſed againſt her, which ſhe heard with triumph. On the 16th of that month ſhe was conducted in a cart to the ſcaffold, where after elevating her eyes to Heaven, ſhe ſuffered the fatal ſtroke, aged 38 years and ſome months. Her body was thrown into a grave and conſumed by quick lime. Her misfortunes had made great ravages in her beautiful countenance, and altered the colour of her hair. Maria Antoinette poſſeſſed an accompliſhed mind. She ſpoke the French language with purity, and the Italian as her own tongue. She alſo underſtood Latin, and had a perfect knowledge of geography and hiſtory. She had four children, 1. Maria Thereſa Charlotte, born in 1778. She married her couſin the duke of Angoulême. 2. Louis, born in 1781, and died in 1789. 3. Charles Louis, born in 1785, and died in 1793. 4. A daughter who died an infant.—Vie de Marie Antoinette par Weber.

Mariamne, the wife of Herod the Great, by whom ſhe had two ſons, Alexander and Ariſtobulus, and two daughters. Herod was very fond of Mariamne, but ſhe had little regard for him, eſpecially after he put to death her brother Ariſtobulus. When Herod went to Rome to court the favour of Auguſtus, he left ſecret orders with Joſephus and Sohemus, to deſtroy Mariamne and her mother, if any misfortune ſhould happen to him. Mariamne having obtained this ſecret from Sohemus, upbraided Herod, at his return, with his inhumanity, for which he put both her and Sohemus to death, B. C. 28.—Joſephus.

Mariana (John), a Spaniſh hiſtorian, was born at Talavera in Caſtile in 1537. At the age of ſeventeen he entered among the jeſuits. He diſtinguiſhed himſelf by a famous book, entitled, De Rege & Regis Inſtitutione, in which he juſtified the aſſaſſination of heretical princes. It was burnt at Paris by order of parliament. His greateſt work is, The Hiſtory of Spain, written firſt in Latin, and afterwards in Spaniſh. The beſt edition of the latter is that of Ibarra, at Madrid, 1780, 2 vols. folio; and of the Latin, that of the Hague in 1722, 4 vols. folio. Mariana died in 1624. He wrote a Treatiſe on Weights and Meaſures, and another on the Faults of Government and Society, in Spaniſh.—Moreri.

MARIANUS SCOTUS, a learned Scotch monk, who died in 1086, aged 58. He was a relation of the venerable Bede, and wrote a Chronicle from Jeſus Chriſt to 1083. It was continued by another hand to 1200.—Moreri.

MARIETTE (Peter John), a man of letters, was the ſon of John Mariette, a bookſeller and engraver of Paris. He became ſecretary to the king, and comptroller of the chancery, and died in 1774. His works are, 1. Traité des Pierres gravées, 2 vols. folio; 2. Lettres à M. de Caylus; 3. Lettres ſur la Fontaine de la rue Grenelle; 4. Deſcriptions of Plates engraved after the Pictures of M. Crozat, 2 vols. fol.; 5. A Catalogue of the Plates of M. Baſan, 8vo. He had the nobleſt collection of engravings in Europe. —Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

MARIGNAN (John James Medichino, marquis de), a celebrated commander of the 16th century, was born at Milan. In his youth he gave great proofs of his valour, which procured him the favour of Francis Sforza, duke of Milan, who employed him and another officer to murder Viſconti, a Milaneſe nobleman; after which he determined to ſacrifice the two inſtruments leſt he ſhould be diſcovered as the author of the aſſaſſination. The one periſhed, but Medichino eſcaped, and obtained the government of Muſſo, a ſtrong place on the lake of Como. In 1528 he entered into the ſervice of the emperor, and exchanged Muſſo for Marignan, and thence aſſumed the title of marquis. In 1554 he defeated the French commanded by marſhal Strozzi in Tuſcany, and took the city of Sienna, where he committed horrible cruelties. He died the year following at Milan, aged about 60.—Moreri.

MARIGNY (James Carpentier de), was born at a village of that name near Nevers. He was an eccleſiaſtic, but his life did not correſpond with his profeſſion. He attached himſelf to the cardinal de Retz, and was diſtinguiſhed by his ſatires againſt Mazarine. He died in 1670. He was a man of great wit and humour. A collection of his letters was printed at the Hague in 1678. He has alſo ſome poems in print; and there is aſcribed to him a curious book under the name of Alleyn, in which it is attempted to be proved, that to ſlay a tyrant is lawful. There was an abbé of the ſame name, who died at Paris in 1762. He wrote a Hiſtory of the 12th Century; and a Hiſtory of the Arabs, 8 vols. —Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

MARIKOWSZKY (Martin), a phyſician, was born at Roſenau in Hungary in 1728, and died in 1772, at Sirmich in Sclavonia. He applied himſelf indefatigably to examine the cauſes of the epidemic which ravaged the Hungarian and Turkiſh armies, and publiſhed his Obſervations in the Ephemerides Sirmienſes, 1763. He alſo tranſlated Tiſſot's Advice to the People on Health, into the Hungarian language —Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

MARIN (Michael Angelo), a French novel writer was born at Marſeilles in 1697. He embraced the eccleſiaſtical ſtate, and was in great favour with pope Clement XIII. who employed him to publiſh the Acts of the Martyrs. He died in 1767. Moſt of his novels are of a religious caſt.—Ibid.

MARINARI (Onorio), an Italian painter, was the diſciple of Carlo Dolce, whoſe ſtyle he imitated. He painted portraits in an admirable manner, alſo hiſtorical ſubjects. He died in 1715, aged 88.—Pilkington. D'Argenville.

MARINELLA (Lucretia), a Venetian lady in the 17th century, who wrote a curious book on the ſuperiority of her ſex, and ſome other works, as the Life of the Bleſſed Virgin, poems, &c.—Tiraboſchi.

MARINI (John Ambroſo), a native of Genoa, was the firſt Italian who delineated in proſe romances the uſages, manners, dangers, and exploits, of ancient chivalry. His romances are entitled, 1. Il Caloandre Fidelle, printed at Venice in 1641, 8vo. This work has been tranſlated into French by Scudery, and Caylus; 2. Nuove Gare de' diſperati, of which there have been ten editions, and a French tranſlation.—Ibid.

MARINO (John Baptiſt), an Italian poet, was born at Naples in 1569. His father having diſcarded him for refuſing to ſtudy the law, he became ſecretary to the grand admiral of Naples, after which he went to Rome, where he was patronized by cardinal Aldobrandino. He died at Naples in 1625. His principal performance is entitled Adone, dedicated to Louis XIII. at the time when Marino was at Paris, whither he he had been invited by queen Mary de Medicis. His other works are, de Strage de gli Innocenti; Rime, 3 parts; La Sampagna; La Murtoleide, a ſatirical poem on Murtola, a poet at Turin, who was ſo enraged that he wounded Marino with a piſtol.—Ibid.

MARIO NUZZI, better known by the name of Mario di Fiori, becauſe he excelled in painting flowers, was born in the kingdom of Naples in 1603, and died at Rome in 1673. His pictures are very valuable.—D'Argenville.

MARIOTTE (Edme) a, French eccleſiaſtic and mathematician, was born at Dijon, and admitted a member of the academy of ſciences at Paris in 1666. He died in 1684. He diſtinguiſhed himſelf by his hydraulic experiments: his principal works are; 1. A Treatiſe on Philoſophy; 2. On the Motion of Waters; 3. On the movement of Pendulums; 4. Experiments on Colours; 5. Treatiſe on Levels. The whole were publiſhed together at Leyden in 1717, 2 vols. 4to.—Moreri.

MARIVAUX (Peter Carlet de Chamblain de), a French writer, was born at Paris in 1688. His comedies and romances are diſtinguiſhed by their moral tendency. Thoſe of the latter deſcription are, 1. The Poor Philoſopher, 2 vols. 12mo.; 2. Marianne, 4 vols. 12mo. The concluſion of this excellent novel is by another hand; 3. Le Payſan parvenu, 3 vols. 12mo.; 4. Pharſamon, 2 vols. He alſo wrote a work entitled, The French Spectator, 2 vols. He died in 1763.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

MARIUS (Caius), a celebrated Roman, who was ſeven times conſul. He was of obſcure origin, and in his youth was a huſbandman, which employment he quitted for the army, and became a lieutenant under Scipio and Metellus. He ended the war with Jugurtha, whom he conducted in triumph to Rome. After this he ſerved againſt the Cimbri and other barbarous nations who had invaded Italy. With a very inferior force he completely routed them, for which a pyramid was erected to his honour. But he tarniſhed the glory of his victories by the baſeſt cruelties to the vanquiſhed, eſpecially the women. Plutarch reports that, having experienced ſome diſadvantages in contending with the Cimbri, he was warned in a dream to avert the wrath of the gods by ſacrificing his daughter Calburnia, which inhuman direction he obeyed, in his ſixth conſulate he had Sylla for his rival, who marched to Rome with his army, and obliged Marius to quit the city. After wandering ſome time he was recalled to Rome by Cinna, with whom he was choſen conſul, B. C. 86, in which year he died of exceſſive drinking. His ſon MARIUS the younger had all the ferocious character of his father. He uſurped the conſular dignity A. C. 82, but was defeated by Sylla, and threw himſelf at Præneſte.—Plutarch.

MARIUS (Marcus Aurelius), a ſmith and common ſoldier in the reign of Gallienus, who raiſed himſelf to a ſupreme command in the army, and on the death of Victorinus attended the imperial throne by the intereſt of Victorina, mother of that emperor; but was ſlain ſhortly after by a ſoldier. He is ſaid to have been a man of prodigious ſtrength, and to have ſtopped a chariot running full ſpeed with one of his fingers.—Univ. Hiſt.

MARK (St.), the Evangeliſt, was the diſciple of St. Peter, who employed him in writing the goſpel which bears his name, and in his firſt epiſtle, calls him his ſon. He is believed to have been the John, ſurnamed Mark, to whoſe mother's houſe St. Peter retired when releaſed from priſon, and who accompanied St. Paul and Barnabas in their travels. He wrote his goſpel for the uſe of the Roman chriſtians, about A. D. 72. He is ſaid to have founded the church of Alexandria.—Cave.

MARK, a pope and ſaint, ſucceeded Sylveſter I. in 336, and died the ſame year. There paſſes under his name, an epiſtle addreſſed to St. Athanaſius.—Dupin.

MARKHAM (Gervaſe), an Engliſh author in the 17th century, was born in Nottinghamſhire. He was a captain in the army of Charles I. and diſtinguiſhed himſelf by his valour. He wrote ſome dramatic pieces, and others on Huſbandry, Horſemanſhip, Fowling, and Military Diſcipline.—Gen. B. D.

MARKLAND (Jeremiah), a learned critic, was the ſon of the reverend Ralph Markland, author of the Art of Shooting flying, and was born in 1693. He received his education at Chriſt's hoſpital, from whence he removed to Peter-houſe, Cambridge, where he took his degrees in arts, and was elected fellow. In 1723 he diſtinguiſhed himſelf by his Epiſtola Critica, after which he publiſhed Remarks on the Epiſtles of Cicero to Brutus, and of Brutus to Cicero; with a Diſſertation on four Orations aſcribed to Cicero. In 1761 appeared his tract, entitled, De Græcorum quintâ Declinatione imparisyllabicâ et inde formatâ Latinorum tertia, quæſtio Grammatica, 4to. He wrote ſeveral other pieces, and aſſiſted many learned men in their labours. He died at Dorking in Surrey in 1776.—Anecd. of Bowyer.

MARLOE (Chriſtopher), an Engliſh dramatic writer, was born in the reign of Edward VI. and educated at Cambridge. Wood ſays that he was an atheiſt, and kept a girl, but being jealous that ſhe was partial to his footman, Marloe aimed a dagger at the fellow, which he wreſted out of his hand, and ſtabbed his maſter about 1593. His plays are now little known.—Wood, A. O.

MARLORAT (Auguſtin), a learned divine, was born in Lorraine in 1506. He entered into the order of Auguſtines, which he quitted on embracing the proteſtant religion. He appeared with advantage at the conference between the catholics and proteſtants at Poiſſy in 1561. When Rouen was taken by the king in 1562, Marlorat, who was a miniſter there, was baſely put to death. His Commentaries on the Bible are juſtly eſteemed, as alſo is his work entitled, Theſaurus locorum communium ſanctæ Scripturæ, London 1574, fol. and Geneva 1624.—Moreri.

MARMION (Shakerley), a dramatic writer, was born in Northamptonſhire in 1602, and educated at Wadham college, Oxford. He ſquandered away a good eſtate, on which he commenced author. His pieces are, 1. Holland's Leaguer; 2. A Fine Companion; 3. The Antiquary; 4. The Crafty Merchant, or the Soldier'd Citizen; all comedies. He died in 1639.—Biog. Dram.

MARMOL (Louis), a Spaniſh writer of the 16th century, was a native of Grenada.

He was taken at the ſiege of Tunis, and was eight years a priſoner in Africa. His principal work is a General Deſcription of Africa, printed at Grenada in 1573, in 3 vols. folio.—Moreri.

MARMONTEL (John Francis), a celebrated French writer, was born at Bort, in the Limouſin, in 1719. He was educated at Toulouſe, where he obtained an academical prize, and for ſome time wore the habit of an abbé. In 1745 he went to Paris, and obtained the friendſhip of Voltaire. His talents and virtues procured him a penſion, and the place of hiſtoriographer of the royal buildings, and alſo the management of a journal called the Mercury. But having written a ſatire againſt noblemen, he was ſent to the Baſtille. He commenced his literary career by tragedies, and an opera. But his fame reſts principally, if not wholly, upon his Moral Tales; a work univerſally known and eſteemed. The French academy appointed him perpetual ſecretary in 1789. During the revolution he led a retired life, and remained ſecure, though reduced to low circumſtances, amidſt all the violent ſcenes of that event. In 1797 he was choſen deputy of the council of ancients by the department of Eure; but died the year following at Abbeville of an apoplectic ſtroke. Beſides his dramatic pieces and Moral Tales he wrote the romance of Beliſarius; the Literary Obſerver; the Charms of Study, an epiſtle; a French tranſlation of Lucan's Pharſalia; Poetique Françoiſe, 3 vols. 8vo.; the Incas, or the Deſtruction of the Empire of Peru, 2 vols.; Eſſay on the Revolutions of Muſic, 8vo.; Elements of Literature, 6 vols.; ſeveral articles in the French Encyclopedie, &c.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

MARNEZIA (N. de Lezai), a French writer, was born at Beſancon. He was for ſome time in the army, and at the commencement of the revolution became a member of the national aſſembly, but diſapproving the violent meaſures that were purſued, he retired to America. He returned in 1793, and was confined in priſon ſeveral months. On the fall of Robeſpierre he gained his liberty, but never recovered his health. He died in 1797. His works are, 1. De la Nature champetre, a poem; 2. Eſſay on the Mineralogy of Orgelet in Franche Compte; 3. Le Bonheur dans les Campagnes; 4 Plan of Education for a Young Lady; 5. The Virtuous Family, a romance; &c.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

MAROLLES (Michael de), a French writer and eccleſiaſtic, was born in 1600, and died in 1681. He wrote Memoirs of his own Life, publiſhed in 1775, 3 vols. 12mo. He tranſlated ſeveral of the ancient authors into French, and wrote a curious work, entitled, Tablaux du Temple des Muſes, folio. His epigrams and poems are very indifferent. —Moreri.

MAROT (John), a French poet, was born at Matthieu, in Normandy, in 1463. He was patronized by Anne of Bretagne, queen of France, and was afterwards in the ſervice of Francis I. He died in 1523. His poems are appended to the works of his ſon, the ſubject of the next article.

MAROT (Clement), was born in 1495. He was valet de chambre to Francis I. but was obliged to leave France, on embracing the reformed religion. He reſided ſome time at Geneva, and died at Turin in 1544. He tranſlated ſome of David's pſalms into French, which were printed in 1543 at Geneva, with a preface by Calvin. His other poems are epigrams, elegies, ſonnets, and ballads. His ſon Michael was alſo a poet, but not equal either to John or Clement. The works of the three were printed together at the Hague in 1731, 6 vols. 12mo.—Moreri. Bayle.

MAROT (Francis), a painter, was the pupil of La Foſſe, and an aſſociate and profeſſor of the French academy of painting. He died at Paris in 1719, aged 52. He is not to be confounded with an architect of that name, whoſe deſigns have been engraved in quarto.—D'Argenville.

MARQUET (Francis Nicholas), a French phyſician and botaniſt, was born at Nancy in 1687, and died in 1759. He publiſhed, 1. An Account of Plants which grow in Lorraine, 10 vols. 8vo.; 2. Methode pour appendre par les notes de la muſique a connoitre le pouls, 12mo.; 3. Obſervations on the Cure of ſeveral Diſeaſes, 2 vols. 12mo.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

MARSAIS (Cæſar Cheſneau du), a French grammarian, was born at Marſeilles in 1676. He was for ſome time a member of the congregation of the oratory, which he quitted, and went to Paris, where he applied to the law; but left that profeſſion alſo, and became a ſchoolmaſter. He wrote ſome articles in the Encyclopedie, and died in 1756. His principal works are, 1. An Explanation of the Doctrine of the Gallican Church with reſpect to the Pretences of the Court of Rome, 12mo.; 2. A Rational Method of Learning the Latin Language, 12mo.; 3. A Treatiſe on Tropes, 8vo.; 4. The True Principles of Grammar, 4to.; 5. Logic, or Reflections on the Operations of the Mind, 12mo.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

MARSH (Narciſſus), a learned prelate, was born in Wiltſhire in 1638, and educated at Magdalen-hall, Oxford. In 1678 he was appointed provoſt of Trinity college, Dublin, and in 1682 promoted to the biſhopric of Leighlin and Ferns, and in 1703 tranſlated to the archbiſhopric of Armagh. He repaired ſeveral decayed churches, and built an alms-houſe for clergymen's widows. He died in 1713. His works are, 1. Inſtitutiones Logicæ in uſum Juventutis Academicæ, Dublin 1681. 2. An Introduction to the Doctrine of Sounds, containing ſome Propoſals for the Improvement of Acouſtics, &c.—Wood. Biog. Brit.

MARSHAL (Walter), a nonconformiſt minister, was educated at New college, Oxford, of which he became fellow, as he also was of that at Winchester. He was ejected from the living of Hursley in Hampshire in 1662; after which he officiated to a dissenting congregation at Gosport. He died about 1690. His book entitled the Gospel Mystery of Sanctification, printed first in 1692, 8vo. was reprinted with a recommendatory preface by Hervey, author of Meditations.—Calamy.

MARSHALL (Thomas), an English divine, was born in Leicestershire, about 1621, and bred at Lincoln college, Oxford; but when the university fell into the hands of the Presbyterians he went to Rotterdam. He returned at the restoration, became fellow of his college, and took his doctor's degree. He was afterwards rector of Lincoln college, and preferred to the deanry of Gloucester. He died in 1685. His works are, 1. Observationes in Evangeliorum Versiones per antiquas duas, scilicet Gothicas & Anglo Saxonicas; 2. An Explanation of the Catechism; 3. Epistle prefixed to Dr. Hyde's translation into the Malayan language of the four Gospels, and the Acts of the Apostles.—Wood.

MARSHALL (Nathaniel), an English divine of the 18th century, who was chaplain to George II. and published, 1. The Works of St. Cyprian, fol. 1717; 2. A Defence of our Constitution in Church and State, 1717, 8vo. His Sermons were published by his widow in 1730, in 3 vols. 8vo.—Anecd. of Bowyer.

MARSHAM (sir John), a learned writer, was born in London in 1602, and educated first at Westminster school, and next at St. John's college, Oxford. He afterwards studied the law, and became one of the six clerks in chancery. In the civil wars he adhered to the royal cause, and in 1660 was chosen member of parliament for Rochester. Charles II. conferred on him the honour of knighthood. He died in 1685. He is distinguished for his Diatriba Chronologica, or Chronological Dissertation, wherein he examines the principal difficulties which occur in the chronology of the Old Testament, 1649, 4to. He afterwards enlarged this work under the following title, Canon Chronicus, Egyptiacus, Ebraicus, Græcus, & Disquisitiones, London 1672, fol.; and Leipsic 1676, 4to. His son sir John Marsham made large collections for a History of England, but never published them. He also wrote a History of the English Boroughs. His brother Robert was created a baronet by queen Anne, and was succeeded by his son Robert, created Lord Romney in 1716.—Biog. Brit.

MARSIGLI (Louis Ferdinand), an Italian writer, was born in 1658, of a noble family, at Bologna. He served with great reputation in the imperial army, and in 1683 was taken prisoner by the Tartars, who sold him to the Turks. The year following he was ransomed, and obtained a colonel's commission. He was afterwards advanced to the rank of marshal; but when the count d'Arco was condemned, for giving up the fortress of Brisac to the duke of Burgundy, Marsigli, who commanded under him, was dismissed the service. He then retired to Bologna, where he formed a museum, and erected a printing-house; the first he bequeathed to the senate, and the last to the dominicans. He also founded the academy of arts and sciences at that place. He died in 1730. Count Marsigli was a member of the academy of sciences at Paris, and of the royal society of London. His works are, 1. A Philosophical Essay on the Sea, translated into French by Le Clerc, and published at Amsterdam in 1725, fol.; 2. a Description of the Danube, 6 vols. fol.; 3. De potione Asiatica Case, 12mo; 4. De fungorum generatione, fol.; 5. State of the Ottoman Forces, folio; 6. Treatise on the Bosphorus, 4to.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

MARSOLLIER (James), an historian, was born at Paris in 1647. He died archdeacon of Uzez in 1724. He wrote, 1. The History of Cardinal Ximenes, 2 vols. 12mo.; 2. History of Henry VII. king of England, 2 vols. 12mo.; 3. A History of the Inquisition, 12mo.; 4. Life of St. Francis de Sales, 2 vols. 12mo.; 5. Life of Madame de Chantal, 2 vols.; 6. Life of Dom. Rance, abbot and reformer of La Trappe, 2 vols.; 7. Discourses on the Duties of Civil Life, 12mo.; 8. History of Henry de la Tour d'Auvergne, duke de Bouillon, 3 vols.; 9. An Apology for Erasmus, endeavouring to prove that he was a good catholic.—Moreri.

MARSTON (John), an English dramatic writer, who was a student of Corpus Christi college, Oxford, and an intimate friend of Ben Johnson. He contributed eight plays to the stage, an account of which may be seen in the Biographia Dramatica. He was living in 1633.—Wood.

MARSY (Francis Marie de), a French writer was born at Paris, and bred among the jesuits, from which order he was expelled. He published an Analysis of the Works of Bayle, 4 vols 12mo.; which was proscribed by the parliament of Paris, and the author sent to the Bastille. On regaining his liberty, he wrote a Modern History, 26 vols. 12mo.; the Life of Mary Queen of Scots, 3 vols. 12mo.; A Dictionary of Painting and Architecture, 2 vols.; the Modern Rabelais, 8 vols; and a Poem, entitled, Pictura, 12mo.; which possesses merit. He died in 1768.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

MARSY (Balthazar), a sculptor, was a native of Cambray, and died in 1674, aged 54. His brother Gaspard was also a good sculptor, and died in 1681, aged 56. These artists executed a beautiful vase, on which were represented Latona and her children. This was placed in the royal gardens at Versailles. Nouv. Dict. Hist.

MARTEL (Francis), surgeon to Henry IV. of France at the end of the 16th century. He wrote an Apology for Surgeons; Paradoxes on the Practice of Surgery, and other works, printed together at Paris in 1635.—Moreri.

MARTELLI (Louis), an Italian poet, was born at Florence about 1500, and died at Salerno in 1527. His poems were printed at Florence in 1548. Vincent Martelli his brother was also a poet, and his works were printed at Florence in 1607, 8vo.—Tiraboschi.

MARTELLI (Peter James), secretary to the senate of Bologna, and professor of belles lettres in that city. He wrote plays, poems, and essays, in 7 vols. 8vo. He died in 1729. —Ibid.

MARTENNE (Edmund), a benedictine monk of St. Maur, was born in 1654. He published, 1. A Commentary on the Rules of St. Benedict; 2. De Antiquis Monachorum Ritibus, 2 vols. 4to.; and other works. He died in 1739.—Moreri.

MARTIAL (Marcus Valerius), a Latin poet, was a native of Spain, and went to Rome in his 20th year. The emperor Domitian conferred on him many favours, and raised him to the office of tribune. Martial in return complimented him as more than human; but after his death he painted his enormities in glowing colours. Being neglected by Trajan, he retired to his native country, where he died A. D 104. His epigrams are very pointed and severe. The best editions of Martial are that of Leyden, cum notis variorum, 1670, 8vo.; and that of Amsterdam, 1701, 8vo.—Biog. Classica. Vossius de Poet. Lat.

MARTIAL D'AUVERGNE, a French poet of the 15th century, was a notary of the Chatelet of Paris, and died in that city in 1508. He wrote, 1. Arrets l'Amour, "Love Causes;" 2. An Historical Poem on Charles VII; 3. L'Amant rendu Cordelier de l'Observance d'Amour; 4. Dévotes Louanges à la Vierge Marie. His poems were re-printed at Paris in 1724, in 2 vols. 8vo. —Moreri.

MARTIANAY (John), a French benedictine, of the congregation of St. Maur, who published a good edition of the works of Jerome, in 5 vols. folio; also a Life of that Father in 1 vol. 4to. 1706, and some other works. He died in 1717, aged 70.—Ibid.

MARTIGNAC (Stephen Algai sieur de), a French writer, who translated Terence, Horace, Juvenal, Persius, Virgil, and Ovid into prose, and wrote the Lives of the Bishops of Paris of the 17th century, quarto. He died in 1698, aged 70.—Ibid.

MARTIN (St.), was born in 316 at Sabaria in Pannonia, now Hungary, of heathen parents. He served in the army some years; but being converted to christianity, he embraced a religious life, and was the means of converting his mother. In 374 he was made bishop of Tours, but still retained the simplicity and austerity of the recluse. He erected the monastery of Marmontier, and is considered as the apostle of the Gauls. He died in 397. There goes under his name a Confession of Faith on the Doctrine of the Trinity.—Baillet Vies des Saintes.

MARTIN I. pope and saint, succeeded Theodore in 649. He held a council at Rome, in which the heresy of the Monothelites was condemned. Constantius caused him to be sent to Constantinople, from whence he was removed to the Crimea, where he died of ill usage in 655.—Dupin. Bower.

MARTIN II. succeeded John VIII. in 882. He condemned Photius patriarch of Constantinople, and died in 884.—Ibid.

MARTIN III. a Roman, succeeded Stephen VIII. in 942, and died in 946, after founding many churches and charitable institutions.—Ibid.

MARTIN IV. a Frenchman of noble birth, succeeded Nicholas III. in 1281. He excommunicated the emperor Michael Palæologus and Peter III. king of Arragon, and gave the kingdom of the latter to Charles de Valois, son of Philip the Hardy, king of France. The pope died in 1285.—Ibid.

MARTIN V. (Otho Colonna), was born at Rome of an illustrious family. He was elected pope in 1417, after the abdication of Gregory XII. His inauguration was very pompous, and he was attended, in a submissive manner, by the emperor and the elector palatine. He persecuted the followers of Huss in Bohemia, and presided at the council of Constance in 1418. He died in 1431. —Ibid.

MARTIN (David), a French protestant divine, was born at Revel, in the diocese of Lavaur in 1639. On the revocation of the edict of Nantes he went to Holland, and became pastor of a church at Utrecht, where he died in 1721. He wrote, 1. History of the Old and New Testament, 2 vols. fol.; 2. Sermons, 1 vol. 8vo.; 3. Notes on the Bible; 4. A Treatise on Revealed Religion, 2 vols. 8vo.; 5. Two Dissertations, one on the Disputed Passage of 1 John v. 7, and the second on the Testimony of Josephus to our Saviour. These have been translated into English, 8vo. The author also communicated some valuable additions to the second edition of the Dictionary of the French Academy.—Moreri.

MARTIN (James), a benedictine of the congregation of St. Maur, was born in Languedoc in 1694, and died in 1751. He wrote, 1. A Treatise on the Religion of the Ancient Gauls, 2 vols; 2. History of the Gauls, 2 vols; 3. Explication of difficult Texts of Scripture, 2 vols. 4. Explanation of Ancient Monuments, &c.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

MARTIN (Raymond), a Spanish monk of the Dominican order, was employed in 1264 by James I. king of Arragon to examine the Talmud, and sent in 1268 to Tunis to labour for the conversion of the Moors. He died in 1286. Martin wrote an excellent Treatise against the Jews, printed at Paris in 1651, with the title of Pugio fidei Chriſtianæ. The beſt edition is that of Leipſic, 1687.—Moreri.

MARTIN (Thomas), an Engliſh antiquary, was born at Thetford in Suffolk, in 1697, and died in 1771. He wrote Monumenta Anglicana, a Hiſtory of his Native Town in 4to. and contributed to the Faſti of Le Neve —Life by Sir J. Cullum.

MARTIN (Benjamin), an Engliſh mathematician, was born in 1704. He was the ſon of a farmer, and became a ſchoolmaſter at Chicheſter, where he wrote ſome good books on mathematics. He afterwards procured a valuable apparatus of inſtruments, and travelled about the kingdom as a lecturer in experimental philoſophy. He finally ſettled in Fleet-ſtreet, London, as an optician, and made ſeveral improvements on mathematical and philoſophical inſtruments; but being reduced to poverty by domeſtic troubles, he attempted his own life. Though the wound was not immediately mortal, it produced a diſorder of which he died in 1782. Mr. Martin was an ingenious and induſtrious writer. He wrote a Philoſophical Grammar, which went through ſeveral editions; Young Gentleman and Lady's Philoſophy, 2 vols. 8vo.; Philoſophia Britannica, 3 vols. 8vo.; a Treatiſe on Decimal Arithmetic, 8vo.; a Treatiſe on Trigonometry, 2 vols. 8vo.; Treatiſe on Optics, 1 vol.; Mathematical Inſtitutes, 2 vols.; Philological Library of Arts and Sciences, 1 vol.; Natural Hiſtory of England, 2 vols.; Biographia Philoſophica, 1 vol.; and ſeveral Miſcellaneous Tracts. He conducted for ſome years a Magazine of Arts and Sciences, which dropped for want of encouragement.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

MARTIN (Claude), an ingenious officer in the Engliſh ſervice in India, was born at Lyons in 1732 of mean parents. He received a good mathematical education at a public ſchool, and at the age of 20 entered into the army with one of his brothers. His regiment was ſent to India with general Lally, and in the war of 1756 he behaved with great gallantry, but, being ill-treated, he went into the Engliſh ſervice, in which he roſe to the rank of colonel. Being employed to make a map of the eſtates of the nabob of Oude, he recommended himſelf to his patronage. The nabob loved the European arts, in which he was aſſiſted by Martin, who opened a profitable bank, and other commercial inſtitutions, under his protection, and thereby gained prodigious wealth. Having ſettled at Lucknow, he built there a magnificent but curious work, in a ſtyle of his own, and in which he could enjoy all the mildneſs and coolneſs of an European climate with the fervour of the Aſiatic. He alſo erected another on the banks of the Ganges, which was fortified in the European manner. He formed a large muſeum of natural hiſtory; conſtructed an immenſe garden ſtocked with a prodigious variety of plants; and built an obſervatory, which he furniſhed with the beſt aſtronomical inſtruments. He died in 1799. His great wealth he diſtributed principally in charity.—Europ. Mag. Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

MARTINDALE (Adam), a mathematician, who was deprived of the living of Roſthorn in Cheſhire for non-conformity in 1662, after which he lived as chaplain in the family of Lord Delamere. He died about 1700. Mr. Martindale wrote a uſeful little book on ſurveying, called the Land Meter's Vade Mecum, 12mo.; alſo twelve Problems about intereſt; and two Almanacks, called Country Almanacks. He kept a mathematical ſchool at Warrington in Lancaſhire, and afterwards at Dunham in Cheſhire In theology he was the author of Divinity Knots Unlooſed, 1649, 8vo.; and Truth and Peace promoted, 12mo. 1682.—Calamy.

MARTINI (Martin), a jeſuit, who reſided many years in China, of which country he wrote ſome curious memoirs. He returned to Europe in 1651, but is ſaid to have again viſited China, where he died at the age of 74. He wrote, 1. Sinicæ Hiſtoriæ decas prima à gentis origine ad Chriſtum natum, 4to.; 2. China illuſtrata, Amſterdam, folio; 3. a Hiſtory in Latin of the Wars of the Tartars againſt China, 8vo.; 4. Relation of the Number and Quality of Chineſe Chriſtians.—Moreri.

MARTINIUS (Matthias), a proteſtant divine, was born in the county of Waldeck in 1572. He was the diſciple of Piſcator, after which he taught with reputation at Paderborn and Bremen. He diſtinguiſhed himſelf at the ſynod of Dort, and died in 1630. His principal work is a Lexicon philologicum, 2 vols. fol.—Moreri.

MARTINUSIUS (George), or Vtiſmoviſch, cardinal, was born in 1482 in Croatia, of mean parentage, but he raiſed himſelf by his talents to the favour of John Zapol, king of Hungary, who made him miniſter of ſtate, and on his death in 1540, confided to him the tuition of his ſon John Sigiſmund. He had before been made biſhop of Great Waradin. He incurred the diſpleaſure of Iſabella, mother of his pupil, on which he attached himſelf to the emperor Ferdinand I. who obtained for him the cardinalſhip. But being ſuſpected of entering into a treacherous negociation with the Turks, he was aſſaſſinated in 1551.—Moreri. De Thou.

MARTIRELLI, a landſcape painter, was born at Naples in 1670, and died in 1720. His pictures are very beautiful.—Pilkington.

MARTYN (John), an eminent botaniſt, was born in London in 1699, and was intended for trade, but his love of learning and ſcience overruled that deſign. He had from his youth an attachment to botany, in which he was encouraged by Dr. Sherard. In 1720 he tranſlated Tournefort's Hiſtory of the Plants growing about Paris, which induced him to make a like catalogue of plants about London. He co-operated with Dillenus in forming a ſociety of botaniſts, which continued till 1726. About this time he read botanical lectures in London, and on the death of Bradley he was choſen profeſſor of botany at Cambridge. In 1727 he was admitted a member of the royal ſociety, and he was ſo active in the committee for regulating the library and muſeum, that his bond for annual payment was cancelled by order of council. He practiſed phyſic in the city, and afterwards at Chelſea, but in 1752 he retired to Streatham. In 1761 he reſigned his profeſſorſhip, and died at Chelſea in 1768. His other works are, Tabulæ Synopticæ plantarum officinalium ad methodum Raianum diſpoſitæ, folio; Methodus plantarum circa Cantabrigiam naſcentium, 12mo.; Hiſtoria plantarum rariorum decades quinque, fol.; the firſt Lecture of a Courſe of Botany, being an introduction to the reſt, 8vo.; a Tranſlation of the Georgics and Bucolics of Virgil, with notes, two volumes 8vo.; Diſſertations on the Æneid of Virgil, 12mo.; Abridgment of the Philoſophical Tranſactions; Tranſlations of Boerhaave's Treatiſe on the Powers of Medicine; Harris on the Diſeaſes of Infants; and an Abridgment of Philoſophical Papers from the Memoirs of the Academy of Sciences at Paris, 5 vols. 8vo. He alſo wrote papers in the Philoſophical Tranſactions; and ſome articles in the General Dictionary. He was ſucceeded in the profeſſorſhip by his ſon, Thomas Martyn, B.D.—Life prefixed to his Diſſertations on the Æneid.

MARTYR (Peter), of Anghierra, in the Milaneſe, was born in 1455. He diſtinguiſhed himſelf as an able negociator, and Ferdinand V. king of Caſtille and Arragon employed him in the education of his children. He alſo obtained ſome eccleſiaſtical benefices, and died in 1525. He wrote a Hiſtory of the Diſcovery of America in Latin, under the title of, De navigatione et Terris de nova repertis, 1587; alſo a curious relation of his embaſſy to Egypt in 1500, fol.; and a collection of letters relating to the Hiſtory of Spain, printed at Amſterdam in 1670, fol.—Moreri.

MARTYR (Peter), a celebrated proteſtant divine, was born at Florence in 1500. His family name was Vermilius, but his parents gave him that of Martyr, from one Peter, a martyr, whoſe church ſtood near their houſe. After receiving a private education he entered into an Auguſtine monaſtery at Fieſoli. He became a diſtinguiſhed preacher and had a ſituation in the cathedral of Naples which he relinquiſhed after reading the writings of Luther and other reformers. This change in his religious ſentiments rendering it expedient for him to quit Italy, he went to Straſburg, where he married a nun, who for the ſame principles had left her convent. On the invitation of Edward VI. he came to England, and was made profeſſor of divinity at Oxford, and canon of Chriſt church. But in the ſucceeding reign he was obliged to leave the kingdom; on which he went to Switzerland, and died at Zurich in 1562. His wife died at Oxford, and in the reign of Mary her remains were taken up and buried beneath a dunghill; but when queen Elizabeth came to the throne, they were honourably interred in Chriſt church. Peter Martyr wrote ſome pieces againſt the errors of the church of Rome, and explications of the Scripture.—Bale's Hiſt. Reform. Wood, A. O.

MARUCELLI (John Stephen), an Italian hiſtorical painter, was born in 1646, and died in 1706. One of his principal performances was a repreſentation of Abraham entertaining the angels.—Pilkington.

MARVEL (Andrew), a political writer, was the ſon of a clergyman at Hull in Yorkſhire, where he was born in 1620. At the age of 13 he was ſent to Trinity college, Cambridge, and in 1657 he became aſſiſtant to Milton, as Latin ſecretary. In the Parliament which met at the reſtoration, he was choſen to repreſent his native town. He diſtinguiſhed himſelf by his integrity as a ſenator, and by his wit as a writer againſt the corruptions of the court. Charles II. delighted in his converſation, but could never prevail with him to ſupport his meaſures. To effect this he one day ſent Lord Danby to Marvel's lodgings, which were very mean, in an obſcure court in the Strand. Marvel was much ſurpriſed at this viſit, but was told by the earl, that his majeſty wiſhed to know in what way he could ſerve him, to which the other replied, "that it was not in the king's power to ſerve him." His lordſhip, after ſome other diſcourſe, offered him any place at court that he ſhould chuſe. Marvel anſwered, "that he could not accept the offer without being ungrateful either to the country, by betraying its intereſts, or to the king, by voting againſt him." Danby in concluſion told him, that "his majeſty had ſent him one thouſand pounds, as a mark of his private eſteem." This alſo he refuſed, though when his lordſhip was gone, he was obliged to borrow a guinea of a friend. He died in 1678. He wrote ſome pieces againſt Parker, biſhop of Oxford, and miſcellaneous poems, and tracts; all of which have been publiſhed in 3 vols. 4to. A poetical piece of his in recommendation of Paradiſe Loſt, is uſually prefixed to that great work.—Biog. Brit.

MARULLUS (Tacitus), a poet of Calabria in the 5th century, who wrote a panegyric on Attila king of the Huns, which the barbarian requited by cauſing the poet and his poem to be burnt together.—Voſſ. de Poet. Lat.

MARULLUS (Michael), a learned Greek, who went to Italy on the taking of Conſtantinople. He was a poet and ſoldier; but an atheiſt and extravagant, fond of Lucretius. He was drowned in the river Cæcina in 1500. His poetical pieces in Greek and Latin were printed at Florence in 4to. in 1497, and at Paris in 1561. They are very licentious.—Moreri.

MARY, the mother of Jeſus Chriſt, was of the tribe of Judah, and of the royal houſe of David. She eſpouſed Joſeph, but when betrothed ſhe miraculouſly conceived by the Holy Ghoſt, agreeable to the declaration of the angel Gabriel. When delivered ſhe went into Egypt with the child, and afterwards ſettled at Nazareth. Little is ſaid of her in the Goſpels, and nothing after the aſcenſion of our Saviour; but that ſhe reſided with St. John the Evangeliſt, to whoſe care ſhe was entruſted by our Lord. The Roman church pretends that ſhe was immaculate, and aſcended to heaven without paſſing through death, whence it has the feaſt called the aſſumption of the Virgin. Mary the wife of Cleophas, is called the ſiſter of the Virgin. She was the mother of the Apoſtles James the Leſs, Simon and Jude. She accompanied our Lord to his crucifixion, and was one of the women to whom his reſurrection was amounced by the angels.—Cave.

MARY, queen of England, was the daughter of Henry VIII. by Catherine of Arragon, and born in 1517. Her education was liberal, and ſhe acquired ſo great a knowledge of the Latin language as to undertake a tranſlation of Eraſmus's paraphraſe on St. John's goſpel, which, however, ſhe did not complete. During the life of her father ſhe experienced many marks of his brutal temper, and her inflexible oppoſition to his will made him ſometimes form a reſolution of putting her to death, from which he was diverted by archbiſhop Cranmer. The treatment which her mother had experienced, contributed much towards encreaſing her diſlike to Henry, and to the alterations which he introduced into the church. During the reign of Edward ſhe could not be prevailed with to join in communion with the proteſtant divines. On this account that amiable prince was perſuaded by the duke of Northumberland, to ſet aſide his ſiſters from the ſucceſſion, and to declare lady Jane Gray his heir. At his death in 1553 that lady was proclaimed queen; but her reign laſted only a few days The partiſans of Mary became numerous, and ſhe entered London without oppoſition In putting to death lady Jane and her huſband lord Dudley ſhe betrayed that ſanguinary and vengeful temper which was ſoon diſplayed in a violent perſecution of the proteſtants. Even Cranmer, to whom ſhe was indebted for her life, could not eſcape her bigotry and cruelty. In 1554 ſhe married Philip of Spain, eldeſt ſon of Charles V. with whom ſhe lived on indifferent terms. A diſappointment occaſioned by a ſuppoſed miſcarriage, and aggravated by the loſs of Calais, produced a fever, of which ſhe died in 1558, and with her ended the domination of the papal power in England.—Rapin. Hume.

MARY II. queen of England, the wife of William III. was the daughter of James II. by Anne Hyde, daughter of the earl of Clarendon At the age of 15 ſhe was married to William prince of Orange, whom ſhe followed to England in 1689. The ſame year parliament having declared the crown vacant by the abdication of James, conferred it upon William and Mary. She was of a meek diſpoſition, and did not interfere in matters of government, except when her huſband was abſent. She died without iſſue of the ſmall pox in 1694, aged 32.—Hume. Fun. Sermon by Burnet.

MARY STUART, the daughter of James V. king of Scotland, by Maria of Lorraine, was born in 1542. She was only eight days old when her father died, on which ſhe became heireſs to the throne. Henry VIII. of England endeavoured to unite the two kingdoms by a marriage between his ſon Edward and the infant queen of Scots, but his offer being rejected, he ſent his troops into Scotland, where they took and plundered Edinburgh, but were ſoon obliged to return. In 1548 Mary was contracted to Francis dauphin of France, at which court ſhe acquired thoſe accompliſhments which rendered her an object of univerſal admiration, and there alſo ſhe imbibed thoſe prejudices which proved the ſource of her miſfortunes. In 1558 the marriage was celebrated, and by the direction of their father-in-law Mary and her huſband aſſumed the title of king and queen of England, on the ſuppoſed ground of the illegitimacy of Elizabeth, an act of ridiculous ambition, which was afterwards fatal to Mary. In 1559 Henry II. died, and Francis became king of France, but in leſs than two years he left Mary a widow, on which ſhe returned to her native country, and was received by her ſubjects with joy. Scotland was at this time a prey to fanatical zeal. The preſbyterian party carried reformation to ſhocking lengths, by deſtroying abbeys, cathedrals, libraries, and even the monuments of the dead. Such was the ſtate of the kingdom at the landing of Mary, who, the firſt Sunday after her arrival, ordered maſs to be ſaid in her chapel. This gave great offence to the people, and it was with difficulty they granted to their ſovereign that liberty of conſcience which they claimed themſelves. Mary ſhewed a different temper, for ſhe proclaimed, that any attempt towards a change or ſubverſion of the reformed church, ſhould be treated as a capital offence. Notwithſtanding this liberality on her part, the people in every pageant and ſpectacle, delighted to inſult the queen by ridiculing her religion. Even the royal chapel was aſſaulted by the mob, at the inſtigation of Knox the reformer. Several offers of marriage were made to Mary, who rejected them, and beſtowed her hand on Henry Lord Darnley, ſon of the earl of Lennox, a young nobleman of preposſeſſing appearance, but weak and impetu-ous in his mind and temper, and mean and intemperate in his habits. This inauſpicious marriage ſoon ended in diſguſt, and the enemies of both took the advantage of widening the breach. They perſuaded Darnley that David Rizzio, an old Italian muſician, whom the queen had appointed her foreign ſecretary, had ſupplanted him in her affections. A conſpiracy was formed, and one night, while the queen was at ſupper with the counteſs of Argyle, Henry conducted his confederates to the royal apartment, where Rizzio, was murdered in the preſence of Mary, who was then advanced in her pregnancy. James Hepburn, earl Bothwell, became now a favourite in the court of Scotland; a man of conſiderable intrigue, but of unprincipled conduct. By his arts he gained an aſcendancy over the mind of Mary, who appointed him lieutenant of the marches. In 1566 ſhe was delivered of a ſon, afterwards James VI. of Scotland, and the firſt of England. Darnley in the mean time ſeeing himſelf deprived of power, and generally deſpiſed, retired to his country houſe, which was blown up one night, and the body of the king found in a garden adjoining, without any marks of violence. This deed of darkneſs occaſioned univerſal horror, and as it left no doubt that Bothwell was the principal cauſe, ſo it drew on Mary ſuſpicions which were never effaced till our own days. After a mock trial Bothwell was acquitted, and he was ſtrengthened in the power he had acquired. He now laid aſide the maſk, and on the 24th of April, 1567, ſeized the queen, and carried her to the caſtle of Dunbar, were by entreaties and force he prevailed on her to marry him. This is the great ſtain on the character of this ill-fated woman, which has called forth the utmoſt exertions of her enemies and her advocates. The conduct of Bothwell towards her after this, in keeping her a priſoner under a ſtrong guard, does certainly carry ſtrong preſumption that ſhe was forced into this union againſt her own inclination. A confederacy of the moſt powerful lords, in the kingdom was formed againſt Bothwell, who finding himſelf unable to oppoſe them, left the kingdom, and died miſerably in Denmark. Mary was committed to the charge of her greateſt enemy, the mother of the earl of Murray, who had aſſumed the title of regent, and the lords of the confederacy forced the queen to ſign a renunciation of her crown in favour of her ſon, and he was accordingly crowned at Stirling. After this, the enemies of Mary, who had ſuffered Bothwell to quit the kingdom, cauſed different perſons to be executed for being concerned in the king's murder. All theſe ſolemly acquitted Mary of being privy to that tranſaction. Notwithſtanding this, the council, for the purpoſe of rendering her odious, and colouring their own tyranny, produced letters, purporting to be written by her, which if true, would clearly eſtabliſh the fact. But they have been proved forgeries. Mary having eſcaped from her priſon in the iſland of Lochleven, haſtened to Hamilton, where ſhe found many friends, but the regent Murray marching againſt them the royal party was defeated. On this Mary fled into England, where ſhe implored the protection of Elizabeth, who acted with great duplicity for ſome time, and at length declared that no aſſiſtance could be afforded her unleſs ſhe ſubmitted to a legal trial. After ſome difficulties this was agreed to, and the cauſe was to be determined at York by a commiſſion, which finally, removed to London, where it was declared, that "nothing had been produced whereby the queen of England could conceive or take any evil opinion of her good ſiſter, for any thing yet ſeen." This is a ſufficient vindication of Mary's innocence, and yet ſhe was ſtill kept in cloſe confinement. The duke of Norfolk formed the deſign of marrying Mary, in which he was encouraged by ſeveral of the Engliſh nobility, and alſo by the regent Murray. But this being diſcovered by Elizabeth, the duke was ſent to the Tower, from whence he was not releaſed till he promiſed to renounce all correſpondence with the queen of Scotland:—but afterwards renewing his ambitious project, he was tried and executed. After a long confinement at Coventry, Mary was removed to Fotheringay caſtle, where ſhe was to undergo the mock formality of a trial on the charge of fomenting conſpiracies againſt Elizabeth. When brought before the commiſſioners ſhe diſclaimed their authority, and aſſerted her innocence. The commiſſioners, after hearing her defence, removed the matter to Weſtminſter, and, though no proof appeared of the charges, ſhe was declared guilty of conſpiring the death of Elizabeth. Mary received the tidings with complacency, being wearied by her unparalleled perſecutions. Many foreign powers intereſted themſelves in her behalf, and her ſon James endeavoured to ſave her life, but in vain. A warrant was ſent down, and read to the royal captive, who only entreated that ſhe might be permitted the conſolations of her own religion. Even this favour was inhumanly refuſed. She was beheaded in the caſtle of Fotheringay, Feb. 8, 1587, after praying to God to forgive all who had thirſted for her blood. Thus fell Mary Stuart, a princeſs of uncommon beauty and accompliſhments as well as misfortunes. Her remains were interred in Peterborough cathedral, from whence they were removed by her ſon, and depoſited in Weſtminſter abbey. Her memory has been ſucceſsfully vindicated by the learned Whitaker and other writers.—Robertſon's Scotland. Stuart's Life of Mary. Hume. Whitaker's Vind. of Mary.

MARY DE MEDICIS, daughter of Francis II. grand duke of Tuſcany, and wife of Henry IV. king of France, was born at Florence in 1573. On the death of her huſband in 1610 ſhe was named regent of the kingdom. She was a woman of great political intrigue, and of unbounded ambition. Differences arose between her and Louis, which were compromised by means of Richelieu, whom she introduced to the favour of that monarch. But afterwards a violent breach occurred between her and the cardinal, who was supported by the king. Mary was exiled to Brussels, and all her favourites, and even her physician, were either banished or sent to the Bastille. She died in poverty at Cologne, in 1642. Mary built the elegant palace called the Luxemburg at Paris, and adorned that city with aqueducts and other ornaments. —Henault. Nouv. Dict. Hist.

MARY, queen of Hungary, was sister to the emperor Charles V. and married in 1521 to Louis king of Hungary, who soon after was killed at the battle of Mohatz. His widow was appointed governess of the Low Countries in 1531, and in that station behaved with great courage and prudence. She headed the troops in several actions, and was so fond of hunting as to be called Diana and the huntress. She favoured the protestants, and had a taste for literature. Between her and Henry II. king of France there was a great animosity, and she committed considerable ravages in the French provinces. Henry in his part invaded Flanders, and destroyed the palace of Mary, who in return carried devastation into Picardy. The Spanish soldiers called her the mother of the camp. She resigned the government in 1555, and died in Spain in 1558.—Bayle.

MARY, an Anglo-Norman poetess in the 13th century, was born in France, but resided chiefly in England. There are several of her poems on the adventures of chivalry, in the British Museum. M. le Grand has published her fables in French prose. Another work of hers is a tale in French verse of St. Patrick's Purgatory.—Archæologia, vol. xiii.

MASACCIO (Thomas), a celebrated Italian painter, was born in 1417. He was accounted the principal artist of the second age of modern painting, from its revival under Cimabue. He died in 1443.—De Piles. Pilk.

MASCARDI (Augustin), a learned Italian, was born in the republic of Genoa in 1591. Pope Urban VIII. founded for him a professorship of rhetoric in the college of Sapienza; but being of a licentious turn he died in poverty in 1640. He wrote Latin and Italian poems; a History of the Conspiracy of the Count Fiesco; and a curious work entitled, Dell'Arte. Istorica, 4to.—Tiraboschi.

MASCARON (Julius), a French bishop, was born at Marseilles in 1634. His reputation as a preacher procured him the bishopric of Tulles, from whence he was translated to that of Agen. He died in 1703. His funeral orations are much esteemed.—Moreri.

MASCHERONI (Laurent), an ingenious mathematician, was born at Bergamo, in the Venetian States, in 1750. He published notes on the Integral calculus of Euler, and had a share in the experiments performed by the institute of Bologna with a view of proving the figure of the earth by the descent of bodies. The invention, however, which has rendered his name conspicuous was his celebrated Geometria del compasso, "the compass Geometry." He died at Paris in 1800.

MASCLEF (Francis), a French divine, who was deprived of a canonry in the cathedral of Amiens for being a jansenist. He died in 1728, aged 66. His works are, 1. A Hebrew Grammar, 2 vols. 12mo.; 2. Ecclesiastical Conferences of the Diocese of Amiens; 3. The Catechism of Amiens.—Ibid.

MASCRIER (John Baptist de), a French writer, was born at Caen in 1697, and died at Paris in 1760. He published, 1. A Description of Egypt, 4to.; 2. An Idea of the ancient and modern Government of Egypt, 12mo.; 3. Christian Reflections on the great Truths of Faith; and other works.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

MASENIUS (James), a jesuit, was born at Dulen in the duchy of Juliers in 1606. He was professor of eloquence at Cologne, and died in 1681. He wrote, 1. Palæstra Eloquentiæ ligatæ, 4 vols. 12mo; 2. Palæstra stylí Romani; 3 Anima Historia, seu Vita Caroli V. et Ferdinandi, 4to.; 4. Notes, &c. to the Annals of Treves, fol.; 5. Epitome Annalium Trivensium, 8vo.; 6. Latin Poems, particularly one on the Fall of Man, which Lauder falsely charged Milton with having stolen from, when writing his Paradise Lost. —Moreri.

MASHAM (Damaris lady), an ingenious lady, was the daughter of Dr. Ralph Cudworth, and the wife of sir Francis Masham, of Oates in Essex, by whom she had a son. She was the intimate friend of Mr. Locke, who died at her house. Lady Masham wrote a discourse concerning the Love of God, 8vo.; and Thoughts in reference to a virtuous and christian Life, 8vo. She died in 1708, aged 50, and was buried in the abbey church at Bath.—Ballard's Brit. Ladies.

MASIUS (Andrew), a learned man of the 16th century. He was born at Linnich near Brussels, and became counsellor to the duke of Cleves. He died in 1573, aged 57. Masius was uncommonly well versed in antient history and geography. His principal works are, a Syriac Lexicon and Grammar, folio; a Commentary on the Book of Joshua, fol.; and Disputatio de cæna domini, 1575.—Moreri.

MASO (Thomas), or Finiguerra, a goldsmith of Florence in the 15th century, who is said to have invented the art of engraving on copper. He flourished about 1480.—Moreri.

MASON (Francis), a learned divine, was born in the county of Durham about 1566, and educated at Oxford, where he became fellow of Merton college. In 1599 he was presented to the rectory of Orford in Suffolk. He was afterwards appointed chaplain to James I. and made archdeacon of Norfolk. He died at Orford in 1621. His learned work, entitled, Vindiciæ Ecclesiæ Anglicanæ, has been tranſlated into Engliſh with a preface and notes by Lindſay.—Wood, A. O.

MASON (John), a diſſenting divine of conſiderable merit, who was a maſter of arts of one of the Scotch univerſities. He wrote an excellent little volume of ethics, entitled, Self-Knowledge, of which there have been ſeveral editions; he was alſo the author of fifty-two Practical Diſcourſes for the uſe of Families, 2 vols. 8vo.; An Eſſay on Elocution, 8vo.; two Eſſays on the Power of Poetical and Proſaic Numbers, 8vo.; a plain and modeſt Plea for Chriſtianity, 8vo.; and the Student and Paſtor, or Directions how to attain to eminence and uſefulneſs in thoſe reſpective characters, 12mo. He died in 1763. He is not to be miſtaken for John Maſon of Water Stratford, near Buckingham, who being bewildered in the doctrines of Calviniſm, perſuaded himſelf and others that he was the Elias appointed to proclaim the approach of Chriſt, and the glorious ſtate of the millenium. He died in 1695.—Granger.

MASON (William), an Engliſh poet and divine, was the ſon of a clergyman in Yorkſhire, and educated at St. John's college, Cambridge. In 1749 he was elected fellow of Pembroke hall through the intereſt of Mr. Gray. In 1748 he publiſhed a poem entitled, Iſis, which being conſidered as an attack on the univerſity of Oxford, was anſwered by Mr. Warton in another, called, the Triumphs of Iſis. In 1754 he entered into orders and was appointed chaplain to the king, and preſented to the valuable living of Aſton in Yorkſhire. He alſo obtained the precentorſhip of York cathedral, which leading his mind to church muſic, he compoſed a book on that ſubject. Mr. Gray the poet, appointed him one of his executors, and Maſon wrote the life and publiſhed the letters of his friend. He alſo compoſed the epitaph on Gray's monument in Weſtminſter-abbey. In the American war, Mr. Maſon ſhewed himſelf warm on the ſide of thoſe who were called the patriotic party; for which he was ſtruck out of the liſt of royal chaplains. The diſorders of the French revolution, allayed his political fervour, and he renounced the Whig notions for which he was once ſo zealous. In getting out of his carriage, he bruiſed his leg, which being neglected occaſioned a gangrene, of which he died, in 1797. His Elfrida and Caractacus, two dramas on the Greek model, are eſteemed the beſt of his performances. He alſo wrote a poem, entitled, The Engliſh Garden; and tranſlated into Engliſh verſe Du Freſnoy's Art of Painting, to which ſir Joſhua Reynolds added valuable notes.—Monthly Mag. Gent. Mag.

MASON (ſir John), an eminent ſtateſman, was born at Abingdon in Berkſhire, and educated at All Souls' college, Oxford. Becoming a favourite with Henry VIII. he was employed in ſeveral embaſſies, and made a member of the privy council. He afterwards ſerved Edward VI; and contrived to hold his places under Mary. Queen Elizabeth made him treaſurer of her chamber, and he was choſen chancellor of the univerſity of Oxford. He died in 1566. His favourite maxim was, "do, and ſay nothing."—Biog. Brit.

MASQUE DE FER, or the "Iron Maſk," the name of an unknown perſon in France, who was conveyed in the moſt ſecret manner to the caſtle of Pignerol, from whence he was transferred to the iſles St. Margaret. He was a man taller than ordinary, and extremely well made His accompliſhments were evidently great, and he had a fine taſte for muſic. He always wore a maſk with ſteel ſprings, which was ſo conſtructed as to allow him free liberty to eat and drink. His keepers treated him with the greateſt reſpect. At Pignerol he was entruſted to the charge of an officer named St. Mars, on whoſe appointment as lieutenant of the iſles this unknown perſonage accompanied him, as he finally did to the Baſtille, where he died in 1703, and was buried under the name of Marchiali. Two gentlemen who were priſoners in the room over him contrived to hold ſome converſation with him by means of the chimney, and found that he was a man of general learning; but he informed them that a diſcovery of his name and rank would be death both to him and them. Numerous conjectures have been formed, and diſſertations written on this hiſtorical ſubject, which for all that has been ſaid ſtill remains in impenetrable obſcurity. It is remarkable that no perſon of diſtinction was miſſing at the time of his being confided to the cuſtody of St Mars.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt. Voltaire's Age of Louis XIV.

MASSAC (Raymond), a phyſician of Orleans in the 16th century. He wrote, 1. Pæan Aurelianus, 4to.; 2. Pugeæ, five de lymphis pugiacis, lib. ii. 1599.—Moreri.

MASSANIELLO, or ANELLO (Thomas), a fiſherman at Naples, who cauſed a revolt in that city on account of taxes, and gathered a rabble of near 50,000 perſons, by which means he uſurped the ſovereign power, and ruled the city with great terror about ten days, and was then killed and his body caſt into a ditch, A. D. 1646.—Moreri.

MASSARI (Lucio), an hiſtorical painter, was born at Bologna in 1569. He ſtudied under Ludovico Caracci, and improved himſelf at Rome. He died in 1633.—D'Argenville.

MASSARIA (Alexander), a celebrated phyſician, was born at Vicenza. He died at Padua in 1598, at an advanced age His works are, 1. De Peſte, 4to.; 2. Diſputationes duæ, quarum prima de ſcopis mittendi ſanguinem in febribus, altera de purgatione in morborum principio, 4to.; 3. Practica Medica, folio.—Moreri.

MASSE (John Baptiſte), miniature painter to the French king, was born at Paris in 1687, and died in 1767. He copied the great pictures of Le Brun at Verſailles, from which ſome fine engravings were publiſhed in 1753.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

MASSEVILLE (Louis le Vavaſſeur de), a French topographical writer, was born at Montebourg, and died at Valogne in 1733, aged 66. He wrote the Hiſtory and Geography of Normandy, 8 vols. 12mo.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

Massieu (William), a French writer, was born at Caen in 1665. He was a jeſuit, but afterwards quitted the order, and became tutor to the children of M. de Sacy. He was penſionary of the academy of inſcriptions, and a member of the French academy. He died in 1722. He publiſhed an edition of the Greek Teſtament; a Tranſlation of Pindar; Hiſtory of French Poetry; a Latin Poem on Coffee, and ſeveral diſſertations in the Memoirs of the Academy of Inſcriptions.—Moreri.

Massillon (John Baptiſte), a famous French prelate, was born at Hieres in Provence in 1663. At the age of 18 he entered into the congregation of the oratory. He acquired a ſuperiority over all the preachers of his time, and Louis XIV. once ſaid to him, "Father, when I hear other preachers I go away much pleaſed with them, but when I hear you I go away much diſpleaſed with myſelf." In 1717 he was appointed biſhop of Clermont, and in 1719 admitted a member of the French academy. He died in 1742. His works have been printed in 14 vols. 12mo.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

Massinger (Philip), a dramatic writer, was born at Saliſbury in 1585, and educated at Oxford, but he left the univerſity without taking a degree. He publiſhed 14 plays of his own, and ſome in which he was aſſiſted by others His works have been reprinted in 1761, in 4 vols. 8vo. and again in 1779. He died in 1639.—Langbaine. Wood.

Massinissa, king of a ſmall country in Africa, who took part with the Carthaginians againſt Rome; but his nephew being taken priſoner by Scipio, he ſent him back to his uncle with preſents, which ſo affected Maſſiniſſa that he became the ally of the Romans, who were indebted to him for many victories. At his death he made Scipio Æmilianus guardian of his kingdom. He died B. C. 149.

Massolino (da Panicale), a painter, was born at Florence in 1413. His greateſt performance was a large picture of the hiſtory of St. Peter. He died in 1450.—Pilkington.

Masson (Papirius), a French writer, was born in 1544. He was at firſt a jeſuit and afterwards a lawyer. He died in 1611. His annals were printed in 1598, 4 books, 4to. He wrote ſome other works.—Moreri.

Masson (John), a French proteſtant divine, who died in Holland about 1750. He wrote a Critical Hiſtory of the Republic of Letters, 15 vols. 12mo.; Lives of Horace, Ovid, and Pliny the Younger, 3 vols. 8vo.; Hiſtory of Peter Bayle and his Works, 12mo. —Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

Masson (Anthony), a French engraver who excelled in portraits; his plates of the diſciples at Emmaus, Turenne and the duke d'Harcourts, are moſt eſteemed. He died at Paris in 1702, aged 66.—Ibid.

Masson (Innocent le), a Carthuſian and general of his order, was born in 1628. He rebuilt the Grande Chartreuſe after it had been burnt down. He died in 1703. Maſſon collected the ſtatutes of his order with learned notes, printed at Paris in 1703, folio. Anthony Maſſon, a religious of the order of Minims, who died at Vincennes in 1700, wrote a Hiſtory of Noah and the Deluge, 12mo.; Hiſtory of Abraham, and other works.—Moreri.

Masson des Granges (Daniel), a French prieſt, who died in 1760, aged 60. He wrote an excellent work entitled, The Modern Philoſopher, or the Unbeliever Condemned at the Tribunal of Reaſon, 1765, 12mo.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

Massuet (Renatus), a learned benedictine, of the congregation of St. Maur, was born in 1665, and died in 1716. He publiſhed an edition of Irenæus, 1710, folio; alſo a fifth volume of the Acts of Saints of the Order of St. Benedict, and other works. —Moreri.

Mastelleta (John Andrew), a painter, was born at Bologna in 1577. He was inſtructed in the ſchool of the Caracci, and afterwards ſtudied the works of Parmeſan. Employing black more than any other colour, he thereby leſſened the value of his works. Being of a melancholy turn he entered into a monaſtery, where he died —De Piles.

Matani (Anthony), a phyſician, was born at Piſtoia in Italy in 1730. He became medical profeſſor at Piſa, and died at his native place in 1769. His principal works are, 1. De Aneuriſmaticis Præcordiorum morbis Animadverſiones; 2. Heliodori Lariſſæi capita opticorum è græco latinè converſa; 3. Account of the natural Productions of the Territory of Piſtoia; 4. De Noſocomiorum Regimine; 5. De Remediis Tractatus.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

Maternus de Cilano (George Chriſtian), a learned German, was born at Preſburg, and died at Altena in Lower Saxony in 1773. His works are, 1. De Terræ concuſſionibus; 2. De cauſis Lucis Borealis; 3. De motu humorum progreſſivo veteribus non ignoto; 4. De Saturnalium origine et celebrandi ritu apud Romanos, &c.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

Mather (Increaſe, D.D.), a puritan divine, was born in New England. In the time of Cromwell he had a church at Glouceſter, but on the approach of the reſtoration he returned to America. He died in 1723, aged 84. He wrote a Brief Hiſtory of the Wars with the Indians in New England, 1676; Divine Right of Infant Baptiſm; Diſcourſe on the Perſon of Chriſt, 8vo.; Diatribe de ſigno Filii Hominis, et de ſecundo Meſſiæ adventu, 8vo.; De ſucceſſu Evangelii apud Indos in Nova Anglia, 8vo.; Diſcourſe concerning Comets, 8vo.; and ſeveral other pieces. —Life by his ſon.

MATHER (Cotton), an eminent divine, was the ſon of the laſt-mentioned, and born at Boſton in 1663. He became aſſiſtant to his father, and diſtinguiſhed himſelf by his piety and learning. In 1710 the univerſity of Glaſgow conferred on him the degree of D.D. and in 1714 he was choſen a member of the royal ſociety of London. He died in 1728. He wrote a number of books, among which are an Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory of New England, folio; the Chriſtian Philoſopher, 8vo; the Wonders of the Inviſible World, being an Account of the Trials of ſeveral Witches, lately executed in New England, &c. In this laſt work he ſhewed an aſtoniſhing degree of credulity.—Biog. Brit.

MATHIAS (St.), one of the twelve apoſtles, and elected after the death of Judas. He is ſaid to have preached the goſpel in Ethiopia, where he ſuffered martyrdom. The ancient heretics had a goſpel which they pretended was written by this apoſtle.—Cave.

MATHIAS, emperor of Germany, was the ſon of Maximilian II. and ſucceeded his brother Rodolph II. in 1612. The empire was then at war with the Turks, with whom Mathias concluded a peace in 1615, but the war was renewed in 1618, and continued thirty years. Mathias died at Vienna in 1619, aged 62.—Univ. Hiſt.

MATHIAS CORVINUS, called the great, king of Hungary and Bohemia, was the ſon of John Huniades. The enemies of his father confined him in priſon in Bohemia, but on regaining his liberty he was elected king of Hungary in 1458. His election, however, was oppoſed by many of the Hungarian lords, who offered the crown to Frederick III. The Turks profiting by theſe diviſions invaded the country, but were expelled by Mathias, who compelled Frederick to yield to him the crown of St. Stephen, of which he had obtained poſſeſſion. The war was afterwards renewed, and Mathias overrunning Auſtria took Vienna and Neuſtadt, on which the emperor was obliged to make a peace in 1487. Mathias reformed many abuſes particularly with reſpect to duels and law-ſuits, and was preparing an expedition againſt the Turks when he died of an apoplexy in 1490.—Ibid.

MATHIAS (Chriſtian), a Lutheran divine, was born at Meldorp in Holſtein in 1584. He became ſucceſſively profeſſor of philoſophy and divinity in ſeveral univerſities, and died at Utrecht in 1655. His principal works are, Hiſtoria Patriarcharum, quarto; and Theatrum Hiſtoricum, 4to.—Moreri.

MATHON DE LA COUR (James), a mathematician, was born at Lyons in 1712, and died in that city in 1770. He was a member of the academy in his native place, and publiſhed a memoir on the beſt mode of ſupplying the action of wind upon large veſſels; Elements of Dynamics and Mechanics, 3 vols. 12mo; Eſſay on Calculating the Movements of Machines by the Reaction of Water. His ſon Charles Joſeph was born at Lyons in 1738, and put to death by the revolutionary tribunal in 1793. He wrote Letters on the Public Pictures exhibited; a Diſſertation on the Alteration of the Laws of Sparta, by Lycurgus; Idylls in Proſe; and ſeveral other ingenious pieces.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

MATILDA or MAUD, the daughter of Henry I. king of England, and wife of Henry IV. emperor of Germany. was nominated in 1135 ſucceſſor to the Engliſh throne by her father; but in her abſence Stephen uſurped the title. Arriving in England with a large army in 1139 ſhe defeated Stephen, and was acknowleged queen in a parliament held in 1141. Stephen afterwards defeated the empreſs, on which the national ſynod declared for him, and Matilda was obliged to leave the kingdom. On the death of the emperor ſhe married Geoffrey Plantagenet, earl of Anjou, by whom ſhe had a ſon, afterwards Henry II. king of England. Matilda died in 1167, aged 67.—Rapin. Hume.

MATIGNON (James de), prince of Montagne, and count of Thorigni, a famous general of France, was born in 1526. He diſplayed great courage when young in ſeveral battles, and in 1572 commanded the royal army in Normandy. In 1579 he was made a marſhal of France, and aſſiſted as conſtable at the coronation of Henry IV. He died in 1597.—Moreri.

MATTEI (Paolo da), an hiſtorical painter, was born at Naples in 1661. He was the diſciple of Luca Giordano, and diſtinguiſhed himſelf by the exactneſs with which he copied the works of great maſters. He died in 1728.—Pilkington.

MATSYS (Quintin), an hiſtorical and portrait painter, was born at Antwerp in 1460. He was brought up a blackſmith, which trade he abandoned, and became an excellent artiſt. A deſcent from the croſs, in the cathedral of Antwerp, is his maſter-piece. He died in 1529. His ſon, John Matſys, was a good painter, but not equal to his father.—De Piles. D'Argenville.

MATTHEW, or LEVI, the ſon of Alphæus, an apoſtle of Jeſus Chriſt, before which he was a publican, i. e. a tax-gatherer or receiver of tribute. His goſpel is ſuppoſed to have been written A. D. 64. Some critics think that it was originally written in Hebrew or Syriac, whence it was tranſlated into Greek, but this is mere conjecture. Matthew is ſaid to have been put to death in Parthia, where, and in Perſia, he had propagated chriſtianity with zeal and ſucceſs.—Cave. Dupin. Percy's Key to the N. T.

MATTHEW CANTACUZENUS, the ſon of John, emperor of the Eaſt, and his aſſociate in the empire in 1354. John abdicated the throne ſome time after, on which Matthew remained emperor with John Palæologus. Theſe princes at length diſagreed, and had recourſe to arms. A battle was fought between them in Thrace, and Matthew being taken priſoner, was compelled to renounce the throne to his rival. He then retired to the monaſtery of Mount Athos, where he compoſed commentaries on the Song of Solomon.—Univ. Hiſt. Moreri.

MATTHEW of Weſtminſter, an Engliſh monk and hiſtorian of the 14th century. He wrote a chronicle entitled, Flores Hiſtoriarum, præcipuè de Rebus Britannicis ab exordio Mundi, uſque ad ann. 1307, publiſhed at London in 1567, and at Frankfort in 1601, folio. The author was faithful but ſuperſtitious.—Nicholſon's Hiſt. Lib.

MATTHEWS (Tobias), archbiſhop of York in the reign of James I. was a great ornament to the univerſity of Oxford, and an eloquent and frequent preacher. He was tranſlated from Durham to York in 1606. He died in 1628, aged 82. The only piece of his in print is a Latin Sermon againſt Campian. His ſon Tobias was educated at Chriſt church, Oxford, after which he turned Catholic and entered among the jeſuits. He was a man of conſiderable political intrigue, and acted as a ſpy for the court of Rome. He died in 1655.—Biog. Britt. Wood.

MATTHEWS (Thomas), an Engliſh admiral, was a native of Glamorganſhire. He commanded in the Mediterranean in 1744, and fought an obſtinate but indeciſive battle off Toulon with the combined fleets, in which the brave captain Cornwall fell. Owing to his not being ſupported by Leſtock, his ſecond in command, admiral Matthews failed in gaining a complete victory; and yet for this he was diſmiſſed the ſervice, and Leſtock was acquitted. Matthews retired to his eſtate in Glamorganſhire, and died there in 1751. Smollet.

MATTHIEU (Peter), a French hiſtorian, was born in 1583. He was a zealous partiſan of the league, and attended Louis XIII. to the ſiege of Montauban. He died at Toulouſe in 1621. He wrote, 1. A Hiſtory of memorable Events in the Reign of Henry the Great; 2. The Hiſtory of the Death of that Monarch; 3. The Hiſtory of St. Louis; 4. The Hiſtory of France from Francis I. to Louis XIII. 2 vols. folio, &c.—Moreri.

MATTHIOLUS (Peter Andrew), an eminent phyſician, was born at Sienna in Italy about 1500, and died of the plague at Trent in 1577. He publiſhed Commentaries on Dioſcorides, in Italian, 1548, 4to. They were afterwards tranſlated into Latin, and publiſhed by Deſmoulins at Lyons in 1572, folio. This is a work of great value. All his writings were collected and printed at Baſle in 1598, folio, with the notes of Gaſpard Bartholin. He is not to be confounded with another phyſician of the ſame name, who was profeſſor at Padua, where he died in 1498. He wrote a ſcarce book, entitled, Ars Memorativa, 4to.—Halleri Bibl. Bot. Moreri.

MATTI (Emanuel), a Spaniſh poet, was born in 1663 at Oropeſa in New Caſtile. Pope Innocent XII. appointed him dean of Alicant, where he died in 1737. His poems were publiſhed in 1682, and his letters and Latin poetry at Madrid in 1735, in 2 vols. 12mo.—Moreri.

MATURINO, an hiſtorical painter, was born at Florence in 1490. He was the diſciple of Raphael, who employed him in executing ſeveral of his deſigns. He afterwards aſſiſted Polidoro de Carravaggio, and his works are equal to thoſe of that maſter. He died in 1527.—De Piles D'Argenville.

MATY (Matthew), an eminent phyſician, was born in Holland in 1718. He took his doctor's degree at Leyden, and in 1740 ſettled in England. In 1750 he commenced a periodical work, printed at the Hague, called Le Journal Britannique, giving an account of the principal productions of the Engliſh preſs. In 1758 he was choſen fellow of the royal ſociety, to which, in 1765, he became ſecretary. He was alſo librarian of the Britiſh muſeum, and died in 1776. He wrote the Memoirs of the Earl of Cheſterfield, prefixed to that nobleman's works, in 2 vols. 4to.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

MATY (Paul Henry), ſon of the preceding, was born in 1745, and educated at Weſtminſter ſchool, from whence he removed to Trinity college, Cambridge, where he obtained a fellowſhip. In 1774 he became chaplain to lord Stormont, ambaſſador at Paris. His advancement in the church was hindered by ſome ſcruples he entertained reſpecting the doctrine of the Trinity. He was appointed one of the librarians of the Britiſh muſeum, and in 1778 a ſecretary of the royal ſociety. In 1782 he began a literary Review, which he continued till 1786. In 1784, when there were great diviſions in the royal ſociety, occaſioned by the diſmiſſal of Dr. Hutton from the poſt of foreign ſecretary, Mr. Maty reſigned his place. He died in 1787. The year following was publiſhed a volume of his ſermons, in which, by miſtake, were inſerted ſome that he had tranſcribed from Secker's works. Ibid.

MAUCHARD (Burchard David), a learned phyſician, was born at Marbach in 1696. He became phyſician to the duke of Wirtemburg, and profeſſor of phyſic and anatomy at Tubingen, where he died in 1751. He wrote ſeveral theſes on medical ſubjects.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

MAUCROIX (Francis de), a French eccleſiaſtic, and canon of the cathedral of Rheims, where he died in 1708, aged 90. He tranſlated the Philippics of Demoſthenes; the Euthydema and Hippia of Plato; ſome of the Orations of Cicero; and other works, into French. He alſo wrote ſome pieces in conjunction with La Fontaine: and in 1726 appeared his Miſcellaneous Works, including Poems.—Ibid.

MAUDUIT (Michael), a prieſt of the oratory, was born at Viré in Normandy, and died at Paris in 1709, aged 75. He publiſhed, 1. A Treatiſe on Religion againſt the Sceptics; 2. A Tranſlation of the Pſalms into French Verſe; 3. Analyſes of moſt of the Books of the New Teſtament, 8 vols. 12mo. &c.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

MAUDUIT (Iſrael), an Engliſh political writer, was born at Exeter in 1708, and educated at the academy of Mr. Hallet, with a view to the miniſtry among the diſſenters. After officiating in that capacity ſome time he quitted it, and became partner with his brother, who was a merchant in London. He greatly diſtinguiſhed himſelf as a political writer, and his Conſiderations on the German War, printed in 1760, made much noiſe, and had a great effect on the public mind. He was appointed agent for the province of Maſſachuſetts, and in 1769 he publiſhed a ſhort View of the Hiſtory of the New England Colonies. In 1774 he printed a pamphlet, entitled, The Caſe of the Diſſenting Miniſters. He alſo wrote ſeveral pamphlets during the American war againſt adminiſtration. Mr. Mauduit died in 1787.—Europ. Mag.

MAUGIN (John), a French writer of the 16th century, was a native of Anjou, whence he is called the Angevin. He wrote a work entitled, the New Triſtan, Prince of Leonnois, printed at Paris in 1554. He alſo tranſlated Machiavel's Diſcourſes upon Livy into French.—Moreri.

MAUPERTUIS (Peter Louis Moreau de), a celebrated philoſopher, was born at St. Malo in 1698. He was ſome time in the military ſervice, which he quitted and devoted himſelf to ſcientific purſuits. In 1723 he became a member of the French academy, and about five years after was choſen fellow of the royal ſociety of London. In 1736 he was ſent with other academicians to the North, to determine the figure of the earth, which ſervice they performed with reputation. At the invitation of the prince of Pruſſia, afterwards Frederick the Great, he went to Berlin in 1740, and was appointed preſident and director of the academy. He accompanied that king in his campaigns againſt the Auſtrians, but expoſing himſelf too much at the battle of Molwitz, he was made priſoner and ſent to Vienna, where he was well received by the emperor. He was ſoon permitted to return to Berlin, after receiving ſeveral marks of the Imperial bounty. He was of an irritable temper, and had a diſpute with Koenig, profeſſor of philoſophy at Franeker, and another with Voltaire, who exerted his ſatirical talents againſt him. This, however, was not much to the credit of the poet, who had before paid the higheſt compliments to Maupertuis, and from whom he had received no injury to juſtify his wanton attacks. Maupertuis died at Baſil on a viſit to the Bernoullis in 1759. His works are, 1. The Figure of the Earth determined; the Meaſurement of a Degree of Meridian; Diſcourſe on the Figure of the Stars; Elements of Geography; Nautical Aſtronomy; Elements of Aſtronomy; Phyſical Diſſertation on a White Negro; Eſſay on Coſmography; Reflections on the Origin of Languages; Eſſay of Moral Philoſophy; and ſeveral papers and elogies in the Memoirs of the Academy of Berlin.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt. Hutton.

MAUPERTUY (John Baptiſt Drouet de), a French eccleſiaſtic and miſcellaneous writer, was born at Paris in 1650. He was ſome time at the bar, and had a place under government, but afterwards he entered into orders and obtained a canonry. He died in 1736. He wrote the Sentiments of a Chriſtian on the True Love of God; the Hiſtory of the Holy Church of Vienne; on the Veneration due to Relics; of the Dangerous Commerce between the Sexes; and ſeveral tranſlations into French.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

MAUR (St.), a diſciple of St. Benedict, and abbot of Glauſeuil in Anjou. He died about 584. At the beginning of the 17th century was founded a congregation of benedictines of St. Maur, which has produced many learned men.—Dupin. Moreri.

MAUR (Don Charles le), brigadier in the Spaniſh army and director-general of the engineers. He was an excellent mathematician and mechanic; and conſtructed ſeveral canals and other great works. His Treatiſe on Dynamics, and his Elements of Mathematics are eſteemed. He died in 1785.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

MAUREPAS (John Frederic Philippeaux, count de), a French ſtateſman, was born in 1701, and in 1715 was appointed ſecretary of ſtate; which conſidering his youth, muſt have been a ſinecure. In 1723 he was made ſuperintendant of the marine, and in 1738 miniſter of ſtate. By the intrigues of madame Pompadour he was exiled to Bourges in 1749. He was not recalled till 1774, when Louis XVI. entruſted the public affairs to his management. He attended greatly to the marine department, and was a liberal encourager of the ſciences; but the part he took in aſſiſting America againſt England is a reflection on his political prudence. He died in 1781. His memoirs, by himſelf, are curious but careleſsly written; they were printed at Paris in 1792, 2 vols. 8vo.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

MAURICE, of Naſſau, prince of Orange, was the ſon of William, after whoſe death in 1584 he governed the Low Countries, being then only eighteen years old. He evinced, however, great courage and talents; and being named captain-general of the United Provinces, eſtabliſhed that liberty which his father had begun. He made himſelf maſter of Breda in 1590, and this was followed by the capture of Zutphen, Deventer, Hulſt, Nimeguen, and Gertruydenburg. He defeated the archduke Albert in 1597, and compelled the Spaniards to abandon the Low Countries the ſame year. In 1600 he was forced to raiſe the ſiege of Dunkirk, but he ſoon after gained a great victory over Albert near Nieuport. This was followed by numerous conqueſts. Maurice now aimed at the ſovereignty of Holland, but was oppoſed by the virtuous Barneveldt, who loſt his life for reſiſting the ambition of the prince, who died in 1625.—Hiſt. of the Princes of Naſſau.

MAURICEAU (Francis), a ſurgeon of Paris, who diſtinguiſhed himſelf chiefly in midwifery, and the diſeaſes of women. His works are, 1. a Treatiſe on the Diſorders of Pregnant women; 2. Obſervations on Midwifery, the Diſeaſes of Mothers and of Newborn Children. The author died in 1707.—Moreri.

MAURITIUS (Tiberius), a Roman emperor, was born in Cappadocia in 559. He was of a noble family, which originally came from Rome. After filling ſeveral places in the court of Tiberius Conſtantine, he obtained the command of the army againſt the Perſians, and diſtinguiſhed himſelf ſo well as to obtain the emperor's daughter in marriage. In 582 he was crowned emperor. He re-eſtabliſhed Choſroes II. on the throne of Perſia; and was engaged in a war with the Arabs, who had ravaged his territories, when his general, Phocas, cauſed himſelf to be proclaimed emperor, and having taken Mauritius priſoner at Chalcedon, put him to death with his five ſons, A.D. 602.—Crevier. Univ. Hiſt.

MAUROLICO (Francis), a mathematician, was born at Meſſina in 1494. He was abbot of Santa Maria del Porto in Sicily, and taught mathematics with reputation. He died in 1575. His works are, 1. An edition of the Spherics of Theodoſius; 2. Emendatio et reſtitutio Conicorum Apollonii Pergæi; 3. Archimedis Monumenta omnia; 4. Euclidis Phænomina, &c.—Tiraboſchi.

MAURUS (Terentianus), a Latin poet and grammarian, who flouriſhed under Trajan. He wrote a poem, de Literis, Syllabis, Pedibus, & Metris, which is in the Corpus Poetarum of Maittaire, under the title of de Arte Metrica.—Voſſius de poet. Lat.

MAUSSAC (Philip James), a counſellor in the parliament of Toulouſe, and preſident of the court of aids at Montpellier, died in 1650, aged 70. He wrote notes on Harpocration, Paris 1614, 4to. and ſome miſcellaneous tracts, which ſhew his critical abilities to advantage.—Moreri.

MAUTOUR (Philibert Bernard Moreau de), auditor of the chamber of accompts at Paris, and member of the academy of inſcriptions. He was born at Beaune in 1654, and died in 1737. He wrote ſome papers in the Memoirs of the academy of belles lettres, and poems. He was alſo the editor of an abridgment of Petavius's Chronology, 4 vols. 12mo.—Moreri.

MAXENTIUS (Marcus Aurelius Valerius), Roman emperor, was the ſon of Maximianus Hercules, and declared himſelf Auguſtus in 306. He was oppoſed by Galerius Maximianus, who was defeated, and flew himſelf. Maxentius then marched into Africa, where he became odious by his cruelties. Conſtantine afterwards defeated him in Italy, and he was drowned in croſſing the Tiber in 312.—Univ. Hiſt. Crevier.

MAXIMILIAN I. archduke of Auſtria, was the ſon of Frederic IV. created king of the Romans in 1486, and elected emperor on the death of his father in 1493. He had ſeveral wars with France, which were moſtly ſucceſsful. He formed the deſign of making himſelf pope, for which purpoſe he aſſumed the antient title of the Roman emperors of Pontifex Maximus, and he endeavoured to prevail on Julius II. to admit him as coadjutor. Maximilian united with England againſt France, and ſerved under Henry VIII. in 1513. He was a man of ſcience, and wrote Memoirs of his own life, and poems. He died in 1519.—Moreri.

MAXIMILIAN II. emperor of Germany, was the ſon of the emperor Ferdinand I. and elected king of the Romans in 1562. He was choſen king of Hungary and Bohemia, and ſucceeded his father in 1564. He died at Ratiſbon in 1576, aged 50.—Ibid.

MAXIMILIAN, duke of Bavaria in the 17th century, was called, on account of his courage and ſucceſs, the defender of Germany; and, for his ſingular prudence, he acquired the name of Solomon. He zealouſly oppoſed the proteſtants, and was conſidered as one of the principal ſupporters of the catholic religion. In 1620 he gained the battle of Prague againſt Frederic prince Palatine, who had been elected king of Bohemia. For theſe ſervices Maximilian was named an elector of the empire. He died in 1651, aged 70.—Moreri.

MAXIMILIAN-EMANUEL, elector of Bavaria, rendered great ſervice to the emperor Leopold. He ſignalized himſelf at the ſiege of Neuheuſel in 1685; at that of Buda in 1686; and the year following in the battle of Mohatz. He commanded about this time the army of Hungary, and took Belgrade ſword in hand in 1689. He was afterwards governor of the Low Countries: but taking the part of France in the war about the Spaniſh ſucceſſion, he was put to the ban of the empire, and deprived of his eſtates in 1706, but was reſtored at the general peace. He died at Munich in 1726.—Ibid.

MAXIMIANUS (Marcus Aurelius Valerius Herculius), a Roman emperor, who from being a common ſoldier, was aſſociated in the government by Diocletian. He diſtinguiſhed himſelf by his military ſkill and bravery againſt the barbarians, and defeated Aurelius Julius, who had aſſumed the imperial title in Africa. When Diocletian abdicated the crown in 304, he compelled Maximianus, much againſt his will, to do the ſame; but about a year afterwards he reſumed the dignity, and oppoſed his ſon Maxentius. The troops, however, mutinied againſt Maximianus, who fled into Gaul, where he was put to death by order of Conſtantine, A.D. 310, aged 60.—Crevier. Moreri.

MAXIMIANUS (Galerius Valerius), emperor of the Eaſt, was originally a ſhepherd in Dacia, afterwards a ſoldier, and raiſed to the imperial dignity by Diocletian, who alſo gave him his daughter in marriage. He conquered the Goths and Dalmatians, but was defeated by the Perſians, over whom he afterwards gained a complete victory. In 305 he compelled Diocletian to abdicate the throne; but his cruelty ſoon rendered him odious to the Romans, who raiſed Maxentius to the throne. Maximianus died wretchedly, A.D. 311. He was a bitter perſecutor of the chriſtians, whoſe God he implored for relief in his laſt illneſs, after vainly ſeeking aid from the heathen deities.—Ibid.

MAXIMINUS (Caius Julius Verus), emperor of Rome, was the ſon of a peaſant in Thrace, and having diſplayed great courage in the Roman armies, he roſe to command. On the death of Alexander Severus, he cauſed himſelf to be proclaimed emperor A.D. 235. He was a great perſecutor; and put to death above four thouſand perſons, on ſuſpicion of their being concerned in a conſpiracy againſt him. His ſoldiers aſſaſſinated him near Aquileia, A.D. 256. His ſtature and ſtrength were very extraordinary, and his diſpoſition proportionably brutal. Forty pounds of meat and eighteen bottles of wine, were his ordinary allowance for a day. His ſtrength was ſuch that he is ſaid to have ſtopped a chariot in full ſpeed with one of his fingers.—Ibid.

MAXIMUS (Magnus), a Spaniard, was general of the Roman army in Britain when he proclaimed himſelf emperor A.D. 383. Gratian marched againſt him, but was defeated, and aſſaſſinated. Maximus, having made himſelf maſter of Gaul, Britain, and Spain, fixed the ſeat of his empire at Treves. He next marched into Italy, where he committed dreadful cruelties, but was at laſt beſieged in Aquileia, by the emperor Theodoſius. His ſoldiers delivered him up to Theodoſius, who cauſed him to be beheaded in 388.—Ibid.

MAXIMUS of Tyre, a platonic philoſopher, who viſited Rome in 146, but died in his own country in the reign of Commodus. Forty-one of his diſcourſes are extant, the beſt edition of which is that of Reiſke, 8vo. 1774. They have been tranſlated into French by Formey.—Stanley. Fabricius.

MAXIMUS the cynic, and tutor of Julian the apoſtate, was a native of Epheſus. He profeſſed magic, and aſſured Julian of ſucceſs in his Perſian expedition. He alſo flattered that prince by ſaying, that the ſoul of Alexander had paſſed into him. Maximus was put to death by the emperor Valens in 366.—Ibid.

MAY (Thomas), a poet and hiſtorian, was born in Suſſex in 1594, and educated at Cambridge; after which he entered of Gray's-inn, where he wrote ſome plays and tranſlated ſeveral authors, particularly Lucan. Charles I. employed him in writing two hiſtorical poems; one on the life of Henry II. and the other on the reign of Edward III. But in the civil war, May joined the parliament, and was appointed their ſecretary and hiſtoriographer. He publiſhed the Hiſtory of the Parliament which began in 1640, folio; and a Breviary of the Hiſtory of the Parliament of England, 1650, 8vo. He died in 1650.—Biog. Brit. Biog. Dram.

MAY (Louis du), a French hiſtorian, was a proteſtant, and ſpent the greateſt part of his life in Germany. He died in 1681. He wrote, 1. State of the Empire, or an Abridgment of the Public Law of Germany; 2. Science des Princes; 3. The Prudent Traveller, 12mo.—Moreri.

MAYENNE (Charles of Lorraine, duke of), ſecond ſon of Francis of Lorraine, duke of Guiſe, was born in 1554. He diſplayed great courage at the ſieges of Poictiers and Rochelle, and at the battle of Montcontour. He alſo defeated the proteſtants in Guienne, Dauphiny, and Saintonge. When his brothers were killed at the meeting of the ſtates at Blois, he declared himſelf head of the league, and aſſumed the title of lieutenant-general of France. He proclaimed the cardinal of Bourbon king, by the name of Charles X.; but was defeated by Henry IV. at the battle of Arques, and again at Ivry. In 1599 he was reconciled to the king, who made him governor of the Iſle of France. He died in 1611.—Moreri. Henault.

MAYER (John Frederic), a lutheran divine, was born at Leipſic in 1650. He became ſuperintendant of the churches of Pomerania, and profeſſor at Stettin. He died in 1712. His greateſt work is the Bibliotheca Biblica, printed at Roſtock in 1713, 4to. Beſides this he wrote a Treatiſe on the Method of Studying the Holy Scripture; Diſſertations on particular Parts of the Bible; and a piece entitled, Tractatus de Oſculo Pedum Pontificis Romani, 4to. —Moreri.

MAYER (Tobias), a celebrated aſtronomer, was born at Marſpach in the duchy of Wirtemburg, in 1723. He was ſelf-taught, and by his own application acquired a knowledge of the Latin language. In 1750 the univerſity of Gottingen appointed him mathematical-profeſſor. He died there in 1762. Mayer made ſeveral diſcoveries in geometry and aſtronomy, and publiſhed ſome excellent works, the chief of which are, his Table of Refractions, Theory of the Moon, and Aſtronomical Tables and Precepts, for which laſt the Engliſh board of longitude gave his widow 3000l. There was another aſtronomer of this name, who was a native of Moravia, and a jeſuit. In 1719 he became profeſſor of philoſophy at Heidelberg, and the elector palatine built for him an obſervatory at Manheim. He died in 1783. His works are, Baſis Pala-ina; De tranſitu Veneris; De novis in Cælo ſidereo phænomenis—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt. Hutton.

MAYERNE (ſir Theodore), a celebrated hyſician, was born at Geneva in 1572, and ad for his godfather Theodore Beza. He ook his doctor's degree at Montpelier, after hich he was appointed phyſician to Henry V. of France, who made him great offers rovided he would change his religion, hich Mayerne refuſed, though cardinal erron laboured much for his converſion. bout 1616 he viſited England, and became hyſician to James I. He enjoyed the high- t reputation in his profeſſion, and died in 655 at Chelſea, leaving a large fortune to 1 only daughter, who married the marquis Montpouvillan. His works were printed 1 vol. folio, in 1700.—Hutchinſon's Biog. led.

MAYNARD (Francis), a poet, and one the forty members of the French acade- y, was born at Toulouſe in 1582. He as ſecretary to Queen Margaret, and died 1646. He wrote ſongs, odes, epigrams, .—Moreri.

MAYNARD (ſir John), an eminent Eng- h lawyer, who diſtinguiſhed himſelf by his triotiſm, as well as his knowledge of juriſ- udence and integrity in his profeſſion. hen the prince of Orange was declared ng after the abdication of James II. ſir hn waited upon the new monarch with addreſs; and William having obſerved him that from his age he muſt have out- ed moſt of the judges and eminent law- rs of his ſtanding, he replied, "and I uld have outlived the law too had it not n for the arrival of your majeſty." He d in 1690, aged 88.—Biog. Brit.

MAYNE (Jaſper), an Engliſh divine and t, was born at Hatherleigh in Devon- re, in 1604, and educated at Weſtminſter ool, from whence he removed to Chriſt urch, Oxford, of which he became ſtu- t. In 1646 he was created D. D. and years afterwards was deprived of his lentſhip for his loyalty. At the reſtora- n he was promoted to a canonry of Chriſt urch. He died in 1672. Mayne was an of great wit and humour, which often carried o a low exceſs, particular- in his will, wherein he left his ſervant n, who was fond of tippling, an old k in which (ſays he) there is ſomething ake him drink. The man eagerly ſought his legacy, and on opening the trunk d a red herring. Dr. Mayne wrote e poems now obſolete; ſermons; and lay called The City Match.—Biog. Brit. d.

MAYNWARING (Arthur), an ingenious leman, was born in Shropſhire in 1668, received his education at Chriſt church, ord, after which he became a commiſſioner the cuſtoms. At the beginning of the n of queen Anne he was made auditor of impreſts, and ſat in parliament for Preſton in Lancaſhire. He died in 1712, leaving Mrs. Oldfield, the actreſs, his executrix, by whom he had a ſon. Maynwaring publiſhed ſeveral pieces in proſe and verſe.—Biog. Brit.

MAYO (Richard), a non-conformiſt divine, who was ejected from Kingſton in Surrey by the Bartholomew act, for enforcing conformity, in 1662. He died in 1695. His works are, a liſt of Dr. Staunton; two Conferences, one between a Papiſt and a Jew, the other between a Proteſtant and a Jew; Comment on the Epiſtle to the Romans, in Pool's Annotations; and Sermons. —Calamy.

MAYOW (John), a learned phyſician, was born in Cornwall in 1645. He was fellow of All Souls college, Oxford, and took his degrees in civil law, but practiſed phyſic. He died in London in 1679. Dr. Mayow, though little known in his own age, was one of the greateſt chemiſts this country has produced; and Dr. Beddoes has proved, that moſt of the modern diſcoveries in chemiſtry were known to him. His works were publiſhed at Oxford in 8vo. 1674.—Wood.

MAZARIN (Julius), a Roman cardinal and miniſter of ſtate, was born in Piſcina in Italy, in 1602. Being appointed nuncio extraordinary to France, he acquired the friendſhip of Richelieu and the confidence of Louis XIII. In 1641, pope Urban VIII. made him cardinal; and on the death of Richelieu, Louis appointed him miniſter of ſtate. He was alſo nominated one of the executors of the king's will, and had the principal management of affairs during the minority of Louis XIV; but at length the murmurs of the people roſe ſo much againſt him, that he found it expedient to quit the kingdom, and a price was ſet on his head. He afterwards recovered his power, and continued to render the ſtate the moſt important ſervices, the principal of which was the reſtoring peace between France and Spain in 1659. His application to buſineſs produced a diſeaſe, of which he died in 1661. His letters have been publiſhed in 2 vols. His niece, Hortenſia, Mancini, ducheſs of Mazarin, was celebrated for her wit and beauty. She married in 1661 Armand Charles de la Porte de la Meilleraie, from whom ſhe ſeparated, and came to England, where ſhe patronized St. Evremond. She died in London in 1699.—Moreri.

MAZEAS (John Mathuirin), a mathematician was born at Landernau in Brittany in 1713, and died in 1802. He wrote Elements of Arithmetic, Algebra, and Geometry, with an Introduction to Conic Sections; he was alſo the author of Inſtitutiones Philoſophicæ, 3 vols. 12mo. He was an eccleſiaſtic, and held a canonry in the church of Notre Dame at Paris, before the revolution.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

MAZELINE (Peter), a ſculptor of Rouen, and a member of the French academy of painting and ſculpture, died in 1708, aged 76. His principal works are in the gardens of Verſailles.—D'Argenville.

Mazochi (Alexis Symmachus), an Italian antiquary, was born near Capua in 1684. He was theological profeſſor at Naples, where he died in 1771. He wrote ſome ingenious works, the chief of which is the Antiquities of Campagna.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

Mazzuchelli (John Marie), a Venetian nobleman, who wrote ſome biographical works of eminent Italians, and died in 1765.

Mazzuchelli (Peter Francis), a painter, was born at Rome in 1571. There are ſeveral grand altar-pieces of his painting at Milan. Charles Emanuel duke of Savoy conferred on him the honour of knighthood. He died in 1626.—Pilkington.

Mazzuoli (Francis), commonly called Parmeſiano, a famous painter, was born at Parma in 1504. He has been called the inventor of the art of etching. He had an admirable genius; his invention was ready; and he had a peculiar talent in giving grace and ſweetneſs to his figures. He died in 1540. There was another of this name in the 16th century who was the couſin of Parmigiano. He excelled in hiſtorical painting.—Ibid.

Mead (Matthew), a diſſenting divine, who held the living of Great Brickhill in Buckinghamſhire, and afterwards the valuable one of Stepney, from whence he was ejected for nonconformity, in 1662. He was in ſome trouble about what was termed the Rye-Houſe Plot, and obliged to attend the council board on that charge, but was diſmiſſed. He officiated to a congregation of diſſenters in Stepney to his death, which happened in 1699. He wrote, the Almoſt Chriſtian Tried and Caſt, 8vo. a good practical book; the Good of Early Obedience, 8vo; Sermons on Ezekiel's Wheels, &c.—Calamy.

Mead (Richard), a celebrated phyſician, was the ſon of the above, and born at Stepney in 1673. In 1689 he was ſent to Utrecht, where he ſtudied under Grævius, after which he removed to Leyden, and contracted a cloſe intimacy with Boerhaave. On completing his ſtudies in that celebrated ſchool of phyſic, he went to Italy, and took his doctor's degree at Padua. In 1696 he returned to his native country, and commenced the practice of phyſic at Stepney, where he reſided ſeven years. In 1702 he publiſhed his treatiſe on Poiſons, which procured him conſiderable reputation. In 1704 he was admitted a member of the royal ſociety, of which, in 1707, he became vice-preſident. In 1717 the univerſity of Oxford conferred on him his doctor's degree by diploma. In 1727 he was appointed phyſician to George II. Dr. Mead died in 1754, and was interred in the Temple church, near the remains of his brother, who was a counſellor. The other works of Dr. Mead are a Diſcourſe concerning the Plague; a treatiſe De Imperio Solis ac Lunæ; De Morbis Biblicis; and Monita Medica; all which were collected into one volume, 4to. 1762. He was a very liberal man, and the greateſt patron of literature in his day. His library, which was one of the fineſt in Europe, was ſold by auction after his death. He was twice married, and left three children; two daughters, married to Drs. Wilmot and Nichols, and a ſon, named Richard, who inherited his fortune.—Biog. Brit.

Meadowcourt (Richard), an Engliſh divine, was born in 1697, and educated at Merton college, Oxford. He became canon of Worceſter cathedral, where he died in 1769. He publiſhed in 1732 a Critical Diſſertation, with notes, upon Milton's Paradiſe Regained.—Anec. of Bowyer.

Mechain (M.), an aſtronomer, was born at Lyons in 1744. His memoir on an eclipſe obſerved at Verſailles, was approved by the academy in 1774. He then belonged to the marine arſenal, in which he executed immenſe calculations for the improvement of charts. In 1782 he gained the prize of the academy on the comet of 1661, which was expected to return in 1790. He became editor of the "Connoiſſance des Temps," which work he greatly improved. In 1792 he was employed in the great work of the meridian from Dunkirk to Barcelona: he returned from it in 1798, but wiſhing to extend it as far as the Balearian iſlands, he ſet out for them in 1803. He died on the coaſt of Valencia of a fever, in 1805.—Lalande's Hiſt. of Aſtronomy.

Mede (Joſeph), a learned divine, was born in 1586, at Berden in Eſſex, and in 1602 entered of Chriſt's college, Cambridge, where he ſtudied with intenſe application, was choſen fellow, and proceeded to his degree of bachelor in divinity. He refuſed ſeveral preferments, particularly the provoſtſhip of Trinity college, Dublin, which was repeatedly offered him by archbiſhop Uſher. He died in 1638. His works have been collected into one volume folio. The principal is his Commentary on the Apocalypſe, in explaining which his plan has been followed by biſhop Newton, and a number of other great divines.—Biog. Brit.

Media was probably conquered by Pul, the founder of the Aſſyrian empire. In 711 B. C. it revolted, and became independent. Some time after this the Medes became poſſeſſed of Perſia; but Cyrus having defeated Darius in 536 B. C. Media was attached to the Perſian empire, and underwent the ſame revolutions.—Anc. Univ. Hiſt.

Medicis (Coſmo), called the elder, the founder of an illuſtrious family at Florence, was a merchant, and born in 1389. He acquired great wealth, which he appropriated to the noble purpoſes of advancing learning, and ſupporting learned men. He collected a noble library, which he enriched with inеſtimable manuſcripts. The envy excited againſt him by his riches, raiſed him many enemies, by whoſe intrigues he was obliged to quit his native country. He then retired Venice, where he was received as a ince. His fellow-citizens afterwards re- led him, and he bore a principal ſhare in e government of the republic thirty-four ars. He died in 1464. On his tomb was graved this inſcription: The Father of his ople, and the Deliverer of his Country.— oreri.

MEDICIS (Lorenzo de), ſurnamed the reat, and Father of Letters, was the ſon of ter, grandſon of Coſmo, and brother of lian de Medicis. Theſe two brothers, who joyed almoſt an abſolute power in Flo- ce, were viewed with a jealous eye by rdinand IV. king of Naples, and pope Six- IV. At their inſtigation the potent fa- ly of Pazzi formed a conſpiracy againſt the dicis in 1478, and Julian was aſſaſſinated he was attending maſs. Lorenzo was alſo unded, but eſcaped with his life, and was ducted to his palace by the people with d acclamations of joy. Having inherited great qualities of his grandfather, Coſmo, was accounted the Mæcenas of his age. was a ſingular but noble ſpectacle to ob- ve the citizen engaged in commerce on one hand and managing public affairs on other; now entertaining merchants, and t receiving ambaſſadors; giving public ws to the people, and erecting aſylums for ick and unfortunate; ornamenting his ntry with magnificent buildings, and ſend- learned men into the Eaſt in ſearch of uable Greek manuſcripts: ſuch a man was enzo, whom the grateful Florentines de- red, for all theſe benefits, chief of their ublic. He drew to his court a number of rned men; and ſent John Laſcaris into ece to purchaſe literary treaſures to enrich library. Lorenzo himſelf cultivated let- , particularly poetry, and his compoſi- s have been ſeveral times printed. He ſo univerſally eſteemed that the princes Europe were glad to chooſe him to arbi- e their differences. This illuſtrious man d in 1492. His glory was ſomewhat tar- ed by his paſſion for women; and he has n accuſed of irreligion, but the laſt may e been owing to the continual feuds be- en him and Sixtus IV. He had two , Peter who ſucceeded him, and John became pope by the name of Leo X.— by Roſcoe.

MEDICIS (Peter de), an hiſtorical painter, deſcended from the family of that name Florence, where he was born in 1586. He a diſciple of Cigoli, and had a pleaſing aner of coloring, a correctneſs of out- , and an expreſſion that was very natural, Pilkington.

MEDINA (John Baptiſte), an eminent ter, was born at Bruſſels in 1660. He died the works of Rubens with ſuch ſuc- , that his pictures were conſidered as little rior to thoſe of that artiſt. He reſided in at Britain many years, and was the laſt ſon knighted in Scotland by the high com- ioner. He died in 1711.—Ibid.

MEGASTHENES, an ancient Greek hiſto- rian, who lived under Seleucus Nicanor about 292 B. C. He wrote a Hiſtory of Ju- dea, quoted by many authors, but now loſt.— Voſſ. de Hiſt. Græc.

MEHEGAN (William Alexander), a French hiſtorian, but of Iriſh extraction, was born at Salle, in the Cevennes, in 1721. He wrote, 1. The Origin of the Guebres; 2. Conſiderations on the Revolutions of Arts; 3. The Origin and Progreſs of Idolatry; 4. A Picture of Modern Hiſtory, which has been tranſlated into Engliſh, and is the beſt of his works. He died in 1766.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

MEIBOMIUS (Henry), a phyſician of Helmſtadt, who died in 1625. To a great knowledge of his profeſſion he added profound erudition and great critical talents; as ap- pears by ſome of his works, in the collection entitled, Rerum Germanicarum Scriptores, 4to.—Moreri.

MEIBOMIUS (John Henry), profeſſor of Medicine at Helmſtadt, and afterwards firſt phyſician at Lubeck, died in 1655, aged 65. His chief works are, 1. Mæcenas, ſieve de C. Clinii Mecænatis vita, 4to.; 2. De Cere- viſiis, 4to; 3. Tractatus de Uſu Flagrorum in re Medica et Venerea, 4to. and 8vo. To the laſt edition Thomas Bartholin ſubjoined notes.—Ibid.

MEIBOMIUS (Henry), ſon of the laſt- mentioned, was born at Lubeck in 1638. He profeſſed medicine, hiſtory, and poetry, at Helmſtadt, where he died in 1700. His works are, 1. Scriptores rerum Germanica- rum, 3 vols. folio; 2. Ad Saxoniæ inferioris Hiſtoriam introductio, quarto; 3. Valentini Henrici Vogleri Introductio Univerſalis in Notitiam cujuſcumque generis bonorum Scriptorum, 4to; 4. Chronicon Bergenſe; 5. De Vaſis Palpebrarum novis, quarto.— Ibid.

MEIBOMIUS (Mark), of the ſame family as the preceding, was a learned critic, and died in 1711. He publiged, 1. An Edition of the Greek Mythologiſts; 2. De Fabrica Triremium, quarto; 3. A Tranſlation of an- cient Greek Authors, who wrote on Muſic; 4. Corrections for an Edition of the Bible in Hebrew.—Ibid.

MEIER (George Frederick), a German writer, was born in Saxony in 1718. His principal works are, 1. Inſtructions how one may become a modern Philoſopher; 2. Introduction to the elegant Arts and Sciences; both in German. He died in 1777.— Gen. Biog. Dict.

MEISNER (Balthaſar), a Lutheran divine and profeſſor of theology at Wirtemberg was born in 1587, and died in 1628. He wrote, 1. Anthropologia, 2 volumes, quarto; 2. Moderate Philoſophy, 3 volumes, quarto.— Moreri.

MEISSONIER (Juſtus Aurelius), an artiſt, was born at Turin in 1695, and died at Paris in 1750. He was a painter, ſculptor, archi- tect, and goldſmith, and his talents procured him the appointment of deſigner and goldſmith to the French king. His performances in the latter department are very beautiful.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

MELA (Pomponius), a Latin geographical writer, was a native of Spain, and flouriſhed A. D. 45. His valuable work, entitled, De Situ Orbis, was publiſhed by Iſaac Voſſius in 1658, quarto. James Gronovius alſo gave an edition in the ſame year, 12mo. —Voſſ. de Scrip. Lat.

MELANCTHON (Philip), a famous reformer, was born in 1497 at Bretten, in the palatinate of the Rhine. The family name was Schwardſherdt, or Black-earth, which Reuchlin, the friend of Philip, altered to the correſpondent Greek word Melanthon. He made a rapid progreſs in his ſtudies at the univerſity of Heidelberg, from whence he removed to Tubingen, where he continued ſix years. In 1518 he obtained the Greek profeſſorſhip at Wittemberg, where he formed a cloſe friendſhip with Luther, whoſe opinions he defended both in his public lectures and by his writings. In 1527 the elector of Saxony appointed him to viſit the churches in his territories; but his greateſt labour was in drawing up the Augſburg Confeſſion of Faith. His learning and moderation ſpread his fame through Europe, and the kings of France and England invited him to their kingdoms, with flattering offers, which he declined. In the progreſs of the reformation he exhibited a different temper from Luther, being more cautious and timid, on which account he was often reproved by him in ſevere terms. The prudence of Melancthon, however, was of important ſervice, and tended conſiderably to the propagation of the proteſtant doctrines, by guarding them from the abuſes of intemperate zeal. In 1539 Melancthon aſſiſted in the conferences at Spires, and in his journey thither viſited his mother, a pious woman, who aſked him what ſhe ſhould believe, and how ſhe ſhould pray amid theſe religious diſputes, at the ſame time repeating her ſimple creed and form of devotion. "Continue," ſaid her ſon, "to believe and to pray as you do at preſent, and do not trouble yourſelf about controverſies." He diſtinguiſhed himſelf in the conferences held at Ratiſbon in 1541 and 1548. He wrote a Cenſure of the Interim, and all the papers preſented at thoſe conferences. This learned and amiable man died at Wittemberg in 1560. His works were printed at Wittemberg, in four vols. folio, 1601.—Camerarii vit. Melanthon.

MELANIPPIDES. There were two Greek poets of this name: The one lived B.C. 520; the other who was the grandſon of the former, flouriſhed 60 years after, and died at the court of Perdicas II. king of Macedon. Fragments of their poems are in Maittaire's Corpus Poetarum.—Voſſius de Poet. Græc. Fabricius.

MELCHISEDECK, king of Salem, and prieſt of the moſt high God, who met Abraham after his victory over Chederlaomer, king of Sodom, and preſented to him bread and wine with his benediction. St. Paul having ſaid in his epiſtle to the Hebrews that Melchiſedeck was without father and without mother, led ſome ancient heretics to aſſert that he was a celeſtial being, ſuperior to angels, and even to Jeſus Chriſt. They were called Melchiſedecians.—Cave. Dupin. Moſheim.

MELCTHAL (Arnold de), one of the founders of the Swiſs liberties. With Tell, Furſt, and others, he ſhook off the Auſtrian yoke in 1307.—Univ. Hiſt.

MELEAGER, a Greek poet, was born at Gadara, in Syria, and flouriſhed about 186 B. C. His epigrams are in the collection of Greek poetry called the Anthologia. A ſeparate edition was printed in 1789 by Brunck, with notes, at Leipſic.—Voſſius de Poet. Gr.

MELETIUS, biſhop of Lycopolis, in Egypt, was depoſed in a ſynod by Peter, biſhop of Alexandria, for having ſacrificed to idols in the time of a perſecution. He afterwards formed a ſect under his name, and joined the Arians againſt Athanaſius. He died about 326.—Dupin.

MELISSUS of Samos, a philoſopher, was the diſciple of Parmenides, of Elea, where he commanded a fleet. He pretended that the univerſe is infinite and immoveable, and that there can be no knowledge of a Deity. This is the ſyſtem of Spinoza. Meliſſus lived about 444 B. C.—Stanley. Bayle.

MELITO (St.) biſhop of Sardis, in Aſia. He compoſed ſeveral works, of which only a few fragments remain in Euſebius. He flouriſhed about A. D. 170.—Ibid.

MELITUS, a Greek orator and poet, and the principal accuſer of Socrates. The Athenians out of compunction for their unjuſt treatment of that great man, put Melitus to death, B. C. 400.—Moreri.

MELLAN (Claude), a French engraver, was born at Abbeville in 1601, and died in 1688. His engravings are capital, and moſtly from his own deſigns.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

MELMOTH (William), an excellent writer, was born in 1666. He was a bencher of Lincoln's-inn, and, in conjunction with Mr. Peere Williams, edited Vernon's Reports. He was the author of The Great Importance of a Religious Life; a valuable little book which has gone through many editions. He died in 1743, and was buried in the cloiſter of Lincoln's-inn chapel.—Life by his ſon MELMOTH (William), ſon of the preceding, was born in 1710. He publiſhed tranſlations of Pliny's and Cicero's Epiſtles, well executed. He was alſo the author of the Letters which bear the name of ſir Thomas Fitzoſborne; ſome poems in Dodſley's Collection, and Memoirs of his father. He died in 1799.—Monthly Mag. Gent. Mag.

MELOT (John Baptiſt), a learned Frenchman, was born at Dijon in 1697, and died at Paris in 1760. He was librarian to the ing, and wrote ſome papers in the memoirs f the academy of inſcriptions, of which he as a member. He alſo edited Jourville's ife of St. Louis, with a gloſſary.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

MELVIL (ſir James), a Scotch writer, was he ſon of lord Keith, and born in 1530. He ecame page to Mary queen of Scots, whom e attended in her laſt moments; afterwards e entered into the ſervice of the duke of Montmorency. On his return to Scotland 1561, he was appointed privy counſellor, d gentleman of the bed-chamber. He died 1606. His Memoirs of Affairs of State, 1 vol folio, were printed in 1683.—Great Hiſt. Dict.

MEMMI (Simon), a painter, was born at enna, and died in 1345, aged 60. His incipal talent was in portrait; and he inted that of Laura, miſtreſs of Petrarch, om Memmi greatly eſteemed.—De Piles.

MEMNON, of the iſle of Rhodes, an able neral of Darius, king of Perſia, whom he viſed to deſolate his country in order to pede the progreſs of Alexander the Great, d then to attack Macedon; but this counſel s over-ruled by the other generals. Af- the battle of the Granicus Memnon de- ded Miletus with vigour, took the iſles Chios and Leſbos, carried terror into eece, and was near putting a ſtop to the queſts of Alexander when he was taken by death. His wife was taken priſoner h the family of Darius, and became the ſtreſs of Alexander.—Q. Curtius. Moreri.

MENAGE (Giles), a learned Frenchman, born at Angers in 1613. He became eminent pleader, but quitted that pro- ion and entered into orders. He obtained e preferment, and died in 1692. His ncipal works are, two books on the Ori- and Nature of the French Language; cellanies; Latin Poems; on the Italian guage; an edition of Diogenes Laertius; toire de Sable, folio; Juris civilis Amœni- s, &c.—Moreri.

MENANDER, a Greek poet, was born at ens about 342 B. C. He was called the ce of new comedy, and preferred to Ari- hanes. All his plays are loſt; but the omedies of Terence were borrowed from , by which we may form ſome judgment is excellence. His fragments have been ected by Stephens and Le Clerc. The edition was printed in Holland in 1709, vo.—Voſſius de Poet. Græc. Moreri.

MENANDRINO (Marſilio), or Marſilius of a, a lawyer of the 14th century, who e an apology for the emperor Louis of aria, entitled, Defenſor Pacis, in which maintained, that the imperial was ſupe- to the papal power. For this he was ex- municated by the pope. He wrote ſome r works.—Tirabeſchi.

MENARD (Claude), a French antiquary magiſtrate of Angers, where he died in , aged 72. He publiſhed, 1. Joinville's Hiſtory of St. Louis, with notes; 2. Reſearches concerning the Body of St. James the Great, ſaid to have been buried in the church of Angers; 3. The two Books of Auguſtin againſt Julian; 4. Hiſtory of Bertrand du Gueſclin.—Moreri.

MENARD (Nicholas Hugh), a benedictine of the congregation of St. Maur, who died in 1644, aged 57. He wrote a Martyrology of the Benedictines, and ſome other works. —Ibid.

MENARD (Leo), a counſellor of Niſmes, who wrote, 1. The Hiſtory of the City of Niſmes, 7 vols. 4to.; 2. Manners and Cuſtoms of the Greeks, 12mo.; 3. The Amours of Calliſthenes and Ariſtocliæ, 12mo. He died in 1767, aged 61.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

MENASSEH-BEN-ISRAEL, a celebrated rabbi, was born in Portugal in 1604. His father was a rich merchant, whom he accompanied to Holland, where Menaſſeh ſucceeded the rabbi, Iſaac Urie, in the ſynagogue of Amſterdam. He afterwards went to Baſil, and next to London, where he had a negociation with Cromwell for a toleration of the Jews, which was oppoſed by the preſbyterians. Menaſſeh then retired to Middleburg, where he died about 1660. He was of the ſect of the phariſees. His works are, 1. An edition of the Hebrew Bible, without points, 2 vols. quarto, Amſt. 1635, with a Latin preface; 2. The Talmud corrected with notes, 8vo.; 3. El Conciliador, quarto; De Reſurrectione Mortuorum, 8vo.; 4. De Fragilitate Humana ex lapſu Adami, deque divino auxilio; 5. Spes Iſraëlis, 12mo.; 6. The Breath of Life, in Hebrew, 12mo.; 7. The End of Life, 12mo. The laſt was tranſlated into Engliſh by Pocock, with the life of Menaſſeh prefixed.

MENCKE (Lewis Otto), a learned German, was born at Oldenburg, in Weſtphalia, in 1644. He became profeſſor of morality at Leipſic, and rector of that univerſity, where he died in 1707. He was the firſt author of the Acta Eruditorum, or Literary Journal of Leipſick, and wrote beſides, 1. Micropolita ſeu Reſpublica in microcoſmo conſpicua, quarto; 2. Jus Majeſtatis circa Venationem, quarto —Moreri.

MENCKE (John Burchard), ſon of the preceding, was born at Leipſic in 1674. In 1699 he was appointed profeſſor of hiſtory, and gained great reputation by his lectures. He was alſo hiſtoriographer and Aulic counſellor to Frederic Auguſtus of Saxony, king of Poland, a member of the academy of Berlin, and of the royal ſociety of London. He died in 1732. He continued the Acta Eruditorum, and publiſhed, 1. Scriptores rerum Germanicarum, ſpeciatim Saxonicarum, 3 vols. fol.; 2. Two Diſcourſes in Latin upon the Empiriciſm of learned Men, 12 mo. The title page promiſes more than the reader will find in the book.—Moreri.

MENDEZ (Moſes), an Engliſh poet and dramatic writer, who died in 1758. He was of Jewiſh extraction, and wrote ſeveral poems in Dodſley's Collection. The univerſity of Oxford conferred on him the degree of M.A. —Europ. Mag.

MENDELSOHN (Moſes), which ſignifies Moſes the ſon of Mendel, a Jew of Berlin, was born of a honeſt but poor family at Deſſau in 1729. He was bred to merchandize, but devoted himſelf to literature, in which he attained a diſtinguiſhed reputation. In 1755 he publiſhed his firſt piece, entitled, Jeruſalem; in which he pretended that the principle of the Jewiſh religion is deiſm. His next work was Phædon, or a Diſcourſe on the Spirituality and Immateriality of the Soul, 8vo. This is an excellent treatiſe, in which that important principle of the Immateriality of the Soul is acutely maintained. On account of this book the author gained the appellation of the Socrates of the Jews. He died in 1785. He alſo wrote, 1. Philoſophical Works, 2 vols. 8vo.; 2. Letter to Lavater, 8vo.; 3. Commentary upon Eccleſiaſtes; 4. Tranſlation of the firſt Book of the Old Teſtament; 5. Letters on Senſations; 6. Treatiſe on the Sublime, &c.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

MENDOZA (Peter Gonzalez de), a Spaniſh cardinal, and archbiſhop of Toledo, was born in 1428. He became an eminent ſtateſman, and Sixtus IV. made him cardinal. He died in 1495. He is ſaid to have tranſlated the Iliad and Æneid, alſo Salluſt, into Spaniſh. —Moreri.

MENDOZA (John Gonzales de), an Auguſtine friar, who was ſent by the king of Spain as ambaſſador to the emperor of China in 1584. After obtaining ſeveral preferments he was appointed in 1608 biſhop of Popajan in the Weſt Indies. He wrote a Hiſtory of China in Spaniſh, 1589, 8vo.—Ibid.

MENECRATES, a phyſician of Syracuſe, who rendered himſelf famous for his fooliſh vanity. He habited his attendants, who were perſons that he had cured, in the dreſs attributed to the minor deities, while he himſelf aſſumed that of Jupiter. He carried his extravagance, ſo far as to write a letter to Philip, father of Alexander the Great, thus inſcribed: "Menecrates-Jupiter to king Philip, ſaluting." That prince returned this anſwer, "Philip to Menecrates, health and good ſenſe." He wrote a book on Remedies, which is loſt.—Ibid.

MENEDEMUS, a Greek philoſopher of the Cyreniac ſect, was born in the iſland of Eubœa. He bore arms in the defence of his country, and exerciſed ſome important employments; but being treated with ingratitude, he became a philoſopher. He died in the reign of Alexander the Great.—Diog. Lært. Vit. Phil.

MENEDEMUS, a cynic, who lived at a later period than the preceding. He wore a black gown, a ſcarlet girdle and a cap whereon were repreſented the ſigns of the zodiac. This madman, falſely called a philoſopher, pretended to have been ſent from hell to obſerve the actions of men, that he might report the ſame to the infernal deities.—Ibid.

MENESES (Alexis de), a Portugueſe prelate, was born at Liſbon of a noble family. He entered into a convent of Auguſtine monks, but was called from thence and ſent to Goa as archbiſhop. He there held a ſynod, in which were paſſed the acts publiſhed under the title of Synodus Diamperenſis. On his return to Portugal he was made archbiſhop of Braga and viceroy of the kingdom, by Philip II. of Spain. He died at Madrid in 1617. He wrote the hiſtory of his order in Portugal. —Moreri.

MENESTRIER (John Baptiſt), a learned antiquary, was a native of Dijon, and died in 1634, aged 70. His works are, 1. Medals, Coins, and ancient Monuments of the Roman Emperors; 2. Illuſtrious Medals of the ancient Emperors and Empreſſes of Rome.—Ibid.

MENESTRIER (Claude Francis), a jeſuit, was born at Lyons in 1633, and died in 1705. His principal works are, 1. Hiſtory of Louis the Great, by Medals, Emblems, Devices, &c.; 2. Conſular Hiſtory of the City of Lyons; 3. The Art of Heraldry. He is not to be confounded with Claude le Meneſtrier, a native of Dijon, who wrote Symbolica Dianæ Epheſiæ Statua Expoſita, quarto. He died about 1657.—Moreri. Niceron.

MENGOLI (Peter), profeſſor of mechanics at Bologna in the 17th century, diſtinguiſhed himſelf by the excellence of his lectures and his writings. The latter are, 1. Geometria Specioſa, quarto; 2. Arithmetica rationalis; 3. Treatiſe on the Circle; 4. Muſica Speculativa, &c. He died about 1690.—Tiraboſchi.

MENGS (Anthony Raphael), a celebrated painter, was born in Auſſig in Bohemia in 1726. He ſtudied under his father, who was painter to Auguſtus III. king of Poland, after which he greatly improved himſelf at Rome. Charles III. of Spain became his patron, and provided for his family after his death, which happened in 1779. Mengs formed his ſtyle after Raphael, Correggio, and Titian. To his excellence as an artiſt he added a literary taſte, and wrote ſeveral pieces in Italian, as the Life of Correggio; Reflections on Beauty and Taſte in Painting; On the Principal Pictures at Madrid, &c. They have been tranſlated into Engliſh with his life prefixed, in 2 vols. 8vo.

MENINSKI or MENIN (Francis de Meginien), a learned Orientaliſt, was born in Lorraine in 1623. He was counſellor of war to the emperor, and principal interpreter. He died at Vienna in 1698. His work entitled, Theſaurus Linguarum Orientalium. Vienna, 5 vols. folio, 1687 is of ineſtimable value.—Moreri.

MENNO SIMONIS, chief of a ſect of Anabaptiſts who were called after his name, was originally a miniſter in Friſeland, but left his pariſh and was rebaptized by Ubbo Philippi. He gathered a number of diſciples in Germany, Holland, and Flanders. He maintained the neceſſity of rebaptiſm in adults; and denied that Jeſus Chriſt received a human body from the Virgin. A price was ſet upon the head of this fanatic, who, died a natural death at Oldeſlo near Hamburgh, in 1665. His works were publiſhed at Amſterdam in 1681. The Mennonites continue ſtill a conſiderable ſect in the Low Countries. —Brandt's Hiſt. Ref.

MENOCHIUS (James), an eminent civilian of Pavia who was called the Baldus and Bartolus of his age. After being profeſſor in ſeveral univerſities he became preſident of the council at Milan, where he died in 1607, aged 75. His works are, 1. De recuperanda poſſeſſione, de adpiſcenda poſſeſſione, 8vo; De preſumptionibus, 1670, 2 vols. fol.; De Arbitrariis Judicum quæſtionibus, et uſu Conciliorum, fol. His ſon John Stephen became a jeſuit, and died in 1656, aged 70. He wrote Political and Economical Inſtitutions; a learned Treatiſe on the Hebrew republic; and a Commentary on the Holy Scripture, 2 vols. folio.—Moreri. Tiraboſchi.

MENIPPUS, a cynic philoſopher, and the diſciple of Menedemus, was born at Gadara in Paleſtine. He wrote ſome ſnarliſh ſatires, for which reaſon, writings of that ſtamp have been ſometimes called Menippean. There was an orator of the ſame name who gave leſſons to Cicero.—Diog. Laert.

MENTEL (John), a printer of Straſburg, to whom ſome have attributed, but not on ſufficient grounds, the invention of printing. He was originally a writer and an illuminator of manuſcripts, after which he exerciſed his ingenuity in printing, and was the firſt who introduced that art at Straſburgh, where he publiſhed a Bible in 1466, 2 vols. folio. He printed ſeveral other works. He died in 1478. —Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

MENTZEL (Chriſtian), a phyſician and botaniſt, was born at Furſtenwal in Germany. He made great reſearches, and travelled through ſeveral countries for improvement. His works are; 1. Index nomina plantarum, 1696, fol. and reprinted in 1715 with additions; 2 A Chronology of China, 4to; 3. Natural Hiſtory of Brazil. 4 vols. fol.; 4. Of the Flowers and Plants of Japan, 2 vols. fol. He died in 1701, aged 79.—Haller's Bibl. Botan.

MENZIKOFF (Alexander), a prince of the Ruſſian empire, was the ſon of a peaſant, and a ſervant of a paſtry-cook who employed him to cry pies about the ſtreets. His appearance pleaſing Peter the Great, he took him into his ſervice. Menzikoff ſoon inſinuated himſelf into the confidence of his ſovereign, who made him governor of Ingria, with the rank of major-general, and at length conferred on him the title of prince. In 1713 he was accuſed of peculation, and condemned to pay a heavy fine, which the czar remitted and reſtored him to favour. Under the czarina Catherine he had ſtill more power, and his daughter was married to Peter II. who made Menzikoff duke of Cozel, and grand maſter of the imperial hotel. But by the intrigues of Dolgoroucki, miſtreſs of the czar, he fell into diſgrace, and was baniſhed to his eſtate; where he lived in ſuch magnificence that Peter was perſuaded to ſend him, for his own ſafety, into Siberia, where he died in a poor hut in 1729.—Hiſt. Ruſſia by Tooke. Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

MENZINI (Benedict), an Italian poet was born at Florence in 1646, and died at Rome, where he was profeſſor in the college da Sapienza, in 1704. He wrote a book entitled, Conſtruzione irregolare della Lingua Toſcana; and another, De Arte Poetica. His Satires are eſteemed; they were printed at Amſterdam in 1718, 4to. Beſides theſe he was the author of the Art of Poetry, Elegies, Hymns, &c.; collected into 2 vols. 4to, Florence 1731.—Tiraboſchi.

MERCADO (Michael de), a learned phyſician, was born in Tuſcany, and became firſt phyſician to Clement VIII. and other popes; alſo keeper of the botanical garden of the Vatican, where he formed a fine cabinet of metals and foſſils, the deſcription of which appeared at Rome in 1717, folio, and an Appendix in 1719. Mercado died in 1593, aged 53. He was raiſed to the rank of nobility by Ferdinand, grand duke of Tuſcany. He wrote a treatiſe, De gli Obeliſchi di Roma, 4to; and other works.—Ibid.

MERCATOR (Marius), an eccleſiaſtical author, and the friend and pupil of St. Auguſtine. He wrote againſt the Neſtorians and Pelagians, and died about 451. His works were publiſhed at Paris in 1684, 8vo.—Dupin.

MERCATOR (Gerard), a geographer, was born at Ruremonde in 1512. He compoſed a Chronology, a Greater and Leſſer Atlas, and Geographical Tables; alſo Harmonia Evangeliſtarum, 4to; a Treatiſe on the Creation, &c. He was ſo exact as to engrave and colour his own maps.—Moreri. Martin's Biog. Phil.

MERCATOR (Nicholas), an eminent mathematician, was born in Holſtein. He ſettled in England, where he became fellow of the royal ſociety, and died about 1690. His works are: 1. Coſmographia; 2. Rationes Mathematicæ; 3. De emendatione annua diatribæ duæ, &c.; 4. Hypotheſis Aſtronomica, &c.; 5. Logarithmotechnia; 6. Inſtitutionum Aſtronomicarum, &c.—Moreri. Martin's Biog. Phil.

MERCIER (John), a learned writer, was a native of Languedoc. He ſucceeded Vatablus in 1547 as profeſſor of Hebrew in the royal college of Paris, and died at his native place in 1562. His works are; 1. Lectures on Geneſis and the Prophets, Geneva, 1598; 2. Commentaries on Job, the Proverbs, Eccleſiaſtes, and the Canticles, 2 vols. fol.; 3. Tabulæ in Grammaticam Chaldaicam, 4to. Mercier was inclined to Calviniſm. His ſon Joſias was a man of learning, and died in 1626. He published, 1. an excellent edition of Nonius Marcellus, 4to.; 2. Notes on Ancient Authors.—Moreri.

Mercier (Bartholomew), known under the name of the abbé St. Leger, was born at Lyons in 1784. He entered into the religious society of St. Genevieve, of which he became librarian. Louis XV. gave him the abbey of St. Leger of Soissons, of which he was deprived and reduced to indigence in the revolution. He died in 1799. Mercier was a man of erudition, and one of the first bibliographers in Europe. His works are, 1. Letters on the Bibliography of Debure, 8vo.; 2. Letters on the True Author of the Political Testament of Cardinal Richelieu; 3. Supplement to Marchand's History of Printing, 4to.; 4. Letter concerning the Maid of Orleans; 5. Dissertation on the Author of the Book on the Imitation of Jesus Christ [Kempis]; 6. Notice of a rare Book entitled, Pedis Admirandæ, by J. d'Artis; 7. On the Letters attributed to pope Ganganelli; 8. Letters on different rare Editions of the 15th century, 8vo.; 9. Library of Romances, translated from the Greek, 2 vols. &c. He was concerned in the Journal de Trevoux, and the Magazine Encyclopedique.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Mercurialis (Jerome), an Italian physician, was born at Forli in 1530. He was so highly esteemed by his countrymen that they sent him ambassador to Pius IV. and erected a statue to his honour. He obtained several professorships, and died at Forli in 1606. His principal works are; 1. De Arte Gymnastica; 2. De Morbis Mulierum; 3. De Morbis Puerorum; 4. Consultationes et responsa Medicinalia; 5. Medicina practica. They were printed in folio at Venice, 1644. He was also the editor of Hippocrates's Works with notes, 1588.—Haller's Bibl. Anat. Tiraboschi.

Merddin, the son of Merwyn, a celebrated Welsh poet who flourished about A. D. 560. He ranked with Merddin Emyrs, and Taliessin, as the three principal Christian bards of Britain. Merddin is said to have slain his nephew in battle; on which account he secluded himself from society in a wood, whence he is called Merddin the Wild.—Owen's Camb. Biog.

Mere (George Brossin chevalier de), a French writer, who died at his seat in Poitou, in 1690. His works are, 1. Discourses on Wit and Conversation; 2. The Elegances of Discourse; 3. Treatises on Politeness, Eloquence, and Speech; 4. Letters &c.—Moreri.

Merian (Maria Sibylla), an ingenious lady, was the daughter of an engraver, and and born at Frankfort in 1647. She painted flowers and insects after nature with scrupulous exactness; and undertook a voyage to Surinam to draw the insects and reptiles peculiar to that country, of which, on her return, she published a description with beautiful coloured plates, in 2 vols 4to. Her daughter, who accompanied her to Surinam, added a third volume to this work. The mother published another valuable performance on the Generation and Transformations of the Insects of Surinam, 1705, 4to. These works are in German. She died in 1717, at Amsterdam. Her father published the Topography of the Universe 31 vols. folio, and a Florilegium, 2 vols. fol.—Moreri.

Merlin (Ambrose), a British writer, who lived about the year 480. He was regarded in his time as a magician and prophet. The idlest tales are told of him by some ancient writers, such as that he was engendered of an incubus, and that he conveyed by enchantment the stupendous stones on Salisbury plain from Ireland. There also pass under his name some extravagant predictions. Printed at Paris in 1530, in folio, near Caermarthen is a mount called Merlin's Hill, beneath which tradition relates that he was buried.—Gen. Dict. Hist.

Merovæus, king of France, succeeded Clodius in 448, and defeated Attila in 451. He is said to have extended the bounds of his kingdom from the banks of the Somme to Treves, which city he took and plundered. He died in 456. He began the race of kings called Merovingian.—Mezeray.

Merret (Christopher), a physician, was born at Winchcombe in Gloucestershire in 1614. He took his degrees at Oxford, after which he settled in London, where he became fellow of the college of physicians, and of the royal society. He died in 1695. Dr. Merret published, 1. Pinax Rerum Naturalium Britannicarum, continens Vegetabilia, Animalia, et Fossilia, in hac Insula reperta, 8vo.; 2. A Collection of Acts, Charters, &c., relative to the College of Physicians, 4to.; 3. A Short View of the Frauds and Abuses practised by Apothecaries, 4to.; 4. The Art of Glass; or how to colour Glass, &c., translated from Neri's treatise on that subject with notes; 5. Several papers in the Philosophical Transactions.—Pulteney's Sketches of Botany.

Merrick (James), an ingenious divine and poet, was born about 1718, and educated at Trinity college, Oxford, where he took his degrees in arts, and was elected fellow. He died at Reading in 1769. He published a translation of Tryphiodorus; and poems on sacred subjects; but his principal performance is a version of the Psalms, with annotations—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Merry (Robert), an English poet, was the son of a tradesman in London, and educated at Harrow school, from whence he removed to Christ church, Oxford. He afterwards purchased a commission in the guards, and distinguished himself as a man of fashion and a wit. He wrote many trifling pieces in the papers, under the signature of Della Crusca; and a tragedy called Lorenzo, which was performed at Covent Garden. He married Miss Brunton, an actress, with whom he went to America, where he died in 1798.—Monthly Mag.

Mersennus (Marinus), a learned mathe-matician, was born in the province of Le Maine 1588, and ſtudied at La Fleche with Des rtes, for whom he ever retained the great- affection. Merſennus entered into the ligious order of minims, and diſtinguiſhed mſelf equally as a mathematician and a di- ne. He diſcovered the curve called a cycloid, which was alſo given the name of Roulette. his diſcovery excited the admiration of the eateſt geometricians in Europe. Father erſennus died at Paris in 1648. His prin- pal works are; 1. Quæſtiones in Geneſim, 23, fol.; 2. Univerſal Harmony, concerning e Theory and Practice of Muſic, 2 vols. fol; De ſonorum Natura; 4. Cogitata Phyſico- athematica, 4to.; 5. The Truth of Sciences; Recreations of the Learned; 7. An edition the Spherics of Menelaus; 8. The Impiety Deiſts and Libertines refuted, 2 vols. 8vo. Moreri.

MERVILLE (Michael Guyot de), a French riter, was born at Verſailles in 1696. After avelling through various countries, he ſet- ed as a bookſeller at the Hague, where he bliſhed a literary journal. His affairs be- ming embarraſſed, he went to Switzerland, d drowned himſelf in the lake of Geneva in 65. He wrote 1. Voyage Hiſtorique, vols. 12mo.; 2. ſeveral Comedies, &c., bliſhed at Paris, 3 vols. 12mo.—Nouv. ict. Hiſt.

MERULA (George), a learned critic, was rn in 1420. He taught Latin and Greek Venice and Milan, and died in the latter y in 1494. His principal works are, 1. ntiquitatis Vicecomitium Mediolanenſium, l.; 2. Deſcription of Mount Veſuvius, and ontſerrat; 3. Commentaries on Martial, atius, Juvenal, Varro, and Columella; Epiſtles, &c. Eraſmus and other learned n have greatly praiſed him.—Moreri.

MERULA (Paul), an able writer, was rn at Dordt in 1558. He became profeſſor hiſtory at Leyden, and died there in 1607. e was the author and editor of ſeveral eſ- emed works, as, 1. Q. Ennii Annalium, 95, 4to.; 2. Urbis Romæ delineatio, 99; 3. Vita D. Eraſmi; 4. Coſmographiæ neralis, 1605, 4to.; 5. Opera Poſthuma, o.—Ibid.

MERY (John), a French ſurgeon, was born Vatan in Berry in 1645. He was appointed incipal ſurgeon of the hoſpital of invalids at ris, and choſen a member of the academy ſciences. He died in 1700. His works e, 1. Diſſertations in the Memoirs of the cademy; 2. Obſervations on the Method Operating for the Stone, of Brother James; Phyſical Problems upon the Fœtus.—oreri.

MESENGUY (Francis Philip), a French vine, was born at Beauvais in 1677, and ed in 1769. He wrote, 1. Expoſition of e Chriſtian Doctrine, 6 vols. 12mo. [con- mned by Clement XIII.]; 2 Abridgment the Hiſtory of the Old and New Teſtament, vols. 12mo.; 3. An edition of the New eſtament, with notes, 3 vols.; 4 The Con- ſtitution Unigenitus, with remarks; 5. Diſ- courſes on Religion.—Ibid.

MESNAGER (Nicholas), an able negociator, was born at Rouen in 1658, of a rich com- mercial family. He was ſent by Louis XIV. to Spain on ſome important miſſions relative to the commerce of the Indies; and afterwards to Holland; on which occaſions he gave ſo much ſatisfaction as to be created a chevalier of the order of St Michael, with patents of nobility. In 1711 he ſigned the preliminary treaty of peace between France and England at London, and he was next employed with the abbé Polignac as plenipotentiary at Utrecht. He died at Paris in 1714. His memoirs have been printed.—Moreri.

MESNARDIERE (Hippolytus Julius Pilet de la), a French poet, was born at Loudun in 1610, and died in 1663. He was a member of the French academy, and patronized by cardinal Richelieu. His works are, 1. A treatiſe on Melancholy, 8vo.; 2. Poetique, 4to.; 3. The tragedies of Alinde and La Pu- celle de Orleans; 4. A Collection of Poems, &c.; 5. Relations of War, &c.—Ibid.

MESSALINA (Valeria), daughter of Meſ- ſala Barbatus, and wife of the emperor Clau- dian. She was of a moſt libidinous character, and committed adultery with all the officers of her court. She alſo compelled her ladies to proſtitute themſelves, and that in the pre- ſence of their huſbands. Having been repu- diated by Claudian ſhe eſpouſed her favourite Silius, who was put to death with her by or- der of the emperor, A. D. 46. There was another of this name, who was the third wife of Nero after her firſt huſband Atticus had been put to death by that tyrant. On the death of Nero ſhe devoted the remainder of her days to ſtudy, and acquired a great repu- tation.—Lives of the Roman Empreſſes.

MESSENIUS (John), a Swede, celebrated by his learning and misfortunes. Guſtavus Adolphus appointed him profeſſor of law at Upſal, in which office he diſtinguiſhed him- ſelf with ſuch credit as to eclipſe the other profeſſors, by whoſe envious machinations he was accuſed of holding a ſecret correſpon- dence with the enemies of Sweden, on which he was thrown into priſon in 1615, and died in confinement in 1636. He wrote a great work in priſon, entitled, Scandia illuſtrata, 14 vols. fol. Stockholm 1714. His ſon Ar- nold Meſſennius was hiſtoriographer of Swe- den, but was beheaded in 1648, together with his ſon, who was only ſeventeen years old, for writing ſatires on the royal family. Ar- nold wrote a hiſtory of the Nobility of Swe- den, folio, 1616.—Moreri.

MESTON (William), a Scotch poet, was born in Aberdeenſhire in 1688. In 1714 he was appointed profeſſor of philoſophy in the mariſchal college of Aberdeen; but taking part in the rebellion, he loſt his place, and was obliged to keep himſelf concealed till the act of indemnity was paſſed. He died in 1745. His poems were publiſhed in 1 vo- lume 12mo. at Edinburgh, in 1765, and poſſeſs conſiderable merit. They are chiefly ſatirical.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

METASTASIO (the abbé Peter Bonaventure), an Italian poet, was born at Aſſiſi in 1698. He ſhewed an early genius for poetry, and wrote verſes at the age of ſix years; and he was only fourteen when he compoſed his tragedy, Il Giuſtino. Gravina was his inſtructor, who formed the greateſt expectations of him, and made him his heir when he died in 1717. In 1724 Metaſtaſio produced his play of Dido, acted at Naples, with the muſic of Sarro. The ſucceſs of this piece ſtimulated him to proceed in that career; and in 1729 the emperor Charles VI. called him to Vienna, where he gave him a conſiderable penſion. The empreſs Maria Thereſa beſtowed upon him magnificent preſents, as alſo did Ferdinand VI. king of Spain. The emperor offered him the title of nobility, and the empreſs the order of St. Stephen, but he declined both. This ingenious man died of a fever in 1782. He wrote a great number of operas and other dramatic pieces, which are highly admired, and have gone through numerous editions, and have been tranſlated into French in 12 vols. 12mo.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

METELLI (Auguſtin), a painter, was born at Bologna in 1609. He excelled in painting perſpective and architecture; and in conjunction with Michael Angelo Colonna produced ſeveral great works. They were both employed by Philip IV. of Spain. Metelli died at Madrid in 1660.—D'Argenville. Felibien.

METELLUS (Q. Cæcilius), an illuſtrious Roman, who diſtinguiſhed himſelf againſt Jugurtha the Numidian, and from thence acquired the name of Numidicus. He had for his lieutenant in this expedition the famous Marius, who raiſed himſelf to power by defaming the character of Metellus; in conſequence of which the latter was recalled. But he vindicated himſelf ſo well, that he was acquitted of the charges brought againſt him. There were ſeveral Romans of this name.—Salluſt.

METHOCHITUS (Theodore), an hiſtorian, who held ſeveral employments under the emperor Andronicus the elder at Conſtantinople, and died in 1332. He wrote, 1. a Roman Hiſtory from Cæſar to Conſtantine, 4to.; 2. Sacred Hiſtory; 3. Hiſtory of Conſtantinople.—Moreri.

METHODIUS, biſhop of Olympus or Patara, in Lycia, and afterwards of Tyre, ſuffered martyrdom at Chalcis about the year 311. He wrote ſome works, of which only fragments remain, printed at Paris by Combefis in 1644, 4to.—Dupin.

METIUS (James), a native of Alcmaer in Holland, who invented teleſcopes about 1609. His brother, Adrian, was profeſſor of mathematics and medicine at Franeker, where he died in 1636. He wrote, 1. Doctrina ſphæricæ; 2. Aſtronomiæ univerſæ inſtitutio, 8vo.; 3. Arithmeticæ et Geometricæ practica, 4to.; 4. De gemino uſu utriuſque Globi, 4to.; 5. Geometrices per uſum Circini nova praxis, 8vo.—Moreri.

METON, an Athenian mathematician, who invented what is called in chronology, the golden number. He flouriſhed B.C. 432. —Voſſ. de Mathem.

METRODORUS, a diſciple of Democritus, and the maſter of Anaxarchus and Hippocrates. He was a phyſician of Chios, and maintained that the matter of the univerſe is eternal.—Stanley. Diog. Laertius.

METRODORUS, a famous painter and philoſopher, flouriſhed B. C. 171. He was ſent by the Athenians to Paulus Æmilius, who, after the defeat of Perſeus, had demanded a painter and philoſopher; the former to paint his temples, and the latter to inſtruct his children. Metrodorus gave him ſatisfaction in both capacities.—Ibid.

METTRIE (Julien Offray de la), a French phyſician, was born at St. Maloes in 1709. He wrote the Natural Hiſtory of the Soul, in which he denied its immateriality. This book occaſioned much noiſe, and the author ſome trouble. He afterwards wrote againſt the faculty with ſuch virulence, that he was obliged to retire to Leyden, where he wrote an atheiſtical book, called Man a Machine, which was publicly burnt, on which the author went to Berlin, and was patronized by Frederic the Great. He died in 1751. His works were publiſhed at Berlin in 1 vol. 4to. and 2 vols 12mo.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

METZU (Gabriel), a Dutch painter, was born at Leyden in 1615. His ſubjects were women ſelling fiſh, fowls, or game; phyſicians attending the ſick; chemical ſhops; painted in an excellent ſtyle. He died in 1658.—Houbraken.

MEURSIUS (John), a learned critic, was born at Utrecht in 1579. He received his academical education at Leyden, where he wrote at the age of ſixteen, a Commentary on Lycophron. In 1610 he was appointed profeſſor of hiſtory, and afterwards of Greek. He was alſo choſen hiſtoriographer of the United States. Meurſius ſuffered much perſecution in conſequence of his connexion with Barneveldt; on which he went to Denmark, where he died in 1639. He was profoundly verſed in the Greek language, and antiquities. His chief works are, 1. De populis Atticæ; 2. Atticarum lectionum lib. iv.; 3. Archontes Athenienſes; 4 Fortuna Attica, de Athenarum origine; 5. De Feſtis Græcorum; 6. Hiſtoria Danica; 7. Athenæ Batavæ, [this is a hiſtory of the univerſity of Leyden;] 8. Gloſſarium Græco-Barbarum; 9. Rerum Belgicarum. They have been printed in 12 vols. folio, Florence, 1741. His ſon, John Meurſius, who died in Denmark, in the flower of his age, wrote 1. Arborentum Sacrum, ſive de Arborum conſervatione, 1642, 8vo.; 2. De Tibiis veterum. —Moreri.

MEUSNIER (Philip), a painter, was born at Paris in 1655, and died there in 1734.

He was a member of the French academy, and patronized by Louis XIV. and XV. His subjects were architecture and views in perspective, painted in a fine manner.—D'Argenville.

Meyer (James), a Flemish historian, was born in 1491, near Bailleul, whence he is sometimes called Baliolianus. He was rector of Blankenberg, and died in 1552. His works are, 1. Annales Rerum Flandricarum, folio; 2. Flandricarum Rerum Decas 4to.—Moreri.

Meyer (Felix), a German painter, was born in 1653. He painted some fine views after nature in Italy and Switzerland, and died in 1713.—Ibid.

Mezerai (Francis Eudes de), a French historian, was born in Lower Normandy in 1610, and educated at the university of Caen; on leaving which he obtained a military employment, and served two or three campaigns in Flanders. Having abandoned the army, he projected the History of France, in writing which he was liberally encouraged by cardinal Richelieu, and on its completion in 1651 he obtained a pension from the king. He was also admitted a member of the academy, and had a principal concern in the compilation of their dictionary. He died in 1683. Besides his History of France, 3 vols. fol.; and an Abridgement in 3 vols. 4to.; he wrote a Treatise on the Origin of the French; a Continuation of the History of the Turks; several Satires against the Ministry; History of a Mother and Son, 2 vols. 12mo.—Life by La Roque.

Meziriac (Claude Gaspard Bachet de), a French writer, was born at Bresse, of a noble family. He became a jesuit, and at the age of twenty was appointed professor of rhetoric at Milan. He was also a member of the French academy, and died in 1638, aged 60. He wrote a Life of Æsop; a Translation of Diophantus in Latin, with a Commentary; Poems, Latin and French; &c.—Moreri.

Micah, the sixth of the lesser prophets, lived in the reigns of Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah. He prophesied the captivity of the tribes, and their deliverance by Cyrus, also of the coming of the Messiah.—Gray's Key O. T.

Michael I. emperor of the East, succeeded to the throne in 811. He was a great prince and the father of his people; but was deposed by Leo the Armenian, his general, in 813. He then retired to a monastery, where he spent the remainder of his days in devotion.—Univ. Hist.

Michael II. was born in Upper Phrygia of an obscure family, but was ennobled by Leo the Armenian. That monarch afterwards sent him to prison, and condemned him to death; but the night previous to his intended execution Leo was assassinated, and Michael placed on the throne, A. D. 820. He endeavoured to force his subjects to celebrate the Jewish sabbath and the passover, and was guilty of great cruelties; on which his general Euphemius revolted, and proclaimed himself emperor, but was slain near Syracuse in Sicily. Michael died in 829.—Ibid.

Michael III. succeeded Theophilus his father in 842, under the regency of his mother Theodora; a princess of great virtue and talent, whom he compelled to enter a monastery with her daughters. He had at first for an associate in the empire Bardas, brother of Theodora; and at his instigation sent St. Ignatius, patriarch of Constantinople, into exile. Michael afterwards put Bardas to death, and elevated Basil the Macedonian to the title of Cæsar, by whom he was assassinated in 867.—Ibid.

Michael IV. or the Paphlagonian, from the country where he was born of obscure parentage. He obtained the imperial throne in 1034, by the influence of the empress Zoe; who, being enamoured of his person, murdered her husband Romanus Argyrus to obtain her wishes. Michael made war with success against the Saracens and Bulgarians; and afterwards retired to a monastery, where he died in 1041.—Ibid.

Michael V. succeeded his uncle the preceding emperor in 1041, after having been adopted by the empress Zoe, whom he exiled a few months afterwards, which so irritated the people that they deprived him of his eyes, and sent him to a monastery. Zoe and her sister Theodora then reigned in conjunction.—Ibid.

Michael VI. or the Warrior, reigned after the empress Theodora in 1056; but the year following he was compelled to relinquish the sceptre to Isaac Comnenus, on which Michael retired to a monastery.

Michael VII. emperor of the East, was the eldest son of Constantine Ducas and of Eudocia. That princess, a few months after the death of her husband, married Diogenes a Roman, whom she caused to be proclaimed emperor; but in 1071 the usurper was taken prisoner by the Turks, and Michael regained the throne. In 1078 Nicepherus took Constantinople by the help of the Turks, and Michael was obliged to retire to a monastery. He afterwards took orders, and became archbishop of Ephesus.—Ibid.

Michael VIII. Palæologus, regent of the empire during the minority of John Lascaris, whom he deprived of his throne and his eyes in 1260. The year following he retook Constantinople. He signed an act for effecting a union between the Greek and Latin churches, which however did not succeed. Pope Martin IV. excommunicated him, as the supporter of heresy and schism. Michael died in 1282. He is not to be confounded with Michael Palæologus, who was crowned emperor in 1214, governed the empire under his father Andronicus the elder, and died in 1220.—Univ. Hist. Moreri.

Michael (Fœdorowitz), czar of Russia, was elected in 1613, in times of great difficulty. He was deſcended from the czar John Baſilowitz; and diſtinguiſhed himſelf by his pacific ſpirit and generoſity. He died in 1645. —Univ. Hiſt.

Michael Angelo of Battles, a painter, was born at Rome in 1602, and died in that city in 1660. His real name was Cerynozzi, and he aſſumed the other from the ſubjects which exerciſed his pencil, and which he repreſented in a forcible manner.—Felibien vies des Peintres.

Michaelis (John David), profeſſor of divinity in the univerſity of Gottingen, who died in 1791, aged 75. His works are numerous and chiefly deſigned to explain the difficulties attending the ſtudy of the ſacred writings. That by which he is beſt known in this country is his Introduction to the New Teſtament, a tranſlation of which into Engliſh appeared firſt in 1761. The learned author afterwards greatly enlarged and enriched this valuable performance, which has been tranſlated by Mr. March in 3 vols. 8vo. There are, however, ſome hypothetical opinions in it which ought to be attended to with caution.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Micheli (Peter Anthony), an eminent botaniſt, was born at Florence in 1679. His parentage was very mean, and he became errand-boy to a bookſeller. Being fond of fiſhing, and told of a plant (the tithymalus characias) which had the quality of ſtupifying fiſhes, he had a great curioſity to diſcover and examine it. Some monks of the abbey of Vallombroſa, perceiving his genius, took him under their inſtruction; and he profited by their leſſons ſo as to gain the admiration and eſteem of ſeveral learned men, particularly Tournefort and Sherard, when they travelled into Italy. Micheli became aſſociate with Tilly in the ſuperintendance of the botanic garden at Piſa, director of that at Florence, and botaniſt to the grand duke, by whoſe order he made ſeveral journies into Italy, Greece, and Ægypt, to diſcover plants. He died in 1737. The principal of his numerous works are, Nova Plantarum Genera, printed at Florence 1729; and Catalogus Plantarum Horti Cæſarei Florentini, 1748, fol. Haller's Bibl. Botan.

Micheli (James-Bartholomew), an able mathematician, was born of an ancient family at Geneva in 1692. He entered into the French military ſervice, and became a captain. In 1738 he retired to his native country, where he applied chiefly to mathematical and philoſophical ſtudies. He conſtructed a number of charts, invented a new thermometer, and compoſed ſeveral Memoirs, printed at Baſle. Theſe are on Meteorology and the Temperature of the Globe; Light; the Comet of 1680; the Univerſal Deluge, &c. He ſurveyed the Glaciers of Switzerland, of which he took ſeveral views, which have been engraved. In the troubles which agitated his country he was a ſharer, and was impriſoned a long time by order of the government of Berne. He died in 1766. —Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

Mickle (William Julius), a poet, was born at Langholm, in the ſhire of Dumfries, in 1734, and educated at Edinburgh; after which he was apprenticed to a weaver, but abandoned that buſineſs and, viſiting England, became corrector of the Clarendon preſs at Oxford, during his reſidence in that city he printed ſome poems, and a pamphlet againſt Harwood's Liberal Tranſlation of the New Teſtament. But his greateſt work was a tranſlation of the Luſiad from the Portugueſe of Camoens. Of this poem there were two editions publiſhed in Mr. Mickle's life-time, and one ſince. It is a very accurate and elegant verſion, and was approved by Dr. Johnſon. In 1779 Mr. Mickle went out as ſecretary to commodore Johnſtone, and at Liſbon was appointed agent of the prizes. While there he wrote a pleaſing poem called Almida Hill. On his return to England he ſettled at Wheatley in Oxfordſhire, where he died in 1788. Beſides the above works he wrote a pamphlet in quarto on the affairs of the Eaſt India Company.—Europ. Mag.

Micrælius (John), a Lutheran divine, and profeſſor of divinity at Stettin, was born in Pomerania in 1597, and died in 1658. His principal works are, 1. Lexicon philoſophicum, 4to.; 2. Syntagma hiſtoriarum mundi et eccleſiæ, 8vo.; 3. Ethnophronium contra Gentiles de principiis religionis Chriſtianæ, 4to.; 4. Tractatus de copia verborum; 5. Archæologia; 6. Hiſtoria Eccleſiaſtica, 2 vols. 4to.; 7. Orthodoxia Lutherana contra Bergium.—Moreri.

Middleton (Richard de), an Engliſh ſcholaſtic, called the profound and abundant, was a monk of the order of Cordeliers, and diſtinguiſhed himſelf at Oxford and Paris. He wrote Commentaries on Peter Lombard, and other works. He died in 1304.—Pitts. Bale.

Middleton (ſir Hugh), a public-ſpirited gentleman, was a native of Denbigh, and a citizen of London; to which city he rendered the moſt important ſervice in ſupplying it with water, by uniting two ſtreams in Hertfordſhire and Middleſex, and conveying the ſame through various ſoils for a courſe of ſixty miles. This junction, called the New River, was begun in 1608, and completed in 1613. The projector encountered great difficulties in his undertaking, but his perſevering ſpirit and ingenuity overcame them all. King James I. who held ſome ſhares in the concern, conferred on Middleton firſt the honour of knighthood, and afterwards the title of baronet. He alſo incorporated the proprietors by the name of the New River Company. Sir Hugh, who greatly injured his circumſtances by this ſcheme, gave one ſhare to the Goldſmiths' Company, for the benefit of poor members of their body. He died about 1636.—Biog. Brit.

Middleton (William), a Welſh poet, as born at Gwenynog, in Denbighſhire, nd died about 1600. He ſerved in the ar- ies of queen Elizabeth, and afterwards com- anded a ſhip of war: and when at ſea turned e book of Pſalms into Welſh verſe. This ork was finiſhed in the Weſt Indies in 1595. e was alſo the author of a Grammar and rt of Poetry; publiſhed in 1593.—Owen's mb. Biog.

MIDDLETON (Conyers), a celebrated di- ne and critic, was the ſon of a clergyman, d born at York in 1683. He received his ademical education at Trinity college, Cam- idge, of which he was choſen fellow in 706. In 1717 he was created D. D. by andamus, on which occaſion he reſiſted the aim of Dr Bentley, regius profeſſor, to ex- bitant fees. This occaſioned a law ſuit, in hich Middleton triumphed. A perſonal mity was the conſequence of this affair; d when Bentley printed his propoſals for a w edition of the Greek Teſtament, Mid- eton attacked them with ſuch force that e deſign was abandoned. In 1724 Dr. Mid- eton was in Italy, and having a near ob- vation of the eccleſiaſtical pomp and cere- onies, he wrote his famous letter from ome, to ſhew that the religious rites of the oman church were drawn from the hea- ens. An attack on Dr. Waterland's Vin- ation of the Scripture in 1730, drew upon iddleton the charge of infidelity, and he rrowly eſcaped academical cenſure. The ar following he was appointed Woodwardian ofeſſor, but reſigned that place in 1734. 1741 appeared his Life of Cicero, in 2 vols. o.; afterwards reprinted in 3 vols. 8vo. is is a very curious and valuable work, and ighly neceſſary towards forming a juſt idea the character and writings of that great n, as well as exhibiting an exact picture the Roman republic in his time. In 1743 . Middleton publiſhed the Epiſtles of Cicero Brutus, and thoſe of Brutus to Cicero, in tin and Engliſh, with a vindication of their henticity. In 1747 appeared his Diſcourſe the Miraculous Powers ſuppoſed to have ſiſted in the Chriſtian Church from the lieſt ages, 4to. This performance gave at alarm to the clergy, and numerous an- ers were written againſt it. Middleton d in 1750; and in 1752 appeared all his rks, with the exception of the Life of cero, in 4 vols. 4to. His ſtyle is admirable, his learning was profound and multifa- s; but from his letters to lord Hervey it vident that he was ſceptical in his reli- us opinion.—Biog. Britt.

MIDDLETON (Thomas), a dramatic wri- , who wrote in conjunction with Johnſon, tcher, and Maſſinger. He died about 0.—Langbaine. Biog. Dram.

MIEL (Jan), a Flemiſh painter, was born r Antwerp in 1599. His pictures of ings are greatly admired. He died at rin in 1664. Many engravings have been e from his pictures.—D'Argenville.

MIERIS (Francis), the Elder, was born at Leyden in 1635, and died in 1681. He was the diſciple of Gerard Douw, whoſe manner he imitated. His pictures are very valuable. He had a ſon, William Mieris, called the Younger, who was a good landſcape painter, and a modeller in clay and wax. He died in 1747. His ſon Francis was alſo an artiſt in the ſame line.—Ibid.

MIGNARD (Nicholas), a French hiſtorical and portrait painter of eminence, was born at Troyes about 1608. He became rector of the academy of painting at Paris, and died in 1668.—Ibid.

MIGNARD (Peter), called the Roman from his long reſidence at Rome, was the brother of the preceding, and born in 1610. He was ennobled by Louis XIV. and died in 1695.—D'Argenville.

MIGNON (Abraham), a painter, was born at Frankfort in 1640. He painted flowers, inſects, and fruit, after nature, with wonderful exactneſs. He died in 1679.—Ibid.

MILBOURN (Luke), an Engliſh divine, was the ſon of Mr. Luke Milbourn, a nonconformiſt miniſter, who was ejected from the living of Wroxhall in Warwickſhire in 1662, and died at Newington in 1667. His ſon received a good education, became maſter of arts, and obtained the rectory of St. Ethelburg in London. He publiſhed ſermons, and theological tracts, 2 vols. 8vo.; a poetical verſion of the Pſalms; and ſeveral poems, for which Pope gives him a place in the Dunciad. He died in 1720.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

MILDMAY (ſir Walter), the founder of Emanuel college, Cambridge, was ſurveyor of the court of augmentations in the reign of Henry VIII. and privy counſellor, chancellor, and under treaſurer of the exchequer, in that of Elizabeth. He is celebrated for his uncommon merits in his private and public character. Sir Walter died in 1589.—Lloyd's State Worthies.

MILL (John), a learned Engliſh divine, was born at Shap in Weſtmoreland about 1645. He was firſt ſervitor, and afterwards fellow, of Queen's college, Oxford, where he proceeded to his degree of doctor in divinity. In 1681 he was appointed chaplain to the king, and in 1685 elected principal of Edmund hall. His inеſtimable edition of the Greek Teſtament, with various readings, was publiſhed about a fortnight before his death, in 1707.—Biog. Brit.

MILL (Henry), principal engineer to the New River company, was born in London about 1690, and educated at one of the univerſities. His ſkill in mechanics recommended him to the New River company, in whoſe ſervice he was for many years before his death in 1780. He was employed in various other works, particularly in ſupplying the town of Northampton with water, for which he received the freedom of that corporation.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

MILLAR (John), profeſſor of law at Glaſ-gow, was bred to the Scotch bar, and filled the chair in the univerſity with great reputation near forty years. His lectures were generally attended and greatly admired. He died in 1801. Mr. Miller publiſhed a good work entitled, the Origin of Diſtinction of Ranks in Society, 1 vol. 8vo.; and an Hiſtorical View of the Engliſh Government, 4to.—Monthly Mag.

MILLER (James), a divine and dramatic writer, was born in Dorſetſhire in 1703. He received his education at Wadham college, Oxford, and while there he wrote a comedy called, The Humours of Oxford, performed in 1729. He was the author of ſeveral other pieces, the laſt of which was Mahomet a tragedy, during the run of which the author died in 1744. He alſo publiſhed a volume of ſermons, and ſome poems. —Biog. Dram.

MILLER (Philip), a celebrated gardener, was born in Scotland in 1691. His father was gardener to the apothecaries' company at Chelſea, and his ſon ſucceeded him in 1722, He was a fellow of the royal ſociety, and of the botanical academy at Florence. He correſponded with Linnæus, who ſaid of his dictionary of gardening, non erit Lexicon Hortulanorum, ſed Botanicorum, and by foreigners he was emphatically called Hortulanorum princeps. On account of his infirmities he reſigned his office in the garden ſome time before his death, which happened in 1771. He left a large Herbarium of exotics in MS. Beſides his Gardener's Dictionary, folio, he publiſhed the Gardener's Calendar, 8vo.; Catalogus Plantarum Officinalium quæ in horto botanico Chelſeiano aluntur, 8vo.; and ſome papers in the Philoſophical Tranſactions.—Pulteney's Sketches of Botany.

MILLER (lady), an accompliſhed woman, of ſome literary talents, who publiſhed Letters from Italy, 3 vols. 8vo. She reſided at Bath Eaſton near Bath: where ſhe entertained ſeveral ingenious perſons, who compoſed a collection of poems, which was afterwards publiſhed. She died in 1781.—Gent. Mag.

MILLES (Jeremiah), a learned divine and antiquary, was born at High Cleer, in Hampſhire, of which place his father was miniſter, in 1713. He ſucceeded Dr. Lyttleton as dean of Exeter, and alſo as preſident of the ſociety of antiquaries, to whoſe Archæologia he was a great contributor. Dr. Milles was a zealous champion for the genuineneſs of the Rowley poems, of which he printed an eddition in 4to. with gloſſarial annotations. This work laid him open to the attacks of the critics, who were ſceptical on theſe ſuſpoſed relics of antiquity. The dean died in 1784.—Ibid.

MILLETIERE (Theophilus Brachet ſieur de la), a proteſtant advocate, who inſtigated the reformed at Rochelle to take up arms in defence of their religion. In 1628 he was arreſted at Toulouſe, and kept in priſon four years. On regaining his liberty he turned catholic, and wrote againſt the Calvaniſts. He died in 1665, deſpiſed by both parties.—Moreri.

MILLOT (Claude Francis Xavier), a French hiſtorian, was born at Beſançon in 1726. He was for ſome time a member of the ſociety of jeſuits, which order he was permitted to quit, after officiating as a preacher at Verſailles and Luneville. He was profeſſor of hiſtory at Parma many years, and on his return to France became tutor to the duke D'Enghien. Millot died in 1785. His works are, Elements of the Hiſtory of France, 3 vols. 12mo.; Elements of the Hiſtory of England, 3 vols.; Elements of Univerſal Hiſtory, 9 vols.; Hiſtory of the Troubadours, 3 vols.; Memoirs for a Hiſtory of Louis XIV. and XV. 6 vols.; Tranſlations of Orations from the Latin Hiſtorians.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

MILO, a famous athlete of Crotona in Italy, who is ſaid to have carried on his ſhoulders a bullock above forty yards, and then killed it with one blow of his fiſt, after which he made a meal of it in one day. He received the prize ſeven times at the Pythian games, and ſix at Olympia. Many other marvellous things are related of his enormous ſtrength. He was devoured by wild beaſts about 500 B.C.—Moreri.

MILO (Titus Annius), a Roman, who made ſeveral parties for the purpoſe of obtaining the conſulate. He was oppoſed by Clodius, and ſupported by ſome of the firſt members of the ſenate. In a quarrel between Clodius and Milo on the Appian way, the former was ſlain by ſome of the domeſtics of the latter. Cicero undertook the cauſe of Milo; but the roſtrum being ſurrounded by ſoldiers, and a crowd of people, who expreſſed their diſapprobation, he was ſo diſmayed as to be unable to proceed. Milo was exiled to Marſeilles, whither the orator ſent him his diſcourſe, on which he ſaid: "Oh Cicero! if thou hadſt ſpoken this, Milo would not have been now at Marſeilles."—Cicero. Orat. Life of Cicero.

MILTIADES, an Athenian general, who founded a colony in the Cherſoneſus, after conquering the people who oppoſed his eſtabliſhment. The Perſians, having declared war againſt Athens, advanced with a prodigious army towards Marathon. The Athenians, under Miltiades, were very few; yet by his ſuperior ſkill the Perſians were defeated with great ſlaughter, and part of their fleet deſtroyed, B.C. 490. After this he had the command of a naval ſquadron, with which he took ſeveral iſlands; but being obliged to raiſe the ſiege of Paros, and alſo dangerouſly wounded, he returned to Athens, where he was accuſed of holding intelligence with the Perſians, and condemned to death, which ſentence was altered to impriſonment. He died ſhortly after of his wound, B.C. 489.—Plutarch. Stanyan's Hiſt. Greece.

MILTON (John), an illuſtrious poet, was ne ſon of a ſcrivener in London, and born Bread-ſtreet in 1608. From St Paul's hool he went to Chriſt's college, Cam-idge, where he took his degrees in arts, ing deſigned for the church; but not aving an inclination to that calling, he turned to his father, who had retired from afineſs with a good fortune, and ſettled at orton in Buckinghamſhire. Here our poet rote his Comus, L'Allegro, Il Penſeroſo, d Lycidas, poems of ſuch merit as would one have immortalized his name. In 38 he travelled into France and Italy, here he was greatly careſſed by people of e higheſt rank and talents. On his re-rn to England he ſettled in London, and dertook the tuition of ſome youths, for hich profeſſion he appears by his Tractate . Education to have been well calculated. he troubles breaking out between the king d parliament, Milton engaged as a politi-l writer on the popular ſide; and having a eat animoſity to the hierarchy, he pub-hed ſome virulent pamphlets againſt the hops. In 1643 he married the daughter a juſtice of peace in Oxfordſhire; but his fe having been brought up with different ntiments from her huſband, and diſapprov-g of his zeal, eloped from him and return-to her friends. The impetuoſity of Mil-n's temper carried him into an opinion at this furniſhed him with a ſufficient ſon for taking another wife. He accord-gly publiſhed ſome tracts on divorce, to dicate this notion; which he was about carry into effect, when his wife's friends ought about a reconciliation. He con-ued an ardent champion for the rebellious rty, even after the murder of Charles I., ich ſanguinary deed he defended with his n againſt Salmaſius; but he was not diſ-tereſted in this, for the parliament re-rded him with one thouſand pounds. He o wrote with great aſperity againſt the g's book of prayers and meditations, en-led, the Icon Baſilikè. About this time was wholly deprived of his ſight, owing a natural weakneſs, and an intenſe ap-cation to his ſtudies. In 1652 he loſt his fe, and ſoon afterwards took another. hough he was a determined republican, d wrote with energy and intemperance inſt monarchical government, "the very ppings of which," he ſaid, "would ſup-rt a commonwealth," yet he readily ſub-tted to the uſurpation of Cromwell, to om he became Latin ſecretary. Milton deavoured to prevent the reſtoration; ich event he had undoubted cauſe to dread, nſidering the active part taken by him in rebellion. And when the ancient con-tution was re-eſtabliſhed, he was excepted t of the act of indemnity, on which he pt himſelf concealed for ſome time. By e kindneſs, however, of ſir William Da-nant, and others, he obtained his pardon; on after which he loſt his ſecond wife and was not long without another. In the time of the plague he removed with his family to Chalfont, in Buckinghamſhire, where he completed his Paradiſe Loſt, which was printed firſt in 1667. For this immortal work he had only fifteen pounds, and that by inſtalments. For the idea of it he is ſaid to have been indebted to an Italian drama on the Fall of Man; and it is certain that he had himſelf an intention at firſt of writing only a tragedy on the ſame ſubject. As the work grew under his hand, his ſoaring genius gave it the form and conſiſtence, the variety and elegance, of an epic poem. After this he engaged in another called Paradiſe Regained; the occaſion of which was as follows: John Elwood, the quaker, who was his amanuenſis, calling upon him at Chalfont, and the converſation turning upon Milton's great work, Elwood obſerved, "Thou has ſaid much upon Paradiſe Loſt, but what haſt thou to ſay upon Paradiſe Found?" Milton pauſed, and the next time they met he ſhewed Elwood the latter poem, ſaying, "This is owing to you." The Paradiſe Regained, though poſſeſſing many beauties, is in all reſpects inferior to the Paradiſe Loſt; yet it is remarkable that the author gave it the preference. Milton died at his houſe in Bunhill-row in 1674, and lies interred in the pariſh church of St. Giles, Cripplegate, where a monument has been erected to his memory, and there is another in Weſtminſter-abbey, ſet up by auditor Benſon. But his beſt monument is Paradiſe Loſt. This poem was unknown in the poet's lifetime, and many years after. It was not till Mr. Addiſon gave his admirable critique upon it in the Spectator, that the beauties of it became generally underſtood, and the whole merits of the poem to be admired. Mr. Dryden, indeed, had given his approbation of the work and his opinion of the author in an excellent epigram, which is uſually prefixed to the Paradiſe Loſt, or ſubjoined to the portrait of the author. Beſides this and the other poems mentioned above, Milton wrote a drama on the Greek Model, entitled, Samſon Agoniſtes, which poſſeſſes uncommon beauties, though not adapted to theatrical repreſentation. His Comus has been ſeveral times performed, and the firſt time was for the benefit of the author's granddaughter, Mrs Clarke, a widow in reduced circumſtances. On that occaſion Dr. Samuel Johnſon wrote a prologue. The beſt edition of Milton's poetical works is that of Mr. Todd, in 6 vols. 8vo. The late Mr. Thomas Warton publiſhed his ſmaller poems in one volume, 8vo. enriched with very curious notes. Biſhop Newton and Mr. Hayley have written the life of Milton, the firſt as a biographer, and the latter as a poet. Among the proſe works of Milton we ſhall only mention his Hiſtory of England, 1 vol. 4to. which comes down only to the conqueſt; and his Areopagitica, in which he pleaded the cauſe of a free preſs with great force. The whole of his political works have been printed in 3 vols. folio, and alſo in quarto and octavo. Of the religion of Milton it is difficult to ſpeak. In his youth he was a calviniſt, but afterwards he became inclined to arminianiſm. From being a preſbyterian he turned independant, and laſtly he ſeems to have joined no particular communion. He was, however, a firm believer in the truths of revelation. When at Cambridge he was ſo handſome as to be called the Lady of Chriſt's college; and he retained his comelineſs to the laſt. He died in good circumſtances. By his firſt wife he had three daughters, two of whom uſed to read to him in eight languages, though they underſtood only their own, it being a uſual ſaying with him that "one tongue was enough for a woman."—Biſhop Newton's Life of Milton. Biog. Brit.

Mimnermus, a Greek poet and muſician, was a native of Colophon, and flouriſhed in the time of Solon. He excelled in elegiac poetry, the invention of which has been aſcribed to him. Some fragments of his are in the collections of Stobæus, 1568, octavo. —Voſſius de Poet. Græc.

Minos I. the ſon of Jupiter and Europa, reigned in Crete B.C. 1432. He founded ſeveral cities, and reformed his ſubjects by excellent laws and cuſtoms. The laws of Minos were in force even in the time of Plato, above a thouſand years after the death of the legiſlator. His grandſon Minos II. exerciſed juſtice with ſo much ſtrictneſs as to be made by the fabuliſts one of the judges of the infernal regions.

Minos III. of the ſame family as the preceding, reigned B.C. 1300. He imitated the ſeverity of his anceſtors in the adminiſtration of juſtice, and made ſeveral new laws, which he pretended to have received from Jupiter. He defeated the Athenians and Megarians, againſt whom he declared war, to avenge the death of his ſon Androſus. He took Megara, and reduced Athens to ſuch extremity that the people were obliged to make peace on condition of delivering to him yearly ſeven youths of each ſex, whence aroſe the fable of the Minotaur.—Stanyan. Moreri.

Minot (Lawrence), an Engliſh poet, who is ſuppoſed to have died about 1352. Mr. Tyrwhit firſt diſcovered his MSS. in the Cottonian library, and they were publiſhed in 8vo. in 1795.—Gent. Mag.

Minellius (John), a Dutch critic, was born at Rotterdam about 1625, and died in 1683. He publiſhed editions of ſeveral of the Latin claſſics with curious notes.—Moreri.

Minutius Felix, a famous Roman orator in the 3d century. He wrote a dialogue under the title of Octavius, in which he introduces a pagan and a chriſtian diſputing. It is a production of conſiderable merit, and written with eloquence in favour of chriſtianity. The beſt editions are that of Davis at Cambridge in 1707, and that of Leyden 1709, both in 8vo.—Dupin.

Mirabaud (John Baptiſte), perpetual ſecretary to the French academy, who died in 1760, aged 86. He was at firſt a member of the congregation of the oratory, and afterwards in the army. His works are, Tranſlations of Taſſo's Jeruſalem, and Arioſto's Orlando into French; Alphabet de la Fee Gracienſe, 1734. In 1770 was publiſhed under his name, but falſely, an atheiſtical book, entitled, the Syſtem of Nature, two vols. This ſtupid attack on religious truth has been tranſlated into Engliſh. —Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

Mirabeau (Victor Riquetti, marquis de), was born of an ancient family in Provence, but originally of Naples, and died in 1790. He was one of the principal inſtitutors of a political ſect called Economiſts. For his Theorie de l'Impot, a tract in which he made ſome free remarks on the finances and government he was ſent to the Baſtile for ſome time. His principal work, was entituled, L'Ami des Hommes (the Friend of Mankind), 3 vols. 12mo. 1755, and afterwards publiſhed in 8 vols. In this performance the author diſplayed a conſiderable knowlege of rural and political economy, and threw out ſome judicious hints for the good of ſociety. He alſo wrote Hommes a celebrer, 2 vols. 8vo.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

Mirabeau (Honore Gabriel Riquetti, count de), one of the leaders in the French revolution, was born in 1749. After ſerving ſome time in the army he eſpouſed a rich heireſs of Aix, but he ſoon ſquandered away the fortune he received with her and plunged himſelf in debt. He was confined in different priſons, and on obtaining his liberty eloped to Holland with the daughter of the preſident of the parliament of Beiancon. For this he was afterwards impriſoned in the caſtle of Vincennes, and remained there a conſiderable time. In 1780 he regained his liberty, and his firſt act was to reclaim his firſt wife, who refuſed to live with him. He had the audacity to plead his cauſe before the parliament of Aix, but without ſucceſs. The French revolution offered Mirabeau an ample element for his activity. Imbibing the deluſive doctrine of equality, he opened a ſhop, over the door of which was inſcribed Mirabeau, dealer in drapery. He was elected deputy of the third eſtate of Aix, and the courtiers termed him the plebian count. In the national aſſembly he diſplayed great powers as an orator, but was extremely violent and vindictive. He died in the midſt of his political career, as it is ſuppoſed of poiſon, 1791, and his obſequies were celebrated with great pomp. Mirabeau wrote, 1. A Compariſon between the great Condé and Scipio Africanus; 2. Hiſtory of Pruſſia under Frederick the Great, 8 vols. 4to.; 3. Collection of his Labours in the National Aſſembly, 5 vols. 8vo.; Original Letters, containing an Account of is Life and Amours, 4 vols. 8vo.; 4. Secret ſtory of the Court of Berlin, 2 vols. 8vo. his book was burnt by the common execu-ner; 5. On Lettres de Cachet, 8vo.; 6. veral political pamphlets.—Ibid.

MIRABELLA (Vincent), an Italian hiſto-n, who died in Sicily in 1674. He is nown by a curious but ſcarce Hiſtory of e Ancient Syracuſe, printed at Naples in 13, folio, under the title of Dichiarazione lla Pianta dell Antiche Syracuſe.—Tira-chi.

MIRANDULA (John Picus, lord of), a ce-brated genius, was born in 1463. In his uth he gave aſtoniſhing proofs of his ge-us, and when little more than twenty he up in all the univerſities of Italy a mber of difficult problems in the ſciences, hich he engaged publicly to defend. Pope nocent VII. however condemned, ſome of eſe as heretical, and Picus, was prohibited m lecturing upon them. In 1491 he re-unced all other learning, and devoted him-f to the ſtudy of divinity. This promiſing ung man died in 1494. Though his life s ſhort he compoſed ſeveral works, which re printed together at Bologna in 1496.

MIRANDULA (John Francis Picus, prince , nephew of the preceding, was born about 69. In 1499 he ſucceeded to his paternal ates, but his two brothers combining againſt n, with the aſſiſtance of the emperor Max-ilian I. and the duke of Ferrara, they drove n from his principality in 1502. He was cored by pope Julius II. in 1511, but again elled by the French the year following. 1515 he recovered his territories, and con-ued in the quiet poſſeſſion of them, till 33, when Galeoti Picus, his nephew, en-d his caſtle in the night, and aſſaſſinated with his eldeſt ſon. He was a lover of rning, and wrote ſeveral books.—Tira-bi.

MIRE, or Miræus (Aubert), a learned di-e, was born at Bruſſels in 1573. He was oner and librarian to Albert duke of Auſ-, and died at Antwerp in 1640. He te Opera Hiſtorica et Diplomatica, 2 vols. o; Elogia illuſtrium Belgii Scriptorum, ; Vita Juſti Lipſii, 8vo; Origines Be-dictinæ; Origines Carthuſianorum, 8vo.; liotheca Eccleſiaſtica, 2 vols. folio; &c. Moreri.

MIREVELT (Michael Janſon), a Dutch ter, was born at Delft in 1588, and died re in 1641. He painted portraits and hiſ-cal ſubjects.—Houbraken.

MISSON (Maximilian), an eminent law-, who diſtinguiſhed himſelf by his plead-s before the parliament of Paris in behalf the proteſtants. He retired to England the revocation of the edict of Nantes, and rwards travelled as tutor to an Engliſh leman. He died at London in 1721. publiſhed, 1. A Voyage to Italy, 3 vols. no.; 2. La Theatre ſacra des Cevennes. is is a ſuperſtitious book, in which the hor betrayed his credulity by eſpouſing the cauſe of the French prophets; 3. Memoirs of a Traveller in England, 12mo.—Moreri.

MITCHELL (Joſeph), a dramatic writer, was born in Scotland in 1684. He was patronized by ſir Robert Walpole, but died poor, owing to his extravagance, in 1738. He wrote, 1. The Fatal Extravagance, a tragedy; 2. The Highland Fair, a ballad opera, 8vo; 3. Poems, 2 vols. 8vo.—Biog. Dram.

MITHRIDATES king of Pontus, furnamed the Great, ſucceeded his father at the age of 11 years, B.C. 123. He murdered his mother, who had been left co-heireſs of the kingdom; and alſo his two nephews. For his treachery the Roman ſenate declared war againſt him, and in revenge he ordered all the Romans in his dominions to be maſſacred. He then marched with a powerful army againſt Aquilius, whom he defeated; but Sylla, after ſome victories, forced Mithridates to make peace B.C. 84. He renewed the war in alliance with Tigranes king of Armenia. After conquering Bithynia, Mithridates laid ſiege to Cyzicum, in the Propontis; but Lucullus having marched to its relief beſieged Mithridates in his camp. The king of Pontus defeated the Romans in two combats, but was completely vanquiſhed in a third. Glabrio being ſent to ſuperſede Lucullus in the command, this change was advantageous to Mithridates, who recovered the beſt part of his kingdom. Pompey, however, obtained a great victory over him near the Euphrates, B.C. 65. Mithridates fled to Tigranes, who refuſed him an aſylum. He then ſent ambaſſadors to Pompey to ſue for peace, but the Romans inſiſted upon having his perſon. The people of Pontus in the mean time proclaimed Pharnaces in the room of his father Mithridates, who put an end to himſelf, B.C. 64—Plutarch. Stanyan.

MITTARELLI (John Benedict), an hiſtorical writer, was born at Venice in 1708. He became a monk, and at laſt general of his order; which was that of the Camaldulenſes. His greateſt work is the hiſtory of that fraternity, 8 vols. folio. He died in 1777.

MOAVIA, general of the caliph Othman, whoſe death he avenged, after which he obtained the ſovereignty about A.D 643. He took Rhodes, where he deſtroyed the famous Coloſſus in 653. He afterwards ravaged Sicily, and razed Syracuſe. But he was unſucceſsful in his attempts upon Conſtantinople, which he beſieged ſeven years, and being defeated purchaſed a peace by paying a yearly tribute to the emperor of the eaſt. At this famous ſiege the Greek fire was diſcovered and made uſe of by the beſieged to annoy their aſſailants. The caliph died in 680.—Mod. Un. Hiſt. Knolles's Hiſt. Turks.

MOCENIGO (Lewis), a noble Venetian whoſe family gave ſeveral doges to that republic, and he obtained that dignity himſelf in 1570. He joined with the pope and Spain against the Turks, who had taken the isle of Cyprus. Sebastian Veneri commanded the Venetian gallies; Marc Antony Colonna those of the pope; and Don John of Austria the Spanish. This allied force gained the famous battle of Lepanto, Oct. 7, 1571. The doge died in 1576. One of the same family, Andrew Mocenigo, who lived in 1522, was employed in several public trusts by the republic, and wrote two historical works, 1. De Bello Turcarum; 2. La Guerra di Cambrai.—Moreri.

Modrevius (Andrew Fricius), secretary to Sigismund Augustus king of Poland. He wrote several works, of which the best is the treatise de Republica Emendanda, printed in 1554. Modrevius was very unsettled in his opinions, being at one time a Lutheran, and another a Socinian. His Treatise on Original Sin is in favour of the latter sect.—Moreri.

Moebius (Godfrey), professor of medicine at Jena, was born in Thuringia in 1611, and died at Halle in Saxony in 1664. His works are, 1. Physiological Principles of Medicine, 4to.; 2. Abridgement of the Elements of Medicine, folio; 3. Anatomy of Camphire, 4to.; all in Latin. His son Godfrey was also a physician, and published Synopsis Medicinæ Practicæ, fol. 1667.—Ibid.

Moebius (George), a Lutheran divine, was born at Laucha in Thuringia in 1616. He was professor of theology at Leipsic, and died there in 1697. Moebius wrote a learned and able work on the Origin, Propagation, and Continuance of the Pagan Oracles, against Vandale, 12mo.—Ibid.

Moine (Stephen le), a protestant divine, was born at Caen in 1624. He became professor of divinity at Leyden, where he died in 1689. He wrote Varia Sacra, 2 vols. 4to.; and other works.—Ibid.

Moine (Peter le), a French poet, was born at Chaumont in Bassigny in 1602. He was a jesuit, and wrote an epic poem on St. Louis, and some other pieces, in prose and verse. He died in 1672.—Ibid.

Moine (Francis le), a French painter, was born at Paris in 1688. He painted the apotheosis of Hercules in the saloon at Versailles, for which he was appointed first painter to the king. He stabbed himself in a fit of lunacy in 1737.—D'Argenville.

Moine (Abraham le), was born in France at the end of the seventeenth century. On account of his religion he came to London, where he officiated to a congregation of French protestants, and died in 1760. He translated into French bishop Gibson's Pastoral Letters; bishop Sherlock on the Witnesses of the Resurrection; and the same prelate's Use and End of Prophecy, 8vo. To these translations he prefixed curious and learned dissertations.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Moivre (Abraham de), an able mathematician, was born at Vitry in Champagne in 1661. On the revocation of the edict of Nantes he came to London, where he perfected his studies in the mathematics, and was chosen fellow of the royal society. He also became a member of the academy of sciences at Paris. His merit was so well known in the first learned body, that he was appointed to decide in the famous dispute between Newton and Leibnitz on the differential calculus. De Moivre wrote an excellent Treatise on Chances, 8vo. This is a standard book on the subject. He was also the author of another on Life Annuities, and of several valuable papers in the Philosophical Transactions. He died in 1754. To his other excellent qualities he added that of being a sincere christian; and when a person once said to him, by way of compliment, that all mathematicians denied religion, De Moivre answered, "I will prove that I am a Christian by pardoning the foolish insult you have committed."—Hutton. Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Mola (Peter Francis), a painter, was born in the Milanese in 1621. He was the disciple of D'Arpino, and of Albano; but by studying the works of other masters, he acquired a style of his own. He painted history and landscape, and died in 1666.—Ibid.

Mola (John Baptist), a painter, was born about 1620. He studied at Paris under Vouet, and afterwards attended Albano at Bologna. He excelled in landscape painting, and the foliage of his trees is admirable.—Ibid.

Molamis or Vermeulin (John), professor of theology at Louvaine, was born at Lisle in 1533, and died in 1585. His works are; 1. An edition of Usuard's Martyrology, with an appendix and notes, 8vo.; 2. Natales Sanctorum Belgii, 12mo; 3. Historia SS. Maginum et Picturarum, 8vo.; 4. De Canonicis, 1670. This is a curious and learned book. 5. De Fide Hereticis servanda; 6. De Piis Testamentatis; 7. Theologiæ practicæ Compendium; 8. Militia sacraducum Brabantiæ Rerum Lovenensium. He is not to be confounded with Gerard Walter Molamis, a Lutheran divine who died in 1722. He held a correspondence with Bossuet concerning a union between the Lutherans and catholics.—Ibid.

Molay (James de), the last grand-master of the order of Templars. The prodigious wealth of the knights having excited the envy and hatred of Philip the Fair, king of France, he resolved to suppress the order. Accordingly a violent prosecution broke out against the knights on charges the most absurd and abominable. Molay was tried, condemned, and burnt alive near Paris, March 11, 1314. He endured his sufferings with the greatest fortitude, and vindicated the innocence of his order to the last.—Vertot's Hist. of the Knights of Malta.

Molesworth (Robert, lord), an ingenious nobleman, was the son of a merchant at Dublin, and born there in 1656. He contributed so effectually to the revolution that king William admitted him of the privy council, and ſent him ambaſſador to the court of Denmark. Having given ſome cauſe of offence at Copenhagen he was diſmiſſed, and on his return to England he wrote an account of Denmark, which is ſuppoſed to be ſomewhat partial though well written, and was once very popular. George I appointed him a commiſſioner of trade and plantations, and advanced him to the Iriſh peerage in 1716. He died in 1725.—Biog. Brit.

MOLIERE (John Baptiſte), a French comic writer, whoſe real name was Pocquelin, was born at Paris in 1620. His father, who was a tapeſtry maker, intended him for the ſame buſineſs; but young Pocquelin being in the habit of viſiting the theatre, conceived a violent inclination for the ſtage. At the age of fourteen he commenced his ſtudies under the jeſuits, and made a rapid progreſs in the belles lettres. His father becoming reduced, the youth aſſociated himſelf with ſome perſons of his own age, who had a like attachment to dramatic repreſentation. It ſeems in conſequence of this connexion that he took the name of Moliere; and it is rather remarkable that this cuſtom of changing their names has been common to other actors in France and England. He now joined a company of comedians who acted at Lyons, and in 1653 he produced in the ſame party his firſt comedy, called L'Etourdi, or the Blunderer. This piece was received with great applauſe, and procured him the friendſhip of the prince de Conti, who had known the author at college. That prince offered to make him his ſecretary, which honourable ſtation Moliere declined, ſaying, that, "though he was a paſſable author, he ſhould make but a bad ſecretary." After performing at various places, the company of Moliere viſited Paris, where they performed ſeveral of his plays before Louis XIV. who took the company into his own ſervice, and gave their leader a penſion. His laſt piece, the Hypochondriac, or le Malade Imaginaire, occaſioned his death, for by his exertions in performing the principal character he was ſeized with a convulſion, of which he died in 1673. The archbiſhop of Paris refuſed to allow his remains to be interred in conſecrated ground on account of his profeſſion, till he was compelled to it by the king. Moliere left a widow, who married a comedian named Guerin, and died in 1728, aged 92. The works of Moliere have been often printed; the beſt edition is that of Paris in 1772, in 6 vols. 8vo. They have been tranſlated into Engliſh; and ſeveral of his comedies have been adapted to our ſtage with ſucceſs. Moliere is juſtly called the French Ariſtophanes.—Moreri.

MOLIERES (Joſeph Privat de), a French philoſopher, was born at Taraſcon of a noble family in 1677. He received his education in the congregation of the oratory, after which he went to Paris to converſe with Malebranche, of whoſe works he was paſſionately fond. The academy of ſciences admitted him a member in 1721, and two years afterwards he obtained the chair of philoſophy in the royal college. He died in 1742. His works are; 1. Mathematical Leſſons neceſſary for underſtanding the Principles of Philoſophy, 12mo.; 2. Leſſons of Philoſophy, or the Elements of Phyſics, determined ſolely by the laws of mechanics, explained in the royal college, 3 vols. 8vo. In this work he endeavoured to improve upon the ſyſtems of Des Cartes and Newton. 3. Elements of Geometry, 12mo.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

MOLINA (Louis), a celebrated jeſuit, was born at Cuenca in New Caſtille, of a noble family, in 1535. He completed his ſtudies at Coimbra, after which he was profeſſor of divinity at Ebora twenty years. He died at Madrid in 1600. Molina wrote Commentaries on the Summa of Aquinas; a treatiſe de Juſtitia et Jure; another de Concordia Gratiæ et Liberi arbitrii, 4to. This laſt is a work of merit, and occaſioned great diſputes afterwards between the jeſuits and dominicans, the latter order accuſing Molina of reviving pelagianiſm. There was a Spaniſh lawyer of this name who wrote a learned work on the heriditary eſtates of the nobles of Spain.—Moreri.

MOLINET (John), librarian and almoner to Margaret of Auſtria, and canon of Valenciennes, wrote ſeveral works, the moſt known of which is a curious one, entitled, Les Dits et Faits de Molinet, 8vo. He alſo wrote a Commentary on the Romance of the Roſe. The author died in 1607.—Moreri.

MOLINET (Claude du), canon-regular and procurer-general of the congregation of St. Genevieve, was born at Chalons in 1620, and died in 1687. He publiſhed, 1. An edition of the Epiſtles of Stephen, biſhop of Tournay, with notes; 2. Hiſtory of the Popes from Medals, fol. Latin; 3. On the Origin and Antiquity of the Canons, Regular and Secular; 4. On the Mitre of the Ancients; 5. The Cabinet of Saint Genevieve, fol.—Ibid.

MOLINETTI (Anthony), an Italian phyſician, was a native of Venice, and practiſed medicine at Padua with great reputation. He died at Venice in 1675. The work by which he is beſt known is a Treatiſe on the Organs of Senſe, in Latin, printed at Padua in 1669, 4to.—Ibid.

MOLINOS (Michael), a Spaniſh divine, was born at Saragoſſa in 1627. He publiſhed a book called the Spiritual Guide, in which he maintained that man muſt annihilate himſelf, or reduce his mind to an abſolute quieſcence, in order to enjoy God. For this he was ſent to the priſon of the inquiſition, where he died in 1696. The religious opinions of Molinos occaſioned great diſputes in France, where they were known by the name of quietiſm, on account of the paſſive diſpoſition of mind which they inculcate. Fenelon and Madame Guyon were the great advocates and improvers of this ſyſtem.—Ibid.

Moll (Herman), an Engliſh geographer, whoſe maps were once held in conſiderable eſteem. He died in 1732.

Moller (Henry), a proteſtant divine who diſtinguiſhed himſelf as Hebrew profeſſor at Wirtemburg. He died at Hamburg, of which place he was a native, in 1589, aged 59. He wrote Commentaries on Iſaiah and the Pſalms; and ſome Latin poems.—Melch, Adam, vit. Germ. Theol.

Moller (Daniel William), a native of Preſburg. He travelled through the greateſt part of Europe, and became profeſſor of hiſtory and metaphyſics, alſo librarian in the univerſity of Altorf. He died in 1712, aged 70. His works are: 1. Meditatio de Hungaricis, quibuſdam Infectis Prodigioſis ex ære una cum nive in agro delapſis, 12mo.; 2. Opuſcula Ethica et Problematico-critica, 12mo.; 3. Opuſcula Medico hiſtorico-philologica; 4. Menſa Poetica; 5. Indiculus Philologorum ex Germania oriundorum, 4to.—Moreri.

Moller (John), a learned writer, was born at Fleinſburg in the duchy of Sleſwick, in 1661, and died in 1725. His works are: 1. Introductio ad Hiſtoriam Ducatuum Sleſwicenſis et Holſtacici, 8vo.; 2. Cimbria Litterata, 3 vols. fol.; 3. Iſagoge ad Hiſtoriam Cherſoneſi Cimbriacæ, 8vo.; 4. De Cornutis et Hermaphroditus, 4to.—Ibid.

Molloy (Charles), a dramatic writer, was a native of Dublin, and educated in the college of that city. He afterwards became a ſtudent of the Middle Temple, and was the editor of a periodical paper, called Common Senſe. He died in 1767. His plays are, The Perplexed Couple; The Coquet; The Half-pay Officers; comedies.—Biog. Dram.

Molo, a rhetorician who went to Rome B.C. 87. He taught rhetoric with great reputation, and had Cicero for an auditor, who followed him to Rhodes to profit by his inſtructions. Some years afterwards Molo was ſent ambaſſador by his countrymen to the Roman ſenate, and was received with great honour.

Molsa (Francis Maria), an Italian poet of the 16th century. He was a native of Modena, and a man of learning, but his manners were licentious. He died in 1544. He wrote poems in Latin and Italian of great merit. The former are in the Deliciæ Poetarum Italorum, and the latter were printed ſeparately in 1750, 2 vols. 8vo.—Tiraboſchi.

Molsa (Tarquinia), grand-daughter of the preceding, was one of the moſt accompliſhed women of her time. She underſtood Latin, Greek, and Hebrew; and was an extraordinary proficient in muſic. The Roman ſenate beſtowed the rights of citizenſhip upon her and her family in 1600. She tranſlated ſeveral pieces from the Greek and Latin.—Ibid.

Molyneux (ſir William), a gallant knight in the reign of Henry VIII. who diſplayed great bravery at the battle of Flodden-field. On his death-bed he gave this advice to his ſon; "Let the underwood grow; the tenants are the ſupport of a family, and the commonalty are the ſtrength of a kingdom. Improve this fairly; but force not violently, either your bounds or rents, above your forefathers."—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Molyneux (William), an ingenious mathematician, was born at Dublin in 1656, and educated at Trinity college in that city, after which he entered as a ſtudent of the Middle Temple, London. The philoſophical ſociety, eſtabliſhed at Dublin in 1683, owed its origin to his endeavours, and he became the firſt ſecretary. Soon after he was appointed ſurveyor-general of the works, and chief engineer. In 1685 he was choſen a member of the royal ſociety, and in 1689 he ſettled with his family at Cheſter, where he employed himſelf in finiſhing his Treatiſe on Dioptrics, which was publiſhed in 1692. In this year he returned to Dublin, and was choſen one of the repreſentatives for that city. He died in 1698. Beſides the above he wrote Sciothericum Teleſcopium, or a deſcription of a Teleſcopic Dial invented by him; alſo the Caſe of Ireland ſtated, in Relation to its being bound by Acts of Parliament in England; ſome papers in the Philoſophical Tranſactions; and ſeveral letters between him and Mr. Locke. His ſon Samuel was born at Cheſter in 1689. He became ſecretary to George II. when prince of Wales, and was diſtinguiſhed by his ſkill in aſtronomy. He improved the method of making teleſcopes and preſented one made by himſelf to the king of Portugal. But being appointed a commiſſioner of the admiralty, a ſtop was put to his enquiries. He gave his papers on the ſubject to Dr. Smith, profeſſor of aſtronomy at Cambridge, who printed them in his Treatiſe on Optics.—Biog. Brit.

Momeritius (Bonius), a writer of Milan, whoſe curious work, entitled The Lives of the Saints, 2 vols. folio, is very ſcarce, and much ſought for. It was printed about 1479. There are alſo poems by this author.—Moreri.

Monaldeschi (Lewis), a gentleman of Orvietta, was born in 1326. He lived at Rome, where he wrote in Italian, Roman Annals from 1328 to 1340. He died about 1380.—Tiraboſchi.

Monaldeschi (John), equerry to queen Chriſtina of Sweden, who having written an account of his miſtreſs's intrigues, was put to death by her orders at Fontainbleau 1657. This ſanguinary deed, in a country where ſhe was only a gueſt, gave great and juſt diſpleaſure to the French government.—Moreri.

Monamy (Peter), a painter of ſea-pieces, was born at Jerſey. There is a large picture painted by him in painters' hall. He died in Weſtminſter in 1749.—Vertue. Pilkington.

Monantheiul (Henry de), profeſſor of mathematics at Paris in 1577. He was alſo dean of the faculty of phyſic in that univerſity, and publiſhed there a Latin tranſlation of Ariſtotle's Mechanics, with a Commentary.—Moreri.

Monardes (Nicholas), a Spaniſh phyſician, was born at Seville. His work on the drugs of the Indies procured him a great reputation. He was alſo the author of ſome other medical performances, and died in 1577.—Ibid.

Monceaux (Francis de), a native of Arras, who was ſent ambaſſador to Henry IV. by Alexander Farneſe. He wrote, 1. Bucolica Sacra, 8vo, Paris, 1589; 2. Aaron Largatus ſive de Vitulo aureo, lib. ii. 8vo.; L'Hiſtoire des Apparitiones divine faites à Moyſe, Arras, 1524, 4to.; 4. Templum Auſtitiæ, a poem, 8vo.; 5. Lucubrationes in Cantici Canticorum, 4to.—Ibid.

Monconys (Balthaſar de), the author of travels to the Eaſt, in 3 vols. 4to. was a native of Lyons, where he died in 1665.—Ibid.

Moncrif (Francis Auguſtin Paradis de), a member of the French academy; was born at Paris in 1687. He wrote An Eſſay on the Neceſſity and Means of Pleaſing; The Friendly Rivals, a romance; the Abderites, a comedy; Poems and ſmall pieces, the whole collected into 4 vols. 12mo. He died in 1770.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

Mondonville (John Joſeph Caſſanea de), a celebrated muſician, was born at Narbonne in 1715, and died at Belleville, near Paris in 1772. He excelled on the violin, and his ſonatas, ſymphonies, and motets, ſhew great taſte and judgment. He alſo compoſed ſome religious pieces in a fine ſtyle, as Magnus Dominus, the Jubilate, and Dominus regnavit.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

Mongault (Nicholas Hubert de), a learned eccleſiaſtic, was born at Paris in 1674, and educated in the congregation of the oratory. He became a member of the academy of inſcriptions, and tutor to the duke de Chartres. The abbey of Charnouve, was the reward of his ſervices, after which he obtained that of Villeneuve. He died in 1746. His works are; a French tranſlation of Herodian, and another of Cicero's Letters to Atticus; and diſſertations in the Memoirs of the Academy of Inſcriptions.—Moreri.

Monin (John Edward du), a modern Latin poet, was born in the province of Burgundy, and publiſhed in the reign of Henry II. of France, a number of poems, in Latin and French, which have been highly celebrated. The author was aſſaſſinated in 1586, aged twenty-nine.—Moreri.

Monk (George), duke of Albemarle, was born of an ancient family at Potheridge, near Torrington in Devonſhire, in 1608. Being a younger ſon, he entered as a volunteer under his relation ſir Richard Grenville. On the breaking out of the war between Charles I. and the Scotch in 1639, he obtained a colonel's commiſſion, and attended his majeſty in both his expeditions to the north. When the Iriſh rebellion began in 1641, he was ſent thither, and did ſuch ſervice that the lords juſtices appointed him governor of Dublin. On his return to England he was ſent to relieve Nantwich, where he was taken priſoner by the army belonging to the parliament, by whom he was ſent to the Tower, where he remained till 1646, when the royal cauſe being ruined, he obtained his liberty on condition of taking a command in Ireland, where he concluded a peace with the rebels, which diſpleaſed the parliament, who paſſed a vote of cenſure upon him for it. Cromwell, who thought highly of his military talents, made him lieutenant-general, and gave him the chief command in Scotland. But the ſagacious uſurper had ſtrong ſuſpicions of Monk's ſincerity and not long before his death wrote him a letter to which he added this poſtſcript: "There be that tell me that there is a certain cunning fellow in Scotland, called George Monk, who is ſaid to lie in wait there to introduce Charles Stuart: I pray you uſe your diligence to apprehend him and ſend him up to me." Monk acted with great caution after the protector's death, and though he marched into England with a powerful army, no party could gueſs to which ſide he inclined. The republican faction courted him, and the royaliſts were afraid that he intended to ſet up for himſelf. Moderate men preſſed him to call a free parliament, to which meaſure he acceded, as the one moſt favourable to his own views. This aſſembly voted the reſtoration of the king, with whom the general had carried on a ſecret correſpondence. Thus was this great event brought about by his prudence without bloodſhed. Honours were deſervedly heaped upon him, and he was equally eſteemed both by the king and people. He was created duke of Albemarle with a penſion of ſeven thouſand pounds a year. In 1664 he was appointed admiral of the fleet in conjunction with prince Rupert, and obtained a great victory over the Dutch. During the plague in London he continued in the city to the great comfort of the inhabitants, who looked up to him in that awful viſitation as their tutelary angel. This great man, whoſe private virtues were equal to his valour and political talents, died of a dropſy in 1670. His corpſe, after lying in ſtate ſeveral weeks, was interred in the chapel of Henry VII. in Weſtminſter abbey. He wrote an excellent book, entitled, Obſervations on Military and Political Affairs, 1671, folio; and a Collection of his Letters was printed in 1715. Though the general was never afraid of a cannon ſhot, it is ſaid that he ſtood in fear of his wife, who was the daughter of a blackſmith, and was bred a milliner. She was a bitter enemy of lord Clarendon, and a great miſtreſs of abuſive language. She was at firſt the miſtreſs of Monk, when he was a priſoner in the Tower; and had by him a ſon, Chriſtopher duke of Albemarle, who died governor of Jamaica in 1688.—Skinner's Life of Monk. Biog. Brit. Granger.

Monk (Nicholas), an Engliſh prelate, was the brother of the above, and educated at Wadham college, Oxford. He became rector of Kilkhampton, in Cornwall, and aſſiſted his brother in the reſtoration of the king, by whom he was made provoſt of Eton, and biſhop of Hereford. He died in 1661.—Ibid.

Monk (the honourable Mrs.) was daughter of lord Moleſworth, and wife of George Monk, eſq. She was ſkilled in the Latin, Italian, and Spaniſh languages, and had a fine turn for poetry. She died in 1715. Her poems were publiſhed the year following, under the title of Marinda, 8vo.—Jacobs's Lives of the Poets.

Monmouth (James duke of), a natural ſon of Charles II. was born at Rotterdam in 1649. At the reſtoration of his father, he was created earl of Orkney; and afterwards duke of Monmouth and knight of the garter. He was ſome time in the ſervice of France with an Engliſh regiment, and ſignalized himſelf againſt the Dutch, for which he was made lieutenant-general. On his return to England he was ſent to quell an inſurrection in Scotland. After this he joined the diſaffected party, who were for excluding the duke of York from the throne. He was alſo concerned in a plot againſt his father, for which he was pardoned, and then went to Holland, from whence he returned at the acceſſion of James II. and having landed in Dorſetſhire obtained ſeveral followers, who were defeated at Sedgemoor in Somerſetſhire. The duke was taken in a corn-field and ſent to London, where he was tried and beheaded on Tower-hill in 1685.—Rapin. Hume.

Monnier (Peter le), profeſſor of philoſophy in the college of Harcourt at Paris, and a member of the academy of ſciences, died in 1757, aged 82. He wrote Curſus philoſophicus, 6 vols. 12mo. His ſon Charles le Monnier was profeſſor of philoſophy in the royal college. He was one of the mathematicians ſent in 1736 to meaſure a degree of the meridian near the pole. He was a member of the academy of ſciences, and died in 1799.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

Monnoye (Bernard de la), an ingenious writer, was born at Dijon in 1641. In 1671 he gained the prize of poetry given by the French academy, and again in 1675 and 1677. He alſo wrote ſome excellent pieces in proſe, as Remarks on the Menagiana; a Diſſertation on the famous book De Tribus Impoſtoribus; a Diſſertation on Pomponius Lætius, &c. His poems were printed in 1716, and in 1721, 8vo. He died in 1728.—Moreri.

Monro (Alexander), a celebrated phyſician, was born in Scotland in 1697. He ſtudied at Leyden, and contracted an intimate friendſhip with Boerhaave. In 1719 he returned to Edinburgh, where he read lectures on anatomy. He died in 1767, after publiſhing ſome valuable works; as, 1. Oſteology; 2. Anatomy of the Nerves; 3. Several papers in the Medical Eſſays of Edinburgh. 4. On the Succeſs of Inoculation in Edinburgh. They were collected and publiſhed together in 1781, in one volume, 4to.—Hutchinſon's Biog. Med.

Monro (John), an eminent phyſician, was born at Greenwich in Kent, in 1715, and educated at Merchant Taylors' ſchool, London, from whence he removed to St. John's college, Oxford, of which he became fellow. While he was abroad the univerſity conferred on him his doctor's degree. In 1757 he was appointed joint phyſician to Bridewell and Bethlem hoſpitals. He publiſhed an anſwer to Dr. Battie's treatiſe on Madneſs. He died in 1791.—Ibid.

Monro (Alexander), an epiſcopal divine, was born in the ſhire of Roſs in 1648, and educated at King's college, Aberdeen, where he was choſen profeſſor of philoſophy. In 1686 he was appointed principal of the univerſity of Edinburgh, and died in 1713. He wrote ſeveral pieces againſt the preſbyterians.—Gen. Biog. D.

Monsey (Meſſenger), an Engliſh phyſician, was a man of great originality of manners, and of conſiderable talents. He was for many years phyſician of Chelſea hoſpital, and died in 1788, at the age of 96. He orderes by will that his body ſhould be anatomized, and the ſkeleton preſerved in Chelſea hoſpital, having a great averſion to interment in churches and church-yards. Europ. Mag.

Monsignori (Franceſco), an Italian painter, was born at Verona in 1655. He was the diſciple of Andrea Mantegna, and painted hiſtorical ſubjects, and portraits. He died in 1519.—Pilkington.

Monson (ſir William), a gallant admiral, was born in Lincolnſhire in 1569. He ſerved in ſeveral expeditions in the reign of queen Elizabeth. In 1604 he was appointed admiral in the North Sea, and honourably maintained the Engliſh flag. In 1616 he fell into diſgrace, and was impriſoned in the Tower, from whence he was ſoon releaſed. He died in 1643. His Naval Tracts were printed in 1682 in one volume folio.—Campbell.

Mont (Deodate del), a painter, was born at St. Tron in 1581. He was the diſciple of Rubens, with whom he travelled to Italy. His ſtyle reſembled that of his maſter. He died in 1634.—D'Argenville.

MONTAGU (lady Mary Wortley), was the eldeſt daughter of Evelyn Pierrepoint, earl and afterwards duke of Kingſton She was born at Thoreſby in Nottinghamſhire, about 1690. She received a liberal education, and was taught the elements of the Greek and Latin languages, under the ſame tutors as her brother lord Newark. In 1712 ſhe married Edward Wortley Montagu, eſq. grandſon of the gallant earl of Sandwich. This gentleman diſtinguiſhed himſelf as an able and upright ſenator in parliament, and was the intimate friend of Addiſon In 1716 ſhe was appointed ambaſſador to the court of Conſtantinople, whither he was accompanied by his lady. During this embaſſy ſhe wrote an elegant and intereſting deſcription of Conſtantinople in letters to her friends. Of theſe a ſurreptitious edition appeared in 1763, in 3 vols. 12mo. to which was afterwards added a fourth volume. The editor was the well known Cleland. So well were theſe letters received as to paſs through ſeveral impreſſions, and to be tranſlated into many languages. A genuine edition of theſe, and lady Mary's other works was publiſhed under the authority of her ſon, the marquis of Bute, in 1803, 5 vols. 8vo. While at Conſtantinople ſhe obtained information of a practice among the villagers of inoculating for the ſmall-pox. This operation ſhe had performed on her ſon, and by this means was the inſtrument of introducing inoculation into this part of Europe. At the end of 1718 lady Mary returned to England, and ſettled at Twickenham, where ſhe formed an intimacy with Pope; but the friendſhip was afterwards broken, and the poet did not ſcruple to write ſatires againſt her talents and reputation, which ſatires, when charged with, he was mean enough to deny. In 1739, on account of her health, ſhe ſettled at Breſcia in the Venetian territories, where ſhe remained till 1761, when, at the requeſt of her daughter, lady Bute, ſhe viſited England. She died in 1762.—Life prefixed to her Works.

MONTAGU (Edward Wortley), ſon of the above, was born at Warncliffe-lodge in Yorkſhire about 1714. In 1716 his father going on an embaſſy to Conſtantinople, Lady Mary cauſed her ſon to be inoculated with the ſmall-pox. He received his education at Weſtminſter ſchool, from whence he eloped, and entered into the ſervice of a chimney-ſweeper. His family had given him up as loſt, when a gentleman recognized him in the ſtreet, and took him home to his father. He eſcaped a ſecond time, and engaged with the maſter of a fiſhing ſmack; after which he ſhipped himſelf on board a veſſel bound to Spain, where he ſerved a muleteer. In this ſituation he was diſcovered and conveyed home to his friends, who placed him under a tutor, with whom he travelled abroad. His father being rather ſcanty in his remittances, owing probably to the ſon's extravagance, the tutor is ſaid to have committed a curious fraud to obtain a ſupply. This was the printing a book entitled, "Obſervations on the Riſe and Fall of the Roman Empire, by Edward Wortley Montagu, eſq." This work, whether the production of the ſon or not, gave great pleaſure to the old gentleman, who acknowledged it in a handſome manner. Edward was for ſome time in parliament, and conducted himſelf in a manner becoming his rank. Afterwards he went to the Levant, where he adopted the dreſs and manners of the Turks. Out of pique againſt his family he cauſed an advertiſement to be inſerted in the Engliſh papers, for a wife without fortune, that by having an heir he might diſappoint his relations. The expedient however failed; and this ſingular man died in Italy in 1776. He wrote Obſervations on Earthquakes; an Account of the Written Mountains in Arabia; and other curious papers in the Philoſophical Tranſactions.—Gent. Mag. Gen. Biog. Dict.

MONTAGUE (Richard), a learned prelate, was born in Buckinghamſhire about 1577, and educated at King's college, Cambridge, of which he became fellow. In 1616 he was made dean of Hereford; and in 1621 he publiſhed a learned anſwer to Selden's Hiſtory of Tithes. He was afterwards engaged in a controverſy with the papiſts, on which occaſion he wrote his Appello Cæſarem, for which he was ordered to appear at the bar of the houſe of commons in the firſt parliament of Charles I. on the charge of maintaining arminian and popiſh errors. He was made biſhop of Chicheſter in 1628, from whence he was tranſlated to Norwich in 1638. He died in 1641. His principal work is an Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory in Latin, in which his learning appears to great advantage.—Biog. Brit.

MONTAGUE (Charles), earl of Halifax, was born of an ancient family in Northamptonſhire in 1661. He received his education at Weſtminſter ſchool, from whence he removed to Trinity college, Cambridge. In 1687 he wrote, in conjunction with Prior, a piece called the Country Mouſe and City Mouſe, to ridicule Dryden's poem in favour of the church of Rome, entitled, the Hind and Panther. The ſatire was happy, and had ſo good an effect, that, at the revolution, Mr. Halifax received a penſion. In 1691 he was made one of the commiſſioners of the treaſury, and three years after chancellor of the exchequer. In 1698 he was appointed firſt commiſſioner of the treaſury, and in 1700 was advanced to the peerage, by the title of baron Halifax. He was, however, twice impeached of high crimes and miſdemeanors by the commons, but the accuſations were rejected by the houſe of lords. At the acceſſion of George I. he was created earl of Halifax, and inſtalled knight of the garter. His lordſhip died in 1715. He was the patron of Addiſon, and intimate with Swift, Pope, and the moſt eminent writers and wits of his day. He wrote poems and other works. —Biog. Brit.

MONTAGUE (Edward lord), earl of Sandwich, a gallant Engliſh admiral, ſerved under Cromwell, and afterwards concurred heartily in the reſtoration of Charles II. by whom he was created an earl. In the battle of Southwold bay, after he had by his conduct reſcued a great part of the fleet from the moſt imminent danger, and given aſtoniſhing proofs of his bravery, his ſhip caught fire, on which he leaped into the ſea and was drowned, in 1672. He amuſed himſelf in engraving. He tranſlated from the Spaniſh a book on the Art of Metals, 8vo.; and his Letters and Negociations have been printed in 2 vols.—Walpole's Royal and Noble Authors. Campbell's Admirals.

MONTAGUE (Elizabeth), an ingenious lady, was the daughter of Matthew Robinſon, eſq. of Yorkſhire, and of Horton in Kent. The care of her education was undertaken by the celebrated Dr. Conyers Middleton. About 1742 ſhe married Edward Montague, of Allerthorpe, in the county of York, eſq. ſon of Charles, fifth ſon of Edward, the firſt earl of Sandwich. By him ſhe had a ſon, who died before he was two years old. She became early a widow with an ample fortune and honourable connexions. In 1769 Mrs. Montague publiſhed "An Eſſay on the Writings and Genius of Shakſpeare," which obtained a great and deſerved reputation. She formed a literary ſociety known by the name of the Blue Stocking Club, from the circumſtance that a gentleman belonging to it wore ſtockings of that colour. Mrs. Montague was noticed for another peculiarity, that of giving an annual dinner on May-day to the chimney-ſweepers of the metropolis. She died in 1800. George lord Lyttleton was a warm admirer of Mrs. Montague, and was aſſiſted by her in the compoſition of his Dialogues of the Dead.—Gent. Mag.

MONTAIGNE (Michael de), a celebrated French writer, was born at a ſeat of that name in Perigord in 1533. He was intended for the bar, but diſliking that profeſſion he quitted it, and travelled into different countries, making his obſervations rather on human nature than places and curioſities. At Rome he was honoured with the citizenſhip. In 1581 he was choſen mayor of Bourdeaux, in which poſt he gave ſuch ſatisfaction as to be elected for four years ſucceſſively. He appeared with applauſe at the meeting of the ſtates of Blois in 1588, and was honoured by Charles IX. with the order of St. Michael. After an active life he retired to his ſeat of Montaigne, where he devoted himſelf to philoſophical ſtudies, and died as a Chriſtian in 1592. The Eſſays of Montaigne ſhew great knowledge of the human mind, and contain many valuable leſſons of inſtruction. Cardinal Du Perron, emphatically called them the breviary of honeſt men. The beſt edition is that of Coſte, with notes, in 1725, or 1739, 3 vols. 4to. The Travels of Montaigne were printed in 1772, 3 vols. 12mo.—Moreri.

MONTALBANI (Ovidio), profeſſor of phyſic and aſtronomy at Bologna, was born about 1602, and died in 1672. He wrote Index Plantarum, 4to.; Bibliotheca botanica, under the name of Bumaldi, 4to.; Epiſtolæ de rebus in Bononienſi; tractu indigenis; Cænotaphia clarorum doctorum Bononienſium; Arboretum libri duo, folio.—Halleri. Bibl. Botan.

MONTALEMBERT (Mark-Rene), a French general, and a member of the academy of ſciences, was born of an ancient family at Angouleme in 1714. He diſplayed great military talent in the French, Ruſſian, and Swediſh ſervice; but is beſt-known by his works, which are, 1. Perpendicular Fortification, or the Art Defenſive ſuperior to the Offenſive, by a New Manner of Employing the Artillery, 1776, 11 vols. 4to.; 2. Correſpondence with Miniſters and Generals, 3 vols.; 3. Comedies and Poems. In 1794 this man divorced his wife, and at the age of 80 married another, by whom he had a daughter. He died in 1799.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

MONTAMY (Didier Francis d'Arclais, ſiegneur de), was born at a place of the ſame name in Normandy. He was in the ſervice of the duke of Orleans, and made chevalier of the order of St. Lazarus. His works are, 1. La Lithogeognoſie, tranſlated from the German of Pott, 2 vols. 12mo.; 2. Treatiſe on Colours for Painting in Enamel and upon Porcelaine, 12mo. He died in 1765.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

MONTANUS, an hereſiarch of the ſecond century, was born in Myſia. He pretended that the Holy Spirit had deſcended into him, and two female followers of his, Priſcilla and Maximilla, women of conſiderable property. Montanus denied the doctrine of the Trinity, condemned ſecond marriages as adulterous, and aſſerted the neceſſity of immediate inſpiration. His followers, who were numerous, affected extraordinary agitations of body as the effect of the ſpirit, and pretended to revelations. Among others who were ſeduced by this ſtrange ſect was the learned Tertullian, who at laſt ſeparated from them.—Dupin. Moſheim. Euſebius.

MONTANUS (Benedict Arias), a learned Spaniſh divine, was born about 1528. Philip II. employed him in editing a Polyglot Bible, after the Complutenſian edition; and this work he executed with ſuch reputation that the king offered him a biſhopric, which he refuſed, accepting only a penſion. He died about 1600.—Moreri.

MONTANUS (John Baptiſt), an Italian phyſician, was born at Verona in 1488. He ſtudied at Padua, where he obtained a profeſſorſhip. He died in 1551. He wrote, 1. Medicina univerſa; 2. Opuſcula varia medica; 3. De gradibus et facultatibus medicamentorum; 4. Lectiones in Galenum & Avicennam.—Moreri.

MONTARANI (Geminiano), an aſtrono-er of Modena, who taught mathematics at logna with reputation, and died at the oſe of the 17th century. He wrote a Diſ-rtation on Comets; on the Fixed Stars; and ſtronomical Obſervations.—Moreri.

MONTARROYO MASCADENHAS (Freyre
), a native of Liſbon, who wrote, 1. A atural, Aſtrological, and Political Hiſtory the World; 2. An Account of Oudenarde d Peterwaradin; and other works. He d in 1730, aged 60.—Ibid.

MONTAUSIER (Charles de Sainte-Marie ke of), a peer of France, and governor of ouis the dauphin, was born of an ancient mily in Touraine. He was a man of in-xible integrity, and auſtere virtue. When e plague broke out in Normandy, of which ovince he was governor, he reſolved to go ither, which occaſioned his family to re-onſtrate with him on his imprudence; for me," anſwered the duke, "I believe at governors are obliged to reſidence as well biſhops, and if at other times, certainly thoſe of public calamity." He inculcated the mind of the dauphin the pureſt ſenti-ents, and always diſcouraged flattery. One y he took him into a miſerable cottage, and id to him, "See, my prince, in this cot-ge, in this miſerable retreat, lodge the ther, and the mother, and the children, ho labour inceſſantly to pay the gold which naments your palace, and provide the luxu-s for your table." When his office as gornor ceaſed, he ſaid to his pupil, "If you e a honeſt man, you will love me; but if herwiſe you will hate me, and I ſhall con-le myſelf." This virtuous nobleman died 1690, aged 80. His ducheſs was Julia- cia d'Argennes, of the noble family of AMBOUILLET. She was a woman of high lent, and great virtue. She died in 1671, ed 64.—Moreri. Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

MONTBELLIARD (Philibert Gueneau de), French naturaliſt, was born in 1720, and ed in 1785. He aſſiſted Buffon in his hiſry of birds, and alſo in the account of in-cts. Montbelliard was the editor of the llection Academique, which contained the oſt intereſting memoirs, extracted from the blications of the different learned ſocieties Europe.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

MONTCALM (Louis Joſeph de St. Veran, arquis de), a celebrated French general, as born of a noble family at Candiac in 12. He entered early into the army, and ſtinguiſhed himſelf gallantly in many bats, particularly that of Placenza in 1746.
1756 he became a field-marſhal, and was pointed to command the French army in nada, where he oppoſed lord Loudun ith conſiderable ſkill and ſucceſs. He afrwards defeated Abercromby, the ſucceſſor his lordſhip; but in the battle fought der the walls of Quebec, in 1759, Mont-lm received a mortal wound, as did likeiſe the brave Engliſh general Wolfe.—
Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

MONTECUCULI (count Sebaſtian), an Italian gentleman, who was introduced at the French court, and became cup-bearer to the dauphin Francis, ſon of Francis I. He was accuſed of having poiſoned the young prince at Valence, and being put to the torture, confeſſed that he was hired to do it by the partiſans of Charles the fifth. The friends of the emperor, however, fully refuted the abominable charge, and threw it back upon Catherine de Medicis, wife of Henry II. brother to the dauphin. This happened in 1536.—Moreri.

MONTECUCULI (Raymond de), a famous general, was born at Modena in 1608. He entered early into the army under his uncle, who commanded the artillery of the emperor. The firſt action in which the nephew diſtinguiſhed himſelf, was in 1644, when at the head of 2000 men he ſurpriſed ten thouſand Swedes, whom he compelled to abandon their baggage and artillery. General Bannier being informed of this diſaſter, marched againſt young Montecuculi, and took him priſoner. He did not regain his liberty till two years after, but he employed that time to great advantage in ſtudy. On returning to his profeſſion he defeated the Swedes in Bohemia. After the peace of Weſtphalia he travelled in different countries. In 1657 he was appointed field-marſhal, and ſent to the relief of John Caſimir, king of Poland, who was attacked by Sweden, and the prince of Tranſylvania. After defeating the latter, he took Cracow from the Swedes, and gained ſeveral ſplendid actions, which produced a peace. He next ſerved againſt the Turks, and drove them out of Tranſylvania, for which he was made preſident of the imperial council. In 1673 he was ſent againſt the French, and had to oppoſe the great Turenne, who fell in the conteſt, and Montecuculi, in his letter to the emperor, regrets the loſs of a man who was an honour to humanity. He afterwards acted with great courage and ſkill againſt the prince de Condé. He died in 1680.—Ibid.

MONTE-MAYER (George de), a poet of Caſtile, who flouriſhed in the reign of Philip II. and died about 1560. His poems, under the title of Cancionero, were printed in 2 vols. 8vo. 1554.—Moreri.

MONTENAULT (Charles Philip), a French writer, was born at Paris. He wrote, The Hiſtory of the Kings of the Two Sicilies, of the Houſe of France, in 4 vols. 12mo. He alſo conducted many years the Journal de Verdun; and tranſlated into proſe the Latin poem of Quillet, entitled, Callipædia. He died in 1749.—Moreri.

MONTESPAN (madame de), a celebrated French lady, who was wife of the marquis of that title, and miſtreſs of Louis XIV. over whom ſhe gained a complete aſcendancy, which ſhe maintained till that monarch became attached to madame de Maintenon. Madame de Monteſpan had children by the king, one of whom became duke of Main, and two daughters, who were nobly married. She died in 1717.—Moreri.

MONTESQUIEU (Charles de Secondat, baron of), an eminent writer, was born of a noble family near Bourdeaux in 1689. His firſt literary performance, entitled, Perſian Letters, publiſhed in 1721, gave proofs of a fine genius, and a ſolid judgment. The year following he pleaded with ſo much eloquence againſt the impoſition of a new duty that it was ſuppreſſed. In 1728 he was admitted a member of the French academy, though not without oppoſition from cardinal Fleury, who conceived there were ſome things dangerous to religion in his Perſian Letters. Monteſquieu having formed the deſign of his great work the Spirit of Laws, travelled into Germany and Holland, and laſtly to England, where he reſided two years, calling this the country for thinking, and France for living. On his return home he publiſhed his Treatiſe on the Cauſes of the Greatneſs and Declenſion of the Romans. In 1748 appeared his Spirit of Laws 2 vols. 4to.; which ought rather to have been termed the Spirit of Nations. In it the author has diſtinguiſhed three ſorts of government, the republican, the monarchical, and the deſpotic, all of which he has examined with ſo much clearneſs as to have rendered his work the code of the Law of Nations; and he has himſelf been called the legiſlator of the human race. Monteſquieu ſucceeded his uncle as preſident of the parliament of Bourdeaux, and died in a manner becoming a chriſtian and philoſopher in 1755. His Familiar Letters were printed in 1767, in 1 vol. 12mo. His ſon John Baptiſte de Secondat, counſellor of the parliament of Bourdeaux, and a member of the academy of that city, and of the royal ſociety of London, died in 1796, aged 79. He wrote, Obſervations on the Mineral Waters of the Pyrenées; on the Commerce and Navigation of Great Britain; and on the Military Marine of France.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

MONTEZUMA, the laſt emperor of Mexico, was a prince of noble qualities. He oppoſed the invaders of his country with firmneſs; but at laſt was ſeized by Cortes, who forced him to acknowledge himſelf a vaſſal of Spain. The Mexicans having aſſembled in great numbers againſt the Spaniards, and Cortes apprehenſive that he was not ſufficiently ſtrong to reſiſt them, obliged his royal captive to appear in his robes, in order to appeaſe his ſubjects. The inſurgents, however, diſcharged their arrows while he was ſpeaking, and wounded him mortally in 1520. Montezuma left two ſons and three daughters, who embraced the chriſtian religion. The eldeſt received an eſtate and the title of count from Charles V. He died in 1608.—Ibid.

MONTFAUCON (Bernard de), a learned benedictine, was born in Languedoc in 1655. In his youth he ſerved as a cadet in the army, but the death of his parents made ſuch an impreſſion on his mind that he entered into the congregation of St. Maur in 1675. He ſtudied with intenſe application, and acquired a prodigious knowlege in languages, theology, hiſtory, and literature in general. In 1698 he went to Italy to conſult the public libraries there, and was received with great diſtinction by the cardinals and pope Innocent XII. On his return to Paris in 1701 he publiſhed a curious relation of his journey, under the title of Diarium Italicum, 4to. He died in 1741. His principal works are, 1. Analecta Græca, 4to.; 2. an edition of the works of St. Athanaſius, Greek and Latin, with notes, 3 vols. folio; 3. a Collection of Ancient Greek writers, 2 vols folio; 4. a French Tranſlation of Philo's Contemplative Life, with notes; 5. Palæographia Græca, folio; 6. Antiquities explained, in French and Latin, 10 vols. folio, and a Supplement to the ſame of 5 vols. This is a work of immenſe erudition and value; 7. Monuments of the French Monarchy, 5 vols. fol.; 8. an edition of the Works of Chryſoſtom, 13 vols. folio; 9. Diſſertation on the Hiſtory of Judith.—Moreri.

MONTFLEURY (Zachary), whoſe family name was Jacob, a French actor and dramatic writer, was born in Anjou. He became page to the duke of Guiſe, but a paſſion for the ſtage induced him to join a company of ſtrolling players in Burgundy. He was one of the firſt performers in the Cid in 1637. He was the author of a tragedy, entitled, the Death of Aſdrubal; and he had the honour of inſtructing the celebrated Baron. Montfleury died in 1667. His ſon, Anthony Jacob, was deſigned by his father for the bar, but being diſguſted with the ſtudy of the law, he alſo became an actor and writer. He died in 1685. He wrote ſome trifling comedies.—Moreri.

MONTFORT (Simon, count de), a famous French general, who in 1209 conducted the croiſade againſt the Albigenſes, on which occaſion he tarniſhed his reputation by his cruelties. In 1213 he gained a complete victory over Peter king of Arragon. He was killed at the ſiege of Toulouſe in 1218. His younger ſon came to England, and was created earl of Leiceſter.—Moreri.

MONTGAILLARD (Bernard de), called the Petit Feuillante of the league, was a mendicant friar, and a famous preacher. He bore a diſtinguiſhed part in the atrocities committed by the leaguers, and is ſaid to have ſuborned an aſſaſſin to murder Henry IV. He died abbé of Orval in 1628.—Ibid.

MONTGERON (Louis Baſile Carre de), a French fanatic, who pretended to be converted from infidelity by the miracles wrought at the tomb of the deacon Paris, in 1731, and of which he wrote an account in a large volume. For this he was ſent to : Baſtile, and afterwards to the citadel Valence, where he died in 1754, aged .—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

MONTGOLFIER (James Stephen), was n at Annonay in France. He became ebrated by his paper manufacture, and was the firſt who fabricated the vellum per, ſo remarkable for its ſmoothneſs l colour. In 1783 he invented air-bal-ons, for which he was admitted a member the academy of ſciences, created cheva-r of the order of St. Michael, and re-arded with a penſion of two thouſand li-es. He died in 1799.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

MONTGOMERY (Gabriel de, count of), a ebrated French nobleman, was born of ancient Scotch family. In 1559 he had misfortune to kill Henry II. by acci-ntally wounding him in the eye as they re tilting at a tournament given by that onarch, on occaſion of the marriage be-een his daughter Elizabeth and the king Spain. After this unfortunate diſaſter ontgomery went to Italy and other coun-es till the civil wars recalled him to ance, where he attached himſelf to the oteſtants, and became one of their prin-al chiefs. He defended Rouen in 1562 ainſt the royal army, and when the city s taken by aſſault he eſcaped to Havre. 1569 he raiſed the ſiege of Bearne in Na-rre, then cloſely preſſed by the catholics; er which he followed the beſiegers to Or-ez, which he took by aſſault. Montgo-ery was at Paris at the time of the maſſa-e of the proteſtants in 1572, but eſcaped ough cloſely purſued. With his family retired to Jerſey, and from thence to Eng-nd. In 1573 he returned to Normandy, here he was joined by ſome of the pro-tant nobility at St. Lo, at which place he s beſieged by Matignon, lieutenant-gene-in Lower Normandy. But Montgomery caped from thence and went to Domfront, hither he was followed by Matignon, who er a long combat made him priſoner. his gallant nobleman was beheaded at Paris 1574.—Moreri.

MONTGON (Charles Alexander), a French riter, was born at Verſailles in 1690. He s an eccleſiaſtic, and confeſſor to Philip V. Spain, where he acted as the ſpy of the ke of Bourbon, but being neglected by rdinal Fleury, who ſucceeded that noble-an as prime miniſter, he publiſhed his Me-oirs in 8 vols. 8vo. in which he is very vere on the cardinal's adminiſtration. ontgon died about 1770.—Nouv. Dict. iſt.

MONTI (Joſeph), profeſſor of botany d natural hiſtory at Bologna, where he ed about 1750. He wrote, 1. Prodromus talogi Plantarum agri Bononienſis, 1719, o.; 2. Plantarum Varii Indices, 1724, o.; 3. Exoticorum ſimplicium Medica-ſentorum Varii Indices, 1724, 4to. His n Cajetan tranſlated from the Italian into Latin, Zannoni's Hiſtory of rare Plants, printed at Bologna in 1742, folio.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

MONTICELLI (Andrew), an Italian painter, was born at Bologna in 1641. He painted fruit, vaſes, carpets, flowers, and landſcapes, in an excellent taſte. He died in 1716. There was another artiſt of this name who excelled in painting landſcapes and battles.—Pilkington.

MONTIGNI (Stephen Mignol de), was born at Paris in 1714. He was an able mechanician, and a member of the academy of ſciences. France was indebted to him for introducing the manufacture of different kinds of ſtuffs from England, alſo for an improvement in the art of printing cottons, and making carpets. He printed a Memoir on the Mathematics, and in the memoirs of the academy are ſeveral of his obſervations on mechanical ſubjects. He died in 1782.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

MONTJOSIEU (Louis de), in Latin Monſjoſius, a gentleman of Rouergue, who taught mathematics to ſome of the French princes, and accompanied the duke de Joyeuſe to Rome in 1583. He wrote a book, entitled, Gallus Romæ hoſpes, printed at Rome in 1585, 4to. In this work he treated of the painting and ſculpture of the antients. It was reprinted in an edition of Vitruvius at Amſterdam in 1649.—Moreri.

MONTLUC (Blaiſe de), a celebrated French general, was born in 1500, of a noble family, near Condom. He roſe through the different ranks in the army to that of marſhal of France. His firſt ſervices were in Italy, and at the battle of Pavia in 1525 he was taken priſoner. In the wars of Piedmont he ſerved with great reputation; and in 1546 he recovered Boulogne from the Engliſh. The city of Sienna in Tuſcany having driven out the imperial garriſon, and ſolicited the protection of France, Montluc was appointed to command the forces ſent thither in 1554. He ſuſtained a ſiege of eight months againſt the imperial army, commanded by the marquis de Marignan, who was obliged, after ſeveral attacks, to convert the ſiege into a blockade. It was not till the garriſon and inhabitants had endured the utmoſt extremity of famine that the place capitulated, when Montluc and his troops marched out with the honours of war. He commanded in Guienne during the wars which ravaged France on account of religion, and defeated the calvaniſts in ſeveral actions. But he was guilty of great cruelties to the vanquiſhed. At the ſiege of Rabaſtens in 1570 he was ſo ſeverely wounded in the face as to be obliged always to wear a maſk to hide his deformity. He died on his eſtate in 1577. At the age of 75 he wrote the Hiſtory of his own Life, printed at Bourdeaux in 1592, folio, and ſeveral times ſince.—Moreri.

MONTMAUR (Peter de), profeſſor of Greek at Paris in the reign of Louis XIII. He was bred a jeſuit, but quitted that order, and became ſucceſſively an empiric, a druggiſt, an advocate, and laſtly Greek profeſſor. He wrote a number of trifling poems, and ſatires in verſe; and being of a bad character himſelf, ſeveral writers attacked him, particularly Menage. Montmaur endured the ſtorm with great addreſs, and died in 1648, aged 74. Sallengre publiſhed a collection of the ſatires written againſt him in 1715, under the title of the Hiſtory of Montmaur.—Moreri.

Montmorency (Matthew de), called the Great, a diſtinguiſhed general, who ſignalized his valour at the battle of Pont-a-Bouvines in 1214, and the year following was employed againſt the Albigenſes in Languedoc, for which ſervices he received the ſword of conſtable of France, and was made general of the army. He afterwards took ſeveral places from the Engliſh. Louis VIII. committed his ſon to the care of the conſtable, who by his prudence diſſolved a league which had been formed againſt the queen mother during the minority of Louis IX. He died in 1230.—Ibid.

Montmorency (Anne de), a deſcendant of the above, diſplayed great military talents at an early age, and was at the battle of Marignon in 1515. In 1521 he defended the city of Meziers, and compelled the count of Naſſau to raiſe the ſiege. He accompanied Francis I. to Italy, as marſhal of France, and was taken with him at the battle of Pavia. The important ſervices he had rendered to the ſtate were rewarded with the ſword of conſtable in 1538; but ſome years afterwards he fell under the diſpleaſure of Francis. In the reign of Henry II. he was taken into favour at court and employed in military ſervice, but was again diſgraced by the intrigues of Catherine de Medicis. Charles IX. recalled him, and he ſerved againſt the calviniſts, but was taken priſoner by them at the battle of Dreux in 1562. Having obtained his liberty the year following, he took Havre from the Engliſh. He was killed at the battle of St. Dennis in 1567, after performing prodigies of valour. His grandſon became duke de Montmorency, and was beloved by the people of France for his bravery, generoſity, and other great qualities. But having joined Gaſton of Orleans againſt cardinal Richelieu, Montmorency took up arms in the province of Languedoc, of which he was governor. The king ſent againſt him the marſhals de la Force and Schomberg, and a battle enſued at Caſtelnaudari, where the duke was made priſoner, and, notwithſtanding the earneſt and general ſolicitations for his pardon, he was beheaded at Toulouſe in 1632.—Moreri.

Montpensier (Anne-Marie Louiſa, ducheſs de), the daughter of Gaſton, duke of Orleans, brother of Louis XIII. She was generally known by the name of Mademoiſelle, and took the part of Condé in the civil wars. She cauſed the cannon of the Baſtile to be fired on the French troops, and ſhewed on many occaſions a moſt impetuous ſpirit. After trying in vain to eſpouſe ſeveral ſovereign princes, among the reſt Charles II. of England, ſhe ſecretly married the count de Lauzun, who uſed her with great inſolence. She died in 1693. Mademoiſelle wrote her Memoirs, which are curious and full of anecdote, 8 vols. 12mo; ſhe was alſo the author of two books of devotion.—Moreri.

Montpetit (Arnaud Vincient), was born at Maçon in 1713, and educated at Dijon. He was bred to the law, but quitted that profeſſion, and applied to the ſtudy of mechanics and painting. He invented a plough to be uſed by two men without oxen; alſo ſome curious horological machines. In 1759 he diſcovered a mode of painting, called eludoric, which conſiſts of ſupporting a deſign in water colours with a coat of oil: on this ſubject he wrote a Memoir. He painted ſeveral portraits after this manner, particularly of Louis XV. He alſo diſcovered a white paint preferable to white lead. In 1753 he began to make machines for the more eaſy manufacture of wheels for watches; he alſo made improvements on ſteam engines, and in 1779 preſented to the academy of ſciences obſervations on iron bridges. In 1783 he laid before the king the plan of one to conſiſt of a ſingle arch of 400 feet ſpan. He died at Paris in 1800.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

Montrose (James Graham, marquis of), a brave and loyal nobleman in the reign of Charles I. He raiſed a conſiderable force at his own charge, and in a little time had nearly reduced Scotland to obedience, when he received the royal command to diſband his army. He then went to Germany, where he ſerved with ſuch reputation as to be created a marſhal of the empire. Charles II. having landed in Scotland, recalled the marquis who made himſelf maſter of the Orkneys, but on entering Scotland he was defeated, and eſcaped in diſguiſe. Being betrayed by a farmer, he was conveyed to Edinburgh, where he was hung and quartered in a moſt inhuman manner in 1650.—Life by Wiſhart.

Montucla (Joſeph de), an aſſociate of the national inſtitute, and a member of the academy of Berlin, was born at Lyons in 1725. He accompanied Turgot to Cayenne as ſecretary of the government and royal aſtronomer. On his return to France he was appointed firſt commiſſioner of public buildings. He died at Verſailles in 1800. His principal works are, Reſearches on the Quadrature of the Circle, 12mo.; Collection of Pieces upon Inoculation, 12mo.; Hiſtory of the Mathematics, 4 vols. 4to.; This laſt is valuable, and has been tranſlated into Engliſh.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

Moore (ſir Jonas), an eminent mathe-cian, was born about 1620 at Whitby ancaſhire. His ſkill in mathematical ning recommended him to Charles II. whom he was employed in ſeveral cs, and made ſurveyor general of the ance. He was alſo one of the gover- of Chriſt's hoſpital, and was the princi- means of the above monarch's endowing athematical ſchool in that ſeminary. Jonas compiled for the uſe of that inſti- n a General Syſtem of Mathematics, vols. 4to. which was publiſhed after his h in 1681.—Martin's Biog. Phil.

MOORE (John), an Engliſh prelate, was in Leiceſterſhire, and educated at Clare-, Cambridge, where he took his degree D.D. in 1681. He was conſecrated op of Norwich in 1691; and tranſlated ly in 1707. He died in 1714. His ons were publiſhed by his chaplain, Dr. uel Clarke, in one vol. 8vo. and his li- y was purchaſed by George II. who gave o the univerſity of Cambridge.—Gen. . Dict.

MOORE (Philip), rector of Kirkbridge Douglas in the Iſle of Man, was the in- ate friend of the pious Dr. Wilſon, bi- of that ſee, whoſe funeral ſermon he ched. He reviſed the tranſlation of the e into the Manks language: and died in 3.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

MOORE (Edward), an Engliſh poet, who in 1757. He wrote Fables for the Fe- e Sex; the Gameſter, a tragedy; Gil- , a comedy, and other pieces. He is to be taken for James Moore, alſo the or of ſome plays, and honoured by Pope a place in the Dunciad. He died in 4.—Biog. Dram.

MOORE (Francis), an ingenious mecha- who contrived and brought to effect e admirable machines, which have been great ſervice in aſſiſting the manufac- s of England. He died in 1787.—Gent. g.

MOORE (John), a phyſician and miſcella- us writer, was the ſon of a clergyman born at Stirling, in Scotland, in 1730. received his education at Glaſgow, where applied to the ſtudy of medicine. In 7 he became ſurgeon's mate in the army Flanders, where he remained till the ge- l peace. After the war he purſued his lical ſtudies at London and Paris; at the er place he was appointed ſurgeon to the ſehold of lord Albemarle, the Engliſh aſſador. On his return to Scotland he ame partner with Dr. Gordon, an eminent ctitioner at Glaſgow; but in 1773 he ac- ted an invitation to travel with the young e of Hamilton. After ſpending five rs abroad Dr. Moore ſettled in London and 779 publiſhed the fruits of his travels in "View of Society and Manners in France, tzerland, and Germany," 2 vols. 8vo. is work was ſo well received that in 1781 added two volumes more, entitled, "A w of Society and Manners in Italy." In 1785 he publiſhed "Medical Sketches," in one vol. 8vo.; which work is ſaid to have given offence to his brethren, by betraying ſome ſecrets in the profeſſion. His next performance was a novel of a very ſuperior character entitled, Zeluco, 2 vols. which abounds with incident, though the principal character is ſo atrocious as rather to excite horror than to afford inſtruction. In 1792 Dr. Moore accompanied Lord Lauderdale to Paris, and witneſſed ſome of the principal ſcenes in the revolution, of which he publiſhed an intereſting account in 1795, in 2 vols. 8vo. The year following appeared his novel, entitled, "Edward," intended as a contraſt to Zeluco, but inferior to it. In 1800 he gave to the world "Mordaunt," being Sketches of Life, Characters, and Manners in various Countries, 2 vols. This work is neither a romance, novel, nor travels, but it contains many lively and inſtructive obſervations. Dr. Moore died in London in 1802. His ſon, general Moore, diſtinguiſhed himſelf in Egypt, and on other occaſions, in the late war.—Monthly Mag. Europ. Mag.

MOORE (John), archbiſhop of Canterbury, was the ſon of a grazier at Glouceſter, and educated at the grammar-ſchool of that city, after which he went to Pembroke college, Oxford. Being taken into the family of the duke of Marlborough as tutor to one of his ſons, he obtained by that intereſt a prebendal ſtall in the cathedral of Durham; in 1771 the deanry of Canterbury, and in 1776 the biſhopric of Bangor; from whence, in 1783, he was raiſed to the metropolitical chair. Dr. More was an amiable prelate, very liberal in his patronage, and of reſpectable talents. He died in 1804. The archbiſhop married Miſs Eden, ſiſter to lord Auckland, by whom he had ſeveral children.—Gent. Mag.

MORABIN (James), a French writer, who was ſecretary to the lieutenant-general of police at Paris, and died in that city in 1762. He wrote, a Hiſtory of Cicero, 2 vols. 4to; Nomenclator Ciceronianus, 12mo. He alſo tranſlated ſome of that author's works into French, and the Conſolations of Boethius. —Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

MORALES (Ambroſe), a Spaniſh divine, hiſtoriographer to Philip II. and profeſſor in the univerſity of Alcala. He was author of a Spaniſh Chronicle, 2 vols. folio, and other works. He died in 1590.—Moreri.

MORAND (Sauveur Francis), a celebrated ſurgeon, was born at Paris in 1697. He came to England in 1729 to avail himſelf of the inſtructions of Cheſelden, who always had a great eſteem for him. On his return to his own country he became ſurgeon major of the guards, and director of the academy of ſurgeons. He was alſo made chevalier of the order of St. Michael, and admitted a member of the academy of ſciences and of the royal ſociety of London. He died in 1773. He wrote, a Treatiſe on the Hig-

Operation for the Stone; an Eloge on Marechal; Diſcourſe on the Neceſſity that a Surgeon ſhould be Learned; Experiments and Obſervations on the Stone; Miſcellaneous Works, 2 vols. 4to. &c. His ſon, John Francis, became phyſician to Staniſlaus, king of Poland, and died in 1784, aged 58. He wrote ſome medical and chemical works.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

MORANDI (John Maria), an Italian painter, was born at Florence in 1625. He was patronized by the imperial family at Vienna, and painted the portraits of moſt of the German princes. He was alſo excellent in hiſtorical ſubjects. He died in 1715.—Pilkington.

MORANT (Philip), an ingenious antiquary and divine, was born in the iſland of Jerſey, and educated at Pembroke college, Oxford. He became rector of Aldham, in Eſſex, and was appointed by the houſe of peers to prepare the votes of parliament for the preſs. He was employed in this work at the time of his death, which happened in 1770. He edited ſeveral works, and wrote a Hiſtory of Colcheſter; the Hiſtory of Eſſex; and thoſe Lives in the Biographia Britannica which are marked C.—Anecd. of Bowyer.

MORATA (Olympia Fulvia), an Italian lady, was born at Ferrara in 1526. Her father was a learned profeſſor, and gave her an excellent education. She became tutoreſs to the princeſs of Ferrara, and declaimed publicly in Latin and Greek. Olympia married Grunthler, profeſſor of medicine at Heidelberg, where ſhe died in 1555. Her works, conſiſting of orations, letters, dialogues, and tranſlations, were printed at Baſle in 1562, 8vo.—Tiraboſchi.

MORDAUNT (Charles), earl of Peterborough, was born about 1658, and ſucceeded his father, John lord Mordaunt, in 1675. He entered into the navy, and diſtinguiſhed himſelf at Tangier when it was beſieged by the Moors. In the reign of James II. he went to Holland, and accompanied the prince of Orange on his expedition to England in 1688. The year following he was created earl of Monmouth, and appointed firſt commiſſioner of the treaſury, from which poſt he was removed in 1690. In 1697, on the death of his uncle the earl of Peterborough, he ſucceeded to that title. In the reign of queen Anne he diſplayed great bravery and ſkill as commander of the Engliſh forces in Spain, where he took Barcelona, and brought ſeveral provinces to acknowledge Charles III. as their king. He was afterwards employed in ſeveral embaſſies, and in 1714 appointed governor of Minorca. He died in 1735. Some of his letters are in the works of Pope, with whom he was intimate.—Engliſh Peerage. Gen. Biog. Dict.

MORE (ſir Thomas), chancellor of England, was the ſon of ſir John More, judge of the King's-bench, and born in London in 1480. He received his education at Oxford, where he made great proficiency in learning; and afterwards became a ſtudent at Lincoln's-inn. As ſoon as he came of age he obtained a ſeat in parliament, where he oppoſed a ſubſidy demanded by Henry VII. with ſuch force that it was refuſed by the houſe. At the acceſſion of Henry VIII. he was called to the bar, and in 1508 appointed judge of the ſheriff's court, in London, which was then a conſiderable poſt. By the intereſt of Wolſey he obtained the honour of knighthood, and a place in the privy council. In 1520 he was made treaſurer of the exchequer, and in 1523 choſen ſpeaker of the houſe of commons, where he reſiſted a motion for an oppreſſive ſubſidy, which gave great offence to cardinal Wolſey. Sir Thomas was made chancellor in 1530, and by his indefatigable application in that office there was in a ſhort time not a cauſe left undetermined. To the high qualities of learning, wit, and liberality, he joined a bigoted adherance to the roman catholic religion, and the papal authority. This led him to oppoſe the king's ſupremacy, and alſo his divorce from Catherine of Arragon, for which he was ſent to the Tower, brought to trial, and condemned to loſe his head, which ſentence he endured with firmneſs and pleaſantry in 1535. Sir Thomas wrote ſeveral pieces againſt the reformation, and epiſtles to Eraſmus and other learned men. The beſt of his works is a kind of political romance, entitled, Utopia, which has been tranſlated into Engliſh by biſhop Burnet. Sir Thomas had four children. His eldeſt daughter, Margaret, married a gentleman of the name of Roper, and died in 1544. She was an accompliſhed woman, and well read in the Greek and Latin languages. She wrote a Treatiſe on the four laſt Things. A grandſon of ſir Thomas became a prieſt, and died at Rome in 1625. He wrote the life of his grandfather.—Biog. Brit. Lives of the Lord Chancellors.

MORE (Henry), a pious divine, was born at Grantham in Lincolnſhire in 1614, and educated at Eton ſchool, from whence he was ſent to Chriſt's college, Cambridge, where he applied himſelf to the ſtudy of the platoniſts. He was very modeſt, and refuſed the higheſt dignities in the church, being contented with a prebend in the cathedral of Glouceſter. Dr. More died in 1687, and was buried in the chapel of Chriſt's college. His philoſophical and theological works, which were once popular, have been collected into two volumes, folio.—Biog. Brit.

MORE or Morus (Alexander), a proteſtant divine, was born at Caſtres in Languedoc, where his father, a native of Scotland, was preſident of the college. After finiſhing his ſtudies at Geneva he became a miniſter at Middleburg, from whence he removed to Amſterdam, and laſtly to Paris, where he was choſen paſtor of the reformed church. He died in 1670. He wrote ſome treatiſes of controverſy on the ſubject of nce, and a Reply to Milton's second De-ce of the People of England.—Moreri.

le.

More (ſir Francis), a learned Engliſh yer, was a member of the Middle Tem-
, and died in 1621. His works are, 1.
es collected and reported, Lond. 1693, o; 2. Readings upon 4 Jac. I. in the dle Temple, folio, 1676.—Gen. Biog.
t.

More (ſir Anthony), a celebrated painter, a native of Utrecht, and a diſciple of n Schorel. He painted the portraits of eral ſovereign princes, particularly Mary en of England. He died at Antwerp in 7, aged 56.—Pilkington. Walpole.

More (Henry), a diſſenting miniſter, a native of Devonſhire, and became paſof a congregation at Liſkeard in Corn-l, where he died in 1802. His poems, ch evince conſiderable ingenuity, have n publiſhed in one volume, quarto, with ort account of Mr. More, by Dr. Aikin.

Moreau (James), a French phyſician, born at Chalons in 1647. He was the ple and friend of Guy Patin. Moreau ted the envy of the other phyſicians by ſing their errors in his public theſes.
died in 1729. His works are, Conſul-ons upon Rheumatiſm; a Treatiſe on Knowlege of Continual Fevers; and a ertation on Dropſy.—Moreri.

Moreau (Jacob Nicholas), counſellor of court of aids, hiſtoriographer of France, rian to the queen, and cenſor royal, born at St. Florentine in 1717. He te ſeveral works, the chief of which are,
Memoires pour ſervir à l'Hiſtoire des Ca-cas, 12mo.; 2 Memoires pour ſervir a ſt. de notre tems, 2 vols. 12mo.; 3. Ob-ateur Hollandois; 4. Principes de Mo, de Politique et de droit Publique, ou ours ſur l'Hiſt. de France, 21 vols. 8vo. was guillotined in 1794.—Nouv. Dict.

Moreelse (Paul), a famous painter, was at Utrecht in 1575. He was a pupil Michael Mirevelt, and died in 1638.
e wood-cuts by him in chiaro-ſcuro are in great eſteem.—Pilkington.

Morel, the name of ſeveral learned ters in France. William Morel was profeſſor of Greek, and director of the 's printing-houſe at Paris, where he died 564. Frederick, who was interpreter he Greek and Latin tongues, and alſo ter to the king, died in 1583. His ſon derick Morel, was alſo a learned man, died in 1630, after having printed a ber of valuable authors.—Moreri.

Morel (Andrew), a famous antiquary, a native of Bern in Switzerland. He elled in the ſcience of medals, and was author of a work of great value, which never completed, entitled, Specimen uni-æ rei nummariæ antiquæ, 2 vols. 8vo.
was offered the place of keeper of the l cabinet of medals at Paris, on condition of renouncing the proteſtant religion, which he refuſed. He was confined ſome time in the Baſtile, and on gaining his liberty he went to Armſtadt, in Germany, where he died in 1703. In 1734 was publiſhed, in 2 vols. folio, Theſaurus Morellianus, ſive Familiarum Romanorum Numiſmata omnia, et diſpoſita ab Andrea Morellio cum commentariis Havercampi.—Moreri.

Morell (Thomas), a learned Engliſh divine and lexicographer, was born in 1701, and died in 1784. He publiſhed valuable editions of Ainſworth's Latin Dictionary, and Hedericus's Greek Lexicon; and was the author of Annotations on Locke's Eſſay on the Human Underſtanding; he alſo aſſiſted Hogarth in writing his Analyſis of Beauty, and ſelected the paſſages of Scripture for Handel's Oratorios.—Anecd. of Bowyer.

Morely (lord), an ingenious nobleman, was the ſon of ſir Thomas Parker, in the county of Eſſex, and a great favourite with Henry VIII. who raiſed him to the peerage. He ſecured that monarch's favour by concurring in his divorce from Catherine, and his marriage with Anne Boleyn. He died in 1547. Lord Morely wrote ſeveral Latin poems.—Walpole's Royal and Noble Authors.

Moreri (Louis), a French divine and hiſtoriographer, was born in Provence in 1643. He publiſhed in 1673, in one volume, folio, the Hiſtorical Dictionary which bears his name. His intenſe application in preparing a ſecond edition of this great undertaking, produced a diſorder of which he died in 1680. The firſt volume of this edition came out a little before his death, and the ſecond ſome months afterwards. This dictionary has been ſeveral times reviſed and augmented. The beſt editions are that of 1749, &c. 10 vols. folio; and 1759, 10 vols.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

Mores (Edward Rowe), an Engliſh antiquary, was born in 1730 at Tunſtall in Kent, and educated at Merchant Taylor's ſchool, from whence he removed to Queen's college, Oxford, where he publiſhed an ancient fragment, entitled, Nomina et Inſignia Gentilitia Nobilium Equitumque ſub Edvardo primo Rege Militantium, 4to. In 1752 he was choſen a fellow of the ſociety of antiquaries; and he projected the equitable ſociety for inſurance on lives and ſurvivorſhip by annuities. He was the author of the Hiſtory and Antiquities of Tunſtall in Kent, and a Diſſertation on Founders and Founderies. He died in 1778.—Pref. to Hiſt. of Tunſtall.

Morett, an ingenious artiſt in the reign of Henry VIII. He was a goldſmith, and executed ſeveral curious works after the deſigns of Holbein.—Granger.

Morgagni (John Baptiſt), a celebrated anatomiſt, was born at Forli, in Italy, in 1682. He became profeſſor of medicine at Bologna, from whence he removed to Padua on being elected to the chair of anatomy. He died in 1771. His works are, 1. Adverſaria Ana-tomica; 2. Nova Inſtitutionum Medicarum Idea; 3. De Sedibus et Cauſis Morborum per anatomem indagatis; 4. Epiſtolæ Anatomicæ. An edition of his works appeared in 1765, in 5 vols.—Nouv. Dict.

Morgan (William), an eminent Welſh prelate, was educated at St. John's college, Cambridge, after which he obtained the vicarage of Welſhpool, and in 1595 was made biſhop of Landaff, from whence he was tranſlated to St. Aſaph in 1601. He died in 1604. He had a principal concern in the tranſlation of the Bible into Welſh, printed firſt in 1588.—Owen's Camb. Biog.

Morgan Mwynvawr, or Morgan the courteous, a Welſh prince, who was a lover of peace, though a great warrior. He was the friend of Edgar, king of England, and died in 1001, aged 129.—Ibid.

Morgan, the ſon of Cadwgan, prince of Powys, a ferocious character; who, in his latter days, repented and went on a pilgrimage to Jeruſalem, but died at Cyprus on his return, A. D. 1126.—Ibid.

Morgan (George Cadogan), a diſſenting miniſter, was born in Bridgend, in Glamorganſhire. He was the nephew and pupil of the celebrated Dr. Price; and became teacher of a congregation at Norwich. He died in 1798. His works are Lectures on Electricity; Obſervations and Experiments upon the Light of Bodies in a ſtate of Combuſtion.—Gent. Mag. Monthly Mag.

Morgues (Matthew de), ſieur de St. Germain, preacher to Louis XIII. and almoner to Mary de Medicis, was born in Languedoc in 1582. He wrote ſeveral pieces againſt cardinal Richelieu, on which account he was obliged to quit the kingdom, but after the death of that miniſter he returned to Paris, where he died in 1670. He wrote Sermons and other works.—Moreri.

Morhoff (Daniel George), a learned writer, was born in the duchy of Mecklenburg in 1639. In 1660 he was choſen profeſſor of poetry at Roſtock, from whence he removed to Kiel, where he diſcharged the ſame office, but afterwards became profeſſor of hiſtory and librarian. He died in 1691. His principal works are, 1. Polyhiſtor. ſive de Notitia Auctorum et Rerum, 2 vols. 4to.; 2. Princeps Medicus, 4to. This is a curious diſſertation on the pretenſions of the kings of France and England to the power of curing the ſcrofula or king's evil; 3. Diſſertationes, 4to; 4. Orationes.—Moreri.

Morice (ſir William), an Engliſh gentleman, memorable for the ſhare which he had in bringing about the reſtoration of Charles II. He was the kinſman of general Monk, who procured him the place of ſecretary of ſtate, which he reſigned in 1668, and died in 1676. He wrote a book called, The Common Right of the Lord's Supper aſſerted, printed in 4to. in 1651, and in folio, 1660.—Granger.

Morillo (Bartholomew), a Spaniſh painter, was born at Seville in 1613. He ſtudied in Italy, where he was greatly admired, and compared to Paul Veroneſe. On his return to Spain he was offered the poſt of firſt painter to the king, which honour he declined from extreme modeſty. He died in 1685.—D'Argenville.

Morin (Peter), a learned French critic, was born at Paris in 1531. He ſpent ſeveral years in the printing office of Paul Manutius at Venice; and afterwards taught Greek and geography at Vicenza, from whence he was invited to Ferrara, Cardinal Borromeo being apprized of his merit called him to Rome, where he was employed on the edition of the Septuagint, on that of the Vulgate, and laſtly on the great edition of the Bible tranſlated from the Greek verſion. He died in 1608. Morin publiſhed a collection of General Councils, and other works.—Moreri.

Morin (John Baptiſt), an aſtrologer, was born at Ville Franche in 1583. He ſtudied phyſic at Avignon, and took his doctor's degree in that faculty. His pretended ſkill in aſtrology, and the fame acquired by the caſual fulfilment of ſome of his predictions, recommended him to the cardinals Richelieu and Mazarine, the latter of whom procured him the place of mathematical profeſſor in the royal college, with a handſome penſion. Morin died in 1656. He wrote Aſtrologia Gallica, folio; and a curious little book againſt againſt the Præadamites.—Moreri.

Morin (John), a learned Frenchman, was born at Blois in 1591, and brought up in the proteſtant religion, which he abjured in conſequence of the arguments of cardinal du Perron, or from other motives. He then entered into the congregation of the oratory, and publiſhed many learned works, particularly Exercitations upon the Samaritan Pentateuch, and an edition of the Septuagint. He died in 1659.—Ibid.

Morin (Simon), a French fanatic was born at Richemont. In 1647 he publiſhed a ſtrange book, in which he called himſelf Jeſus Chriſt, and the ſecond Meſſiah. Notwithſtanding his extreme ignorance he obtained numerous followers, but was burnt alive at Paris in 1663.—Ibid.

Morin (Stephen), a proteſtant divine, was born at Caen in 1625. He ſtudied divinity under the learned du Moulin, and afterwards became miniſter at his native place, but on the revocation of the edict of Nantes he retired to Holland and was choſen profeſſor of the oriental languages at Amſterdam. He died in 1700. He wrote diſſertations in Latin on ſeveral ſubjects of antiquity which are very curious and erudite. The edition of Dordt, 1700, 8vo. is the beſt. Morin alſo wrote the Life of Samuel Bochart. His ſon Henry was a learned man. He became a catholic, after being a proteſtant miniſter, and died in 1728. He wrote Dif-tations in the Memoirs of the Academy Inſcriptions, of which he was a member. Ibid.

Morin (Louis), a French phyſician, was n at Mans in 1635, and died in 1715. was a member of the academy of ſciences, l made a valuable index to the works of pocrates, in Greek and Latin.—Ibid.

Morin (John), profeſſor of philoſophy Chartres, was the author of a piece en- ed, Mechaniſme Univerſel, and a Treatiſe Electricity. He died in 1764, aged 59. Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

Moriniere (Adrian Claude le Fort de , a French writer, was born at Paris in 6, and died in 1768. His principal works , 1. Choix des Poeſies Morales; 2. Bib- heque Poetique; 3. Paſſe-temps Poetiques, toriques, et Critiques, &c.—Ibid.

Morison (Robert), a phyſician and pro- r of botany at Oxford, was born at Aber- in 1620. He ſtudied in the univerſity is native place till interrupted by the l wars, in which he diſplayed great zeal courage in behalf of royalty, particularly he bridge of Aberdeen, in a battle be- en the inhabitants and the republicans. r this he went to France, where he took doctor's degree, and was appointed direc- of the royal garden at Blois. In 1660 returned to England, and was nominated ſician to Charles II. and regius profeſſor otany at Oxford. Doctor Moriſon died in 3. He read botanical lectures in the en at Oxford. His works are, Preludia nica, 2 vols. 8vo.; Plantarum umbilli- um diſtributio, folio; and Hiſtoria Plan- m, folio. He finiſhed only the ſecond of this laſt, which is a performance that him great honour. It was continued acob Bobart.—Pulteney's Sketches of Bo-

Morisot (Claude Bartholomew), a ch writer, was born at Dijon in 1592, died in 1661. He wrote Peruviana, or Secret Hiſtory of Cardinal Richelieu, of Medicis, and the Duke of Orleans, 1645. He was alſo the author of ſome works.—Moreri.

Morland (ſir Samuel), an Engliſh ſtateſ- was born in Berkſhire. He was under tary to Thurlow, and employed by well in ſeveral embaſſies. The ſer- he rendered to Charles I. gained him itle of baronet. He wrote a book in entitled, Urim of Conſcience. His ſon naſter of mechanics to Charles II. and ted the ſpeaking trumpet, alſo a fire e, and a capſtan for heaving up anchors, Granger.

Morland (George), a celebrated painter, he ſon of an artiſt in London, who em- d him conſtantly in making drawings le. By this means young Morland ac- d a wonderful facility of invention and ty of execution; but owing to the nar- and illiberal manner in which his ta- lents were uſed by his father, he contracted low habits, and formed bad connexions. His pictures, however, ſoon became objects of eſtimation and inquiry; and the perſons who adminiſtered to his intemperance profited by his weakneſs to get into their poſſeſſion pieces of ineſtimable value. Hence he was always at work, and always poor. Many of his beſt pictures were painted in ſpunging-houſes, to clear him from arreſt, or in ale-houſes to diſcharge his reckoning. He died in one of the former deſcription in 1804, aged 40, and his wife only ſurvived him two days. The pictures of this incomparable artiſt are faithful repreſentations of rural nature and human life. In the deſcription of farm yards, rural landſcapes, cattle, fiſhermen and ſmugglers on the ſea-coaſt, he is not excelled.—Monthly Mag.

Morley (George), an Engliſh prelate, was born in London in 1597, and educated at Weſtminſter ſchool, from whence he was elected to Chriſt church, Oxford. He was appointed by Charles I. canon of Chriſt church, and was one of the divines who aſſiſted him at the treaty of Newport. In 1649 he went abroad, and did not return till the reſtoration, when he was made dean of Chriſt church, and ſoon afterwards biſhop of Worceſter. In 1662 he was tranſlated to Wincheſter, to which ſee he was a great benefactor. He died in 1684. He was a munificent prelate, and gave large benefactions to ſeveral inſtitutions. He publiſhed religious treatiſes in one vol. 4to.—Biog. Brit.

Mornac (Anthony), a French advocate and poet, who was reſpected for his learning and probity. He wrote verſes under the title of Feriæ Forenſes, 8vo.; alſo ſeveral works on Juriſprudence, in 4 vols. folio. He died in 1619.—Moreri.

Mornay (Philip de), lord of Pleſſis Marlay, a celebrated French nobleman, was born in 1549, of a noble family. He was bred in the proteſtant perſuaſion, and ſtudied at ſeveral univerſities. In 1576 he went to the court of the king of Navarre, afterwards Henry IV. who made him a member of his council. In 1578 he publiſhed a Treatiſe on the Church; and in the year following began his work on the Truth of the Chriſtian Religion. In 1598 he publiſhed his book on the Euchariſt, which occaſioned a conference between him and Du Perron; the reſult of which was that Mornay obtained the appellation of the Proteſtant Pope. In 1607, he printed a famous book entitled, The Myſtery of Iniquity, or the Hiſtory of the Papacy. He died at his ſeat in Poictou in 1623. Beſides the above he wrote ſeveral other works.—Bayle.

Morosoni (Francis), a brave commander, was born at Venice in 1618. He ſhewed great bravery in ſeveral naval actions, and defended Candia againſt the Turks with uncommon valour. The beſiegers loſt 120,000 men, and the Venetians about a fourth of the number. The grand vizier endeavoured to bribe him, and offered to make him prince of Wallachia and Moldavia, but Morosini was not to be corrupted. When the place surrendered in 1669 he was treated with great honour by the victors; but on his return to Venice he was arrested by order of the senate. However, he soon recovered his liberty, and was made procurator of St. Mark. The war being renewed he resumed the command, and took several places from the Turks, and gained a great naval victory near the Dardanelles. In 1688 he was elected doge. He died in 1694.—Moreri.

Morris (Lewis), a Welsh antiquary and poet, was born in the isle of Anglesey in 1702, and died in 1765 at Penbryn in Cardiganshire. He surveyed the coast of Wales in 1737, by order of the admiralty board, and his work was published in 1748. Some of his poetical pieces in the Welsh language have been printed, and he left above 80 volumes of MSS. of antiquity now deposited in the Welsh charity school, London.—Owen's Camb. Biog.

Morris (Richard), brother of the above, was also a poet and critic in his native language. He was clerk in the navy pay office, and superintended the printing of two valuable editions of the Welsh Bible. He died in 1779. William Morris, another brother, was a great collector of Welsh MSS. and died comptroller of the customs at Holyhead in 1764.—Ibid.

Mortimer (John Hamilton), an English painter, was born at East Bourne, in Sussex, in 1739. He received his first instructions from his uncle, who was an eminent painter; but afterwards he became a pupil of Hudson, at the same time with sir Joshua Reynolds. Mortimer obtained one of the first prizes for an historical picture from the society for the encouragement of the arts. His subject was the conversion of the Britons. In 1779 he was appointed by his majesty a royal academician, without any solicitation; he died the same year.—Monthly Mag. Vol. I. Pilkington.

Mortimer (John), an English agricultural writer, who is known by a good practical Treatise on Husbandry. He died in 1736.—Mortimer's Student's Dict.

Morton (Thomas), a learned bishop, was born at York in 1564, and educated at St. John's college, Cambridge, where he was chosen fellow. In 1603 he attended lord Eure, ambassador to the emperor of Germany, as his chaplain; after which he was advanced to the bishopric of Chester, from whence he was translated to Lichfield and Coventry in 1618 and in 1632 to Durham. He suffered many hardships in the great rebellion from the republican party, notwithstanding his great moderation and piety, which were acknowledged and esteemed by all. He died in 1659. He wrote some practical books in divinity.—Life by Dr. J. Barwick.

Morton (James earl of) regent of Scotland, was born at Dalkeith in 1530, and educated under the famous Buchanan at Paris. He returned to Scotland in 1554, and greatly promoted the reformation; but being accused of a concern in the murder of lord Darnley he fled to England. He was afterwards made chancellor of Scotland, and in 1574 succeeded the earl of Mar as regent, which office he resigned in 1579. He was condemned for high treason in 1581, and what is remarkable was beheaded by a machine the model of which he had seen in England. It was called the Maiden, and resembled the guillotine, since so much used in France. Morton was the first and last who suffered by it in Scotland.—Robertson's Hist. Scotland.

Morton (John), an English prelate and statesman, was a native of Dorchester, and became so eminent for his skill in jurisprudence as to become privy counsellor to both Henry VI. and Edward IV. He was also made bishop of Ely, from whence he was translated to Canterbury. He was in great favour with Henry VII. who appointed him chancellor of England, and obtained for him a cardinalship. He died in 1500.—Lives of Chancellors. Biog. Brit.

Moschopulus (Emanuel), a Greek grammarian of the 14th century. He was a native of Crete, and wrote a Treatise on Grammar, printed first in 1545, 4to. His nephew Emanuel was a good mathematician and antiquary. He composed a Greek Lexicon, 1545.—Moreri.

Moschus and Bion, two Greek poets of antiquity, who were contemporaries, and whose works are usually printed together in the Poetæ Minores. They lived in the time of Ptolemy Philadelphus.—Vossius de Poet. Græc.

Moses, the celebrated Jewish legislator, was born in Egypt of Hebrew parents, 1571 B.C. and bred up in the court of Pharaoh, but having slain an Egyptian, he fled into Midian, where he received the divine commission to deliver his captive countrymen. He then returned to Egypt, and after performing a number of miracles before Pharaoh, conducted the Israelites through the Red Sea, and gave them laws and ordinances during their journey through the wilderness. He died at the age of 120.—Gray's Key O. T.

Moses (Micosti), a Spanish rabbi of the 14th century, who published at Venice a folio volume entitled, The Great Book of Precepts, which is explanatory of the Jewish law.—Buxtorf.

Mosheim (John Lawrence), a learned German divine, was born in 1695 of a noble family at Lubeck. He became professor of divinity at Helmstadt, and was afterwards chancellor of the university of Gottingen, where he died in 1755. He translated Cudworth's Intellectual System of the Universe into Latin, with learned notes; but his greateſt work is an eccleſiaſtical hiſtory, written in Latin, and tranſlated into Engliſh by Dr. Maclaine. He was alſo the author of Diſſertationes Sacræ, Leipſic, 4to.; and Sermons.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

Moss (Robert), an Engliſh divine and dean of Norwich, was born at Gillingham, in Norfolk, in 1666. He took his degrees at Cambridge, and became chaplain to queen Anne, and a popular preacher. Dr. Moſs died in 1729. His ſermons have been printed in 8 vols. 8vo.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Mothe le Vayer (Francis de la), counſellor of ſtate, and preceptor to the duke of Anjou, was born at Paris in 1588. He was one of the firſt members of the French academy, and obtained ſeveral advantageous poſts. He died in 1672. His works conſiſt of 15 volumes in 12mo.—Moreri.

Mothe le Vayer de Boutigni (Francis de la), maſter of requeſts, and of the ſame family with the preceding, died in 1685. He wrote a popular romance called, Tharſis et Zelie, and other works.—Ibid.

Motherby (George), an Engliſh phyſician, who compiled a Medical Dictionary, in one vol. folio, a work of great merit. He died in 1793, at the age of 62.—Hutchinſon's Biog. Med.

Motte (Antony Houdart de la), an ingenious French writer, was born at Paris in 1672. At the age of 20 he produced a play, called, Les Originaux, which met with a bad reception. His ſucceeding pieces had better ſucceſs. His Diſcourſe upon Homer is a maſterly production, but it was attacked by madame Dacier. He died in 1731. His works were publiſhed in 11 vols. 8vo. 1754.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

Motteux (Peter Anthony), a French writer, was born in Normandy in 1660. On the revocation of the edict of Nantes, he viſited England, and turned merchant. He tranſlated Don Quixote into Engliſh, and wrote ſeveral pieces. He died in 1718.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Motteville (Francis Bertrand, dame de), a French lady, was born in Normandy about 1615. She was attendant on Anne of Auſtria, whoſe hiſtory ſhe wrote, in 5 vols. which has been frequently printed. She died in 1689.—Moreri Mottley (John), an Engliſh gentleman, was born in London in 1692. He wrote five dramatic pieces, and the Life of the czar Peter the Great. He died in 1750.—Biog. Dram.

Moucheron (Iſaac), a landſcape painter, was born at Amſterdam in 1670. He ſketched a number of fine views in Italy after nature. He died at Amſterdam in 1744.—Pilkington.

Mouffet (Thomas), an Engliſh medical writer, and the firſt who introduced chemical remedies into this country. He took his doctor's degree abroad, and ſettled at Ipſwich, but ſpent the latter part of his life near Wilton, in Wiltſhire. He died about 1600. His principal work is entitled, Theatrum Inſectorum, 1634, folio.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Moulin (Charles du), a French advocate, who on account of an impediment in his ſpeech quitted the bar and applied to the compoſition of ſeveral works on juriſprudence, which procured him the title of the Papinian of France. Being a proteſtant the people of Paris pillaged his houſe in 1552, on which he went to Baſle, from whence he removed to ſeveral other places. On his return to Paris in 1564 he was [illegible] to the priſon of Conciergerie, for ſome reflections made by him on the council of Trent. At the ſolicitation of the queen of Navarre, he obtained his liberty. He died a Roman catholic in 1566, aged 66. His works were printed in 1681, in 5 vols. folio.—Bayle. Moreri.

Moulin (Peter du), a proteſtant divine, was born at the caſtle of Buhny, in the Vexin, in 1568. After ſtudying at Leyden he became miniſter at Charenton. In 1615 he viſited England, and James I. gave him a prebend in the cathedral of Canterbury. He afterwards went to Sedan, and became profeſſor of divinity, and had the principal management of the concerns of the proteſtants in France. He died in 1658. His principal works are, the Anatomy of Arminianiſm, in Latin, folio; Treatiſe on the Keys of the Church; the Capuchin, or the Hiſtory of the Monks; the Novelty of Popery; a Defence of the Reformed Churches.—Bayle.

Moulin (Peter du), ſon of the above, was chaplain to Charles II. and prebendary of Canterbury, where he died in 1684, aged 84. He wrote, 1. the Peace of the Soul, 12mo.; 2. Clamor Regii Sanguinis, which being anonymous was attributed by Milton to Alexander More; 3. a Defence of the Proteſtant Religion in Engliſh. Lewis du Moulin, his brother, became a violent Independent, and wrote, 1, Paræneſis ad ædificatores Imperii, dedicated to Oliver Cromwell; 2. Patronus Bonæ Fidei, a fierce invective againſt the church of England. He died in 1680, aged 77.—Great Hiſt. Dict. Bayle.

Moulin (Gabriel), a Romiſh eccleſiaſtic, who had the benefice of Maneval in the diocese of Liſieux in France. He wrote a Hiſtory of Normandy under the Dukes, 1631, folio; Hiſtory of the Conqueſts of the Normans in Naples and Sicily, 1658, folio. Moreri.

Mountfort (William), an Engliſh actor and dramatic writer, was born in Staffordſhire in 1659. Cibber deſcribes him as an excellent performer in the comic line. He was murdered by captain Hill and lord Mohun in Norfolk-ſtreet, in the Strand, in the winter of 1692. Hill made his eſcape, and lord Mohun, for want of ſufficient evidence, was acquitted. Mr. Mountfort wrote ſix dramatic pieces.—Biog. Dram.

Mouret (John Joſeph), a French muſician, was born at Avignon in 1682. He compoſed ſeveral elegant works, and died in 1738.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

Mourgues (Michael), a French jeſuit, who wrote a treatiſe on French Poetry, another on Geometry, and other works. He died in 1713.—Moreri.

Mouvans (Paul Richard), ſurnamed the Brave, a proteſtant officer, who greatly diſtinguiſhed himſelf in the civil wars of France in the [illegible] century, and died in battle in 1568.—Ib.

Moxon (Joſeph), hydrographer to Charles II. and a mathematical writer, was born at Wakefield, near Yorkſhire, in 1627, and died about 1700. He taught mathematics, and made maps and globes, in Warwick-lane, London. Beſides his book on Navigation, Aſtronomy, &c. he publiſhed one on Mechanic Exerciſes, or the Doctrines of Handy-Work. It is now very ſcarce.—Granger.

Moyle (Walter), an ingenious writer, was born in Cornwall in 1672. He received his academical education at Oxford, and removed from thence to the Temple, where he ſtudied the law with great application. He was for ſome years a member of parliament, and reſided in London. But on quitting his ſeat he retired to his eſtate, where he devoted himſelf to ſtudy, the fruits of which appeared in ſeveral ingenious pieces, the principal of which is a Diſſertation on the Miracle of the Thundering Legion. He died in 1721. His works have been publiſhed in 2 vols. 8vo.—Biog. Brit.

Moyse (Henry), a Scotch gentleman, who was page to king James I. and one of the gentlemen of his privy-chamber. He wrote a diary of what paſſed at court in his time, which was printed in 1753. He died in 1630, aged 57.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Mozart (Wolfgang), a famous muſician, was born at Saltzburg in Germany in 1756. He received his inſtructions from his father, who was maſter of the chapel at Saltzburg; and his proficiency was ſo great, that when a child he played before the emperor, who called him the "little ſorcerer." In 1763 he accompanied his father and ſiſter to London, where he performed before the king, and publiſhed ſix ſonatas for the harpſichord. In 1766 this muſical family returned to Saltzburg. Three years afterwards young Mozart went to Italy, where his talents excited great admiration, and the pope conferred on him the order of the golden ſpur. In his twenty-fifth year he ſettled at Vienna, and was greatly eſteemed by the emperor Joſeph II. This ingenious man died in 1791. His works are highly admired by the beſt judges.—Monthly Mag.

Mudge (John), an Engliſh phyſician, and an excellent mechanic, was the ſon of Mr. Zachary Mudge, vicar of St. Andrew's, Plymouth, and well known by a volume of excellent Sermons, and an ingenious eſſay for a new verſion of the Pſalms. Dr. John Mudge ſettled as a phyſician at Plymouth, where he wrote a Treatiſe on the Catarrhous Cough, 12mo. He improved the conſtruction of reflecting teleſcopes, and died in 1793. His brother Thomas was an excellent watchmaker, and made great improvements in time-keepers, on which he wrote a treatiſe.—Gent. Mag.

Mudo (Hernandez), a Spaniſh painter, who was both deaf and dumb. He was the diſciple of Titian, and was employed by Philip II. king of Spain in ornamenting the Eſcurial.—Cumberland's Account of Spaniſh Painters.

Muet (Peter le), an architect, was born at D'jon in 1591. He ſuperintended the fortifications of ſeveral towns in Picardy, and was employed by Anne of Auſtria in building the church of Val de Grace at Paris. He wrote ſome treatiſes on architecture, and died in 1669.—D'Argenville, vies des Architects.

Muggleton (Lodowick), an Engliſh taylor and fanatic, who wrote ſeveral books full of abſurdity and blaſphemy, which were burnt by the hangman, and the author pilloried; however, he obtained ſome followers, and his ſect is not quite extinct to this day. He died in 1697, aged 90.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Muis (Simeon de), profeſſor of Hebrew in the royal college at Paris, died in 1664, aged 57. He was well verſed in the oriental languages, and wrote an eſteemed Commentary on the Pſalms, in Latin, 2 vols. 4to.—Moreri.

Mulgrave (Conſtantine Phipps, lord), was the eldeſt ſon of lord Mulgrave, by the daughter of the earl of Briſtol. He was born in 1746, ſucceeded to his Iriſh title in 1775, and created an Engliſh peer in 1790. He entered early into the ſea ſervice, and became poſt-captain in 1765. At the general election in 1768 he was member for Lincoln, and took an active part in parliament on ſeveral popular queſtions, particularly thoſe on libels and the Weſtminſter election: on the latter of which he wrote a pamphlet, entitled, "A Letter from a Member of Parliament to one of his Conſtituents on the late Proceedings in the Houſe of Commons on the Middleſex Election," 8vo. In 1773 he went towards the North Pole on a voyage of diſcovery with two ſhips, one commanded by him and the other by captain Lutwidge. Of this voyage lord Mulgrave publiſhed a Narrative, in quarto. His lordſhip was a good navigator and mathematician, and died in 1792.—Europ. Mag.

Muller (John), a celebrated engraver of Holland, who flouriſhed about the year 1600. He was brought up under Goltzius, whoſe manner he imitated with ſucceſs.—Moreri.

Mummius (Lucius), a Roman conſul, who, for his victories over the Achæans, was called Achaicus. He deſtroyed Corinth, Thebes, and Chalcis, and ſent the works of the ancient artiſts which he found to Rome, A.D. 146. He was afterwards diſgraced, and exiled to Delos, where he died.—Strabo. Livy.

MUNCER (Thomas), a furious German anabaptiſt, was born at Swickaw in Miſnia. He united with one Storck, and gained a great number of followers, who were re-baptized naked, and lived in common. Theſe enthuſiaſts committed ſhocking outrages, and pretended to prophecy and divine viſions. Muncer preached againſt Luther as well as againſt the pope. At Mulhauſen he eſtabliſhed a ſenate, and aſſumed the title of king. The landgrave of Heſſe, and other princes, marched againſt Muncer, whoſe army was defeated notwithſtanding his promiſe of victory. He then fled to Franchauſen, where he was diſcovered and ſent back to Mulhauſen, and executed in 1525.—Maluquet, Dict. des Hereſies.

MUNCKER (Thomas), a learned German, who publiſhed, 1. Mythographi Latini; 2. An edition of Hyginus, with notes. He died in 1680.—Moreri.

MUNDINUS, a celebrated anatomiſt, was born at Florence, and died at Bologna in 1318. His treatiſe on anatomy was printed at Paris in 1478, folio.—Ibid.

MUNICH (Burchard Chriſtopher), a marſhal in the ſervice of Ruſſia, was a native of Oldenburgh. He ſerved with great glory againſt the Turks in 1737; but in 1741, by order of the empreſs Elizabeth, he was ſent to Siberia, where he remained twenty years. At the acceſſion of Peter III. he was recalled, and appeared at court in the ſheepſkin dreſs which he uſed to wear in his exile. The emperor reſtored him to his former rank, and he enjoyed the favour of Peter and Catherine till his death, which happened at Riga in 1767.—Tooke's Hiſt. Ruſſia.

MUNNICKS (John) profeſſor of anatomy, botany, and phyſic, at Utrecht, died in 1681, aged 59. He wrote, 1. Diſſertatio de partis earumdemque inſpectiona; 2. Chirurgia ad praxim hodiernam adornata; 3. De Vena Anatomica, &c.—Moreri.

MUNSTER (Sebaſtian), a learned divine, was born at Ingelheim in 1489. He entered among the cordeliers, but afterwards became a proteſtant. He died of the plague at Baſil in 1552. Munſter was called the Ezras and Strabo of Germany. He wrote a Hebrew Grammar and Dictionary; and publiſhed a Coſmography in folio; and a Latin verſion of the Old Teſtament, with other learned works.—Melch. Adam. in vit. Germ. Theol.

MUNTING (Abraham), a learned botaniſt, was born at Groningen in 1626, and died in 1683. His principal works are, 1. Phytographia Curioſa, folio; 2. De Herba Britannica, 4to.; 3. Aloes Hiſtoria, 4to.—Halleri Bibl. Botan.

MURALT (Beat-Louis de), was born at Berne. He wrote Letters upon the French and Engliſh, 2 vols. 12mo.; and Fables, 1753, 8vo. Muralt died in 1760.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

MURATORI (Louis-Anthony), a learned writer, was born at Vignola in the duchy of Modena, in 1672. At the age of 22 he was invited to Milan by the count Charles Borromeo, who employed him as librarian of the Ambroſian college. The duke of Modena in 1700 recalled him to his own country, and made him his librarian, and keeper of the public archives. Muratori was a member of the royal ſociety of London, and of ſeveral other learned bodies. But he was expoſed to the calumnies and perſecutions of ſome bigots of his church, who accuſed him of holding heretical notions, and even accuſed him to Benedict XIV. That pontiff, however, had too much liberality to attend to the charge, and wrote a flattering letter, in which he did ample juſtice to the character of Muratori, who died in 1750. His works have been printed in 46 vols. folio. The principal are, 1. Anecdota quæ ex Ambroſianæ Bibliothecæ codicibus nunc primum eruit, notis et diſquiſitionibus, &c.; 2. Anecdota Græca, quæ ex MSS. codicibus nunc primum eruit; 3. Rerum Italicarum Scriptores; 4. Antiquitates Italicæ medii Ævi; 5. Novus Theſaurus veterum inſcriptionum; 6. Annali d'Italia; 7. Della perfetta Poeſiana Italiana.—Life written by his nephew J. F. S. Muratori.

MURET (Marc Anthony), a learned French critic, was born near Limoges, in 1526. At the age of eighteen he read lectures upon Cicero and Terence in the college of Auch; from whence he proceeded to the capital, where he taught with great reputation. But the vivacity of his character raiſed him enemies, and he was accuſed of an abominable crime, which obliged him to quit Paris. He then went to Toulouſe, where he was charged with the ſame offence, and to avoid capital puniſhment he eſcaped to Italy. At Rome he was well received, admitted to orders, and obtained ſome rich benefices. He died there in 1585. His works conſiſt of valuable notes on the Latin Claſſics, poems, orations, &c. The whole were publiſhed together at Verona, in 5 vols. 8vo.; but badly printed, and on vile paper.—Bayle. Moreri.

MURILLO (Bartholomew), a Spaniſh painter, was born near Seville, in 1610, and died at Madrid in 1685. He painted hiſtorical pieces and landſcapes in a beautiful ſtyle, and he has been reckoned equal to Paul Veroneſe. The king of Spain gave him a patent of nobility.—Cumberland's Account of Spaniſh Painters.

MURPHY (Arthur), a dramatic and miſcellaneous writer, was born at Cork in 1727, and educated at St. Omer's. At the age of eighteen he returned to Ireland, and was placed under a merchant who was his relation. But not liking that profeſſion he came to London, and having a great inclination to the ſtage he made an effort in the character of Othello, but without ſucceſs. He then commenced writer, and produced the Orphan of China, a tragedy, which was well received. He alſo wrote a weekly paper, called the Gray's Inn Journal; and two others in defence of government, entitled, the Teſt and Auditor. Having ſtudied the law he was called to the bar by the ſociety of Lincoln's Inn, but never had much practice. His plays of the Grecian Daughter; All in the Wrong; the Way to Keep Him, and the Citizen, had great ſucceſs, and produced the author wealth and fame. Mr. Murphy alſo acquired conſiderable reputation by his Lives of Fielding and Johnſon; and above all by his tranſlation of Tacitus. He was a commiſſioner of bankrupts, and for the laſt two years of his life had a penſion of 200l. a year. His laſt literary performance was the Life of Garrick, which is by no means equal to his former works. He died at Brompton in 1805. Mr. Murphy was the intimate friend of Dr. Johnſon, Burke, Garrick, Foote, and other eminent men.—Public Characters, vol. I. Monthly Mag.

MURRAY (James earl of), the natural ſon of James V. king of Scotland, by the daughter of the earl of Mar, was born in 1529. He was created earl of Murray by queen Mary, whom he treated in the moſt ungrateful manner. In 1567 he aſſumed the regency of Scotland, during the minority of James VI. He was ſhot at Linlithgow, in 1571, by a man named Hamilton, whoſe wife he had debauched.—Robertſon.

MURRAY (William, earl of Mansfield), an illuſtrious lawyer, was the fourth ſon of David earl of Stormont, and born at Perth in 1705. He received his education at Weſtminſter ſchool, from whence he was elected ſtudent of Chriſt church, Oxford, in 1723. After taking his degrees in arts he went on his travels, and at his return entered of Lincoln's Inn, where he was called to the bar. His eloquence gained him numerous admirers, and when he pleaded, the court was crowded. Pope, with whom he was intimate, complimented him with the appellation of 'ſilver-tongued Murray.' In 1742 he became ſolicitor-general, and was elected member of parliament. In 1754 he was made attorney-general, and in 1756 chief juſtice of the king's bench, ſoon after which he was created baron Mansfield. The year following he accepted the office of chancellor of the exchequer, which was done merely to effect a coalition of parties; and thereby an adminiſtration was formed, which carried the Britiſh arms to the higheſt pitch of glory. In 1776 his lordſhip was created an earl, with remainder to Louiſa viſcounteſs Stormont, and her heirs male. In 1780, when the metropolis was a ſcene of lawleſs riot, his lordſhip's houſe in Bloomſbury-ſquare was burnt down by the mob, who alſo threatened his life. By that diſaſter he loſt a prodigious number of valuable manuſcripts and books; yet when the houſe of commons voted him a compenſation for the injury he refuſed to accept it. After filling his high office with great dignity many years, he reſigned it on account of his infirmities in 1783. His lordſhip died with the reputation of a great lawyer, an upright man, an elegant ſcholar, and a ſincere chriſtian, at his ſeat of Caen Wood in 1793. His remains were interred in Weſtminſter abbey. The title deſcended to his nephew lord Stormont. —Life by Holliday.

MURRAY (Thomas), a portrait painter, was born in Scotland about 1666. He was employed by the royal family, and ſeveral of the nobility, and died in 1724.—Pilk.

MURRAY (William), a diſſenting miniſter, was a native of Scotland, and ſettled as paſtor of a congregation at Birmingham, where he died in 1753, aged 62. He wrote a book entitled, Cloſet Devotions, 12mo.

MURRAY (James), a Scotch divine, was born at Dunkeld, and educated at Aberdeen, where he took his degree of M.A. After refuſing a living in his own country, he came to London, where he officiated to a congregation in Swallow-ſtreet. He wrote a work, entitled, Aletheia, or a Syſtem of Moral Truths, 4 vols. 12mo. He died in 1758, aged 55. There was another diſſenting miniſter of this name who wrote a Hiſtory of the American War, 4 vols. 8vo.; Sermons to Aſſes 12mo.; and a Hiſtory of the Churches of England and Scotland, 3 vols. He died in 1782.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

MURTOLA (Gaſpard), an Italian poet, was born at Genoa, and died at Rome in 1624. He wrote a poem entitled, Della Creazione dell Mondo, which was criticiſed by Marini in a poem called the Murtoleide; and Murtola was ſo exaſperated that he fired a piſtol at Marini, and wounded him. Beſides the above, Murtola wrote ſeveral other poems of indifferent merit.—Tiraboſchi.

MUSA (Antonius), a Greek phyſician, who cured Auguſtus of a dangerous fit of illneſs by bathing. He was the firſt who adviſed the uſe of the cold bath. The Romans erected a ſtatue to his honour. Two tracts, De Herba Botanica, and De tuenda Valetudine, are attributed to him. They were printed at Venice with the other remains of ancient phyſicians, in 1547, folio. —Moreri.

MUSÆUS, an ancient Greek poet, who flouriſhed before Homer, about 1180 B.C. All his works are loſt; but there paſſes under his name a piece, entitled, The Loves of Hero and Leander, in the Corpus Poetarum Græcorum.—Voſſius de Poet. Græc.

MUSCULUS (Wolfgangus), a learned proteſtant divine, was born at Dieuze in Lorraine in 1497. He entered among the benedictines, and became an eminent preacher; but on embracing the doctrines of Luther he went to Straſburg, where he was reduced to work for his bread. Bucer being aprized of his merit took him into his house. He afterwards became minister in the principal church of Strasburg, from whence he removed to Augsburg; but when that place was taken by Charles V. he retired to Switzerland, and in 1549 was chosen professor of divinity at Bern, where he died in 1563. He was a man of great learning, and translated several works of the Greek fathers into latin. He also published Commentaries on the Scriptures. There was another lutheran divine of this name who wrote some controversial books. He was professor of divinity at Frankfort, and died in 1580.—Melch. Adam Vit. Theol.

Musgrave (William), an English physician and antiquary, was born at Charlton in Somersetshire, in 1657. He was fellow of New college, Oxford, and in 1684 was chosen secretary to the royal society. He took his doctor's degree in 1689, after which he settled at Exeter, where he died in 1721. He wrote, 1. Geta Britannicus, 8vo.; 2. Belgium Britannicum, 8vo.; 3. De Aquilis Romanis; 4. De Legionibus, &c. His son became an eminent physician at Exeter; and wrote some critical pieces of merit. He distinguished himself by a charge which he brought against ministers of being bribed to make the peace of 1763; but he could prove nothing before a committee of the house of commons when examined. He died in 1777.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Musius (Cornelius), or Muys, professor of belles lettres and the languages at Louvain, or Ghent, was born at Delft in 1503. He afterwards became director of a convent in his native country, but was inhumanly put to death, on account of his religion, by William Lumei, in 1572. He wrote several Latin poems of merit.—Moreri.

Mussati (Albertin), an historian and poet of Padua, and the minister of the emperor Henry VII. died in 1329. He wrote, 1. De Gestis Henrici VII. Imp.; 2. De Gestis Italorum post Henricum. His works were collected at Venice in 1636, folio.—Tiraboschi.

Musschenbroeck (Peter de), an eminent natural philosopher and mathematician, was born at Leyden in 1692. He became professor of mathematics and natural philosophy at his native place; and he was also a member of the royal society of London and of the academy of sciences at Paris. He died in 1761. His Course of Natural and Experimental Philosophy is a valuable work, and has been translated into English by Colson, in 2 vols. 8vo. Musschenbroeck was also the author of Tentamina Experimentorum, 4to.; Institutiones Physicæ, 4to.; and Compendium Physicæ Experimentalis, 12mo.—Nouv. Dict.

Musso (Cornelius), an Italian prelate, was born at Placenza in 1511. Pope Paul IV. made him a bishop, and sent him to assist at the council of Trent. He died in 1574, aged 63. His sermons are a curious mixture of mythological allusions and scriptural quotations. The author cites Homer and Virgil as of equal authority with the Scriptures and Fathers.—Tiraboschi.

Mustapha I. emperor of the Turks, succeeded his brother Achmet in 1617; but the same year he was deposed by the Janissaries, and thrown into prison. He was afterwards released, and placed upon the throne, but deposed again by the Janissaries, and strangled in 1623.—Univ. Hist.

Mustapha II. son of Mahomet IV. succeeded Achmet II. his uncle, in 1695. He defeated the imperialists at Temeswar, and made war, with success, against the Venetians, Poles, and the Russians; but, at length, his fortune turned, and he was forced to make peace. He was deposed by his subjects, and died in 1703.—Ibid.

Mustapha III. the son of Achmet III. ascended the throne in 1757. He was a weak prince, and by trusting to his favourites greatly exhausted the public treasury. He died in 1774.—Ibid.

Musurus (Marcus), a native of Candia, who taught Greek at Venice, and afterwards at Rome with great reputation. Pope Leo X. made him archbishop of Malvasia in the Morea, but he died of a dropsy shortly after, in 1517. He published editions of Aristophanes and Athenæus, and his Etymologicon Magnum Græcorum is a valuable work. It appeared at Venice in 1499, folio, and again at Heidelburg in 1594.—Fabricius de Script. Græc.

Mutiano (Jerome), an eminent painter, was born at Brescia in 1528, and died at Rome in 1590. He studied after Titian, and painted landscapes in an excellent style. He also painted historical subjects.—D'Argenville.

Mutius (Cælius), first named Codrus, and afterwards Scævola, an illustrious Roman who distinguished himself in the war against Porsenna. When that prince besieged Rome, Mutius entered his camp to assassinate him, and, by mistake, stabbed one of his attendants. Being seized and brought before Porsenna, he said that he was one of 300 who had engaged, by oath, to slay him, and added, "This hand, which has missed its purpose, ought to suffer." On saying this he thrust it into the coals which were burning on the altar, and suffered it to be consumed. Porsenna, struck with his intrepidity, made peace with the Romans. The name of Scævola, or left-handed, was given as a mark of distinction to Mutius and his family.

Mutius (Ulric), professor at Basil, who published a History of Germany in 1539, folio.—Moreri.

Muys (William), a physician was born at Sleenvick in Overyssel, and became successively professor of medicine, chemistry, and lastly of botany, at Franeker, where he died in 1744. He wrote Elements of Natural Philosophy, 4to.; Investigatio fabricæ quæ in partibus musculos componen-tibus extat, 4to.; de Virtute Seminali, quæ plantæ et animalia generi ſuo propagando ſufficiunt, and ſeveral orations and other pieces of conſiderable merit.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

Muzio (Jerome), or Mutius, a learned Italian, was born at Padua in 1466. He took the ſurname of Guiſtinopolitano, on account of his family's being ſettled at Cape de Iſtria. His principal works are; 1. Delle Vergeriane, lib. iv. 1559, 8vo.; 2. Lettere Catoliche; 3. Di feſa della Meſſa, de Santi, del Papato; 4. Le Mentite Ochiniane; [this was againſt Ochinus;] 5. Il Duello, et las Fauſtina. Muzio wrote ſeverely againſt the proteſtants, and died in 1576.—Tiraboſchi.

Mydorge (Claude), a learned mathematician, was born at Paris in 1585, and died in 1647. He wrote four books of Conic Sections, and other works.—Moreri.

Myn (Herbert van der), a Dutch painter, was born at Amſterdam in 1684. He excelled in painting fruits and flowers, but afterwards applied himſelf to hiſtory and portrait. He died in 1741.—Pilkington.

Myrepsus (Nicholas), a phyſician of Alexandria, who publiſhed a Pharmacopœia collected from the Greek and Arabian writers about the cloſe of the thirteenth century. It has been often printed.—Friend's Hiſt. Phyſic.

Myson, one of the ſeven wiſe men of Greece. Anacharſis the Scythian having inquired of Apollo, who was the wiſeſt man in Greece, was anſwered, "He who is now plowing his fields." This was Myſon.—Diog. Lært.

Mytens (Arnold), a painter, was born at Bruſſels in 1541. He painted ſeveral capital pictures for churches in Italy. He died in 1602.—Pilkington.

Mytens (Martin), a Swediſh painter, was born at Stockholm in 1695, and died in 1755. He painted the portraits of ſeveral princes, particularly of Peter the Great, who preſſed him to ſettle at Peterſburgh; which he declined from an inclination to viſit Italy. He afterwards fixed his reſidence at Vienna, where he was greatly eſteemed by the emperor Charles VI.—Ibid.

N

Nabi effendi, a Turkiſh poet of the 17th century. He was a man of conſiderable learning, and verſed in the Latin writers. His poems are much eſteemed by his countrymen.—D'Herbelot.

Nabis, tyrant of Lacedemon, whom Philip king of Macedon appointed governor of Argos. He was guilty of the greateſt cruelties, and had a ſtatue habited as a female, which, by ſprings, would embrace any one that touched it, and then pierce the victim through the body with ſpikes. This machine Nabis deviſed as a means of extorting money from his people, and when any one refuſed he threatened to introduce him to his wife. He was ſlain B.C. 194.—Plutarch.

Nabonasser king of Babylon. He is celebrated by the famous epoch which bears his name, and which commenced in the year 747 B.C. He is ſuppoſed to be the ſame with Baladan, the father of Merodach, mentioned in Scripture.—Uſher.

Nabopolassar, prince of Babylon, united with Aſtyages againſt Syria, which country they conquered, and having divided it between them, founded two kingdoms, that of the Medes under Aſtyages, and that of the Chaldeans under Nabopolaſſar, B.C. 626. Necho, king of Egypt jealous of the power of the latter, declared war againſt him and defeated him. Nabopolaſſar died after a reign of 21 years.—Ibid.

Nævius (Cneius), a Latin poet who wrote ſeveral comedies, one of which was ſo diſpleaſing to Metellus, the conſul, that he expelled him from Rome. Nævius retired to Utica, where he died 230 B.C. Some fragments of his are extant. He ſerved with reputation in the firſt punic war.—Voſſius de Poet. Lat.

Nahum, one of the 12 minor prophets, was a native of Galilee, and prophefied in the reign of Hezekiah. He prophefied with great force againſt Nineveh. His language is vehement and his deſcriptions glowing.—Gray's Key O. T.

Nairon (Fauſtus), a learned Maronite and profeſſor of the Syriac language in the college la Sapienza at Rome, was born on Mount Libanus, and was the nephew of Ecchellenſis. He died at Rome, aged 80, in 1711. His works are; Euoplia fidei Catholicæ ex Syrorum, monumentis Adverſus ævi noſtri novatores, 1694; Diſſertatio de origine, nomine ac religione Maronitarum, 1679. In theſe books he endeavours to prove that the Maronites were orthodox, and did not take their name from Maro, a Monothelite, but from St. Maro, a celebrated anchoret in the 4th century.—Moreri.

Nalson (Valentine), a divine of the church of England, was born at Malton in Yorkſhire, in 1611. He received his education at St. John's college, Cambridge, after which he obtained a prebend in York cathedral, and the living of St. Martin in that city. He died in 1724. Mr. Nalſon publiſhed a volume of Sermons.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Nalton (James), a nonconformiſt divine, was ejected from the living of St. Leonard's, Foſter-lane, by the Bartholomew act in 2; after which he lived privately. He concerned in what was called Love's plot, which account he fled to Holland. He in 1663. Mr. Nalton was a pious , and printed some Sermons.—Calamy. mer.

NANCEL (Nicholas de), a French phyſi-, was born at a village of the ſame e near Soiſſons. After being a profeſſor ifferent places he became phyſician in abbey of Fontevrault, where he died in 0. He wrote, 1. Stichologia Græca, La-que, informanda et reformanda, 8vo.; he Life of Peter Ramus; 3. De Immor-ate Animæ, 8vo.—Moreri.

NANI (John Baptiſt), a noble Venetian, born in 1616. In 1641 he was ad-ed of the college of ſenators, and ſent aſſador to France. He returned to Ve-in 1648, having obtained from Louis . conſiderable ſuccours for carrying on war againſt the Turks. In 1654 he was ambaſſador to Germany, where he ren-d conſiderable ſervices to the republic. continued to ſerve his country on many t occaſions, and was appointed procurator t. Mark. He died in 1678. He wrote Hiſtory of Venice; printed in 1679, 2 . 4to.—Tiraboſchi.

NANNIUS (Peter), a learned writer, and eſſor at Louvain, was born at Alcmaer Holland, in 1500, and died in 1557. works are; Notes on Claſſic Authors; ellaneorum decas, cum actuario et re-ationibus, 8vo.; Dialogues of Hero-4to. [This is reckoned his beſt per-ance.] A tranſlation of the Pſalms Latin verſe; In Cantica Canticorum hraſes et Scholia, 4to.—Moreri.

NANTEUIL (Robert), a celebrated minia-painter and engraver, was born in ims in 1630. He drew the portrait of s XIV. in crayons, with ſuch elegance, the king appointed him deſigner and aver to his cabinet. He died at Paris . His engravings of portraits are highly ed.—D'Argenville.

NANTIGNI (Louis Chazot de), a French r, was born in 1690, and died at Paris 755. His works are; 1. Hiſtorical Ge-ogies of Kings, Emperors, and of all Sovereign Houſes in Europe, 4 vols. ; 2. Geographical Tables, 12mo.; 3. rical, Genealogical, and Chronologi-Tables, 9 vols.; 4. The Genealogies in Supplement to Moreri, 1749.—Nouv. Hiſt.

NAOGEORGE (Thomas), a Lutheran di-, was born at Straubing in Bavaria in , his real name being Kirchmayer, which ltered according to the pedantic cuſtom at age. He wrote ſatirical poems againſt Romiſh church, the principal of which titled, Regnum Papiſticum, 1559, 8vo. ied in 1578.—Melch. Adam. Vit. Germ.

NARES (James), doctor of muſic, was born at Stanwell, in Middleſex, in 1715. He was one of the children in the royal chapel, and ſtudied under Dr. Pepuſch, after which he became organiſt of York cathedral. In 1755 he ſucceeded Dr. Green as organiſt and compoſer to the king; and was created doctor of muſic at Cambridge. In 1757 he was appointed maſter of the choriſters, which place he reſigned in 1780. He died in 1783. Dr. Nares left ſeveral compoſitions of merit.—Europ. Mag.

NARSES, king of Perſia, ſucceeded his father Varennes in 294. He conquered Meſopotamia and Armenia. Maximianus-Galerius being ſent againſt him by Diocletian, was repulſed, but afterwards he defeated the Perſians, whom he laid under tribute. Narſes died in 303.—Univ. Hiſt.

NARSES, a Perſian eunuch, and one of the greateſt generals of his time, commanded the Roman army againſt the Goths, whom he defeated in two battles in 552, and put to death their king Totila. There was another of this name who revolted againſt Phocas, and was put to death at the end of the ſixth century. Baronius makes them to be one and the ſame, but without any juſt ground.—Ibid.

NASH (Thomas), an Engliſh writer, was born in Suffolk, and educated at Cambridge. He entered into orders, but never obtained any preferment, on account of his profligacy. He wrote many ſatires againſt the puritans, and a humorous poem, entitled, Pierce Pennyleſs. He died about 1600.—Phillips's Theatrum Poetarum.

NASH (Richard), a ſingular character, was born at Swanſea in Wales in 1674, and received his education at Caermarthen, from whence he was ſent to Jeſus college, Oxford, where he remained but a ſhort time. He afterwards had a pair of colours, but ſoon quitted the army, and entered of the Temple, but never followed the law. A love of pleaſure and gaming drew him in 1704 to Bath, which place of amuſement by his excellent management became a place of faſhionable reſort. He was choſen maſter of the ceremonies; and was ſo much eſteemed as to be called King of Bath; but commonly he was termed, from the peculiarity of his dreſs, beau Naſh. Though much given to gambling, he was very liberal, and numerous inſtances are recorded of his benevolence. He died in 1761.—Life of Naſh, 8vo.

NASINI (Joſeph Nicolas), an hiſtorical painter, was born near Sienna in 1660. He was the diſciple of Ciro Ferri, at whoſe recommendation he was employed by the grand duke of Tuſcany. He died in 1736.—Pilkington.

NATALIS (Michael), an eminent engraver, was born at Liege in 1609. He ſtudied under his father, after which he went to Rome, where he profited by the inſtructions of Joachim Sandraart, and engraved repreſentations of ſome of the ſtatues in the Juſ-tinian gallery, after Titian, Rubens, &c. He died in 1670.—Moreri.

NATHAN, a prophet who lived in the reign of David. At the divine command he denounced judgment on that monarch for his guilt in the murder of Uriah, and adultery with Bathſheba. On that occaſion he brought the monarch to repentance by the relation of a beautiful parable of the poor man's lamb.—Bible.

NATHAN (Iſaac, or Mordecai), a rabbi, was the firſt who compiled a Hebrew Concordance, which he began in 1438, and finiſhed in 1448. It was printed at Venice in 1523, and afterwards by the care of Buxtorf, at Baſle in 1632, folio.—Buxtorf.

NATTIER (John Mark), a French painter, was born at Paris in 1685, and died in 1766. He was profeſſor in the academy of painting at Paris, and was patronized by Louis XIV. The czar Peter the Great, when in France, ſolicited Nattier to accompany him to Ruſſia, which he declined. His deſigns of the Luxemburgh gallery were engraved in 1 vol. folio, 1710. There was another artiſt of this name who was an engraver of intaglios, and died at Peterſburgh in 1763. He publiſhed a book of ancient gems.—D'Argenville.

NAUCLERUS (John), profeſſor of law at Tubingen, and provoſt of the cathedral at that place, was born of a noble family in Suabia named Vergeau, which, according to the cuſtom of his age, he altered to Nauclerus. He lived about 1501. His Chronicle from the beginning of the world to 1500 poſſeſſes merit, and has been continued by different writers. The beſt edition is that of Cologne in 1570, folio.—Moreri.

NAUDE (Gabriel), or Naudæus, a learned writer, was born at Paris in 1600. After ſtudying at his native place he went to Padua, where he took his degrees in phyſic, after which he became librarian to cardinal Bagni at Rome, and on his death was patronized by cardinal Barberini. On being recalled to France he was made librarian to cardinal Mazarine, who conferred on him ſeveral benefices. Chriſtina queen of Sweden invited him to her court, but he ſoon returned. He died at Abbeville in 1653. His principal works are, 1. An Apology for Great Men who have been accuſed of Magic, 12mo.; 2. Advice for Forming a Library; 3. Addition to the Life of Louis XI.; 4. Bibliographia politica; 5. Syntagma de ſtudio militari; 6. De Antiquitate Scholæ Medicæ Pariſienſis; 7. Syntagma de ſtudio liberali; 8. A Diſcourſe againſt Libels.—Moreri.

NAUDE (Philip), a mathematician, was born at Metz in 1654. Being a proteſtant he went to Berlin on the revocation of the edict of Nantes, and became a member of the academy and profeſſor of mathematics in that city, where he died in 1729. He wrote a Treatiſe on Geometry, in quarto. He was ſucceeded by his ſon, who was an able mathematician, and died in 1745.—Ibid.

NAVAGERO (Andrew), or Naugerius, a noble Venetian of the 16th century, who was employed in different embaſſies, and died in 1529, aged 44. He was appointed to write the Hiſtory of Venice, the manuſcript of which he burnt in his laſt illneſs. His poems are in the collection entitled, Carmina Illuſtrium Poetarum Italorum; and his other works were printed at Padua in 1718, 4to. A relation of his, Bernard NAVAGERO, became biſhop of Verona and a cardinal. He aſſiſted at the council of Trent, and died in 1565, aged 58. He wrote the Life of Pope Paul IV.—Tiraboſchi.

NAVARETTE (Ferdinand), a Spaniſh dominican, who diſplayed his zeal and talents as a preacher, in China, and was choſen by the other miſſionaries to plead againſt the jeſuits before the pope. Charles II. king of Spain appointed him biſhop of St. Domingo. He died in 1689. His Treatiſe of the Monarchy of China was printed at Madrid in 1676, folio, in Spaniſh. There were two other volumes which the inquiſition cauſed to be ſuppreſſed. Balthazar NAVARETTE, another Spaniſh dominican, who lived at the end of the 16th century, wrote, Controverſiæ in Divi Thomæ ejuſque Scholæ defenſionem, 3 vols. fol.—Moreri.

NAVARRE (Peter), a famous ſoldier in the 16th century, was a Biſcayan of low extraction. He commenced his career as a ſeaman, after which he became a menial ſervant in the family of the cardinal of Aragon. He next entered among the Florentine troops, and after ſome time returned to the ſea ſervice, where he diſplayed great ſkill and courage. The reputation he acquired recommended him to Gonſalvo de Cordova, who was employed in the war of Naples. In the taking of that city Navarre was principally concerned by the conſtruction of a mine. The emperor recompenſed him for this ſervice by the grant of Alvito in that kingdom, whence he aſſumed the title of count Pedro de Navarre. Being appointed to the command of a naval expedition againſt the Moors, he took Oran, Tripoli, and other places. On his return to Italy he ſerved in the army, and was taken priſoner at the battle of Ravenna in 1512. After continuing in France two years in hopes of being ranſomed, he entered into the French ſervice, and ſignalized himſelf on ſeveral occaſions; but being ſent to the ſuccour of Genoa in 1522, he was taken priſoner by the Imperialiſts, and conducted to Naples, where he was confined in the caſtle de l'Oeuf. After the treaty of Madrid he regained his liberty, and in 1528 ſerved under Lautrec at the ſiege of Naples, but in the unfortunate retreat of that general at Averſa he was again captured, and ſent the ſecond time to l'Oeuf. The prince of Orange, by command of the emperor, having ordered a number of priſoners to be beheaded, barbarouſly included Navarre in the direction; but the governor, poſſeſſing ore humanity, paſſed him over, and he died ere ſoon after. Some pretend that he as ſtrangled in that citadel.—Life by Paul ovius.

NAVIER (Peter-Touſſaint), a phyſician, as born at St. Dizier in France, and died Chalons in 1779. He is known by the ſcovery of the nitrous-ether, and of the ombination of mercury with iron. He was ſkilful phyſician, and a man of great hu-anity. He wrote, a Diſſertation on Po-ular Diſeaſes; Obſervations on a Softneſs of ne Bone; on the Danger of Haſty Burials, nd the Abuſes of Interments in Churches; n Arſenic; De Thermis Borbonienſibus, &c. —Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

NAYLER (James), a quaker, was born in orkſhire about 1616. He was a ſoldier in ne army of Cromwell, but on hearing eorge Fox, he quitted the military pro-ſſion and turned preacher. His extrava-ance was ſo great that he was impriſoned Exeter in 1656. On gaining his liberty he ent to Briſtol, which he entered ſurrounded ith quakers, ſhouting "Holy, holy, holy, ord God of Hoſts; Hoſanna in the higheſt." n this the magiſtrates cauſed Nayler to be pprehended, and ſent him to London, where e was tried, and being convicted of blaſ-hemy, was ſentenced to ſtand in the pillory, o have his tongue bored with a hot iron, nd to be branded in the forehead. After his he became reaſonable, and died on his ay to his native place in 1660.—Sewel's iſt. of Quakers.

NEAL (Daniel), a non-conformiſt divine, as born in London in 1678. After receiv-g his education at a diſſenting academy, he as ſent to Utrecht and Leyden. In 1706 e was choſen paſtor of an independent con-regation in Alderſgate-ſtreet, and after-ards in Jewin-ſtreet. He wrote, a Hiſtory f New England, 2 vols. 8vo.; a Hiſtory of he Puritans, 4 vols. 8vo. and ſome Ser-ons. He died in 1743.—Life prefixed to is Hiſt. of Puritans.

NEANDER (Michael), a proteſtant divine, as born in Sileſia in 1513. He became ector of the univerſity of Ilfeldt, and after-ards of Pforzheim. He died in 1595. His principal works are, 1. Erotemata Lin-uæ Græcæ, 8vo.; 2. a Hebrew Grammar; . Pindarica Ariſtologia; 4. Gnomologia & tobæo confecta, 8vo. He is to be diſtin-uiſhed from Michael Neander, a phyſician f Jena, who died in 1581. He wrote, Sy-opſis menſurarum et ponderum, 1555, 4to. —Melch. Adam. vit. Germ. Theol.

NEARCHUS, one of the captains of Alex-nder the Great, who ſent him to explore he Indian ſeas. Nearchus made a voyage rom the Indies to Harmuſia, now called Ormus, of which expedition an account is xtant equally curious and exact. It has een publiſhed in England, with very inte-eſting notes and illuſtrations by Dr. Vincent. Alexander rewarded Nearchus in a very li-eral manner, and after the death of that prince he obtained the countries of Lyſia and Pamphylia.—Arrian.

NEBUCHADNEZZAR I. or Nabuchadonoſor, king of Nineveh and Babylon. He is ſuppoſed to be the ſame with Nabopolaſſor, governor of Babylon, who founded the kingdon of Niniveh. He ſent Holophernes againſt Judæa, who was ſlain by Judith.

NEBUCHADNEZZAR II. king of Aſſyria and Babylon, is ſuppoſed to have been the ſon of the preceding. He invaded Judea, took Jeruſalem, and carried the treaſures of the temple and a number of captives to Babylon. After this he ſet up a golden ſtatue in the plain of Dura, which he commanded all his ſubjects to adore, on pain of being caſt into a fiery furnace. Three young jews, named Shadrac, Meſhac, and Abednego, refuſed to ſubmit to this idolatry, and the ſentence was executed upon them, but they were preſerved amidſt the flames. Having loſt his ſenſes, he became an outcaſt from the ſociety of men, and lived among wild beaſts in the foreſt, but on recovering his reaſon he again aſcended the throne, and died B.C. 562, after reigning 43 years.—Ibid Book of Daniel.

NECHO, king of Egypt, called in ſcripture Pharaoh Necho, ſucceeded his father, Pſammeticus, B.C. 616. He undertook to make a canal from the Nile to the Arabian gulf, which undertaking he was forced to abandon, after loſing a great number of men. The ſhips of Necho ſailed from the Red Sea round the coaſt of Africa into the Mediterranean, and returned to Egypt, after a voyage of three years. This monarch invaded Aſſyria, and on his march was attacked by Joſiah, king of Judah, who was ſlain in the battle. The king of Egypt was defeated in his turn by Nebuchadnezzar, and obliged to return to his own country, where he died B.C. 600.—Herodotus. Bible.

NECK (John Van), a Dutch painter, was born at Naarden in 1635. He excelled in painting naked figures; but his beſt picture is one repreſenting Simeon with the infant Jeſus, in a church at Amſterdam. He died in 1714.—Pilkington.

NECKER (Noel-Joſeph), a phyſician and botaniſt, was born in Flanders in 1729. He applied in his youth to the ſtudy of botany, and acquired a great knowlege of plants. He died at Manheim in 1793. His works are, 1. Deliciæ gallo belgicæ ſylveſtres, 2 vols. 12mo.; 2. Methodus muſcorum, 8vo.; 3. Phyſiologia muſcorum, 8vo.; 4. Eclairciſſemens ſur la propagation des filicees, 8vo.; 5. Hiſt. nat. du Taſſilage, &c. 8vo.: 6. Elementa Botanica, &c. 8vo. Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

NECKER (James), a celebrated financier, was born at Geneva in 1732. He commenced his political career by becoming a member of the council of two hundred in his native city. He was afterwards appointed miniſter of the republic of Geneva at Paris, where by degrees he roſe to the higheſt employments. In 1765 he was appointed syndic of the East India company; in 1775 director of the royal treasury; and was twice prime minister of France. But the revolution, which his hasty projects of finance and reform greatly assisted, obliged him to retire to Switzerland, and he died at Copet in 1804. M. Necker wrote three volumes on the finances of France; a book on the influence of religious opinions, and other works. He married the daughter of a protestant clergyman, by whom he had a daughter, madame de Stael Holstein, the wife of the Swedish ambassador of that name. Madame Necker, who died in 1794, wrote a piece against Hasty Interments; a Memoir on the Establishment of Hospitals; and Reflections on Divorce. The daughter has gained a sort of celebrity by a very indecent and irreligious novel entitled, Delphine.—Nouv. Dict. Hist. Monthly Mag.

NECKHAM (Alexander), canon of Exeter, and abbot of St. Mary's, Cirencester. He was a good poet, and a man of considerable learning for his age, particularly in the sciences. He died in 1227. He wrote, Commentaries on the Psalms; a Treatise de nominibus utensilium, &c.—Pits.

NECTARIUS, patriarch of Constantinople, was born at Tarsus, and elected to the patriarchate in 381. He was a man of piety, and died in 397.—Dupin. Tillemont.

NEEDHAM (Marchamont), an English writer, was born at Burford in Oxfordshire in 1620, and educated at All Souls college, Oxford. He afterwards became a lawyer's clerk in London, and at length turned physician. In the civil war he distinguished himself by his political writings, first against the parliament, and afterwards against the king; so that at the restoration he obtained his pardon with difficulty. He died in 1678. He conducted periodical journals somewhat in the manner of newspapers, the titles of which were, Mercurius Britannicus, Mercurius Pragmaticus, and Mercurius Politicus.—Wood.

NEEDHAM (John Turberville), a roman catholic divine, was born in London in 1713, and educated at Douay, where he entered into orders. His superiors appointed him professor of philosophy in the English college at Lisbon. He afterwards became travelling tutor to a nobleman; and on his return settled in London, where he was chosen fellow of the royal society. He died rector of the academy of sciences at Brussels in 1781. Mr. Needham wrote observations inserted in Buffon's Natural History; also, New Enquiries upon Microscopical Discoveries, and the Generation of Organized Bodies, 8vo. Paris; Observations on Spallanzani's Microscopical Discoveries; Enquiries concerning Nature and Religion.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

NEEDLER (Benjamin), a nonconformist minister, was born at Lalam, in Middlesex, and educated at St. John's college, Oxford, of which he was chosen fellow. He was ejected from the living of St. Margaret Moses, London, in 1662, and died in 1682. He wrote an Exposition on the five first chapters of Genesis.—Calamy.

NEEDLER (Thomas), an English writer, had a place in the navy-office, and died in 1718, aged 28. His works in verse and prose were printed in 1 vol. 12mo. by Dr. Duncombe, in 1724.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

NEEFS (Peter), a Flemish painter, was the disciple of Steenwick, and excelled in painting perspective, particularly the inside view of churches. His son was also a good painter, but not equal to the father.—Pilkington.

NEER (Arnold van der), a painter of landscapes and moonlight scenes, was born at Amsterdam in 1619, and died in 1683. His son Hendrick painted history, portrait, and landscape. He died in 1703.—Houbraken.

NEHEMIAH, a celebrated Jew, was the son of Hachaliah, and born in Babylon during the captivity. He became cupbearer to Artaxerxes Longomanus, who permitted him to return to his own country, and to rebuild Jerusalem. He achieved this work B.C. 454, though greatly opposed by the enemies of the Jewish nation. After governing that people with great wisdom and zeal, he died at Jerusalem, B.C. 430.—Grey's Key O. T. Usher.

NELLER (George Christopher), an ecclesiastic of the cathedral church of Treves, and counsellor to the prince elector, died in 1783, aged 74. He wrote, 1. Dissertatio de Decretis Basilensibus; 2. De Primatu Sanctæ Ecclesiæ Trevirensis; 3. Hermania inauguralis in magni Balduini Trevirensis documentum anecdotum; 4. De genuina idea et signis parochialitatis primitivæ ejusque principio, incorporatione ex chartis Trevirensibus confecta; 5. De Juribus parochi primitivi; 6. De sacro electionis processu; 7. De Solido ficto; de solido speciei argenteæ, de moneta rotata; de glosso Turonensi et Trevirensi, &c.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

NELSON (Robert), usually termed the pious Nelson, was born in London in 1656, and educated at Trinity college, Cambridge. In 1680 he was chosen a fellow of the royal society, and the same year went on his travels. In 1682 he married lady Lucy, widow of sir Kingsmill Lucy, and thereby added considerably to his fortune; but the lady was a zealous Roman catholic, and it is remarkable that though they published tracts in defence of their respective and religious sentiments, the controversy did not lessen their affection for each other. After the revolution, Mr. Nelson, who could not transfer his allegiance from king James, joined in religious worship with the nonjurors, and continued so to do till 1709, when he returned to the church as established. His friendship with men of opposite sentiments was not abated; and the great archbishop Tillotson died in his arms. Mr. Nelson died in 1714

His works are; 1. The Practice of True Devotion, 12mo.; 2. Transubstantiation contrary to Scripture, 4to.; 3. Companion for the Festivals and Fasts of the Church of England, 8vo.; [a very valuable work, of which there have been numerous editions.] 4. The Great Duty of frequenting the Christian Sacrifice, 8vo.; 5. The Life of Bishop Bull, 8vo.; 6. A Letter to Dr. Clarke on his Scripture Doctrine of the Trinity, 8vo.; 7. A Letter on Church Government; 8. An Address to Persons of Quality and Estate, 8vo.; 9. The Whole Duty of a Christian, by way of Question and Answer, 12mo.—Biog. Brit.

NELSON (Horatio, viscount), a gallant admiral, was the fourth son of the Rev. Mr. Nelson, rector of Burnham Thorpe in Norfolk, where Horatio was born Sept. 29. 1758. By his mother's side he was related to the Walpoles, Cholmondelys, and Townshends. He received his education at the school of North Walsham; but at the age of twelve years he was taken to sea by his maternal uncle, captain Suckling of the Raisonable man of war. Soon afterwards the ship was put out of commission, and young Nelson went on board of a merchant-man to the West Indies. On his return he again joined his uncle, who had obtained the command of the Triumph. In 1773 a voyage was undertaken for the discovery of a north west passage, under the command of commodore Phipps and captain Lutwidge. Our young seaman entered on board the ship commanded by the latter, and distinguished himself in that perilous voyage by his skill, courage, and promptitude. Soon after his return he was appointed to a station in the Seahorse, in which he sailed to the East Indies. He qualified for a lieutenant in 1777, and received his commission as second of the Lowestoff frigate; in which he cruized against the Americans. In 1779 he obtained the rank of post captain, and was appointed to the command of the Hinchinbrooke, with which he sailed to the West Indies, and while there essentially contributed to the taking of Fort Juan in the gulph of Mexico. We find him next commanding the Boreas, having under him the duke of Clarence, who was captain of the Pegasus. While thus engaged he married the daughter of William Woodward, esq. judge of the island of Nevis, and then widow of Dr. Nesbit, a physician of that island, by whom he never had any issue. At the breaking out of the war with France he was nominated to the Agamemnon of 64 guns, on board of which he sailed to the Mediterranean, and was present at the taking possession of Toulon. He was also present at the siege of Bastia, where he served at the batteries with a body of seamen; as he afterwards did at Calvi: and while employed before that place he lost an eye. He was so active on that station that his name was dreaded throughout the Mediterranean. He was with admiral Hotham in the action with the French fleet, March 15, 1795; and the same year he took the island of Elba. In 1796 he was appointed commodore on board La Minerve, in which frigate he captured La Sabine, a forty gun ship. Soon after this he descried the Spanish fleet, and steered with the intelligence to Sir John Jervis off St. Vincent. He had scarcely communicated the news, and shifted his flag on board the Captain of 74 guns, when the enemy hove in sight. A close action ensued, which terminated in a complete victory on the side of the British, who were inferior in numbers. On this occasion commodore Nelson attacked the Santissima Trinidada of 136 guns; and afterwards he boarded and took the San Nicolas of 80 guns, from whence he proceeded in the same manner to the San Josef of 112 guns; both of which surrendered to him. For his share in this glorious victory, the commodore was honoured with the order of the Bath; and having soon afterwards hoisted his flag as rear admiral of the blue, he was appointed to command the inner squadron at the blockade of Cadiz. He there made a bold but unsuccessful attempt to bombard the city, heading his men himself. The next exploit in which he was engaged was an attempt to take possession of Teneriffe, which design also failed, with the loss of captain Bowen of the Terpsichore. In this expedition admiral Nelson lost his right arm by a cannon shot, and was carried off to the boat by his son-in-law captain Nesbit, on his back. He now returned to England for the recovery of his health, and received, the grant of a pension of one thousand pounds a year. The brave admiral, however, did not long remain inactive: he rejoined earl St. Vincent, who, on receiving intelligence of the sailing of Buonaparte from Toulon, detached sir Horatio Nelson with a squadron in pursuit of him. After exploring the coast of Italy, this indefatigable commander steered for Alexandria, where to his great mortification not a French ship was to be seen. He then sailed to Sicily, and having taken in a fresh supply of water, and obtained more correct information, returned to Alexandria, which he descried August 1, 1798 at noon. The enemy were discovered in Aboukir bay, lying at anchor in line of battle; and supported by strong batteries on an island, and strengthened by gun boats. Notwithstanding this formidable appearance, the British admiral made the signal for battle; and by a masterly and bold manœuvre, gave directions for part of his fleet to lead inside the enemy who were thus exposed between two fires. The contest was hot and bloody. Several of the French ships were soon dismasted; and at last the admiral's ship L'Orient of 120 guns took fire, and blew up. The firing, however, continued, but by the dawn of day only two sail of the line were discovered with their colours flying, all the rest having struck. These two, and two frigates, cut their cables and stood to sea. The consequence of this splendid victory, in which eleven sail of the line were taken or deſtroyed, were, that the emperor of Germany broke off the conferences for peace at Radſtadt, and the Ottoman porte declared war againſt the French. On the Britiſh admiral honours were deſervedly poured, he was created lord Nelſon of the Nile. The grand ſignior ſent him a plume of triumph of diamonds; and the king of Naples created him duke of Bronté, and gave him an eſtate. Soon after this he ſailed for Sicily, and from thence to Naples, where he quelled a rebellion and reſtored the king. Having performed theſe and other important ſervices, lord Nelſon returned to England, and was received with enthuſiaſtic joy. A confederacy of the northern powers having alarmed the government, he was employed to diſſolve it. A fleet was fitted out, the command of which was given to admiral ſir Hyde Parker, aſſiſted by lord Nelſon. On their arrival off the Cattigat, and being refuſed a paſſage, lord Nelſon offered his ſervices for conducting the attack on the Daniſh force which was ſtationed to oppoſe an entrance. This being accepted, he ſhifted his flag to the Elephant, and paſſed the ſound with little loſs. On the 2d of April the action commenced at ten o'clock, and after a ſharp conflict ſeventeen ſail of the Danes were ſunk, burnt, or taken. A negociation was then entered into between his lordſhip and the crown prince; in conſequence of which the admiral went a-ſhore and an armiſtice was ſettled. He next obtained from the Swediſh government an order for taking off the embargo on Engliſh ſhips in the Baltic. Having accompliſhed theſe great objects, he returned to England, and was created a viſcount. In Auguſt 1801 he bombarded the enemy's flotilla of gun boats at Boulogne, but without any material effect. A treaty ſuddenly taking place, his lordſhip retired to his ſeat at Merton in Surrey; but hoſtilities recommencing he ſailed for the Mediterranean, and in March 1803 took the command of that ſtation on board the Victory. Notwithſtanding all his vigilance, the French fleet eſcaped from Toulon, and was joined by that of Cadiz; of which being appriſed he purſued them to the Weſt Indies with a far inferior force. The combined ſquadrons, however, ſtruck with terror, returned without effecting any thing; and after a partial action with ſir Robert Calder off Ferrol, reentered Cadiz. Admiral Nelſon returned to England, but ſoon ſet ſail to join his fleet off Cadiz. The French under admiral Villeneuve and the Spaniards under Gravina, ventured out with a number of troops on board, October 19 1805, and on the 21ſt, about noon, the action began off Cape Trafalgar. Lord Nelſon ordered his ſhip the Victory to be carried a-longſide his old antagoniſt, the Santiſſima Trinidada, where he was expoſed to a ſevere fire of muſketry; and not having the precaution to cover his coat, which was decorated with his ſtar and other badges of diſtinction, he became an object for the rifleſmen placed purpoſely in the tops of the Bucentaur, which lay on his quarter. A ſhot from one of theſe entered juſt below his ſhoulder of which he died in about two hours. In this action the enemy's force conſiſted of thirty three ſhips of the line and ſeveral of extraordinary magnitude; while the Britiſh were only twenty-ſeven. After the fall of lord Nelſon, the command devolved on admiral Collingwood, by whoſe bravery and ſkill a complete victory was obtained. Four ſail were carried to Gibraltar, ſixteen were deſtroyed, and ſix of thoſe which eſcaped into Cadiz were reduced to mere wrecks. Four French line of battle ſhips which hauled off in the action were afterwards taken by ſir Richard Strachan. The remains of lord Nelſon were interred with great pomp in St. Paul's cathedral, January 9, following.

NEMESIANUS (Aurelius Olympius), a Latin poet, was a native of Carthage, and lived about A.D. 281. It is ſuppoſed that he periſhed in the proſcriptions which diſgraced the beginning of Diocletian's reign. His poem, entitled, Cynegetica, was diſcovered by Sannazarius at Tours, and publiſhed, with four eclogues, by Peter Manuzio, at Venice in 1538. They have alſo been printed in the Poetæ rei Venaticæ, 1730, 2 vols. folio.—Voſſius de Poet. Lat.

NEMESIUS, a Greek philoſopher, who embraced the chriſtian religion, and was made biſhop of Emeſſa, in Phœnicia. He flouriſhed in the 5th century. We have by him a piece, entitled, De Natura Hominis, an edition of which appeared at Oxford in 1671.—Dupin.

NEMOURS (Mary de Longueville, ducheſs of), was the daughter of the duke de Longueville, and the wife of the duke de Nemours. She died in 1707, aged 82. Her Memoirs of the Court of France during the Minority of Louis XIV. are written with life and fidelity. They are commonly united with thoſe of Joly, but have alſo been printed ſeparately.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

NENNIUS, a Britiſh writer of the 9th century, who wrote the Hiſtory of Britain a Latin MS. of which is among the Cottonian MSS. in the Britiſh Muſeum.—Owen's Cambr. Biog.

NEPER (John), or Napier, commonly called lord Neper, and baron of Merchiſton, was deſcended of an ancient family near Edinburgh, and born in 1550. He received a liberal education, and devoted himſelf principally to the cultivation of mathematical learning, and has immortalized his name by the diſcovery of logarithms, which he publiſhed in 1614. This invention he greatly extended and improved in 1619, when he publiſhed his Rabdologia. Neper alſo invented the five circular parts in trigonometry; and a mechanical mode of arithmetic, called Neper's Bones, or Rods. He was likewiſe deeply read in theology, and publiſhed a myſterious book on Antichriſt and the Rev lations. He died in 1622.—Life of Neper by lord Buchan.

Nepos (Cornelius), a Latin hiſtorian in the reign of Auguſtus, whoſe patronage he enjoyed. Of all his works, we have only his lives of illuſtrious Greek and Roman generals; the beſt editions of which are, that of Leyden, 1773, and that of Glaſgow, 12mo. 1761.—Voſſius de Hiſt. Lat. Biog. Claſſica.

Nepos (Flavius Julius), emperor of the weſt, was a native of Dalmatia, and having married a niece of Leo I. that monarch gave him the weſtern empire. Nepos marched to Rome to ſecure his throne; after which he fixed the ſeat of government at Ravenna, but was obliged to quit that city by his general Oreſtes. He then retired to Dalmatia, where he was aſſaſſinated in 480.—Univ. Hiſt.

Neri (Philip de), an Italian writer, was born at Florence in 1485, of a noble family. In 1532 he was choſen by duke Alexander one of the magiſtrates, afterwards denominated ſenators. He died at Florence in 1556. His Hiſtory of Florentine Affairs, from 1215 to 1537, was printed at Augſburg in 1728.—Tiraboſchi.

Neri (St. Philip de), founder of the congregation of prieſts of the oratory in Italy, was born at Florence in 1515. He founded his celebrated congregation in 1550. Their engagements were to relieve poor ſtrangers and pilgrims, and to adminiſter to the ſick. Neri died in 1595, and was canonized in 1622.—Nouv. Dict.

Neri (Pompeio), a native of Florence, who became profeſſor of law at Piſa, and was employed in ſtate affairs by the duke of Lorraine and the empreſs Maria Thereſa. He founded the academy of botany at Florence, and died there in 1776, aged 69. He wrote Obſervations on the ancient and preſent State of the Tuſcan Nobility; on the Impoſts of Milan; on the Legal Value of Coin, and the difficulty of fixing and maintaining the ſame. There was alſo of this name and family Anthony Neri, who printed, at Florence in 1612, a curious book on the Art of Making Glaſs, 4to.—Ibid.

Nero (Claudius Domitius Cæſar), a Roman emperor, was the ſon of Caius Domitius, and of Agrippina, daughter of Germanicus. He was adopted by Claudius in A.D. 50. and four years after ſucceeded him on the throne. The commencement of his reign promiſed to be very advantageous to the Romans, who regarded him as a gift from Heaven. He was juſt, liberal, affable, poliſhed, complaiſant, and his heart ſeemed to poſſeſs every excellent quality. But all this was mere exterior, and a maſk which hid the moſt depraved mind that ever diſgraced a human being: he ſoon laid aſide his artificial virtues, and releaſed himſelf from the controul of his mother, whom he cauſed to be aſſaſſinated; and vindicated the unnatural act to the ſenate on a pretence that Agrippina had plotted againſt him. Many of the courtiers ſhared the ſame fate, and Rome was deluged with the blood of her beſt citizens. Nero plunged himſelf as deep in debauchery as in cruelty. He diſguiſed himſelf in female attire, and was publicly married to one of his eunuchs. He turned actor, pretended to excel in muſic, and even appeared as a competitor in wreſtling at the Olympic games, where, though he was defeated, the aſſeſſors and ſpectators, out of flattery, adjudged him the victor. After putting to death his wife Octavia, he ſacrificed his tutor Seneca, Lucan the poet, Petronius, and many other eminent perſons. He alſo commenced a dreadful perſecution of the Chriſtians; and having read of the burning of Troy, he cauſed Rome to be ſet on fire in ſeveral places, and during the conflagration the inhuman monſter beheld the ſcene from a high tower, where he amuſed himſelf by ſinging to his lyre. After this he built a magnificent palace, and ſaid that he could now lodge like a man. His cruelties, extravagance, and debauchery, at length rouſed the public reſentment. Piſo formed a conſpiracy againſt the tyrant, but it was diſcovered and defeated. That of Galba, however, proved more ſucceſsful, and Nero being abandoned by his flatterers, put an end to himſelf, A.D. 68.—Suetonius in vita Nero. Tacitus.

Nerva (Coccius), a Roman emperor, who ſucceeded Domitian, A.D. 96. He became the favourite of the Romans by his mildneſs and generoſity. He would not allow any ſtatues to be erected to his honour; at the cloſe of life his ſoldiers mutinied againſt him, on which occaſion he behaved with calmneſs and intrepidity. He then appointed Trajan his ſucceſſor amidſt the acclamations of the people. Nerva died in 98, aged 72. He was the firſt Roman emperor of foreign extraction, his father being a native of Crete.—Univ. Hiſt.

Nesbit (Thomas), a Scotch antiquary, was the ſon of the lord preſident Neſbit, and born at Edinburg in 1672. He wrote an excellent book on heraldry, and a vindication of Scottiſh antiquities, which is in MS. in the advocates' library at Edinburgh. He died in 1725.—Gen. B. D.

Nesse (Chriſtopher), a non-conformiſt divine, was born in Yorkſhire in 1621, and educated at St. John's college, Cambridge. He became lecturer at Leeds, but was ejected in 1662; after which he preached privately and taught youth till 1672, when he opened a meeting-houſe. In 1675 he removed to London, where he preached to a congregation of diſſenters till his death in 1705. He wrote, the Crown and Glory of a Chriſtian, 12mo.; the Chriſtian's Walk and Work on Earth, 8vo.; A Proteſtant Antedote againſt the Poiſon of Popery, 8vo.; a Church Hiſtory from Adam; the Hiſtory and Myſtery of the Old and New Teſtament, 4 vols. fol.; a Divine Legacy, &c.—Calamy. Palmer.

Nestor, a Ruſſian monk, was born in 1056, and died about 1115. He wrote a deſcription of Ruſſia, and the annals of that country from 858 to about 1113; a German tranſlation of which was publiſhed by Muller in 1732.—Nouv. Dict.

Nestorius, a biſhop of Conſtantinople, in 431. He was a native of Syria; and was depoſed from his biſhopric for denying the doctrine of the incarnation, or the two natures of Chriſt. His opinions ſpread widely over the Eaſt, and ſtill have followers in thoſe parts.—Bayle.

Netscher (Gaſpard), an eminent portrait painter, was born at Prague in 1636, and died in Holland in 1681.—D'Argenville.

Neubauer (Erneſt Frederick), a proteſtant divine, was born at Magdeburgh in 1705. He was profeſſor of antiquities and afterwards of theology at Gieſſen, where he died in 1748. His works are, Academic Diſſertations; Explications of Paſſages of Scripture; Sermons; Lives of Profeſſors of Divinity at Gieſſen.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

Neubauer (Francis), a muſician, was born in Bohemia and educated at Prague and Vienna. He became muſic-maſter in the chapel of the prince of Naſſau, and diſtinguiſhed himſelf by ſome beautiful compoſitions; but he was exceſſively addicted to drinking. He died in 1795.—Necrology.

Neve (Timothy), an Engliſh divine, was born in Shropſhire, and educated at St. John's college, Cambridge. He became prebendary of Lincoln, archdeacon of Huntingdon, and rector of Alwalton, in Huntingdonſhire, where he died about 1740. He communicated to the Spalding ſociety an Eſſay on the Invention of Printing, and on our firſt Printers.—Biblioth. Topog. Brit.

Nevers (Philip-Julien Mazarin Mancini, duke de), was the nephew of the cardinal Mazarin, and born at Rome in 1631. He diſtinguiſhed himſelf as the patron of Pradon againſt Racine, which produced ſharp controverſies among the wits. The duke wrote ſome ſonnets on that occaſion, and other poems of little merit. He died in 1707.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

Newcome (Thomas), an ingenious divine, was born in Herefordſhire, and educated at Corpus Chriſti college, Oxford. In 1734 he became rector of Stopham, in Suſſex, after which he kept a reſpectable ſchool at Hackney. He wrote excellent poems, and turned Hervey's Meditations into blank verſe.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Newcome (William), ſucceſſively biſhop of Oſſory and Waterford, and archbiſhop of Armagh, was a divine of profound learning and amiable manners. He was a member of the royal Iriſh academy, and died in 1799. He publiſhed a Harmony of the Goſpels; Letter to Dr Prieſtley on the Duration of our Lord's Miniſtry, 8vo.; Obſervations on our Lord's Conduct, 4to.; an improved Verſion of the twelve Minor Prophets, 4to.; another of Ezekiel; a Review of the chief Difficulties in the Goſpel Hiſtory relating to our Lord's Reſurrection; an Hiſtorical Review of the Engliſh Biblical Tranſlations. After his death was publiſhed his Verſion of the New Teſtament, 2 vols. 8vo.—Gent. Mag.

Newcomen (Matthew), a non-conformiſt divine, who was ejected from the living of Dedham, in Eſſex, in 1662. He was of St. John's college, Cambridge, where he took the degree of M. A. He was alſo a member of the Weſtminſter aſſembly of divines, and had a concern in drawing up their catechiſm. Mr. Newcomen was one of the five who wrote Smectymnuus, a piece againſt biſhop Hall's Vindication of Epiſcopacy. That barbarous word, pretty well ſuited to the treatiſe, was made up of the initials of the author's names, viz. S,tephen, M,arſhal, E,dmund C,alamy, T,homas Y,oung, M,atthew N,ewcomen, W,illiam S,purſtow. After Newcomen was ejected for non-formity he went to Leyden, where he died in 1666.—Calamy.

Newhoff (Theodore Baron), commonly called king of Corſica, was the ſon of Anthony, baron de Newhoff, and de Stein, in Weſtphalia; who, marrying the daughter of a merchant, thereby incurred the hatred of his relations, and was obliged to emigrate to France. By the intereſt of the ducheſs of Orleans he obtained a place at the court of Lorrain. Theodore-Steven, his ſon, was born at Metz about 1696. He was for ſome time in the ſuite of baron de Gortz, the Swediſh miniſter, but when that intriguing ſtateſman was executed at Stockholm, Theodore entered into the Spaniſh ſervice. Soon after this he married mademoiſelle Kilmanſeg, maid of honour to the queen, by whom he had a ſon, who was afterwards known in this country by the name of Colonel Frederick. Theodore next went to France, and had ſome concern with Law, the Scotch adventurer. From thence he paſſed into Holland and England, and in 1736 was at Leghorn. The Corſicans being at that time in ſtate of inſurrection, Theodore went to that iſland, where the inhabitants choſe him for their king. The ſtate of Genoa declared him and his adherents traitors, but Theodore having muſtered an army of 25,000 men, took the city of Baſtia. He relied on ſome foreign powers for ſupport, but England and France forbade their ſubjects from aſſiſting the malcontents. However, he received large ſums of money, and inſtituted a military order, called the order of deliverance; but the failure in the expected ſuccours changed the face of his affairs; and he therefore reſolved on quitting the iſland, but firſt appointed deputies to manage affairs in his abſence. He went from thence in diſguiſe, but was ſeized at Naples, and caſt into the fortreſs of Cueta. On obtaining his liberty he viſited England, where he was reduced to poverty, and thrown into the king's bench for debt. In 1756 he took the benefit of the act of inſolvency, and regiſtered his kingdom for the benefit of his creditors at Guildhall. He died at his loor's in 1796, and was interred in the bury-ng-ground of St. Anne's, Soho, where a monument was erected to his memory by Horace Walpole, afterwards earl of Orford. —Necrology, 1798.

NEWLAND (Peter), the ſon of a carpenter Dimmermeer, near Amſterdam, was born 1764. In his childhood he evinced proofs an extraordinary genius, and at the age ten produced ſome pieces of poetry, and ſolved problems in the mathematics with-t having had a maſter. The Batavian vernment appointed him one of the com-iſſioners of longitude; and he was ſucceſ-rely profeſſor of mathematics and philoſo-y at Utrecht and Amſterdam. He died in 94. His works are, 1. Poems in Dutch; On the Means of enlightening a People; On the general Utility of the Mathematics; Of the Syſtem of Lavoiſier; 5. On the rm of the Globe; 6. On the Courſe of mets, and of the Uncertainty of their Re-rn; 7. On aſcertaining the Latitude at a; 8. Treatiſe on Navigation.—Nouv. Ec. Hiſt.

NEWTON (John), an Engliſh divine and athematician, was born at Oundle, in rthamptonſhire, in 1622, and educated at mund hall, Oxford. In 1661 he was ated D. D. appointed king's chaplain, and tor of Roſs, in Herefordſhire, where he d in 1678. His works are, 1. Aſtrono-a Britannica, 4to.; 2. Help to Calculation, h Tables of Declination, Aſcenſion, &c.; Trigonometria Britannica, folio.; 4. Geo-trical Trigonometry; 5 Mathematical ements, &c.—Martin's Biog. Phil.

NEWTON (ſir Iſaac), the prince of philo-hers, was deſcended of an ancient family Lincolnſhire, and born at Woolſtrope, in t county, on Chriſtmas day in 1642. ing his father in his childhood the care of n devolved on his mother; who gave him excellent education, though ſhe married econd time. In 1654 he was ſent to intham ſchool, and at the age of eighteen moved to Trinity college, Cambridge, ere he had the learned Mr. (afterwards) Iſaac Barrow for his tutor. Under that mathematician Mr. Newton made a ra-progreſs. After going through Euclid's ments, the moſt difficult problems in ch were very eaſy and familiar to him, proceeded to the ſtudy of Deſcartes's geo-ry, with Oughtred's Clavis, and Kep-s Optics, in all of which he made mar-l notes as he went along; and this al-s continued to be his method of ſtudy. was in this early courſe that he invented method of ſeries and fluxions, which he rwards brought to perfection, though his m to the diſcovery was unjuſtly con-ed by Leibnitz, who obtained a knowledge t in 1676 from the author himſelf. At age of twenty-two Mr. Newton took his ree of bachelor of arts, and about the ſame e he applied to the grinding of optic ſes for teleſcopes; and having procured a glaſs priſm in order to try the phænomena of colours lately diſcovered by Grimaldi, the reſult of his obſervations was his new theory of light and colours. On the breaking out of the plague in 1665 he retired to his country ſeat, where, ſecluded from converſation and books, his active and penetrating mind ſtarted that hint which gave riſe to his celebrated ſyſtem of the univerſe. He was ſitting alone in his garden when ſome apples falling from a tree led his thoughts to the ſubject of gravity; and reflecting on the power of that principle, he began to conſider that as it is not diminiſhed at the remoteſt diſtance from the centre of the earth, it may be extended as far as the moon, and to all the planetary bodies. This ſubject he afterwards reſumed on the occaſion of the great comet in 1680, and in 1687 the important principle which forms the foundation of the Newtonian philoſophy was firſt publiſhed under the title of Philoſophiæ Naturalis principia Mathematica. On our author's return to the univerſity, in 1667, he was choſen fellow of his college, and took his degree of maſter of arts. Two years afterwards he ſucceeded Dr. Barrow in the mathematical profeſſorſhip, on which occaſion he read a courſe of optical lectures in Latin. He had not finiſhed them in 1671, when he was choſen fellow of the royal ſociety, to which learned body he communicated his theory of light and colours, which was followed by his account of a new teleſcope invented by him, and other intereſting papers. When the privileges of the univerſity of Cambridge were attacked by James II. Mr. Newton was appointed to appear as one of her delegates in the high-commiſſion court, where he pleaded with ſo much ſtrength that the king thought proper to ſtop his proceedings. He was next choſen a member of the convention parliament, in which he ſat till it was diſſolved. In 1696 he was made warden of the mint, and afterwards maſter of that office; which place he diſcharged with the greateſt honour till his death. On his laſt promotion he nominated Mr. Whiſton to fill his chair at Cambridge with all the profits of the place, and reſigned it entirely to him in 1703. The ſame year our author was choſen preſident of the royal ſociety, in which ſtation he continued twenty-five years. He was alſo a member of the academy of ſciences at Paris, having been choſen in 1699. In 1704 he publiſhed his treatiſe of the Reflections, Refractions, Inflections, and Colours of Light, which was afterwards tranſlated into ſeveral languages, and went through many editions. The next year queen Anne conferred on him the honour of knighthood. In the ſucceeding reign he was very often at court, and the princeſs of Wales, afterwards queen Caroline, frequently converſed with him on philoſophical ſubjects. About 1718 he communicated to her royal highneſs the outlines of his treatiſe on ancient chronology, with which ſhe was ſo pleaſed that ſhe never would part with it. A ſurreptitious copy of it was, however, obtained and carried to France by the abbé Conti, who tranſlated and printed it with obſervations. On this ſir Iſaac publiſhed a paper on the ſubject in the Philoſophical Tranſactions, and the work at length in Engliſh, in quarto. After enjoying an uncommon ſhare of health, owing to his activity and temperance, till he was fourſcore years old, this great man began to be afflicted with an incontinence of urine, which was followed by a ſtone in the bladder. The laſt twenty days of his life were attended with much pain, yet amidſt the ſevereſt agonies he never cried out or expreſſed the ſlighteſt impatience. He died March 20th, 1726, and after lying in ſtate in the Jeruſalem chamber the body was interred in Weſtminſter abbey, the lord chancellor, the dukes of Montroſe and Roxburgh, and three earls, bearing the pall. A ſtately monument has been erected over his remains at the entrance into the choir. Sir Iſaac was of a middling ſtature, and his countenance was pleaſing and venerable. He never made uſe of ſpectacles, and during his whole life loſt but one tooth. He was of a very meek diſpoſition, and a great lover of peace. To his other great qualities he added a ſerious and devout reverence or religion. His favourite ſtudy was the Bible; the prophecies of which he illuſtrated by his reſearches. He conformed to the church of England, but he lived in friendſhip with good men of all communions; and he was an enemy to every kind of perſecution. Sir Iſaac had a great abhorrence of infidelity, and never failed to reprove thoſe who made free with revelation in his preſence, of which the following is an inſtance: The learned Dr. Halley was ſceptically inclined, and ſometimes took the liberty of ſporting with the ſcriptures. On one ſuch occaſion ſir Iſaac ſaid to him — 'Dr. Halley, I am always glad to hear you when you ſpeak about aſtronomy, or other parts of mathematics, becauſe that is a ſubject which you have ſtudied, and well underſtand; but you ſhould not talk of Chriſtianity, for you have not ſtudied it; I have, and know you know nothing of the matter." Sir Iſaac was never married, and, perhaps, had never time to think of it, being conſtantly immerſed in the profoundeſt ſtudies, and not being willing to have them broken by domeſtic concerns. A complete and elegant edition of his works was publiſhed with illuſtrations by Dr. (now biſhop) Horſley, in 1779, in five volumes, quarto.—Biog. Brit.

NEWTON (Thomas), a divine and phyſician, was born at Preſbury, in Cheſhire, and educated firſt at Oxford and next at Cambridge. He taught ſchool at Macclesfield, and practiſed phyſic, after which he obtained the living of Ilford, in Eſſex, where he died in 1607. He wrote the Hiſtory of the Saracens, 4to.; Approved Medicines and cordial Recepts, 8vo.; Illuſtrium aliquot Anglorum encomia, 4to; Directions for the Health of Magiſtrates and Students; Herbal of the Bible, 8vo. &c.—Wood.

NEWTON (Richard), an Engliſh divine, was born in Buckinghamſhire, and educated at Weſtminſter ſchool, from whence he was elected to Chriſt church, Oxford. In 1710 he was appointed principal of Hart-hall, which houſe was converted into a college by his means in 1740, under the name of Hertford college. Dr. Newton was alſo canon of Chriſt church, and died in 1753. He wrote a book againſt pluralities and non-reſidence, another on Univerſity Education; and he publiſhed an edition of Theophraſtus with notes.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

NEWTON (Thomas), an eminent prelate, was born at Lichfield, in Staffordſhire, in 1704. After finiſhing his education at Weſtminſter ſchool he was elected to Trinity college, Cambridge, of which he was choſen fellow. After entering into orders he became curate of St. George, Hanover-ſquare, and aſſiſtant preacher to the rector, Dr. Trebeck, whoſe daughter he married. He was alſo reader and afternoon preacher at Groſvenor chapel. In 1744 he obtained the rectory of St. Mary le Bow, London, and the year following took his degree of doctor in divinity. In 1747 he was choſen lecturer of St. George, Hanover ſquare; and in 1749 he publiſhed an edition of the Paradiſe Loſt with notes ſelected from various authors and many of his own. He alſo prefixed a curious and well-written life of the author. In 1756 he was appointed chaplain in ordinary to the king; and afterwards obtained a prebendal ſtall in St. Peter's church, Weſtminſter. Having loſt his wife, he married in 1761 the widow of the rev. Mr. Hand, and daughter of John lord Liſburne. The ſame year he kiſſed the king's hand on being promoted to the biſhopric of Briſtol. He was offered the primacy of Ireland in 1764, but declined it. Four years afterwards he accepted the deanry of St. Paul's, London, which, with his biſhopric, he held to his death in 1782. Biſhop Newton was a man of conſiderable learning and piety, of much obſervation and liberality. His principal work is a courſe of Diſſertations on the Prophecies, in two vols. 8vo. After his death were publiſhed his Miſcellaneous Works with his Memoirs, written by himſelf.

NICAISE (Claude), a French antiquary and eccleſiaſtic, was born at Dijon. He reſided many years at Rome; and died at Valley, in his own country, in 1701, aged 7[illegible]. He publiſhed, 1 De Nummo Pantheo; A Diſcourſe on the Form and Figure of the Syrens; 3. A Diſſertation on two of Raphael's Pictures.—Moreri.

NICANDER of Colophon, a grammarian, poet, and phyſician, who flouriſhed B. C. 140. Two poems of his are extant, entitled Theriaca and Alexipharmaca, which have been printed in the Corpus Poetarum G[illegible]

m, 2 vols. folio; and ſeparately at Floe in 1764, 8vo.—Voſſius de Poet. Græc.

ICAUSIS, or, according to the Arabians, KIS, queen of Sheba, who viſited Solo-upon the report of his wiſdom. Her try was probably that part of Arabia which was inhabited by the Sabeans; Joſephus pretends that ſhe reigned over t and Ethiopia —Moreri.

ICHOLLS (Richard), an Engliſh poet, born in 1584. He wrote additions to Mirror for Magiſtrates; England's
; and other poems.—Phillips's Theatrum rum.

ICEPHORUS I. emperor of the eaſt, was ceellor of the empire, but took the ne, in 802, from the empreſs Irene, n he baniſhed to the iſle of Mytylene.
firſt part of his reign was auſpicious;
fterwards he committed ſuch cruelties his ſubjects revolted, and proclaimed nnes, ſurnamed the Turk, emperor.
nnes however was defeated, and ſent monaſtery, where he was deprived of
yes. The Bulgarians having invaded mpire, and ravaged Thrace, Nicephomarched againſt them, but was van-ed and ſlain, A.D. 811.—Univ. Hiſt.

CCEPHORUS II. (Phocas), a nobleman of antinople, whoſe character was ſo ar, that he was raiſed to the imperial n 963. He married the widow of his eſſor, Romanus the Younger, and the Saracens out of a great part of
He was aſſaſſinated by John Zimiſnd other conſpirators in 969.—Ibid.

CEPHORUS III. was inveſted with the
by the army which he commanded
7. He was deprived of this dignity
31, by his general Alexis Comnenus, ent him to a convent, where he died after.—Ibid.

EPHORUS (Gregorius), a Greek hiſto-f the 14th century, who compiled a of the Eaſtern empire from 1204 to which was printed in France in 1702, ols. folio.—Moreri.

EPHORUS (Calliſtus), a Greek hiſtothe ſame age with the preceding.
ote an eccleſiaſtical hiſtory from the f Chriſt to A.D. 610, the beſt edition
h is that of Paris in 1630.—Ibid.

EPHORUS (Blemmidas), a monk of Athos, in the 13th century. He rethe patriarchate of Conſtantinople is partiality to the Roman church.
ote two treatiſes concerning the pre-of the Holy Ghoſt, printed at Rome
.—Ibid.

ERON (John Francis), an ingenious and mathematician, was born at Pa-1613. He diſtinguiſhed himſelf by ll in optics, on which ſubject he ſome curious works, the beſt of is entitled, Thaumaturgus Opticus: miranda Optices, Catoptrices et Diop-He died in 1646.—Ibid.

ERON (John Peter), an eminent biographer, was born at Paris in 1685. He entered into the religious order of the Barnabites, and became a celebrated preacher. He was alſo ſucceſſively profeſſor of philoſophy and theology, and librarian to his ſociety. He died in 1738. His works are, 1. Memoirs of Men illuſtrious in the Republic of Letters, with an Account of their Works, in 44 vols.; 2. a Tranſlation of Dr. Hancock's book on the Virtues of Common Water, 2 vols. 12mo.; 3. the Converſion of England to Chriſtianity, &c.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

NICETAS (David), a Greek hiſtorian of the 9th century, who wrote the Life of St. Ignatius, patriarch of Conſtantinople, of which a Latin tranſlation was printed at Ingolſtadt in 1504.—Moreri.

NICETAS (ſurnamed Serron), biſhop of Heraclea in the 11th century, who wrote Panegyrics on St. Gregory Nazianzen; Commentaries on the Scriptures; and other works —Ibid.

NICETAS (Achominates), a Greek hiſtorian, who died at Nice in 1206. He wrote Annals from 1118 to 1205, of which a Latin verſion appeared at Baſil in 1557, and at Geneva in 1593.—Moreri.

NICHOLAS (Abraham), an Engliſh penman, was born in London in 1692. He publiſhed Examples of Penmanſhip; the Penman's Aſſiſtant; and the Complete Writing-maſter. He died about 1744.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

NICHOLLS (William), an Engliſh divine, was born in Buckinghamſhire in 1664, and educated at Magdalen hall, Oxford, after which he became fellow of Merton college, and took his degree of D.D. in 1695; at which time he was rector of Selſey in Suſſex. He died about 1712. Dr. Nicholls publiſhed ſeveral valuable works: the principal of which were, 1. A Conference with a Theiſt, 2 vols. 8vo.; 2. Defenſio Eccleſiæ Anglicanæ, 1707, 12mo.; of this uſeful book he afterwards publiſhed an edition in Engliſh in octavo; 3. A Commentary on the Book of Common-prayer, folio and octavo.—Ib.

NICHOLLS (Frank), an eminent Engliſh phyſician, was born at London in 1699. He was educated at Weſtminſter ſchool, from whence he removed to Oxford, where he took his degrees, and became reader of anatomy. On leaving the univerſity he ſettled in London, and in 1743 married a daughter of Dr. Mead, by whom he had five children. He was eminent as a lecturer on anatomy and the practice of phyſic; but he was guilty of a culpable cuſtom in perverting the minds of his pupils to infidelity while teaching them the principles of medical ſcience. He was phyſician to George II. an account of whoſe death he publiſhed in the Philoſophical Tranſactions. He died in 1779. Dr. Nicholls was alſo the author of a tract De Anima Medica, and a diſſertation De Motu Cordis et Sanguinis in Homine.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Nicias, an Athenian commander, who, by his merit, roſe to the higheſt offices in his country. He ſignalized himſelf in the war of the Peloponneſus, which he had the honour of finiſhing. Afterwards he was appointed to command with Eurymedon and Demoſthenes againſt Sicily. Theſe three generals laid ſiege to Syracuſe for two years, but finding it impregnable they were about to retire, but were attacked by the Syracuſans, and Nicias and Demoſthenes, with a great part of their troops, made priſoners. Nicias was put to death by the Syracuſans B.C. 413. There were two others of this name, the one a painter mentioned by Pliny, and the other a grammarian, who was the friend of Pompey and Cicero.—Plut. Plin. Suet.

Nicodemus, a jewiſh ſenator who viſited our Saviour by night, and afterwards became his diſciple, though ſecretly. But when Jeſus Chriſt was crucified he avowed himſelf, and, together with Joſeph of Arimathea, paid the laſt duties of regard to his maſter. The jews, it is ſaid, intended to have put him to death, but were hindered by his relation Gamaliel. They, however, depoſed and excommunicated him. There is a pretended goſpel under the name of Nicodemus; but it is full of errors, and was compoſed by the Manichees.—Dupin. Cave. Moſheim.

Nicolai (John), a dominican, was born at Monza, in the dioceſe of Verdun, in 1594. He profeſſed theology above twenty years with great reputation at Paris, and died in 1673. He publiſhed a complete edition of the works of Thomas Aquinas, in 19 vols. folio.; alſo five diſſertations on points of eccleſiaſtical diſcipline; a piece againſt Arnauld, and other works.—Moreri.

Nicolas, one of the ſeven deacons mentioned in the Acts. He was a proſelyte of Antioch; but afterwards founded a ſect called by his name which allowed adultery, and to eat meats offered to idols. Some writers, however, diſtinguiſh the author of this hereſy from Nicolas the Deacon.—Dupin Cave.

Nicolas I. pope, called the Great, was a native of Rome, and ſucceeded Benedict III. in 858. He had a conteſt with Photius, the intruding patriarch of Conſtantinople. Nicolas died in 867.—Dupin. Bower.

Nicolas II. was a native of Burgundy, and became archbiſhop of Florence, and was elected pope in 1058. He was oppoſed by a rival who called himſelf Benedict X. who was ſoon depoſed. Nicolas died in 1061. —Ibid.

Nicolas III. an Italian of noble family, obtained the tiara in 1277. He ſent miſſionaries to convert heathen countries, and died in 1280.—Ibid.

Nicolas IV. a native of Arcoli, was choſen pope in 1288. He endeavoured to excite a new croiſade, but without ſucceſs. This diſappointment haſtened his death, which happened in 1292. He compiled ſome Commentaries on the Scriptures, and on the Sentences of Lombard.—Ibid.

Nicolas V. cardinal biſhop of Bologna, was elected pope after Eugenius IV. in 1447. He reſtored peace to the church and to Europe, and celebrated on that account a jubilee at Rome in 1450. The misfortunes of the chriſtians in the eaſt oppreſſed him with grief, and he died in 1455.—Ibid.

Nicolas de Lyra, ſo named from the place of his birth, a town in Normandy. He is ſaid to have been a jew, but on turning chriſtian, became a member of the order of friars minors in 1291. He read lectures in divinity with great reputation, and was admitted to the confidence of Jane, wife of Philip VI. who named him one of the executors of her will. He died at Paris in 1340. His works are, Commentaries upon the Bible, Antwerp, 6 vols. folio.; a Diſputation againſt the Jews; another in defence of the New Teſtament, againſt a Rabbin.—Moreri.

Nicolas of Munſter, author of a ſect called the family of love, about 1540. He pretended to inſpiration, and ſaid that, as the divine ſpirit reſided in him, he was greater than Jeſus Chriſt. He wrote ſome books, as the Goſpel of the Kingdom; the Land of Peace, &c. His ſect made their appearance in England in the reign of Elizabeth, and in the ſucceeding one they addreſſed a confeſſion of their faith to James I.—Moſheim. Neal. Puritans.

Nicolas of Piſa, an architect and ſculptor, who flouriſhed in the 13th century. He built a magnificent church at Bologna, where he conſtructed a ſuperb monument to St. Dominic.—D'Argenville.

Nicole (Claude), counſellor to the king of France, was born at Chartres in 1611, and died in 1685. A collection of his poems, of indifferent merit, was printed at Paris, 2 vols. 12mo. 1693.—Moreri.

Nicole (Peter), a relation of the preceding, was born at Chartres in 1625. He became a member of the ſociety of Port Royal, where he taught youth with great reputation, and aſſiſted Arnauld in many of his works. In 1677 he quitted France on account of the perſecution againſt the janſeniſts, but ſome time after he obtained leave to return to Paris. In his latter years he eſpouſed the cauſe of Boſſuet againſt the quietiſts, and was engaged in other controverſies. He died in 1695. His moral eſſays are eſteemed; alſo is his treatiſe on preſerving peace in ſociety. His other works are chiefly polemical. —Niceron.

Nicole (Francis), a mathematician, born at Paris in 1683, and died in 1758. He became a member of the academy of ſciences in 1706. Nicole was a profound geometrician, and gave to the academy ſeveral valuable papers, particularly one on lines of the third order.— Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

Nicolo del Abbate, an eminent painter, was born at Modena in 1512. He ob-his ſurname from being patronized by imatice, abbot of St. Martin, who took m to France in 1552, and employed him ſeveral works. The ſtyle of Nicolo ap- oached to that of Julio Romano, and of rmeſan.—De Piles.

NICOLSON (William), a learned prelate, s born at Orton in Cumberland, about 55, and educated at Queen's college, Ox- d, of which he became fellow. He was firſt archdeacon, and afterwards biſhop Carliſle, from whence in 1717 he was nſlated to the biſhopric of Derry in Ire- d. He died in 1727, juſt as he was pro- ted to the archbiſhopric of Caſhel. He s a learned antiquary, and publiſhed ſe- ral curious works, the chief of which is his gliſh Hiſtorical Library, folio, 1714.—Biog. it.

NICOMEDES, an ancient mathematician, o is celebrated for his diſcovery of the ve called the conchoid. He flouriſhed the ſecond century of the chriſtian æra. Voſſius de Mathem.

NICOT (John), a French courtier, who ſent by Francis I. ambaſſador to Portu- , from whence he brought the plant ned tobacco, but which in France has n, out of compliment to the importer, ed nicotiana. He died in 1600. Nicot te a book on navigation; and the Trea- of French language, a Dictionary, &c.— reri.

NIDHARD (John Everard), a German je- , who accompanied the archduchefs ria to Spain, when ſhe married Philip That monarch made him his con- ential miniſter, which occaſioned many utes between the jeſuit and the duke of ma, to whom Nidhard once ſaid, "It is that ought to reſpect me, as I have every your God in my hand, and your queen at feet." He was however a miſerable mi- r, and brought the affairs of the nation to d condition. On being diſgraced he re- d to Rome, where he was made ambaſſador he pope to the court of Spain, with the title ardinal. He died in 1681. Nidhard wrote books on the immaculate conception of Virgin Mary.—Moreri.

NIEUHOFF (John de), a Dutch voyager he middle of the 17th century. He e a curious account of his embaſſy the Dutch Eaſt India company to the eror of China. It is in Churchill's ection of Voyages and Travels.— eri.

NIEUWENTYT (Bernard), an eminent h philoſopher and mathematician, was at Weſtraadytte, in North Holland, in . He ſtudied medicine, and became hyſician and magiſtrate at Purme- , where he died in 1730. His s are, Conſiderations on the Analyſis of atities infinitely ſmall; Analyſis of es by the Doctrine of Infinites; Con- ations on the Principles of the Differ- ential Calculus; Contemplations on the Univerſe; this has been tranſlated into Engliſh, under the title of The Religious Philoſopher, in 3 vols. 8vo.—Martin's Biog. Phil.

NIGER (C. Peſcennius Juſtus), governor of Syria, and ſo diſtinguiſhed by his valour and prudence, that the Roman ſoldiers proclaimed him emperor at Antioch A.D. 193. He had many virtues, but did not long enjoy his high dignity, being defeated and ſlain by Severus in 195.—Crevier.

NIGIDIUS FICULUS (Publius), a learned Roman in the time of Cicero, whom he aſſiſted in defeating the conſpiracy of Cataline, but having taken part with Pompey againſt Cæſar, he was exiled, and died in 45. B.C. He was addicted to aſtrology, and ſome of his pieces are extant.

NIGRISOLI (Jerome), a learned phyſician, who died at Ferrara in 1689, aged 69. He wrote, Progymnaſmata Medica, printed at Guaſtalla in 1665. His ſon Francis was alſo a phyſician, and a learned writer. He died in 1727, aged 79. He wrote ſome medical works; but it is uncertain which of theſe perſons was the author of a curious book De charta veterum, ejuſque uſu.—Moreri.

NIKON, patriarch of Ruſſia, was born of an obſcure family in Novogorod. He was advanced to the patriarchate in 1652, and enjoyed the particular favour of the czar Alexiowitz. Nikon introduced into the Ruſſian church the method of chanting, and called a council for reſtoring the ſacred text according to the ancient verſions. A new edition of the Bible was accordingly publiſhed at Moſcow, under the ſanction of the patriarch; but it gave great diſſatisfaction to the prieſts. Nikon compoſed a Chronicle of Ruſſian Affairs to the reign of Alexiowitz, which was printed at Peterſburg in 1767, in 2 vols. 4to. By the intrigues of his enemies he was deprived of his dignity and ſent to priſon; but the emperor Feodor reſtored him to liberty. He died in 1681.—Hiſt. Ruſſia. Moreri.

NINUS, the founder of the Aſſyrian empire, was the ſon of Belus. He built Nineveh, after which he conquered the Bactrians, as he had before a part of Egypt and India. Ninus married Semiramis, to whom he left his throne about 2164 B.C. —Univ. Hiſt.

NIPHUS (Auguſtin), an Italian writer of the 16th century, was born in Calabria. Pope Leo X. made him count palatin, and gave him other marks of his favour. He died about 1550. His principal works are, Commentaries on Ariſtotle and Averroes, 14 vols. folio; and treatiſes de Amore and de falſa diluvii prognoſticatione, 4to.—Tiraboſchi.

NISBET (ſir John), lord advocate of Scotland in the reign of Charles II. He diſtinguiſhed himſelf by pleading againſt the ſtanding militia in that country, and he was one of the commiſſioners appointed to treat with thoſe of England, concerning the union of the two kingdoms.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Nivelle de la Chaussee (Peter Claude), a French poet, was born of a wealthy family at Paris in 1692, and died there in 1754. He was a member of the French academy and diſtinguiſhed himſelf by ſome eſteemed plays, as the School of Mothers; Melanides, and the Governant, comedies; and Maximian, and George Barnwell, tragedies. His works were printed at Paris in 1763, 5 vols. 12mo. —Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

Nivernois (Louis-Julius Mancini, duke de), miniſter of ſtate, member of the French academy, and of that of belles lettres, was born at Paris in 1716. After ſerving in the army ſome time he was ſent ambaſſador to Rome, next to Berlin, and laſtly to London, where he negociated the peace of 1763. On his return to France he devoted himſelf chiefly to literary purſuits, and produced ſeveral poetical imitations of Virgil, Horace, Tibullus, Ovid, Arioſto, and Milton, which diſplay a fine taſte. He alſo wrote Letters on the Uſe of the Mind; Dialogues of the Dead; Reflections on the Genius of Horace, that of Boileau, and that of John Baptiſt Rouſſeau; the Life of Abbé Barthelemi; Reflections on Alexander and Charles XII.; Tranſlation of Tacitus's Life of Agricola; another of Pope's Eſſay on Man; Collection of Fables, &c. The duke died in 1798.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

Nizolius (Marius), an Italian grammarian, who publiſhed in 1553 a treatiſe De veris Principiis et verâ Ratione Philoſophandi contra pſeudo-philoſophos. He alſo compiled a Latin dictionary of the words and expreſſions which are in Cicero, folio — Tiraboſchi.

Noah, the ſon of Lamech, was born 2978 B.C. The Almighty, deſigning to puniſh the wickedneſs of mankind, commanded Noah to build an ark to ſave himſelf and family, and when it was completed a deluge of waters overwhelmed the globe, and every living creature periſhed, except thoſe in the ark Seven months after the commencement of the flood, the ark reſted on mount Ararat; and Noah offered a ſacrifice to the Lord who made him a covenant with him. After this, Noah cultivated the land, and planted the vine; but having drank of the juice of the grape, he was diſcovered lying aſleep by his ſon Ham, who inſtead of being concerned at his father's weakneſs, called his brothers Shem and Japhet to witneſs the indecent ſpectacle. They, however, covered Noah with a mantle, and when he awoke and underſtood what had paſſed, he uttered a prophetic curſe on the poſterity of Ham. The patriarch died B.C. 2029. Almoſt all nations have retained traditionary notions of the deluge, and veſtiges of it are to be ſeen in various parts of the world. Noah appears evidently to be the ſame with the Saturn or the heathen mythology.—Bible. Univ. Hiſt.

Noailles (Adrian Maurice, duke de), a celebrated French general, was born of a noble family, and evinced early in life eminent talents for the military profeſſion. He ſerved with his father in Catalonia, and afterwards under Vendome, both in Spain and Flanders. In 1708 he commanded in Rouſillon, and gained ſeveral advantages over the enemy. In 1710 he made himſelf maſter of Gironne, one of the moſt important places in Catalonia, for which Philip V. created him a grandee of Spain, and Louis XIV. made him field marſhal. In the ſucceeding reign he was appointed preſident of the council of finances; but when Dubois obtained the aſcendancy in the miniſtry, Noailles was exiled. On the death of that miniſter he was recalled and reſtored to his place. In the war of 1733 he commanded at the ſiege of Philipſburg, and obliged the Germans to abandon Worms. He afterwards ſerved with great reputation in Italy. The duke died in 1766.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

Noailles (Louis-Anthony de), uncle of the preceding was born in 1651. He devoted himſelf to the eccleſiaſtical ſtate, and in 1676 was nominated biſhop of Cahors, from whence he was removed to Chalons, and laſtly to the ſee of Paris, in 1695. He made excellent rules for the conduct of his clergy; but his peace was diſturbed by the jeſuits in conſequence of the approbation which he gave to Queſnel's Reflections on the New Teſtament. In 1700 he was honoured with the dignity of cardinal, on which occaſion Louis XIV. ſaid to him, "I have more pleaſure in procuring for you the cardinal hat than you have in receiving it." Notwithſtanding this the king was afterwards prejudiced againſt him by father Tellier, the jeſuit. Pope Clement XI. was alſo ſet againſt the archbiſhop, and iſſued his famous bull Unigenitus, on occaſion of Queſnel's book which the latter had ſanctioned. The cardinal was exiled; but after the death of Louis, Tellier was baniſhed in his turn, and the archbiſhop recalled. He died in 1729. His brother Gaſton ſucceeded him in the biſhopric of Chalons, and died in 1720.—Moreri.

Noble (Euſtache de), a French writer was born at Troyes in 1643 He became procurator-general in the parliament of Metz but being accuſed of corruption in that office he was ſent to the priſon of the Chatelet and condemned to be baniſhed for nine years. From this ſentence he appealed, and was removed to the Conciergerie, where he contracted an intimacy with a female priſoner called Gabrielle Perreau, but generally known by the name of La Belle Epicière. The conſequence of this connexion was three children. After leading a wandering and diſſolute life he died in 1711. He wrote Hiſtory of the Republic of Holland; Reof the State of Genoa; Dissertation on Year of Christ's Nativity; Secret History of the Conspiracy of the Family of Pazzi inst the Medici; and several romances and er works.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

NOGAROLA, the name of several ladies of ona who were distinguished in the 16th tury. Antoinette, celebrated for her beauty learning, married Salvatico Bonicolti, a tleman of Mantua. Her daughter Angela oted herself to the study of the scriptures, wrote an Explanation of the Prophecies. a understood the languages, philosophy, theology; and acquired so great a fame cardinal Bessarion made a journey to ona on purpose to converse with her. She in 1468, aged 38. Her letters are ly esteemed. She also wrote a dissertaon this question, whether the sin of m or Eve was the greater? She took the of the woman against Louis Foscaro, who nded Adam as the least culpable. *Gene*e and Laura, sisters of Isotta, were also nguished for their literary talents Louis arola, of the same family, published several translations from the Greek. He ared with advantage at the council of nt, and died at Verona in 1559.—*Tira*i.

NOLDIUS (Christian), a Danish divine, born in 1626. He became rector of college of Landscroon, and afterwards ssor of divinity at Copenhagen, where ied in 1683. His Concordantia particum Hebræco-Chaldaicarum Veteris Testati is an excellent work. The best edii is that of Jena in 1734, 4to. Noldius also the author of Historia Idumæa; Sam Historiarum et Antiquitatum Synop- Logica, &c.—Moreri.

NOLLET (John Anthony), a French di- and philosophical writer, was born at ore in the diocese of Noyon in 1700. tudied at Beauvais and Paris. In 1734 isited London, and was chosen a member e royal society. On his return to Paris ommenced a course of lectures in expental philosophy, to which he added illusons of chemistry, anatomy, and natural ry. In 1738 he was appointed professor perimental philosophy at Paris, and the following admitted a member of the aca- of sciences. About the same time he to Turin on an invitation from the of Sardinia, who appointed him pro- of philosophy in that university; but as recalled in 1744 to give lessons to the hin of France. In 1753 he was nomi- first professor of experimental philo- in the college of Navarre. He was appointed philosophical tutor to the royal ly. The abbé Nollet died in 1770. Lectures on Experimental Philosophy printed in 6 vols. 12mo. Besides these rote some excellent works on Electricity; Art of making Experiments; and several s in the Memoirs of the Academy.— Dict. Hist.

NOLLET (Dominick), a painter of history, landscape, and battles, was born at Bruges in 1640, and died in 1736.—Pilkington.

NOLLIKENS (Joseph Francis), a painter, was born at Antwerp, but came young to England. He studied under Tillemans, and afterwards copied Watteau and Paolo Pannini. He painted landscapes, figures, and conversations, and particularly the amusements of children. He was much employed by lord Cobham at Stowe, and by the earl of Tylney. He died in 1748, aged 42. His son Joseph is an admirable sculptor, and served under Scheemaker. He has executed several capital works.—Walpole's Anecd. of Painting.

NONIUS (Marcellus), a grammarian and peripatetic philosopher, whose treatise de Proprietate Sermonum was printed in 1471, and again at Paris in 1614, 8vo. with the notes of Josias Mercier. It is a work of value.—Moreri.

NONNIUS (Louis), a learned physician of Antwerp in the 17th century. He wrote a famous book, entitled, Dieteticon, sive De Re Cibaria, full of learning and curious disquisition. He also printed a Commentary on the Greek Medals; a Description of Spain, in Latin; a Commentary on Greece; Ichthyophagia; and other works.—Moreri.

NONNIUS (Peter), or Nunnez, a Portuguese mathematician, was born in 1497 at Alcazar. He became professor of mathematics at Coimbra, and was preceptor to don Henry, son of king Emanuel. He died in 1577. Nonnius wrote a Treatise on Navigation, folio; De Crepusculis, 4to.; Opera Mathematica, folio His book on Algebra is esteemed.—Moreri. Martin's Biog. Phil.

NONNUS, a Greek poet, who was a native of Panopolis in Egypt in the 5th century. He wrote an account of his embassy to Ethiopia and among the Saracens: also a work entitled, Dionysiaca, printed at Antwerp, in 1569; and a paraphrase in Greek verse, on the gospel of St. John, edited by Heinsius, 1627.—Moreri.

NOODT (Gerard), a famous civilian, was born in 1647 at Nimeguen, where he was chosen professor of law in 1671. He afterwards accepted the professorship at Franeker, from whence he removed to Utrecht: but in 1686 he settled at Leyden, of which university he became rector. He died in 1725. He published a collection of his works in 1713, 4to.; they are wholly on subjects of jurisprudence, and are esteemed of high authority.—Niceron.

NORADIN, the son of Sanguin, or Emadeddin, sultan of Aleppo and Nineveh. When his father was slain by his eunuchs at the siege of Calgembar in 1145. Noradin and his brother Seiffeddin divided his states between them. The former obtained the sovereignty of Aleppo, and by his prudence became one of the most potent princes in the east. He distinguished himself greatly against the Christians in the time of the crusades, and defeated Joscelyn, count of Edessa, and Raymond, prince of Antioch, after which he made himſelf maſter of Egypt. He died in 1174. He was a brave and generous prince, and many inſtances are related of his liberality.—Maimbourg's Hiſt. of Cruſades. D'Herbelot.

Nordberg (J. A), chaplain to Charles XII of Sweden, whom he accompanied in all his campaigns, and whoſe hiſtory he wrote in Swediſh. The author died about 1745.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

Norden (Frederick Lewis), a Daniſh gentleman, was born at Gluckſtadt in Holſtein, in 1708. He was a volunteer in the Engliſh fleet under ſir John Norris in the Mediterranean The king of Denmark ſent him to Egypt to make drawings and obſervations of the ancient monuments of that country. Theſe he executed with great fidelity, and his travels with plates have been ſplendidly printed in 2 volumes folio. Being elected a member of the royal ſociety of London, he preſented to that learned body his drawings of ruins and coloſſal ſtatues at Thebes. Captain Norden died in 1742.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Norden (John), an old Engliſh writer, who is conjectured by Wood to have been a native of Wilts. He had his education at Oxford, and wrote ſome ſtrange books in divinity with very whimſical titles, as the Sinful Man's Solace, 1585, 8vo.; Antitheſis, or Contrariety between the Wicked and Godly ſet forth in a pair of Gloves fit for every man to wear, 1517. He was alſo the author of the Surveyor's Dialogue, 4to.; Labyrinth of Man's Life, a poem; and a Survey of the County of Middleſex, and another of Hertfordſhire. He was ſurveyor of the king's lands, and died about 1625.—Wood, A. O.

Nordenfleicht (Chederig Charlotte de), a Swediſh lady, was born at Stockholm. She wrote ſeveral eſteemed and elegant poems, particularly one on the paſſage of the Belts, two ſtraits in the Baltic which Charles Guſtavus paſſed when frozen over in 1658. She is alſo known as the author of an ingenious peace, entitled, An Apology for Women. She died in 1793, aged 44.

Nordenschold, a Swede, who was governor of Finland, and knight of the order of the ſword. He was diſtinguiſhed for his knowledge of political economy. He died in 1764. Several of his Memoirs are in the collection of the academy of Stockholm, of which he was a member.—Nouv. Dict.

Nores (Jaſon de), a native of Nicoſia in the iſle of Cyprus, on the taking of which place by the Turks he went to Padua, where he became teacher of moral philoſophy. His Explication of Horace's Art of Poetry is very ſcarce He died in 1590.—Moreri.

Norgate (Edward), an Engliſh illuminator, who died in 1641. In the initial letters of an old patent done by him are the portraits of James I. ſitting on his throne, delivering the patent to earl Stirling; and round the border, repreſentations in miniature of huntings, fiſhings, &c.—Walpole.

Noris (Henry), a celebrated cardinal, was born at Verona in 1631, and educated by his father, who was a native of Ireland. He afterwards entered into the monaſtic order of St. Auguſtine, and acquired great reputation on account of his learning. In 1673, he publiſhed the Hiſtory of Pelagianiſm, which gave offence to ſeveral perſons, who accuſed him to the pope as being heretically inclined, but Clement X. ſo little regarded the charge that he made Noris under-librarian of the Vatican. In 1695 he was honoured with the purple. He died in 1704. His works were publiſhed at Verona in 1730, in 5 vols. folio.—Moreri.

Norris (John), an Engliſh divine, was born at Collingbourne in Wiltſhire, in 1657, and educated at Wincheſter ſchool, from whence he removed to Exeter college, Oxford. In 1680 he was choſen fellow of All Souls college, where he took his degree of M.A. In 1689 he was preſented to the rectory of Newton St. Loo in Somerſetſhire; and afterwards to that of Bemerton in Wiltſhire. He died in 1711. Mr. Norris was a pious, learned, and ingenious man; but ſtrongly tinctured with the Platonic myſticiſm. He wrote againſt Mr. Dodwell on the Immortality of the Soul; an Idea of Happineſs, 8vo.; Poems and Diſcourſes, 8vo.; the Theory and Regulation of Love, 8vo.; ſome pieces againſt the Quakers, the Calviniſts, and Mr. Locke's Eſſay on Underſtanding. He was alſo the author of ſeveral volumes of Sermons written in a clear and pathetic ſtyle.—Biog. Brit.

Norris (John), an Engliſh gentleman, was born in Norfolk, and educated at Eton ſchool, and King's college, Cambridge. On leaving the univerſity he ſettled on his eſtate. He was twice married, and left a daughter when he died, in 1777, aged 43. Mr. Norris was of a ſerious diſpoſition, but not enthuſiaſtic. He left to the univerſity of Cambridge an eſtate of 190l. a year for the purpoſe of eſtabliſhing a theological profeſſorſhip, and paying an annual prize on ſome ſubject of divinity.—Europ. Mag. vol. v.

North (Francis), lord Guildford, keeper of the great ſeal in the reigns of Charles II. and James II. was the third ſon of Dudley lord North, and educated at St. John's college, Cambridge, from whence he removed to the Middle Temple. After being ſolicitor and attorney-general, he was made chief juſtice of the king's bench, and in 1683 he was appointed lord keeper with the title of lord Guildford. He died in 1685. His lordſhip wrote, 1. An Index of Verbs neuter, printed with Lilly's Grammar; 2. A paper on the Gravitation of Fluids in the Bladders of Fiſhes, printed in the Philoſophical Tranſactions; 3. A philoſophical Eſſay on Muſic; 4. Several Concertos, &c. &c.—Life of the Lord Keeper North, 4to.

North (John), brother of the preceding, was born in 1645. He became ſucceſſively fellow of Jeſus college, Greek profeſſor, clerk of the king's cloſet, prebendary of Weſtminſter, and maſter of Trinity college, Cambridge. Dr. North died in 1683. He publiſhed ſome of the works of Plato.—Ibid.

North (Frederic), earl of Guildford, an eminent Engliſh ſtateſman, was born in 1732. He ſucceeded Mr. Charles Townſend as chancellor of the exchequer; and in 1770 was made firſt lord of the treaſury, in which office he continued till the cloſe of the American war. He was a man of ſtrong powers, an excellent orator, and his private life was very amiable. Before his death he became wholly blind. He died in 1792.—Engliſh Peerage. Gen. B. D.

North (George), a learned divine, was born in London, and educated at St. Paul's ſchool; from whence he removed to Bene't college, Cambridge, where he took his degrees in arts. He was a fellow of the ſociety of antiquaries, and vicar of Codicote in Herfordſhire. He died in 1772. He wrote "Table of Engliſh Silver Coins, from the conqueſt to the commonwealth.—Aneed. of Lawyer.

Norton (Thomas), an Engliſh writer, was born in Bedfordſhire, and is ſuppoſed by Wood to have been a barriſter. He was a zealous Calviniſt, and wrote an Epiſtle to the Queen's poor deceived Subjects of the North Country, 1569; a Warning againſt the dangerous Practices of the Papiſts; and other tracts againſt Popery. He tranſlated Calvin's Inſtitutions into Engliſh, and the larger Catechiſm of Alexander Nowell; alſo ſeventy-ſeven of the Pſalms of David, in the verſion of Sternhold and Hopkins; and he aſſiſted Thomas Sackville in his tragedy of Gorrex and Porrex. He died about 1600.—Wood, A. O.

Norton (lady Frances), was deſcended from the ancient family of the Frekes in Somerſetſhire, and was born about the middle of the 17th century. She received a learned education, and was firſt married to ſir George Norton of Somerſetſhire, by whom ſhe had three children one of whom was married to Richard Gethin [ſee Gethin]. On the death of that amiable woman lady Norton wrote two books: one entitled the Applauſe of Virtue, 4to. 1705; the other Memento Mori, or Meditations on Death. After the death of ſir George, ſhe married colonel Norris, and on his death gave her hand Mr. Hughes. She died in 1720.—Ballard's Britiſh Ladies.

Norton (John), a writer in the reign of Charles II. who publiſhed a curious book, called, The Scholar's Vade-mecum, in which he endeavoured to alter the orthography of the Engliſh language.—Granger.

Nostradamus (Michael), a French aſtrologer and phyſician, was born at St. Remi in Provence in 1503. He ſtudied phyſic at Montpellier, where he took his doctor's degree. Having rendered ſome eminent ſervice to the inhabitants of Aix when the city was viſited by a contagion, he received a yearly penſion many years. In 1555 he publiſhed his prophecies, which, though very obſcure and abſurd, gained the author a conſiderable reputation. Theſe were followed by ſeveral others: the whole making one volume folio, in barbarous verſe. Noſtradamus was honoured with marks of diſtinction by perſons of the higheſt rank, particularly Charles IX. king of France. He died in 1566.—Moreri.

Noue (Francis de la), ſurnamed the Arm of Iron, a French ſoldier, was born in Britanny in 1531. He diſtinguiſhed himſelf in the wars of Italy, and on his return to France eſpouſed the party of the proteſtants, then in arms againſt the catholics. He took Orleans in 1567. He had a principal ſhare in the battle of Jarnac, in 1569, after which he made himſelf maſter of Fontenoy, on which occaſion he loſt his left arm, and had another conſtructed of iron, from whence he had his name. He was at the ſiege of Rochelle, and in 1578 entered into the ſervice of the States General in the Low Countries, where he took the count Egmont priſoner, but he was taken himſelf in 1580, and did not gain his liberty till five years after. In the time of the league he ſerved the king and was killed by a muſket ſhot at the ſiege of Lamballe in 1591. He wrote a diſcourſe political and military, printed in 1587, 4to. His ſon was alſo a brave officer and a writer. He died in 1618, leaving ſome religious poems printed at Geneva in 8vo.—Moreri.

Noue (Staniſlaus-Louis de la), count de Vair, was of the ſame family as the preceding, and born in 1729. He diſtinguiſhed himſelf as a gallant officer in the war of 1741, and in that of 1756. He was ſlain in the action of Saxenhauſen, in 1760. Louis XV. ſaid, on hearing of his death, that "he had loſt the Loudon of France." The count wrote New Military Conſtitutions, printed at Frankfort in 1760, 8vo. with plates.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

Noue (John-Sauve de la), a French actor and dramatic writer, was born at Meaux in 1701. The duke of Orleans gave him the direction of his theatre at St. Cloud, and Voltaire wrote ſome pieces purpoſely for him. He died in 1761. His tragedies and comedies were publiſhed at Paris in 1765, 12mo.—Ibid.

Novatian, a pagan philoſopher, who embraced Chriſtianity, and was admitted to orders. Being of an ambitious turn, he was perſuaded by Novatus to get himſelf ordained biſhop, which was done in an irregular manner by three of that order in Italy. He then endeavoured to get poſſeſſion of the ſee of Rome, after the death of pope Fabian, but was oppoſed by Cornelius. Novatian ſtated the doctrine, that it was ſinful to admit perſons who had once elapſed to idolatry, to communion; a practice then univerſal in the church. This produced a ſchiſm, in which Novatian had many partiſans, who called themſelves Catharites, or pure. By others, however, they were named Novatians. To the above error they added many others, particularly thoſe of the Montaniſts. There are ſeveral pieces of Novatian extant, publiſhed by Jackſon at London in 1728, 4to. —Ibid.

Novatus, a prieſt of Carthage, who, being cited to appear before his ſuperiors, for ſacrilege, and other crimes, in the 3d century, ſtarted an opinion, that it was proper to admit perſons who had fallen into idolatry again to Communion, without penitence. He afterwards joined Novatian, ſpoken of in the article above, againſt St Cyprian, and then he embraced an oppoſite error to his former one. This union cauſed a great ſchiſm in the church.—Dupin. Cave. Moſheim.

Nowell (Alexander), a learned divine, was born at Read in Lancaſhire. At the age of 13 he was entered of Braſenoſe college, Oxford, where he obtained a fellowſhip. He was ſucceſſively maſter of Weſtminſter ſchool, prebendary of Weſtminſter, and dean of St. Paul's. In the reign of Elizabeth he was choſen member of parliament, but the election was ſet aſide on account of his being in orders. He died in 1602. Dean Nowell is advantageouſly known by a catechiſm, which he drew up for public uſe in Latin, printed firſt in 1572, and again in 1578. It was tranſlated into Greek, and into Engliſh. His brother, Lawrence Nowell, was alſo a divine, of conſiderable abilities, and died dean of Lichfield in 1576. He left in MS. a Saxon Engliſh Dictionary, which is in the Bodleian library, Oxford.—Fuller's Worthies. Biog. Brit.

Noy (William), an eminent lawyer, was a native of Cornwall, and educated at Exeter college, Oxford, from whence he removed to Lincoln's inn. At the beginning of the reign of Charles I he ſat in parliament and oppoſed the court; but being made attorney-general in 1631, he aided the moſt unpopular meaſures, particularly that of ſhip-money, which was of his propoſing. He died in 1634. He wrote a Treatiſe of the Grounds and Maxims of the Laws of England, 4to.—Wood.

Nuck (Anthony), a Dutch phyſician, and profeſſor of anatomy at Leyden. His principal works are, Adenographia, Sedlographia, et operationes et experimenta Chirurgica, 3 vols. 1722.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Nugent (Robert, earl), an ingenious nobleman, was born of an ancient family in the county of Weſtmeath, in Ireland, in 1709. He was bred a Roman catholic, which religion he abjured, and became a member of the Britiſh parliament in 1741. He was alſo appointed comptroller of the houſehold to the prince of Wales, with whom he was a great favourite. In 1754 he was made a commiſſioner of the treaſury; and in the parliament which met that year he was choſen for Briſtol, and continued to ſit for that place till 1774, when he was choſen again for St. Mawe's. In 1766 he was appointed one of the commiſſioners of trade and plantations, and at the ſame time created a peer by the title of baron Nugent and viſcount Clare. He was afterwards advanced to the rank of earl, and died in 1788. His lordſhip publiſhed a Collection of Odes and Epiſtles in 1738, which poſſeſs great merit. He was alſo the author of an Ode to Mankind, in 1741; Verſes addreſſed to the Queen with a New Year's Gift of Iriſh Manufacture; Verſes to the Memory of Lady Townſhend, &c.—Europ. Mag.

Nugent (Thomas), an Iriſh writer and doctor of laws, who died at London in 1772. He publiſhed a Tour in Europe, 4 vols.; Tranſlations of the Port Royal Latin and Greek Grammars; a Pocket Dictionary of the French language; and a uſeful Vocabulary of the Greek Primitives, in one volume, 8vo. Mr. Burke married his daughter.—Mortimer.

Numa-Pompilius, ſucceſſor of Romulus, king of the Romans, B.C. 714. He was of a philoſophical turn, and introduced among his ſubjects religious feſtivals, and a code of laws. He died B.C. 672.—Livy.

Numenius, a Greek philoſopher of the ſecond century, was a native of Apamea, in Syria, and followed the opinions of Pythagoras and Plato; but he charged the latter philoſopher with having ſtolen, without acknowledgement, from the works of the Jewiſh legiſlator, and therefore called him, "Moſes ſpeaking Greek." There are fragments of Numenius extant.—Moreri.

Numerianus (Marcus Aurelius), ſon of the emperor Carus, by whom he was honoured with the title of Cæſar, and ſucceeded him with his brother Carinus in 284. He was murdered ſhortly after by his father-in-law Arrius Aper, who fell a ſacrifice to the irritated ſoldiers.—Ibid.

Nye (Philip), a non-conformiſt divine, was born in Suſſex about 1596, and educated at Oxford, where he took his degrees in arts, after which he entered into orders, and in 1620 became curate of St Michael's, Cornhill; but turning puritan he went to Holland, and did not return till the civil wars, when he was choſen a member of the aſſembly of divines. He was a zealous champion for the ſolemn league and covenant. He died in 1672. He wrote ſeveral ſermons and tracts. Butler thus whimſically alludes to this perſon in his Hudibras: 'Philip Nye's thankſgiving beard.'—Calamy.

Nye (Nathanael), an Engliſh mathematician in the reign of Charles II. and maſter-gunner of Worceſter. He wrote a Treatiſe called the Art of Gunnery, 1670.—Granger.

Nymannus (Gregory), profeſſor of anatomy and botany at Wirtemburg, died there in 1638, aged 43. He wrote a Treatiſe on Apoplexy, 4to.; a Diſſertation on the Life of the Fœtus, 12mo. This laſt is a curious work.—Moreri.

O.

OATES (Titus), a ſingular character, was born about 1619. He was originally of the baptiſt perſuaſion, but afterwards obtained orders in the church of England, and was appointed chaplain of a ſhip of war. Being diſmiſſed the ſervice for his immoral conduct, he became a lecturer in London; and, in conjunction with Dr. Tongue, invented a pretended plot, of which ſeveral perſons were accuſed, on the teſtimony of Oates, and executed. For this diſcovery Oates received a conſiderable penſion, but in the ſucceeding reign he was convicted of perjury, pilloried, and ſentenced to be impriſoned for life. He obtained his releaſe at the revolution, and died in 1705.—Collier's Hiſt. Dict.

OBADIAH, the fourth of the minor prophets is by ſome ſuppoſed to have been contemporary with Hoſea, but St. Jerome maintains him to be the ſame with Obadiah the ſervant of Ahab, and friend of Elijah.—Prideaux's Key O.T.

OBRECHT (Ulric), a learned German, was born in Straſburg in 1646. He became profeſſor of law at his native place; but in 1684 he turned roman catholic, on which Louis XIV. made him preſident of the ſenate of Straſburg. He died in 1701. His works are, 1. Prodromus rerum Alſaticarum, 4to.; 2. Excerpta hiſtorica de natura ſucceſſionis in monarchia Hiſpaniæ, 3. toms. 12mo.; 3 an edition of Quintilian, with notes, 2 vols. 4to.; 4. the Life of Pythagoras, from Iamblichus.—Moreri.

OBSEQUENS (Julius), a Latin writer, who flouriſhed about A.D. 395. He wrote a breviatiſe De Prodigiis, publiſhed by Aldus Manutius in 1508; but the beſt edition is that of Scheffer in 1679.—Moreri.

OCCAM or OCCHAM (William), an Engliſh ſcholaſtic divine of the 14th century. He was the diſciple of Duns Scotus, and obtained the name of the invincible doctor. Occam was a member of the order of cordeliers, the general of which, Michael de Cezena, appointed him to write againſt Pope John XXII. who excommunicated him. Occam afterwards made his ſubmiſſion, and was abſolved. He died in 1347. His works were publiſhed at Paris in 2 vols. folio, 1476.—Pits.

OCELLUS, a Greek philoſopher of the ſchool of Pythagoras, and called on account of his birth-place Lucanus. He wrote a piece on kings and kingdoms, of which only ſome fragments remain; but his work on the univerſe is extant. The beſt edition is that of Amſterdam, 1688, 8vo —Moreri.

OCHIN (Bernardin), an Italian monk, was born at Sienna in 1487. He entered when young into the religious order of St. Francis, but quitted it and turned phyſician. He afterwards took the religious habit among the capuchins, and became general of that order. His eloquence was ſo much admired, that Pope Paul III made him his confeſſor. Ochin, however, on meeting with the works of Luther, turned proteſtant, and went firſt to Geneva, and next to England, where he obtained a prebend in Canterbury cathedral, but on the acceſſion of Mary he retired to Straſburg, from whence he removed to Zurich, and became miniſter of the Italian church; but was baniſhed in 1563 for writing his dialogues in defence of polygamy. He then went to Moravia, where he joined the ſocinians, but died of the plague the year following. His ſermons in Italian, 5 vols. 8vo. are ſcarce. Some of them have been tranſlated into Engliſh. He wrote ſeveral controverſial books —Bayle.

OCKLEY (Simon), a learned divine, was born at Exeter in 1678, and educated at Queen's college, Cambridge, where he took the degree of B D. and in 1705 was preſented to the vicarage of Swaveſey, in Cambridgeſhire. In 1711 he was choſen profeſſor of Arabic, and died in poor circumſtances in 1720. He publiſhed, 1. Introductio ad Linguas Orientales, 1706; 2. The Hiſtory of the preſent Jews throughout the World, 12mo. 1707; 3. The Life of Hai Ebn Yokhdan, written by Abu Jaafar Ebn Tophail, 8vo. 1708; but his moſt conſiderable work is, The Hiſtory of the Saracens, 2 vols. 8vo —Great Hiſt. Dict.

OCTAVIA, daughter of Caius Octavius, and ſiſter to Auguſtus. She was firſt married to Claudius Marcellus, by whom ſhe had two children before his death, which happened a little after the war of Perſia, when ſhe was pregnant of a third child. She then married Anthony, to whom ſhe behaved with the greateſt reſpect; his conduct, however, was ſo baſe as greatly to inflame the people againſt him. But the loſs of her ſon Marcellus, an accompliſhed youth, gave her the deepeſt concern. She died B C. 11.—Tacitus.

OCTAVIA, daughter of Claudius and Meſſalina. She was betrothed to Lucius Silanus, but that marriage was broken off by the intrigues of Agrippina, and Octavia married Nero, who afterwards divorced her, and at the inſtigation of Poppæa ſent her to a ſmall iſland, where ſhe was put to death at the age of twenty years.—Ibid

ODAZZI (John), a celebrated painter and engraver, was born at Rome in 1663, and died in 1731. He was a member of the academy of St. Luke, and the pope conferred on him the order of knighthood.—D'Argenville.

Odell (Thomas), a dramatic writer, was born in Buckinghamſhire. He built a theatre in Goodman's-fields, which he afterwards ſold to Mr. Gifford. In 1738 he was appointed deputy-maſter of the revels. He died in 1749. Odell was the author of four dramatic pieces of little merit.—Biog. Dram.

Odenatus, king of Palmyra, who made war againſt Sapor, king of Perſia, with great ſucceſs. The emperor Gallienus aſſociated Odenatus with him in the empire, and conferred the title of Auguſta on his wife Zenobia. Odenatus was aſſaſſinated with his ſon Herodian, by Meonius, a relation on whom they had conferred many favours, A.D. 267. Zenobia then aſſumed the government under the title of queen of the Eaſt.—Moreri.

Odin, a northern hero, who lived about 70 years B C. in Denmark. He was monarch, prieſt, and a poet; and after his death was regarded by his countrymen as a god. The mythological work called the Edda, and a poem entitled, Hawtuaal, are attributed to him.—Mallet's Hiſt. of Denmark.

Odo (St.), abbot of Clugni, in France, was born at Tours in 879. His piety greatly contributed to increaſe the congregation of Clugni, and his talents were reſpectable. He wrote ſeveral religious pieces, and died about 943.—Moreri.

Odo of Kent, abbot of the benedictines in his native country in the 12th century, who wrote a legend on the Miracles of Thomas a Becket.—Ibid.

Odoran, a monk of Sens, who flouriſhed about 1045. He wrote a chronicle entitled, Chronica rerum in orbe geſtarum, which ends in 1032.—Ibid.

Oecolampadius (John), a German divine, was born in Franconia in 1482. In 1522 he became profeſſor of divinity, and principal preacher at Baſle. He joined with Zuinglius againſt Luther on the ſacrament, and wrote a ſmart book on the ſubject. In 1528 he married, on which Eraſmus thus writes, "Oecolampadius hath taken to himſelf a wife, a pretty girl He wants, I ſuppoſe, to mortify the fleſh. Some call Lutheraniſm a tragedy, I call it a comedy, where diſtreſs uſually ends in a wedding." He died in 1531. His works are numerous.—Melch. Adam.

Oecumenius, a Greek writer of the 10th century, whoſe works on the New Teſtament were printed at Paris, with thoſe of Aretas, in 2 vols. folio —Moreri.

Offa, king of Mercia, ſucceeded Ethelbald in 755. He murdered Ethelbert, king of the Eaſt Angles, and took poſſeſſion of his kingdom. To make atonement for his guilt he gave the tenth of his goods to the church, made a journey to Rome, inſtituted the tax called Peter-pence, and built the monaſtery at St. Alban's. He died in 794.—Rapin.

Ogden (Samuel), an Engliſh divine was born at Mancheſter in 1716, and educated at St. John's college, Cambridge, where he was choſen fellow in 1740. In 1744 he was appointed maſter of the free-ſchool at Halifax in Yorkſhire, but reſigned that ſituation in 1753, and returned to the univerſity, where he was choſen Woodwardian profeſſor, and took his degree of doctor in divinity. In 1766 he was preſented to the rectory of Lawford, in Eſſex, and to that of Stansfield, in Suffolk. Dr. Ogden died in 1778. His ſermons in 2 vols. 8vo. are very ingenious, and written in an animated ſtyle. They were, however, animadverted on by Mr. Mainwaring, and defended by biſhop Halifax.—Life prefixed to his Sermons.

Ogilby (John), a voluminous writer, was born near Edinburgh in 1600. He was originally a dancing-maſter, and employed in the family of the earl of Strafford, as teacher to his children. That nobleman appointed him deputy-maſter of the revels at Dublin, where Ogilby erected a theatre. On the breaking out of the Iriſh rebellion he returned to England, and ſettled at Cambridge, where he applied to the ſtudy of the learned languages. He was appointed in 1661 to conduct the ceremonies at the king's coronation, and of which he publiſhed a pompous account in folio with plates. Ogilby tranſlated Virgil and Homer into Engliſh verſe and publiſhed a magnificent Bible with prints, for which he was remunerated by the houſe of lords. He was appointed geographical printer to the king, and died in 1676. The other works of this induſtrious writer are, on Account of Japan, folio; an Atlas, folio; the Fables of Æſop in Verſe, 2 vols. 8vo.; and a Book of Roads, 8vo. This laſt went through numerous editions, but has been ſuperſeded by Patterſon's.—Biog. Brit.

Oglethorpe (James), an Engliſh general, was born in Weſtminſter about 1688. He was the ſon of ſir Theophilus Oglethorpe, of Godalmin in Surrey, and entered into the army as enſign in 1710. He afterwards ſerved under prince Eugene, to whom he became ſecretary and aid-de-camp. On the reſtoration of peace he was returned member of parliament, and diſtinguiſhed himſelf as a uſeful ſenator by propoſing ſeveral regulations for the benefit of trade, and a reform in the priſons. In 1732 he went to America, where he ſettled the colony of Georgia, and erected the town of Savannah. He again viſited that country, and made an unſucceſsful attempt upon Auguſtine in Florida, belonging to the Spaniards. For this he was tried, on his return to England, and acquitted. In 1745 he was promoted to the rank of major-general, and was ſent againſt the rebels, but did not overtake them, for which he was again brought to a court-martial, and honourably acquitted. He died in 1785, at the advanced age of 97, being the oldeſt general in the ſervice.—Europ. Mag. Vol. viii.

Oisel (James), profeſſor of law at Groningen, was born at Dantzic in 1631, and died in 1686. His works are, Corrections and Notes on various Authors; a Treatiſe, entitled, Theſaurus ſelectorum Numiſmatum antiquorum ære expreſſorum, 4to.; and a Catalogue of his Library, which was large and valuable.—Moreri.

Okolski (Simon), provincial of the order of jacobins in Poland in 1649. He wrote a curious hiſtory of his native country, under the title of Orbis Polonus, 3 vols. folio, printed at Cracow in 1641.—Moreri.

Olaf, king of Norway in the 10th century. He ſent miſſionaries into Greenland to convert the inhabitants of that country to chriſtianity.—Moreri.

Olahus (Nicholas), archbiſhop of Strigonia, in Hungary, and chancellor of that kingdom, was born at Hermenſtadt in 1463, and died in 1568. He was a liberal prelate, and publiſhed a Chronicle of his own Times; a Hiſtory of Attila; and a Deſcription of Hungary.—Moreri.

Olavides (the count de), was born in Spaniſh America, but had his education at Madrid, where he became ſecretary to the count de Aranda, whom he accompanied in his embaſſy to France. On his return to Spain Charles III. created him a count, and appointed him ſuperintendant of Seville. He undertook the great work of fertilizing the Sierra Morena, or the Black Mountain; a deſert region barren to the very ſummit. By his perſeverance, however, and the colonies of Germans which he brought thither, it aſſumed a new face. Notwithſtanding the benefits which this worthy man had thus rendered his country, he fell into diſgrace, and was ſent to priſon, from whence he effected his eſcape to Venice, where he died aged 65. There is attributed to him an excellent book entitled, El Evangelio en triumfo, the Triumph of the Goſpel, 4 vols. 4to.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

Oldcastle (ſir John), lord Cobham, was born in the reign of Edward III. In that of Henry IV. he commanded the Engliſh army in France, where he compelled the duke of Orleans to raiſe the ſiege of Paris. He was an adherent of Wickliffe's doctrines, which he propagated with ſuch zeal, that in the reign of Henry V. he was ſent to the Tower, from whence he made his eſcape, but was taken in Wales. Being conveyed to London he was condemned to be hanged and burnt, which ſentence was executed with circumſtances of peculiar barbarity in St. Giles's, in 1417. He wrote Twelve Concluſions, addreſſed to the parliament of England.—Great Hiſt. Dict. Fox's Acts and Mon.

Oldenburg (Henry), a native of Germany, who was appointed conſul for the town of Bremen, at London, during Cromwell's uſurpation. He afterwards became tutor to ſome Engliſh gentlemen, and reſided at Oxford, where he was admitted a member of the philoſophical ſociety, of which he was appointed ſecretary and publiſhed thirty-ſix numbers of their Tranſactions. He died in 1678.—Great Hiſt. Dict.

Oldenburger (Philip Andrew), profeſſor of hiſtory and law at Geneva, where he died in 1678. His principal work is entitled, Theſaurus Rerum Publicarum totius Orbis, 4 vols. 8vo.—Moreri.

Olderman (John), a learned German writer, was born in 1686. He became Greek profeſſor at Helmſtadt, where he died in 1723. He wrote ſeveral ingenious Diſſertations, as, De Imperfectionis Sermonis humani; De Phraarte fluvio, &c.—Ibid.

Oldfield (Ann), a celebrated dramatic performer, was born in London, in 1683. Sir John Vanburgh recommended her to Mr. Rich, patentee of the king's theatre, by whom ſhe was engaged. Her abilities were of the firſt order, and her perſon extremely pleaſing. She was at firſt the miſtreſs of Mr. Arthur Maynwaring, and after his death of general Churchill. She had a ſon by each of thoſe gentlemen, and died in 1730. Her remains were interred in Weſtminſter abbey.—Biog. Brit.

Oldham (John), an Engliſh poet, was born at Shipton in Glouceſterſhire, in 1653. He received his academical education at Edmund hall, Oxford, where he proceeded B.A. and afterwards became uſher to the free-ſchool at Croydon. Some of his poems being read by the earls of Rocheſter and Dorſet, they releaſed him from that ſituation, and he was appointed tutor to the grandſons of ſir Edmund Thurland, and afterwards to a ſon of ſir William Hicks. He next reſided with the earl of Kingſton, and died of the ſmall-pox in 1683. His works have been printed in 3 vols. 12mo.—Cibber's Lives of the Poets.

Oldisworth (William), an Engliſh writer, who was one of the authors of a periodical paper called the Examiner. He alſo publiſhed a volume, called State Tracts, and another entitled State Miſcellany Poems, 8vo. &c. He died in 1734.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Oldmixon (John), a political writer and hiſtorian, was born near Bridgewater in Somerſetſhire. He was a violent opponent of the Stuart family, in the reign of queen Anne, and attacked the beſt writers of that period with ſo much violence, that Pope gave him a conſpicuous place in the Dunciad. He became collector of the cuſtoms at Bridgewater, where he died in 1742. He wrote, 1. A Hiſtory of the Stuarts, folio; 2. A Volume of Poems, 8vo.; 3. The Life of Queen Anne, and other works.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Oldys (William), an hiſtorical and biographical writer, was the natural ſon of Dr. Oldys chancellor of Lincoln, and advocate of the court of admiralty. Of the early life and education of the ſon little is known, but he is ſaid to have ſquandered in extravagance the patrimony which had been left him. He afterwards became keeper of lord Oxford's library, of which he formed the catalogue when that collection was ſold by Oſborne the bookſeller. He was alſo employed to ſuperintend the publication of the Harleian miſcellany. The only public poſt he ever had was that of norroy king at arms. His manners were low, and he died of irregular living in 1761, aged 74. His principal works are; The Life of Sir Walter Releigh; ſome articles in the General Hiſtorical Dictionary; thoſe in the Biographia Britannica ſigned G; The Britiſh Librarian, 8vo; Introduction to Hayward's Britiſh Muſe, 3 vols. 12mo.; Life of Richard Carew the Antiquary.—Europ. Mag.

Olearius (Adam), miniſter to the duke of Holſtein, who appointed him ſecretary to the embaſſy which he ſent to Muſcovy and Perſia. Olearius was ſix years in this employment, and on his return wrote an account of his travels, publiſhed in 1656, folio. He alſo wrote an Abridgment of the Chronicles of Holſtein from 1448 to 1663. He died in 1671, aged 68.—Moreri.

Olearius (Godfrey), a German divine, was born at Hall in Saxony, in 1639, and died profeſſor of divinity at Leipſic in 1713. He was one of the principal writers of the Acta Eruditorum; the author of an Introduction to Divinity; and of another work on theology. His ſon Godfrey was born at Leipſic in 1672. He ſtudied under his father, after which he went to Holland and England, and on his return to his native place became profeſſor of the Greek and Latin languages. In 1708 he ſucceeded to the divinity chair. He died in 1715. He publiſhed a Diſſertation on the Worſhip of God the Father by Jeſus Chriſt; a good edition of Philoſtratus, Greek and Latin, folio; a tranſlation of Stanley's Hiſtory of Philoſophy, 4to.; a Hiſtory of Rome and Germany, 8vo.—Moreri.

O'Leary (Arthur), a Roman catholic divine, was a native of Cork, and received, his education at St Omer's, after which he entered into the order of St. Francis. He was for ſome time chaplain in a French regiment, but having refuſed to engage his countrymen in that ſervice in the time of war he was diſmiſſed. He then returned to Cork, where he officiated to a congregation ſome years; and in the American war he was ſo ſerviceable in encouraging the Iriſh catholics to loyalty as to be rewarded with a penſion. He afterwards ſettled in London, where he was greatly admired as a preacher. He died in 1801. Mr. O'Leary publiſhed political tracts in 1 vol. 8vo., 1783; and ſome Sermons.—Public Characters, vol. I.

Oleaster (Jerom), a Portugueſe dominican who aſſiſted at the council of Trent as chaplain to John III. king of Portugal. He refuſed a biſhopric on his return, but accepted the office of grand inquiſitor. He died in 1563. His works are: Commentaries on the Pentateuch, 1 vol. folio; a Commentary on Iſaiah, folio, Paris, 1628.—Moreri.

Olen, a Greek poet, who lived before Orpheus. He compoſed hymns which were ſung upon ſolemn feſtivals, but none of them are extant.—Voſſius de Poet. Græc.

Olesniki (Sbigneus), a poliſh prelate and ſtateſman, was born of a noble family, and became ſecretary to king Ladiſlaus Jagellon. He afterwards embraced the eccleſiaſtical ſtate, and obtained the biſhopric of Cracovia, and a cardinalſhip. He was alſo employed on ſeveral embaſſies. He died in 1455, aged 66.—Moreri.

Olimpo (Balthaſar), an Italian poet of the 16th century, who wrote Pegaſea in ſianſe Amoroſe, Venice, 1525, 8vo; La Gloria d' Amore, 1530, 8vo. All his works were printed in 2 vols. 8vo., 1559.—Tiraboſchi.

Oliva (Alexander), a cardinal and general of the order of St. Auguſtin, was born at Saſſoferrato in Italy in 1408. On account of his talents and virtues pope Pius II. made him a cardinal, and employed him in ſeveral important negociations. He died at Tivoli in 1463. His works are: De Chriſti ortu Sermones centum; de Cœna cum apoſtolis facta; De peccato in Spiritum ſanctum.—Moreri.

Oliva (John), a learned writer, was born at Rovigo in the ſtate of Venice in 1689. He embraced the eccleſiaſtical ſtate, and in 1722 became librarian to cardinal Rohan, by whoſe intereſt he was appointed ſecretary to the conclave. He died at Paris in 1757. He wrote diſſertations on antiquarian ſubjects; and publiſhed an edition of the works of Poggio, and another of Silveſtri's work on an ancient monument of Caſtor and Pollux, with the life of that author.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

Olivares (Gaſpar de Guzman count de), an eminent Spaniſh ſtateſman who was in great favour with Philip IV. He became prime miniſter in the room of the duke de Uzeda, and began his political career by ſeveral uſeful regulations; but his haughty conduct occaſioned a revolt in Catalonia, and the ſeparation of Portugal from Spain. Olivares was diſgraced, and died of chagrin at Toro in 1643.—Moreri

Oliver (Iſaac), an Engliſh painter in the reign of queen Elizabeth. He painted hiſtorical pieces, but chiefly miniatures in a ſtyle of exquiſite beauty. His pictures are marked with Φ. He died in 1617.—Vertue. Walpole.

Oliver (Peter), the eldeſt ſon of the preceding. He was alſo an excellent painter of portraits in miniature, and died in 1661, aged 59.—Ibid.

Oliver (Claude Matthew), advocate of the parliament of Aix, was born at Marſeilles in 1701. He was one of the inſtitutors of the academy of Marſeilles, and diſtinguiſhed himſelf by his eloquence. He died in 1736. His works are; 1. Hiſtory

Philip of Macedon, father of Alexander e Great, 2 vols. 12mo.; 2, Memoir on the ccour given to the Romans by the People Marſeilles in the 2d Punic War, and in at of the Gauls.—Moreri.

OLIVER of Malmſbury, a benedictine onk, who was well ſkilled in mechanics, t in attempting to fly from a tower with ngs of his own contrivance, he fell and ke his legs. He died 1060.—Gen. Hiſt.

OLIVER (William), an eminent phyſician, o reſided many years at Bath, and wrote reatiſe on the virtues of the Bath waters. profeſſed himſelf an unbeliever till a rt time before his death, when he became ſincere penitent. He alſo wrote on tar ter, and died in 1764.—Gent. Mag.

OLIVET (Joſeph Thoulier de), a learned ic, was born at Salins in 1682. He ſtud under his uncle who was a jeſuit, and uired a great knowledge of the learned lan ages. In 1740 Oliver publiſhed an ex lent edition of the works of Cicero in ols. 4to., with notes. He died in 1768. ſides the above he publiſhed a tranſlation Cicero's Treatiſe on the Nature of the ds into French: a tranſlation of ſome of orations of Demoſthenes and Cicero; a ſtory of the French Academy, of which he a member; and ſome other works.—v. Dict. Hiſt.

OLIVETAN (Robert), a printer of Neuf tel, was a near relation of Calvin. He ted in 1535 a tranſlation of the Bible in nch, which was the firſt done from the brew and Greek. It is called the Bible the Sword, on account of that emblem be adopted by the printer. It is now very ce.—Moreri.

OLIVEYRA (Chevalier Francis de), an in ious Portugueſe, who was employed by court in ſeveral embaſſies, but on turn proteſtant he retired to England, where died in 1783, aged 83. He wrote a con tory pamphlet to his countrymen on the ſion of the earthquake at Liſbon, and e other pieces.—Gen Biog. Dict.

OLYBRIUS (Flavius Anicius), emperor of Eaſt after Anthemius, and ſon-in-law of emperor Leo. He was ſlain ſoon after acceſſion by the Goths, who placed Gly us on the throne, A.D. 472.—Univ. Hiſt.

OLYMPIODORUS, a peripatetic philoſo r of Ægypt, who lived in the time of odoſius II. and wrote a hiſtory of Hono in Greek; alſo Commentaries on the teors of Ariſtotle, and the Life of Plato. Diogenes Laertius.

OLZOFFSKI (Andrew), archbiſhop of ine in Poland, and chancellor of the n, was born in 1618. He was a man of ning, and an accompliſhed ſtateſman. He ſed the dignity of cardinal, and died in 8.—Moreri.

OMAR I ſecond caliph of the muſſulmans r Mahomet. He defeated Ali, whom impoſtor had appointed to be his ſucceſſor. After this Omar made rapid conqueſts in the eaſt, and committed the greateſt violences to eſtabliſh the mohammedan faith. This barbarian, after taking Alexandria, burnt the famous library which had been founded there by Ptolomy Philadelphus. In 638 he took Jeruſalem, after a ſiege of two years, but was aſſaſſinated in that city in 644, by a Perſian ſlave.—D'Herbelot. Univ. Hiſt.

OMAR II the 13th caliph of the race of the Ommiades, ſucceeded his couſin Solyman, in 717. He laid ſiege to Conſtantinople, but was forced to raiſe it on account of a violent ſtorm which deſtroyed a great part of his fleet. He was poiſoned at Emeſa in Syria, in 720.—Ibid.

OMEIS (Magnus Daniel), profeſſor of belles-lettres at Altorf, where he died in 1708, aged 63. He wrote Ethica Pythagorica; Ethica Platonica; Theatrum virtutum et vitiorum ab Ariſtotele omiſſorum; Juvenci hiſtoria Evangelica cum notis.—Moreri.

ONESICRITUS, a cynic philoſopher, who attended Alexander the Great in his Indian expedition. He had ſeveral conferences with the Brahmins, particularly Calanus, who was ſo pleaſed with him as to accompany him to Perſia. Oneſicritus wrote a Hiſtory of Alexander.—Diog. Laertius.

ONESIMUS, a Phrygian, was the ſlave of Philemon, the friend of St. Paul. Having fled from his maſter, he met with the apoſtle at Rome, by whom he was converted to chriſtianity, and ſent back to Philemon with an affectionate epiſtle. He is ſaid to have been made biſhop of Berea in Macedonia, where he ſuffered martyrdom.—Baronius. Dupin. Cave.

ONKELOS, ſurnamed the Proſelyte, a Jewiſh rabbi in the time of our Saviour. He was the author of the Chaldee Targum on the Pentateuch, which is highly eſteemed by the Jews.—Buxtorf.

ONOMACRITUS, a Greek poet, to whom has been attributed the poems which go under the names of Orpheus and Muſæus. He flouriſhed B.C. 516.—Voſſius de Poet Græc.

ONUPHRIUS (Panvinius), an Auguſtin monk of Verona, was born in 1529. He continued the Lives of the Popes, which were begun by Platina. He died in 1568. Onuphrius was the author of ſeveral other works.—Moreri.

OORT (Adam van), a painter of perſpective and architecture, was born at Antwerp in 1557. He was the maſter of Rubens and Jordaens, and died in 1641.—Houbraken.

OOST (James van), an hiſtorical painter, was born at Bruges in 1600. He ſtudied the manner of Annibal Caracci with ſucceſs. His principal painting is a deſcent from the croſs at Bruges. He died in 1671. His ſon James was alſo a good artiſt, and died in 1713, aged 76.—Pilkington.

OPITIUS (Henry), a Lutheran divine, was born at Altenburg in Miſnia in 1642. He became profeſſor of theology and of the oriental languages at Kiel, where he died in 1712. He publiſhed an edition of the Hebrew Bible, 2 vols. 4to. and ſome works on Hebrew antiquities.—Moreri.

Opitius (Martin), a poet, was a native of Breſlaw. He diſtinguiſhed himſelf by his poems in Latin and German. They were printed at Amſterdam in 1638. The author died in 1639.—Moreri.

Oporinus (John), a German printer, was born at Baſil in 1507. He was a man of conſiderable learning, and died in 1568. He wrote Notes on Cicero and Demoſthenes; and publiſhed an edition of the Bucolic poets.—Ibid.

Oppian, a Greek poet and grammarian in the ſecond century. He was a native of Cilicia, and wrote a poem on fiſhing, entitled, Halieutics, which is extant; alſo ſome works on painting. He died at the age of 30. The beſt edition of Oppian is that of Ritterſhuſius, Leyden, 1597, 8vo.—Voſſius de Poet. Græc.

Opsopæus (John), a German critic and phyſician. He was profeſſor of Phyſic at Heidelberg, and publiſhed ſome pieces of Hippocrates, and an edition of the Sibylline oracles. He died in 1596, aged 40. His brother, Simon Opſopæus, was alſo a learned phyſician, and died in 1619, aged 44. There was alſo one Vincent Opſopæus, a German, of the ſame age, who wrote a Latin poem on the art of drinking, 1578, 8vo.—Moreri.

Optatus, an African biſhop in the 4th century, who wrote a piece on the ſchiſm of the donatiſts in a fine ſtyle. It was publiſhed by Dupin with notes in 1700. He died in 384.—Dupin.

Orellana (Francis), a Spaniard, who deſerted from Pizarro, and diſcovered the river of the Amazons. On his arrival in Spain he gave a marvellous account of the countries he had paſſed through, and aſſerted that he had ſeen a nation of women, whence the name of Amazons was given to that river. He periſhed at the mouth of the ſame river about 1550.—Herrera's Hiſt. of Mexico and Peru.

Orgagna (Andrew,), an Italian painter, was born at Florence in 1329. He was alſo a ſculptor and architect. In a picture of the Laſt Day he repreſented his friends in paradiſe, and his enemies in hell. He died in 1389.—De Piles.

Oribasius of Pergamus, phyſician to Julian the Apoſtate. He wrote Medical Collections, compoſed from the works of Galen, and two others on anatomy. His works were publiſhed at Leyden in 1745, 4to.—Friend's Hiſt. Phyſic.

Origen, a father of the church, was born at Alexandria A.D. 185, of chriſtian parents. He devoted much of his time to the ſtudy of the ſcriptures, and by his exhortations his father was encouraged to endure martyrdom. Origen taught grammar for his own ſupport, and that of his mother and brethren. Demetrius biſhop of Alexandria relieved him from this employment by appointing him catechiſt of his church. His auſterities were very great, and taking the ſcripture in the moſt rigid ſenſe, he caſtrated himſelf, to become qualified for the kingdom of heaven. From Alexandria he went to Rome, where he began his famous Hexapla, or the Bible in different languages. At the command of his biſhop he returned to Alexandria, and was ordained. Soon after this he began his Commentaries on the Scriptures; but Demetrius, who envied his reputation, perſecuted him with violence, and in a council, aſſembled in 231, it was decreed that Origen ſhould deſiſt from preaching, and quit the city. On this he went to Cæſarea, where he was well received by the biſhop, and permitted to preach, which gave additional offence to his perſecutors, who excommunicated him. Though he was thus treated at home, he met with the greateſt reſpect wherever he went. He was conſulted in ſeveral epiſcopal ſynods; but in the perſecution under Decius he was thrown into priſon, and put to the torture. On his releaſe he applied himſelf to his miniſterial labours, and to writing. He died in 254. In the works of Origen, which make 4 vols. folio, there are many conjectural opinions, particularly with reſpect to the Trinity, and the puniſhment of devils and ſinful men.—Cave. Dupin.

Origen, a platonic philoſopher, who was the diſciple and friend of Porphyry. He made a panegyric on the emperor Gallienus. There was an Egyptian of this name, who ſaid that marriage was the invention of the Devil.—Moreri.

Origny (Peter Adam de), a French ſoldier and writer, who publiſhed a Hiſtory of Ancient Egypt; and a Syſtem of Egyptian Chronology. He died at Rheims in 1774.

Orkan, ſon of Othoman, emperor of the Turks, ſeized the throne in 1326, after defeating his elder brothers. He extended the bounds of his empire by taking Gallipoly and ſeveral cities from the Greeks. His reign was long and cruel. He married the daughter of John Cantacuzenus, and died in 1360.—Univ. Hiſt.

Orlandi (Pellegrini-Antony), an Italian bookſeller, who died in 1730. He wrote on the Origin and Progreſs of Printing from 1457 to 1500, in Italian; a Hiſtory of Writers of Bologna, 4to.; Abecedario Pittorico, 4to.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

Orlay (Bernard van), a Flemiſh painter was born at Bruſſels, about 1490. He was the diſciple of Raphael, and became principal painter to the governor of the Netherlands. He died in 1560.—Pilkington.

Orleans (Charles, duke of), the ſon of Louis of France, bore the title of duke of Angouleme during the life of his father. He was made priſoner at the battle of Agincourt in 1415. He remained in England twenty-five years, and on his return to France he undertook the conqueſt of the duchy of

Milan, to whom he conceived himself entitled in right of his mother. He was not, however, ſucceſsful in this enterpriſe, and died in 1465. He was an encourager of letters, and wrote ſome poems, which have been printed.—Moreri.

Orleans (Louis, duke of), a prince of the blood royal of France, was the ſon of Philip regent of the kingdom, and born at Verſailles in 1708. In his youth he led rather a diſſipated life, but after the death of his father and ſpouſe, he renounced his former courſe, and devoted himſelf to works of piety, and the ſtudy of religion and ſcience. In 1730 he retired to the abbey of St. Genevieve, where he practiſed extreme auſterity, and performed numerous acts of humility and charity. He died in 1752. He underſtood the Hebrew, Greek, and Latin languages; and was verſed in eccleſiaſtical and civil hiſtory, botany, geography, philoſophy, and the fine arts. He tranſlated the Pſalms from the original Scriptures, and wrote Paraphraſes on ſeveral books of the Old Teſtament; Diſſertations againſt the Jews; a literal tranſlation of St. Paul's Epiſtles, and ſeveral other works. His ſon, Louis Philip, duke of Orleans, died in 1785, aged 60. He was alſo a benevolent prince.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

Orleans (Philip Louis Joſeph, duke of), was born at St. Cloud in 1747. He had the title of duke of Chartres in his youth. In 1778 he ſerved on board the fleet commanded by count d'Orvilliers, but in the action with admiral Keppel, he went down into the hold, and would not come up till the engagement was over. His conduct afterwards was extremely diſſipated, and he joined the parties of malecontents againſt the court, for which he was exiled. On the death of his father he took the title of duke of Orleans. In the beginning of the revolution he diſplayed the greateſt hatred to his royal relations, and became a member of the national aſſembly. He alſo aſſumed the title of citizen Egalité. This ſanguinary monſter voted for the death of Louis XVI.; but ſome time afterwards he was abandoned by his partiſans, ſeized at Marſeilles, from whence he was removed to Paris, where he was condemned to ſuffer death by the revolutionary tribunal, which ſentence was executed Nov. 6, 1793.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

Orleans (Louis), an advocate in the parliament of Paris, who ſignalized himſelf by his fanaticiſm in the wars of the league. He wrote againſt Henry IV. with great violence; but was pardoned by that monarch. He died in 1627, aged 87. He wrote an addreſs to the Catholics of England; Commentaries on Tacitus and Seneca, and other works.—Moreri.

Orleans (Peter Joſeph), a jeſuit, was born at Bourges in 1641. He was profeſſor of the belles lettres in his ſociety, and died at Paris in 1698. He wrote a Hiſtory of the revolutions of England, 3 vols. 4to. and 4 vols. 12mo. a work of ſome merit; Hiſtory of the Revolutions of Portugal, 5 vols. 12mo.; Hiſtory of the two Tartar Conquerors, Chunchi and Canhi, 8vo; the Life of Father Cotton, 12mo.; Lives of Lewis de Gonzaga, and other Jeſuits; 2 vols. of Sermons, &c.—Moreri.

Orme (Robert), an hiſtorical writer, was the ſon of a ſurgeon on the Bombay eſtabliſhment, and born in that country in 1728. He received his education at Harrow ſchool, after which he went to India as a writer in the company's ſervice. He returned in 1752 in the company of captain, afterwards lord, Clive, with whom he lived many years on terms of intimacy. In 1755 he went to Madras as fourth member of the council. He alſo held the office of commiſſary-general, but in 1759 he returned to England with a very ſmall fortune. Soon after his return he began to write the Hiſtory of the Military Tranſactions of the Britiſh Nation in India, the firſt volume of which appeared in 1763, but the ſecond not till 1775. The court of directors appointed him hiſtoriographer to the company at a ſalary of 300l. per annum. He completed his Hiſtory in 3 vols.; and he alſo publiſhed Hiſtorical Fragments of the Mogul Empire, during the reign of Aurengzebe. He died in 1801.—Aſiatic Annual Regiſter.

Orobio (Balthaſar), a famous Spaniſh jew, was born at Seville, and ſecretly bred up in the jewiſh religion, though he outwardly profeſſed himſelf a roman catholic, and became profeſſor of metaphyſics at Salamanca. He applied to the ſtudy of medicine, but being ſuſpected of judaiſm, he was ſeized by the inquiſition, and kept in priſon three years, during which he ſuffered dreadful tortures. On regaining his liberty he went to France, and from thence to Amſterdam, where he practiſed phyſic, and was circumciſed, on which occaſion he changed his name to Iſaac. He died in 1687. Orobio wrote a book againſt Spinoza, entitled Certamen philoſophicum. Limborch had a conference with him on the ſubject of the chriſtian religion, of which he publiſhed a celebrated book with this title, Amica Collatio cum erudito Judæo, 4to.—Baſnage's Hiſt. of the Jews.

Oroſius (Paul), a Spaniſh divine in the 5th century, was the diſciple of St. Auguſtin, who ſent him to Jeruſalem to conſult Jerome concerning the origin of the ſoul. By the advice of the ſame father, he undertook a Hiſtory of the World to A.D. 316. He alſo wrote a Treatiſe on Free Will, and other works.—Moreri. Dupin.

Orpheus, of Thrace, a Greek poet, who flouriſhed before Homer. He was the diſciple of Linius, and the maſter of Muſæus. His works are loſt, except a few fragments, and their authenticity is doubted.—Voſſius.

Orsato (Sertorio), an Italian writer, was born at Padua in 1617. He wrote ſeveral volumes of lyric poetry in Italian; the Hiſtory of Padua, and ſome works on antiquarian ſubjects. He died in 1678.—Tiraboſchi.

Orsato (John Baptiſt), a learned phyſician and antiquary, was born at Padua in 1673, and died in 1720. He wrote, Diſſertatio epiſtolaris de Lucernis antiquis; De Sternis veterum; Diſſertatio de Patera antiquorum.—Tiraboſchi.

Orsi (John Joſeph), an Italian writer, was born at Bologna, in 1652, of a noble family. He ſtudied mathematics and natural philoſophy and had a good taſte for poetry. He died in 1733. His works are, Sonatas, Paſtorals, and other poems; a Defence of ſome Italian Authors; Letters; Life of Louis de Sales. He is not to be confounded with Francis Joſeph Orsi, a dominican and cardinal, who wrote an Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory in 20 vols. 4to.; and a Treatiſe entitled, Infallibilitas Act. Romani Pontificis, 3 vols. 4to. He was a native of Tuſcany, and died in 1761.—Ibid.

Ortelius (Abraham), a celebrated geographer, was born at Antwerp in 1527. He became ſo eminent for his mathematical and geographical knowledge as to be called the Ptolemy of his age. He was appointed geographer to the king of Spain, and died at Antwerp in 1598. His works are, Theatrum Orbis Terrarum, folio; Synonyma Geographia; Aurei Seculi Imago; Itinerarum per nonnullas Galliæ Belgicæ partes; Syntagma herbarum encomiaſticum.—Moreri.

Orton (Job), an eminent non-conformiſt divine, was a native of Shrewſbury, where he received part of his education, which was completed under Dr. Doddridge at Northampton. On entering into the miniſtry he became paſtor of a congregation at Kidderminſter, and afterwards at his native place: ſome years before his death he retired from miniſterial duty, and died in 1783, aged 66. Mr. Orton wrote, 1. the Life of Dr. Doddridge, which is an excellent piece of biography; 2. Sermons to the Aged, 12mo.; 3. Sacramental Meditations, 12mo. 4. Diſcourſes on Chriſtian Worſhip, 12mo; 5. Diſcourſes on Practical Subjects, 8vo. After his death was printed his Practical Expoſition of the Old Teſtament, 6 vols. 8vo.; and Mr. Stedman, a clergyman at Shrewſbury, publiſhed a volume of excellent Letters, which ſhew Mr. Orton's piety and liberality of ſentiment to great advantage.—Biog. Brit. Orton's Letters.

Orville (James Philip de), a learned critic, was born at Amſterdam in 1696. He became profeſſor of hiſtory, eloquence, and Greek, at his native place, but reſigned that office in 1742, and died in 1751. He wrote, 1. Obſervationes miſcellaneæ novæ, in conjunction with Burman; 2. Critica Vannus in inanes Joannis Cornelii Pavonis paleas, &c.; 3. Obſervations on Sicily.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

Osborne (Francis), an Engliſh gentleman, was born in Bedfordſhire about 1588. He became maſter of the horſe to the earl o Pembroke, and in the civil wars he joine the parliament. Mr. Oſborne wrote, Advic to a Son, and Letters and Poems, 2 vols which were once popular. He died in 1658 —Great Hiſt. Dict.

Osiander (Andrew), a German divine was born in Bavaria in 1498. He ſtudie at Wittemberg and Nuremberg, and was on of the firſt diſciples of Luther. He becam miniſter and profeſſor at Konigſberg, wher he diſtinguiſhed himſelf by a peculiar doc trine on juſtification, which he aſſerted to b effected in us by the union of God with ou ſouls. This notion he zealouſly defended and oppoſed Luther with great fury. H died in 1552. He wrote, Harmonia Evan gelica, folio; Epiſtola ad Zuinglium de Eu chariſtia; Diſſertationes duæ, de Lege e Evangelio et Juſtificatione; Liber de Imagin Dei, quid ſit. His ſon, Luke Oſiander, be came a Lutheran miniſter, and died at Tu bingen in 1604. He wrote, an Inſtitutio of the Chriſtian Religion; an Abridgemer of the Centuriators of Magdeburg, and othe works. There was another Luke Oſiande who was chancellor of Tubingen, and die in 1638. He wrote on the Omnipreſence Chriſt as Man, &c.—Melch. Adam. Vi Germ. Theol.

Osius, biſhop of Cordova in Spain, w born in 257. He became the confident Conſtantine who, by his perſuaſions, co vened, in 323, the council of Nice, whe Oſius preſided. The emperor Conſtanti perſecuted him with ſo much cruelty to mak him turn Arian, that Oſius, at the age 100, was induced to ſign a confeſſion of fait preſcribed to him. He was then permitte to return to his dioceſe, where he died ſoo after extremely penitent for his weakne and renouncing the arian hereſy with gre fervour.—Dupin.

Osius, or Osio (Felix), a learned Italia was born at Milan in 1587. He becan profeſſor of rhetoric at Padua, where he di in 1631. His principal works are, 1. R mano-Græcia; 2. Tractatus de Sepulchris Epitaphiis Ethnicorum et Chriſtianorum 3. Elogia Scriptorum illuſtrium; 4. Or tiones; 5. Epiſtolarum duo; 6. Remarks the Hiſtory of Muſſati; 7. Collection Writers on the Hiſtory of Padua.—Tiraboſc

Osman I. emperor of the Turks, was t ſon of Achmet I. and ſucceeded his unc Muſtapha in 1618. He declared war agai Poland in 1621; but after ſeveral defeats was obliged to conclude a diſadvantageo peace. Attributing his bad ſucceſs to t janiſſaries, he reſolved to ſubſtitute a mili of Arabs in their room, which ſo provok them that they depoſed him and placed Mu tapha on the throne, who cauſed Oſman be ſtrangled in 1622.—Univ. Hiſt.

Osman II. ſucceeded his brother Mah met in 1754, and died in 1757.

Osmond (St.), was born in Normandy a noble family. In 1066 he followed W am the Conqueror to England, and was ade chancellor of the kingdom, and biſhop Saliſbury. He reformed the liturgy for is dioceſe, which form became general roughout the kingdom, under the name of e liturgy of Saliſbury. He died in 1099, d was canonized by Calixtus III.—upin.

Osorio (Jerome), a Portugueſe biſhop as born at Liſbon in 1506. He was proſſor of divinity at Coimbra, and afterwards ſhop of Sylves. He died in 1580. His orks were publiſhed at Rome in 1592, in vols. folio. On account of the elegance his Latin ſtyle he was called the Cicero Portugal. His nephew, Jerome Oſorio, rote his Life. He was canon of Evora.—loreri.

Ossat (Arnaud d'), a cardinal, was born the county of Armagnac, of poor parents, 1536. By the kindneſs of a gentleman received a good education, and was apinted tutor to ſome young noblemen. He terwards practiſed the law; but forſook is profeſſion, and became ſecretary firſt to rdinal d'Eſte, and next to cardinal de Joyſe. He obtained the papal abſolution for enry IV. for which he was made biſhop of ennes in 1596; and the year following unſellor of ſtate. In 1598 he was made carnal. He died in 1604. His Letters have en printed in 2 vols. 4to. and 5 vols. 12mo. Moreri.

Ossian, an ancient Scotch bard, was the n of Fingal, whom he accompanied in ſeral military expeditions. He lived to an vanced age, and at the cloſe of life became ind. Mr. Macpherſon publiſhed a tranſlan of poems, in a ſort of poetical proſe, hich he aſcribed to Oſſian; but their auenticity has been diſputed by ſeveral critics, d as zealouſly defended by others.—Gen. og. Dict.

Ostade (Adrian van), a painter, was rn at Lubec, in 1610. His ſubjects are ople ſmoking and drinking in alehouſes d kitchens, which he repreſented in a afterly manner. He died at Amſterdam 1685.—Houbraken. Pilkington.

Ostervald (John Frederic), a proteſt. t divine, was born at Neufchatel in 1663, d died in 1747. His works are 1. A Caechiſm of the Chriſtian Religion, 8vo., Arguments and Reflections on all the oks of the Bible, 2 vols. 8vo.; 3. Treae againſt Uncleanneſs, 8vo.; theſe have en tranſlated into Engliſh; 4. Treatiſe on Sources of Corruption, 12mo.; 5. A Colction of Sermons, 8vo. His ſon, John Roſph Oſtervald, was paſtor of the French urch at Baſil, where he was greatly eſteem. He wrote a Diſcourſe on the Duties of mmunicants, 12mo.—Moreri.

Osterwyck (Maria van), an ingenious nale artiſt, was born near Delft in 1630, d died in 1693. Her favourite ſubjects re flowers and ſtill life, which ſhe painted a delicate manner, and with great freedom. Pilkington.

Oswald, king of Northumberland, was obliged, after the death of Ethelfrid his father, to take refuge in Ireland; his uncle, Edwin, having taking poſſeſſion of the throne. He became a chriſtian in his retreat; and returning to his own country, defeated Cerdowalla, king of the Britons, who loſt his life. Oſwald re-united the two kingdoms of Northumberland; but was ſlain in a battle with Penda, king of Mercia, A.D. 643. The Monkiſh hiſtorians relate many miracles performed by his relicks, for which he was canonized.—Moreri. Rapin.

Oswald (Eraſmus), profeſſor of Hebrew and mathematics at Friburg. He publiſhed a tranſlation of the New teſtament into Hebrew, and other works. He died in 1579. —Moreri.

Osymandyas, an Egyptian king, and the firſt monarch who formed a library. He cauſed a coloſſal ſtatue of himſelf to be erected, on which was this inſcription: "I am Oſymandyas, king of kings, whoever will diſpute this title with me, let him ſurpaſs my works."—Ibid.

Otho (Marcus Salvius), Roman emperor, was born at Rome, A.D. 32, of a family which deſcended from the antient kings of Tuſcany. Nero, whoſe companion he was in his debaucheries, elevated him to the higheſt offices in the empire. After Nero's death he attached himſelf to Galba, but that emperor having adopted Piſo as his heir, Otho excited an inſurrection, murdered Galba and Piſo, and aſcended the throne in 69. was oppoſed by Vitellius, who was ſupported by the German army, and, in a battle between the two rivals near Cremona, Otho was defeated, on which he ſlew himſelf, after reigning three months.—Crevier.

Otho I. emperor of Germany, called the Great, was the eldeſt ſon of Henry the Fowler, and crowned in 936, at the age of 14. Berenger having uſurped the title of emperor in Italy, Otho entered Rome, where he was crowned by John XII. That pontiff afterwards leagued with Berenger, on which Otho cauſed him to be depoſed, and put Leo XIII. in his place in 963. On the emperor's return to Germany, the Romans revolted, and impriſoned Leo; for which Otho again viſited Rome, where he ſeverely exerciſed his vengeance on the ſenate. He next turned his arms againſt Nicephorus, emperor of the Eaſt, whoſe army he defeated, and, after cutting off their noſes, ſent the priſoners to Conſtantinople. John Zimiſces, the ſucceſſor of Nicephorus, made peace with Otho, who died in 973.—Univ. Hiſt.

Otho II. ſurnamed the Bloody, ſucceeded his father, the preceding emperor, at the age of 18. His mother Adelaide oppoſed his acceſſion, on which he expelled her from court. Her party proclaimed Henry duke of Bavaria emperor; but he was defeated by Otho, who alſo repulſed the Danes and Bohemians. He afterwards marched into Italy againſt the Saracens, by whom he was taken priſoner in 982, but ranſomed for a large ſum. He died at Verona the year following.—Ibid.

Otho III. the ſon of the preceding, was only three years old at the death of his father. On coming to age he took the reins of government, and went to Italy, which was in a ſtate of confuſion, owing to the oppoſition of different popes. Otho having re-eſtabliſhed order, returned into Germany, and made Boleſlas king of Poland. He was obliged again to paſs into Italy, to quell a revolt, and died there in 1002, aged 22 years. —Ibid.

Otho IV. called the Superb, was the ſon of Henry duke of Saxony, and choſen emperor in 1197. He was excommunicated by the pope for ſeizing the lands which the counteſs Matilda bequeathed to the holy ſee. The princes of the empire elected Frederic king of Sicily in the room of Otho, who retired to Brunſwick. He died in 1218.—Ibid.

Otho (Venius), a painter, and the inſtructor of Rubens, was born at Leyden in 1556. After reſiding at Rome ſeveral years, he went to Germany, where he was employed by the emperor. He died at Bruſſels in 1634. He had two brothers, Gilbert, an engraver, and Peter, a painter.—Houbraken.

Otrokotskiforis (Francis), an Hungarian, who completed his ſtudies at Utrecht, and became a miniſter in his native country. He afterwards renounced the proteſtant religion, and obtained ſome preferment in the ſtate. He died at Tirnau in 1718. He wrote, 1. Origines Hungaricæ, 2 vols 8vo.; 2. Antiqua Religio Hungarorum vere Chriſtiana et Catholica, 8vo.—Moreri.

Ott (Henry), a Swiſs divine, was born in 1617. He became profeſſor of eccleſiaſtical hiſtory at Zurich, and died there in 1682. —Moreri.

Otter (John), a learned Swede, was born in 1707, and died in 1748. He publiſhed Travels in Turkey and Perſia, and an Account of the Expeditions of Kouli Khan. —Ibid.

Otway (Thomas), a dramatic writer, was born in Suſſex in 1651, and educated at Wincheſter ſchool; from whence he removed to Chriſt church, Oxford, which he left without taking a degree, and went to London, where he became a performer and writer for the ſtage. The earl of Plymouth gave him a cornetcy in a regiment in Flanders, but Otway being diſguſted with the army, returned to London, where he died miſerably in 1685. Having been compelled by his neceſſities to contract debts, and haunted by the terriers of the law, he retired to a public-houſe on Tower-hill, where he died of want, by ſwallowing, after a long faſt, a piece of bread which charity had ſupplied. Otway excels in touching the tender paſſions in tragedy, of which his Orphan and Venice Preſerved are proofs. His works have been collected in 3 vols. 12mo.—Johnſon's Lives of the Poets.

Oudenarde (Robert van), a painter, was born at Ghent in 1663. He was the diſciple of Carlo Maratti, after which he ſettled at his native place, where he painted many fine pictures for churches, convents, and noblemen's palaces. He died in 1743. —Pilkington

Oudin (Caſimir), a French monk, was born at Mezieres in 1638. In 1690 he quitted France, and went to Leyden, where he profeſſed the proteſtant religion, and was made under-librarian of the univerſity. He died there in 1717. His works are, 1. Commentarius de Scriptoribus Eccleſiæ antiquis, illorumque ſcriptis, 3 vols. folio; 2. Veterum aliquot Galliæ et Belgii Scriptorum Opuſcula ſacra nunquam edita, 8vo.; 3. Supplement to Eccleſiaſtical Authors, omitted by Bellarmine, 8vo.; 4. the Monk of Premontre unfrocked.—Moreri.

Oudin (Francis), a French jeſuit, was born in 1679 at Vignori in Champaigne. After profeſſing theology and the languages at Langres with reputation, he ſettled at Dijon, where he died in 1752. His principal works are, 1. Somnia, a Latin poem of great merit; 2. Poemata Didaſcalica, 2 vols. 12mo; 3. Bibliotheca Scriptorum Societatis Jeſu; 4. a Commentary on St. Paul's Epiſtle to the Romans; 5. Celtic Etymologies; 6. Hiſtoria Dogmatica Conciliorum; 7. Lives of ſeveral Perſons in the Collection of Niceron.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

Oudinet (Mark Antony), a medalliſt, was born at Rheims in 1643. He was profeſſor of law at his native place, and afterwards keeper of the royal cabinet of medals. He was alſo a member of the academy of inſcriptions, and died in 1712. He wrote three Memoirs on Medals.—Ibid.

Oudri (John Baptiſt), a French painter, was born in Paris in 1686, and died there in 1755. He was the diſciple of Largillieres, and excelled in painting animals, and hiſtorical ſubjects, with landſcape ſcenery.—D'Argenville.

Oughtred (William), a divine and mathematician, was born in Buckinghamſhire in 1573, and educated at Eton, from whence he was elected to King's college, Cambridge, where he obtained a fellowſhip. About 1603 he was preſented to the living of Albury in Surry, where he devoted himſelf to mathematical purſuits, and wrote ſeveral treatiſes, particularly his Clavis, the plan of which was adopted by ſir Iſaac Newton. In the rebellion he ſuffered conſiderably for his loyalty, and died of joy in 1660, on hearing that the king was about to be reſtored. His Opuſcula were printed in 1676.—Biog. Brit.

Ousel (Philip), a learned proteſtant divine, was born at Dantzic in 1671, of a family which originally came from France. He was profeſſor of theology at Frankfort on the Oder, where he died in 1724. His works are, 1. Introductio in Accentuationem Hebræorum metricam, 4to.; in this work he ſupports the ſingular notion, that the Hebrew points and accents are of equal antiquity with the ſacred books; 2. De Accentuatione Hebræorum proſaica, 8vo.; 3. De Lepra, 4to. —Moreri.

Ouwater (Albert), a Dutch painter, was born at Haerlem in 1444, and died in 1515. He painted hiſtorical ſubjects.—Ibid.

Overall (John), a learned prelate, was born in 1559, and educated at St. John's college, Cambridge, in which univerſity he became regius profeſſor of divinity. In 1601 he was preferred to the deanry of St. Paul's, and in 1614 to the biſhopric of Lichfield and Coventry from whence he was tranſlated to Norwich, where he died in 1619. Biſhop Overall wrote a book on Convocations and ſome other works.—Biog. Brit.

Overbury (ſir Thomas), an Engliſh gentleman, was born in Warwickſhire in 1581, and educated at Queen's college, Oxford, from whence he removed to the Temple, after which he attached himſelf to Car, earl of Somerſet, by whoſe means he was knighted. Though he had aſſiſted that unprincipled nobleman in his amour with the counteſs of Eſſex, he oppoſed his marriage with her, for which he incurred the hatred of both. On a frivolous charge he was ſent to the Tower, where, by the contrivance of Somerſet and his wife, he was poiſoned in 1613. Two years afterwards the circumſtance of Overbury's death was diſcovered, but though the inſtruments were executed, the noble delinquents received the royal pardon. Sir Thomas was the author of ſeveral pieces in verſe and proſe, which were reprinted in 1753 in 8vo.—Biog. Brit.

Ovid (Publius Ovidius Naſo), a Latin poet, was born at Sulmo in Italy, B.C. 43. Being intended for the law, he was ſent to Rome for education, and from thence to Athens. He made a conſiderable progreſs in eloquence; but poetry had more charms for him than the art of pleading. On ſettling at Rome, his accompliſhments procured him many friends, particularly Auguſtus, who, however, ordered him to be baniſhed to the banks of the Euxine ſea, where he died, A.D. 17. The occaſion of his diſgrace is variouſly related. Some aſſert that it was for writing his Art of Love; others ſay, that it was for an intrigue with Livia, the wife of Auguſtus; and there are thoſe who maintain, that the true cauſe was Ovid's diſcovering the emperor's unnatural attachment to his own daughter Julia. The works of Ovid extant are, his Metamorphoſes: the Art of Love; Elegies; Epiſtles; and Fragments. They are characteriſed by ſweetneſs of ſtyle, glowing expreſſion, and elegance of deſcription, mixed, however, with much licentiouſneſs. The beſt edition is that of Burmann, 4 vols. 8vo.

Owzedo (John Gonſalvo de), was born at Madrid in 1478. He became page to Ferdinand king of Arragon, and Iſabella queen of Caſtile. He accompanied Columbus on his firſt voyage to Hiſpaniola. In the war of Naples he rendered great ſervices to Spain, for which Ferdinand appointed him inſpector-general of the commerce of the New World; in which capacity he went to Hiſpaniola, where he took great pains in enquiring into the cauſes and remedies of the venereal diſeaſe, ſuppoſed to have been carried thither from Naples, and the virtues of the guiacum in that diſeaſe are ſaid to have been diſcovered by him. On his return to Spain he publiſhed Summario de la Hiſtoria general y natural de las Indias Occidentales; printed at Salamanca 1535, folio.—Moreri.

Owain, ſon of Cadwygan ab Bleddyn, a prince of Powys. Having carried off Neſſ, the wife of Gerald, conſtable of Pembroke, he and his father were obliged to fly to Ireland, but they afterwards returned to their own country. Owain ſucceeded his father in 1110, and the year following was in Normandy with Henry I. who knighted him. He was killed by Gerald, the huſband of Neſs, in 1114.—Owen's Cambr. Biog.

Owain, the ſon of Maxen Wledig, an eminent character in the Welſh annals. He broke off the connexion between Britain and the Romans, and was in conſequence choſen ſovereign of the country. He was alſo accounted a ſaint in the Britiſh church.—Ibid.

Owain, commonly called Owen Tudor, lord of Penmynydd in Mona, or Angleſea, was born about 1385. He ſtudied the law, which profeſſion he quitted and went abroad. Catherine, the wife of Henry V. after her huſband's death, fell in love with Owain, and privately married him in 1426. They had three children; the eldeſt entered a monaſtery, Edmund became earl of Richmond, and Jaſper was earl of Pembroke. After the death of Catherine, Owain was confined in Newgate, from whence he effected his eſcape, but was retaken; however he ſoon obtained his liberty, and died on his eſtate. —Ibid.

Owain Cyveiliog, a prince, a warrior, and a poet, who made war againſt Hywel ab Cadwygan and Rhys ab Gruffydd. He died in 1197. A ſpecimen of his poetry is in the Welſh Archaiology.—Owen's Camb. Biog.

Owain Glandwr, commonly called Owen Glendower, the laſt of the deſcendants of the Welſh princes who ſtruggled for their independence, was born in 1348. He was bred to the law and became eſquire to Richard II. but Henry IV. confiſcated his lands, and gave them to lord Grey, who had repreſented Owain as a diſloyal ſubject. On this Owain aſſembled his friends, burnt the town of Ruthyn, and took lord Grey; whom, however, he ranſomed for a conſiderable ſum. In 1402 Owain defeated Edward Mortimer in Radnorſhire, and made him priſoner; after ſubduing Glamorganſhire, he aſſembled a parliament, by which he was acknowledged ſovereign of Wales. In 1404 Owain obtained ſuccours from France, but the capture of Caermarthen was the only conſequence. His affairs declining he was obliged to lead a ſecluded life, and died in the diſguiſe of a ſhepherd in 1415.—Ibid.

Owen (John), the epigrammatiſt, was born in Caernarvonſhire, and bred at Winchester ſchool, and from thence elected to New college, Oxford, after which he became ſchoolmaſter, firſt at Trylegh in Monmouthſhire, and next at Warwick. He died in 1622. His Latin epigrams poſſeſs great point, and are inferior only to thoſe of Martial.—Wood.

Owen (George), a phyſician, was educated at Oxford, and became fellow of Merton college in 1519. Henry VIII. to whom he was phyſician, left him a legacy of one hundred pounds. He ſerved in the ſame capacity Edward VI. and queen Mary, and died in 1558. Dr. Owen wrote, A Meet Diet for the New Ague, 1558, folio.—Aikin's Biog. Ann. of Medicine.

Owen (John), a learned independent divine, was born at Hadham in Oxfordſhire in 1616, and educated at Queen's college. In the civil wars he was a zealous advocate for the parliament againſt the king. Cromwell made him his chaplain, and gave him the deanry of Chriſt church, Oxford, where he ſerved the office of vice-chancellor in 1652, and the year following took his doctor's degree. He is ſaid to have been of tolerant principles, though a rigid Calviniſt. At the reſtoration he was deprived of his deanry; on which he retired to his eſtate in Eſſex. He died in 1683. Dr. Owen was a very voluminous writer. His greateſt works are, an Expoſition of the Hebrews, 4 vols. folio; Diſcourſe on the Holy Spirit, folio; Treatiſe on Original Sin, 8vo.; and Sermons and Tracts, 1 vol. folio.—Calamy.

Owen (Charles), a native of Montgomery, was ordained miniſter of a diſſenting congregation, at Bridgenorth in Shopſhire, which place he was forced to leave, till king James publiſhed his declaration granting liberty of conſcience. He died in 1712, aged 58. Mr. Owen wrote ſeveral pieces in defence of the non-conformiſts.—Ibid.

Owen (Henry), a learned divine of the church of England, was born in Monmouthſhire, and educated firſt at Ruthin ſchool, and next at Jeſus college, Oxford, where he took his degree of M.D. but afterwards entered into orders, and obtained the vicarage of Edmonton in Middleſex, and St. Olave, Hart-ſtreet. He died in 1795, aged 80. His works are, 1. Obſervations on the Scripture Miracles; 2. Remarks on the four Goſpels; 3. An Enquiry into the Septuagint Verſion; 4. Sermons preached at Boyle's Lecture, 2 vols.; 5. An Introduction to Hebrew Criticiſm; 6. The Modes of Quotation uſed by the Evangelical Writers explained and vindicated; 7. Poſthumous Sermons, 2 vols.—Europ. Mag. Gen. Biog. Dict.

Owtram (William), a learned Engliſh divine. He was prebendary of Weſtminſter in the reign of Charles II. and wrote an excellent treatiſe De Sacrificiis. He died in 1679. A volume of his ſermons was printed after his death by biſhop Gardiner.—Preface to his Sermons.

Oxenstiern (Axel), grand chancellor and prime miniſter of Sweden, was born in 1583. He was the confidential favourite of Guſtavus Adolphus, which diſtinction he merited by his ability and integrity. After the death of that monarch he had the entire management of the affairs of the Swedes, and of their allies in Germany, in the quality of director general. He died in 1654. The Hiſtory of Sweden, written in German, has been attributed to him. He had three ſons who came to diſtinguiſhed rank. John was ambaſſador and plenipotentiary at the peace of Munſter. Gabriel became grand marſhal of Sweden; and Benedict was grand chancellor of that kingdom.—Moreri.

Ozanam (James), a French mathematician, was born in 1640. He was educated for the eccleſiaſtical ſtate, which he renounced for the ſtudy of mathematics and philoſophy, which he taught with great reputation at Paris, where he died of an apoplexy in 1717. His principal works are, 1. a Dictionary of Mathematics, 4to.; 2. a Courſe of Mathematics, 5 vols. 8vo.; 3. Mathematical Recreations, 4 vols. 8vo.; 4. Uſe of the Compaſs of Proportion, 12mo.; 5. Elements of Algebra, 4to.; 6. Practical Geometry.—Moreri. Hutton.

Ozell (John), an induſtrious writer, was born in Leiceſterſhire, and educated at the ſchool of Aſhby de la Zouch. He was auditor-general of London, and of the accounts of St. Paul's cathedral, and St. Thomas's hoſpital. He died in 1743. Mr. Ozell tranſlated Moliere, and other French authors, and wrote ſome poems. Mr. Pope gave him a place in the Dunciad.—Cibber.

P

Paas (Criſpin), an able engraver, was a native of Cologne, and the diſciple of Cornhard. The king of Denmark invited him to his court, and he died there about the commencement of the 17th century. He engraved plates of the Hiſtory of the Bible, and a great number on other ſubjects. His daughters, Magdalena and Barbara, inherited his talents. There were two other engravers of this family, namely, Simon and Criſpin Paas, called the younger.—Sandraart.

Paaw (Peter), a phyſician and botaniſt, as born at Amſterdam in 1564. He became minent as a profeſſor at Leyden, where he ed in 1617. His works are, 1. Commen- ry on Veſalius, 4to.; 2. a Treatiſe on the ague, 4to.; 3. Hortus-Lugduno Batavus.— alleri Bibl. Anat. Moreri.

PABO, a Britiſh prince and warrior in the th century, was defeated and fought re- ge in Wales, where he was hoſpitably en- tained by the king of Powys, who gave m lands. He afterwards led a religious e, and was accounted a ſaint. He founded church in Mona, where his monument th an inſcription yet remains.—Owen's mb. Biog.

PACATIANUS (Titus Julius Marinus), a arper, who excited the Gauls to revolt in favour in the reign of the emperor Philip; t he was defeated and put to death, A. D. 9, by the troops which raiſed Decius to throne. There are medals of Pacatianus iſting.—Moreri.

PACE (Richard), a learned divine, and n of St. Paul's, London, was employed Henry VIII. in ſeveral embaſſies, but olſey being jealous of his riſing merit, cured his diſgrace. He died of chagrin 1532. Pace was held in great eſteem by moſt learned men of his time, particu- y Eraſmus, ſir Thomas More, cardinal e, &c. He wrote, 1. Epiſtles; 2. De ctu Scientiarum, 4to.; 3 De lapſu Hebrai- m Interpretum, &c.—Eraſmi Epiſt. Pit-

PACHECO (John de), marquis de Villena, favourite and prime miniſter of Henry king of Caſtille. His authority was ſo at that he diſpoſed at pleaſure of all places the kingdom. Louis XI. of France cor- ted him by a penſion, and this perfidious iniſter betrayed his maſter's intereſts in peace of 1443, by many articles preju- al to the kingdom of Caſtille. Henry ing diſcovered his treachery reproached with it, which ſo provoked Pacheco that conſpired againſt him, and proclaimed ce Alphonſus king of Caſtille in 1465. this infamous miniſter cauſed the young to be poiſoned ſoon afterwards, and was nciled to Henry, who continued him in authority and favour till his death in S.—Mariana's Hiſt. of Spain.

PACHYMERUS (George), a Greek writer, born at Nice. His talents procured him favour of Michael Palæologus, who con- d on him ſeveral offices in church and . He died in 1310. He wrote a va- le Hiſtory of the Eaſt, which is inſerted he collection of Byzantine hiſtorians, and publiſhed at Rome in 1669, in folio, a Latin tranſlation.—Moreri.

PACIAUDI (Paul Marie), a religious, of order of Theatins, correſpondent of the emy of belles lettres at Paris, and libra- to the duke of Parma, was born at Tu- n 1710, and died in 1785. His works 1. Monumenta Peloponneſiaca, 2 vols. 2. Memorie de gran maeſtri dell'ordine Geroſolimitano, 3 vols. 4to; 3. Letters be- tween him and count Caylus.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

PACIFICUS MAXIMUS, a Latin poet, was born at Aſcoli, of a noble family, in 1400. His poems were printed at Florence in 1489, 4to. under the title of Hecatelegiam five Elegiæ; this is a very ſcarce edition. That of Parma, with his other works, in 1691, 4to. is purged of many licentious paſſages, which occur in the former. Pacificus men- tions the venereal diſeaſe in his poems, be- fore the voyage of Columbus.—Tiraboſchi.

PACIUS (Julius), chevalier of the order of St. Mark at Venice, was born at Vicenza in 1550. He wrote a Treatiſe on Arithmetic at the age of thirteen, after which he ſtudied the law, and profeſſed it with reputation in various univerſities. He died in 1635. His principal works are, 1. De Contractibus, fo- lio; 2. Synopſis Juris, folio; 3. De Jure Maris Adriatici, 8vo.; 4. Decretales, lib. v. 8vo.; 5. Corpus Juris civilis, folio; 6. Ariſto- telis Organum, 8vo.; this laſt is a tranſla- tion of Ariſtotle's Logic. Pacius became a zealous proteſtant, and his friend Peireſc en- deavoured in vain to recover him to the Ro- man catholic religion.—Tiraboſchi.

PACORUS, ſon of Orodes king of Parthia, ſignalized himſelf by the defeat of Craſſus, whoſe army he nearly cut to pieces, B.C. 53. He took the part of Pompey, and declared himſelf for the aſſaſſins of Cæſar. After ra- vaging Syria and Judæa, Ventidius defeated him, and Pacorus was ſlain in the battle, B.C. 39.—Juſtin. Florus. Eutropius.

PACUVIUS (Marcus), nephew of the poet Ennius, diſtinguiſhed himſelf both in poetry and painting. He wrote ſatires and ſeveral dramatic pieces, particularly one entitled Oreſtes. Fragments of his are in the Corpus poetarum Latinorum of Maittaire. Pacuvius died at Tarentum, B. C. 154, aged 90.— Moreri.

PADARN, a Britiſh biſhop and ſaint, to whom ſeveral churches in Wales are dedi- cated. He is ranked with Dewi and Teilo, under the appellation of the three bleſſed viſitors; becauſe they went about preach- ing the Goſpel to all ranks of people.— Owen's Camb. Biog.

PADERNA (Paul Anthony), an hiſtorical and landſcape painter, was born at Bologna in 1649, and died in 1708. His pictures are, executed in a fine ſtyle, and much valued.— Pilkington.

PADUAN (Louis Leo, ſurnamed the), a painter, was a native of Padua, and died about 1615, aged 75. He excelled in por- trait painting, and was ſkilled in engraving of medals. His ſon Octavian was alſo a good portrait painter.—Felibien. Depiles.

PADUANINO (Franciſco), an hiſtorical painter, was born in 1552, and died in 1617. There is a fine picture of his at Ve- nice, repreſenting the deliverance of two malefactors at the interceſſion of a ſaint.— Pilkington.

PAEZ (Francis Alvarez), a Portugueſe divine. He was of the order of cordeliers, and became a favourite with pope John XXII. who gave him ſeveral dignities, and appointed him nuncio in Portugal. Paez wrote a famous book entitled De Planctu Eccleſiæ, in which he ſupported the authority of the pope in the higheſt degree. He was alſo the author of a Summary of Divinity, and other works. He died in 1352. —Moreri.

PAGAN, or PAGANUS (Peter), a German poet, and profeſſor of poetry and hiſtory at Marpurg, was a native of Wanfrid in the Lower Heſſe, and died in 1576. He wrote, Praxis Metrica; the Hiſtory of the Horatii and Curiatii, in Latin verſe; and other poems in the ſame language.—Moreri.

PAGAN (Blaiſe-Francis), a celebrated French mathematician, was born near Marſeilles in 1604. He bore arms in his youth, and demonſtrated a valour beyond his years, particularly in the paſſage of the Alps, and at the barricade of Suſa. Louis XIII. made him field marſhal, and ſent him envoy to Portugal in 1642. The ſame year he became entirely blind by the loſs of his eye at the ſiege of Montauban, having before been deprived of the ſight of the other by a diſorder. He then turned his attention to mathematical ſtudies, and wrote, 1. a Treatiſe on Fortifications; 2. Geometrical Theorems; 3. Theory of the Planets; 4. Aſtronomical Tables; 5. an Hiſtorical Relation of the River of the Amazons, 8vo. He died in 1665.—Moreri.

PAGANI (Gregorio), an eminent painter of Florence, was born in 1529, and died in 1560. His pictures have been ſometimes taken for thoſe of Michael Angelo Buonarotti —Pilkington.

PAGANO (Paul), a painter, was born at Milan in 1661, and died in 1716. There is a beautiful picture by him at Venice, repreſenting one of the works of mercy, viz. that of cloathing the naked.—Ibid.

PAGE (William), a learned divine, was a native of Middleſex, and educated at All Souls college, Oxford, of which he became fellow in 1619. He ſuffered conſiderably in the civil wars, and died in 1669. He wrote, 1. Genuflexionis ad nomen Jeſu defenſio, Oxford, 1631; 2. Animadverſions on John Hales's Tract of Schiſm; 3. a Tranſlation of Thomas à Kempis de Imitatione Chriſti into Engliſh.—Wood, A. O.

PAGET (William, the firſt lord), was the ſon of a ſerjeant at mace in the reign of Henry VIII. who taking a liking to the ſon, made him clerk of the ſignet, afterwards of the council, and of the privy ſeal. He conducted himſelf with ſo much diſcretion and ſkill that Henry ſent him ambaſſador to the French court, and on his return conferred on him the honour of knighthood. He alſo made him ſecretary of ſtate, and appointed him one of the executors of his will. At the beginning of Edward's reign he was ſent on an embaſſy to the emperor Charles V. and on his return received new dignities, of which he was deprived and ſent to the Tower in conſequence of his connexion with the duke of Somerſet. Paget was re eſtabliſhed in his employments by queen Mary, and continued in favour by Elizabeth. He died in 1564, and was buried at the public expenſe.—Dugdale's Baronage of England. Collins's Peerage.

PAGI (John Baptiſt), a painter and engraver, was born at Genoa in 1555, and died there in 1629. He wrote a book on painting entitled, Definizione é divizione della Pittura, folio.—De Piles.

PAGI (Anthony), a cordelier, was born at Rogne in Provence in 1624. He became provincial of his order, and undertook the laborious work of examining the Annals of Baronius. The firſt volume of his critique appeared at Paris in 1689, folio, with this title, Critica Hiſtorico-Chronologica in Annales Eccleſiaſticos Cardinalis Baronii. The three remaining volumes were printed after his death at Geneva. Father Pagi died at Aix in 1699. Beſides the above he wrote Diſſertatio hypatica, ſeu de Conſulibus Cæſareis, 4to. His nephew Francis Pagi was born at Lambeſc in 1654, and died in 1721. He aſſiſted his uncle in his examination of Baronius, and publiſhed the three poſthumous volumes. He was the author of a Hiſtory of the Popes, 4 vols. 4to. There was a jeſuit of this name who was a nephew of the laſt mentioned, and wrote a Hiſtory of Cyrus the younger, Paris, 1736, 12mo.; and a Hiſtory of the Revolutions in the Low Countries, 1727, 12mo.—Moreri.

PAGNINUS (Sanctès), a learned dominican, was born at Lucca in 1466. He employed twenty-five years in examining the Vulgate Bible by the originals; in the courſe of which he completed an entire new tranſlation from the Hebrew and Greek. He alſo compiled a Hebrew grammar and Lexicon of great merit. Pagninus died in 1536.—Moreri.

PAJON (Claude), a French proteſtant divine, was born at Ramorantin in 1626. He became profeſſor of divinity at Saumur, and miniſter at Orleans. He had a controverſy with Jurieu on the efficacy of grace and the manner of converſion. He died in 1685. His other works are a Defence of the Calviniſts, 2 vols.; and Remarks upon the Paſtoral Advertiſement.—Bayle.

PAJOT (Louis-Leo), count of Oſembray, was born at Paris in 1678. He ſtudied philoſophy and mathematics with great ſucceſs. His cabinet was enriched with a great number of curioſities, particularly in mechanics and natural hiſtory, on which account it was viſited by Peter the Great and other princes. In the memoirs of the academy of ſciences, of which he was a member, are ſeveral of his papers. He bequeathed his muſeum to that learned body. Pajot died in 1753.—Nouv. Dict. H us Engliſhwoman, was the daughter of omas lord Coventry, and wife of ſir John kington of Worceſterſhire. She was the imate friend of Dr. Hammond, biſhop ll, Dr. Sanderſon, Dr. Hickes, and other inent divines. She died in 1679, and s buried in the church of Hampton Lovet, orceſterſhire. There ſeems to be little ubt but that ſhe was the author of the ole Duty of Man, of which we have the timony of no leſs a man than Dr. Hickes. Ballard's Britiſh Ladies.

PAXINGTON (Dorothy, lady), an inge-

PALÆMON (Q. Rhemnius), a celebrated mmarian, was originally a ſlave at Rome the reign of Tiberius, but by attending maſter's ſon to the academy he acquired much knowlege that his maſter gave him freedom. He then became a preceptor, d gained great reputation as a rhetorician l poet. His piece de Ponderibus et Men- is was printed at Leyden in 1587, 8vo.— venal. Voſſius PALÆPHATUS, a Greek philoſopher, of om remains a treatiſe on incredible things, nted at Amſterdam in 1688, 8vo.; and Elzevir in 1649, 12mo. He lived before Chriſtian æra and after Ariſtotle.—Voſ- de Hiſt. Græc.

PALAFOX (John de), a Spaniſh prelate, s born in Arragon in 1600, of a noble nily. He ſtudied at Salamanca, after ich he was appointed a member of the ncil of war, and next of that of the In- s; but he renounced civil diſtinctions for eccleſiaſtical ſtate, and was made a biſhop Spaniſh America with the title of judge the adminiſtration of the three viceroys of Indies. While there he adminiſtered ice with ſtrict impartiality, and had a rp conteſt with the jeſuits. His conduct e ſuch ſatisfaction to the king of Spain t he made him biſhop of Oſma. This cellent prelate died in 1659. Palafox ote, the Hiſtory of the Siege of Fontara- , 4to.; Hiſtory of the Conqueſt of China the Tartars; Sermons, and a variety of igious pieces amounting to 13 vols. folio. Moreri.

PALAPRAT (John), a French lawyer and t, was born at Toulouſe in 1650. He inguiſhed himſelf at the bar, and was de chief of the conſiſtory in 1685. He s alſo employed in ſtate affairs, which he charged with reputation. He died at Paris 1721. Palaprat wrote ſome dramatic ces of the comic caſt, and poems, making all 5 vols. 12mo.—Ibid.

PALATI (John), a Latin hiſtorian, was rn in the ſtates of Venice, and died about 80. His principal work is entitled, Mo- rchia Occidentalis, ſive Aquila inter lilia, aquila Saxonica, 2 vols. folio. This ok is ornamented with figures of medals, .—Ibid.

PALAYE (N. de la Curne), member of French academy, and of that of inſcrip- ns and belles lettres, was born at Auxerre 1697, and died at Paris in 1781. He wrote Memoirs of ancient Chivalry, 3 vols. 12mo.; a work full of curious reſearch. He is alſo the author of a Memoir upon the Chronicle of Glaber in the memoirs of the academy of inſcriptions.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

PALEARIUS (Aonius), a learned writer, was born at Veroli in Italy, and after ſtudying at different places he became profeſſor of Greek and Latin, at Sienna, but being ſuſpected of Lutheraniſm, he found it neceſſary to withdraw to Lucca, and from thence to Milan, where he was arreſted and ſent to Rome. The inquiſition cauſed him to be burnt for hereſy in 1570. He wrote a Latin poem on the Immortality of the Soul, the beſt edition of which is that of Amſterdam, 1696, 8vo.—Tiraboſchi.

PALEY (William), a learned divine of the Engliſh church, was born at Peterborough, in Northamptonſhire, in 1743, and educated under his father, who was maſter of Giggleſwick ſchool in Yorkſhire. Afterwards he was ſent to Chriſt's college, Cambrige, where in 1763 he took the degree of B. A. Soon after this he became aſſiſtant in the ſchool at Greenwich, where he continued three years, and then returned to his college, of which he was elected fellow. He diſtinguiſhed himſelf as a tutor, and had for coadjutor Dr. John Law, now biſhop of Elphin; by whoſe recommendation Mr. Paley was patronized by his father, Dr. Edmund Law, biſhop of Carliſle; who gave him a living in Cumberland, and afterwards that of Appleby in Weſtmoreland. He alſo obtained a prebendal ſtall in the cathedral of Carliſle, with the living of Dalſton. About 1780 he became chancellor of Carliſle. In 1785 he publiſhed his Elements of Moral and Political Philoſophy, in one vol. 4to.; ſince frequently printed in 2 vols. 8vo. His next work was Horæ Paulinæ, or Obſervations upon the Epiſtles of St. Paul, in 1 vol. 8vo. In 1789 the biſhop of Ely offered him the maſterſhip of Jeſus college, Cambridge, which he declined; but in gratitude to his lordſhip he dedicated to him in 1794 his incomparable work on the Evidences of Chriſtianity, 2 vols. 8vo. After this Dr. Paley obtained a prebend of St. Paul's from the biſhop of London; the ſub-deanry of Lincoln from the biſhop of that dioceſe; and the valuable living of Biſhop Wearmouth from the biſhop of Durham. To the laſt-mentioned prelate he dedicated his book, entitled, Natural Theology, in one vol. 8vo. Beſides the above excellent productions Dr. Paley publiſhed ſome ſermons and tracts. He died at Biſhop Wearmouth in 1805.—Monthly Mag.

PALFIN (John), an eminent ſurgeon, was a native of Ghent, where he gained a great reputation as a lecturer, and died in 1730. His principal works are, 1. On Oſtæology, which is much eſteemed; 2. Anatomy of the Human Body, tranſlated into French by Devaux, 1753, 2 vols. 12mo.—Halleri Bibl. Anat.

PALINGENIUS (Marcellus), a Latin poet of the 16th century, whose true name was Peter Angelo Manzoli. He was a native of Stallada, in Italy, and was entertained at the court of the duke of Ferrara, to whom he dedicated a curious poem entitled, Zodiacus Vitæ; which contains many severe strokes against the Romish clergy, for which the poem was publicly burnt and proscribed.—Bayle.

PALISSI (Bernard de), a French potter and chemist, was born at Agen, and for his ingenuity in painting on glass and other works was patronized by Henry III. who endeavoured to persuade him to become a Roman catholic. But Palissi was an inflexible Calvinist, and would not comply. He wrote several works, printed at Paris in 1636, in two vols. 8vo.; and again in 1777 in quarto, with the notes of M. Faujas de St. Fond. Palissi made considerable discoveries in natural history, and is said to have been the first who gave a true theory of fountains. He died in 1590.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

PALLADINI (Arcangela), an ingenious female artist, was born at Pisa in 1599, and died in 1622. She learnt the principles of the art of painting from her father, and afterwards became distinguished as a portrait painter.—Pilkington.

PALLADINO (James), an ecclesiastical author of the 14th century, known by the name of James de Taramo, on account of his being born in that city in 1349. After receiving several preferments he became archbishop of Spoletta, and legate in Poland, where he died in 1417. He wrote a pious romance entitled, Jacobi de Teramo per breve, Consolatio peccatorum nuncupatum, et apud nonnullos Belial vocitatum; id est, processus Luciferi contra Jesum, printed at Augsburg in 1572, folio.—Moreri.

PALLADIO (Andrew), a celebrated architect, was born at Vicenza in 1508. His parents were in middling circumstances, but he rose by his merit to the rank of nobility. He began with sculpture; but Trissino the poet perceiving his inclination for the mathematics, explained to him the architecture of Vitruvius, and made with him three journies to Rome, where Palladio studied and designed after the ancient monuments of that city. In these pursuits he discovered the true principles of an art which, in his time, was buried in gothic barbarity. Among the noble structures which this illustrious architect built, one of the principal is the theatre called Degli Olimpici at Vicenza. He published a valuable treatise on architecture in 1570, in folio, with plates; and after his death, which happened in 1580, was published a work of his on the antiquities of ancient Rome.—D'Argenville. Felibien.

PALLADIUS (Rutilius Taurus Æmilianus), a Latin writer and physician, who lived after the decline of letters at Rome, but in what year is uncertain. He left a treatise de Re Rustica, which is in the collection of ancient writers who have treated on rural affairs, at Leipsic, 2 vols. 4to.—Vander Linden, de Script. Med.

PALLADIUS, a native of Cappadocia, became a hermit in 388, and in 401 was chosen bishop of Helenopolis, in Bithynia. On account of his attachment to St Chrysostom he was greatly persecuted and driven from his diocese. At the desire of Lausus, governor of Cappadocia, he wrote the History of Anchorets, to which he gave the title of Historia Lusiaca. It was printed at Paris in 1555, 4to. There is also attributed to him the Life of Chrysostom, in a dialogue, Greek and Latin, printed at Paris in 1680; but this is supposed to be the work of another bishop of the same name.—Dupin.

PALLAJUOLO (Antony and Peter), two painters of Florence, who were among the first that painted in oil. They were remarkable for their affection as brothers, and worked together. They both died in 1498, aged above 70.—De Piles. Pilkington.

PALLAS, the freedman of the emperor Claudius, over whom he had so great an ascendancy as to persuade him to espouse Agrippina his niece, and to adopt Nero for his successor. Pallas, in concert with Agrippina, is charged with having hastened the death of Claudius. Nero caused him to be put to death secretly, but erected a superb monument to his memory. Pallas was brother to the Felix before whom St. Paul pleaded.—Suetonius. Tacitus.

PALLAVICINI (Antony), a cardinal and bishop of Pampeluna, was born at Genoa in 1441 of a noble family, from whence has issued many great men. He rendered eminent services to the papal see, and died in 1507.—Lives of the Cardinals, 8vo.

PALLAVICINI (Sforza), a cardinal, was born at Rome in 1607. Though the elder son of a noble family, he renounced the advantages of birth, and entered among the jesuits. After his noviciate he professed philosophy and theology in his society. Innocent X. employed him in several important affairs, and Alexander VII. made him cardinal. He died at Rome in 1667. His principal work is a History of the Council of Trent, written in opposition to that of father Paul. The style is good, but the book is partial. The best edition is that of Rome, 1656, 2 vols. folio. Besides this history, Pallavicini, wrote a treatise on style, and on dialogue in Italian; also letters, 12mo.—Trab.

PALLAVICINI (Ferrante), an Italian writer, was born at Placentia about 1615. He became a canon regular of the order of St. Augustine, but having written some severe satires against pope Urban VIII. and the family of Barberini, he found it expedient to retire to Venice, as a price was set upon his head. A Frenchman, who pretended to be his friend, persuaded him to go to France, with the offer of great advantages. Ferrante followed his advice, but was no sooner out of the Venetian territory, than he was seized conducted to Avignon, where he was ded in 1644. The traitor who had ved him was aſſaſſinated ſome time after friend of Pallavicini's. His works were ed at Venice, in 4 vols. 12mo. 1655. principal is entitled, The Celeſtial Di-, or the Separation of Jeſus Chriſt from oman Church.—Bayle.

LLIOT (Peter), a printer and bookſeller jon, was born at Paris in 1608, and n 1698. He had a great knowledge of dry and genealogy, and publiſhed two , embelliſhed with plates of his own en-ng, one on the genealogies of Burgundy, e other on heraldry and emblazoning of both in folio. He alſo left 13 fo-olumes in manuſcript on the ſame ſub-—Moreri.

LLISER (ſir Hugh), an Engliſh ad-, was born in 1721. He early diſtin-ed himſelf in the navy, was with ad- Matthews in the Mediterranean, 744, and made poſt captain in 1746; as alſo at the taking of Quebec, and nade comptroller of the navy, and ed a baronet in 1773. Serving as ſe- in command under admiral Keppel in famous engagement off Uſhant, July 1778, a miſunderſtanding aroſe be-n them; and ſir Hugh preferred a e againſt admiral Keppel, who was ac-ed. Sir Hugh was then tried in his turn, primanded. He was, however, a brave xperienced officer, and was made gover-f Greenwich hoſpital, where he died in .—Gent. Mag.

LLUEL (Francis Crette de), an eminent ulturiſt, was born at Dugny in France 742. After receiving an ordinary edu-. at Paris, he returned to his father, the naſter of St. Denis, who appointed ſuperintendant of his farms at Dugny, n he greatly improved. He became one e firſt members of the ſociety of agri-re at Paris on its revival under Male-s in 1779; and he diſcuſſed very ably e queſtion offered by the ſociety at Laon, e beſt mode of draining marſhes. The ls of the ſociety contain a number of his oirs and obſervations. In the revolu-he became a member of the legiſlative bly, and was appointed a juſtice of peace, hich capacity he formed a collection of ws relative to agricultural police, which rinted with reflections on the office of a e of peace. He died in 1799.—Memoir before the Society of Agriculture.

LMA (James), called the elder, a paint-as born at Sermaletta in Italy in 1548. udied under Titian, whoſe manner and of Giorgione he adopted but in an inferior e. His talents, however, were re-able, and his pictures are eſteemed. He in 1588.—D'Argenville.

LMA (James), the younger, was nephew e above, and born at Venice in 1544. oret was his maſter, and Palma added derable elegance to the ſtyle of that maſter. His figures are expreſſive, and the draperies beautiful. He died in 1628.—Ibid.

PALMER (Samuel), a learned printer, who exerciſed his profeſſion with great reputation in London, and in whoſe office the celebrated Dr. Franklin was employed. Mr. Palmer died in 1732. He wrote a Hiſtory of Printing, in quarto.—Anecd. of Bowyer.

PALMER (John), an eminent actor, was born in 1741. His father was door-keeper of Drury-lane theatre, by which means the ſon had every opportunity of gaining an inclination for the ſtage. He was at firſt placed with a fruiterer, which profeſſion he quitted, and became an under performer at ſo low a ſalary that he went to Norwich, where he played with credit, and married. On leaving that place he became an itinerant performer, and a lecturer on heads. After purſuing this courſe ſome time he returned to London, and was engaged, firſt at the Haymarket, and next at Drury-lane, where he roſe to the firſt order as a comedian; but he involved himſelf in embarraſſments by building a theatre near Wellcloſe-ſquare, for which he could not obtain a licenſe. Owing to this, and other extravagancies, he was reduced to low circumſtances, and died ſuddenly while playing in the Stranger at Liverpool, in 1798.—Monthly Mag.

PALMIERI (Matthew), a native of Florence, who diſtinguiſhed himſelf with applauſe at the council held at that place. He died in 1475, aged 70. His works are, 1. a Continuation of Proſper's Chronicle; 2. A Treatiſe on Civil Life, in Italian, 1529, 8vo.; 3. a Poem, entitled, Citta Divina, in 3 books; in this piece he ſuppoſes, that our ſouls are thoſe angels which in the revolt of Lucifer neither preſerved their allegiance to God, nor joined with that apoſtate, and in conſequence were ſent hither to paſs through a probationary ſtate. This poem was condemned to be burnt. There was one Matthias Palmieri, a native of Piſa, in the ſame age, who tranſlated Ariſteas's Hiſtory of the Septuagint Verſion, printed with the Bible at Rome in 2 vols. folio, 1471. He continued Proſper's Chronicle to 1481.—Moreri.

PALOMINO (Anthony), a Spaniſh painter, was a native of Cordova. He embraced the eccleſiaſtical ſtate, and many of his paintings are in the cathedral of Valentia. He wrote a work on Painting, and the Lives of Painters, in 2 vols. folio.—Pilkington.

PALSGRAVE (John), an Engliſh divine, who ſtudied at Cambridge and at Paris. He became tutor in the French language to princeſs Mary, on her marriage with Louis XII. of France; and after his return to his own country he obtained ſome preferment. He tranſlated a Latin comedy called Acolaſtus into Engliſh. He died about 1550.—Langbaine. Biog. Dram.

PALUDANUS (John), a learned divine of the Roman church, and profeſſor of theology at Louvaine, where he died in 1630. He wrote, 1. Vindiciæ Theologicæ, adverſus Verbi Dei corruptelas, 2 vols. 8vo.; 2. Apologeticus Marianus, 4to; 3. De Sancto Ignatio Concio Sacra, 8vo.; 4. Officina Spiritalis ſacris Concionibus adaptata, 4to. He is not to be miſtaken for Bernard Paludanus, profeſſor of philoſophy at Leyden, where he died in 1634. He wrote Notes on Linſchoten's Voyages, and other works.—Moreri.

PAMELIUS (James), was born at Bruges in 1536. He entered into orders, and became canon of Bruges and archdeacon of St. Omer's. Philip II. of Spain nominated him biſhop of that dioceſe in 1587, but he died the ſame year. His works are, 1. Liturgica Latinorum, 2 vols. 4to.; 2. Micrologus de Eccleſiaſticis obſervationibus; 3. Catalogus Commentariorum veterum Selectorum in univerſam Bibliam, 8vo.; 4. Conciliorum Paralipomena, &c. He alſo publiſhed the works of Tertullian and Cyprian with notes; the Treatiſe of Caſſiodorus de divinis nominibus, &c.—Moreri.

PAMMACHUS (St.), a ſenator of Rome, who alſo enjoyed the conſular dignity. He eſpouſed Paulina, the ſecond daughter of Paula, the friend of Jerome, who ſpeaks highly of the talents of Pammachus. He built an hoſpital at Porto, and attended the poor himſelf. He refuted the errors of Jovinian, and died in 410.—Dupin.

PAMPHYLIUS, a painter of Macedon, who flouriſhed under king Philip; he was the firſt who applied the mathematics to his art, which he honoured by his manners and his talents. He founded a ſchool at Sicyon, and procured an edict that none but thoſe of noble birth ſhould be inſtructed in painting. The ſame law was afterwards extended throughout Greece. Apelles was the diſciple of this maſter.—Sandraarti Academia Pictura.

PAMPHYLUS (St.), a prieſt and martyr of Cæſarea in Paleſtine, to which city he preſented a library, conſiſting of moſt of the works of the ancients. He tranſcribed the Bible with his own hand, and with the utmoſt exactneſs. Montfaucon has publiſhed his Explication of the Acts of the Apoſtles. He was put to death about 308.—Dupin.

PANAGIOTI, a noble Greek, who was principal interpreter to the grand ſignior, was born in the iſle of Chios, and died in 1673. He oppoſed the patriarch Cyril Lucar with great fury, and wrote a book in modern Greek, which was printed in Holland under this title, the Orthodox Confeſſion of the Catholic and Apoſtolic Eaſtern Church.—Moreri.

PANARD (Charles Francis), a French poet, was born at Courville near Chartres in 1691, and died at Paris in 1765. He wrote comedies and operas, fables, anacreontic pieces, and allegories, which poſſeſs conſiderable merit.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

PANCIROLLUS (Guy), a celebrated profeſſor of juriſprudence, was born at Reggio in 1523, of a diſtinguiſhed family. He made a great progreſs in the law, and in 1547 was named ſecond profeſſor of inſtitutes at Padua. He filled the chair in that univerſity with reputation ſeveral years, and in 1571 was invited to Turin. He afterwards returned to Padua, where he died in 1599. His works are, 1. De rebus inventis et perditis; it was written in Italian, but tranſlated into Latin by Salmuth; 2. Commentarii in notitiam utriuſque Imperii et de magiſtratibus, folio; 3. De numismatibus antiquis; 4. De Juris Antiquitate; 5. De claris Interpretibus, 4to.; 6. De magiſtratibus municipalibus et corporibus artificum; 7. De quatuordecim regionibus urbis Romæ, earumque ædificiis tam publicis quam privatis, &c.—Moreri.

PANCKOUCKE (Andrew Joſeph), a bookſeller of Liſle, was born in 1700, and died at Paris in 1753. He wrote, 1. Studies for Young Ladies, 2 vols. 12mo; 2. Hiſtory of the Counts of Flanders, 8vo.; 3. a Collection of Bon Mots, 2 vols. 12mo.; 4. Dictionary of French Proverbs, 8vo.; 5. Philoſophical Manuel, 2 vols. 12mo.; 6. Elements of Geography and Aſtronomy, 12mo.; 7. Eſſays on Philoſophers, 12mo—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

PANCKOUCKE (Charles-Joſeph), ſon of the above, was born at Liſle in 1736. He followed his father's profeſſion at Paris with reputation, and his knowledge of typography made him celebrated all over Europe. His works are, 1. Mathematical Memoirs addreſſed to the Academy of Sciences; 2. Tranſlations of Lucretius, of Taſſo's Jeruſalem, and the Orlando of Arioſto; 3. Philoſophical Diſcourſe on Beauty, 8vo.; 4. another on Pleaſure and Grief, &c. He died at Paris in 1799.—Ibid.

PANEL (Alexander Xavier), a jeſuit, was born in Franche-comté, but reſided the greateſt part of his life in Spain, where he was preceptor to the children of the king, and died in 1777, aged 82. He wrote ſeveral works on antiquities and numiſmatics; the principal are, Diſſertation on a Medal of Alexander; De Ciſtiphoris; De Coloniæ Tarraconæ nummo.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

PANETIUS, a ſtoic philoſopher of Rhodes, who flouriſhed about 150 B.C. He ſtudied at Athens with ſuch credit as to be offered the rights of citizenſhip, which he refuſed, ſaying, "a modeſt man is content with one country." He afterwards went to Rome, where he had numerous diſciples, among the reſt Lælius and Scipio. Panetius accompanied the latter in his expeditions, and rendered eminent ſervices to the Rhodians by his intereſt with that commander. Cicero mentions a work of his on the Duties of Man, which is loſt.—Suidas. Moreri.

PANICAROLA (Francis), an Italian prelate, was born at Milan in 1548. Sixtus V. made him biſhop of Aſti, and ſent him with Bellarmine and cardinal Gaetan to France, trengthen the party of the league against ry IV. On that occaſion Panigarola ayed great zeal and eloquence. On his rn he ſet about reforming his dioceſe, h is ſaid to have given ſuch offence that as poiſoned in 1594. His Sermons were ted at Rome, in 1596, 4to.; but his prin- work is a treatiſe on the Eloquence of Pulpit, under the title of Il Predicatore, ice 1609, 4to —Moreri.

ANIN (Nakita Ivanowitz, count de), a ian ſtateſman, was born in 1718. His er, who was lieutenant-general in the ce of Peter I. was originally of Lucca taly. Young Panin commenced his ca- by being a ſoldier in the horſe-guards he empreſs Elizabeth; but by means of prince Kourakin he became gentleman he chamber. By his artful addreſs he ed the favour of his ſovereign, who him in 1747 to Copenhagen, and after- s to Stockholm with the title of miniſ- lenipotentiary. On his return he was governor of the grand duke Paul, and prime miniſter to Catherine II. He a man of conſiderable powers and en- d views; but during his ſtay in Sweden conceived a great admiration of its form overnment, which he wiſhed to intro- into Ruſſia, but could not attempt it. died in 1783 —Coxe's Ruſſia. Tooke's Catherine.

ANINI (Paul), an Italian painter, was at Placentia in 1691, and died in 1758. ainted ſubjects in architecture with great racy and beauty.—Pilkington.

ANNONIUS (James), or rather John the arian, was born in 1434. He was a p, and died in 1472. His poems, ele- and epigrams, were printed at Venice in , 8vo.; they are alſo in the Deliciæ poe- n Hungarorum, 1619.—Moreri.

ANOPION, a Roman, who was pro- d. A ſlave belonging to Panopion, ng that the ſoldiers were coming, ged cloaths with his maſter, then went his bed and ſuffered himſelf to be ſlain in oom.—Valerius Maximus.

ANORMITA (Anthony), an Italian poet e 15th century, was a native of Sicily, became private ſecretary to Alphonſo of Naples. He ſold an eſtate to pur- a copy of Livy. He died in 1471.— oſchi.

ANSA (Caius Vibius), a Roman conſul, the intimate friend of Cicero. He d Cæſar, and took the part of Octavius ſt Antony, but died of a wound received attle near Bologna.—Moreri.

NTÆNUS, a ſtoic philoſopher, was a e of Sicily, and became preſident of chool at Alexandria in the reign of nodus. He was a chriſtian, and em- d in the converſion of the Ethiopians. s return to Alexandria he employed him- n writing Commentaries on the Scrip- , which are loſt.—Euſebius. Dupin.

NTIN (William), a phyſician of Bru- ges, who died in 1583. He wrote a Commentary on Celſus's treatiſe De Re Medica, Baſle 1552, folio. His nephew, Peter Pantin, was profeſſor of the learned languages at Louvain, and dean of the church of Bruſſels. He died in 1611. He wrote a Treatiſe De dignitatibus et officiis regni ac domus regiæ Gothorum, folio.—Moreri.

PANZACHIA (Maria Helena), an ingenious artiſt of Bologna, was born of a noble family in 1668. She painted landſcapes in a beautiful manner, and alſo hiſtorical ſubjects.—Pilkington.

PAOLI (Sebaſtian), an Italian antiquary, was born at Lucca in 1684. He became an eccleſiaſtic, and died in 1751. Several of the Italian Journals are enriched with papers by him on ſubjects of antiquity, ſacred criticiſm and philoſophy. He wrote the lives of eminent Italians.—Tiraboſchi.

PAOLI (Hyacinth), a native of Corſica, who was elected one of the chief magiſtrates of the iſland in 1735. On account of the revolutions which diſtracted his country, and the oppreſſions of the Genoeſe, he retired to Naples, where he died. His ſon Paſcal made a conſiderable figure in the hiſtory of Corſica, which he endeavoured to reſcue from the Genoeſe and French, but after a hard ſtruggle was forced to abandon the iſland and ſeek an aſylum in England in 1769.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

PAOLUCCIO (Paul Anafeſte), the firſt doge of Venice. Before him that republic was governed by tribunes choſen every year. But in 697 the Venetians elected Paoluccio doge, or duke. He died in 717.—Univ. Hiſt.

PAPEBROCH (Daniel), a jeſuit of Antwerp, was born in 1628. He profeſſed the belles-lettres and philoſophy with ſucceſs, and was aſſociated with the fathers Bollandus and Heuſchenius in making a collection of of the Acts of the Saints; the hiſtorical part of which fell to Papebroch, who was in conſequence the ſubject of a violent perſecution for having denied ſome of the moſt abſurd legends of the Roman church. The Carmelites were his bittereſt enemies, becauſe he denied that Elijah was their founder. The inquiſition condemned the work, but afterwards only prohibited any farther controverſy on the ſubject. Papebroch died in 1714. He was alſo the author of an hiſtorical catalogue of the popes —Dupin. Moreri.

PAPHNUTIUS, biſhop of Thebais in Egypt, who in the perſecutions of Galerius and Maximinus ſuffered great tortures, and had his right eye wrenched out, after which he was ſent to the mines. He aſſiſted at the council of Nice in 325, and was lodged in the palace of Conſtantine. He oppoſed a motion for enforcing celibacy on the clergy; and defended Athanaſius at the council of Tyre.—Euſebius. Tillemont.

PAPIAS, biſhop of Hierapolis in Phrygia, is ſaid to have been the diſciple of St. John the Evangeliſt. He was the author of the millenarian notion, or the viſible reign of Chriſt upon earth one thouſand years before the reſurrection. He is not to be miſtaken for Papias a grammarian who lived about 1053, and wrote Vocabularium Latinum, printed at Milan in 1476, folio.—Dupin.

PAPILLON (Thomas), advocate in the parliament of Paris, and one of the greateſt pleaders of his age, was a native of Dijon, and died at Paris in 1596, aged 82. He wrote, 1. Libellus de jure accreſcendi; 2. De directis Hæredum ſubſtitutionibus, 8vo.; 3. Commentarii in quatuor priores titulos libri primi Digeſtorum, 12mo.—Moreri.

PAPIN (Iſaac), a learned divine, was born at Blois in 1657. He ſtudied at Geneva and Orleans, under his uncle Pajon, whoſe ſentiments on the doctrine of grace he defended againſt Jurieu. That violent controvertiſt in return accuſed Papin with being a papiſt. Being perſecuted by the Calvaniſts, Papin retired to England, from thence to Germany, and about 1690 returned to France, where he abjured the proteſtant religion. He died in 1709. In 1723 his works were collected into 3 vols 12mo. His uncle Nicholas Papin was an able phyſician, and wrote a treatiſe on the ſaltneſs of the ſea, and its flux and reflux; the origin of rivers and fountains, &c. Denis Papin, the couſin of Iſaac, was alſo a phyſician, and the author of ſome medical works.—Moreri.

PAPINIAN, an eminent advocate of the 3d century. He was prefect under Septimus Severus, who had a great eſteem for him, and recommended to his care his two ſons, Caracalla and Geta. The former of theſe having murdered his brother, required Papinian to vindicate the deed to the ſenate, and for his refuſal put him to death in 212. He wrote Determinations of Queſtions of Law, and other works —Ibid.

PAPIRIUS, ſurnamed Curſor, or the courier, from the ſwiftneſs of his courſe, was dictator of Rome about 320 B.C. He defeated the Samnites; and his ſon Lucius Papirius having obtained a great victory over the ſame enemy, appropriated the ſpoils to the building of a temple to Fortune.—Livy.

PAPIRIUS PRÆTEXTATUS, a Roman youth ſo called from a remarkable ſtratagem which he practiſed. He was the ſon of a ſenator, and according to the cuſtom of that period was taken by his father to hear the debates. On his return he was preſſed by his mother to inform her what had paſſed in the aſſembly. After reſiſting her importunities a long time, young Papirius told her that the queſtion under the conſideration of the ſenate was whether it would not be more advantageous to the republic for every man to have two wives inſtead of one? The mother immediately revealed this important ſecret to ſeveral Roman ladies, who aſſembled in a great body, and beſieged the ſenate, uttering violent complaints. The ſenators were ſurpriſed, but on being made acquainted with the ſtratagem made uſe of by Papirius, they paſſed a decree that no youths ſhould be admitted into their aſſembly for the future except himſelf.—Aulus Gellius. Bayle.

PAPON (John Peter), an ingenious writer was born in Pujet near Nice in 1736. He was a prieſt of the congregation of the oratory and died at Paris in 1803. His works are an Ode upon Death; the Art of the Poet, and the Orator, with an Eſſay on Education; this went through five editions; Funeral Oration for Charles Emmanuel III. King of Sardinia 8vo.; Travels in Provence, 2 vols. 12mo. Hiſtory of Provence, 4 vols 4to.; Hiſtory of the French Government, from the Aſſembly of the Nobles, 1787, to the end of 1788 8vo.; Memorable Epochs of the Plague, &c —Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

PAPPUS, a philoſopher and mathematician of Alexandria in the 4th century. The moſt conſiderable of his works are, Mathematical Collections, a Latin verſion of which appeared in 1588; a Comment upon the Almageſt of Ptolemy; Deſcription of the Rivers of Lybia; Treatiſe on Military Engines; Commentaries on Ariſtarchus concerning the Magnitudes and Diſtances of the Sun and Moon. An edition of this was published by Dr. Halley.—Voſſius de Mathem. Martin's Biog. Phil.

PARABOSCO (Jerome), an Italian dramatic writer of the 16th century, was born at Placentia. He was the author of ſeveral comedies in proſe; and ſome novels in the ſtyle of Boccacio, printed in 8vo. at Venice 1558, under the title of "Diporti di Girolemo Paraboſco."—Tiraboſchi.

PARACELSUS (Aurelius-Philip-Theophraſtus Bombaſt de Hohenheim), was born at Einſidlen, in Switzerland, in 1493. His father was the natural ſon of a prince, and gave him an excellent education. Paracelſus who had a fertile genius, applied to the ſtudy of phyſic, in which he made a great progreſs. He travelled into France, Spain, Italy, and the empire, for improvement, and on his return to Switzerland ſettled at Baſil, where he acquired a great name by his practice, in which he made uſe of thoſe two powerful medicines mercury and opium, and was famous for curing the venereal diſeaſe. His charges, however, like thoſe of empyrics in general, were exorbitant; and having recovered a canon from a dangerous complaint, his demand was ſo great that the patient refuſed to pay it, which produced a hearing before the council, who ordered the canon to pay only the accuſtomed fee. This ſo irritated Paracelſus that he left Baſil and went into Alſace, where he became noted as an alchemiſt, and pretended to have found not only the philoſopher's ſtone, but the art of prolonging life by an elixir. Notwithſtanding his boaſt he died poor, in 1541. The beſt edition of his works is that of Geneva, 1658, 3 vols. folio.—Melch. Adam. Vit. Germ. Med. Moreri.

PARADIN (William), an induſtrious French writer of the 16th century, who pub-ed, 1. Ariſteas's Hiſtory of the Septua-, 4to.; 2. Hiſtory of his own Times,

2; 3. Annals of Burgundy, folio; 4. De-ibus Galliæ Hiſtoria; 5. Memoirs of City of Lyons; 6. Hiſtoriæ Eccleſiæ licanæ, &c. Paradin was dean of Beau-and died about 1581.—Moreri.

ARAMO (Louis de), a Spaniſh inquiſitor, published at Madrid in 1598, folio, a ous work called The Holy Office. It is liſtory of the Inquiſition, written with t candour and accuracy.—Ibid.

ARCELLES (John), a painter, was born eyden in 1597. He excelled in painting pieces, particularly ſtorms. His ſon us was alſo a good artiſt in the ſame line.
oubraken.

ARCIEUX (Anthony de), a French ma-matician and member of the academy iences, was born in the diocese of Uzes 703 He taught the mathematics at with great reputation, and died there 768. His works are, a Treatiſe of Trimetry, 4to; Eſſays on the Probability e Duration of Human Life, 4to.; Mes on the Practicability of bringing to the Water of the River d'Yvette, 4to.
ouv. Dict. Hiſt.

ARCIEUX (Anthony), nephew of the ding, was educated at the college of rre at Paris, where he ſtudied the mamatics and philoſophy, and at the age of ty-four gave public lectures. In 1779 gan a courſe of experimental philoſophy e military ſchool of Brienne, and laſtly ied the philoſophical profeſſorſhip at the um in Paris, where he died in 1798.
rote an Elementary Book on Geomeand Aſtronomical Calculations; and in outh he compoſed a tragedy entitled, o.—Ibid.

ARDIES (Ignatius Gaſton), a mathema-
, was born at Pau in 1636. He en-into the order of jeſuits at the age of n, and became afterwards profeſſor of ric in the royal college at Paris. He in 1673. His principal works are, rologium Thaumanticum duplex, 4to.;
ſſertatio de Motu et Natura Cometa-8vo.; 3. Diſcourſe on Local Motion,
.; 4. Elements of Geometry, 12mo.;
ſcourſe on the Knowledge of Beaſts, —Niceron.

RE (Ambroſe), a celebrated ſurgeon, orn at Laval in the province of Maine.
gh a proteſtant he became ſurgeon to l kings of France, and at the time of aſſacre of St. Bartholomew Charles IX. him by ſhutting him up in his own Paré made ſeveral diſcoveries in ana and wrote ſome eſteemed books on
y. He died in 1590.—Bayle.

RE or PARÆUS (David), a proteſtant
, was born at Franckenſtein, in Sileſia, 48. He was apprenticed to a ſhoe-
, which profeſſion he quitted and ſtu-Heidelberg, where he obtained the gical profeſſorſhip, and died in 1622.
He wrote ſeveral treatiſes againſt Bellarmine; and Commentaries on the Scriptures.
That on the Epiſtle to the Romans, being tranſlated into Engliſh, was burnt by order of James I. for containing ſeditious principles.
John Philip PARÆUS, the ſon of the above, was a learned grammarian, and died in 1650.
He publiſhed, 1. Lexicon Criticon, 8vo.;
2. Lexicon Plautinum, or a Vocabulary to the Comedies of Plautus, of which author
he printed a good edition; 3. Calligraphia
Romana, 8vo. and other works. His ſon
Daniel publiſhed Mellificium Atticum, 4to.;
Hiſtoria Palatina, 4to; Medulla Hiſtoriæ Eccleſiaſticæ, &c.—Brandt's Hiſt. Ref. Bayle.

PAREJA (Juan de), a painter, was born in the Weſt Indies, and became the ſlave of Diego Velaſquez. In the abſence of his maſter, Pareja amuſed himſelf in drawing and copying his works, but ſecretly for fear of giving offence. Philip IV. king of Spain, coming one day to viſit Velaſquez, Pareja contrived to place one of his own pictures in his way with which his majeſty was extremely pleaſed. The ſlave then fell on his knees, and beſought the king to aſk his maſter to forgive him. Philip not only did this, but obtained him his liberty; but the faithful Pareja would not quit Velaſquez till his death. His portraits are very fine. He died in 1670, aged 60.—Cumberland's Hiſtory of Spaniſh Painters.

PARENNIN (Dominic), a celebrated jeſuit, who was a miſſionary in China, where he was greatly eſteemed by the emperor Kang-Hi, for whom he tranſlated into Chineſe ſeveral articles from the memoirs of the academy of ſciences. A difference ariſing between the Chineſe and Ruſſian courts, Parennin was charged to negociate a reconciliation, which he effected. He died at Pekin in 1741, aged 77, and was magnificently interred by order of the emperor. In the Letters, edifying and curious, relative to China, are ſeveral of this father.—*Nouv.
Dict. Hiſt.*

PARENT (Anthony), a mathematician, was born at Paris in 1666. He was bred to the law, which he renounced for the ſci-ences. He became a member of the academy, and enriched its memoirs with many valuable papers. He died of the ſmall-pox in 1716. His works are, Mathematical and Philoſophical Reſearches, 3 vols. 12mo.;
Theoretical and Practical Arithmetic, 8vo; Elements of Mechanics and Natural Philoſophy, 12mo.—Eulogy by Fontenelle.

PARFAIT (Francis), was born at Paris in 1698 of a diſtinguiſhed family, and died in 1753. His works are, 1. General Hiſtory of the French Theatre, 15 vols; 2. Hiſtory of the ancient Italian Theatre, 2 vols.; 3.
Dictionary of Theatres, 7 vols; 4. Dramа-tic pieces never acted.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

PARIS (Mathew), an Engliſh hiſtorian, was a monk of the order of benedictines at St. Alban's in the 13th century. He was a man of general knowlege and integrity; and was employed in reforming the monaſteries, which ſervice he diſcharged with wiſdom and zeal. His principal work is a Hiſtory of Engliſh Affairs from the Conqueſt to the 43d of Henry III. It was publiſhed by archbiſhop Parker at London in 1571, folio, and ſince with additions by Dr. William Watts, in 1640, 2 vols. folio —Cave Hiſt. Lit. Nicolſon's Hiſt. Biog. Brit.

PARIS (Francis), was born at Chatillon, near Paris, of a poor family. He became a ſervant to the grand vicar of Sens, by whoſe means he was ordained and obtained the benefice of St. Lambert. He died at Paris in 1718. He wrote the Lives of the Saints and other works.—Moreri.

PARIS (Francis), a celebrated deacon of Paris, was the eldeſt ſon of a counſellor of parliament. He reſigned the family eſtate to his brother, and embraced the eccleſiaſtical ſtate, but refuſed a living, and led a recluſe life in a religious houſe at Paris, where he died in 1727, aged 37. His brother erected a tomb to his memory in the cemetery of St. Medard; and ſo highly was his piety eſteemed that many perſons who had been edified by his inſtructions, went to viſit his monument, and ſome pretended to be cured of maladies there. This induced others to do the ſame, and ſo great was the deluſion, that the government found it neceſſary to order the cemetry to be cloſed up. The abbé Paris wrote Explanations of ſome of the Epiſtles. —Ibid.

PARKER (Matthew), archbiſhop of Canterbury, was born at Norwich in 1504, and educated in Corpus-chriſti college, Cambridge, of which he became fellow. By the means of Anne Boleyn he was made chaplain to Henry VIII., and in the ſucceeding reign he was choſen maſter of his college; but in that of Mary he was deprived of his preferments. On the acceſſion of Elizabeth Dr. Parker was preferred to the archbiſhopric of Canterbury, being duly conſecrated at Bow church; though the papiſts, by way of invalidating the eccleſiaſtical orders of the church of England, aſſerted that he was conſecrated in the Nag's-Head tavern; a calumny which has been refuted by ſome of their own writers. The archbiſhop was zealous in promoting the reformation, and in reſtraining the encroachments of the puritans. He improved the tranſlation of the ſcriptures called the Biſhops' Bible, and died in 1575. He was particularly verſed in Saxon literature, and the early Engliſh hiſtory, and he publiſhed an edition of Matthew Paris, folio; an hiſtorical work on the Antiquity, of the Engliſh church, folio; and other works.—Life by Strype.

PARKER (Samuel), an Engliſh biſhop, was born at Northampton in 1640, and educated at Wadham college, Oxford. His father was a member of what was called the high court of juſtice, and one of the barons of the exchequer, but at the reſtoration he became king's ſerjeant at law. The ſon followed his example by complying with all changes. He was at firſt a zealous puritan, but conformed to the church of England, and obtained preferment. In the reign of James II. he was made for his ſervility to the king's arbitrary meaſures biſhop of Oxford and privy counſellor. He was alſo conſtituted by mandamus preſident of Magdalen college, in violation of the privileges of that ſociety. He wrote ſome pieces favourable to the popiſh doctrines, and died in 1687. His hiſtory of his own times, has been printed in Latin and Engliſh.—Biog. Brit.

PARKER (Richard), a ſeaman, who was the chief of the mutineers at the Nore in 1797. He was a native of Exeter, and had received a good education, after which he went into the navy and became a midſhipman, but was broke for ſome miſconduct. Having a good addreſs and great fluency of ſpeech he was choſen principal of the delegates when the ſailors roſe on account of their wages and prize-money; on which occaſion he aſſumed the command of the fleet, and was called admiral Parker. He ruled with great authority for ſome time, to the alarm of the nation, but when the inſurrection was ſuppreſſed he was tried and executed on board the Sandwich, June 30, 1797.—Gent. Mag.

PARKER (George), earl of Macclesfield, was the eldeſt ſon of Thomas Parker, lord chancellor of England, and the firſt earl, who died in 1732. The ſecond earl was a diſtinguiſhed mathematician, and became preſident of the royal ſociety. He was the promoter of the alteration in the ſtile, the bill of which he prepared, and publiſhed his ſpeech on the occaſion. His lordſhip died in 1766.—Engliſh Peerage.

PARKHURST (John), a learned divine, was born in London, and educated at Clare Hall, Cambridge, of which, in 1751, he was admitted fellow. He took his degrees in arts, and afterwards ſettled at Epſom in Surrey. Mr. Parkhurſt was the intimate friend of biſhop Horne, and like him had a great partiality to the opinions of the celebrated Hutchinſon. He publiſhed a Greek and Engliſh Lexicon, alſo a Hebrew and Engliſh Lexicon, both in 4to.; but ſince reprinted in 8vo. He was likewiſe author of an anſwer to Dr. Prieſtley on the Pre-exiſtence of Chriſt, 8vo.; and a pamphlet againſt John Weſley. He died in 1797.—Monthly Mag.

PARKINSON (John), an Engliſh botaniſt, was born in 1567. He was an apothecary in London, and eminent in his profeſſion. His garden was well ſtored with rare plants, and he became botaniſt to king Charles I. He died about 1645. Parkinſon was the firſt author who deſcribed and figured the ſubject of the flower garden. He publiſhed in 16[illegible] his "Theatrum Botanicum, or Theatre of Plants," folio. He had before publiſhed a deſcription of a flower garden, with this ſingular title, Paradiſi in ſole Paradiſus Terreſtris, 1629, fol. This was intended as a conceit on the author's name, Paradiſus in ſole ark-in-ſun.—Pulteney's Sketches of Bot. ranger.

PARMENIDES of Elis, a Greek philoſo-her, was the diſciple of Xenophanes B.C. 6. He aſſerted the rotundity of the earth, hich he placed in the centre of the ſyſtem. e alſo maintained that heat and cold were e principles of all things. In metaphy-s he held that ideas are real, and have no pendence on the will. Xenophanes com-ſed his ſyſtem in verſe, fragments of which ve been publiſhed by Stephens.—Stanley.

PARMENIO, one of the generals of Alex-der, whom he ſerved with fidelity, and ned many victories, which that monarch aid with baſeneſs by putting him and his to death on a ſlight ſuſpicion —Quintus rtius. Plutarch.

PARMENTIER (John), a French naviga-, was born in 1494 at Dieppe, and died in iſland of Sumatra in 1530. He was the t who conducted veſſels to the coaſt of azil. He was well ſkilled in aſtronomy, drew ſeveral good maps.—Moreri.

PARMENTIER (James), a French hiſto-l and portrait painter, was born in 1658. ſettled in England, and reſided chiefly Yorkſhire, in which county are ſeveral of paintings, particularly the altar-piece of Peter's at Leeds. He died in 1730.—lpole. Pilkington.

PARNELL (Thomas), a poet and divine, born in 1679 at Dublin, and educated in nity college in that city, where he took degree of M.A. and entered into orders. obtained a living in Ireland, and the arch-conry of Clogher; after which he took doctor's degree. He was the friend and reſpondent of Pope, Swift, Gay, Arbuth-, and other eminent wits of that period. Parnell wrote the Life of Homer for e, and aſſiſted him in his tranſlation. He at Cheſter in 1717. His poems were liſhed in one volume octavo; the princi-s that entitled "The Hermit." He alſo te ſome papers in the Spectator. His numous pieces were printed ſeparately in volume.—Life by Johnſon, alſo by Gold-.

ARODI (Domenico), a painter and ſtatu-of Genoa. He painted many altar-es and portraits, and died in 1740.—Pil-on.

ARR (Catherine), ſixth wife of Henry I. She was the daughter of ſir Thomas , and received, according to the cuſtom hat age, a learned education. She was end of the reformation, on which ac-t biſhop Gardner and other zealous of the iſh church endeavoured to effect her ; but by her prudence ſhe preſerved the 's favour to his death. In 1547 ſhe ied ſir Thomas Seymour, lord admiral of land, who is ſaid to have treated her ſo ill ſhe died of it the year following. She e Prayers, Meditations, and other reli-pieces.—Walpole's Royal and Noble ors.

ARR (Thomas), a huſbandman of Shrop-ſhire, who lived to the age of one hundred and fifty-two years and nine months. At the age of one hundred he did penance for a baſtard child; and at one hundred and twenty he married a ſecond wife, by whon he had a child. In 1635 he was brought to London by lord Arundel, and introduced at court to king Charles the firſt; but the change of air, and mode of living, particularly drinking wine, occaſioned his death the ſame year.—Life in the Harleian Miſcellany.

PARRHASIUS, a celebrated painter of Athens, who was the contemporary and rival of Zeuxis, B.C. 420. He ſtudied under Socrates, by which means he was enabled to give to his figures the expreſſion of ſtrong paſſions. In an allegorical picture he repreſented the people of Athens with all the diſtinctive traits of their national character; for which he was crowned king of painting.—Pliny Nat. Hiſt. Ælian Var. Hiſt.

PARRHASIUS (John Paul), an eminent grammarian, was born at Cotenza, near Naples, in 1470. His real name was Pariſio, which he altered according to the pedantic cuſtom of the age to Parrhaſius. He taught grammar and rhetoric at Milan with great reputation, and wrote Commentaries upon Horace and Ovid.—Bayle.

PARROCEL (Joſeph), a painter and engraver, was born in 1648, at Brignoles in Provence. He ſtudied firſt under one of his brothers, and afterwards under Bournignon, the famous painter of battles. He was a member of the French academy of painting, and died in 1704. Parrocel painted portrait, hiſtory, and battles; he alſo engraved in a good ſtyle. His ſon Charles was an excellent painter, and a member of the academy. He died in 1752, aged 53. He painted the conqueſts of Louis XV. Peter Parrocel, nephew and pupil of Joſeph, died at Avignon in 1739, aged 74. He was an hiſtorical painter of great merit.—D'Argenville. Pilkington.

PARRY (Richard), a learned divine, was educated at Oxford, and in 1604 made biſhop of St. Aſaph. He reviſed the firſt edition of the Welſh Bible publiſhed in 1620. Before his elevation to the epiſcopal dignity he was maſter of Ruthin ſchool, Denbighſhire. Owen's Cambr. Biog.

PARRY (Richard), an Engliſh divine, was a ſtudent of Chriſt church, Oxford, where he took the degree of M.A. in 1747, and that of D.D. in 1757. He was rector of Wichampton, in Dorſetſhire, and miniſter of Market-Harborough, in Leiceſterſhire, where he died in 1780. Dr. Parry wrote againſt Dr. Kennicott's Collations, in a ſplenetic ſtyle, alſo ſome pamphlets and ſermons.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

PARSONS (Robert), or Perſons, a celebrated Engliſh jeſuit, was born at Netherſtowey in Somerſetſhire, in 1546. He was educated at Baliol college, Oxford, of which he became burſar and dean in 1572, but being charged with embezzling the college money, he went to Rome, and turned catholic. He there obtained leave from the pope to eſtab-liſh a ſeminary for the education of Engliſh ſtudents deſigned for miſſionaries in their native country for the propagation of the roman catholic faith. Parſons frequently viſited England where he endeavoured to foment ſedition, and a price was ſet upon his head. He died at Rome in 1610. He was a ſubtle diſputant, and wrote ſeveral polemical books, and others on practical divinity. Some of the latter are uſeful.—Biog. Brit.

Parsons (James), a learned phyſician, was born at Barnſtaple in Devonſhire, in 1705. His father being appointed barrack-maſter at Bolton, in Ireland, he received his education at Trinity college, Dublin; from whence he went to Paris, where he attended the medical lectures and thoſe of chemiſtry and botany. He afterwards ſtudied at Rheims, where he took his doctor's degree in 1736, and the ſame year came to London. In 1746 he was elected a fellow of the royal ſociety. He was alſo admitted a licentiate of the college of phyſicians, and became phyſician to St. Giles's infirmary. He died in 1770. Dr. Parſons wrote an erudite work on the variety of languages, entitled Japhet, 4to. and other works which ſhew his learning and ingenuity.—Anecd. of Bowyer.

Parthenay (Anne de), an ingenious lady of the illuſtrious houſe of Parthenay, was the wife of Anthony de Pons, count de Marennes. She was one of the brighteſt ornaments of the court of Renata, ducheſs of Ferrara, and as well as that princeſs, was a zealous proteſtant. This lady was highly accompliſhed, being a great proficient in muſic, and well verſed in the Greek and Latin languages.—Moreri.

Parthenay (Catharine de), niece of the above, and heireſs to the lordſhip of Soubiſe, was married in 1568 to the baron de Pons; and in 1575 to Renatus, viſcount Rohan. The famous duke de Rohan, who ſo courageouſly defended the proteſtant cauſe in France during the civil wars of Louis the XIIIth. was her eldeſt ſon. Catharine one of her daughters, who married the duke of Deux-Ponts, made the following anſwer to Henry IV. who ſolicited her favours; "I am too poor, ſire, to be your wife, and too proud to be your miſtreſs." Catharine de Parthenay was at Rochelle in the time of its ſiege, and when the place ſurrendered ſhe and her daughters were ſent to the caſtle of Niort. She died in 1631, aged 77. She publiſhed poems in 1572, and two years afterwards a tragedy entitled, Holofernes, was performed at Rochelle. She alſo tranſlated the Precepts of Iſocrates into French, and wrote ſome other pieces.—Bayle.

Paruta (Paul), a nobleman of Venice, was born in 1540. He diſcharged ſeveral great offices and embaſſies with honour. He wrote in Italian "Notes upon Tacitus," "A Hiſtory of Venice," "Political Diſcourſes," and other works. He died in 1598.—Tiraboſchi.

Pas (Manaſſes de), marquis de Feuquieres, was the poſthumous ſon of Francis de Pas, who was ſlain at the battle of Ivry. He was born at Saumur in 1590, and diſtinguiſhed himſelf as an able general and negotiator. At the ſiege of Rochelle he was taken priſoner, and continued in confinement nine months. The reduction of that city was principally owing to him. He was afterwards ambaſſador to Sweden and Germany, where he ſhewed great talents. In 1635 he commanded the army in conjunction with the duke of Saxe Weimar. He died in 1639. His negotiations in Germany were printed in 1753, 3 vols. 12mo.—Moreri.

Pas (Anthony de), marquis de Feuquieres, grandſon of the above, was one of the greateſt generals of his age. He ſignalized himſelf at the battle of Staſarde, at the taking of Suza, and other places in Italy; but he was ſo ſevere a diſciplinarian that it was uſually ſaid, "He muſt be the braveſt man living ſince he ſlept every night in the midſt of a hundred thouſand enemies." He died in 1711, aged 63. His memoirs have been printed in 4 vols. 12mo.—Moreri.

Pascal (Blaiſe), was born at Clermont, in Auvergne, in 1623. His father, who was preſident of the court of aids, ſuperintended his education; but though he was himſelf a mathematician, he interdicted his ſon from that ſtudy. Young Paſcal, however, in ſecret applied to geometry, and without any aſſiſtance demonſtrated one of the moſt difficult propoſitions in Euclid. His father then permitted him to purſue his inclination, and at the age of 16 the youth publiſhed his Treatiſe on Conic Sections, which Deſcartes would not believe was his, but the production of his father. At 19 he invented an arithmetical machine, which, though ſimple, was unequalled. The Torricellian experiment next engaged his attention, and at the age of twenty-three he made conſiderable improvements upon it. Not long afterwards he ſolved a problem propoſed by Merſennus, and which had perplexed all the mathematicians in Europe. He now took a ſudden turn, renounced the ſciences and profane learning, and devoted himſelf to religious ſtudies. Becoming more abſtracted from the world, he retired to the congregation of the Port-Royal, where he applied to the reading of the holy ſcriptures. But he was not altogether indifferent to the paſſing ſcenes of ſociety. He eſpouſed the cauſe of the janſenits, and expoſed their enemies, the jeſuits, to ridicule, by his work, entitled, Provincial Letters, in which the principles and practices of that celebrated order were laid open in a fine ſtrain of ridicule, and with the irreſiſtible force of truth. Boileau and Voltaire have pronounced them the fineſt productions in the French language. The author died in the flower of his age, at Paris in 1662. The works of Paſcal were printed at Paris in 5 vols. 8vo. 1799.—Moreri.

Paschal I. pope, was a Roman of the name of Paſchalius, and ſucceeded Stephen

. in 817. He countenanced image wor-
, and crowned Lothaire the emperor at me. Paſchal died in 824.—Platina.

PASCHAL II. was a native of Tuſcany, ſucceeded Urban II. in 1099. He had a teſt with the emperor Henry IV. and alſo
h Henry I. king of England, reſpecting right of inveſtitures. The former vid Rome to be crowned by the pope, who ſed to perform the ceremony unleſs he ded the matter in diſpute; on this Henry ſed Paſchal to be ſeized by his troops.
is gave ſo much offence to the Romans
