: they roſe in behalf of their pontiff; and ry retired from Rome, but carried the pope
h him, who, to gain his liberty, conceded claim to the inveſtitures; this conceſſion afterwards cancelled in two councils.
chal died in 1118. His letters have been liſhed.—Ibid.

PASCHIUS (George), a proteſtant divine, born at Dantzic in 1661. He became eſſor of divinity at Kiel, where he died 707. His works are, 1. Tractatus de is inventis, quorum accurationi cultui
m prætulit antiquitas, 4to.; 2. De fictis uſpublicis, 4to.; 3. De variis modis motractandi, 4to.—Moreri.

PASOR (George), a learned divine, and ek profeſſor at Franeker, died in 1637.
works are, 1. Lexicon novi Teſtimenti, no.; [a book of great utility, eſpecially tudents.] 2. Manuale Teſtamenti, &c. no.; 3. Collegium Heſiodæum. His Matthias became profeſſor of the oriental uages at Oxford, and died in 1658. He te ſome learned pieces.—Ibid.

PASQUIER (Stephen), an eminent advo-
, was born at Paris in 1528. He plead-o ably againſt Verſoris, the defender of jeſuits, that Henry III. made him advo-
-general to the chamber of accounts.
died in 1615. His works are, letters, raits, epigrams, and epitaphs. The moſt brated is a poem, called Puce, occaſioned he author's ſeeing a flea on the boſom of ly.—Moreri.

PASSEMANT (Claude Simeon), a mathe-cian, was born at Paris in 1702. He bred to trade, but having a great inclina-to ſcientific purſuits, he devoted himto the conſtruction of mathematical in-ments. He publiſhed an account of a reflecting teleſcope made by him in
3. He alſo conſtructed an aſtronomical dulum ſurmounted on a celeſtial ſphere, ch he preſented to Louis XV. He died 769.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

PASSERAT (John), was born in 1534, at ves, in Champagne. He ſtudied law
r Cujas, and afterwards became pror of the belles lettres at Paris. On the h of Ramus he obtained the royal profeſ-ip of eloquence. He died in 1602. His ns in French were publiſhed in 1606,
He alſo wrote, De Cognatione Litte-m, 8vo.; Orationes et Præfationes, 8vo.;
Commentaries on Catullus, Tibullus, and Propertius, &c.—Moreri.

PASSERI (John Baptiſt), a painter and poet, was the diſciple of Dominichino. He wrote, "Lives of the Painters, Sculptors, and Architects," of his time. Paſſeri died at Rome in 1679. Joſeph Paſſeri, his nephew and pupil, excelled in portrait painting. He died in 1714.—D'Argenville.

PASSERI (John Baptiſt), a learned antiquary, was born at Gubio, in the duchy of Urbino, in 1694. He was bred to the law, but entered into orders, and became apoſtolic prothonotary and vicar-general of Peſara. He died in 1780. His works are, 1. Lucernæ fictiles muſei Paſſerii, 3 vols.; 2. On the Hiſtory of Foſſils; 3. Picturæ Etruſcorum in vaſculis, in unum collectæ, diſſertationibus illuſtratæ, 3 vols.; 4. Theſaurus, Gemmarum Aſtrii ferarum antiquarum, tom. 2 & 3; the firſt volume of this work was publiſhed by Gori; 5. Theſaurum Gemmarum Selectiſſimarum.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

PASSEROTTI (Bartholomew), a painter, was born at Bologna. He was the diſciple of Zucchero, and painted ſeveral church pieces; but his chief merit was in portrait painting. He died in 1595. His ſons, Tiburzio and Ventura, were alſo eminent painters.—De Piles. Pilkington.

PASQUALINO, an Italian painter of great merit, who died in 1700, aged 59. He painted converſations with ſpirit and elegance.—Ibid.

PASSINELLI (Lorenzo), an hiſtorical painter of Bologna, in which city are ſome capital pieces by him. He died in 1700, aged 71.—Ibid.

PASSIONEI (Dominic), a cardinal, was born of an illuſtrious family, at Foſſombrone, in the duchy of Urbino, in 1682. He formed a rich library and collection of manuſcripts. In 1706 he went to Paris, where he was much reſpected, particularly by Montfaucon; from thence he went to Holland, and was at the congreſs at Utrecht in 1712. He was employed in various negociations, particularly in Switzerland, of which he publiſhed an account under the title of "Acta Legationis Helveticæ" He pronounced the funeral oration of prince Eugene, and was made archbiſhop of Epheſus. He died in 1761.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

PATEL, a painter, commonly called by his countrymen the French Claude, from his imitation of that maſter. His landſcapes are very beautiful, but it is unknown when he lived.—D'Argenville.

PATER (Paul), a mathematician, was born in Hungary in 1656. Being a proteſtant he was obliged to quit his native country, on which he went to Thorn, where he obtained a profeſſorſhip. He was alſo librarian to the duke of Wolfenbuttle. He afterwards became profeſſor of mathematics at Dantzic, where he died in 1724. His principal works are, 1. Labor ſolis ſive de eclipſi Chriſto patiente Hieroſylymis viſa; 2. De Aſtrologia Perſica; 3. De Maria Caſpio; de Gælo Empyrio; 4. De inſignibus Turcicis, ex variis Superſtitionum tenebris Orientalium maxime illuſtratis, &c.—Moreri.

PATER (John Baptiſte), a landſcape painter, was born at Valenciennes in 1695. He had a good taſte for colouring, but neglected deſign. He died in 1736.—D'Argenville.

PATERSON (Samuel) an eminent bibliographer, was born in London in 1728. He received a principal part of his education in France, after which he ſettled in the Strand as a foreign bookſeller; but without ſucceſs. He next became an auctioneer, and having diſcovered the manuſcripts of Sir Julius Cæſar, which were about to be ſold as waſte paper, he digeſted a catalogue of them, and diſpoſed of them by auction for 350l. In 1776 he went to the Continent, and bought a capital collection of books, of which on his return he framed a catalogue, entitled, Bibliotheca Univerſalis Selecta. Soon after this he was appointed librarian to the marquis of Lanſdowne; and he was employed in forming catalogues of moſt great collections of books which were publicly ſold, as the libraries of Beauclerk, Crofts, Pinelli, &c. Mr. Paterſon wrote Curſory Remarks made upon a Journey through the Netherlands, by Coriat, junior, 3 vols. 12mo.; Joineriana, or Book of Scraps, 2 vols. 8vo.; the Templar, a periodical paper; Speculations on Law and Lawyers, 8vo. He died in 1802.—Monthly Mag. vol. xv.

PATERCULUS (Caius Velleïus), a Roman hiſtorian, who flouriſhed A.D. 8. He commanded the cavalry in Germany under Tiberius, and was rewarded with the prætorſhip. He wrote an epitome of the Roman hiſtory, which is extant.—Voſſius de Hiſt. Lat.

PATIN (Guy), a phyſician, was born in 1601 at Houdan, in the Beauvais. He was profeſſor of phyſic in the royal college of Paris, and diſtinguiſhed himſelf by his zeal in defending the ancients againſt the moderns, and in oppoſing the uſe of antimony as a medicine. He wrote a ſtrange work called the Martyrology of Antimony, or a liſt of perſons who he pretended were victims of that remedy. Patin died in 1672. He wrote Letters in 5 vols. and ſome medical books.—Moreri.

PATIN (Charles), ſon of the above, was born at Paris in 1633. He made a great progreſs in learning, and after travelling in various countries fixed his reſidence at Padua, where he became profeſſor of ſurgery, and chevalier of the order of St. Mark. He died in 1694. His works are, 1. Itinerarium Comitis Brienne; 2. Familiæ Romanæ ex antiquis numiſmatibus, folio; 3. Introduction to Hiſtory by the Knowledge of Medals, 12mo.; 4. Imperatorum Romanorum Numiſmata, fol.; 5. Travels in different Parts of Europe; 6. Practica della Medaglie; 7. Suetonius ex Numiſmatibus illuſtratus, 4to.; 8. De Optima Medicorum Secta, &c. The wife and two daughters of Patin were learned women, and members of the academy of Ricovrati at Padua, of which he was the director. They publiſhed ſome works.—Ibid.

PATKUL (John Reinhold), a Livonian gentleman who defended the liberties of his country with great firmneſs againſt the oppreſſions of Sweden. In 1689 he was deputed to addreſs a memorial on behalf of the diſtreſſed people of Livonia to Charles XI. who took it as an act of treaſon, and cauſed a proceſs to iſſue againſt Patkul, who was condemned to be beheaded. On this he fled to Ruſſia, and afterwards to Poland. When Charles XII. forced Auguſtus to make peace he made it one of the conditions that Patkul ſhould be delivered up, and this brave and unfortunate man was broken on the wheel in 1707.—Moreri.

PATRICK (St.), the tutelar ſaint of Ireland, is aſſerted by ſome to have been a native of Cornwall, and by others of Wales. In the Catalogue of Britiſh Saints he is ſaid to have been principal of a college in Wales, but was taken captive by ſome pirates of Ireland; the inhabitants of which country he converted to Chriſtianity. It appears certain that he was archbiſhop of Armagh, and founded many churches and ſchools of learning. He died about 460, aged 83. Sir James Ware publiſhed ſome pieces in Latin under the name of St. Patrick, at London in 1658, 2vo.—Ibid.

PATRICK (Peter), a native of Theſſalonica, who was employed by Juſtinian in important negociations, for which he was made maſter of the palace. He wrote "The Hiſtory of Ambaſſadors," in the collection of Byzantine hiſtorians, folio.—Moreri.

PATRICK (Simon), a learned divine, was born at Gainſborough, in Lincolnſhire, in 1626. He was educated at Queen's college, Cambridge, and on entering into orders obtained the living of Batterſea, in Surry, and afterwards that of St. Paul, Covent-garden. During the plague of 1665 he continued in London, adminiſtering the offices of religion to his pariſhioners. Dr. Patrick was made dean of Peterborough in 1678, and in 1689 biſhop of Chicheſter; from whence he was tranſlated to Ely in 1691. He died in 1707. He is well known for his valuable commentary on the Old Teſtament, uſually publiſhed with Lowth on the Prophets, and Whitby on the New Teſtament. He was alſo the author of ſome controverſial tracts againſt the Romaniſts and Diſſenters, and ſeveral books of practical divinity.—Biog. Brit.

PATRIX (Peter), a French poet, was born at Caen in 1585, and died at Paris in 1672. His poems, which are generally feeble, turn on religious ſubjects; the moſt known is one which has been tranſlated into Engliſh er the name of the Dream, " I dreamt, buried in my fellow clay, &c."—Moreri.

PATRIZI (Francis), or Patricius, biſhop of ta, in Italy, where he died in 1494. was the author of, 1. Dialogues, in Ita- on the Manner of Studying and Writ- Hiſtory, 4to.; 2. De Regno et Regis In- tione, folio.; 3. De Inſtitutione Rei- icæ; 4. Del vero Reggimento; 5. nata de Antiquitate Sinarum.—Tira-

PATRIZI (Francis), a native of Cherſo, tria. He taught philoſophy at Ferrara, a, and Rome, with great reputation. lied in the laſt city in 1597, aged 67. izi, who was an enemy to Ariſtotle's oſophy, publiſhed an edition of the works outed to Mercurius Triſmegſtus; and e Paralleli Militari, or a parallel be- n the ancient military art and the mo- He was alſo the author of Italian s.—Ibid.

PATRU (Oliver), an eminent lawyer, was at Paris in 1604. His talents pro- d him a place in the French academy in ; on which occaſion he made an elegant h, and this gave riſe to the cuſtom for ew members to deliver introductory ora- . The critical judgment of Patru was eat that he was called the Quintilian of ce, and Vaugelas regarded him as an e. He died in 1681. His works were ed in 1732, in 2 vols. 4to.—Moreri.

PATTEN (Thomas), a learned divine, was educated at Corpus Chriſti college, rd, of which he became fellow. He his degree of D.D. in 1754. Dr. Patten preſented to the rectory of Childery in hire, where he died in 1790. He was uthor of, 1. The Chriſtian Apology, a on, 8vo.; 2. St. Peter's Chriſtian Apo- as ſet forth in a ſermon, preached and er illuſtrated and maintained againſt the tions of the rev. Ralph Heathcote, 8vo.; he Sufficiency of the external Evidence e Goſpel farther ſupported againſt the y of the rev. Mr. Heathcote, 8vo; 4. Oppoſition between the Goſpel of Jeſus, what is called the Religion of Nature, a on; 5. King David vindicated from a Miſrepreſentation of his Character, 8vo. —Europ. Mag.

PATTISON (William), an Engliſh poet, born at Peaſmarſh, in Suſſex, in 1706, ducated firſt at Appleby ſchool in Weſt- land, and next at Sidney college, Cam- e, which he left without taking a de- He then ſettled in London, and was yed by Curll, the bookſeller, in whoſe he died of the ſmall pox in 1727. His al works were printed in 2 vols. 12mo. 28.—Gen. Biog. Dict. Cibber.

PATU (Claude Peter), a dramatic writer, born at Paris in 1729, and died in 1757. rote ſome comedies, and tranſlated others the Engliſh, which were well received. ew. Dict. Hiſt.

PAUCTON (Alexis), a mathematician, was born near Laſſay, in Mayenne, in 1732. He received his education in the mathematical and naval academy at Nantes, after which he went to Paris, where his integrity and talents procured him patronage and a place. He died in 1799. His works are, 1. Theory of the Force of Archimedes, 12mo.; 2. Metrology, or a Treatiſe on the Weights, Meaſures, and Monies of all Countries ancient and modern; 3. Theory of the Laws of Nature, with a Diſſertation on the Pyramids of Egypt.—Ibid.

PAVILLON (Nicholas), a French divine, was born in 1597. Cardinal Richelieu made him biſhop of Alet, where he introduced a reform among the clergy, and inſtituted a number of ſchools; but ſome enemies accuſed him to the government, and Pavillon refuſing to ſubmit to the regale was diſgraced. He died in 1677. He wrote paſtoral pieces, and other religious works.—Moreri.

PAVILLON (Stephen), nephew of the above, was born at Paris in 1652. He was a member of the French academy, and of that of inſcriptions, and firſt diſtinguiſhed himſelf as advocate general to the parliament of Metz: but the delicacy of his conſtitution, and the love of repoſe, occaſioned him to withdraw from public life. He died in 1705. His poems were printed in 1720, 2 vols. 12mo. In proſe he wrote the Portrait of Pure Love; Diſintereſted Counſels; and other moral pieces, which ſhew juſt ſentiment and a good judgment.—Ibid.

PAUL (St.), originally called Saul, an apoſtle of Jeſus Chriſt, was born at Tarſus, of Jewiſh parents, and educated in the ſchool of the phariſees under Gamaliel. He was very zealous againſt the goſpel, was preſent at the martyrdom of Stephen, and commiſſioned by the Sanhedrim to go to Damaſcus to perſecute the Chriſtians. But on the road he was overpowered by the appearance of our Saviour, and Saul entered Damaſcus a diſciple, and was received into the church by the name of Paul. After this he became a diſtinguiſhed preacher of Chriſtianity, and denominated the apoſtle of the gentiles. His eloquence was ſo great that it made Felix tremble, converted Dionyſius the areopagite at Athens, and drew from Longinus expreſſions of admiration. The epiſtles of St. Paul are models of pathetic remonſtrance and cloſe reaſoning. He was beheaded at Rome A.D. 66.—Cave.

PAUL III. (pope). His name was Alexander Farneſe, and he was elected to the papal chair in 1534. In his reign the council of Trent was called; he eſtabliſhed the inquiſition, confirmed the ſociety of jeſuits, condemned the interim of Charles V. and acted with rigour againſt Henry VIII. of England. Paul died in 1549, aged 82.—Dupin. Moreri.

PAUL IV. (John Peter Caraffa), was elected in 1555, at the age of eighty. He was a bigoted prelate; and when queen Elizabeth announced to him by the Engliſh ambaſſador her acceſſion to the throne, he haughtily declared that the kingdom was a fief of the holy ſee, and that ſhe had no right to aſſume the crown without his leave, particularly as ſhe was illegitimate. In 1559 he iſſued a flaming bull againſt heretics, and died the ſame year, generally diſliked. He wrote on the creed, and other works.—Ibid.

PAUL V. (Camillus Borgheſe), was elected in 1605, after the death of Leo XI. He had a diſpute with the ſenate of Venice, over which he pretended to have a right, but it was ſo firmly reſiſted that the pope excommunicated the doge and ſenate. He alſo raiſed forces againſt the republic, but by the interference of the emperor and other ſtates peace was reſtored in 1607. He ornamented Rome with many excellent works of ſculpture and painting, and an aqueduct. He died in 1621, aged 69.—Ibid.

PAUL PETROWITZ, emperor of Ruſſia, was the ſon of Peter III. and Catharine II., and born in 1754. He married Wilhelmina, daughter of the landgrave of Heſſe Darmſtadt, who died two years after their union in 1776. Paul took for his ſecond wife the princeſs of Wirtemberg, niece of the great king of Pruſſia. In 1796, by the death of his mother, he ſucceeded to the throne, and for ſome time gave promiſing hopes of proving a great prince. In 1799 he entered into the war againſt France, and ſent Suwarrow with a large army into Italy; but on a ſudden Paul changed his ſentiments, recalled his forces, formed a northern confederacy, and ſeized the perſons and property of the Engliſh in his dominions. His conduct to his ſubjects alſo became capricious and diſguſting; and he died ſuddenly, or rather was aſſaſſinated in 1801. This alteration in the emperor is ſaid to have been occaſioned by means of a favourite French miſtreſs ſent to Ruſſia for the purpoſe of gaining his affections.—Gent. Mag. Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

PAUL OF SAMOSATA, an hereſiarch of the third century, received his ſurname from the place of his birth, a city on the Euphrates. He became patriarch of Antioch in 260, and being entertained at the court of Zenobia, queen of Syria, he endeavoured to gain her to the chriſtian faith, by explaining away its myſteries. For this purpoſe he held that Chriſt was a mere man, and that the Trinity conſiſted not of perſons but attributes. His errors were condemned in the council of Antioch, A.D. 270, and Paul was excommunicated. His diſciples were called Pauliniſts.—Dupin. Moſheim.

PAUL, the Silentiary, ſo called from an office which he held in the ſacred palace at Conſtantinople, flouriſhed under the emperor Juſtinian in the 6th century. He wrote a Hiſtory, in Greek verſe, of the Church of St. Sophia; Epigrams, &c.—Moreri.

PAUL de Santa Maria, a learned jew, was a native of Burgos, and is ſaid to have been converted to chriſtianity by reading the works of Aquinas. After the death of his wife he entered into orders, and became preceptor to John II. king of Caſtille, who made him biſhop of Carthagena, and afterwards of Burgos. He died in 1445. Some ſay he was patriarch of Aquileia. He wrote Scrutinium Scripturarum, fol. 1474. His three ſons were baptized with him; the eldeſt became biſhop of Burgos, and wrote a Hiſtory of Spain; the ſecond was biſhop of Placentia; and the third, Alvarez, wrote the Hiſtory of John II. King of Caſtille.—Ibid.

PAUL (Mark), a Venetian of the 13th century, who viſited the capital of Cublai Chan, the ſixth monarch in deſcent from the great Genghis Chan. The city of Cambalu, which he deſcribes as the ſeat of the empire, is ſuppoſed to be the modern Pekin.—Ibid.

PAUL, deacon of Aquileia, who wrote the Hiſtory of the Lombards; Lives of the Saints, and of the Biſhops of Metz; alſo a work called Hiſtoria Miſcella. He was ſecretary to Didier, king of the Lombards, and afterwards in the ſervice of Charlemagne, who baniſhed him to an iſland in the Adriatic ſea on a falſe accuſation of having conſpired againſt him. The prince of Benevento invited him to his court, and on the death of that prince Paul embraced the monaſtic life, and died about 801.—Ib.

PAULA (St.), a Roman lady, was born in 347, and deſcended from the Scipios and the Gracchi. On becoming a widow ſhe retired to Bethlehem, where ſhe founded a monaſtery and houſes of hoſpitality, of which St. Jerome had the management. She practiſed the ſevereſt auſterities and ſelf-denial, which Jerome, in vain, endeavoured to moderate. Paula was acquainted with the ſcriptures in the original Hebrew, in which ſhe had Jerome for her maſter. She died in 407.—Dupin. Baillet vies des Saints.

PAULET (William), marquis of Wincheſter, was the ſon of ſir John Paulet of Somerſetſhire. He enjoyed ſeveral offices under Henry VIII., Edward the VIth., Mary, and Elizabeth. Being aſked how he contrived to maintain his ſituation in ſuch perilous times, wherein ſo many great changes had taken place in church and ſtate, he anſwered, by being a willow, and not an oak. He died in 1572, aged 97.—Engliſh Peerage.

PAULI (Simon), profeſſor of medicine in the univerſity of Copenhagen, and firſt phyſician to the king of Denmark. Chriſtiern V. gave him the biſhopric of Arrhuſen. He died in 1680, aged 77. He wrote a Treatiſe on Malignant Fevers; another againſt Tobacco and Tea; Flora Danica, 4to; and other works.—Niceron.

PAULINUS (St.), biſhop of Nola, was born at Bourdeaux about 353. He diſcharged the office of conſul in 373, and about the me time married a Spaniſh lady, by whoſe means he embraced chriſtianity. He then retired to Spain with his wife, where Paulinus beſtowed his goods in charity, and led a life of mortification. In 393 he entered into orders, and going to Italy, was choſen biſhop of Nola. He died in 431. Paulinus wrote ſome Latin Poems, Letters, and other works. There was another ſaint of this name who was patriarch of Aquilea, and diſtinguiſhed himſelf at the council of Frankfort in 794. He died in 804. He wrote a Treatiſe on the Trinity.—Dupin. Moreri.

PAULMIER DE GRENTEMESNIL (Julian le), a French phyſician, was the diſciple of Fernel, and when all the other phyſicians had reduced Charles IX. to a very bad ſtate Paulmier ſucceeded in reſtoring him. He afterwards attached himſelf to the duke of Anjou, whom he accompanied to the Low Countries, where he diſtinguiſhed himſelf in his own profeſſion and as a ſoldier. He died at Caen in 1588. His works are, 1. De Vino et Pomaceo; 2. De Lue Venerea; 3. De Morbis Contagioſis. His ſon James was born in 1587, and educated by his parents in the reformed religion. He died in 1670. His works are, 1. Obſervationes in optimos Auctores Græcos, 4to.; 2. Deſcription of ancient Greece, 4to.; 3. Poems, Greek, Latin, French, Italian, and Spaniſh. —Moreri. Niceron.

PAULMY (Mark Antony René de Voyer, marquis de), miniſter of ſtate and a member of the French academy, was the ſon of the marquis de Argenſon, and born at Valenciennes in 1722. He collected one of the moſt magnificent libraries in Europe, which was ſold to the count d'Artois, brother to Louis XVI. M. de Paulmy publiſhed Melanges d'une grande Bibliotheque, 8 vols. 8vo. To him alſo is attributed a work entitled, Eſſays in the Style of thoſe of Montaigne, 9 vols. 8vo. 1778. He died in 1787.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

PAUSANIAS, the ſon of Cleombrotus king of Sparta, governed the kingdom for his brother during his minority. He alſo diſtinguiſhed great ſkill and valour in the war againſt Athens, which city he took and expelled the ten tyrants. Pauſanias afterwards ſerved againſt the Perſians with equal bravery; but being diſcontented with his country, he entered into a ſecret treaty with the king of Perſia, which being diſcovered by the ephori, to avoid the puniſhment due to his treaſon he fled into the temple of Minerva, which being held ſacred, the Lacedemonians blocked it up with ſtones, the firſt of which was placed by Pauſanias's mother. He was there ſtarved to death, B.C. 474.—Cornelius Nepos.

PAUSANIAS, a Greek hiſtorian and orator in the ſecond century, who ſettled at Rome in the reign of Antoninus the philoſopher. Pauſanias wrote, Travels in Greece, the beſt edition of which is that of Kuhnius, 1696, folio.—Voſſius de Hiſt. Græc.

PAUSIAS, a painter of Sicyon, and the diſciple of Pamphilus, flouriſhed about 352 B.C. He was the firſt who applied colours to wood and ivory by fire, now called encauſtic painting. He drew a beautiful picture of his miſtreſs Glycere, which was brought by Lucullus for two talents. After Pauſias's death, the Sicyonians ſold his pictures to Scaurus, the grandſon of Sylla, who built a gallery for them at Rome.—Plinii Nat. Hiſt.

PAUTRE (Anthony le), an architect, was born at Paris, in which city he built the church of the religious of Port Royal, and other works. He excelled in the ornamental parts of his edifices. He was a member of the academy of ſculpture; and his works were publiſhed at Paris in 1652, folio. A relation of his, John le Pautre, born at Paris in 1617, was a member of the academy of painting and ſculpture. He became an excellent deſigner and engraver, eſpecially of architectural ornaments. He died in 1682. His plates have been collected in 3 vols. folio. Peter le Pautre, ſon of the laſt mentioned, applied to ſculpture, and became director of the academy of St. Luke at Rome, where he executed a fine groupe of Æneas and Anchiſes. One of his greateſt works is a Lucretia ſtabbing herſelf. Pautre died in 1744, aged 84.—D'Argenville.

PAUW (Cornelius), a learned writer, was born at Amſterdam, and died near Aix la Chapelle in 1799. He is known by his Diſcourſes on the Greeks, the Americans, the Egyptians, and the Chineſe, 7 vols. 8vo. Theſe works are curious, and ſhew conſiderable ability, but they are too conjectural. There was another of this name who lived at Utrecht, and publiſhed ſeveral valuable editions of Greek authors, particularly Anacreon, in 1732, 4to.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

PAYNE (Nevil), a dramatic author in the reign of Charles II. His plays are, Fatal Jealouſy, a tragedy; The Morning Ramble, or the Town Humours, a comedy; The Siege of Conſtantinople, a tragedy, 4to. 1675. —Biog. Dram.

PAYNE (Roger), a bookbinder, who was remarkable for the elegance and ſtrength of his binding. He was chiefly employed on ſcarce books, for binding of which he had an extraordinary price. An Æſchylus done by him for earl Spencer coſt fifteen guineas the binding. Payne lived in a cellar, and never, worked while he had any money. He made all his own tools, and would never ſuffer any perſon to ſee him at work. He died at St. Martin's lane in 1797, and was buried at the expenſe of a bookſeller of the ſame name, but not a relation.—Gent. Mag.

PAYS (Renatus le), a French poet, was born at Nantes in 1636. He was comptroller-general of the impoſts in Provence, and publiſhed a miſcellany in proſe and verſe, entitled, "Amities, Amours, and Amorettes," 1685, 12mo. He died in 1690. He was alſo the author of a romance called Zelotide, and other pieces of a like kind.—Moreri.

PEACOCK (Reginald), a worthy prelate, was ſucceſſively biſhop of St. Aſaph and Chiceſter, by the favour of Humphrey, the good duke of Glouceſter. But he was depoſed for reſiſting the papal authority, and denying tranſubſtantiation, with other articles of the roman catholic faith. He was obliged to recant his notions, and his books were publicly burnt. He then retired to an abbey, where he died about 1486.—Life by Biſhop Peacock, 8vo.

PEARS (William), a dramatic writer in the reign of Charles I. He was a ſtudent at Eton, where he wrote a piece, entitled, "Love in its Extaſy; or, the Large Prerogative," publiſhed in 4to. in 1649, which is all that is known of him.—Biog. Dram.

PEARCE (Zachary), a learned prelate, was born in 1690, and educated at Weſtminſter ſchool, from whence he was elected to Trinity college, Cambridge, where he wrote ſome papers in the Guardian and Spectator. He publiſhed an excellent edition of Longinus in 1724, and the ſame year obtained his doctor's degree. When Woolſton rudely attacked the miracles of our Saviour, he was replied to by Dr. Pearce, in an anonymous pamphlet, entitled, a Vindication of the Miracles, which went through ſeveral editions. Dr. Pearce was preferred to the deanry of Wincheſter in 1739, advanced to the ſee of Bangor in 1748, and in 1756 tranſlated to Rocheſter, with the deanry of Weſtminſter annexed. Some time before his death he ſolicited leave to reſign his preferments; as this however was unuſual, it was refuſed with reſpect to the biſhopric, but he was permitted to give up the deanry, which was given to Dr. Thomas. Biſhop Pearce died in 1774. Beſides the above he publiſhed, a Review of the Text of Milton; on the Origin of Temples; an Account of Trinity college, Cambridge, and other works. After his death were publiſhed his Commentary on the Goſpels and Acts, 2 vols. quarto; and Sermons in 4 vols. 8vo.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

PEARSON (John), an eminent Engliſh biſhop, was born at Snoring, in Norfolk, in 1612. He received his education at Eton, from whence he was elected to King's college, Cambridge. In 1640 he obtained the living of Terrington in Norfolk, and in 1650 was choſen miniſter of St. Clement, Eaſt Cheap, London. He was promoted to the biſhopric of Cheſter in 1673, and died in 1686. Biſhop Pearſon is principally known by his valuable Expoſition on the Creed, of which there have been ſeveral editions. He alſo wrote Vindiciæ Ignatii, or a Defence of the Epiſtles of St. Ignatius, and other learned works.—Biog. Brit.

PECHANTRE (Nicholas de), a French poet, was born at Toulouſe in 1638. He gained the poetical prize from the academy des Jeux Floraux three times. His tragedy of Geta was performed at Paris in 1687 with great applauſe. This was followed by Jugurtha, the Death of Nero, and ſome others. Pechantre died in 1708.—Moreri.

PECHLIN (John Nicholas), a phyſician, was born at Leyden in 1667. He became profeſſor of medicine at Kiel, and firſt phyſician to the duke of Holſtein-Gottorp, who appointed him preceptor to the hereditary prince. Pechlin died at Stockholm in 1706. His chief works are, 1. De Purgantium medicamentorum facultatibus; 2. De vulneribus ſclopetorum; 3. De æris et alimenti defectu et vita ſub aquis; 4. De habitu et colore Æthiopum; 5. A Panegyric on Tea, in a poetic ſtyle, in Latin; 6. Obſervationum phyſico-medicarum.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

PECHMEJA (John), a French writer, was born at Villa Franca in 1741. He became profeſſor of elocution in the college of La Fleche, and died in 1785. His eulogy on Colbert was crowned with the approbation of the academy in 1773; but he is principally known by a work in poetic proſe, called, Telephe, 2 vols.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

PECK (Francis), an eminent antiquary, was born at Stamford, in Lincolnſhire, in 1692, and educated at Cambridge, where he took his degrees in arts. He obtained the living of Godeby in Leiceſterſhire, where he died in 1743. Mr. Peck wrote, the Annals of Stamford; the Life of Milton, 4to.; and publiſhed a collection of Hiſtorical Tracts, entitled, Deſiderata Curioſa, folio.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

PECKWELL (Henry), an Engliſh divine, was born in 1747. He became a popular preacher among the Calviniſtic methodiſts, and obtained the rectory of Bloxham in Lincolnſhire, but lived chiefly in London, where he ſtudied anatomy and phyſic, that he might be the more ſerviceable to the ſick of his ſociety. Opening the body of a young perſon who died of a putrid fever, he ſlightly wounded himſelf in the hand, and this turning to a mortification he died in 1787. Dr. Peckwell printed ſeveral ſermons.—Gent. Mag.

PECQUET (John), a phyſician, was born at Dieppe. He diſcovered the lacteal vein that conveys the chyle to the heart, and which is therefore called the reſervoir of Pecquet. In 1654 he publiſhed a work entitled "Experimenta nova Anatomica," and in 1661, another, "De Thoracis Lacteis." He died at Paris in 1674.—Moreri. Haller Bibl. Anat.

PECQUET (Anthony), a French writer, was born in 1704, and died in 1762. He was grand maſter of the water-works and foreſts of Rouen, and ſuperintendant of the military ſchool. His principal works are, Analyſis of the Spirit of Laws, and the Spirit of Political Maxims, 3 vols; the Foreſt Laws of France, 2 vols; Thoughts

ſan. He alſo tranſlated the Paſtor Fido uarini, and other Italian works, into h.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

ELE (George), a dramatic writer in reign of queen Elizabeth, was a na- of Devonſhire, and a ſtudent of Chriſt h college, Oxford, where he took his e of M.A. in 1579. He was a good ral poet, and his plays were acted great applauſe in the univerſity.— A.O.

IRESC (Nicholas Claude Fabri, ſeigneur was born in Provence in 1580, of a y originally from Italy. He ſtudied at under the jeſuits, after which he viſited us univerſities, and took his doctor's e at Aix in 1604. His Theſis on that on was greatly admired. Viſiting ſoon after, he obtained the friendſhip e moſt learned men in that city, parti- ly De Thou, and Caſaubon. From e he made a voyage to England, and received with marks of diſtinction by s I. He next went to Holland, and ne acquainted with Julius Scaliger and us. On his return to France he was tted a counſellor of the parliament of where he died in 1636. The learning eiresc was various and profound; and rticularly excelled in the knowledge of ls. He wrote, Hiſtoria Provinciæ cæ Narbonenſis; Nobilium ejuſdem nciæ familiarum Origines; Commen- rerum omnium memoria dignarum ſua geſtarum; Nummi Gallici, Saxonici, nnici, &c. Linguæ Orientales, &c. &c. ſe by Gaſſendi. Bayle.

LAGIUS I. (pope), was a native of e, and aſcended the papal chair in 555. ndeavoured to reform the clergy; and the city was beſieged by the Goths, he ned from Totila, their general, many ſſions in favour of the citizens. He in 560.—Platina and Bower.

LAGIUS II. ſucceeded Benedict I. in He oppoſed John, patriarch of Con- nople, who had aſſumed the title of menical biſhop. Pelagius died of the e in 590.—Ibid.

LAGIUS, the founder of a hereſy in 6th century, was a native of Wales. eal name was Morgan, which he changed e Greek appellation of Pelagius. He is ſed to have been a monk of Bangor, vent to reſide at Rome, where he denied octrine of original ſin, and maintained will. He afterwards retired with his i Celeſtius to the Holy Land, where ius is ſuppoſed to have died. His opi- were condemned in the council of Car- .—Dupin. Moſheim.

LETIER (Claude le), was born at Paris 30. He was the friend of Bignon, La- non, Deſpreaux, and other learned men. ecame ſucceſſively counſellor of the cha- , and of the parliament, preſident of the ber of requeſts, and provoſt of the mer- s. The quay at Paris which bears his name was built by him. He ſucceeded Colbert as comptroller of the finances in 1683. Six years afterwards he reſigned his place, and in 1697 he retired from court to lead a life of ſtudy and devotion. He died in 1711. His principal works are, the Body of Canon Law in Latin, folio; Comes Senectutis & Comes Ruſticus. His brother Michael was counſellor of ſtate, and occupied other diſtinguiſhed offices, which he quitted at the age of 80, and retired into the abbey of St. Victor at Paris, where he died in 1725. He was a member of the academy of inſcriptions, and has ſome articles in the memoirs of that ſociety.—Moreri.

PELL (John), a mathematician and divine, was born at Southwick in Suſſex in 1610, and educated firſt at Cambridge, and afterwards at Oxford. In 1643 he went to Amſterdam, where he became profeſſor of mathematics; but afterwards he removed to Breda, and read lectures with applauſe. In 1652 he returned to England, and was ſent by Cromwell as reſident to the proteſtant cantons of Switzerland. In 1661 he was ordained by the biſhop of Lincoln, and the ſame year was preſented to the rectory of Fobbing in Eſſex. He died poor in 1685. Dr. Pell wrote, 1. Controverſia cum Chriſtiano Longomontano de vera circuli menſura, 4to.; 2. an Idea of the Mathematics, 12mo.; 3. a Table of 10,000 ſquare numbers, &c. folio; 4. an Inaugural Oration at Breda; 5. Demonſtration of the ſecond and tenth books of Euclid; and ſeveral letters, &c. in manuſcript.—Hutton. Martin.

PELLEGRIN (Simon Joſeph), a French poet and eccleſiaſtic, was born at Marſeilles. He obtained, in 1704, the prize of the academy for his "Epiſtle to the King on the ſucceſs of his arms." He entered into the religious order of the Servites, but afterwards he obtained leave to remove into that of Cluny. He wrote ſeveral pieces for the theatres, and dramatized the hiſtory of the Old and New Teſtament, the Pſalms of David, &c. He alſo tranſlated into French the works of Horace, with notes, 2 vols. He died in 1745.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

PELLEGRINI (Antonio), an hiſtorical painter, was born at Padua in 1674, and died in 1741. He came to England with the duke of Mancheſter, and painted ſeveral fine pictures in this country.—Pilkington.

PELLEGRINI (Camillus), a celebrated antiquary was born at Capua in Italy in 1598. He was the firſt who formed the plan of collecting into a regular ſeries the ſcattered, partial, and inſulated hiſtories and chronicles of the middle ages, which deſign was afterwards carried into effect by Muratori and others. His Apparato Alle Antichita di Capua, appeared in 1651; and his Hiſtoria Principium Longobardorum was publiſhed at Naples in 1749. He died in 1663.

PELLEGRINO (of Modena), was born in 1511. He was of the ſchool of Raphael, and employed in the Vatican. He died of a wound received in endeavouring to reſcue his ſon, who had committed a murder.—De Piles.

PELLEGRINO (Tibaldi), called Pellegrin of Bologna, an eminent painter and architect, died in 1592, aged 70. He was employed upon the church of St. Ambroſe at Milan; and afterwards was invited to Spain, where he diſplayed his talents in the Eſcurial both as a painter and architect, for which he was created a marquis —D'Argenville.

PELLERIN (Joſeph), a medallic writer, who died at Paris in 1782, aged 99. He was commiſſary general and firſt clerk of the French marine. His cabinet of medals, in purchaſing which he was aſſiſted by the king, was very large and valuable. He publiſhed nine quarto volumes illuſtrative of medals, with plates.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

PELLETIER (James), a phyſician, was born at Mans, in 1517. His writings are numerous; the principal are, Commentaries on Euclid, in Latin; Deſcription of Savoy; a Treatiſe on the Plague; poetic works; Dialogues on Orthography, in which he propoſed to write words according to their pronunciation. He died principal of the college of Mans at Paris, in 1582.—Moreri.

PELLETIER (John le), a learned writer, was born at Rouen in 1633. In his youth he ſtudied painting, which he abandoned for literature, and without a maſter acquired a knowlege of the ancient and modern languages, mathematics, phyſic, and chemiſtry. He died in 1711. His works are, 1. A Diſſertation on Noah's Ark; 2. Diſcourſes in the Journal de Travoux; 3. A tranſlation of Leti's Life of Sixtus V.; and another of ſir Robert Naunton's Fragmenta Regalia from the Engliſh.—Ibid.

PELLETIER (Gaſpard), a phyſician, of Middleburg in Zealand, who acquired a great reputation by his practice, and died in 1659. He wrote Plantarum, tum patriarum, tum exoticarum in Walachia Zelandiæ inſula naſcentium, ſynonyma, 8vo. 1610.—Haleri Bibl. Botan.

PELLETIER (Bertrand), a French chemiſt, was born at Bayonne, in 1761. He ſettled as an apothecary at Paris, where, on account of his chemical knowlege, he was elected a member of the academy, and afterwards of the inſtitute. He publiſhed obſervations on arſenic, and aſſiſted in the Journal of Natural Hiſtory. He died in 1797.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

PELLICAN (Conrad), a learned divine, was born in Alſace, in 1478. He entered into the order of cordeliers, and had the charge of a convent at Baſle; but turning proteſtant he went to Zurich, where he became Hebrew profeſſor, and died in 1556. His works, which are chiefly illuſtrations of the Scriptures, make 7 vols. folio. Father Simon gives them a high character.—Melch. Adam Vit. Germ. Theol.

PELLISSON-FONTANIER (Paul), a French writer, was born at Beziers in 1624, and bred to the bar, which profeſſion he quitted. Having written the hiſtory of the origin of the French academy, he was choſen a member. Fouche became his patron, but when that miniſter was diſgraced Pelliſſon was ſent to the Baſtille, where he was confined four years. On his releaſe he received a penſion, and became a favourite of Louis XIV. whom he attended in his campaigns. He died in 1693. He wrote the Hiſtory of Louis XIV.; the Life of Anne of Auſtria; Hiſtory of the Conqueſt of Franche-Comté; Hiſtorical Letters; Poems; Reflections on Differences in Religion; Treatiſe on the Euchariſt, &c.—Moreri.

PELLOUTIER (Simon), a proteſtant divine of Berlin, and member of the academy in that city, was a native of Leipſic, and died in 1757, aged 63. He wrote a Hiſtory of the Celts, and particularly of the Gauls and Germans, 2 vols. 4to.—Nouv. Dict.

PELOPIDAS, a Theban general, who inherited from his father a large fortune, which he diſpoſed of liberally among his fellow citizens. There was the cloſeſt amity between him and Epaminondas, from which friendſhip the Thebans derived the moſt important benefits. When the Lacedemonians gained the ſovereignty of Thebes, Pelopidas went to Athens, where he aſſembled the reſt of his exiled countrymen, with whom he returned, and in one night ſeized upon Thebes, and broke the yoke by which it had been oppreſſed. This was B.C. 378. Afterwards he defeated the Lacedemonians at Tigyra, and with Epaminondas ſhared the great victory of Leuctra. He was next ſent by his countrymen on an embaſſy to Artaxerxes, king of Perſia, who received him with honour and granted his requeſt. On his return he perſuaded his countrymen to make war againſt Alexander, tyrant of Phares, by whom he was taken priſoner, but was reſcued by Epaminondas. He fell ſhortly after in battle, B.C. 364.—Plutarch. Corn. Nepos.

PEMBERTON (Henry), a learned phyſician of London, who was fellow of the royal ſociety, and diſtinguiſhed himſelf by an excellent work, entitled, a View of Sir Iſaac Newton's Philoſophy, in one volume quarto. He was alſo the author of a Treatiſe on Chemiſtry. Dr. Pemberton died at an advanced age in 1771.

PEMBLE (William), an Engliſh divine, was tutor, and divinity reader of Magdalen hall, Oxford, and a great ornament to that univerſity. He died in 1623, aged only 32. His works were printed in one volume folio, and poſſeſs conſiderable merit.—Wood.

PEMBROKE (Thomas), an Engliſh painter, was the pupil of Larroon, whoſe manner he imitated. He painted ſeveral pictures for the earl of Bath, and died in London about 1730, at the age of 28.—Walpole.

PENN (William), an Engliſh admiral, was born at Briſtol, in 1621. He commanded the fleet, and Venables the land forces, at aking of Jamaica, in 1655. The ſame he was elected member of parliament Weymouth. He was ſent to the tower Cromwell, for quitting his command out leave, but was ſoon releaſed. After reſtoration he ſerved under the duke of c, in the ſucceſsful battle with the Dutch , in 1664, for which he was knighted. died at Wanſtead, in Eſſex, in 1670.—Campbell's Admirals.

PENN (William), an eminent quaker, the ſon of the above, and born in Lon- in 1644. He received a good educa- , which was completed at Chriſt church, ord; but he diſappointed his father's ex- ations by turning quaker, and was diſ- ed by him. Young Penn, however, was irmed in his opinions by Thomas Loe, a ing quaker, with whom he travelled to agate this new faith. At Cork in Ire- , he was taken up for preaching and ſent riſon, but was releaſed through the in- ſt of his father. After his return to land he was ſent to the Tower, on account book which he had written, and while e he compoſed his principal work, en- d, "No Croſs, no Crown;" intended new the benefit of ſuffering. On his re- e he went on in the ſame courſe, and apprehended with ſome others, and tried preaching at a conventicle in Grace- rch-ſtreet The jury perſiſted in finding n not guilty, and were ſent to priſon for ng contrary to the dictates of the judge. miral Penn was reconciled to his ſon be- his death, and left him all his property. continued firm in his attachment to the nds, and went on a miſſion to Holland Germany, with Fox and Barclay. In 11 he obtained from the crown, in lieu of arrears due to his father, the grant of province in North America, now called nſylvania. Penn took over with him a ony of quakers, and founded Philadelphia; before he entered upon poſſeſſion he made reaty with the Indians. The code of s which he formed for the government of province was ſimple, but would have e honour to the profoundeſt legiſlators. n died at Beaconsfield in Berkſhire, of an plexy, in 1718. His works are nume- s.—Biog. Brit.

PENNANT (Thomas), an eminent natu- ſt and antiquary, was born at Downing, family ſeat in Flintſhire, in 1726. After iving his grammatical education at Wrex- n ſchool, he was ſent to Oxford, where principally applied to the ſtudy of natural oſophy. After travelling over England, went abroad, and was introduced to Vol- e, Buffon, Linnæus, and other eminent n. In 1750 he publiſhed the Britiſh Zoo- y, a work of conſiderable merit. In 1771 eared his Tour in Scotland, which paſſed ough ſeveral editions. This was followed, different periods, by a great number of enious performances, as Tours in Wales; ourney from Cheſter to London; an Ac- count of London, &c. He alſo publiſhed his Literary Memoirs; and at the time of his death was engaged on a deſcription of India, of which one volume was printed. This ingenious and indefatigable man died at Downing in 1798.—Europ Mag. Necrology.

PENNI (John Francis), a painter, was born at Florence in 1488. He was the diſciple of Raphael, to whom he became ſteward, on which account he obtained the title of il fattore. He painted landſcapes, in a fine ſtyle. He died in 1528. His brother Lucas was alſo a good artiſt, and painted ſome pictures in France and England.—Pilkington.

PENNICUIK (Alexander), a phyſician of New-hall, in the county of Edinburgh, was deſcended from an ancient family of that place, and his father had been ſurgeon in the Swediſh army under the famous general Bannier. Dr. Pennicuik, the ſon, was born in 1652, and after ſpending his youth abroad, returned and died in his own country in 1722. He wrote a topographical account of Tweedale, and a number of poems characteriſtic of the manners of the gentry and peaſantry in his time. He is alſo ſaid to have given to Allan Ramſay, the plot of his Gentle Shepherd, the ſcenes of which were laid on his eſtate of New-hall.—Private Communication.

PENNINGTON (Iſaac), a quaker, was born in 1617. He was one of the firſt and moſt zealous diſciples of George Fox, and wrote ſeveral pieces in defence of quakeriſm. He alſo ſuffered impriſonment ſeveral times, and died at Goodneſtone in Suſſex, in 1679. He is not to be confounded with Iſaac Pennington, lord mayor of London in 1640. He headed moſt of the riots againſt Charles I. and was one of that king's judges. At the reſtoration he was tried and condemned, but reſpited, and died in the Tower. From a curious print of him it ſhould ſeem that he alſo became a quaker.—Sewell's Hiſt. Quakers. Granger.

PENNY (Thomas), an ingenious naturaliſt, who was fellow of the college of phyſicians, London. He had been a great traveller, and reſided a conſiderable time in Switzerland, and alſo in the Iſland of Majorca, from whence he brought the plant called Hypericum Valeraricum, but honoured by Cluſius with the name of Myrto ciſtus Pennæi. He explored moſt parts of England in ſearch of plants, and made large communications to Lobel, Gerard, Geſner, and other botaniſts. He alſo wrote letters on inſects, which are in Trew's collections.—Pulteney's Sketches.

PENRUDDOCK (colonel John), a brave and loyal Engliſhman, was the ſon of ſir John Penruddock, in Wiltſhire. In the great rebellion he took up arms in defence of the king, whom he proclaimed at Blandford, but he was overpowered and defeated by colonel Croke, who, notwithſtanding his promiſe of quarter, cauſed him to be beheaded in 1655. Penruddock died as became a ſoldier and a Chriſtian. The letters that paſſed between him and his wife after their laſt ſorrowful interview, were printed by Steele in his Lover. They are very affecting.—Granger.

Penry (John), or Ap-Henry, a puritan miniſter, was born in the county of Brecknock, and educated both at Cambridge and Oxford, where he took his degrees in arts. He afterwards became an itinerant preacher, and was much followed; but imbibing the principles of the puritans, he wrote with virulence againſt the epiſcopal government, under the aſſumed name of Mar-Prelate. Theſe were printed at a private preſs: and ſome of them were ſo ſeditious that the author was apprehended, tried and executed in 1593.—Wood. Neale.

Pens (George), a painter and engraver, of Nuremburg, who flouriſhed at the beginning of the 16th century. His pictures and plates are greatly eſteemed.—Nouv. Dict Hiſt.

Pepin (the ſhort) the ſon of Charles Martel, was elected king of France at Soiſſons in 752, and became the firſt monarch of the ſecond race of ſovereigns of that kingdom. Though ſmall of ſtature he was very heroic. He aſſiſted the pope againſt Aſtolphus, king of Lombardy, whom he defeated and compelled to make peace. He afterwards turned his arms with ſucceſs againſt the Saxons, and added Aquitaine to his dominions. He died in 768, aged 54.—Henault.

Pepusch (John Chriſtopher), an eminent muſician, was a native of Pruſſia, where at the age of fifteen he had the honour of teaching the prince royal. He afterwards ſettled in England, and was engaged as compoſer at Drury-lane theatre. The univerſity of Oxford conferred on him the degree of doctor of muſic. He acquired a conſiderable fortune by teaching, and by his marriage with an Italian ſinger. Dr. Pepuſch died in 1752, aged 85, and was buried in the chapel of the Charter Houſe.—Burney. Hawkins.

Pepys (Samuel), ſecretary to the admiralty in the reigns of Charles II. and James II. was deſcended from a good family at Impington in Cambridgeſhire, and related to the great earl of Sandwich, who loſt his life in the engagement with the Dutch fleet. Mr. Pepys firſt reduced the affairs of the admiralty to order and method. His memoirs relating to the navy is a well-written piece; and his collection of MSS. with his library, now at Magdalen college, Cambridge, is an invaluable treaſure of naval knowledge. He was preſident of the royal ſociety. He died in 1703.—Evelyn's Numiſmata. Granger.

Peranda (Santa), an hiſtorical painter of Venice, was born in 1466, and died in 1538. He imitated the ſtyles of Titian, Tintoretto, and Paul Veroneſe.—Pilkington.

Perau (Gabriel Louis Calabre), a French eccleſiaſtic and licentiate of the Sorbonne, died in 1767, aged 67. He continued the Lives of illuſtrious Frenchmen begun by D'Auvigny. He was alſo the editor of the works of Boſſuet, and the author of the Life of Jerome Bignon, &c.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

Percival (Thomas), a phyſician, was born at Warrington in 1740. He received his education in the ſchool of his native town, after which he went to Edinburgh, where he applied to the ſtudy of phyſic. In 1764 he was choſen fellow of the royal ſociety, and about the ſame time went abroad. Having paſſed ſome time at Paris, Hamburgh, and other places, but principally Leyden, where he took his doctor's degree, in 1765 he returned to his native town. In 1766 he married, and the year following ſettled at Manchester, where he continued in conſiderable practice, and univerſally reſpected till his death in 1804. Dr. Percival is known in the literary world by his Father's Inſtructions to his Children; Moral and Literary Diſſertations; Medical Ethics; and ſeveral excellent papers in the Memoirs of the Manchester ſociety, of which he was one of the principal founders and ornaments.—Monthly Mag.

Percy (William), came to England with William the conqueror, was created a baron by that monarch, and received ſeveral lordſhips in Lincoln and York. Henry Percy was created earl of Northumberland by Richard II. in 1377. He diſtinguiſhed himſelf againſt the Scots, and took Berwick. Seven years afterwards the Scots, by corrupting the governor, made themſelves maſters of it again; on which the duke of Lancaſter brought an accuſation againſt the earl into parliament, and he was ſentenced to loſe his life and eſtates. But the king revoked this ſentence, on which Percy laid ſiege to Berwick and took it. When the duke of Lancaſter aſſumed the crown by the title of Henry IV. he made the earl of Northumberland conſtable of England. In the 4th year of that reign, the earl and his ſon Henry (commonly called Hotſpur), defeated the Scots at Halidown-hill, and took the earl of Douglas priſoner. Having demanded the pay due to him as keeper of the marches, and not receiving a ſatisfactory anſwer, the earl took up arms againſt the king, and placed Hotſpur at the head of his troops, but he was ſlain at the battle of Shrewſbury in 1403. On this Percy made his ſubmiſſion, and was pardoned. Notwithſtanding this, he collected another army, and was defeated and ſlain in Yorkſhire in 1406.—Engliſh Peerage. Rapin.

Pyrdiccas, one of the generals of Alexander the Great, after whoſe death he aſpired to the crown of Macedon, to accompliſh which deſign he divorced his wife and eſpouſed Cleopatra, ſiſter of Alexander. His project being diſcovered by Antigonus, he entered into a league with Craterus and Ptolemy, governor of Egypt, againſt Perdiccas, who marched to Memphis, but was ſlain in tent by ſome of his ſoldiers, B.C. 322.—ntus Curtius.

PEREFIXE (Hardouin de Beaumont de), French prelate, was born of an ancient ily in Poitou. His father was in the ſuit the cardinal Richelieu, who became the on of the ſon. Perefixe was admitted a or of the Sorbonne, and was diſtinguiſhed preacher. He was appointed preceptor Louis XIV. and in 1664 obtained the abiſhopric of Paris. He died in 1670. works are, 1. the Hiſtory of Henry IV.; Inſtitutio Principis.—Moreri.

PEREIRA-GOMEZ (George), a Spaniſh ſician, was born at Medina del Campo. wrote a piece to prove that brute animals mere machines. His book printed in 4 in folio is very ſcarce. Pereira is alſo author of another work entitled, Nova- que Medicina, Experimentis et Ra- ibus Evidentibus comprobata, folio, 1558. Moreri.

PEREIRA DE FIGUEIREDO (Anthony), ortugueſe eccleſiaſtic, was born in 1725, died at Liſbon in 1797. In the diſputes ween the court of Portugal with Rome diſtinguiſhed himſelf in maintaining the er of kings in eccleſiaſtical matters. He wrote a new Method of Latin Grammar, ch paſſed through ſeveral editions; the le, tranſlated into Portugueſe, 23 vols. .; Tentaviva Theologica; Elements of leſiaſtical Hiſtory, 2 vols. 8vo —Nouv. Hiſt.

PEREZ (Anthony), a Spaniſh writer, the nephew of Gonſalvo Perez, ſe- ary to Charles V. He was employed in affairs, but afterwards fell into diſgrace, which he retired to France, and died at is in 1611. His Letters, in which he s an account of himſelf, are ingenious. works were printed at Paris in 1598, 4to. Moreri.

PERGOLESE (John Baptiſt), a muſical poſer, was born at Caſoria in the king- of Naples in 1704. He ſtudied under tano Greco, one of the ableſt muſicians Italy; after which the prince of Stigliano k him under his protection. Young Per- eſe went to Rome, where he produced Olympiade; an opera which was vaſtly lauded. He died at Naples in 1737. His ntrymen ſtile him the Domenichino of ſic. His Salve Regina and Stabat Mater the moſt admired of his compoſitions.— rney. Hawkins.

PERINGSKIOLD (John), a learned Swede, born in Sudermania in 1654. He be- e ſecretary of antiquities and counſellor the king of Sweden, and profeſſor at Up- He died in 1720. His works are, a tory of the Kings of the North, 8vo; tory of the Kings of Norway, 2 vols. fo- ; Hiſtorical and Chronological Tables n Adam to Jeſus Chriſt, folio. He was the editor of the works of Meſſenius.— uv. Dict. Hiſt.

PERIANDER, the tyrant of Corinth, who was called by his flatterers one of the ſeven ſages of Greece. But this ſage was a monſter. He began with overturning the conſtitution and liberty of his country, and uſurping the ſovereignty B.C. 628. The commencement of his reign was mild, but he ſoon altered his conduct, and aſſumed an iron ſceptre after conſulting with the tyrant on the ſureſt mode of governing. He committed dreadful cruelties on the Corinthians, and inceſt with his own mother; put to death his wife Meliſſa, and baniſhed his ſon Lycophron for lamenting her fate. He died B.C. 585.

PERIANDER (Giles), a learned writer, was born at Bruſſels in 1540. He profeſſed the belles-lettres at Mayence, and wrote, 1. Germania in qua doctiſſimorum virorum elogia et judicia continentur, 1567, 12mo.; 2. Nobilitas Moguntinæ diœceſis, Metropolitanæque Eccleſiæ, 1568, 8vo.—Moreri.

PERICLES, an Athenian, who diſtinguiſhed himſelf as a general, ſtateſman, and orator. Having acquired a great popularity among his countrymen, he prevailed with them to alter their government. He cauſed Cimon and his other rivals to be baniſhed by the oſtraciſm, and thus made himſelf ſole maſter of Athens. He commanded the army in the Peloponneſus, and gained a great victory near Nemæa over the Sicyonians. He next ravaged Arcadia, and took Samos; at the ſiege of which place were invented ſeveral warlike machines. Pericles adviſed the Athenians to continue the war againſt Sparta, for which he was cenſured and diſgraced; but he recovered his popularity and the government, and died of the plague B.C. 429. —Plutarch.

PERIZONIUS (James), a learned writer, was born at Dam, in Holland, in 1631. He ſtudied firſt at Deventer, and afterwards at Utrecht under Grævius, by whoſe means he obtained the rectorſhip of the Latin ſchool at Delft, and the profeſſorſhip of hiſtory and eloquence at Franeker. In 1693 he removed to Leyden, where he filled the chair of Greek and hiſtory with reputation, and died in 1715. His works are, 1. Animadverſiones Hiſtoricæ, 8vo; 2. Diſſertations on ſeveral Points of Antient Hiſtory; 3. Orations; 4 Origines Babylonicæ et Ægyptiacæ, 2 vols. 8vo.; 5. An edition of Ælian, 2 vols. 8vo.; 6. Hiſtorical Commentaries.— Niceron.

PERKINS (William), an Engliſh divine, was born at Marſton, in Warwickſhire, in 1558, and educated at Chriſt's college, Cambridge, of which he became fellow. He was a rigid Calviniſt, and publiſhed ſeveral works on that ſcheme; ſome of which being tranſlated into Dutch, were replied to by Arminius, and this occaſioned thoſe famous diſputes for the ſettling of which the ſynod of Dordt was called. Mr. Perkins died in 1602. His works make three vols. folio —Fuller's Abel Redivivus.

PEROUSE (John Francis Galoup de la),

a celebrated navigator, was born at Albi in 1741. He entered young into the ſea ſervice, and in 1764 obtained the rank of enſigne de vaiſſeau, after which he ſerved ſeventeen years in the Indian ſeas. In 1778 he acted under D'Eſtaing in America, and diſtinguiſhed himſelf at the taking of Grenada. In 1782 he deſtroyed the Engliſh ſettlements in Hudſon's Bay. The French government having reſolved to ſend out ſhips on a voyage of diſcovery, the charge of the expedition was committed to Perouſe; who, after traverſing the ſeas which Cooke had explored before him, loſt his life in the enterpriſe; but in what way has not been aſcertained, no account having been received of him or his ſhips ſince their departure from Botany Bay in 1788. An expedition under Entrecaſteaux was ſent out in ſearch of him, but without ſucceſs. The voyages of Perouſe have been publiſhed in 4 volumes, 4to. —Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

Pernetti (James), hiſtoriographer of the city of Lyons, and a member of the academy of that place, was a native of Forez. He aſſumed the title of Miles Eccleſiæ Lugdunenſis, but he was a man of pleaſant manners and void of pedantry. He died at Paris in 1777, aged 81. The abbé Pernetti's works are, 1. Hiſtory of Cyrus, 3 vols. 12mo.; 2. Counſels of Friendſhip; 3. Letters on Phyſiognomy, 3 vols.; 4. The Abuſes of Education, 12mo.; 5. Picture of the City of Lyons, &c.—Ibid.

Pernetti (Anthony Joſeph), a benedictine, was the relation of the above, and born at Roan in 1716. He became librarian to the king of Pruſſia, and wrote a Dictionary of Painting, Sculpture, and Engraving, 12mo.; Diſſertation on America againſt Pauw, 2 vols. 8vo. The time of his death is uncertain.—Ibid.

Perrault (Claude), an ingenious Frenchman, was born at Paris in 1613. He ſtudied phyſic, and publiſhed ſome works on that ſubject, but did not practiſe. His taſte for the fine arts, particularly architecture, drew him from that profeſſion. He deſigned the entrance into the Louvre, and the obſervatory at Paris, with other great works. He alſo tranſlated Vitruvius into French, which he illuſtrated with fine deſigns of his own. Perrault was admitted a member of the academy of ſciences, though Boileau had ſatirized him as a phyſician turned maſon. He died in 1688. His other works are, 1. An Abridgment of Vitruvius, 12mo.; 2. Deſcription of Machines of his Invention; 3. On the Ancient Columns of Architecture and their Ornaments; 4. Memoirs for a Natural Hiſtory of Animals, folio.—D'Argenville. Felibien.

Perrault (Charles), brother of the above, was born at Paris in 1633. He had from his youth a fine taſte for literature, particularly poetry. Colbert appointed him comptroller general of the public buildings; and Perrault made uſe of the favour which he had with that miniſter in promoting the arts and aſſiſting worthy men. He became a member of the French academy, and was one of the inſtitutors of that of belles-lettres and inſcriptions. He alſo contributed to the memoirs of the academy of painting, ſculpture, and architecture. After the death of Colbert he was diſcharged from his place, on which he devoted himſelf wholly to letters. His poem on painting was greatly admired, but another on the Age of Louis the Great, in which he exalted the modern authors over all the ancients, was highly cenſured and ridiculed. He then ventured to publiſh his Parallel of the Ancients and Moderns, which gave ſtill more offence, and occaſioned a violent controverſy between him and Boileau. When this war ſubſided Perrault publiſhed his Hiſtorical Eulogies of great Men of the 17th Century, 2 volumes, folio. He died in 1703. His other works are, 1. The Cabinet of the Fine Arts, folio; 2. Reflections on Longinus, 8vo.; 3. Poems. —Moreri. Niceron.

Perrier (Francis), a French painter, was born at Macon in 1590. Having quitted his parents in his infancy, he went to Rome, and was taken into the ſervice of a picture dealer, who perceiving his facility in managing crayons, employed him in copying the pictures of the beſt maſters. He ſoon became a good artiſt, and on his return to his own country had conſiderable employment, and was named firſt profeſſor of the academy. He died in 1650. He painted after the manner of Lanfranc, and in landſcape he imitated Carracci.—De Piles.

Perrier (Charles du), a poet, was born at Aix. He wrote ſome excellent Latin poems in his youth; and was complimented by Menage with the title of prince of lyric poets. He obtained two prizes of the French academy, and died in 1692. Beſides his Latin odes he wrote ſeveral poetical pieces of merit in French.—Moreri.

Perron (James Davy du), a celebrated cardinal, was born of proteſtant parents at Berne in 1556. He was educated under his father, and acquired a great knowledge of the Latin, Greek, and Hebrew languages, as well as of the mathematics, philoſophy, and hiſtory. His proficiency was ſuch that Philip Deſportes, abbot of Tyron, reported him to Henry III. of France as a prodigy of memory. Having renounced the proteſtant religion he entered into orders, and became famous as a preacher, but more as a diſputant. His ſucceſs in converting proteſtants was great, and among others whom he brought over to his church were Henry and John Spondanus. In 1593 Perron was made biſhop of Evreux. In 1600 he had a conference on matters of religion with du Mornay in the preſence of the king, in which Perron was equally matched. This conference procured him the dignity of cardinal. He was employed on ſeveral important negociations, and was made grand almoner of ce and archbiſhop of Sens. He died in . Du Perron was a man of great policy ambition; and his learning was various rofound. He wrote, a Treatiſe on the ariſt; another againſt king James I. of and; Letters, &c.; which were all col- d into 3 vols. folio, with his Life pre- —Moreri.

ERRONET (John Rodolphus), director of oridges and roads of France, was born 708. He was brought up by Beaufire, tect to the city of Paris, under whom ade a great progreſs. About 1745 he ne inſpector of the ſchool of engineers, hich he was afterwards director. France debted to him for ſeveral of its fineſt es and beſt roads, the canal of Bur- y and other great works. He was for ublic ſervices honoured with the order t. Michael, and he was admitted a ber of the academy of ſciences at Paris, e royal ſociety of London, and of the my of Stockholm. He died at Paris 794. He wrote a Deſcription of the ges which he had conſtructed, 2 vols. o.; Memoirs on the Method of Con- ting Grand Arches of Stone from 200 to Feet, 4to.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

ERROT (Nicholas), archbiſhop of Si- o, in the kingdom of Naples, was a na- of Saſſoferrato in the ſtates of Venice. tranſlated Polybius into Latin; alſo a tiſe of Hippocrates; and was the au- of a Commentary on Martial. He died 80 —Tiraboſchi.

ERROT (ſir John), an eminent ſtateſman, born of an ancient family in Pembroke- about 1527. He was bred up in the e of the marquis of Wincheſter, that he t profit by the diſcourſes and example great a man. He was one of the hts of the bath at the coronation of ard VI. who had a great partiality for At the beginning of the reign of Mary was ſent to priſon for harbouring pro- nts, but by the interference of friends was diſcharged. He aſſiſted at the co- ion of Elizabeth, who ſent him in to Ireland as lord preſident of Mun- which was in a ſtate of rebellion, but by romptitude was quickly reduced to obe- ce. He was afterwards appointed admi- of a fleet on the coaſt of Ireland, which threatened to be invaded by the Spa- ds; and he continued cruiſing there till reaſon for ſuch an enterpriſe was over. 583 he was made lord deputy of Ireland, re he carried things with ſo high a hand ave great offence, and he was recalled in 3, and ſent to the Tower. In 1592 he tried by a ſpecial commiſſion, brought in ty of high treaſon, and ſentenced to death. queen, however, was perſuaded of his cence and reſpited him; but he fell and died in confinement the ſame year. iog. Brit.

ERROT (Nicholas), ſieur de Ablancourt, born at Chalons upon the Marne in 1606. He was educated for the bar, and admitted a counſellor of the parliament of Paris; but not liking that profeſſion he devoted himſelf to pleaſure and the belles lettres. In 1637 he was admitted a member of the French academy. He died at his ſeat in 1664. D'Ablancourt was bred up in the proteſtant religion, which he abjured early in life, but returned to it again before he died. He tranſlated Minutius Felix, Tacitus, Lucian, Arrian, Cæſar, Thucydides, and other ancient authors into French. One of the moſt curious of his productions is the Hiſtory of Africa, 3 vols. 4to.—Moreri.

PERRY (John), an Engliſh engineer, who went to Ruſſia on the invitation of Peter the Great, and was there employed in forming a communication between the Wolga and the Don; alſo in making the river Veroniſe navigable, and in improving the Ruſſian navy; for which ſervices he was badly requited. In 1712 he returned to England, and was engaged in ſtopping the Dagenham breach in Eſſex; of which he publiſhed an account. He was alſo the author of the preſent State of Ruſſia, 8vo. Captain Perry died in 1733.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

PERSEUS or PERSES, ſon of Philip, king of Macedon. He declared war againſt the Romans, but was defeated near Padua by Paulus Æmilius, in 168 B.C. From thence he fled to Samothracia, where he was taken priſoner, and brought to Rome in triumph. He is ſaid to have died in confinement. His two ſons were bred to mechanical profeſſions.—Livy. Plutarch.

PERSIA, was originally part of the Aſſyrian empire, and in 596 B.C. was conquered by Nebuchadnezzar. Afterwards it became a province of Media; but in 536, Cyrus, king of Perſia, obtained the dominion over the Medes, and formed a mighty empire, which, in 332, was deſtroyed by Alexander the Great. In 250, the Perſians, under Arſaces, revolted from Antiochus Theus, and founded the Parthian empire, A D. 229. Perſia became again a diſtinct kingdom under Artaxerxes, and in 651 it was diſſolved by the Saracens. In 1037 Togrul Beg conquered Perſia, and formed the two Seljukian dynaſties, which were deſtroyed by the king of Karaſm in 1193. Zinghis Khan completely ſubdued this country in 1218; as did Timur Beg, the Tartar, in 1392. It continued in the poſſeſſion of his ſucceſſors till 1500, when Iſmael Sofi made a conqueſt of Perſia, in whoſe family it has ever ſince remained. —Univ. Hiſt.

PERSIUS (Aulus Flaccus), a Latin poet, was born in Hetruria, A.D. 34. He ſtudied with Lucian under Cornutus, the ſtoic, for whom he had a great regard. Perſius wrote in the reign of Nero, whom he ſatiriſed with great ſeverity. He died in 62. His works are enigmatic, and have been compared in this reſpect to the Greek Lycophron.

The beſt edition is that of Caſaubron, London, 12mo, 1647.—Biog. Claſſica. Bayle.

Pertinax (Publius Helvius), born of poor parents near Alba, A.D. 126. However he obtained a good education, and was ſome time an inſtructor of youth in Liguria, after which he entered into the army, and by his bravery roſe to preferment. The emperor Aurelius made him conſul, and on the death of Commodus in 193 he was elected to the imperial dignity by the ſoldiers; he diſtributed his lands among the people, and ſold the property accumulated by his predeceſſor to pay off the public debt. He alſo aboliſhed the heavy impoſts which had been laid on by Commodus. But theſe virtuous acts did not pleaſe the licentious Romans, who were fond of luxury, and they baſely aſſaſſinated him a few months after his election.—Herodian. Crevier.

Perugino (Peter), an Italian painter, was born in 1446 at Perugio. He was the diſciple of Andrea Verocchio, but he is chiefly celebrated for being the maſter of Raphael. He was employed by Sixtus IV. to paint ſeveral pieces for his chapel. Perugino was very avaricious, and amaſſed conſiderable wealth, of which being robbed, the loſs occaſioned his death in 1524.—De Piles.

Peruzzi (Balthaſar), a painter and architect, was born at Volterra in Tuſcany, in 1481. He was employed at Rome by popes Julius II. and Leo X. the former in ornamenting his palace, and by the latter as one of the architects of the church of St. Peter. He was taken priſoner when Rome was ſacked by Charles V. but he obtained his liberty on painting a picture of the conſtable Bourbon. He died in 1556.—Ibid.

Peselli (Peſello), a painter, was born at Florence about 1440. He was a diſciple of Andrea del Caſtagno, whoſe ſtyle he adopted. He painted hiſtorical ſubjects, and animals. He died in 1517.—Ibid.

Pesselier (Charles Stephen), member of the academies of Nantz, Amiens, Rouen and Angers, was born at Paris in 1712. He was intended for the law, which profeſſion he renounced for poetry; but afterwards he obtained a place in the financial department, in which capacity he wrote, a General Idea of the Finances, 1759, folio; Doubts addreſſed to the author of the Theory of Taxation, 12mo. He is chiefly known by his Fables, in the manner of Fontaine; Letters on Education; the Maſquerade of Parnaſſus; Æſop in Parnaſſus; and the School of the Times; comedies. He died in 1763.—New. Dict. Hiſt.

Petavius (Dionyſius), or Denis Petau, was born at Orleans in 1583. He entered into the ſociety of jeſuits at the age of twenty-two, and became a great ornament and defender of that order. His knowledge was general; but he particularly excelled in chronology, in which ſcience he ſtood unrivalled. Philip IV. of Spain and pope Urban VIII. ſolicited him to ſettle in their reſpective ſtates with the moſt flattering promiſes, which he declined on account of the bad ſtate of his health. He died in the college of Clermont in 1652. His principal works are, 1. De Doctrina Temporum, 2 vols. folio, and with his Uranologia, 3 vols.; 2. Rationarium Temporum, folio, alſo at Leyden in 2 vols. 8vo.; 3. Dogmatica Theologica, 5 vols. fol.; 4. the Pſalms, tranſlated into Greek verſe, 12mo.; 5. De Eccleſiaſtica Hierarchia, folio. He had ſeveral controverſies with Scaliger, Salmaſius, and Caſaubon; and he publiſhed editions of ſome of the works of the ancient fathers.—Niceron.

Peter (St.), an apoſtle, was a fiſherman with his brother Andrew at Bethſaida when called to be a diſciple of Jeſus Chriſt. Peter was remarkable for his zeal, which he diſplayed on many occaſions, particularly in the garden, when his maſter was apprehended, on which occaſion he drew his ſword, and cut off the ear of the ſervant of the high-prieſt. But when he entered the hall of Caiaphas, and was recognized as one of the diſciples, he repeatedly denied the charge, till the cock crew, and then remembering our Lord's prediction, that before the cock crew twice he would deny him thrice, Peter went out and wept. After the aſcenſion of our Saviour, he preached a famous ſermon at Jeruſalem, by which ſome thouſands were converted. Herod Agrippa threw him into priſon, A.D. 44, but he was releaſed by an angel. He was crucified with his head downwards in the perſecution under Nero, A.D. 66. Two of his epiſtles are in the ſacred canon.—Cave. Dupin.

Peter III. king of Arragon, ſucceeded his father James I. in 1276. He laid claim to the kingdom of Navarre, but was unſucceſsful. Having married the daughter of Mainfroy, king of Sicily, he reſolved to make himſelf maſter of that iſland, and to effect his purpoſe contrived the horrid maſſacre of the Sicilian veſpers, or the murder of all the French in the iſland at the hour of veſpers, on Eaſter-day in 1282. For this crime pope Martin IV. excommunicated Peter and the Sicilians, and laid Arragon under an interdict. Peter died in 1285.—Univ. Hiſt.

Peter the Cruel, king of Caſtile, ſucceeded his father Alphonſus XI. in 1350, at the age of 16. He commenced his reign by ſeveral wanton acts of barbarity. Having married the daughter of Philip, duke of Bourbon, he repudiated her three days after, and ſent her to priſon, that he might renew his connexion with Maria de Padilla, his former miſtreſs. His cruelties provoked his ſubjects to take up arms againſt him in 1366, and they placed at their head Henry of Traſtamare, his natural brother, who ſlew Philip in battle in 1369.—Ibid.

Peter the Hermit, a French gentle-

an of Amiens, in Picardy, who renounced he military life to embrace that of a pilrim. At the end of the eleventh century a eneral alarm was ſpread that the laſt day as approaching, on which numbers of perons flocked to the Holy Land from all counies, with a view of finiſhing their days near he holy ſepulchre. Peter was of the numer; and on his return to Europe made ſo thetic a repreſentation of the ſtate of the hriſtians in Paleſtine to pope Urban II. that gave Peter leave to preach up the neceſſity a croiſade throughout Chriſtendom. The ppearance, zeal, and diſcourſes of the herit produced a prodigious effect, and all nks and ages, of both ſexes, preſſed eagerly to the ſervice. With a numerous and otley army Peter paſſed through Hungary, d after loſing a great number of his folwers entered Paleſtine. He was at the ge of Jeruſalem in 1099, where he diſyed great bravery, and when the place was ken was made vicar-general. Peter on his urn to France founded the abbey of Neuoutier, where he died.—Maimbourg's Hiſt. uſades. Moreri.

PETER ALEXIOWITZ I. called the great, ſon of Alexis Michaelowitz, czar of uſcovy, was placed on the throne after death of his elder brother Theodore, Fædor, to the prejudice of his other ther Iwan, who was as weak in his inect as in his conſtitution. The Strelitz, ilitia which greatly reſembled the Janiſes in Turkey, being excited by the princeſs hia, revolted in favour of Iwan; and to rt a civil war it was reſolved that the princes ſhould reign in conjunction. Ruſwas at that time little better than in a e of barbariſm. The firſt act of Peter to introduce a reform among the troops, which, notwithſtanding the difficulty of taſk, he had great ſucceſs. In 1696 he Azoph, which he placed in a ſtate of nce againſt the Tartars. He next turned attention to the finances, and corrected y groſs abuſes. The year following he ertook a journey into various parts of ope, for the purpoſe of acquiring a wledge of arts, ſciences, and mechanics. r paſſing through Germany he viſited terdam, where he entered himſelf in the pany of ſhipwrights in the dock yard, and ted with great diligence by the name of r Peter. In 1698 he came to England, paid attention to manufactures, and to y public inſtitution. Having conceived dea of forming a junction between the and the Wolga, he engaged ſome Engengineers to enter into his ſervice, for accompliſhment of that great undertak- From England the czar went to Vienna, ding to go to Italy, but the news of an rection in Ruſſia obliged him to haſten , where he compelled the princeſs Sophia, auſe of the revolt, to go into a mona- ; ſeveral of the inſurgents were executed, and the greateſt part of the Strelitz decimated or ſent to Siberia. In 1699 Peter inſtituted the order of St. Andrew, by way of raiſing a ſpirit of emulation among his ſubjects. The next year he declared war againſt Charles XII. of Sweden, but without ſucceſs. This, however, did not diſcourage Peter, who ſaid, "I knew that the Swedes would beat us at firſt; but they will in time teach us to beat them." This was verified in 1709 by the important victory of Pultowa; by which the greateſt part of the Swediſh troops were made priſoners, and their king obliged to ſeek an aſylum in Turkey. Peter availed himſelf of this advantage by ſeizing Livonia, Ingria, Finland, and part of Swediſh Pomerania. In the mean time the Turks, at the inſtigation of Charles XIII. broke their truce with the czar, whom they completely hemmed in with his army on the banks of the Pruth in 1711. In this perilous ſituation he was ſaved by the preſence of mind of the czarina Catherine. She ſent ſecretly a perſon to negociate with the grand vizir, who conſented to the terms and a peace was ſettled. In memory of this event was inſtituted the female order of St. Catherine, of which the czarina became the head. The reſtoration of tranquillity enabled the czar to make another tour in Denmark, Germany, Holland, and France. When in the latter country he viſited the tomb of cardinal Richelieu, on the ſight of which he exclaimed, "Great miniſter, why was you not born in my time? I would have given you one half of my dominions for teaching me how to govern the other." He is alſo ſaid to have propoſed the plan of a treaty between the two countries to the duke of Orleans, which was declined. The doctors of the Sorbonne preſented to the czar a plan for reconciling the Ruſſian church to that of Rome, which Peter received with grace; but after his return he made the pope the ſubject of a public farce, which gave great offence to the catholic courts, particularly Vienna. Prince Alexis, his ſon, having joined a party of malecontents, who were diſpleaſed at the changes which had taken place both in eccleſiaſtical and civil matters, the czar cauſed him to be tried, and the judges ſentenced him to death. This decree was not executed, but the prince ſoon after died as was ſaid of an apoplexy. Some degree of ſuſpicion, however, fell upon the father, which was not removed by the rigorous execution of ſeveral of the friends of Alexis. The Tartars having maſſacred a Ruſſian garriſon on the borders of Perſia in 1722, Peter embarked on the Caſpian ſea, and took the city of Derbent, with three provinces which were afterwards recaptured by Kouli Khan. After this expedition the czar devoted himſelf to the internal regulation of his empire, and of the many important eſtabliſhments and improvements of which he was the author, the following were the principal; a reform among the clergy, and the abolition of the patriarchal dignity; the organization of a numerous army; the formation of a formidable navy; fortifications in all the principal towns; and an excellent civil government in the cities; an academy for naval education; colleges at Moſcow, Peterſburg, and Kiof; a college of phyſicians, and a diſpenſary at Moſcow; public lectures in anatomy, a branch of ſcience in which the czar himſelf had made great proficiency under Ruyſch at Amſterdam; an obſervatory, which was alſo a repoſitory of natural curioſities; a botanical garden, ſtocked with plants from all parts of the world; printing-offices; and a royal library. But one of the moſt extraordinary works of this great man was the building the city of Peterſburg in a moraſs, the foundations of which conſiſt of piles. He died of the ſtrangury cauſed by an impoſthume in the neck of his bladder, in 1725, aged 53. He wrote ſeveral pieces upon naval affairs, and he was a member of the academy of ſciences at Paris, to which he ſent a chart of the Caſpian ſea. By his laſt will he conſtituted the empreſs Catherine his ſucceſſor.—Voltaire's Hiſt. Peter the Great. Tooke's Ruſſia.

PETER II. emperor of Ruſſia, was the ſon of Alexis Petrowitz, and ſucceeded, in 1727, the empreſs Catherine, who had declared him grand duke of Ruſſia the year preceding. The moſt remarkable event of his reign was the diſgrace of the prime miniſter Menzikoff, who was baniſhed to Siberia. The emperor died in 1738, aged 15.—Ibid.

PETER III. the ſon of Anne Petrowna, daughter of Peter the Great, and of Charles Frederic duke of Holſtein Gottorp, was declared grand duke of Ruſſia in 1742, by his aunt the empreſs Elizabeth, whom he ſucceeded in 1762. He was a warm admirer of the character of Frederic the Great, king of Pruſſia, and would have imitated him, but his abilities were not equal to his wiſhes. Peter was weak, paſſionate, and irreſolute; and a few months after his acceſſion was dethroned by his wife Catherine, who was proclaimed empreſs. The emperor died ſhortly after. [See CATHERINE II.]

PETER (St.), biſhop of Alexandria, A.D. 300. He was regarded as one of the moſt illuſtrious prelates of his time, and ſuffered martyrdom in 311. He formed the penitential canons. Some of his letters have been preſerved by Theodoret.—Dupin. Baillet.

PETER NOLASQUE, founder of the order of mercy for the redemption of captives, was born in Languedoc in 1189. He was in the ſervice of James, king of Arragon, and by his intereſt with that prince he inſtituted a religious and military order, in 1223, whoſe province it was to reſcue chriſtian ſlaves from the infidels. He was very ſucceſsful in this good work, and died in 1256.—Moreri. Ibid.

PETER OF SICILY, an hiſtorian of the 9th century, who wrote a Hiſtory of the Manichees, which contains many curious particulars. It was printed at Ingolſtadt in 1604, in Greek and Latin.—Moreri.

PETER DE CLUNY, or Peter the Venerable, was born in Auvergne, of a noble family. He became a monk of the order of Cluny, and in 1121 was choſen general of that ſociety. He entertained Innocent II. at Cluny in 1130, and afforded an aſylum to Abelard. He died in 1156. Among other works he wrote a Treatiſe on the Divinity of Chriſt; another againſt the Jews, and one on Infant Baptiſm.—Dupin.

PETER de Blois, ſo called from the place of his birth. After ſtudying at Paris and Bologna, he became preceptor and ſecretary to the king of Sicily. At the invitation of Henry II. he came to England, and obtained the archdeaconry of Bath. He died in 1200. His letters, ſermons, and other works were printed in 1667, folio.—Ibid.

PETER, commonly called the Wild Boy, was found in the woods near Hameln in Hanover in 1725. He was ſuppoſed to be then about twelve years of age, and had ſubſiſted in thoſe woods upon the bark of trees, leaves, berries, &c. for a conſiderable time. How long he had been in that ſtate could never be aſcertained, but when found, the remains of a ſhirt collar were about his neck. In the following year he was brought to England by order of queen Caroline, but he could never be brought to ſpeak. He was placed under the care of a farmer at North Church in Hertfordſhire, where he lived on a ſtipend of 35l. a year allowed by government. Notwithſtanding his living ſo long in a ſavage ſtate, and his being quite an idiot, he was harmleſs and tractable. He died in 1785.—Europ. Mag.

PETERS (Gerard), a Dutch painter, was born at Amſterdam about 1580. His pieces are moſtly converſations and landſcapes.—Houbraken.

PETERS (Bonaventure), a Flemiſh painter was born at Antwerp, in 1614. He excelled in painting ſea ſtorms. He died in 165[illegible]. His brother John Peters painted ſea views, engagements, and landſcapes.—Ibid.

PETERS (Francis Lucas), a landſcape painter, was born at Mechlin in 1606. He was a diſciple of Gerard Segers, and was much eſteemed and employed by the archduke Leopold. He died in 1651.—Pilkington.

PETERS (Hugh), an Engliſh fanatic was born at Fowey in Cornwall, in 159[illegible], and educated at St. John's college, Cambridge, from whence he was expelled for irregular behaviour. He afterwards went on the ſtage, where he acquired that buffoonery which ſubſequently diſtinguiſhed him in the pulpit. He was ordained by biſhop Mountaine, and was for ſome time lecturer of St. Sepulchre's London; but having an intrigue with another man's wife, he fled to Rotterdam, where he joined the independents. He went from thence to New England, and at the beginning of the rebellion returned ndon, where he became a zealous preacher the cauſe of the parliament. For his ac- ity in the rebellion, eſpecially at the mur- r of the king, he was hung and quartered 1660.—Life by Dr. Young in 1663.

PETIT (John-Louis), an eminent ſurgeon, s born at Paris in 1674. He ſtudied under ttre, Caſtel, and Mareſchal, and in 1726 was invited to attend the king of Poland, om he cured, as he alſo did the prince of ain in 1734. He was admitted a member the academy of ſciences, and rector of that ſurgery. Petit died in 1750. He invented eral ſurgical inſtruments, and wrote a ſtem of Surgery, 3 vols. 8vo.; Treatiſe Diſeaſes of the Bones, 2 vols. 12mo.; nſultations on Venereal Complaints; and ertations in the Memoirs of the Academy Sciences. He is not to be miſtaken for tony Petit, a phyſician, who was alſo a mem- of the academy of ſciences, and died near leans, in 1794, aged 72. He was the au- or of Chirurgical Anatomy; Diſcourſe on gery; Report in favour of Inoculation; a Reform in Medical Practice, &c.—uv. Dict. Hiſt.

PETIT (Samuel), a learned proteſtant di- e, was born at Niſmes, in 1594, and edu- ed at Geneva, where he became profeſſor heology, and alſo of Greek and Hebrew. died in 1645. His principal works are; Miſcellanea; 2. Eclogæ Chronologicæ, .; 3. Variæ Lectiones; 4. Leges Atticæ, o.—Moreri.

PETIT (Peter), a French mathematician, born at Montluçon, in 1598. He be- e geographer to the king, and intendant the fortifications of France. He was the mate friend of Des Cartes, and died in 7. His works are: 1. A Treatiſe on the npaſs of Proportion; 2. On the Conſtruc- and Uſe of the Calibre of Artillery; 3. Sight; 4. Of Eclipſes; 5. On prevent- the Inundations of the Seine; 6. On ne's, &c.—Ibid.

PETIT (Peter), a phyſician, was born at is, in 1617. He was a member of the demy of Padua, and died in 1687. He te ſome Latin poems of merit, particu- y one, entitled, Codrus. His other works ; 1. A Treatiſe on the Motion of Ani- s; 2. Homeri Nepenthes, 8vo.; 3. atiſe on the Amazons, in Latin, 8vo, French, 2 vols. 8vo.; 4. On the Sibyls, ; 5. Miſcellaneous Obſervations; 6. De ura et Moribus Anthropophagorum, 8vo. bid.

PETITOT (John), an unrivalled painter enamel, was born at Geneva, in 1607. viſited England, where he was greatly onized by Charles I. after whoſe death went to France, and was employed by is XIV. He painted the face and hands, his brother-in-law, Bordier, added the ery. He died in 1691.—Walpole.

PETIVER (James), an Engliſh botaniſt, was apothecary to the charter-houſe, died in 1718. He was fellow of the royal ſociety, and made ſo great a collection of rare and curious plants, animals and inſects, that Sir Hans Sloane, who afterwards purchaſed it, offered him in his life time 4000l. for his collection. Mr. Petiver publiſhed, J. Muſæi Petiveriani Centuriæ decem, 8vo.; 2. Gazophylacii Naturæ et Artis decadis decem, folio; 3. A Catalogue of Plants found on the Mountains about Geneva; 4. Pterigraphia Americana, folio. He was the author of ſeveral other pieces, and communications to Mr. Ray, and others.—Pulteney's Sketches.

PETRARCH (Francis), a celebrated Italian poet, was born at Arezzo, in 1304. On account of the diſſenſions which raged in his native country, his father removed with him to Avignon, and afterwards to Carpentras, where Petrarch began his education, which was completed at Montpellier and Bologna. He was intended for the law, but Virgil had more charms for him than Juſtinian. On the death of his parents he returned to Avignon, where he became paſſionately in love with a young lady named Laura de Noves, upon whoſe heart he could make no impreſſion, neither by his conſtancy nor his verſes. Petrarch retired to Vaucluſe, a romantic ſpot, where he poured out his amorous complaints in ſeveral pieces. He afterwards travelled into different countries, but with his return to Vaucluſe his paſſion for Laura returned. Again he celebrated her charms and the delights of his retreat. His name became famous; and he received invitations from the ſenate of Rome, from the king of Naples, and the univerſity of Paris. He accepted the former, and on Eaſter day, in 1341, he was crowned with laurel in the capitol with great pomp. He was alſo declared a Roman citizen. In 1348 he received the news of the death of Laura; he was then at Parma, but immediately ſet out for Vaucluſe, where he paſſed ſome time in grief. In 1352 he returned to Italy, and at Padua obtained a canonry. He died near that city, in 1374. The ſonnets of Petrarch are tender, but his poem on the Punic war, entitled, Africa, poſſeſſes little merit. His Latin poems are inferior to the Italian. He alſo wrote, 1. De remediis utriuſque fortunæ; 2. De otio religioſorum; 3. De vera Sapientia; 4. De vita Solitaria; 5. De Contemptu mundi; 6. Rerum memorabilium; 7. De republica optime adminiſtranda; 8. Itinerarium Syriacum; 9. Epiſtolæ; 10. Orationes. All his works have been publiſhed in 4 vols. folio. The beſt editions of his poems is that of Venice, 2 vols. 4to., 1756.—Tiraboſchi. Dodſon's Life of Petrarch.

PETRE (ſir William), an eminent ſtateſman, was born at Exeter, and educated at the college of that name at Oxford; but in 1523 he was elected fellow of All Souls. He took his doctor's degree in civil law, and became principal of Peckwater Inn. His abilities recommended him to Thomas Cromwell, by whoſe means he was employed in ſtate affairs, and was in the commiſſion for viſiting the monaſteries. He obtained a large ſhare of the church lands, which he contrived to keep in the reign of Mary, to whom he was counſellor, as he had been to her father and brother. This complying courtier found means to ingratiate himſelf with queen Elizabeth, who appointed him one of her ſecretaries of ſtate, and member of the privy council. Sir William was a great benefactor to Exeter and All Souls colleges, Oxford, and founded ſeveral charitable inſtitutions. He died in 1571. His manors in Eſſex were very conſiderable, and are poſſeſſed by lord Petre, his deſcendant.—Biog. Brit.

Petronius Maximus, emperor of Rome, was born in 395, of an illuſtrious family, and after being a ſenator and conſul he ſeized the throne by aſſaſſinating Valentinian III. in 455. He then married Eudoxia, the widow of his predeceſſor, but ſhe was ignorant of his crime. On becoming acquainted with it ſhe applied to Genſeric, king of the Vandals, who entered Italy with fire and ſword, took Rome, and ſlew the uſurper. The Romans were ſo enraged with Maximus that they dragged his body about the ſtreets, and threw it into the Tiber.—Crevier.

Petronius Arbiter (Titus), a Latin poet, was born near Marſeilles. He was one of the favourites of Nero, and became pro-conſul of Bithynia; but being accuſed by Tigellinus, another of Nero's friends, of being engaged in a conſpiracy againſt that tyrant, he was put to death by the opening of his veins, A.D. 65. His ſatire againſt Nero is extremely well written, though very licentious. His other works are; a poem on the Civil War between Cæſar and Pompey; on the Education of the Roman Youth; on the Corruption of Eloquence, and on the Cauſes of the Decline of the Arts; the Shipwreck of Lycas, &c. The beſt edition of Petronius is that of Burman, 1743, 2 vols. 4to. The ſtyle is ſo good, and the matter ſo bad, that Petronius has been called Autor puriſſimæ impuritatis.—Biog. Claſſica. Voſſius de Poet. Lat.

Pettus (ſir John), a native of Suffolk, was member of parliament for Dunwich in that county in the reign of Charles II. and one of the deputy governors of the royal mines. He died about 1690. He was the author of the Hiſtory, Laws, and Places of the Chief Mines and Mineral Works in England and Wales, 1670, folio; England's Independency of the Papal Power, 4to.; Volatiles from the Hiſtory of Adam and Eve, 8vo.; Fleta minor, or the Laws of Art and Nature, in Knowing, Judging, Aſſaying, &c. of Metals, tranſlated from the German, folio, 1683. When he tranſlated this book he was in the Fleet priſon.—Granger.

Petty (ſir William), a celebrated writer, was the ſon of a clothier at Rumſey in Hampſhire, and born there in 1623. He received the firſt part of his education at the ſchool of his native town, after which he went to the univerſity of Caen, in Normandy. On his return to England he began to ſtudy phyſic and anatomy, to complete himſelf in which he went to Leyden, Amſterdam and Paris. In 1647 he returned home, and having invented an inſtrument for double writing, he obtained a patent for ſeventeen years; but this project failed. About this time he went to Oxford, where he became aſſiſtant to the profeſſor of anatomy, and fellow of Braſenoſe college. He was alſo one of the firſt members of the aſſociation, afterwards called the royal ſociety. In 1650 he was choſen profeſſor of anatomy at Oxford, and the ſame year muſical profeſſor of Greſham college. In 1652 he was appointed phyſician to the army in Ireland, where he became ſecretary to Henry Cromwell, lieutenant of that kingdom. He was one of the commiſſioners for dividing the forfeited lands; but in 1658 he was diſmiſſed from his employments on a charge brought againſt him in the houſe of commons. At the reſtoration he was knighted, and made ſurveyor general of Ireland. About this time he invented a double-bottomed ſhip, a model of which he gave to the royal ſociety. He was alſo the author of ſeveral other ingenious ſchemes, and wrote a great number of books on ſubjects of practical or political utility. He died in 1687, leaving a fortune of 12,000l. a year to his children.—Biog. Brit.

Petyt (William), a law antiquary, was born near Skipton in Yorkſhire. He became bencher and treaſurer of the Inner Temple, and keeper of the records in the Tower. He died at Chelſea in 1707. His collection of parliamentary tracts is in the Inner Temple library. He was author of the Ancient Rights of the Commons Aſſerted, 8vo; a Review of the Kings and Government of England; and of Jus Parliamentarium, or the Ancient Power and Rights of Parliament, folio.—Granger.

Peucer (Gaſpard), a phyſician and mathematician, was born at Bautzen in Luſatia in 1525. He became medical profeſſor at Wirtemberg, where he married Melancthon's daughter. He was impriſoned ten years on account of his opinions, and while in confinement wrote his thoughts on the margin of old books, with ink made of burnt cruſt ſoaked in wine. He diedin 1602. His works are, 1. De præcipuis divinationum generibus; 2. Methodus curandi morbis internos; 3. De febribus; 4. Vitæ illuſtrium Medicorum; 5. Hypotheſes Aſtronomicæ; 6. On Monies, Weights, and Meaſures. He alſo edited Melancthon's works, in 5 vols. folio.—Melch. Adam. Vit. Germ. Med.

Peuteman (Peter), a painter, was born at Rotterdam in 1650. Being employed to paint a picture of mortality, he went into an anatomical room where ſeveral ſkeletons were ſuſpended from the ceiling, and bones and ſkulls lay on the floor. While there he fell aſleep, and being ſuddenly rouſed by the ck of an earthquake, he saw the skeletons ving in all directions, and the loose skulls ing about the room, which struck him h such horror, that he ran home half- d; and though the transaction was ex- ned to him, he died shortly after in 1692. Pilkington.

PEUTINGER (Conrad), was born at Augs- g, in 1465. After travelling into Italy, returned to his native place, where he me secretary to the senate, and counsel- to the emperor. He died in 1574. Peu- er is known by a chart which bears his e, and on which are laid down the roads ued by the Roman armies in the western ire. It was published at Vienna in 1753, h dissertations and notes by Scheib. The r works of Peutinger are; Convivial ourses, 8vo.; De Inclinatione Romani erii, et Gentium commigrationibus; De s Gothorum, folio; Romanæ vetustatis menta in Augusta Vindelicorum, folio. Moreri.

PEYRERE (Isaac), the author of a book avouring to prove that Adam was not first man, for which he was sent to prison russels. By the interest of the prince of lé, to whom he was librarian, he obtain- is liberty and went to Rome, where he red his errors. He died in 1676. He wrote a book on the restoration of the , 8vo.; a Relation of Greenland; and pieces —Moreri.

PEYSSONNEL (Charles), was born at eilles in 1700 He accompanied the ch ambassador to Constantinople, in 1735, retary; and travelled through Asia Mi- collecting medals and marking the geo- ical positions of ancient places. He several dissertations inserted in the oirs of the Academy of Inscriptions, of h he was a member. He was also the or of an Eulogy on Marshal Villars; a urse on Coral; and other pieces. He in 1757. His son became consul at na, and died in 1790, at the age of 80. rote Historical Observations on the Bar- s People who inhabit the Borders of the oe, and the Euxine, 4to.; Observations e Memoirs of the Baron de Tott, 8vo.; fumeros, 4 vols.; Treatise on the Com- of the Black Sea, 2 vols.; Political ion of France, 2 vols; Discourse on Alliance of France with the Swiss and risons, 8vo.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

PEZAY (Masson, marquis de), was a na- f Blois He was a captain in the dra- , and had the honour of instructing Louis in the military tactics, for which he ppointed inspector-general of the coasts: onducting himself in too arbitrary a er, complaints were preferred against and he was exiled to his estate, where d in 1778. He wrote some agreeable , and translated Catullus and Tibullus rench. He was also the author of the igns of Maillebois, 3 vols. 4to., and works.—Ibid.

PEZENAS (Esprit), a learned jesuit, was born at Avignon in 1692. He was professor of philosophy and hydrography at Marseilles, and died at Avignon in 1776. He translated Maclaurin's Algebra and Fluxions into French; also Desaguliers's Experimental Philosophy; Baker on the Microscope; Ward's Young Mathematician's Guide; Smith's Optics, and other works, from the English. His own writings are; a Treatise on Pilotage, 8vo.; Theory of Gauging, 8vo.; Memoirs of Mathematics and Philosophy, &c —Nouv. Dict.

PEZRON (Paul), an ingenious Frenchman, was born at Hennebon in Britanny, in 1639. He became a Bernardin, was admitted a doctor of the Sorbonne, and in 1697 nominated abbot of Charmoy, which he afterwards resigned. He died in 1706. Pezron was a learned antiquary, and wrote, 1. L'Antiquité des Temps retablie, 4to. In this work he defends the chronology of the Septuagint against that of the Hebrew text. 2 A Vindication of the above work; 3. Essay towards a Commentary on the Prophets; 4. The Evangelical History, confirmed by the Jewish and Roman histories; 5. On the Antiquity of the Nation and Language of the Celts, otherwise called the Gauls —Moreri.

PFANNER (Tobias), was born at Augsburg, in 1641. He was secretary of the archives to the duke of Saxe-gotha, and was called the living archives of the house of Saxony. He died in 1717. His works are; the History of the Peace of Westphalia, 8vo.; on the Theology of the Pagans; Treatise on the Principles of Historical Faith, &c. all written in Latin.—Ibid.

PFEFFERCORN (John), a converted Jew, who endeavoured to persuade the emperor Maximilian to order all the Hebrew books to be burnt, except the Bible, because they contained blasphemies and dangerous errors: the execution of which was prevented by Reuchlin. Pfeffercorn, who lived about the year 1520, wrote, 1. Narratio de ratione celebrandi Pascha apud Judæos; 2. De abolendis Judæorum Scriptis, &c.—Moreri.

PFEIFFER (Augustus), a learned orientalist, was born at Lawenbourg, in 1640. He professed the eastern languages at Leipsic, and was superintendant of the churches in Lubec, where he died in 1698. His principal works are; 1. Pansophia Mosaica; 2. Critica Sacra; 3. De Masora; 4. De Trihæresi Judæorum; 5. Sciagraphia Systematis Antiquitatum Hebræorum. His philosophical works were published together at Utrecht, in 2 vols.—Moreri.

PFEIFFER (Lewis), a gallant officer, was born at Lucerne in Switzerland, in 1530. He was in the service of Charles IX. of France, whose life he saved by a skilful manœuvre at the retreat of Meaux. He also contributed to the victory of Montcontour, in 1569: and became chief magistrate of Lucerne, where he died in 1594.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

PHÆDON, a disciple of Socrates, who purchased him of some pirates. After the death of his master, Phædon returned to Elis, his native country, where he formed a sect of philosophers called Elean. Plato affixed his name to a dialogue on the death of Socrates. —Diog. Laertius.

PHÆDRUS, a Latin poet, was a native of Thrace, and appears to have been the freedman of Augustus. Under Tiberius he was persecuted by Sejanus, to which circumstance he has alluded in his Fables, which possess considerable merit, and are written with great purity of style; though they are evidently borrowed from the popular fables of the Greeks.—Bayle. Biog. Classica.

PHAER (Thomas), an English physician, was a native of Pembrokeshire. He took his doctor's degree in physic, at Oxford, in 1559. He wrote several tracts on diseases and their remedies, and translated a great part of the Æneid into English. He died in 1560.—Wood.

PHALARIS, the tyrant of Agrigentum in Sicily, which city he took B.C 571. He was a native of Crete, and from his youth displayed a cruel and ambitious temper. He delighted in the invention of new instruments of torture. An ingenious artist made a brazen bull, which was hollow, and so contrived that when a fire was kindled under the body, the cries of the unhappy victim within resembled the roarings of the animal it represented. Phalaris, after commending the work, ordered the artist to be the first to make trial of it. The tyrant was himself put to death by his subjects in the same way, B.C. 561. The letters of Phalaris have been much disputed; particularly between Boyle and Bentley. The best edition is that of Oxford, 1718, 8vo.—Moreri.

PHARAMOND, according to many historians, was the name of the first king of France, who reigned at Treves about A.D. 420. He is, however, supposed by others to have been only the general of an army, or the chief of a military society of Franks. To him is attributed also the celebrated Salique Law, by which females were excluded from the succession to the throne.—Henault. Millot.

PHARNACES, son of Mithridates, king of Pontus, revolted with the army against his father, who slew himself in despair B.C. 64. Pharnaces cultivated the friendship of the Romans, and in the war between Cæsar and Pompey he remained neutral: but the former declared war against him and defeated him B.C. 47, on which occasion the victor wrote to one of his friends this laconic letter: Veni, vidi, vici.—Florus. Appian de Bello Mithrid.

PHERECRATES, a Greek comic poet, was the contemporary of Plato and Aristophanes. None of his comedies have reached us, only some fragments which have been preserved by Hertelius and Grotius. There is in Plutarch a piece of his on the music of the Greeks.—Suidas. Moreri.

PHERECYDES, a philosopher of the isle of Scyros, B.C. 560. He was the disciple of Pittacus, and the first who wrote upon natural things and the essence of the gods. He was the master of Pythagoras, who regarded him as a father. There are different accounts of his death; some say he was devoured by lice, and others that he threw himself from the top of mount Corycius. It is most probable that he died of extreme age. Diogenes Laertius ascribes to him the invention of prosody. He is not to be confounded with another of this name, who lived 456 B.C. and wrote the History of Athens.—Stanley. Moreri.

PHIDIAS, a sculptor of Athens. He constructed a beautiful statue of Minerva; but being accused of embezzling some of the gold entrusted to him for that work, he was banished. On this he went to Elis, where, by way of revenge, he made a colossal statue of Jupiter Olympius, which infinitely surpassed his Minerva, and was deemed one of the wonders of the world. He died B.C. 432.—Pausanius. Plutarch.

PHILANDER (William), a French divine, was born at Chatillon in 1505. He was secretary to cardinal d'Armagnac, and archdeacon of St. Antoninus. He died at Toulouse in 1565. His works are; 1. A Commentary on Vitruvius, 1552, fol.; 2. A Commentary on part of Quintilian.—Moreri.

PHILELPHUS (Francis), professor of eloquence at Padua, was born in 1398. In 1419 he was sent by the republic of Venice to Constantinople, where he married the daughter of Emanuel Chrysoloras. The emperor, John Paleologus, sent him to the emperor Sigismund, to implore succours against the Turks. He died at Florence in 1481. His works were printed at Basle in 1739 folio. The most known are his Treatise de Morali disciplina; De Exilio; de Joci et Seriis: Convivorium, and poems.—Tiraboschi.

PHILEMON, a Greek comic poet, was the son of Damon, and contemporary with Menander. Plautus imitated some of his pieces. His death is said to have been occasioned by laughing at seeing an ass eat figs, B.C. 274 aged 97.—Vossius de Poet. Græc.

PHILETAS, a Greek grammarian and poet of Coos, and preceptor to Ptolemy Philadelphus. He wrote elegies and epigrams, which are lost.—Ibid.

PHILIP (St.), an apostle of Jesus Christ was a fisherman of Bethsaida, a city of Galilee, on the Lake of Gennesareth, when called by our Saviour. Ecclesiastical historians relate that he was married and had several children, that he preached the Gospel in Phrygia, and died at Hierapolis in that country. He is, however, enrolled among the martyrs by some antient writers. He is not to be confounded with Philip the deacon mentioned in the Acts, who converted the eunuch of Candace queen of Ethiopia.—New Test. Cave. Baillet.

PHILIP II. king of Macedon, was the son of Amyntas, and succeeded his brother Per-cas 360 B.C. In his youth he displayed eat military talents, which were improved der Epaminondas. At the beginning of s reign he had to oppose the Illyrians, eonians, and Thracians. The two former disarmed by presents and promises, and e latter were not able to act against him. e then made war against Athens, and hav- g gained a great victory over the troops of at republic, he restored all the prisoners thout a ransom; which generosity pro- ced a peace. Philip then turned his arms ainst the Illyrians, whom he defeated. ter this he took Crenides, a city belong- g to the Thracians, and having made him- f master of the gold mines near that place, employed a number of men in working em, and was the first who had gold coin mped with his name. His ambition now ew no bounds. He formed the design of oduing all Greece; and he began with cing Olynthus, a city belonging to Athens, d having corrupted the principal inhabi- nts, he obtained possession of the place. he Athenians were roused against Philip the eloquence of Demosthenes, but all e efforts of the orator proved ineffectual, en opposed to the arms and gold of the g of Macedon. After vanquishing Greece ilip resolved to attempt the conquest of rsia, and was for that purpose elected chief the expedition in a general assembly of e Grecian states; but while he was preparing the enterprise he was assassinated by Pausa- s, one of his guards, B.C. 336, leaving his t designs to be accomplished by his son exander.—Plutarch. Stanyan. Univ. Hist.

PHILIP V. king of Macedon, obtained crown after the death of his cousin An- onus, 220 B.C. The beginning of his gn was auspicious, owing to the conquests his general Aratus, whom Philip out of lousy caused to be poisoned. He after- rds joined Hannibal against the Romans, the consul Lævinus marched into Mace- n, and compelled Philip to sue for peace. he Roman senate being apprized of a secret ty between Philip and Hannibal, sent minius against the former, who was de- ted, and obliged to yield to dishonourable ms. At the instigation of his son Perseus put to death his eldest son Demetrius, who s accused of designs upon the throne. ilip died 178 B.C.

PHILIP (Marcus Julius), called the Arab, m his being a native of Bosra in Arabia, born of an obscure family, and became common soldier in the Roman army; but his merit he rose to the rank of captain the imperial guard. In 244 he assassi- ed the emperor Gordian the younger, and ed upon the throne. He gained great ularity at Rome by his generosity, and by king a canal for supplying the city with ter. He celebrated the secular games h great pomp, and gave toleration to the istians. Philip was slain by his soldiers r Verona in 249, after having been de- feated by Decius. His son Philip, aged twelve years, was assassinated in the arms of his mother.—Aurelius Victor. Crevier.

PHILIP, a native of Phrygia, and gover- nor of Jerusalem, where he greatly persecuted the Jews. Antiochus Epiphanes, who had appointed him to that post, left him regent of his kingdom during the minority of his son; but Philip was opposed by Lysias, and slain in battle.—Josephus.

PHILIP, duke of Suabia, son of Frederick Barbarossa, was elected emperor on the death of his brother Henry VI. in 1198. But ano- ther party of the electors chose Otho, duke of Saxony, which occasioned a civil war; the pope excommunicated Philip, but afterwards absolved him, and endeavoured in vain to reconcile the contending princes. Philip was assassinated at Bamberg in 1208.—Univ. Hist.

PHILIP I. king of France, succeeded his father Henry I. in 1060, under the regency of Baldwin V. count of Flanders. Philip at the age of fifteen lost his faithful guardian. The young king shewed at first a warlike spirit; but afterwards gave himself up to li- centious pleasures. He divorced his wife Bertha, and married Bertrade, the wife of the count of Anjou, for which he was ex- communicated by the council of Poitiers in 1100; but four years afterwards he was ab- solved by the pope, who also approved of his marriage with Bertrade. Philip died in 1108. —Henault. Mezeray.

PHILIP II. surnamed the August, was born in 1165, and succeeded his father Louis VII. in 1180, at the age of fifteen. The king of England taking advantage of his youth, invaded France; but Philip put him- self at the head of his forces, and compelled him to renew the antient treaties between the two kingdoms. After this he turned his attention to the regulation of abuses, and in improving the city of Paris. He expelled the Jews from his dominions with circum- stances of great injustice and cruelty. In 1190 Philip accompanied Richard I. of Eng- land to the Holy Land, where they took Acre; but jealousies arising between the two monarchs, Philip returned to France. Though he had sworn on the gospels not to undertake any thing against the interests of Richard in his absence, he invaded Nor- mandy, and took some places, but being re- pulsed at Rouen, he made a truce for five years; and in the interval married Ingle- burga, princess of Denmark, whom he after- wards divorced, and espoused the daughter of the duke of Moravia, for which he was ex- communicated by the pope, and not absolved till he took back his former wife. Philip gave his assistance to prince Arthur against his uncle John king of England; but John having declared himself a vassal of the holy see, the pope took his part. This giving offence to the English nobility, they made an offer of the throne to Philip, who declined it, but sent them his son Louis, who was crowned at London in 1216. On the death of John, however, the Engliſh acknowledged his ſon Henry III. and Louis returned to France. Philip died in 1223.—Henault. Mezeray.

Philip III. ſurnamed the Hardy, was proclaimed king of France in Africa on the death of St. Louis his father in 1270. After gaining a great victory over the Saracens, and making peace with the king of Tunis, he returned to France, and was crowned at Rheims. Peter of Arragon having occaſioned the horrible maſſacre of the French in Sicily, called the Sicilian Veſpers, Philip marched againſt him, and took Gironne; but died of a fever on his return at Perpignan in 1285.—Ibid.

Philip IV. called the Fair, ſucceeded his father, the preceding monarch, at the age of 17. He became king of Navarre by marrying Jane, daughter and heireſs of Henry I. Philip made war againſt Edward I king of England, who formed a league with the emperor. In 1302 Philip loſt the battle of Courtray, where periſhed the count of Artois with 20,000 men. But in 1304 he gained that of Mons-en-Puelle, in commemoration of which a fine equeſtrian ſtatue of this monarch was ſet up in the church of Notre Dame at Paris. This victory was followed by a peace; but Philip ſoon after was embroiled in a conteſt with pope Boniface VIII. who pretended to a right of diſpoſing of benefices, which was reſiſted by the king. On this the pope iſſued his bull of excommunication, which Philip cauſed to be burnt. The violent acts of Boniface were condemned by the popes Benedict and Clement V. the latter of whom aſſiſted Philip in perſecuting and aboliſhing the order of knights templars in 1311. Philip died in 1314.—Ibid.

Philip V. ſurnamed the Long, was the younger ſon of the laſt-mentioned, and ſucceeded his brother Louis Hutin, by virtue of the Salique law, in 1316. He made war againſt Flanders, formed an alliance with Scotland, and expelled the Jews from his kingdom. The leproſy prevailed in a great degree in his reign. He died in 1321.—Ibid.

Philip de Valois, the firſt king of France of the collateral branch of Valois, was the ſon of Charles, count of Valois, brother of Philip the fair. He aſcended the throne in 1328, on the death of his couſin Charles le bel. In 1329 Edward III. king of England did homage for the duchy of Guienne, but not long after he aſſumed the title of king of France, on the pretence of being a grandſon of Philip the fair by his mother. This produced a diſaſtrous war, which laſted with a few intervals many years. In 1346, Edward gained the great battle of Crecy, in which the French loſt near 30,000 men, among whom was John king of Bohemia, and the flower of the nobility. This was followed by the loſs of Calais and other important places. Edward ſent a challenge to Philip to decide their pretenſions by ſingle combat, which the latter refuſed. Philip died in 1350, aged 57.—Ibid.

Philip I. king of Spain, was the ſon of the emperor Maximilian I. and by his marriage with the heireſs of Ferdinand V. king of Arragon, and Iſabella queen of Caſtille, he obtained the Spaniſh crown. He died at Bruges in 1506, aged 28.—Mariana.

Philip II was the ſon of Charles V. In 1554 he became king of Naples and Sicily by the abdication of his father, and the ſame year he married Mary queen of England. In 1556 his father reſigned to him the crown of Spain. He declared war againſt France, and was preſent at the battle of St. Quintin, where it is ſaid he made two vows, the one never again to hazard his perſon in an engagement, and the other to build a monaſtery by the name of St. Laurence. This laſt he executed at Eſcurial near Madrid. In 1559 he made peace with France, and on his return to his own country he cauſed an auto da fe to be celebrated, by which ſeveral unfortunate victims of the inquiſition were burnt alive. His bigotry and cruelty were ſo great that the Low Countries revolted, and thoſe called the United Provinces ſucceeded in throwing off the Spaniſh yoke. In 1588 Philip fitted out his famous expedition called the Invincible Armada, for the invaſion of England. This fleet was nearly all deſtroyed by the ſtorm, or the Engliſh ſhips. When Philip heard of the diſaſter, he ſaid, "I ſent my fleet to combat the Engliſh, not the elements; God's will be done." At the ſame time that he attacked England he gave his aſſiſtance to the leaguers in France, who called him their protector He died in 1598, aged 72.—Mariana.

Philip III. the ſon of Philip II. and of Anne of Auſtria, ſucceeded his father at the age of twenty. His reign was unfortunate and imprudent. Spinola took Oſtend after a ſiege of three years, but with the loſs of 80,000 Spaniards. The United Provinces eſtabliſhed their independence under the houſe of Naſſau Philip iſſued a decree that all the Moors ſhould quit his kingdom in three days, by which Spain loſt above a million of its moſt uſeful inhabitants. This prince was the victim of etiquette. Being at a council, he complained of the fume ariſing from a pan of charcoal which was burning in the room. The proper perſon who had the charge of the fire was not preſent, and no one would undertake the office of removing it; which point of order coſt the monarch his life, in 1621.—Univ. Hiſt.

Philip IV. ſucceeded his father Philip III. at the age of ſixteen. The ſame year war was renewed with Holland, and the Spaniards under Spinola gained ſome advantages, but at ſea they were unſucceſsful. In 1635 Philip, at the inſtigation of Olivarez, his miniſter, declared war againſt France, which proved very diſaſtrous. He loſt Artois; the Catalonians revolted, and put themſelves under the protection of France; and Portugal taking advantage of the diſtracted ſtate of Spain, ſecured its independence, and placed on throne the houſe of Braganza. Olivarez author of theſe misfortunes, by his negnce and bad conduct, was diſgraced; and 1659 a diſadvantageous peace was concluwith France. Philip died in 1665.—Ibid.

PHILIP V. duke of Anjou, the ſecond ſon Louis dauphin of France, and of Maryne of Bavaria, aſſumed the title of king Spain in 1700, by virtue of the will of arles II. His claim, however, was coned by the houſe of Auſtria in favour of archduke Charles. This produced the d alliance in which Auſtria was ſupted againſt France and Spain, by England, land, Savoy, Portugal, and Pruſſia. The nning of this war was very diſaſtrous to lip, who loſt Arragon, Gibraltar, and the nds of Minorca and Majorca, alſo Sardi- and the kingdom of Naples. In this ency he was about to retire to Spaniſh erica, when the duke de Vendome ard with ſuccours, and by gaining the batof Villavicioſa, gave a turn to his affairs. victories of that great general, and e of marſhal Villars in Flanders, coned Philip on the throne, and reſtored ce to Europe by the treaty of Utrecht in 3. The war was renewed in 1717, and Spaniſh fleet was defeated in the Mediranean by ſir George Byng. Peace was red in 1720, after which Philip became ancholy, and in 1724 abdicated the throne is ſon Lewis, and retired to a monaſtery. is died a few months after of the ſmall- and Philip reſumed the government. vapours were now baniſhed, and he ned with ſpirit and judgment. In 1733 eagued with France againſt the emperor, his ſon Don Carlos conquered Sicily and es, of which he became king. In 1734 royal palace was burnt, and a great numof fine paintings deſtroyed. In 1736 was concluded, but a new war broke n 1739. Philip died in 1746, aged 63. id.

PHILIP the good, duke of Burgundy, was in 1396. Out of revenge for the death s father, who was ſlain in 1419, he ied with the Engliſh againſt Charles II. rance and his ſucceſſor. He defeated the hin at the battle of Mons in 1421, about h time he made war with ſucceſs againſt ounteſs of Hainault, and compelled her knowledge him for her heir. In 1435 was reconciled to Charles VII. The le of Dinan, in the province of Liege, ng committed ſome outrages, Philip ſent ft them his ſon the count of Charolois, burnt the city to aſhes, and put the inants to the ſword. This inhuman acbeing approved of by the father, proves he had no right to be called the good. ied in 1467.—Mezeri.

PHILIP de Dreux, the ſon of Robert t de Dreux, embraced the eccleſiaſtical and became biſhop of Beauvais. But d a greater turn for warlike affairs than ous exerciſes. He joined the cruſaders, and diſtinguiſhed himſelf before Acre in 1191: Philip the auguſt having declared war againſt the Engliſh, the biſhop took up arms in his favour, but was taken priſoner, and kept in cloſe confinement. He complained to the pope, who demanded him as his ſon from Richard II. That monarch, however, ſent to the pope the bloody armour in which the biſhop was taken, accompanied with theſe words, "See, holy father, if this be thy ſon's coat." The pope would not recognize the habiliments as canonical, and the biſhop remained a priſoner till 1202. He afterwards fought againſt the Albigenſes, and died at Beauvais in 1217.—Ibid.

PHILIPS (Fabian), an Engliſh antiquary, was born at Preſtbury in Glouceſterſhire in 1601. He was a zealous loyaliſt in the civil wars, and wrote ſeveral pamphlets in behalf of the king. As ſilazer in the court of records he employed himſelf much in ſearching for precedents in favour of extending the royal prerogative. He died in 1690.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

PHILIPS (John), an Engliſh poet, was born in 1676, at Bampton, in Oxfordſhire, and educated at Chriſt church, Oxford. He wrote, the Splendid Shilling; Blenheim; and a poem entitled Cyder; which poſſeſs conſiderable merit, particularly the laſt. As he was greatly addicted to ſmoking, he generally contrived to introduce an encomium upon tobacco into his poems. He died in 1708.—Cibber's Lives of the Poets.

PHILIPS (Ambroſe), a dramatic writer and poet, was educated at St. John's college, Cambridge, where he wrote his paſtorals, which were once greatly admired, and praiſed by ſome good writers. Pope, however, ridiculed them with great ſeverity, at the ſame time that he exempted Philips's winter piece from his cenſure. He was alſo the author of a tragedy of merit, entitled, the Diſtreſſed Mother; and an abridged Life of archbiſhop Williams. He died in 1749, aged 78.—Biog. Dram.

PHILISTUS, a Greek writer, was a native of Syracuſe, and the favourite of the tyrant Dionyſius, who afterwards baniſhed him. In his exile he wrote the hiſtory of Sicily, and that of Dionyſius, which Cicero has commended. He was recalled by Dionyſius the younger, but was defeated by Dion, and put to death B. C. 367.—Voſſius Hiſt. Græc.

PHILLIPS (Catherine), an accompliſhed lady, was the daughter of Mr. Fowler, a merchant in London, and born in 1681. At the age of ſixteen ſhe became the wife of James Phillips, eſq. of Cardiganſhire. She died of the ſmall-pox in 1664. Her poems under the title of Orinda were printed in one volume folio, 1667, and a ſecond edition in 1678. In 1705 a ſmall volume of her letters was publiſhed, with the title of Letters from Orinda to Poliarchus.—Ballard's Britiſh Ladies.

PHILLIPS (Thomas), a divine of the Roman church, was born at Ickford, in Buck-inghamſhire in 1708. He was educated at St. Omer's, after which he entered among the Jeſuits; but did not long continue a member of that ſociety. In 1756 he publiſhed a Letter to a Student in Divinity, 8vo. which paſſed through three editions, and contains ſome excellent rules and obſervations. But the work by which he is moſt known is the Life of Cardinal Pole, 2 vols. 4to. 1764, and 2 vols. 8vo. 1767. In this performance he endeavoured to vindicate his church at the expenſe of the reformers. He was ably anſwered by ſeveral writers. By the intereſt of the pretender he obtained a prebend in the cathedral of Tongreſs. Mr. Phillips died at Liege in 1774. His ſiſter was abbeſs of the Benedictine nuns at Ghent. —Europ. Mag. Vol. XXX.

PHILO, a learned Jewiſh writer of Alexandria, was born of an illuſtrious family. He was one of the deputation ſent by the Jews to lay their complaints againſt the Greeks of Alexandria before the emperor Caligula, A. D. 40. He wrote ſeveral works in Greek, the principal of which is entitled, of the Contemplative Life. He was a zealous Platoniſt; and on that account has been ſtiled the Jewiſh Plato. The beſt edition of his works is that of London, 2 vols. folio, 1742.—Moreri.

PHILO of Byblos, a grammarian in the firſt century, who tranſlated into Greek the Phœnician hiſtory of Sanconiathon, fragments of which remain.—Moreri.

PHILO of Byzantium, an architect, who flouriſhed 300 B. C. He wrote a treatiſe of machines uſed in war, which is printed with the Mathematicæ veteres, 1693, folio. There is alſo attributed to him a piece, entitled, De ſeptem Orbis Spectaculis, Rome, 1640. —Felibien.

PHILOLAUS, a Pythagorean philoſopher of Crotona. He maintained that all things were made by harmony and neceſſity. He alſo aſſerted that the earth was round and has a circular motion. The golden verſes of Pythagoras have been attributed to him. He lived B. C. 392.—Diog. Laertius.

PHILOPŒMEN, general of the Achæans, was born at Megalopolis in Arcadia. He diſplayed great bravery in defending his native city againſt Cleomenes, king of Sparta; and in 208 he gained the famous battle of Meſſene over the Ætolians. For this he was made captain-general, and he ſlew ſoon after near Mantinea, Mechanidas, tyrant of Lacedemon, with his own hand. Nabis, the ſucceſſor of Mechanidas, defeated Philopœmen at ſea; but he recovered this loſs on land, took Sparta, razed its walls, and aboliſhed the laws of Lycurgus. The Meſſenians having revolted, Philopœmen marched againſt them, but was taken priſoner by falling from his horſe. Dinocrates the Meſſenian general threw him into priſon, and cauſed him to be poiſoned, B. C. 183.—Plutarch.

PHILOPONUS (John), a grammarian of Alexandria in the 7th century. He was the chief of the Tritheiſts, and wrote a Commentary on the Hexameron or Creation, and other works.—Dupin.

PHILOSTORGIUS, an hiſtorian of the 5th century, was a native of Cappadocia, and an Arian. He wrote an Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory of his own Time, which was publiſhed by Valeſius at Paris with Euſebius in 1673; but the ſeparate edition of Godefroi, 1642, 4to. is the beſt.—Dupin.

PHILOSTRATUS (Flavius), a famous ſophiſt, was born at Lemnos or Athens. He reſided at Rome in the court of Julia, wife of Septimus Severus. He wrote the Life of Apollonius Tyaneus, a pretended philoſopher. It is an extravagant romance full of fables. Philoſtratus alſo left four books called pictures. His works were printed at Leipſic in Greek and Latin, folio, 1709. His nephew wrote the Lives of the Sophiſts. —Voſſius de Hiſt. Græc.

PHILOXENUS, a dithyrambic poet of Cythera, lived at the court of Dionyſius of Syracuſe, who baniſhed him to the ſtone quarries for cenſuring his verſes. He died at Epheſus about 380 B. C.—Ælian Var. Hiſt.

PHILPOT (John), an Engliſh divine, was born in Hampſhire, and bred at New College, Oxford. He became a zealous reformer, and in the reign of Edward VI. was made archdeacon of Wincheſter; but in that of Mary he was brought before biſhop Gardiner, convicted of hereſy, and burnt in Smithfield in 1555.—Strype's Eccles. Mem. Fox's Acts and Mon.

PHINEAS, the ſon of Eleazar, and grandſon of Aaron, was the third high prieſt of the Jews. Zambri, one of the princes of Iſrael, having taken a Midianitiſh woman into his tent, Phineas followed and ſlew them, B. C. 1455.—Bible.

PHIPPS, ſee Mulgrave.

PHLEGON, ſurnamed Tralian from the place of his birth, a city of Lydia. He was the freedman of Adrian, and wrote a Hiſtory of Marvellous Things; alſo a Hiſtory of the Olympiads; part of which is extant. He is ſaid to have mentioned the darkneſs at our Saviour's crucifixion. The beſt edition of his remains is that of Meurſius at Leyden, Greek and Latin, 1612, 4to.—Voſſius de Hiſt. Græc.

PHOCAS, emperor of the eaſt. He uſurped the throne by murdering the emperor Maurice and his children in 602. He put to death a great number of perſons, and having inveigled Narſes, a Perſian general, by fair promiſes, to Conſtantinople, he cauſed him to be burnt alive. Heraclius, governor of Africa, conſpired againſt this monſter, and ſlew him in 610.—Univ. Hiſt.

PHOCAS (John), a monk of the 12th century, was a native of the iſle of Crete, but others ſay of Calabria. He had ſerved in the armies of the emperor Emanuel Comnenus, but diſguſted with the military life, he join-a religious ſociety on Mount Carmel. He wrote a Deſcription of the Holy Land, Syria and Phenicia.—Moreri.

PHOCION, a celebrated Athenian, was the diſciple of Plato and Xenocrates. He diſplayed great eloquence, and oppoſed Demoſthenes, when that great orator endeavoured to raiſe the Athenians to declare war againſt Philip. Phocion ſaw in that meaſure the ruin of Athens; but when the war commenced he manifeſted the patriotiſm and talents of a brave general. Philip and Alexander made ſeveral attempts to corrupt him, but in vain. Phocion held the government of Athens forty-five times; but notwithſtanding his ſplendid virtues and abilities, he could not eſcape perſecution. He was accuſed of treachery, and depoſed, on which he fled, but was taken and poiſoned B.C. 318. His ſon Phocus was a man of licentious character, but he avenged the fate of his father upon his accuſers, and erected a ſtatue to his memory.—Plutarch. Corn. Nepos.

PHOCYLIDES, a Greek poet and philoſopher, was a native of Miletus, and lived about 540 B.C. There is a poem extant which goes by his name, but it is not accounted genuine.—Voſſius de Poet. Græc.

PHORMIO, a peripatetic philoſopher, who taught with reputation at Epheſus. Hannibal being of that city, and going to his academy, Phormio had the folly to make a diſcourſe to him on the military art, which only ſerved to render him ridiculous in the eyes of the warrior.—Cicero de Oratore.

PHORMIO, an Athenian general, who ſucceeded Callias B.C. 432, and gave great proofs of his courage in the Peloponneſian war, and in defeating the fleets of the Lacedæmonians. He ſold his eſtates to pay his army, and refuſed the rank of commander in chief.—Thucydides.

PHOTINUS, biſhop of Surmium, and the chief of a ſect called Photinians. He maintained that Chriſt was only a man, for which he was depoſed in the council of Sirmium, 351. He was exiled by Conſtantius, recalled by Julian, and again baniſhed by Valentinian. He died in 376.—Cave. Dupin.

PHOTIUS, patriarch of Conſtantinople, was born of a noble family in that city. His talents were great, and advanced him to ſeveral high offices in the ſtate; after which he entered into orders; and on the depoſition of Ignatius aſpired to the patriarchate, which he obtained in an irregular manner 857. This occaſioned a ſchiſm, and Photius exerciſed great ſeverities on thoſe who adhered to Ignatius. Baſil, the Macedonian, expelled him in 869. By flattery, however, he gained the favour of Baſil, who reſtored him in 877. But in 886 Leo cauſed him to be again deprived, and confined in a monaſtery, where he died in 891. His works are, 1. Bibliotheca, or Commentary on ſeveral authors of antiquity, printed at Rouen 1653, folio, with notes; 2. Nomocanon, or a collection of the canons of the church, printed at Oxford in 1672, folio; 3. a Collection of Letters, 1651, fol.—Dupin. Fleury. Eccl. Hiſt.

PHRÆAS (John), a native of London, and fellow of Braſenoſe college, Oxford. He profeſſed phyſic and the belles lettres at Padua; and pope Paul, to whom he dedicated his Latin verſions of Xenophon and Diodorus Siculus, gave him the biſhopric of Bath. He died in 1465.—Pits. Bayle.

PHRAATES III. king of Parthia, ſucceeded Pacorus. He married his daughter to Tigranes, ſon of the king of Armenia, and attempted to place his ſon-in-law on that throne, but without ſucceſs. He was murdered by his two ſons, Orodes and Mithridates, B.C. 36.—Univ. Hiſt.

PHRAATES IV. was placed on the throne by his father Orodes, whom he ſoon after murdered, as he did his brothers. He was depoſed by his ſubjects, who placed Tiridates on the throne, but Phraates, by the aid of the Scythians, recovered his throne B.C. 23. He was poiſoned by his ſon, who was expelled by the Parthians for the atrocious act.—Ibid.

PHRANZA (George), a Greek hiſtorian, was maſter of the wardrobe to the emperors of Conſtantinople, when that city was taken by the Turks. He then went to Corfu, where he wrote a Chronicle which ends with the year 1461.—Voſſius de Hiſt. Græc.

PHRYNE, a famous courtezan of Greece about 328 B.C. She was the miſtreſs of Praxiteles, who made a ſtatue of her. She acquired immenſe riches, and offered to rebuild Thebes, provided this inſcription ſhould be placed on the walls, "Alexander deſtroyed this city, and the harlot Phryne reſtored it." But her offer was rejected.—Quintilian.

PHRYNICUS, a Greek orator, was a native of Bithynia, and flouriſhed under Commodus. There remain of his works, 1. A Treatiſe on the Attic Dialect, printed in Greek and Latin ſeveral times, in 4to; 2. The Sophiſtical Apparatus, a collection of Greek phraſes. There were two others of this name, the one a tragic and the other a comic poet.—Voſſius de Script. Græc.

PHRYNIS, a muſician of Mitylene, who gained the prize at the muſical meeting at Athens, 438 B.C. He added two ſtrings to the lyre, which before his time had only ſeven.—Moreri.

PIA (Philip-Nicholas), an eminent chemiſt, was born at Paris in 1721. He was principal apothecary to the hoſpital at Straſburgh, and elected ſheriff of Paris in 1770. He diſtinguiſhed himſelf by an eſtabliſhment for the recovery of drowned perſons, and he invented inſtruments proper to be uſed on ſuch ſubjects. The revolution deſtroyed the uſeful work, and reduced the author to poverty. He died in 1799. He wrote ſeveral volumes on his favourite and humane project.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

PIAZZA (Jerom Bartholomew), a native of Alexandria in Italy, who had been a judge in the inquiſition, but on embracing the proteſtant religion he quitted Italy and ſettled in England. He taught Italian and French at Cambridge, where he died about 1745. He wrote a curious account of the inquiſition.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

PIAZETTA (John Baptiſt), a celebrated painter of Venice, was born in 1682, and died in 1754. His figures are well deſigned and executed, and are much in the ſtyle of Michael Angelo Buonarotti.—D'Argenville.

PICARD (John), a French prieſt and prior of Rillé in Anjou, was a native of La Fleche. He had a great knowlege of the mathematics, particularly aſtronomy. He became a member of the academy of ſciences in 1666; and five years afterwards was ſent by the king to Uranienburg, which was built by Tycho Brahe to make celeſtial obſerverſations. Picard brought with him from Denmark many manuſcripts of Tycho's: and was the firſt who obſerved the mercurial phoſphorus in the barometer. He was engaged in meaſuring a degree of the meridian, and in determining the meridian of France. Picard died in 1683. He wrote a Treatiſe on Levelling; On Dioptrics; On Meaſures; On the Meaſurement of the Earth; Journey to Uranienburg, or Aſtronomical Obſervations made in Denmark, &c. He was the firſt who applied the teleſcope to a quadrant.—Moreri. Hutton.

PICARD (Michael), a learned German, was born at Nuremburg in 1574. He became profeſſor of philoſophy and poetry at Altorf, where he died in 1620. He wrote Commentaries on Works of Ariſtotle; Diſputations; Harangues; Critical Eſſays; and a Latin Tranſlation of Oppian. After his death was publiſhed his treatiſe, entitled, Liber Singularis periculorum criticorum.—Ibid.

PICART (Bernard), an eminent engraver, was born at Paris in 1673. He ſtudied engraving under his father, and architecture under Sebaſtian le Clerc. On account of his religion he went to Amſterdam, where he was chiefly employed by the bookſellers. He died in 1733. A fine collection of his engravings was publiſhed at Amſterdam in folio, 1734: but his greateſt performance is an illuſtration of religious ceremonies of all nations in the world. His plates alſo for a work, entitled, the Temple of the Muſes, are very fine. Stephen Picart, the father, died at Amſterdam in 1721, aged 90.—Moreri.

PICCINI (Nicholas), a celebrated muſician, was born in the kingdom of Naples. Leo and Durante were his firſt maſters: the latter called him his ſon. From Italy he went to Paris, where the connoiſſeurs were divided in opinion between him and Gluck. In the revolution Piccini returned to Naples; where he was deſcribed as being a Jacobin, on which he went again to France, and died at Paſſy in 1800, aged 72. His principal operas are, Roland; Atys; Iphigenia in Tauris; and Dido.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

PICCOLOMINI (Alexander), archbiſhop of Patras, and co-adjutor of Sienna, where he was born in 1508. He wrote ſeveral dramatic pieces of reputation. His other works are, a Treatiſe on the Sphere; Theory of the Planets; Moral Inſtitutes, &c. He was the firſt who wrote on philoſophical ſubjects in Italian. There is alſo attributed to him a work, entitled, Dialogo della bella Creanza della Donne, 1574, 8vo. He died in 1578.—Tiraboſchi.

PICCOLOMINI (Francis), of the ſame family as the preceding, was profeſſor of philoſophy many years at ſeveral univerſities in Italy, and died at Sienne in 1604, aged 84. His works are; 1. Commentaries on Ariſtotle; 2. Univerſa Philoſophia de Moribus.—Ibid.

PICCOLOMINI (James), a cardinal, whoſe real name was Ammanati, but which he changed out of reſpect to pope Pius II. his patron. He was born at Lucca in 1422, and became ſucceſſively biſhop of Maſſa and Freſcati, and in 1461, cardinal. He died in 1479. Sixtus IV. ſeized his property after his death, and applied it to the building of a hoſpital. He wrote a Hiſtory of his Own Times, and Letters which have been printed.—Moreri.

PICHEGRU (Charles), a French general, was born in 1761, at Arbois in Franche-comte. His parentage was mean, but he received a good education under the monks in his native town; after which he entered into the army, and roſe to be ſerjeant. The revolution elevated him to the rank of general, and in 1793 he gained a victory over the combined armies at Hagenau; in conſequence of which he ſucceeded to the command of the army of the north. Shortly after he relieved Landau, and compelled prince Cobourg to abandon the Netherlands. He next marched into Holland, of which he made a complete conqueſt. In 1797 he was elected a member of the legiſlative body, but his oppoſition to the directory, and his ſpeeches in favour of the emigrants, occaſioned an accuſation againſt him of his deſign to reſtore royalty. He was ordered without trial to be tranſported to Cayenne, from whence he eſcaped to England, where he remaind till the ſpring of 1801, when he went to Paris, where he was apprehended and ſent to the Temple. April 6, in the morning, he was found ſtrangled in his bed by means of a black ſilk handkerchief twiſted tight round his neck and faſtened with a ſhort ſtick. The body was examined and expoſed, and a laboured account publiſhed, to make it appear that he had laid violent hands on himſelf; but all the circumſtances warrant a different concluſion, and prove that he was aſſaſſinated.—Anecd. of French Republic. Gent. Mag.

PICQUET (Francis), a celebrated miſſionary, was born at Lyons in 1626. He was nominated conſul at Aleppo in Syria, in

552. He rendered great ſervices there to ne chriſtians, and having embraced the ec-eſiaſtical ſtate was appointed by pope Alex-ader VIII. vicar apoſtolic of Bagdad, and a ſhop in Macedonia. The king of France ominated him ambaſſador to the court of erſia, where he died in 1685. He furniſhed veral pieces to Nicole for his great work on e Perpetuity of the Faith.—Moreri.

PICTET (Benedict), profeſſor of divinity Geneva, where he was born in 1655. He as ſolicited to accept the theological chair Leyden, which he declined, and died in s native city in 1724. He wrote Chriſtian heology, in Latin, 3 vols. 4to; Chriſtian orality, 8 vols. 12mo; Hiſtory of the 11th d 12th Centuries, 2 vols. 4to.; Treatiſe ainſt Religious Indifference, and other orks.—Ibid.

PIDON (Francis), lord of St. Olon, was rn in Touraine in 1640. He was gentle-an in ordinary to Louis XIV. whoſe me-oirs he wrote. He was ſent ambaſſador to noa, Madrid, and Morocco. Of the latter antry he publiſhed a curious account in 94, 12mo. He died in 1720.—Ibid.

PIERCE (Edward), an hiſtorical and land-pe painter in the reign of Charles I. He conſiderable ſkill alſo in architectural igns, but the fire of London in 1666 de-yed moſt of his works. He died in Lon-about 1715.—Walpole. Vertue.

PIERCE (James), a learned preſbyterian ine, was born at Exeter, where he had a ſiderable congregation till 1725, when on ount of his preaching arianiſm, a violent teſt aroſe, and a number of pamphlets re publiſhed; one of which, entitled the ſtern Inquiſition, was written by our au-r, who was diſmiſſed from his meeting, which he and Mr. Hallet opened a new . Mr. Pierce publiſhed a Vindication of Proteſtant Diſſenters, in Latin and Eng-, 8vo.; a Commentary on St. Paul's ſtles, 4to.; and Several Sermons. He about 1730.

PIERING, a Tuſcan painter, was born ut 1500, of poor parents. He was brought by a painter called Vaga, whoſe name he med. Raphael employed him in ſeveral t works; and he ornamented the palace he prince of Doria at Genoa. He died in 7.—Felibien. De Piles.

PIERQUIN (John), a French eccleſiaſtic, born at Charleville, and ſtudied at ims. He held the living of Chatel in dioceſe of Rheims forty years, and died 742, aged 70. His works are on the ur of Negroes; on the Sabbath of Sor-rs; on Magical Transformations; on phibious Men; Diſſertation on the Con-ion of Jeſus Chriſt; Life of St. Juvinis; he Conjuration of the Dead, and other ous ſubjects.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

PIERSON (Chriſtopher), a painter, was at the Hague in 1631. He painted ry and portraits, but excelled chiefly in repreſentations of hunting. He died in 1714. —Pilkington.

PIETRASANTA (Sylveſter), better known by his Latin name Petraſancta, a claſſical author in heraldry. He was the ingenious contriver of the method of diſtinguiſhing by points, dots, and lines, the different colours in engravings. His capital work, entitled, Teſſeræ Gentilitiæ, would be read with pleaſure if it were not encumbered with barbarous Latin terms. Of his life nothing more is known than that he was an Italian jeſuit; and by the dates of his ſeveral works, the laſt of which, Notæ in Petrum Molinæum, was reprinted at Antwerp in 1638, we may preſume that he lived at the end of the 16th century.

PIETRO DI PETRI, an hiſtorical painter, was a native of Rome, and died in 1716, aged 51. He was the diſciple of Carlo Maratti, whoſe manner he imitated.—Ibid.

PIETRO DELLA FRANCISCA, a painter, was a native of Florence, and died in 1443. He was employed by Nicholas V. in painting the Vatican; and wrote books on arithmetic and geometry.—Ibid.

PIGALLE (John Baptiſte), a ſculptor, was born at Paris in 1714. By the generoſity of Couſton the elder, he was enabled to viſit Italy, where he ſtudied the works of the greateſt maſters. On his return to France he executed ſeveral beautiful deſigns, as a Venus, which Louis XV. preſented to the king of Pruſſia, a ſtatue of Mercury, another of Voltaire, and a fine one in bronze of Louis XV. who conferred on him the order of St. Michael. He was chancellor of the academy of painting at Paris, and died there in 1785. —Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

PIGHIUS (Albert), a Roman catholic divine, was born at Kempen in Overyſſel, in 1490, and ſtudied at Cologne and Louvaine. He died at Utrecht, where he was provoſt of the church of St. John, in 1542. He wrote againſt Luther, Melancthon, and other reformers. His principal performance is entitled, Aſſertio Hierarchiæ, folio.—Moreri.

PIGHIUS (Stephen Vinand), nephew of the preceding, was born at Kempen in 1520. He ſettled at Rome, and became librarian to cardinal de Granville. He died in 1604. His works are; 1. Annals of Rome, in Latin, 3 vols. folio.; 2. Hercules Prodicius, fol. This is an account of the author's travels in Italy.—Ibid.

PIGNONI (Simon), an hiſtorical painter, was born at Florence in 1612. His ſubjects are chiefly religious, and his pieces are ſcarce and valuable.—Pilkington.

PIGNORIUS (Laurence), a learned Italian, was born at Padua in 1571, and died of the plague in 1631. He was canon of Treviſo, and wrote, 1. De Servis et eorum apud Veteres miniſteriis; 2. Characteres Ægyptii; 3. Origini di Padoua.—Tiraboſchi.

PILATE (Pontius), a Roman, who became governor of Judea A.D. 26. He commanded in that country ten years. The Jews brought Jeſus Chriſt before Pilate, who perceiving that malice and envy occaſioned their charges, would have ſcourged the priſoner and diſmiſſed him. But being threatened with the wrath of Cæſar, Pilate delivered Jeſus, whom he had pronounced innocent, to be crucified. This governor was guilty of great oppreſſion and cruelties, for which he was recalled by Tiberius and baniſhed to Gaul, where he ſlew himſelf A.D. 37. A letter paſſes under his name, giving an account of the miracles and reſurrection of Chriſt to Tiberius, but it is generally deemed a forgery.—Cave.

Pilatre du Rosier (Francis), was born at Metz in 1756. After ſerving his apprenticeſhip to an apothecary he viſited Paris, where he applied chiefly to the ſtudy of chemiſtry. The diſcovery of Montgolfier opened a field for the genius of Pilatre. He was one of the firſt aërial navigators; and after ſeveral aſcenſions he undertook, with another perſon named Romain, to make a voyage to England. They aſcended at Boulogne, June 15, 1785, but at the height of 1500 feet the balloon took fire, and the aëronauts were daſhed to pieces in the fall.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

Piles (Roger de), a painter, was born at Clameci in 1635. He was entered a ſtudent of the Sorbonne; and in 1662 became tutor to the ſon of the preſident Amelot, with whom he made a tour to Rome, where De Piles had ample opportunities for gratifying the taſte which he poſſeſſed for the fine arts. The younger Amelot, being appointed ambaſſador to Venice, De Piles accompanied him as ſecretary. He afterwards attended him in the ſame capacity to Liſbon and Switzerland. In 1692 he was ſent by the miniſter to the Hague as a picture-dealer, but in fact to negociate with thoſe who were friends to France. The object of his miſſion being diſcovered, he was ſent to priſon, where he wrote his Lives of the Painters. On his return to France he obtained a penſion. He died in 1709. He was a member of the academy of painting. De Piles was a great admirer of Rubens, whom he imitated with ſucceſs. Beſides the above work he wrote an Abridgment of Anatomy, adapted to painting and ſculpture; a Courſe of Painting, and other pieces of merit on that ſubject.—D'Argenville. Moreri.

Pilkington (Lætitia), a female author, was the daughter of Dr. Van Lewen, a phyſician of Dublin, where ſhe was born in 1712. She married Mr. Pilkington, an Iriſh clergyman of literary talents; but this marriage proved unhappy, owing to the levity of the wife and jealouſy of the huſband. They ſeparated: and Mrs. Pilkington came to London, where ſhe ſupported herſelf by her pen, and upon charity. She was intimate with Swift, of whom ſhe relates ſeveral curious anecdotes. Her poetical talents were reſpectable, and her letters lively and ſenſible. She died at Dublin in 1750.—Memoirs by herſelf.

Pilon (Frederic), a dramatic writer, was born at Cork in Ireland in 1750. He ſtudied at Edinburgh under Cullen, but forſook the medical line and went on the ſtage. His ſucceſs, however, as a performer was indifferent, and he came to London, where he turned author. Among the firſt of his performances was "An Eſſay on the Character of Hamlet as performed by Mr. Henderſon:" which procured him the friendſhip of the elder Colman. In 1778 he produced the Invaſion, or a Trip to Brighthelmſtone, which was well received. He died of diſſipation in 1788. His principal pieces are, The Humours of an Election, a farce, 1780; and He would be a Soldier, a comedy, performed with applauſe at Covent Garden in 1786.—Europ. Mag.

Pilpay, an Indian bramin, gymnoſophiſt and philoſopher, was, it is believed, a governor of part of Hindoſtan, and counſellor to an Indian king, whom he inſtructed by fables, which have been tranſlated into numerous languages. The Shipwreck, or Floating Iſlands, is another work attributed to Pilpay, who lived before the chriſtian æra.—Life by Galland.

Pinæus, or Pineau (Severin du), was born at Chartres, and died at Paris in 1619. He was principal of the king's ſurgeons, and excelled in operating for the ſtone, on which he wrote a Treatiſe, and another on the ſigns of virginity.—Moreri.

Pinas (John), a painter, was born at Haerlem, about 1596. He ſtudied in Italy, and his ſtyle of colouring was imitated by Rembrandt. His brother James was alſo an eminent artiſt.—Houbraken.

Pindar, the prince of lyric poets, was born at Thebes in Bæotia about 500 B.C. In his youth he bore away the poetical prize from Myrtis; but was leſs ſucceſsful in his conteſt with Corinna, who defeated him five times. It is ſaid, however, by ſome authors, that ſhe owed her victory leſs to her poetry than to her charms. At the Olympic games, where women were excluded, Pindar conquered all his rivals, and received the greateſt honours. Part of the preſents allotted to Apollo were ordered to be given to him, and a ſtatue was erected to his honour at Thebes. He died at the public theatre about 440 B.C. When the Spartans took Thebes they ſpared the houſe of Pindar, as did Alexander the Great. The beſt editions of this poet are thoſe of Heyne, 4to. Gottingen, 1773; and Glaſgow, 12mo. 1774.—Biog. Claſſica.

Pineau (Gabriel du), a French lawyer, was born at Angers in 1573. He was conſulted in all the great affairs of his time, and Mary de Medicis made him maſter of requeſts. Louis XIII. conferred on him the poſt of major and captain-general of Angiers, where his conduct gained him the appellation of father of the people. He died in 1644. His works are, Notes on the Can

w; Commentaries, Obſervations, and Con-tations, on Important Queſtions, 2 vols. o.—Moreri.

PINEDA (John), a learned jeſuit, was n at Seville in 1572. He taught philo-hy and theology in ſeveral colleges; and ote Commentaries on Job and Eccleſi-es; alſo a curious work entitled, De rebus omonis, folio; a Univerſal Hiſtory of the urch, in Spaniſh, 4 vols. folio; and a tory of Ferdinand III. in the ſame lan-ge. He died in 1637.—Moreri.

PINELLI (John Vincent), a learned Ita-n, was born at Naples of a noble Genoeſe ily. After receiving an excellent edu-ion he fixed his reſidence at Padua, where formed a magnificent library, ſtored with books and valuable manuſcripts. The ſt learned men in Europe were among his reſpondents, and his literary treaſures re always open for their uſe. He died in 1. A deſcendant of his, Maphæus PI-LLI, was a printer at Venice, where he l in 1785. He formed a very valuable ary, which was purchaſed by a London kſeller, and ſold by auction in 1790.—e of Pinelli by Gualdo. Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

PINGRE (Alexander Guy), an eminent onomer, was born at Paris in 1711. He lied the ſciences with intenſe application, became librarian of St Genevieve at Pa-

In 1760 he was ſent to the South Sea obſerve the famous tranſit of Venus over ſun's diſk. He was afterwards employed rove the time-pieces of Le Roy, and was itted a member of the French academy, of the inſtitute. He died in 1796. His ks are, 1. State of the Heavens from 4 to 1757; 2. Memoirs of Diſcoveries le in the South Seas, 4to.; 3. an Hiſto-l and Theoretical Treatiſe on Comets, 2 s. 4to.; 4. Tranſlation of Manilius's ronomics, 8vo.; 5. Hiſtory of Aſtro-y in the 17th century.—Nouv. Dict.

PINSON (Richard), printer to Henry VII. VIII. was a native of Normandy, and ame ſervant to William Caxton. He ted Magna Charta, and ſeveral books ch are now ſcarce and valuable. He about. 1530.—Ames's Hiſt Printing. nger.

PINTOR (Peter), a Spaniſh phyſician, was tive of Valentia in Spain, and phyſician ope Alexander VI. He died at Rome in 3, aged 83. Two works by him are ex-nely ſcarce, 1. Aggregator Sententiarum orum de curatione peſtilentiæ, 1499, fo-2. De morbo fœdo et occulto, his tem-bus affligenti, 1500, 4to. In this laſt he es the venereal diſeaſe to be known be-1496.—Moreri.

PINTURICCIO (Bernardin), a celebrated ter, was born at Peruſia in 1454. He cipally painted hiſtory, but excelled in raits. He died in 1513.—Pilk.

PIPER (Francis), a painter, was born in t. Being of a facetious diſpoſition, he delighted in drawing ugly faces; ſo that if a man were not handſome enough to deſire to ſee his picture, he ſat in danger in his company. As he was in affluent circumſtances, he took nothing for his pieces. Piper died in London in 1740, by a ſurgeon's pricking an artery in bleeding him.—Walpole.

PIRANESI (John Baptiſt), an architect and engraver of Venice. He was remarkable for a bold and free ſtyle of etching; which he generally drew upon the plate at once. He died in 1778. His engravings conſiſt of 15 vols. folio. His daughter Laura Piraneſi, who died in 1785, engraved views in the manner of her father. She had alſo two brothers who were good engravers.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

PIROMALLI (Paul), a Dominican of Calabria, who diſtinguiſhed himſelf as a miſionary in the Eaſt, and as the papal nuncio in Poland, where he reconciled ſeveral Armenians to his church. On his return by ſea to Italy he was taken by the corſairs, and carried to Tunis. Being ranſomed he went to Rome, where he was employed in reviſing the Armenian verſion of the Bible. He was afterwards ſent to the Eaſt, with the title of biſhop. After ſpending nine years he returned to Italy, and died in 1667. He compiled two dictionaries, the one Latin and Perſian, the other Armenian and Latin; alſo an Armenian Grammar.—Moreri.

PIRON (Alexis), a dramatic poet, was born at Dijon in 1689. He was the author of an excellent comedy called "Metromanie," and died in 1773. His plays, poems, tales, epigrams, &c. have been collected in 7 vols. 8vo. Piron was a man of infinite wit and humour.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

PISAN (Thomas), an aſtrologer of Bologna, who was invited to Venice by Dr. Forli, counſellor of the republic, whoſe daughter he married. At the invitation of Charles V. of France he went to his court. He died there about 1380; and on the very day, as it is ſaid, which he had predicted.—Moreri.

PISAN (Chriſtina de), daughter of the above, was born at Venice about 1363. She accompanied her father to France, where ſhe married, but became a widow at the age of 25. She wrote the Hiſtory of Troy in verſe: Treaſure of the Ladies; a Collection of Poems; the Hiſtory of Charles V. king of France, by whom ſhe was penſioned. She died about 1420.—Moreri.

PISCATOR (John Fiſcher, or), a German divine, who profeſſed theology at Straſburg, but on embracing Calviniſm, he was obliged to retire to Herborn. He died in 1546. His works are, 1. Commentaries on the Old and New Teſtament, much eſteemed; 2. Amica Collatio de Religione cum C. Vorſtio, 4to.—Melch. Adam. Vit. Germ. Theol.

PISISTRATUS, an Athenian general, was a deſcendant of Codrus, and diſtinguiſhed himſelf early in life by his courage, particularly at the taking of Salamis; but after ſerv-

ing his country with glory he endeavoured to enſlave it. For this purpoſe he aſſumed the convenient maſk of patriotiſm; but Solon was not to be deceived, and expoſed his ambitious views. Piſiſtratus to effect his object had recourſe to an extraordinary device. Having inflicted ſeveral wounds on himſelf, he appeared before the people, and pretended that an attempt had been made to aſſaſſinate him. The credulous Athenians believed the tale, and aſſigned him a guard, which he increaſed, and by that means made himſelf maſter of the citadel. The citizens out of fear acknowleged him their ſovereign, but Megacles and Lycurgus united their forces, and expelled Piſiſtratus from Athens. Shortly after Megacles offered to aſſiſt Piſiſtratus on condition of his marrying his daughter, to which the tyrant conſented; and to ſecure the affections of the Athenians, he cauſed a woman dreſſed as Minerva to ride through the city in a car, proclaiming the praiſes of Piſiſtratus. The people thinking that the goddeſs had actually deſcended from heaven, joyfully received the tyrant, who married the daughter of Megacles, but afterwards uſed her ſo ill, that her father gathered a force, and compelled him to quit the city. Some years after he made himſelf maſter of Marathon, and having taken Athens by ſurprize, put to death all the friends of Megacles. He built an academy, which he furniſhed with a valuable library; and died in poſſeſſion of the ſovereign power, B.C. 528.—Plutarch. Thucydides. Juſtin.

Piso, an eminent Roman family, which produced ſome great men, as, 1. Lucius Calpurnius Piso, ſurnamed Frugi, on account of his frugality. He was conſul B.C. 149, and finiſhed the war in Sicily. He compoſed annals and orations which are loſt. 2. Caius Piso, conſul 67 B.C. was the author of a law to reſtrain the factions which uſually attended the election of the chief magiſtrates. 3. Cneius Piso, was conſul under Auguſtus, and governor of Syria under Tiberius, in which ſituation he behaved with great cruelty. He was charged with poiſoning Germanicus, on which account he deſtroyed himſelf A.D. 20. 4. Lucius Piso, a ſenator who attended the emperor Valerian into Perſia in 258. On the death of that emperor he aſſumed the imperial title, but was defeated by Valens, who put him to death in 261.—Tacitus. Suetonius.

Pistorius (John), was born at Nidda in 1546. He applied to the ſtudy of medicine, afterwards to the law, and laſtly to divinity. From being a zealous proteſtant he turned catholic, and became counſellor to the emperor, and provoſt of the cathedral of Breſlaw. He died in 1608. His works are, 1. Artis Cabaliſticæ Scriptores, which is a curious collection; 2. Scriptores rerum Polonicarum; 3. Scriptores de rebus Germanicis, 3 vols. folio.—Moreri.

Pitau (Nicholas), an engraver of Antwerp, who diſplayed great talents by his engravings of the holy family after Raphael. He alſo executed ſome fine portraits, particularly one of St. Francis de Sales. He died in 1671, aged 38.—New. Dict. Hiſt.

Pitcairne (Archibald), an eminent phyſician, was born at Edinburgh in 1652. He ſtudied divinity and afterwards law at the univerſity of his native place; but quitted both thoſe profeſſions for mathematics and medicine. After publiſhing a theſis, in which he endeavoured to prove that the doctrine of the circulation of the blood was known to Hippocrates, he accepted an invitation from the curators of the univerſity of Leyden to be profeſſor of phyſic, in 1692. He did not continue at Leyden above a year, but returned to Edinburgh and married. In 1701 he publiſhed Diſſertationes Medicæ, 1 vol. 4to. of which he printed a more correct edition in 1713. He alſo wrote ſome Latin poems of the ſatyrical kind, chiefly againſt the principal authors of the revolution. He died in 1713. His lectures delivered at Leyden were printed after his death.—Biog. Brit.

Pithou (Peter), a learned Frenchman, was born at Troyes in 1539. He was bred a proteſtant, and narrowly eſcaped in the maſſacre of St. Bartholomew. Afterwards he turned Roman catholic, and became attorney-general in the chamber of juſtice of Guienne. He defended the rights of the kings andchurch of France againſt the court of Rome with great ability, and died in 1596. His works are, 1. Treatiſe on the Liberties of the Gallican Church, 4 vols. folio; 2. Commentaries on the Cuſtoms of Troyes, 4to.; 3. Notes on various Authors To Pithou we are indebted for drawing Phædrus, the Novella of Juſtinian, and other antient remains, from obſcurity.—Life by Groſley.

Pithou (Francis), brother of the preceding, was born at Troyes in 1544. He became attorney-general in the chamber of juſtice eſtabliſhed under Henry IV. He died in 1621. He diſcovered the manuſcript of the fables of Phædrus, which he publiſhed in conjunction with his brother. His own works are, 1. Body of the Canon Law, 2 vols. folio; 2. the Laws of the Romans compared with thoſe of Moſes; 3. Obſervationes ad Codicem, &c.—Moreri.

Pitiscus (Samuel), a learned antiquary, was born at Zutphen in 1637. He became rector of the college at his native place, and afterwards of that of St. Jerome at Utrecht, where he died in 1717. His works are, 1. Lexicon Antiquitatum Romanarum, 3 vols. folio; 2. editions of antient authors with notes. He is not to be miſtaken for Bartholomew Pitiſcus, author of a book entitled Theſaurus Mathematicus, folio, 1613, in which year he died. He alſo wrote a Treatiſe on Trigonometry.—Moreri.

Pitot (Henry), a French mathematician, was born at Aramont in Languedoc in 1695. He learnt the mathematics without a maſter, in 1724 was admitted a member of the demy of ſciences. His work on the theory manœuvring of ſhips was tranſlated into gliſh, in one volume octavo, and for which was elected a member of the royal ſo- y. He was appointed chief engineer of guedoc and inſpector general of the ca- The city of Montpellier being in want water, Pitot conſtructed an aqueduct, ch ſupplies that place from a diſtance of e leagues. He died in 1771. He wrote ers in the memoirs of the academy.— v. Dict. Hiſt.

ITS, or PITSEUS (John), an Engliſh rapher, was born at Alton in Hampſhire, 560, and educated at Wykeham's ſchool Wincheſter, after which he went to ims, where he taught rhetoric and Greek. civil wars breaking out in France, he ed to Lorraine, and obtained a canonry in church of Verdun. The ducheſs of es appointed him her confeſſor; and on death he became dean of Verdun, where ied in 1616. His work De illuſtribus liæ Scriptoribus, was printed after his in 1 vol. folio. It contains the lives engliſh roman catholic writers. He was the author of ſome religious pieces.— . Brit.

TT (Chriſtopher), an Engliſh poet and e, was born at Blandford in Dorſet- in 1699. He was a member of New ge, Oxford, where he took the degree A. in 1724. On entering into orders btained the living of Pimpern, in his na- county, where he died in 1748. Mr. is known by an excellent tranſlation of Eneid. He alſo tranſlated Vida's Art oetry, and wrote ſome ingenious poems vol. 8vo.—Gen. Biog. Dict. Nichols's

TT (William), a celebrated ſtateſman, he ſon of Robert Pitt, eſq. of Bocon- in Cornwall, where he was born in He was educated at Eton, from ce he removed to Trinity college, Ox- He was for ſome time a cornet of ons, but in 1735 he quitted the army, ing choſen into parliament for the bo- of Old Sarum. His talents as an ora- ere ſoon diſplayed in oppoſition to ſir t Walpole, and had ſo great an effect he ducheſs of Marlborough, who had a hatred to that miniſter, bequeathed to Pitt, by her will, a legacy of 10,000l. e change of adminiſtration he was made vice-treaſurer of Ireland, and paymaſter- al of the army, which places he reſign- 1755; but the year following he was ted ſecretary of ſtate for the ſouth de- ent. In a few months afterwards he gain out of office; but an efficient ad- ration being wanted in 1757 he return- his ſituation as ſecretary of ſtate. The which the nation was then engaged d a new aſpect; activity prevailed in department of the government; the Eng- rces conquered by land and ſea; the moſt brilliant achievements were attained on the Continent, and in different parts of the world. The power of France was humiliated, and England added to her colonial poſſeſſions ſeveral valuable places in the Eaſt Indies and America. Such was the ſtate of affairs on the death of George II. ſoon after which a change taking place by the coming of lord Bute into power, Mr. Pitt reſigned. The peace of 1763 followed; but it was not popular; and a new adminiſtration was formed in 1766, of which Mr. Pitt had a ſhare as lord privy ſeal, and at this time he was created earl of Chatham. This miniſtry, however, being ill arranged, was diſſolved in 1768. From the beginning of the differences between England and the American colonies his lordſhip was a vigorous, an eloquent, but an ineffectual oppoſer of coercive meaſures; and his popularity, which had for ſome years been on the wane, revived with ſplendour. As he was ſpeaking with his accuſtomed energy on the ſubject of the American independence in the houſe of lords, April 8, 1778, he was overpowered, and fell down in a convulſive fit. He died on the 11th of the following month, and his body, after lying in ſtate, was ſolemnly interred in Weſtminſter-abbey, where a monument was erected to his memory at the national expenſe, on which is the following inſcription:

Erected by the King and Parliament as a Teſtimony to The Virtues and Ability of WILLIAM PITT, Earl of Chatham;
During whoſe Adminiſtration
Divine Providence
Exalted Great Britain
To an height of Proſperity and Glory
Unknown to any former age.

His lordſhip left a widow, who was created a baroneſs in her own right, with a penſion of 3000l. a year. She died in 1803 at Burton Pynſent, in Somerſetſhire, an eſtate which had been left to lord Chatham by ſir Thomas Pynſent, from a veneration of his character. By his lady, the daughter of Richard Grenville, eſq. of Wotton in Buckinghamſhire, lord Chatham had five children; John the preſent earl, William the inheritor of his father's great talents, Charles who died young, Heſter who married earl Stanhope and ſince dead, Harriot who married lord Eliot and is alſo dead. In 1804 lord Grenville publiſhed a ſmall volume of Letters written by earl Chatham, to his relation, Thomas Pitt, the firſt lord Camelford, when a ſtudent at the univerſity.—Annual Regiſter. Life of Lord Chatham, 3 vols. 8vo.

PITT (William), an illuſtrious ſtateſman, was the fourth child of the great earl Chatham, by Heſter Grenville, ſiſter of Richard, late earl, Temple, and born May 28, 1759. The town of Blandford in Dorſetſhire was the ſpot where the Pitts were originally ſettled, and Thomas Pitt, governor of Fort St. George, the firſt of the name who attained any conſiderable eminence. Having reſided ſeveral years in India, he purchaſed for 20,400l. ſterling that extraordinary diamond called the regent, weighing 127 carats, which he ſold to the French king for 135,000l. This enabled him to purchaſe an eſtate at Boconnock in Cornwall; which ſtill appertains to the family. The ſubject of the preſent article was bred up under the eye of his father at Burton Pynſent, in Somerſetſhire. His private tutor was the Rev. Dr. Wilſon, ſince canon of Windſor, but the principal part of his education was conducted by the earl himſelf, who ſaw in him the ſeeds of that greatneſs which would confer additional glory on the name of Pitt. At a proper period he was ſent to Pembroke Hall, Cambridge, where his tutors were Dr. Turner, ſince dean of Norwich, and Dr. Pretyman, now biſhop of Lincoln. At Cambridge, Mr. Pitt proceeded to the degree of M.A. and eſtabliſhed a high character for induſtry, talents, and propriety of demeanour. On leaving the univerſity he was entered at Lincoln's Inn, and in three years was called to the bar. He went the weſtern circuit once or twice, but never had much practice. In 1780 he ſtood candidate for the univerſity of Cambridge, but was unſucceſsful. By means, however, of ſir James Lowther he was returned to that parliament for the borough of Appleby. As a ſenator he ſoon diſplayed his great oratorical talents on the ſide of oppoſition againſt lord North and the American war. In 1782 he brought forward a motion for an enquiry into the ſtate of the repreſentation in parliament, which was rejected by a ſmall majority. On the death of the marquis of Rockingham, lord Shelburne obtained the office of firſt lord of the treaſury, and Mr. Pitt was appointed chancellor of the exchequer. Peace was concluded by this adminiſtration, which ſoon gave way to what was called the coalition miniſtry, formed between lord North and Mr. Fox, and their reſpective friends. But Mr. Fox's India Bill, which was carried in the Commons, occaſioned another change, and the miniſters being deprived of their places, Dec. 18, 1783, the important offices of firſt lord of the treaſury and chancellor of the exchequer were conferred on Mr. Pitt. In the following month he brought forwards a new bill for the better government of India, which was rejected. On this the parliament was diſſolved, and the premier, who was returned for the univerſity of Cambridge, brought forward again his bill for the regulation of India, and carried it triumphantly in both houſes. Soon after this, a commercial treaty with France was entered into, and it has been always allowed that the terms were highly advantageous to England. About this time alſo he adopted another beneficial plan, relative to the finances, for extinguiſhing the national debt by a ſinking fund. It is impoſſible to go over all the great points of his adminiſtration, as it embraces ſo much of the hiſtory of England and of the world. During the king's illneſs Mr. Pitt gained great popula-rity by taking conſtitutional ground in ſtre-nuouſly denying the right of the prince o Wales to the regency. A moſt important an eventful ſcene now opened to view, whic has produced the greateſt change in the po litical ſtate of things ever experience This was the French Revolution. The e ecution of Louis XVI. occaſioned the m niſtry to diſmiſs the French ambaſſador; a this was followed by a war which laſt eight years. In 1800 Mr. Pitt effected t union of Ireland to Britain, and ſoon afte wards he retired from office. The peace Amiens, effected under the Addington adm niſtration, was of ſhort duration, and a ne war enſued. In 1804, Mr. Pitt returned his former ſtation, but he was ſurround with difficulties, as many of his former co leagues had joined the ſtandard of oppoſitio and he may almoſt be ſaid to have been l to wield the energies of the ſtate alone. effected another coalition with Ruſſia a Auſtria againſt France, which from the m management of the latter of thoſe pow failed of ſucceſs. In the mean time, a gu habit and unremitted mental exertions completely undermined the conſtitut of this wonderful man: and he died at houſe, near Putney, Jan. 23, 1806. character muſt be left to poſterity, fully juſtly to appreciate. But all that his gr eſt enemies pretend to charge him with ambition; while they are compelled to al him the merit of vigorous application buſineſs, uncommmon eloquence, found financial wiſdom, and above all fect diſintereſtedneſs. Though he had so many years in power he died in debt, wh the parliament have reſolved to diſcha His remains were alſo interred at the pu expenſe, in the ſame vault with his fat Beſides his official ſituations, he was wa of the cinque ports, governor of the Cha houſe, maſter of the Trinity houſe, and steward of the univerſity of Cambridg Public Characters, vol. I.

PITTACUS, one of the ſeven ſage Greece, was born at Mitylene in Le B.C. 650. He was elected ſovereign of tylene for having defeated the Athen Pittacus governed as a philoſopher, and fo ed a code of laws in verſe, that they m be the eaſier remembered. After this h ſigned his dignity, and when a grant of was offered him, he refuſed it, ſaying, is more pleaſing to convince my countr my diſintereſtedneſs, than to poſſeſs riches." He died B. C. 579.— Laert.

PIUS I. pope and ſaint, ſucceeded Hy in 142. He condemned the hereſy of lentinian, and was martyred in 157.— tina. Bower.

PIUS II. (Æneas Sylvius Piccolom was born in 1405 at Corſini in Sienna. 1431 he became ſecretary to cardinal C nica at the council of Baſil, and acted ſame capacity to cardinal Albergotti, him to Scotland to negotiate a peace be- England and that country. He after- displayed great talents at the council fil, which he defended againſt the pope. mperor Frederic III. who awarded him etic crown, employed him in ſeveral ſſies; and pope Nicholas V. made him of Trieſte, which he quitted for the ſhopric of Sienna. In 1456 he obtain- cardinalſhip, and two years after was d pope. He began his pontificate by ing all that he had maintained at the l of Baſil; iſſuing a bull, in which he ed void all appeals from the papal de- a general council. ius was prepar- fleet againſt the Turks when he died ona in 1464. His principal works are, ir of the Council of Baſil; Hiſtory of ohemians; two books on Coſmogra- Treatiſe on Education; Poem on the ixion; Letters; Hiſtoria rerum ubi- e geſtarum; Euryalus and Lucretia, a ce; Memoir of his own Life. They ubliſhed at Helmſtadt in 1700, folio. phew ſucceeded Alexander VI. as pope 3, but died a few weeks after his elec- He aſſumed the name of Pius III.— . Dupin.

s IV. (cardinal de Medicis), was born an in 1499, and roſe by his merit to high employments. In 1549 he ob- the cardinalſhip, and on the death of V. in 1559 was elected pope. He ed the decrees of the council of Trent, hat aſſembly cloſed in 1561. The ollowing a conſpiracy was formed his life by Benedict Accolti and who were executed. The pope died ter. He was of a different family at of Florence.—Ibid.

s V. was born at Boſco, in the dioceſe ona, in 1504. He was a dominican, ade by Paul IV. biſhop of Sutri, and l and inquiſitor-general in the Mila- where he diſplayed great bigotry and . After the death of Pius IV. he ected pope in 1566. He iſſued the led In Cœna Domini, in which the ju- n of the Roman church was carried extravagant pitch. Pius made war the Turks, which produced the fa- ttle of Lepanto, wherein the latter feated. The pope died in 1572. ters were printed in 1640, 4to.—

VI. (John Angelo Braſchi), was Ceſena, in the papal territories, in Benedict XIV. made him treaſurer poſtolic chamber; and Ganganelli d on him the cardinalſhip. He ſuc- hat pontiff in 1775. Soon after his he made a reform in the public ; and completed the magnificent in the Vatican, which he filled numents, vaſes, medals, and other remains found in the eccleſiaſtical But the greateſt act of his pontificate draining of the Pontine marſhes; a project which had baffled ſeveral of the Roman emperors, and many of the popes. Theſe marſhes occupied the whole of the valley extending from the Apennines to the ſea, commencing at the port of Aſtura, covering the coaſt of Terracina, and reaching to the kingdom of Naples. To render this vaſt ſpace uſeful, and to purge away the peſtilential vapours ariſing from it, was conſidered as rather to be deſired than hoped for, when the perſeverance of Pius VI. carried it into effect. He employed the beſt engineers, and went every year to inſpect the progreſs of the work. He cauſed immenſe canals to be dug to receive the water from the marſhes, and thus rendered a conſiderable part of the land fit for huſbandry. He alſo conſtructed on the ſide of the canals, a beautiful road near 40 miles long, ornamented with rows of poplars, interſperſed with houſes of accommodation; and at its termination an elegant palace. Beſides this great enterpriſe this pontiff built a handſome church at Rome, and founded ſome hoſpitals. The emperor Joſeph II. having ſuppreſſed ſeveral monaſteries, and decreed all the religious orders in his dominions free from papal juriſdiction, Pius, apprehenſive of the conſequences of this revolution to the holy ſee, went in perſon to Vienna in 1782; but though he was honourably received, his efforts could not divert the emperor from his deſigns. On his return to Rome the pope had a difference with the courts of Naples, Modena, and Venice, chiefly with regard to the right of preſenting to eccleſiaſtical benefices. The French revolution, however, was of more ſerious conſequence to the papal ſee. It was natural for the pope to favour the cauſe of the allies, againſt the deſtroyers of all government, civil and religious. Buonaparte entered the eccleſiaſtical territory, and having taken ſeveral places, compelled the pope to purchaſe a peace by a contribution of ſeveral millions, and delivering up the fineſt works of painting and ſculpture. Baſſeville was then ſent as envoy from the republic to Rome, where he behaved with ſo much inſolence that the people aſſaſſinated him in 1793. General Duphot entered the city with his troops to reſtore order, but the papal ſoldiers routed them, and Duphot was ſlain. On this Buonaparte again entered Italy, and made the pope priſoner in his capital, which was plundered. The venerable pontiff was carried away by the victors, and hurried over the Alps to Valence, where he died of exceſſive fatigue and ill-uſage, Auguſt 29, 1799. His body was interred in a private manner; but in 1802 it was taken up and conveyed to Rome, where it was interred with great pomp.—Hiſt. by Duppa. Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

PIVATI (John Francis), a Venetian lawyer, who undertook an immenſe compilation under the title of a General Dictionary of Arts and Sciences, which was actually publiſhed at Venice in 1746 in 10 vols. folio.

Pix (Mary), a dramatic writer, was the daughter of Mr. Griffith, a clergyman, and born at Nettlebed in Oxfordshire. She married Mr. Pix; and was the author of ten plays, none of which became popular. She died about 1720.—Biog. Dram.

Pizarro (Francis), a famous Spanish adventurer, was born at Truxillo, being the bastard of an officer of the same name. His first situation in life was very low, but the discovery of the western world opened to his enterprising spirit sources of wealth and renown. He made several voyages with Diego Almagro, by which he acquired considerable wealth. In 1525 Pizarro discovered Peru, where he inhumanely caused the inca Atabalipa to be burnt alive in 1533. Some time afterwards a difference arose between the conquerors, and Pizarro was assassinated by the friends of Almagro in 1541.—Mariana.

Pizzi (Joachim), an Italian poet, was born at Rome in 1716. He studied in the college of the jesuits, where he gave proofs of a poetical genius by some good pieces in his native language. He was early associated with the academy of Arcades, and in 1759 obtained the directorship of that society. He died in 1790. His principal works are; 1. Discourse on Tragic and Comic Poetry; 2. Dissertation on an antique Cameo; 3. The Vision of Eden, a poem; 4. The Triumph of Poetry.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Placcius (Vincent), a learned writer, was born at Hamburg in 1642. He studied at Leipsic, after which he travelled, and on his return to his own country professed morality and eloquence with reputation. He died in 1699. His works are; 1. Theatrum anonymorum et pseudonymorum, 2 vols. fol.; 2. Liber de Jurisconsulto perito, 8vo. 3. De Arte excerpendi, 8vo. &c.; 4. Carmina Juvenilia, 8vo.—Moreri.

Place (Francis), a gentleman of Yorkshire, who painted and etched for his amusement. He also did several portraits in mezzotinto, particularly that of archbishop Sterne, and Henry Gyles, a glass-painter of York. His prints are very scarce. He died in 1728.—Granger. Strutt.

Placentius (John Leo), was born in the principality of Liege, and entered into the order of St Dominic. He died at Maestricht in 1548. His works are; 1. Catalogus antistitum Leodiensium, [a History of the Bishops of Tongres and Liege]; 2. a poem, entitled, Pugna porcorum, in which every word begins with P.—Moreri.

Placette (John de la), a protestant minister, was born at Pontac in Bearn, in 1639. By the revocation of the edict of Nantes he was obliged to retire to Denmark, from whence he removed to the Hague, and afterwards to Utrecht, where he died in 1718. He wrote 1. Moral Essays, 6 vols. 12mo.; 2. Treatise on Pride, 8vo.; 3. Another on Conscience, 8vo [This was translated into English by Basil Kennett]. 4. On Restitution; 5. On Good Works; 6. Christian Reflections on various subjects, &c. He also wrote against Bayle on the Origin of Evil, and the Trinity.—Moreri.

Plantin (Christopher), a celebrated printer, was born near Tours in 1514. He settled at Antwerp in 1555, and carried the printing art to perfection. He died in 1589. His editions are extremely valuable, though he was not a man of learning. His chief work is a polyglot.—Ibid.

Planudes (Maximus), a monk of Constantinople in the fourth century, who was sent by the emperor in the retinue of the ambassador to Venice, where he became so partial to the Latin church, that on his return he was sent to prison. To recover his liberty he wrote against that church. He was the author of a Life of Æsop, full of romantic tales, and gross anachronisms. He also published a collection of Greek epigrams under the title of Anthologia.—Vossius de Script. Græc.

Platina (Bartholomew Sacchi), was born in 1421, at Piadena, near Mantua. On going to Rome he was patronized by cardinal Bessarion, by whose means he obtained some benefices, and was appointed apostolical abbreviator, of which post he was deprived by Paul II. Platina wrote a smart letter to the pontiff, who sent him to prison and caused him to be tortured. Sixtus IV. made him librarian of the Vatican. He died of the plague in 1481. His History of the Popes was first printed at Venice in 1479, folio, in Latin. He also wrote a History of Mantua, the Life of Nerio Capponi; and other works printed together in Latin, in folio, 1572.—Moreri.

Plato, an illustrious philosopher, was born at Athens B.C. 429. His father was Ariston, a descendant of Solon, as his mother was from Codrus. His first master was Dionysius the grammarian; and afterwards he received instructions in gymnastic exercises from Ariston, the Argive, who gave him the name of Plato, on account of the breadth of his shoulders and the robustness of his person. His former name was Aristocles, which was that of his grandfather. He next applied to the study of music and poetry, and composed some pieces intended for the Olympic exercises; but on hearing Socrates discover a long discourse he burnt them, and became his disciple. Some of his epigrams however, are still preserved. He resided with Socrates eight years, during which he committed to writing a great part of his master's discourses, which he digested into philosophical conversations: but he made so many improvements on them, that Socrates hearing him one day repeat his Lysis, exclaimed "Ye Gods, how many fine things has this young man made me say which I never said?" On the death of his master, Plato left Athens and travelled into different countries in search of knowlege. At Cyrene he studied geometry and other parts of the mathematics; from thence he went into Egypt

r the appearance of a merchant, but in y to converſe with the prieſts, and to nformation of their religious myſteries.
ng reſided in Egypt a long time, and ad-onſiderably to his mental riches, he vi-Italy and ſettled at Tarentum, where med an intimacy with Eurytus and Ars. He afterwards made a voyage to to obſerve the wonders of that iſland, ularly mount Ætna. On his return hens, he ſettled at a place in the neighood called the Academy, whence his ophy was called the Academic. His was now ſo great that Dionyſius, the of Syracuſe, invited him to his court, e freedom of his diſcourſe gave ſuch that Dionyſius ordered him to be ſold ſlave. His purchaſer was one Anni-a native of Cyrene, who gave him his
, and he returned to Athens. At the of Dionyſius the younger he once nade a voyage to Sicily, where he was d with great honour, but finding that ice was not attended to by the tyrant, noſe to copy after his father, he re-to Athens, where he gained a number owers. He preſerved his health by ance and exerciſe to the age of 81,
B.C. 348. The philoſophy of Plato blime, his morality ſo pure, and his
f the divine being and a future ſtate
, that he has been thought to have nowlege of the Moſaic writings; a ion which, conſidering his long reſin Egypt, is not improbable. The ions of his works are, that of Ste-3 vols. folio, 1578; that of Ficinus kfort, fol. 1602; and that of Deux 1788, 10 vols. 8vo. Dr. Clarke, of ge, in 1803 brought from Greece a . of the works of Plato on vellum.
ranſcribed by John the Calligrapher eign of Leo, the ſon of Baſil. This deſt Greek copy of Plato which is —Diog. Laert. Stanley's Hiſt. of Phi-

TUS (Marcus Accius), a comic s born at Sarſina, in Umbria, and he the ſurname of Plautus from the ill his feet. He ſettled at Rome, is plays were performed with great
There is more intrigue and plot ces than in thoſe of Terence. The alſo is extremely natural and enter-Only nineteen are extant. The ons are that of Erneſt, Leipſic, 2 1760; and Glaſgow, 1763. Plau-
.C. 184.—Biog. Claſſica.

ORD (John), a writer on muſic, in 1613. He kept a muſic-ſhop in t, London, and publiſhed an Into the Skill of Muſic, 1655, and rinted. He was alſo editor of the ſalms and Hymns in Metre, with l and proper tunes, 8vo.; and Songs for the Theorbo-Lute, or
. He died in 1693.—Hawkins.

PLEMPIUS (Vopiſcus Fortunatus), a Phyſician, was born at Amſterdam in 1601. He took his doctor's degree at Bologna, after which he became profeſſor of medicine at Louvain, where he died in 1671. His works are; 1. Ophthalmographia, ſive, de Oculi fabrica, 4to.; 2. De affectibus capillorum et unguium natura; 3. De Togatorum valetudine tuenda; 4. Loimographia, ſive Tractatus de Peſte; 5. Antimus Coningius Peruviani pulveris defenſor, repulſus a Melippo Protymo. Coningius is the ſuppoſed name of Fabri, a jeſuit; Protymus is that which Plempius aſſumed, under which he endeavoured to diſcredit the bark.—Moreri.

PLINY (Caius Plinius Secundus), called the elder, was born at Verona of an illuſtrious family, and in his youth bore arms with reputation, after which he was admitted into the college of augurs. Veſpaſian appointed him governor of Spain, where he conducted himſelf with ſtrict intregrity, devoting the day to public affairs, and the night to ſtudy. His mind was ſtored with various knowlege, and he was an inquiſitive obſerver of the works of nature. To this ſpirit of curioſity he ſacrificed his life; for lying at Miſenum with a fleet which he commanded, he was ſurprized at an extraordinary cloud iſſuing from Veſuvius. He immediately put to ſea, and landed at the foot of the mountain to aſcertain the cauſe of the phænomenon; but the ſulphureous exhalation from the burning lava overcame him, and he was ſuffocated, A.D. 79. Of all the works of Pliny none remains but his Natural Hiſtory, which is a compilation of facts and obſervations, extremely curious and valuable. The beſt editions are that of Hardouin, at Paris, 1723, 3 vols. folio; and that of Brotier, 1779, ſix vols. 12mo. It has been tranſlated into Engliſh by Philemon Holland, folio.—Voſſius.

PLINY the younger (Cæcilius Plinius Secundus), was the nephew of the preceding, who adopted him for his ſon and heir. He had Quintilian for his maſter, and made ſo great a progreſs that at the age of nineteen he pleaded in the forum, with an eloquence equal to that of the greateſt orators of his time. When Trajan was elevated to the throne he conferred the conſular dignity on Pliny, who, at the deſire of the ſenate, pronounced that fine oration which is extant, entitled, the Panegyric on Trajan. He was ſome time after appointed governor of Pontus and Bithynia, where he aboliſhed the arbitrary impoſitions, and ſtopped the perſecution of the chriſtians, of whom he gave a liberal account to the emperor. After his return to Rome he went and ſettled at Comé, his native place, where he eſtabliſhed an academy and library for young men who had not the means of education. Pliny was the liberal patron of men of virtue and learning. For Quintilian he always retained the greateſt regard, and gave his daughter a handſome dowry on her marriage. Pliny died A.D.

113. Of the writings of this excellent writer, only his Epiſtles, and Panegyric on Trajan remain. He wrote the Hiſtory of his Own Times, of which Tacitus ſpeaks in high terms. The beſt editions of Pliny are that of Geſner, Leipſic, 1770; that of Paris by Barbou; the Variorum, 1669, 8vo.; the Elzevirs, 1640, 12mo. This laſt is rare —Fabricius.

PLOT (Robert), a learned antiquary and naturaliſt, was born at Borden in Kent, in 1641, and educated at Magdalen hall, and Univerſity college, Oxford, where he took his degree of LL D in 1671. He became ſecretary to the royal ſociety in 1682, and publiſhed their Tranſactions from number 143 to 166. He was appointed firſt keeper of the Aſhmolean muſeum, and profeſſor of chemiſtry at Oxford. Dr. Plot was alſo nominated hiſtoriographer to the king, and Mowbray herald extraordinary. He died in 1696. His works are, the Natural Hiſtories of Oxfordſhire and Staffordſhire, in folio; papers in the Philoſophical Tranſactions; and an Eſſay on the Origin of Springs, in Latin.—Biog Brit.

PLOTINUS, a platonic philoſopher, was born at Lycopolis, in Egypt. After ſtudying under Ammonius, he travelled into Perſia and India, where he acquired a great ſtock of knowlege. He ſerved in the army under Gordian, but when that emperor was ſlain Plotinus effected his eſcape, and went to Rome, where he opened a ſchool of philoſophy, and had many diſciples. He died in Campania in 270, aged 66. His works were publiſhed by Ficinus, at Baſil, folio, in 1580. —Bayle. Stanley.

PLOWDEN (Edmund), an eminent lawyer, was born in Shropſhire in 1517, and educated at Cambridge, from whence he removed to Oxford, where he took his degrees in phyſic, which profeſſion he quitted for the law. His "Commentaries and Reports" are greatly eſteemed. He died in 1584.—Wood.

PLUCHE (Antony), a French writer, was born at Rheims in 1688. He received his education at his native place, where he became profeſſor of rhetoric and entered into orders. The intendant of Rouen, on the recommendation of Rollin, appointed him tutor to his ſon; and having diſcharged that truſt he went to Paris, where he taught geography and hiſtory. In 1749 he obtained the abbey of Valence St. Maur, where he died in 1761. His works are; 1. Spectacle de la Nature, 7 vols. 12mo. of which there are two Engliſh tranſlations. It is a performance of great excellence. 2. The Hiſtory of the Heavens, an enquiry into the origin of mythology and idolatry. This has alſo been tranſlated into Engliſh, in 2 vols. 12mo; 3. On the Mechaniſm of Languages, 12mo.; 4. Harmony of the Pſalms, and the Goſpels, 12mo.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

PLUKENET (Leonard), an eminent Engliſh botaniſt, was born in 1642, and is ſuppoſed to have received his education at Cambridge. He was doctor of phyſic, but notwithſtanding his great merit he was ſtrangely neglected till the cloſe of life, when he was appointed ſuperintendant of the garden at Hampton Court, and royal profeſſor of botany. He died about 1706. His Phytographia, publiſhed in four parts at different times, is an honourable proof of his abilities. He alſo publiſhed, 1. Almageſtum botanicum, 4to. 1696; 2. Almageſti Botanici Mantiſſa, 1700, 4to. In this work he is very ſevere on Sloane and Petiver. 3. Amaltheum Botanicum, 4to. 1705. In 1769 his works were reprinted in 4 volumes, to which in 1779 Dr. Giſeke of Hamburgh added a Linnean Index.—Pulteney.

PLUMIER (Charles), an eminent French botaniſt, was born at Marſeilles in 164[illegible]. He entered into the religious order of Minims, and ſtudied mathematics; but afterwards quitted that ſcience, and applied himſelf to natural hiſtory. Louis XIV. ſent him to America to collect plants uſeful in medicine, and he made three voyages for that purpoſe. The king rewarded him with a penſion, and appointed him his botaniſt. At the deſire of Fagon, he undertook a fourth voyage, but died as he was about to embark near Cadiz in 1706. His works are; 1. Nova Plantarum Americanarum genera, 4to.; 2. Deſcription of the Plants of America, folio; 3. Treatiſe on American Ferns, folio; 4. The Art of Turning, folio with plates; 5. Two Diſſertations on Cochineal, in the Journal des Savans.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

PLUQUET (Francis-Andrew), a French writer, was born at Bajeux in 1716. He entered into orders and obtained a canonry which he quitted for the profeſſorſhip of hiſtory in the univerſity of Paris. He died of an apoplexy in 1790. His works are; 1. An Examination of Fataliſm, 3 vols. 12mo.; 2. Dictionary of Hereſies, 2 vols. 8vo.; 3. On Sociability, 2 vols. In this work Pluquet combats the opinion of Hobbes, and proves that man is beneficent and religious. 4. The claſſical Books of the Empire of China, 7 vols. 12mo.; 5. On Luxury, 2 vols. 12mo.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

PLUTARCH, a celebrated hiſtorian, was a native of Cheronea in Bœotia. He ſtudied philoſophy in the ſchool of Ammonius at Delphos; and ſo greatly was he eſteemed by his countrymen, that when but a young man he was aſſociated in a deputation to the proconſul of the province, on an important concern, which he diſcharged with honour. He afterwards travelled through Greece and into Egypt, and his obſervations in the latter country produced his treatiſe on Iſis and Oſiris. On viſiting Rome he was received with flattering marks of diſtinction by Trajan, who raiſed him to the conſular dignity, and appointed him governor of Illyria. After the death of his patron tarch returned to Cheronea, where he at an advanced age, A. D. 140. He two ſons, Plutarch and Lamprias The wrote a memoir of his father, and pub-d an account of his writings, which numerous. The moſt celebrated of works are; his Lives of Illuſtrious Men, delineating which he has ſhewn great artiality, an abhorrence of tyranny and

, and an accurate acquaintance with the an mind. His Morals alſo contain y valuable obſervations and curious nar-es. The beſt editions of his works are, of Henry Stephens, Greek and Latin, 2, quarto; that of Mauſſac, 1624,
ols. folio; and that of London, 1729,
ls. 4to. His Lives have been tranſlated Engliſh by Dryden, and by Langhorne.
Morals have alſo been tranſlated into iſh.—Voſſius de Hiſt. Græc.

LUVINEL (Antony), a native of Dauy, was the firſt who opened a riding ol in France. Henry IV. appointed his grand equerry and chamberlain, ſent him ambaſſador to Holland. He at Paris in 1620. He wrote a Treatiſe he Art of Riding, folio.—Moreri.

OCOCKE (Edward), a learned divine, born at Oxford in 1604. At the age of teen he was entered of Magdalen hall, whence he removed to Corpus Chriſti ge, where he obtained a fellowſhip.
628 he entered into orders, and was ap-ted chaplain to the Engliſh factory at
po. While there he improved himſelf e oriental languages, which he had beſtudied at the univerſity. He was alſo oyed by archbiſhop Laud in purchaſing nt manuſcripts and coins; and that te having founded an Arabic lecture at rd, appointed Mr. Pococke the firſt ſſor. He returned home in 1636; but wards made another voyage to the Eaſt, ompany with Mr. Greaves, and contithere four years. On his arrival in and he found his patron in the Tower, the kingdom in confuſion. In 1643 was preſented by his college to the ry of Childrey in Berkſhire. In 1648 as nominated to the Hebrew profeſſor-with the prebend of Chriſtchurch and, but he was deprived by the parlia-for not taking the engagement. How-he ſtill continued his Arabic lectures, ubliſhed the ſame year his Specimen riæ Arabum. In 1651 he was one of concerned in preparing the intended n of the Polyglot Bible. At the re-ion he recovered his canonry and Heprofeſſorſhip, and took his doctor's e; but never obtained any other pre-nt. He died in 1691. His other are, 1. Porta Moſis, or the ſix Prey Diſcourſes of Moſes Maimonides;
e Annals of Eutychius; 3. Abul Fe-Hiſtoria Dynaſtarum, 4to.; 4. Com-aries on Micah, Malachi, Hoſea, and Joel, folio; 5. a Syriac Verſion of the 2d Epiſtle of St. Peter, the 2d and 3d of John, and that of Jude; 6. Letters between him and ſeveral learned men, publiſhed by Mr. Twells in 2 vols. folio, 1740. His ſon, Edward Pococke, publiſhed under his father's direction an Arabic piece, entitled, Philoſophus Autodidactus: ſive Epiſtola Abu Jaafir Ebn Tophail de Hai Ebn Yokhdan.—Biog. Brit.

POCOCKE (Richard), an eminent prelate, was born at Southampton in 1704. He was educated at Corpus Chriſti college, Oxford, where he took his doctor's degree in laws in 1733, after which he went to the eaſt, where he travelled five years. On his return to England he became chaplain to lord Cheſterfield, and when that nobleman was viceroy of Ireland, he conferred on Dr. Pococke the archdeaconry of Dublin. He was afterwards promoted to the biſhopric of Oſſory, from whence he was tranſlated to Meath in 1765; but died the ſame year of an apoplexy. His Travels, in 3 vols. folio, are very valuable.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

POERSON (Charles Francis), a painter, was born at Paris in 1653, and died in 1725. He excelled in hiſtory and portrait, and was director of the French academy at Rome. His father, who died in 1660, was a native of Lorraine, and alſo a good artiſt.—D'Argenville.

POGGIO BRACCIOLINI (John Francis), a learned Italian, was born at Terra Nova, in the territory of Florence, in 1380. He ſtudied Latin under John de Ravenna, and Greek under Emanuel Chryſoloras. He is alſo ſaid to have made a progreſs in Hebrew; but this is not certain. His merits procured him the office of ſecretary to the popes; and while he was at the council of Conſtance he was employed in ſearching for ancient manuſcripts in that city, of which he diſcovered ſeveral. To the honour of his humanity he felt great compaſſion for Jerom of Prague, and wrote a letter in his favour, but without effect. From Conſtance, Poggio came to England, where he continued ſome time, and then returned to Rome; but in 1435 he ſettled at Florence and married. He alſo became ſecretary to that republic, and died there in 1459. His principal works are, 1. Funeral Orations; 2. Hiſtory of Florence, Latin, 4to.; 3. De Varietate Fortunæ, 4to.; 4. Epiſtles; 5. Facetiæ; this is a collection of witticiſms; 6. a Latin tranſlation of Diodorus Siculus; 7. ſeveral ancient writers diſcovered by him, particularly Quintilian, Ammianus, Marcellinus, &c. His ſon James tranſlated his father's Hiſtory of Florence into Italian; alſo the Life of Cyrus, from the Greek; and other works. He was put to death for being concerned in the conſpiracy of the Pazzi in 1478.—Tiraboſchi. Life of Poggio by Shepherd.

POILLY (Francis), a French engraver, was born at Abbeville in 1622. Peter Duret was his master; and after improving himself at Rome he was made engraver to the king. He died at Paris in 1693. His plates are neat and accurate. His brother Nicolas was also a good engraver of portraits. He died in 1696.—Nouv. Dict.

Poinsinet (Anthony Alexander Henry), a dramatic writer, was born at Fontainbleau in 1735, and was drowned in Spain in 1769. He wrote comic operas, which possess no other merit than the music.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Poiret (Peter), a protestant minister, was born at Metz in 1646. He studied at Heidelberg, and in 1674 obtained a pastoral charge at Anweil. By reading the works of madame Bourignon and other mystics, a complete change was wrought in his mind, and he retired to Rheinsberg in Holland, where he died in 1719. His works are, 1. Cogitationes Rationales de Deo, anima, et malo; 2. the Divine Economy, 7 vols. 8vo.; this has been translated into English; 3. Peace of Good Souls, 12mo.; 4. Solid Principles of the Christian Religion; 5. Theology of the Heart, 2 vols. 12mo.; 6. De eruditione triplici, 2 vols, 4to.; 7. Life of Madame Bourignon prefixed to her works.—Niceron.

Poirier (Germain), was born at Paris in 1724. He was of the order of benedictines of St. Maur, which he quitted in 1769, and died in 1803. Poirier was one of the writers of the Art of Verifying Dates; and he undertook in conjunction with Precieux the 18th volume of the Collection of the Histories of Gaul and France, begun by Bouquet.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Pois (Anthony le), physician to Charles III. duke of Lorraine, was well versed in antiquities, and died at Nancy in 1578. He was the author of a Discourse upon Medals and Ancient Engravings, 4to. 1579. His brother Nicholas was an able physician, and had a son named Charles in the same line, who died in 1655. These two called themselves in Latin Pisones. They wrote some pieces which Boerhaave published at Leyden, in 2 vols. 4to.—Moreri.

Poisson (Nicholas Joseph), a priest of the oratory, who was the intimate friend of Descartes, and superior of the house of Vendome. He died in 1710. His works are, 1. Delectus Auctorum Ecclesiæ universalis, seu, nova gemma conciliorum, 2 vols. folio; 2. Remarks on Descartes's Discourses of Method, Mechanics, and Music; 3. Account of his Travels in Italy; 4. a Treatise on Benefices; 5. another on the Rites and Ceremonies of the Church.—Moreri.

Poisson (Raymond), a comedian and dramatic writer, was born at Paris, and became gentleman of the chamber to the duke de Crequi, whose service he quitted for the stage. He died in 1690. His pieces are, the Baron de la Crasse, and the Good Soldier, comedies; the Fool of Quality; and some others published at Paris in 2 vols. 12mo. His nephew Philip Poisson, who died in 1743, was the author of six comedies, printed in 2 vols.—Ibid.

Poissonnier (Peter-Isaac), professor of physic at Paris, was born at Dijon, in 1720. He was one of the first who read chemical lectures in the capital; and in 1758 was sent by the government to Petersburgh at the request of the empress Elizabeth, who was then in an ill state of health. On his return to France he received several marks of distinction, and was admitted a member of the academy of sciences. In the revolution he was thrown into prison, but was released after the fall of Robespierre. He died in 1797. His works are, 1. a Course of Surgery, 8vo.; 2. on the Means of rendering Sea-water potable; 3. on the Fevers of St. Domingo; 4. on the Diseases of Seamen, 2 vols. 8vo.; 5. Abridgement of Anatomy, 2 vols 12mo.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Poivre (N.), a French naturalist, was born at Lyons in 1719. He entered into the congregation of missionaries, and was sent to China, where he was imprisoned two years. In his passage to Europe the vessel was attacked by the English, and Poivre had his arm carried off, on which he quitted the ecclesiastical state. The India company sent him in 1749 to open a commercial establishment in Cochin China, and he was also appointed intendant of the isles of France and Bourbon, where he introduced the bread-fruit tree, and other valuable plants. Poivre returned to his own country, and died at Lyons in 1786. He wrote, 1. the Voyage of a Philosopher, 12mo.; 2. on the Dying of Silks; 3. on the History and Manners of China, &c.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Poland. This country was formerly inhabited by the Vandals. In 694 Lechus, the first duke, began his reign. In the year 1000 it became a kingdom under Boleslaus, whose successor added Red Russia to his dominions by marriage in 1059. In 1384 Poland was converted to Christianity by means of the king Jagello. The crown continued hereditary in that prince's family till 1572, after which it became elective; and occasioned many contentions and wars till 1795, when Poland was partitioned between Russia, Austria, and Prussia.—Univ. Hist.

Pole (Reginald), cardinal and archbishop of Canterbury, was the son of Richard Pole, lord Montague, cousin-german to Henry VII. and of Margaret daughter to George duke of Clarence, younger brother of Edward IV. He was born at Stourton in Staffordshire, in 1500. At the age of twelve he was elected of Magdalen college, Oxford, where he made a considerable progress in learning. In 1517 he obtained a bend in the cathedral of Salisbury, and years after the deanry of Exeter. About s time he went to Italy for improvement, had a liberal establishment from his re- ion Henry VIII. He returned to Eng- d in 1525, and was held in great fa- ur by the king on account of his en- ing manners and accomplishments. But en that monarch avowed his design of orcing his queen, Pole opposed it, and nt to Italy. Henry having assumed the remacy over the church, and caused . Sampson to write a defence of that title, t the book to Pole, who returned an wer to it under the title Pro Unitate Ecclesiastica. This gave such offence that his ferments and pensions were taken from n; but he was abundantly compensated the pope and emperor. The former made a cardinal in 1536, and appointed him ncio to France and Flanders. At home, wever, he was declared a traitor, and a ce was set upon his head. He was one of legates at the council of Trent, where attended as long as his health permitted. the death of Paul III. he was twice cted to succeed him, but refused the dig- y. Queen Mary was no sooner settled on throne than Pole was appointed legate reduce England to the papal see; but be- e he set out, the act of attainder which been passed against him was repealed. arrived in 1554, and was magnificently eived and lodged in the palace at Lam- h. Shortly after he met the parliament, pronounced the papal absolution of the gdom. The day after the death of Cran- r he took upon him the title of archbi- p of Canterbury, having been promoted that dignity some time before He was elected chancellor of both universities, ich he visited by commission. He be- ved with moderation to the protestants, was displeased with the conduct of Gar- er and the other persecuting prelates. survived queen Mary only sixteen hours, ng at Lambeth of an ague Nov. 18, 1558. sides his book against Henry VIII. and his ence of it, he wrote several pieces in fa- ur of the papal authority, and the doc- nes of the church of Rome.—Biog. Brit.

POLEMBERG (Cornelius), an eminent nter, was born at Utrecht in 1586. At invitation of Charles I. he visited Eng- d, where he painted several cabinet tures of exquisite beauty. His land- pes are particularly fine. On the dis- bances breaking out between the king parliament he returned to Utrecht, ere he died in 1660.—D'Argenville. Felibien. Pilkington.

POLEMON, a Greek philosopher, was n at Oeta, in the territory of Athens, in his youth led a dissolute life. Passing the school of Xenocrates one day, in- med with wine, he entered, in order to icule the philosopher. But the discourse Xenocrates on the misery of intemperance, had such an effect that Polemon became his disciple and successor. He died B. C. 270. After his change he drank nothing but water during the rest of his life. There was an orator of this name who lived in the reign of Trajan, and left Orations, which were printed in Greek and Latin at Toulouse in 1637, 8vo.—Diog. Laert. Moreri.

POLENI (John, marquis), was born at Padua in 1683, and died in that city in 1761. He was professor of astronomy and mathematics in that university, and after gaining the prize three times of the academy of sciences at Paris, was elected a member in 1739. He was also a fellow of the royal society of London, and other learned bodies. He excelled in hydraulic architecture, and was employed by several states in the construction of waterworks. He was also well skilled in civil architecture, and corresponded with the greatest mathematicians in Europe. The marquis added to his other accomplishments a great knowledge of antiquities, as appears from his Supplement to Grævius and Gronovius's Collections, 5 vols. folio, 1737, Venice.—Tiraboschi.

POLI (Martin), a chemist, was born at Lucca in 1662. He studied at Rome, where he made several discoveries, particularly one of a very destructive nature in military operations, which he communicated to Louis XIV. who liberally rewarded him, but charged him to bury the secret, as the means of destroying life were already sufficiently numerous. Poli was admitted an associate of the academy of sciences. He died in 1714. He wrote a Treatise in Defence of Acids, entitled Il trionfo degli Acidi.—Ibid.

POLIDORO DA CARAVAGGIO, a painter, so called from the name of a village in the duchy of Milan, where he was born in 1495. He was employed at the Vatican in preparing stucco for the painters, from whom he learnt the principles of their art, and made such a rapid improvement as to be employed in ornamenting most of the public buildings in Rome. He was murdered by his servant for the sake of his money in 1543.—De Piles.

POLIER (Charles de), was born at Lausanne in 1753. He was educated at the university of Gottingen, on leaving which he obtained a lieutenancy in a Swiss regiment in the French service, but soon resigned it and returned to Lausanne, where he formed an acquaintance with lord Tyrone, who employed him as tutor to his children. These pupils he accompanied to England, and settled with them at Manchester, of the society at which place he became a member. M. de Polier died at lord Tyrone's seat near Waterford in 1782. He has some ingenious papers in the first volume of the Transactions of the Manchester Society, where also is a Memoir of him written by Dr. Percival.

Polignac (Melchior de), a celebrated cardinal, was born at Puy-en-Velay in 1661, of a very ancient family in Languedoc. He received his education at Paris, where he defended the philoſophy of Ariſtotle and that of Deſcartes at the ſame time with great ingenuity. The cardinal de Bouillon took him to Rome, where he was employed in ſeveral important concerns. In the diſputes between the pope and the court of France Polignac rendered great ſervice by bringing about a reconciliation. Louis XIV. ſent him ambaſſador to Poland to procure the election of the prince of Conti after the death of John Sobieſki. In this he failed, and on his return to France was for ſome time in diſgrace. He afterwards recovered the royal favour, and in 1709 was employed as one of the plenipotentiaries in the conferences at Getruydenberg for negotiating a peace, and in 1712 he aſſiſted in the ſame capacity at the treaty of Utrecht. A little before this pope Clement XI. had conferred on him the dignity of cardinal. After the death of Louis XIV. he was exiled to his abbey of Anchin, and was not recalled till 1721. In 1726 he was made archbiſhop of Auch, and in 1732 commander of the order of the Holy Ghoſt. He died at Paris in 1741. Cardinal Polignac wrote an excellent Latin poem entitled, Anti-Lucretius, ſeu, de Deo & Natura, lib. ix. 8vo. and 12mo.—Life by Faucher, 2 vols. Paris, 1777.

Poliniere (Peter), a French mathematician, was born at Coulonce, near Vire, in 1671. He ſtudied in the college of Harcourt at Paris, where he took his degree of doctor in medicine. He was the firſt who read lectures on experimental philoſophy in that capital, and in the preſence of the king. He died in 1734. His works are, 1. Elements of Mathematics; 2. Treatiſe on Experimental Philoſophy, 2 vols. 12mo.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

Politi (Alexander), a learned Italian, was born at Florence in 1679. He entered into orders, and became ſucceſſively profeſſor of rhetoric, philoſophy, and divinity, at Genoa, from whence in 1733 he removed to Piſa, where he was profeſſor of Greek and eloquence. He died there in 1752. His principal work is an edition of Euſtathius's Commentary on Homer, with a Latin verſion and notes, 5 vols. folio. He alſo publiſhed a corrected edition of the Roman Martyrology, folio; Diſcourſes in the academy of Piſa, &c.—Hiſt. Lit. Ital.

Politian (Angelo), was born at Monte Pulciano in Tuſcany in 1454. His real name was Angelo Baſſi. Andronicus of Theſſalonica was his maſter, under whom he acquired a great knowlege of the Greek language. His poetical talents recommended him to the patronage of Lorenzo and Julian de Medici, the former of whom made him tutor to his children. Politian diſcharged his truſt ſo well as to be appointed profeſſor of Greek and Latin at Florence. He died of grief on account of the baniſhment of the Medici family, in 1494. Picus Mirandula was his moſt intimate friend. Politian wrote, 1. the Hiſtory of the Confederacy of Pazzi; 2. a Latin tranſlation of Herodian; 3. Greek Epigrams; 4. Latin Epiſtles; 5. Bucolic Poems; 6. a Treatiſe on Anger, &c. His works were printed in 1550, 3 vols. 8vo. and at Baſil in 1553, folio.—Life by Mencke, 1736, 4to.

Pollio (Caius Aſinius), a Roman conſul and orator, who gained a great reputation in the reign of Auguſtus, by his military exploits and his writings. Virgil and Horace were his intimate friends, and have immortalized his name in their works. He wrote tragedies, orations, and a hiſtory, which are loſt. He is ſaid to have formed the firſt public library at Rome. Pollio died at Freſcati A. D. 4, aged 80.—Voſſius de Poet. Lat.

Pollux (Julius), a Greek author, was born at Naucrates in Egypt, and flouriſhed in the reign of the emperor Commodus, to whom he was preceptor, and for whoſe uſe he compoſed an "Onomaſticon," a Greek vocabulary.—Voſſius.

Polyænus, a Macedonian, who wrote Stratagems of War, dedicated to the emperors Antoninus and Verus. There are ſeveral editions of this book in Greek and Latin; the beſt is that of Mavicius, 8vo. 1691.—Voſſ. de Scrip. Græc. & Fabricius.

Polybius, a Greek hiſtorian, was born at Megalopolis, in the Peloponneſus, about 203 B. C. His father, Lycortas, was governor of Achæa, and was diſtinguiſhed by his virtues. He taught his ſon the principles of philoſophy and policy, and Philopœmen was his inſtructor in the art of war. Polybius diſplayed great ſkill and courage in ſeveral expeditions during the war between the Romans and Perſeus king of Macedon. When that monarch was defeated, Polybius was taken priſoner, and ſent to Rome, where he gained the friendſhip of Scipio, whom he accompanied to the ſiege of Carthagena, and to that of Numantium. Polybius on the death of Scipio was greatly afflicted, and retired to a private ſtate. He died B. C. 121, of a wound received by a fall from his horſe. Part only of his Univerſal Hiſtory of his own time, in Greek, remains. The firſt edition is that of Rome, 1473, folio; and the beſt thoſe of Caſaubon, fol. Paris, 1609; and Amſterdam, cum notis variorum, 3 vols. 8vo. 1670. Polybius has been well tranſlated into Engliſh by Hampton.—Voſſius de Hiſt. Græc.

Polycarp (Saint), biſhop of Smyrna, and a martyr of the Chriſtian church, was the diſciple of St. John the evangeliſt. He made a journey to Rome, A. D. 160, to ſettle the controverſy reſpecting the proper time for the celebration of Eaſter. On his return to Smyrna he was condemned to the flames by the pro-conſul, but eſcaped unhurt; his perſecutor then demanded of him, whether he would abjure Chriſt, to whom he anſwered, "Eighty-ſix years have I ſerved him, and received nothing but good, how then would you have me now to renounce him?" On this he was pierced through with a ſword, at the age of 95. in the year 166. His martyrdom is affectingly related in a letter from the church of Smyrna to the churches of Pontus; and there is alſo extant an Epiſtle of Polycarp's to the Philippians, publiſhed by Uſher with thoſe of Ignatius, 1647, 4to. It has been tranſlated into Engliſh by Dr. Wake, 8vo. 1705.—Dupin. Baillet Cave.

Polycletus, a ſculptor of Sicyone, in the Peloponneſus, who lived B. C. 232, and was conſidered the firſt of artiſts, Phidias being eſteemed the ſecond. It is reported, that Polycletus, by way of convicting the critics, exhibited a ſtatue for public animadverſion, offering to correct the faults that ſhould be noticed. On producing it a ſecond time amended exactly according to the errors which had been pointed out, he placed by it another formed according to his own judgment. The obſervers unanimouſly approved this laſt, and cenſured the former; on which Polycletus ſaid, "That which you condemn is your own work; that which you admire is mine."—Plin. Nat. Hiſt.

Polydore-Virgil, an hiſtorian, was born at Urbino in Italy, and viſited England in the ſuite of cardinal Corneto, the pope's legate. Henry VIII. was ſo pleaſed with his wit and addreſs that he gave him the archdeaconry of Wells; in return for which he wrote the Hiſtory of England in Latin, more elegant than faithful. It was printed at Baſil in 1534, folio. Polydore having a difference with cardinal Wolſey returned to his own country, where he died in 1555. His other works are, 1. De Inventoribus Rerum, 12mo.; 2. Treatiſe on Prodigies, folio; 3. Adagiorum, or Proverbs; 4. Corrections of Gildas.—Bayle.

Polygnotus, a Greek painter of Rhodes, who is celebrated for a picture of the battle of Marathon, which was fixed on a portico at Athens, and is ſaid to have reſiſted the effects of the weather for many centuries. Pliny and Quintilian ſpeak highly of his powers.

Pombal (Sebaſtian Joſeph Carvalho, marquis de), a ſtateſman, was born 1699, at Soure in Portugal. He ſtudied in the univerſity of Coimbra, after which he ſerved ſome time in the army, but being diſguſted with a military life, he retired to his eſtate. In 1745 he was ſent ambaſſador to Vienna, where he married the counteſs Daun, a relation of the famous marſhal of that name. In 1750 he was appointed ſecretary for foreign affairs, and had the principal ſhare in the adminiſtration. He diſplayed great talent, encouraged agriculture and commerce, placed the marine on a reſpectable footing, and inſtituted ſeveral excellent regulations; but he diſgraced his public acts by his avarice. However he procured great honour by his conduct after the earthquake which deſtroyed Liſbon in 1755. By his means the city was ſpeedily reſtored, and the public calamity relieved. But his influence at court created him many enemies; and at length a conſpiracy was formed againſt him and the king, which was diſcovered, and the authors and agents ſeverely puniſhed. Being ſuſpicious that the jeſuits were concerned in this plot, he cauſed them to be expelled the kingdom. On the death of Joſeph II. in 1777, the power of Pombal was deſtroyed, and he fell into diſgrace, and died in exile on his eſtate in 1782.—Memoirs of the M. de Pombal, 4 vols. 1783.

Pomet (Peter), a druggiſt of Paris, where he acquired a conſiderable fortune. He was ſuperintendant of the royal phyſic garden, and formed a catalogue of its contents; but the work which does him the greateſt credit is a Hiſtory of Drugs, of which his ſon Joſeph Pomet publiſhed an improved edition in 1735, in 2 vols. 4to. The firſt was printed in 1694, folio. The author died in 1699.—Moreri.

Pomey (Francis), a jeſuit of Lyons, who publiſhed, 1 a Dictionary, French and Latin, 4to.; 2. Flos Latinitatis; 3. Indiculus Univerſalis, French and Latin; 4. Libitina, or a Treatiſe on the Funerals of the Ancients; 5. Pantheum Myſticum, 8vo.; this is a good work on Heathen Mythology, of which Andrew Tooke gave an Engliſh tranſlation without acknowlegement; 6. Novus Rhetoricæ Candidatus, 12mo. He died in 1673, aged 55.—Moreri.

Pomfret (John), an Engliſh poet and divine, was born about 1667, at Luton, in Bedfordſhire, and educated at Cambridge. On entering into orders, he obtained the living of Malden, in Bedfordſhire. He died of the ſmall-pox in 1703. On account of a paſſage in his poem entitled the Choice, biſhop Compton, of London, was for ſome time very much prejudiced againſt him. In his piece entitled Cruelty and Luſt, he has related the ſtory of colonel Kirk in a very affecting manner. His poems poſſeſs merit, and were once very popular.—Johnſon's Poets.

Pompadour (Jane-Antoinette Poiſſon, marchioneſs of), miſtreſs of Louis XV. was the daughter of a corn-dealer, and the wife of Etoile, nephew of the farmer-general Normand Tournehem. The king being hunting in the foreſt of Senar, on the borders of which Tournehem had an eſtate, had an opportunity purpoſely afforded him of ſeeing madame Poiſſon, with whoſe charms he was immediately enamoured. She was created marchioneſs of Pompadour in 1745, and acquired a complete aſcendancy over the heart of Louis till her death in 1764, at the age of 44. She was a liberal encourager of the arts, and of men of genius. The marchioneſs is ſtated in her memoirs to have had a conſider-able concern in the political affairs of her time, particularly the war of 1756.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Pompey, the Great, born B. C. 106, was the ſon of Pompey, an able general, under whom he learnt the art of war, and with ſuch ſucceſs that at the age of twenty-three he raiſed three legions with which he joined Sylla. Three years afterwards he recovered Sicily and Africa; and became ſo great a favourite with the army that Sylla recalled him. He obeyed the mandate, though his ſoldiers wiſhed him to reſiſt the orders of the dictator. Sylla received him with expreſſions of friendſhip, and ſaluted him with the appellation of the Great. He alſo obtained the honours of a triumph. After the death of Sylla, Pompey compelled Lepidus to quit Rome, and he finiſhed the war in Spain againſt Sertorius; for which he obtained a ſecond triumph, B. C. 73; and at the ſame time was elected conſul. In his conſulate he reſtored the tribunes, exterminated the pirates, gained great advantages over Tigranes and Mithridates, and made numerous conqueſts in the Eaſt. After theſe exploits he entered Rome as a private citizen, and was honoured with a third triumph. But his glory procured him many enemies, to counteract whom he joined with Craſſus and Cæſar in forming the firſt triumvirate, B. C. 60. To ſtrengthen this alliance he married Julia, daughter of Cæſar; but theſe two great men became rivals in conſequence of Pompey's being created ſole conſul, B. C. 52. On the death of Julia he married Cornelia, daughter of Metellus Scipio, whom he aſſociated with him in the conſulate. Cæſar held the government of Gaul, when the ſenate, at the ſolicitation of Pompey, paſſed a decree, commanding him to quit the army, on pain of being declared an enemy to his country. War now broke out between the two parties, who encountered each other on the plains of Pharſalia, where Pompey was defeated, and fled, but was aſſaſſinated by two of his officers, on board of the veſſel in which he made his eſcape, B. C. 49. He left two ſons, Cneius, who was ſlain in the battle of Munda, and Sextus, who was put to death by Antony, B. C. 35.—Plutarch.

Pompignan (John James le France, marquis of), was born at Montauban in 1709. He gained a great reputation by his tragedy of Dido, acted in 1734. He was admitted a member of the French academy in 1760, on which occaſion he had the courage to deliver an inaugural diſcourſe in defence of Chriſtianity, which drew upon him a number of ſatires and lampoons from Voltaire and the other infidels of that ſociety. The marquis died at his caſtle of Pompignan in 1784. His works have been publiſhed in 6 vols. 8vo. They conſiſt of dramatic pieces, ſacred odes, moral diſcourſes, a tranſlation of the Georgics, &c.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

Pompignan (John-George le Franc de), brother of the above, was born at Montauban in 1715. He was educated for the church, and ſucceſſively became biſhop of Puy, and archbiſhop of Vienne. In 1789 he was deputed a member of the conſtituent aſſembly by the province of Dauphiny, and the ſame year he received a letter from the pope, exhorting him to oppoſe all innovations in the church. He died in 1790. He wrote, Critical Eſſay on the preſent ſtate of the Republic of Letters; on the Secular Authority in matters of Religion; Scepticiſm convicted by the Prophecies; Religion avenged on Incredulity by Incredulity itſelf; Letters from a Biſhop, 2 vols; and ſeveral paſtoral letters, and other pieces.—Ibid.

Pomponatius (Peter), was born at Mantua in 1462. He taught philoſophy at Padua and other cities in Italy with extraordinary reputation. In his book "De Immortalitate Animæ," printed at Bologna in 1516, he maintained that a future ſtate was no part of the Ariſtotelian philoſophy, but a matter of religious faith. This poſition occaſioned a violent controverſy, and Pomponatius, though ſupported by Cardinal Bembo, was regarded as an atheiſt. He died in 1525. The works of Pomponatius were printed at Venice, in folio, in 1525.—Niceron. Bayle. Tiraboſchi.

Pomponius Lætus (Julius), a name given to Peter of Calabria, who was born in 1425, at Amendolara in Calabria. He went to Rome, where he was diſtinguiſhed for his talents, till he was falſely accuſed of conſpiring againſt pope Paul II. He then retired to Venice; but after the death of that pontiff he returned to Rome, where he became ſuſpected of atheiſm, on account of his enthuſiaſm for the ancient philoſophy. He died in 1495. His works are: 1. The Lives of the Cæſars, fol.; 2. De exortu Mahumedis, fol.; 3. De Sacerdotiis, de Legibus, &c. 4to.; 4. De Romanæ urbis Vetuſtate, 4to.; 5. Vita Statii Poetæ et Patris ejus; De Arte Grammaticæ; 6 editions of Salluſt, Pliny the younger, and ſome of the works of Cicero; 7. Commentaries on Quintilian, Columella, Virgil, &c.—Voſſius de Hiſt. Lat. Niceron.

Pona (John Baptiſt), a critical writer and poet, was born at Verona, and died there in the flower of his age in 1588. His works are: 1. Diatribe de rebus Philoſophicis, 1590; 2. Latin Poems; 3. Il Tirreno, a paſtoral. His brother, John Pona, was an able botaniſt and apothecary at Verona; he wrote, Plantæ quæ in Baldo monte reperiuntur, 4to. 1595, and reprinted in the Hiſtoria rariorum Stirpium of Charles de l'Ecluſe at Antwerp, 1601, folio. Pona was alſo the author of a Treatiſe, entitled, Del vero Balſamo degli Antichi, Venice, 1623, 4to. He is not to be confounded with Francis Pona, a native of Verona, and a phyſician, who died in 1652. He wrote Medicina Animæ, 4to.; La Lucerna di Eureta Miſoſcolo, 4to.; Saturnalia, 8vo.; Ormonde, and Meſſalina, romances; tragedies

d comedies; Galleria delle Donne cele-
i; Adamo, Poëma; Della contraria forza due belliocchi.—Tiraboſchi.

PONS (John Francis de), a French writer, as born of a noble family at Marly, in 583. He obtained a canonry in the colle-ate church of Chaumont, which he afterards renounced and went to reſide at Paris, here he zealouſly defended de la Mothe quinſt madame Dacier. He died in 1732.
e wrote, a New Syſtem of Education; and ur Diſſertations on Languages, which with her pieces were printed together.—Nouv.
Hiſt.

PONT-DE-VESLE (Anthony de Ferriol, unt de), a French dramatic writer, was orn in 1697, and died at Paris in 1774.
e was governor of Pont de Veſle, and inndant-general of the marine. He wrote
e Complaiſant, a comedy; the Coxcomb uniſhed; the Sleep-walker, a farce; Sonets and fugitive pieces. His uncle Ferriol, mbaſſador to Conſtantinople, painted ſome
ne pictures of the coſtume of the Turks, which engravings were publiſhed in 1715, lio.—Ibid.

PONTANUS (John Jovian), a learned riter, was born at Cerreto in 1426. He ttled at Naples, and became preceptor to lphonſus the younger, king of Arragon, ho having revolted againſt his father, a renciliation was effected between them by ontanus. Not being rewarded agreeable to is merit, he vented his reſentment in a dia-ogue on Ingratitude. He died in 1503. He rote the Hiſtory of the Wars of Ferdinand and John of Anjou, printed at Baſil in 556, 4 vols. 8vo. His other works were ubliſhed at Venice, in 3 vols 4to. His oems are indecent.—Niceron. Tiraboſchi.

PONTANUS or DUPONT (Peter), a gram-arian of Bruges, who was blind from the ge of three years, yet acquired a great reputa-on as teacher of the belles lettres at Pais. He wrote Treatiſes on Rhetoric and erſification. He flouriſhed at the begining of the 16th century.—Moreri

PONTANUS (James), a jeſuit of Bohemia, ho died at Augſburg it 1626, aged 84. He rote, Inſtitutiones Poeticæ, 8vo.; Comentaries upon Ovid and Virgil: and Tranſ-ations of ſeveral Greek authors in proſe and erſe.—Ibid

PONTANUS (John Iſaac), hiſtoriographer
o the king of Denmark, was born in that ingdom of a Dutch family in 1591. He rote, Hiſtoria Urbis et Rerum Amſtelodaenſium, folio, 1611; Itineriarum Galliæ arbonenſis, 1606; Rerum Danicarum Hiſtoria, una cum chorographica ejuſdem egni urbiumque deſcriptione, folio, 1631; Diſceptationes chorographicæ de Rheni di-ortiis atque oſtiis et accolis Populis, adverſus
. Cluverum, 8vo.; Obſervationes in Tracatum de Globis Cœleſti et Terreſtri, 8vo; Diſcuſſiones Hiſtoricæ, 8vo. [This book as written againſt Selden's famous treatiſe n the ſea.] Hiſtoria Geldrica, folio; Life of Frederick II. King of Denmark; Hiſto-ria Ulrica, folio, &c. He died at Harder-wyk in 1640.—Moreri.

PONTCHASTEAU (Sebaſtian-Joſeph du Cambont, baron de), a near relation of cardinal Richelieu, was born in 1634. He renounced the world and retired to the congregation of Port Royal, of which he became gardener. In 1679 he went to Rome, and afterwards entered the abbey of Orval; but died at Paris, whither he had gone on ſome works of charity, in 1699. He wrote, On the Cultivation of Fruit-trees, 12mo.; On the Moral Practice of the Jeſuits; Letter to Pereſixe, &c.—Ibid.

PONTEDERA (Julius), an Italian botaniſt, was born at Vicenza, in 1688. In the early part of his life he evinced a diſpoſition for thoſe purſuits which have immortalized his name. He became profeſſor of botany at Padua, and ſuperintendant of the botanic garden there. He was alſo a member of the academy of inſcriptions and belles-lettres at Paris.
He died in 1757. His principal work is his Compendium tabularum Botanicarum, in quo plantæ 272 ab eo in Italia nuper detectæ recenſentur, Patavii, 1718, in 4to.—Ibid.

PONTOPPIDAN (Eric), a Daniſh divine, was born in the iſle of Fuhnen, and preferred to the biſhopric of Drontheim, in Norway, where he died in 1678, aged 62. He publiſhed ſome learned works, particularly a grammar of the Daniſh language. His nephew, Eric Pontoppidan, became biſhop of Bergen, and diſtinguiſhed himſelf by a Hiſtory of the Reformation in Denmark, folio; and another of Norway, which laſt has been tranſ-lated into Engliſh. He died about 1750.—
Moreri.

PONTORMO (James), a painter, was born at Florence in 1193, and died there in 1556.
His early performances were admired by Ra-phael and Michael Angelo; but by copying the German ſtyle he acquired a hard and unnatural manner, which renders his ſubſequent pictures leſs valuable.—De Piles. Felibien.

POOL (Rachel Van), a female painter, was born at Amſterdam in 1664. She excelled in painting flowers and fruit, and died in 1750. Her huſband, Jurian Pool, was a good portrait-painter, and died in 1745, aged 79.—Pilkington.

POOLE (Matthew), a nonconformiſt miniſter, was born at York in 1624, and educated at Emanuel college, Cambridge, where he took his degrees in arts, and having entered into orders, according to the preſbyterian mode, became rector of St. Michael-le-Quern, London, of which he was deprived at the reſtoration for nonconformity. He diſplayed ſo much zeal againſt popery, that, according to the depoſition of Titus Oates, his name was among thoſe intended to be taken off in the popiſh plot. On this he went to Amſterdam, where he died in 1679.
Beſides ſermons, he wrote Annotations on the Bible, in Engliſh, which were completed and publiſhed after his death, in 2 vols. folio. But his greateſt work was the Synopſis Criticorum, or a Collection of Elucidations on the Scripture by different authors, in 5 vols. folio, publiſhed in 1669.—Calamy.

Pope (ſir Thomas), a patron of learning, was born at Dedington in Oxfordſhire, in 1508. He received his education at Eton ſchool, and afterwards ſtudied the law. At the age of twenty-eight he became treaſurer of the court of augmentations, and ſoon after was appointed viſitor of religious houſes, in which ſituation he conducted himſelf with moderation. In 1540 he was knighted, and made maſter of the jewel-houſe in the Tower. He was the intimate friend of ſir Thomas More, to whom, by order of the king, he communicated the ſad tidings of his intended execution. In 1554 he founded Trinity college, Oxford. He died in London in 1558. —Life by T. Warton. Biog. Brit.

Pope (Alexander), a celebrated poet, was born in 1688, of a good family, in London, where his father was a conſiderable merchant. His parents being of the Romiſh perſuaſion he was placed at eight years of age under one Taverner, a prieſt, who taught him the rudiments of the Latin and Greek languages together. About this time meeting with Ogilby's Homer, he was ſo much pleaſed that it became his favourite book: and when he was at ſchool at the age of ten he turned ſome of the events of Homer into a play, which was performed by the upper boys and the maſter's gardener, who repreſented Ajax. At the age of twelve he retired with his parents to Binfield in Windſor Foreſt, where his father had purchaſed an eſtate. Here he wrote his Ode on Solitude, which appears as the firſt fruits of his poetic genius. It was here alſo that he firſt met with the works of Waller, Spenſer, and Dryden; but on peruſing Dryden he abandoned the reſt and ſtudied him as a model. In 1704 he wrote his paſtorals, which being communicated to Mr. Wycherly, he ſent a copy to Mr. Walſh, who was highly delighted with them, and became a valuable friend to the juvenile poet. This year alſo he produced the firſt part of his Windſor Foreſt, which was not publiſhed till 1710, with a dedication to lord Lanſdown. At the age of twenty appeared his Eſſay on Criticiſm, which, notwithſtanding the youth of the author, is one of the fineſt poems in the language, and contains the ſoundeſt rules. But his genius ſhone to a greater advantage in his Rape of the Lock, founded on the circumſtance of lord Petre's cutting off a lock of Mrs. Fermor's hair. This poem was written to effect a reconciliation between the parties, and was ſucceſsful. It was printed in 1712, and was followed by the Temple of Fame. The following year he publiſhed his propoſals for a tranſlation of the Iliad, in which he met with uncommon encouragement, and it enabled him to purchaſe a houſe at Twickenham, whither he removed with his parents in 1715. After completing the Iliad, he undertook the Odyſſey, for which alſo he experienced a liberal ſubſcription. He was, however, materially aſſiſted in theſe works by the learning and abilities of others, particularly Broome, Fenton, and Parnell. The notes from Euſtathius were chiefly extracted by Mr. Jortin. In 1721 our author publiſhed an edition of Shakſpeare, which ſhews that therein he conſulted his fortune more than his fame. The reputation he had acquired by the ſucceſs, as well as the merit of his works, procured him numerous enemies among writers of the minor claſſes, from whom he experienced frequent ſplenetic attacks. Perhaps it would have been more to his honour had he taken no notice of them; but in 1727 he vented his reſentment in a mock heroic, entitled, The Dunciad, in which he took more than warrantable revenge, and, what was worſe, expoſed to ridicule many ingenious and reſpectable perſons who had given him no offence. In 1729, by the advice of lord Bolingbroke, he turned his pen to a moral and philoſophical ſubject, the reſult of which was his Eſſay on Man, an ethical poem addreſſed to that ſtateſman. Of this work it is needleſs to ſpeak, for whatever may be the thought of its leading principle, it poſſeſſes refined thoughts and ſubſtantial beauties. He next wrote ſatires, in which he attacked ſeveral perſons of rank. Mr. Pope was engaged in preparing a complete edition of his works, when he was carried off by a dropſy in the cheſt, in 1744. He bequeathed the property of his works to Dr. Warburton, who publiſhed a collection of them with notes, in 1751, in 9 vols. 8vo. Dr. Joſeph Warton alſo publiſhed an edition, to which he prefixed, what he had before printed, an admirable Eſſay on the Genius and Writings of Pope. The perſon of Mr. Pope was little, and crooked; yet there was much life and elegance in his countenance, except when he was labouring under his hereditary complaint, the head-ache. His friendſhips appear to have been capricious; and he had no ſmall portion of vanity in his diſpoſition, to which and ſelf-intereſt almoſt all conſiderations were readily ſacrificed. Of his religious opinions it is difficult to ſpeak. From his Eſſay on Man it ſhould ſeem as if he was a mere theiſt; and though he continued to profeſs the religion in which he was bred, he occaſionally attended his pariſh church.—Biog. Brit. Johnſon's Poets.

Popham (Sir John), an eminent judge, was born in Somerſetſhire in 1531. He was a ſtudent of Baliol college, Oxford, whence he removed to the Middle Temple, and was made ſerjeant at law in 1570; after ſerving the offices of attorney and ſolicitor-general, he was appointed in 1581 chief juſtice of the king's bench. He died in 1607. His "Reports and Caſes," in folio, ſhew his abilities to great advantage.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Pordage (John), a fanatic, was born in London, and became paſtor of St. Laurence reading in the civil wars. But engaging much in aſtrology, chemiſtry, and other abſtruſe ſubjects, he was accuſed before the commiſſioners for Berkſhire of magical practices, and was deprived of his living. He exerciſed medicine, and was called doctor Pordage. He wrote a book, entitled, Manifeſt Innocence; againſt Fowler's Dæmonium Meridianum. Pordage was alſo the author of ſome myſtical treatiſes, according to the notions of Behmen. He died about 1670.—Wood, A. O.

PORDENONE (John Anthony Licinio Regillo), a painter, ſo called from the place of his birth, a village in Friuli. He died in 1540, aged 56. He was the diſciple of Giorgioni, and the rival of Titian, who regarded his great merit with envy. The emperor Charles V. conferred on him the honour of knighthood. His nephew, called Pordenone the younger, was alſo a good painter. He was born at Venice, and died at Augſburg in 1570. He ſtudied under his uncle.—Pilkington. D'Argenville.

POREE (Charles), a Jeſuit, was born near Caen in Normandy in 1675. After acquiring a great reputation as a teacher in his native province, he became profeſſor of rhetoric in the college of Louis the Great at Paris, where he died in 1741. His works are, Orations, 3 vols.; Comedies and Tragedies in Latin; and Poems. His brother, Charles Gabriel, was member of the ſociety of the oratory, and canon of Bayeux. He died upon his cure of Louvigny, near Caen, in 1770, aged 85. He wrote Le Mandarinade, ou Hiſtoire du Mandarinat de l'Abbe de St. Martin, 3 vols. 12mo.; Letters on burying in Churches, &c.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

PORPHYRY, a platonic philoſopher, was born at Tyre, A.D. 223. He ſtudied at Athens, under Longinus, and philoſophy at Rome under Plotinus, whoſe life he wrote. He died in the reign of Diocletian. His learning was great, and he compoſed many works; one of which againſt the Scriptures was burnt by order of Theodoſius the Great. His Treatiſe de Abſtinentia ab Animalibus Iiandis, et de Vita Pythagoræ, were printed Cambridge in 1655, 8vo. We have another of his, entitled, De Antro Nymphaarum, 4to.; and Porphyrii Iſagoge, folio. He is not to be confounded with Porphyry, a latin poet, who wrote a panegyric in verſe to the emperor Conſtantine, which occaſioned his being recalled from exile.—Voſſius. Moreri.

PORSENNA, king of Etruria, who declared war againſt the Romans for refuſing to reſtore Tarquin, in which he was at firſt ſucceſsful, and laid ſiege to Rome, but Cocles and Scævola obliged him to retire. He died ſhortly after.—Livy.

PORTA (Joſeph), an eminent painter, was born at Caſtel Nuovo in 1535. He ſtudied under Salviati, whoſe name he aſſumed out of gratitude. He painted in freſco and oil; and wrote ſome pieces on mathematics, which he burnt. He died at Venice in 1585.—De Piles.

PORTA (John Baptiſt), a gentleman of Naples, who acquired a great reputation by his application to the belles-lettres, and the ſciences, particularly the mathematics, medicine, and natural hiſtory. He held aſſemblies of learned men in his houſe, which were condemned by the court of Rome, on the abſurd charge, that the object of their meetings was magic. Porta died in 1515, aged 70. His works are, 1. Treatiſe on Natural Magic, in Latin, 8vo.; 2. another on Phyſiognomy, mixed with aſtrology, and other vanities; 3. De occultis Litterarum notis; 4. Phyſiognomonica, ſeu Methodus Cognoſcendi ex inſpectione vires abditas cujuſcumque rei, folio; 5. De Diſtillationibus, 4to. He was the inventor of the camera obſcura; and is ſaid to have conceived the project of an Encyclopedia.—Vander Linden de Scrip. Med. Moreri.

PORTA (Simon), or Portius, was a native of Naples, and the diſciple of Pomponatius. He became profeſſor of philoſophy at Piſa, and died at Naples in 1554, aged 57. He wrote, 1. De Mente humana, de Voluptate et Dolore, & de Coloribus Oculorum, 1 vol. 4to.; 2. De rerum naturalium Principiis libri duo, 4to.; 3. De Conflagratione agri Puteolani, 4to.; 4. Opus Phyſiologicum, 4to.—Tiraboſchi.

PORTE (the abbé Joſeph de la), a miſcellaneous writer, was born at Befort in 1718, and died at Paris in 1779. He was a jeſuit, which order he quitted, and applied to literature. His firſt performance was a comedy called the Antiquary; after which he publiſhed a journal, entitled, Obſervations on Modern Literature; which was followed by the Literary Year. He alſo compiled the School of Literature, 2 vols. 12mo.; Dramatic Anecdotes, 3 vols. 8vo.; Literary Hiſtory of French Ladies, 5 vols. 8vo.; the French Traveller, 24 vols. 12mo. &c.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

PORTER (Francis), an Iriſh divine of the Roman church, was born in the county of Meath; he entered into the order of recollets, and was profeſſor of theology in the convent of St. Iſidore at Rome. James II. appointed him his hiſtoriographer. He died in 1702. His works are, 1. Securis Evangelica ad hæreſis radices poſita; 2. Palinodia religionis prætenſe reformatæ; 3. Compendium Annalium Eccleſiaſticorum regni Hiberniæ, 4to.; 4. Syſtema decretorum dogmaticorum ab initio naſcentis Eccleſiæ per ſummos Pontifices, concilia generalia et particularia huc uſque editorum, 1698.—Ibid.

PORTES (Philip des), a French poet, was born at Chartres. He was canon of the holy chapel at Paris, and obtained ſeveral eccleſiaſtical benefices, but refuſed the epiſcopal dignity. He died in 1606. His works are, a Tranſlatation of the Pſalms; Imitations of Arioſto; Chriſtian Poems; the Amours of Hippolytus and Diana, &c.—Moreri.

PORTUGAL, was part of the antient Luſitania, and conquered by the Romans about 200 B.C. It was afterwards poſſeſſed by the Alans, the Goths, and the Moors. In 1080 count Henry, ſon-in-law of the king of Leon, conquered a great part of the country, and his ſon Alonzo made himſelf maſter of it in 1146. On the death of Henry king of Portugal, Philip II. of Spain ſeized upon the kingdom; but in 1640 John duke of Braganza broke off the Spaniſh yoke, and was crowned king of Portugal; ſince which it has remainad an independant ſtate.—Univ. Hiſt.

PORTUS (Francis), a native of Candia. He became profeſſor of Greek at Ferrara, but on the death of the duke he quitted Italy, and went to Geneva, where he profeſſed the proteſtant religion. He died there in 1581. His works are, 1. Additions to the Greek Dictionary of Conſtantine, fol.; 2. Commentaries upon Pindar, Thucydides, Longinus, Xenophon, and other antient authors. His ſon Æmilius PORTUS was profeſſor of Greek at Heidelberg, and the author of Dictionarum Ionicum et Doricum, Græco-Latinum, 2 vols. 8vo.; a tranſlation of Suidas, and other works.—Moreri.

PORUS, king of part of India, near the river Hydaſpes, on the banks of which he was defeated by Alexander, who aſking him how he would wiſh to be treated, "As a king," ſaid Porus. This anſwer ſo pleaſed the victor, that he not only reſtored him to his eſtates, but added thereto ſeveral provinces.—Quintus Curtius.

POSIDIPPUS, a Greek poet, who flouriſhed B.C. 280. He wrote ſeveral dramatic pieces which are loſt. There was another poet of the ſame name who wrote epigrams, which are cited by Athenæus and Stobæus. —Voſſius de Poet. Græc. Suidas.

POSSEVIN (Anthony), a Jeſuit, was born at Mantua. He diſtinguiſhed himſelf as a preacher, and pope Gregory XIII. employed him in ſeveral important affairs. He died at Ferrara in 1611, aged 78. His principal works are, 1. Bibliotheca Selecta de ratione Studiorum, 2 vols folio; 2. Deſcription of Muſcovy, in Latin, folio; 3. Miles Chriſtianus; 4. Confutatio Miniſtrorum Tranſilvaniæ et Franciſi Davidis de Trinitate, &c. His nephew, Anthony Poſſevin, a phyſician of Mantua, wrote Gonzagarum Mantuæ et Montisferrati Ducum Hiſtoria, 1628, 4to.—Moreri.

POSSIDONIUS, an aſtronomer of Alexandria, who flouriſhed before Ptolemy, and undertook to aſcertain the circumference of the earth, which he made to be thirty thouſand furlongs. There was a ſtoic philoſopher of this name who was a native of Apamea in Syria, and taught with reputation at Rhodes, B.C. 30. Joſephus charges him with having invented the calumny againſt the Jews, that they worſhipped the head of an aſs.—Voſſius de Mathem.

POST (Francis), a celebrated painter, was born at Haerlem. In 1647 he went to the Weſt Indies, where he remained many years, and painted ſeveral fine views. He died at Haerlem in 1680.—Houbraken.

POSTEL (William), was born at Dolerie in Normandy, in 1510, of poor parents, who died of the plague when he was a child. On going to Paris he aſſociated himſelf with ſome young ſcholars, and was admitted a ſtudent in the college of St. Barbe, where he made a great progreſs in learning. Francis I. ſent him into the Eaſt, to collect manuſcripts, and on his return appointed him royal profeſſor of mathematics and languages. But on account of his attachment to the chancellor Poyet, he was deprived of his places by the queen of Navarre. He then went to Rome, were he turned jeſuit, but was expelled from the order, and impriſoned, for maintaining that the authority of councils was ſuperior to that of popes. On gaining his liberty he went to Venice, and formed an intimacy with an old woman, who was far gone in myſtic reveries. Poſtel ſtarted a ſtrange notion, that women had been left without redemption, which was now accompliſhed by mother Joan, the name of this viſionary. For his wild fancies he was again impriſoned, but recovered his liberty, and returned to Paris, from whence he removed to Germany. He afterwards wrote a retractation, and was reſtored to his profeſſorſhip, but again relapſed, and was confined in a monaſtery. He died in 1581. He wrote Clavis abſconditorum a conſtitutione Mundi, 12mo. 1547; Deſcription of the Holy Land; Hiſtory of the Gauls; De Phœnicum litteris; de originibus nationum; Alcorani et Evangelii concordia, 8vo; De Linguæ Phœnicis ſeu Hebraicæ excellentiæ, &c.—Moreri.

POSTHUMUS (Marcus Caſſius Latienus), a Roman General, who was elected emperor in Gaul on the death of Valerian, in 261. He defeated the Germans in ſeveral actions, and diſplayed talents and virtues worthy of his dignity; but having aſſociated his ſon, who poſſeſſed eminent virtues and ability, in the government with him, the ſoldiers mutinied and put them to death in 267.—Univ. Hiſt.

POSTLETHWAYTE (Malachi), a merchant of London, who publiſhed a "Commercial Dictionary," in 2 vols folio, a work of conſiderable labour and utility. He died in 1767.

POTAMON, a philoſopher of Alexandria in the reign of Auguſtus. He was the chief of a ſect called the Eclectic, becauſe the opinions profeſſed by it were drawn from the various ſyſtems then known.—Diog. Laert.

POTAMON, of Leſbos, or Mitylene, an orator, who flouriſhed in the time of Tiberius, was the ſon of the philoſopher Leſbonax. He was the author of a panegyric on Tiberius, who ſhewed him great diſtinction. —Voſſius.

Pote (Joſeph), an ingenious bookſeller nd printer of Eton, who publiſhed the liſtory and Antiquities of Windſor Caſtle, nd of the Royal College and Chapel of St. eorge, 4to. He died in 1787.—Gent. Mag.

Potemkin (Gregory Alexander), a Ruſ- an prince, was born in 1736, at Smolenſko, a Poliſh family. He entered into the orſe-guards, and being noticed by the em- reſs Catherine, ſhe made him miniſter of ar, in which capacity he ſuggeſted the idea taking the Crimea, and building the city Cherſon, the foundations of which were id in 1778. Potemkin greatly ornamented at city. In 1787 he renewed the war ainſt Turkey, and put himſelf at the head the army. The year following he took zakow, and put the inhabitants to the ord. For this bloody ſervice, he obtained e title of chief of the Coſſacks, and other vours from the empreſs. He acquired pro- gious riches, and poſſeſſed almoſt uncon- ulable power. He was a man of debauch- principles, and an inordinate epicure, hich produced a diſorder that carried him as he was travelling, in 1791. His re- ins were interred under a magnificent uſoleum at Cherſon. He is ſaid to have ired to the duchy of Courland, and to the gdom of Poland.—Tooke's Hiſt. Ruſſia. ce's Travels. Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

Potenger (John), an Engliſh writer, s born at Wincheſter in 1647. He was cated at Corpus Chriſti college, Oxford, r which he entered of the Temple, and s called to the bar. He died at Dorcheſ- in 1733. Mr. Potenger wrote a poem on th; and tranſlated the Life of Agricola m Tacitus.—Nichols's Collection of Poets.

Poter (Paul), a painter, was born at kuyſen in 1625, and died at Amſterdam 1654. He excelled in painting landſcapes cattle; and in repreſenting the effect of meridian ſun upon objects he ſtands un- lled.—Houbraken.

Pott (Percival), an eminent ſurgeon, born at London in 1713. After ſerving apprenticeſhip to Mr. Nourſe, he entered practice; in 1746 he was elected ſurgeon t. Bartholomew's hoſpital, and in 1764 a w of the royal ſociety. Mr. Pott in- ted ſome ſurgical inſtruments, and wrote reatiſe on the Hernia: another on unds of the Head; and Obſervations on Fiſtula Lachrymalis; which with ſome r pieces were publiſhed in 2 vols. 8vo. died in 1788.—Hutchinſon's Biog. Med.

Ott (John Henry), a German chemiſt, publiſhed, 1. De Sulphuribus Metallo- , 1738, 4to.; 2. Obſervationes Circa 1741, 2 vols 4to. Theſe works are ly eſteemed. The author was a mem- of ſeveral learned ſocieties.—Nouv. Dict.

Otter (Chriſtopher), a learned divine, was born in Weſtmoreland in 1591. He became a ſtudent of Quen's college, Oxford, afterwards fellow, and in 1626 provoſt of that ſociety. In 1635 he obtained the deanry of Worceſter, and in 1646 the king nominated him to the deanry of Durham, but he died the ſame year. He publiſhed a ſermon at the conſecration of his uncle, Dr. Barnaby Potter, biſhop of Carliſle. He was alſo the author of ſome pieces on Predeſtination, againſt the Calviniſts.—Wood, A.O.

Potter (Francis), an ingenious divine, was born in Wiltſhire, and educated at Oxford, after which he took orders, and in 1637 ſucceeded his father in the living of Kilmington. He had a good taſte for painting and mechanics, and having preſented an hydraulic machine to the royal ſociety, was choſen a member of that learned body. He wrote a curious book on the myſtic number of 666 in the Revelations, and died in 1678. —Ibid.

Potter (John), a learned prelate, was born at Wakefield in Yorkſhire, in 1674, and at the age of fourteen entered a battler of Univerſity college, Oxford, where he took his degree of B.A. and publiſhed his Variantes Lectiones ad Plutarchi, &c. for the uſe of young ſtudents. In 1694 he was elected fellow of Lincoln college, and became an eminent tutor. On being appointed chaplain to archbiſhop Teniſon, he removed to Lambeth, and in 1708 became regius profeſſor of divinity. In 1715 he was preferred to the ſee of Oxford, from whence in 1737 he was tranſlated to Canterbury. He died in 1747. Beſides the above work he publiſhed, 1. Antiquities of Greece, 2 vols. 8vo.; 2. Diſcourſe on Church Government, 8vo.; 3. an edition of Lycophron; 4. an edition of Clemens Alexandrinus. His theological works have been collected in 3 vols. 8vo.—Biog. Brit.

Potter (Robert), an Engliſh divine, was educated at Emanuel college, Cambridge, where he took his maſter's degree in 1788. Late in life he obtained the living of Loweſtoff, in Suffolk, and a prebend in the cathedral of Norwich. He is advantageouſly known in the republic of letters by his excellent tranſlations of Sophocles, Euripides, and Æſchylus. He was alſo the author of a Vindication of Gray the poet, againſt Dr. Johnſon. He died in 1804.—Gent. Mag.

Pouget (Francis Amé), prieſt of the oratory, and doctor of the Sorbonne, was born at Montpellier in 1666. He became vicar of St. Roch at Paris, and in that office is ſaid to have converted La Fontaine; on which ſubject he wrote a curious letter, publiſhed by Deſmolets. He died in 1723. He wrote, 1. Catechiſm of Montpellier; where he ſuperintended a ſeminary. It is a body of divinity, printed in French in 5 vols. 12mo. and tranſlated into Latin in 2 vols. folio.; 2. Chriſtian Inſtructions on the Duties of the Knights of Malta, 12mo.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

POULLE (Louis), preacher to the French king, and abbot of Nogent, died at Avignon in 1781, aged 79. His abilities as a preacher were very great, and his ſermons, publiſhed in 1778, 2 vols. 12mo. poſſeſs a noble eloquence, enriched with fine images, and full of ſentiment. The abbé Poulle had alſo a poetical genius, and obtained the prize at Toulouſe in 1732 and 1733.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

POUPART (Francis), a naturaliſt, was born at Mans, and went to Paris early in life, where he aſſiduouſly applied to experimental philoſophy, and natural hiſtory. He alſo ſtudied ſurgery, and became doctor in medicine at Rheims. He died in 1709. He wrote a Deſcription of the Leech, in the Journal des Savans; a Memoir on the Hermaphrodite-Inſects; Hiſtory of the Formica-leo, and the Formica-pulex. He was a member of the academy of ſciences, in whoſe memoirs are ſeveral of his papers.—Ibid.

POURBUS (Peter and Francis), father and ſon, two Flemiſh painters of the 16th century. The firſt painted animals and landſcapes; and the other hiſtory and portrait. The father died at Antwerp in 1583, and the ſon at Paris in 1622.—D'Argenville

POURCHOT (Edme), profeſſor of philoſophy, in the college of Mazarin, at Paris, and rector of the univerſity, where he died in 1734, aged 83. He wrote Inſtitutiones Philoſophicæ, 5 vols. 12mo. and ſome other eſteemed works.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

POURFOUR (Francis), a phyſician, was born at Paris in 1664, and died there in 1741. He wrote three Letters on a New Syſtem of the Brain, 4to.; Diſſertation on a New Method of Operating for the Cataract, 12mo; and on Diſeaſes of the Eyes, 4to. He was a good botaniſt, and left a MS. Herbal in 30 volumes.—Ibid.

POUSSIN (Nicholas le), an eminent painter, was born at Andely in Normandy, in 1594. He ſtudied in Italy, where he applied principally to landſcape. On his return to France he was named firſt painter to the king. He was alſo appointed to ornament the gallery of the Louvre, but being croſſed in his deſigns in that great wrok, he went to Rome, and died there in 1665.—D'Argenville.

POUSSIN (Gaſpar), a painter, whoſe real name was Dughet, but he took that of Pouſſin, his ſiſter having married Nicholas Pouſſin. His landſcapes, particularly thoſe which repreſent land ſtorms, are inimitably fine. He died about 1675.—Ibid.

POWELL (David), a learned antiquary, was born in Denbighſhire about 1552, and educated at Oxford, where he took his degree of D.D. He died in 1590, and was buried in the church of Ruabon in Denbighſhire, of which he was vicar. He publiſhed Caradoc's Hiſtory of Wales, in 1584, 4to.; Annotationes in Itinerarium Cambriæ Script. per Giraldum, 8vo; Annot. in Cambr. Deſcriptionum; De Britannica Hiſtoria recte intelligenda.—Wood, A. O.

POWELL (William Samuel), an eminent divine, was born at Colcheſter in 1717, and educated at St John's college, Cambridge, of which he became ſucceſſively fellow and maſter. In 1766 he obtained the archdeaconry of Colcheſter, to which were added other preferments. Dr Powell publiſhed a famous Sermon on Subſcription to the Articles; and ſome excellent Diſcourſes. He died in 1775.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

POWELL (George), an Engliſh actor, who was conſidered as the rival of Betterton, but his propenſity to drinking allowed Wilkes, another rival, to ſurpaſs him in his own line. He died in 1714. He wrote "Alphonſo King of Naples," and ſome other dramatic pieces.—Biog Dram.

POWELL (Foſter), an Engliſh pedeſtrian, who frequently walked from London to York in a very ſhort time, upon which great wagers were always laid. He was a writer in an attorney's office, and died in poverty in 1793, aged 59.—Gent. Mag.

POWNALL (Thomas), a miſcellaneous writer, was born in 1722, and educated at Lincoln. He went to America in 1753, and was appointed governor of New Jerſey, and afterwards of Maſſachuſſetts. In 1760 he removed to the government of South Carolina. After his return from America he became comptroller general of the expenditure and accounts of the extraordinaries of the army in Germany. He ſerved in three parliaments; after which he retired wholly from public buſineſs, and died at Bath in 1805. His works are, Memoirs on Drainage and Navigation; Letter to Adam Smith, on ſeveral points in his Inquiry into the Nature and Cauſes of the Wealth of Nations; Topographical Deſcription of Part of North America; Treatiſe on Antiquities; Memorial addreſſed to the Sovereigns of America; Memorial to the Sovereigns of Europe; the Right, Intereſt, and Duty of Government as concerned in the Affairs of the Eaſt Indies; Notices and Deſcriptions of Antiquities of the Provincia Romana of Gaul; Intellectual Phyſics; an Eſſay concerning the Nature of Being; a Treatiſe on Old Age, &c.—Monthly Mag.

POYNINGS (ſir Edward), a gentleman of Kent, who was ſent by Henry VII. to Ireland, which he governed with courage and prudence. After ſubduing the earls of Deſmond and Kildare, he convened a parliament which is rendered famous for the ſtatutes enacted in it. In the reign of Henry VIII. Poynings was made privy counſellor, and appointed governor of Tournay.—Rapin.

POZZO (Andrew), an Italian painter and architect, was born at Trent in 1642, and died in 1709. He ornamented the church of St. Ignatius at Rome with ſome fine pictures; and wrote two volumes on perſpective, but wrote contrary to the true principles of the art.—D'Argenville.

PRADON (Nicholas), a poet, was born at ouen, and died at Paris in 1698. He wrote ne tragedies, one of which, Phædra and ppolytus, acted in 1677, was very succeſſ-, and ſet up in oppoſition to Racine, by ſe who were envious of that writer's great utation. The works of Pradon were ted in 1744, in 2 vols. 12mo.—Moreri.

PRATT (Charles), earl Camden, was the d ſon of ſir John Pratt, chief juſtice of court of king's bench, and born in 1713. received his education firſt at Eton, and rwards at King's college, Cambridge, re he took his degree of maſter of arts, then entered of the Inner Temple. In time he was called to the bar, but did make any progreſs in that profeſſion for ral years. At length, by the intereſt of ley, afterwards lord chancellor, he ob-ed conſiderable practice and the friend-of Mr. Pitt. On the advancement of ley to the houſe of lords in 1757, Mr. t was appointed attorney-general; and in made chief juſtice of the common-. In this elevated ſtation he diſtinguiſh-imſelf by his conduct in the affair of ces, whom, after a very elaborate decla-n of the law on the caſe, he ordered to ſcharged. For this the corporation of on voted him the freedom of the city in d box, and his portrait to be placed in ihall. He received ſimilar marks of ction from other places. In 1765 he created a peer, and the year following ced to the dignity of lord chancellor, ich office he acted with great credit to lf and juſtice to the public. Having e occaſion of the Middleſex election ex-d his opinion againſt the court, the were taken from him, on which ſeve-her members of the adminiſtration re-their places. On the queſtion of li-lord Camden always oppoſed the doc-laid down by high authority, viz. that were only the judges of the matter of and not of the law. In the American e reſiſted the coercive meaſures of go-ent. In 1782 he was appointed pre-of the council, which office he reſigned llowing year; but was afterwards re-ted, and held it to his death in 1794. pp. Mag. vol. xxvi.

XAGORAS, a Greek hiſtorian who about A.D. 345. He was a native of s, and wrote a Hiſtory of the Sove-of that country; and another of Con-e; alſo one of Alexander the Great. us de Hiſt. Græc.

XEAS, an hereſiarch of the ſecond y. After oppoſing the Montaniſts al, he fell into the error that there is e perſon of the Trinity, and the ſame as crucified. He was followed by the ans and others. Tertullian wrote him.—Dupin.

XITELES, a Grecian ſculptor, who ed 364 B.C. He executed ſeveral tues of Venus, and of the courteſan .—Pliny Nat. Hiſt.

PREMONTVAL (Peter le Guay de), was born at Charenton in 1716, and became a member of the academy at Berlin, where he died in 1767. He wrote, 1. Monogamia, or a Treatiſe on Single Marriages, 3 vols. 8vo.; 2. Preſervative againſt the Corruption of the French Language in Germany, 8vo.; 3. The Mind of Fontenelle, 12mo.; 4. Thoughts upon Liberty, &c. He was a Socinian, and a favourer of the doctrine of Epicurus.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

PRESTON (John), an Engliſh divine, was maſter of Emanuel college, Cambridge, and died in 1628. He was a patron of the puritans, and wrote ſeveral books much eſteemed by that party. One Thomas Preſton, of King's college, Cambridge, performed ſo well in the tragedy of Dido before queen Elizabeth, in 1564, that ſhe ſettled a penſion of 20l. a year on him. He became doctor of civil law, and maſter of Trinity hall in that univerſity.—Wood.

PRETI (Jerome), an Italian poet, was a native of Tuſcany, and died at Barcelona in 1626. His poems, printed in 1666, in 12mo. are highly eſteemed.—Tiraboſchi.

PREVILLE (Peter Louis Dubus de), a celebrated French performer, was deſtined for the eccleſiaſtical ſtate, but having quitted his parents he became labourer to ſome maſons, after which he joined a company of ſtrolling players. His talents were diſcovered at Lyons, from whence he removed to Paris in 1753, and on playing before Louis XV. that monarch took him into his company of comedians. His expreſſion was fine, and he adapted himſelf to any age or character. He died in 1800.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

PREVOT D'EXILES (Anthony Francis), was born in 1697 at Heſdin, in the province of Artois. He had his education among the jeſuits, and took the habit of the order, which he afterwards renounced. He next became a Benedictine, but quitted that ſociety alſo, and went to Holland, where he formed a connection with an agreeable woman. From Holland he came to England, and in 1734 returned to Paris, where he died of an apoplexy in 1763. He tranſlated Clariſſa Harlowe and Sir Charles Grandiſon into French; and was the author of the Memoirs of a Man of Quality, a romance of merit in 6 vols.; alſo of the Hiſtory of Cleveland, natural Son of Cromwell, 6 vols.; Pro and Con, a periodical journal; the Dean of Coleraine, a novel; a General Hiſtory of Voyages, &c.—Ibid.

PRICE (ſir John), an eminent antiquary of Brecknockſhire, was one of the commiſſioners employed to ſurvey the monaſteries that were to be diſſolved. He died about 1553. He wrote a Defence of Britiſh Hiſtory in Anſwer to Polydore Virgil, which was publiſhed by his ſon Richard in 1573.—Owen's Camb. Biog.

PRICE (John), was born at London in 1600. Having ſuffered conſiderably in the civil wars, he went to Florence, where he turned Roman catholic; and the grand duke appointed him keeper of the medals and Greek profeſſor. He afterwards removed to Rome, where he died in 1676. He wrote Notes on the Pſalms, the Goſpel of St. Matthew, and the Acts; alſo Notes upon Apuleius, 1650, 8vo.—Moreri.

PRICE (Richard), a diſſenting miniſter and political writer, was born in Glamorganſhire in 1723. He received his education in a private academy, after which he became miniſter to a congregation at Newington in Middleſex; from whence he removed to that of Hackney. He was alſo lecturer of the meeting-houſe in the Old Jewry. About 1764 he became a member of the royal ſociety, and obtained the degree of doctor in divinity from a Scotch univerſity. At the commencement of the American war he diſtinguiſhed himſelf by his zeal in behalf of republicaniſm, and publiſhed his Obſervations on Liberty and Civil Government, for which he had the thanks of the city of London. He alſo wrote Obſervations on the National Debt, in which he endeavoured to prove that the kingdom was on the eve of bankruptcy. This was above thirty years ago, and the prediction has not been accompliſhed. Soon after the breaking out of the French revolution, Dr. Price preached an inflammatory diſcourſe at the Old Jewry, in which he triumphed in ſuch a manner on the misfortunes of the royal family of France, as called forth the keen animadverſions of Mr. Burke. The doctor died in 1791. His other works are, 1. Four Diſſertations on Providence and Prayer; on the Importance of Chriſtianity; 2. A Review of the Principal Queſtions and Difficulties in Morals, 8vo.; 3. Obſervations on Reverſionary Payments, Annuities, &c. 2 vols. 8vo.; 4. Diſcuſſion of the Doctrines of Materialiſm and Neceſſity, in a correſpondence with Dr. Prieſtley, 8vo.; 5. Eſſay on the Population of England and Wales, 8vo; 6. A Volume of Sermons.—Europ. Mag. Gent Mag.

PRICHARD (Rees), a Welch divine and poet, was born at Llanymodyfri in Caermarthenſhire, and educated at St. John's college, Oxford. On entering into orders he obtained the vicarage of his native village, and in 1613 the rectory of Llamedy. He alſo became a prebendary in the collegiate church of Brecon, and chancellor of St David's. He died in 1644. His poems in Welch on religious ſubjects have been oftentimes printed, and are very popular in that country.—Wood.

PRIDEAUX (John), a learned prelate, was born in 1578, at Stowfort in Devonſhire, of poor parents. He was admitted of Exeter college, Oxford, of which he became fellow, and on the death of Dr. Holland was choſen rector. He was afterwards appointed regius profeſſor of divinity; in which he diſplayed conſiderable talents. He alſo ſerved the office of vice-chancellor, and in 1641 was advanced to the biſhopric of Worceſter, but was deprived of the revenues by the rebellion. He died in 1650. He wrote Faſciculus Controcrations, and other works, in Latin.—Wood, A. O.

PRIDEAUX (Humphrey), a learned divine, was born at Padſtow, in Cornwall, in 1648. He was educated at Weſtminſter ſchool, and elected from thence to Chriſt Church, Oxford, where he took his degrees in arts. In 1676 he publiſhed the Marmora Oxonienſa, in one volume folio. This is an account of the Arundel marbles, with a comment on them, and it gained the editor univerſal reputation. It alſo procured him the patronage of the chancellor Finch, who gave him a living in Oxford. In 1681 he was promoted to a prebend of Norwich, of which cathedral he became dean in 1702. In 1710 he was cut for the ſtone in his bladder by an eminent operator of London, but being left to the care of a young ſurgeon, he was ſo ill-treated as ever after to be incapable of voiding his urine by the natural paſſage. Being diſabled from public duty, he devoted himſelf to writing, and produced his Connection of the Old and New Teſtament, 2 vols. folio, and 4 vols 8vo. This admirable work has been tranſlated into ſeveral languages, and has paſſed through numerous editions. Dean Prideaux died at Norwich in 1724. Beſides the above works he was the author of Directions to Churchwardens, 12mo; the Life of Mahomet, 8vo.; the Original Right of Tythes, 8vo; ſome pamphlets, and a ſingle ſermon.—Biog. Brit.

PRIESTLEY (Joſeph), was born at Fieldhead in Yorkſhire, in 1733, and educated in the academy of Daventry, under Dr. Aſhworth. At the age of twenty-two he became aſſiſtant miniſter to the independent congregation of Needham-market, in Suffolk, after which he was choſen paſtor of a congregation at Nantwich, in Cheſhire, where alſo he kept a ſchool. In 1761 he removed to Warrington as tutor in the belles-lettres in the academy there. His connection with that inſtitution ended in 1768, when he accepted an invitation from the diſſenters at Leeds, where he publiſhed ſeveral theological works which attracted conſiderable notice and controverſy. In 1770 he went to reſide with the earl of Shelburne, afterwards marquis of Lanſdowne, as librarian and philoſophical companion. In 1775 he publiſhed his Examination of Dr. Reid, on the Human Mind; Dr. Beattie on Truth; and Dr. Oſwald's Appeal to Common Senſe; in which he treated thoſe gentlemen with great ridicule and contempt. His Diſquiſitions on Matter and Spirit, printed in 1777, excited great ſurpriſe, even among the author's admirers, as therein he explicitly denied the ſoul's immateriality. At this time he alſo appeared as a champion for the doctrine of philoſophical neceſſity, in which he had his friend Dr. Price for an opponent. While thus engaged in metaphyſical and theological diſputations, he purſued his philoſophical enquiries with ardour, the reſult of which appeared in the Philoſophical Tranſactions, and in ſeparate publications, particularly his Ex-eriments and Obſervations on Different Kinds of Air, 2 vols. 8vo. The term of his ngagement with lord Shelburne having ex-ired, Dr. Prieſtley, with a penſion of 150l. -year, retired to Birmingham, where he be-ame paſtor of a congregation of unitarian iſſenters in 1780. He there publiſhed ſe eral of his works; as, Letters to Biſhop Newcome on the Duration of Chriſt's Mi-iſtry; and the Hiſtory of the Corruptions f Chriſtianity, 2 vols. 8vo. This laſt rought him into a controverſy with Dr. orſley, ſince biſhop of St. Aſaph. The hiſ-ry was alſo anſwered and refuted in the onthly Review. Dr. Prieſtley, however, ill perſevered, and publiſhed his Hiſtory of arly Opinions concerning the Perſon of hriſt. In 1791 a riot happened at Birming-m, owing to an imprudent meeting of e inhabitants to celebrate the anniverſary the French revolution. Several houſes ere pulled down and burnt; and Dr. Prieſt-y's among the reſt, by which he loſt his rary, manuſcripts, and philoſophical appa-us. In conſequence of this diſgraceful nſaction he retired to London, and for ne time officiated to the congregation at ackney, of which Dr. Price had been mi-ter. He had alſo a ſituation in the diſ-ting college, at Hackney. But his mind ng greatly ſoured by late events, he went America in 1794, and ſettled at Nor-mberland, in the ſtate of Pennſylvania, ere he died in 1804. Dr. Prieſtley was a ow of the royal ſociety, and of other rned bodies in different parts of the world. lived to ſee his phlogiſtic ſyſtem of che-ry univerſally exploded, yet he perſiſted defending it to the laſt. He was alſo ally tenacious of his Socinianiſm, and had ntroverſy on the ſubject with Dr. Linn, of ladelphia. His writings are too various be enumerated. The principal and beſt his Charts of Hiſtory and Biography; Hiſtory of Electricity; the Hiſtory and ſent State of Diſcoveries relating to Vi-, Light, and Colours; Lectures on the ory and Hiſtory of Language, and on the ciples of Oratory and Criticiſm.—Monthly . May, 1804.

RIZUR (Philip), profeſſor of belles-let-in the univerſity of Paris, was a native Normandy, and died in 1680. He edited works of Cyprian, Minutius Felix, Ar-us, &c. in folio; and publiſhed Diſſerta-e Litteris canonicis, 8vo.—Moreri.

RIMATTICIO (Francis), a painter and itect, was born at Bologna in 1490. He employed by Francis I. of France, who inted him commiſſary-general of the roy-uildings. He died at Paris in 1570.—Felibien.

RIMEROSE (Gilbert), a Scotch divine, was created D.D. at Oxford, by manda-from James I. He was miniſter of the ch church in London, chaplain to the , and canon of Windſor. He wrote, 's Vow oppoſed to the Vows of Monks and Friars, in French, 4 vols. 4to.; the Trumpet of Sion, in 18 Sermons; and other theological works. He died in 1642. His ſon James Primeroſe became doctor of phyſic, after which he ſettled in Yorkſhire, and wrote, 1. Exercitationes & animadverſiones in Lib. G. Harvæi de motu cordis et circulatione ſanguinis, 4to.; 2. De vulgi in medicina erroribus, 12mo. This laſt was tranſlated into Engliſh by Dr. Wittie, 1651, 8vo. Primeroſe was the author of ſome other medical pieces, now obſolete.

PRINCE (John), a divine and antiquary, was born at Axminſter in Devonſhire, and educated at Braſenoſe college, Oxford. On entering into orders he became curate of Bideford in his native county, and afterwards ſucceſſively miniſter of St. Martin's in Exeter, vicar of Totneſs, and laſtly of Berry Pomeroy, where he died about 1720. He publiſhed a work, entitled, The Worthies of Devon, in one volume folio, 1781; which is exceedingly curious and valuable, but very ſcarce. Mr. Prince was alſo the author of ſeveral Sermons; an Humble Defence of the Exeter Bill; for the uniting the Pariſhes and ſettling a Maintenance on their Miniſters, 4to; A Letter to a young Divine, containing ſome brief directions for compoſing and delivering of Sermons; the imprudence and unreaſonableneſs of the prudential reaſons for repealing the penal laws, &c.—Wood.

PRINGLE (ſir John), was born in Roxburghſhire in 1707. He was educated at Edinburgh, where he applied to the ſtudy of phyſic, which he completed under Boerhaave, at Leyden, where he took his doctor's degree. In 1742 he was appointed phyſician to the army in Flanders. He afterwards attended the duke of Cumberland in the ſame capacity againſt the rebels. He next ſettled in London, where he obtained great practice, and in 1761 was appointed phyſician to the queen's houſehold. In 1766 he was created a baronet, and on the death of Mr. Weſt was elected preſident of the royal ſociety. He was appointed phyſician to the king, and died in 1782. Sir John Pringle wrote Obſervations on Diſeaſes of the Army, 8vo.; Memoirs upon ſeptic and antiſeptic Subſtances, for which he received the gold medal of the royal ſociety, 8vo; Obſervations on the Treatment of Fevers in Hoſpitals and Priſons; Anniverſary Diſcourſes before the Royal Society.—Europ. Mag. Gent. Mag.

PRIOLO (Benjamin), was born at St. John-de-Angely, in the Venetian ſtates, in 1602. He ſtudied at Leyden, and afterwards at Padua. The duke of Rohan took him into his confidence, after whoſe death, in 1638, Priolo was employed by the court of France in ſeveral important negociations, for which he received a penſion. He died at Lyons in 1667. He wrote a Hiſtory of France, in Latin, the beſt edition of which is that of Leipſic, in 1686, 8vo.—Moreri.

PRIOR (Matthew), an Engliſh poet, was born in London, in 1664. On loſing his father when young, the care of him devolved to his uncle, a vintner, near Charing-croſs, who ſent him to Weſtminſter ſchool, but afterwards took him home with an intent of bringing him up to his own buſineſs. He ſtill purſued his claſſical ſtudies as occaſion permitted, which proved the means of his advancement, for happening to explain a diſputed paſſage in Horace, to ſome company at his uncle's houſe, the earl of Dorſet, one of the party, became his patron, and ſent him to St. John's college, Cambridge, of which he was choſen fellow. In 1687 he wrote, in conjunction with Mr. Charles Montague, the Hind and Panther tranſverſed to the ſtory of the Country Mouſe and City Mouſe, by way of burleſquing a piece of Dryden's. In 1690 he was appointed Engliſh ſecretary in the congreſs at the Hague, and gave ſo much ſatisfaction that king William made him gentleman of his bedchamber. In 1696 he was ſecretary at the treaty of Ryſwick, and the following year went to Ireland, as principal ſecretary of ſtate. Soon after this he was appointed ſecretary to the embaſſy in France; and he had not been long there when going to ſee the curioſities at Verſailles, the officer in attendance ſhewed him the fine paintings by Le Brun of the victories of Louis XIV. aſking at the ſame time whether king William's actions were alſo to be ſeen in his palace: "No, ſir," anſwered Prior, "the monuments of my maſter's actions are to be ſeen every where but in his own houſe." In 1700 he took his place as one of the commiſſioners of the board of trade, and was alſo elected into parliament for Eaſt Grinſtead. He joined with Swift and others in writing a political paper, called the Examiner, in 1710, and next year was appointed miniſter plenipotentiary to the court of France, where he continued during the remainder of queen Anne's reign. In 1715 he was arreſted by order of the houſe of commons, and committed to priſon. He was even excepted out of the act of grace; but in 1717 he recovered his liberty without being brought to trial. He died at Wimple, the ſeat of the earl of Oxford, in 1721. Beſides his poems, which are eaſy, lively, and often elegant, he wrote the Hiſtory of his Own Times.—Biog. Brit.

PRISCIANUS, a grammarian of Cæſarea, who flouriſhed about A.D. 525. His works were printed by Aldus Manutius, at Venice in 1476, folio. He was ſo exact in his judgment and criticiſm, that to 'break Priſcian's head' is a proverb for falſe grammar. —Moreri.

PRISCILLIAN, an hereſiarch of the 4th century, was a native of Spain. To the errors of the Gnoſtics and Manichees, he added ſome of his own. Inſtantius and Salvianus, two prelates of his own way of thinking, ordained him a biſhop. He was beheaded with ſome of his followers about 384.—Dupin. Moſheim.

PRITZ (John George), profeſſor of divinity at Leipſic, was born there in 1662, and died in 1732. He publiſhed an Introduction to the New Teſtament, 8vo.; De Immortalitate hominis; an Edition of the works of St. Macarius; another of the New Teſtament, in Greek; and the Letters of Milton. —Moreri.

PROBUS (M. Aurelius Valerius), a Roman emperor, was born of obſcure parentage in Pannonia, and roſe from being a common ſoldier to the higheſt military rank. After the death of the emperor Tacitus, in 276, the eaſtern army proclaimed Probus as the reward of his valour and integrity. He was alſo acknowleged by the ſenate; after which he turned his arms againſt the Gauls and Goths, whom he completely ſubdued. He next defeated the Sarmatians, and made an advantageous peace with Perſia. The interval of peace he employed in rebuilding cities, and occupying his ſoldiers in uſeful works. The Perſians again taking up arms, Probus prepared to attack them, but was murdered by his troops at Sirmich, in 282.—Crevier. Univ. Hiſt.

PROCACCINI (Camillo), a painter of Bologna, was born in 1546, and died in 1626. His fineſt piece is a painting of the laſt ſupper, in the cathedral of Genoa, the figures in which are larger than life. His brother Julius, who died in 1626, had more genius, and a finer ſtyle of painting than Camillo. There were ſome other painters of this family.—De Piles.

PROCLUS, of Lycia, a platonic philoſopher, who died A.D. 485. He wrote ſeverely againſt the Chriſtian religion; alſo Commentaries upon Plato, and other works printed in 1497, at Venice, in folio.—Voſſius de Math.

PROCLUS (St.), patriarch of Conſtantinople, was the diſciple of Chryſoſtom. He died in 447. His works in Greek were publiſhed at Rome in 1630, 4to.—Baillet. Moreri.

PROCOPIUS, a relation of the emperor Julian, to whom he rendered eſſential ſervices, but after the death of Jovian he retired among the barbarians of the Cherſoneſus. When Valens marched into Syria, Proclus returned to Conſtantinople, and proclaimed himſelf emperor, A.D. 365. He forced Valens to abdicate the throne, but the following year he was defeated in Phrygia, and beheaded.—Univ. Hiſt.

PROCOPIUS, a Greek hiſtorian, who was profeſſor of rhetoric at Cæſarea, and employed by Beliſarius as his ſecretary. Juſtinian took him into his confidence, and honoured him with the title of Illuſtrious. He wrote a Hiſtory of the Wars of the Perſians, the Gauls, and the Goths; alſo a Secret Hiſtory;

r Anecdotes. The beſt edition of his orks is that of Paris in 1662, 2 vols. folio. —Voſſius de Hiſt. Græc.

PROCOPIUS, of Gaza, a Greek ſophiſt, ho lived about A.D. 560. He wrote Comentaries on the Books of the Kings, and hronicles; and on Iſaiah; printed in Greek d Latin, folio.—Moreri.

PRODICUS, a ſophiſt and rhetorician of e iſle of Cos, flouriſhed about 396 B.C. e taught at Athens, and had for diſciples ripides, Socrates, and Iſocrates. The henians put him to death on pretence at he corrupted the morals of their youth.

PRONAPIDES, a Greek poet, who, acrding to Diodorus Siculus, was the maſter Homer. He is alſo ſaid to have taught e Greeks to write from the left to the ht, they being accuſtomed before to write the oriental manner.—Voſſius.

PROPERTIUS (Sextus Aurelius), a Latin et, was born at Moravia, a city in Umia. He was in great eſteem with Mæce, Ovid, and Tibullus. He died about 19 C. aged 40. His elegies are uſually print with thoſe of Catullus.—Biog. Claſſica.

PROSPER (St.), was born in Aquitaine, the beginning of the fifth century. His thful life was licentious, but when his ntry was ravaged by the barbarians, he ered his conduct, and became a penitent. was a diſciple of St. Auguſtin, whoſe mery he defended. He alſo oppoſed the igians with conſiderable ſtrength, and about 463. The beſt edition of his ks is that of Paris in 1711, folio. He is to be confounded with an eccleſiaſtical ter of this name, who wrote on the preions and promiſes of God, and other ks. He alſo lived in the 5th century.—Dupin. Moreri.

PROTAGORAS, a Greek philoſopher of era, was at firſt a potter. He became diſciple of Democritus, to whoſe ſyſtem added atheiſm, and wrote a book in de- e of it, which was burnt at Athens, and author baniſhed. He died in Sicily t 400 B.C.—Stanley.

PROTOGENIS, an ancient painter, was at Caunus, a city of Rhodes, about 300 When Demetrius beſieged Rhodes, ave orders that the quarter in which Pro- nes reſided ſhould be ſpared. He had a us conteſt with Apelles, whom he van- ed, but there remained a cloſe friendbetween them.—Pliny. Quintilian.

PROVENZALE (Marcello), an Italian er, was born in 1575, and died in 1639, uperior merit conſiſted in moſaic, which executed in an admirable taſte.—De PRUDENTIUS (Aurelius Clementius), a was born at Saragoſſa in Spain in 348. was ſucceſſively an advocate, a magiſ- and a ſoldier, and diſtinguiſhed himſelf l theſe profeſſions. His Latin poems printed by Elzevir in 1667, 12mo. the notes of Heinſius.—Moreri.

PRUSIAS, king of Bithynia, who joined the Romans againſt Antiochus. Hannibal having taken refuge in his dominions, Pruſias was about to deliver him up to his enemies, but the unfortunate fugitive perceiving his treachery, ſlew himſelf. The cruelties of Pruſias gave ſuch offence to his ſubjects that they put him to death at the altar of Jupiter, to which he had fled as a ſanctuary, B.C. 149.—Univ. Hiſt.

PRUSSIA. The firſt people of this country were called Boruſſians, who were conquered by the knights of the Teutonic order, in 1228. In 1454 the Poles ſubdued part of Pruſſia, and completed the conqueſt of the whole in 1525. Albert, marquis of Brandenburgh, the laſt maſter of the Teutonic order, obtained from the crown of Poland the eaſtern part of this country, with the title of duke of Pruſſia. In 1683 it became independent, and in 1702 it was erected into a kingdom. [See FREDERICK WILLIAM.]

PRYNNE (William), an Engliſh lawyer, was born at Swanſwick, in Somerſetſhire, in 1600, and educated at Oriel college, Oxford, from whence he removed to Lincoln's-inn. In 1632 he was tried in the ſtar chamber for writing a libel againſt the queen, under the title of Hiſtriomaſtix, or a Diſcourſe on Stage Plays. For this he was ſentenced to ſtand in the pillory, and to pay a heavy fine. Notwithſtanding this he continued to publiſh abuſive libels againſt the king and biſhops, for which he loſt the remainder of his ears in the pillory, and was ſentenced to perpetual impriſonment. The houſe of commons releaſed him in 1640. He ſat in the long parliament, and was one of the bittereſt perſecutors of archbiſhop Laud. But though he had been active in promoting the rebellion, he was an enemy to Cromwell, who cauſed him to be impriſoned. At the reſtoration he was made keeper of the records in the Tower. Prynne died in 1667. He wrote a prodigious number of books, chiefly on politics and religion; alſo the Hiſtory of Archbiſhop Laud, folio; and the Lives of Kings John, Henry III. and Edward I.—Wood, A.O.

PRZIPCOVIUS (Samuel), a ſocinian writer, was driven from Poland with his brethren of that ſect in 1658. He then took refuge in Pruſſia, where he died in 1670, aged 80. His works were printed in 1 vol. folio, 1692.—Preface to his Works.

PSALMANAZAR (George), an impoſtor, who is ſuppoſed to have been a native of France. After obtaining a good education in a monaſtery, he went to Germany, where he pretended to be a Japaneſe converted to chriſtianity. Being reduced to diſtreſs he entered into a Scotch regiment in Flanders, the chaplain of which brought him to the communion of the church of England, and employed him in tranſlating the church catechiſm into Japaneſe. This he ſent to the biſhop of London, who was ſo pleaſed with it that he ſent for Pſalmanazar, who now paſſed for a native of Formoſa, and to ſupport the character lived upon raw fleſh. Here he formed a pretended Formoſan grammar, and a hiſtory of that iſland, which impoſed upon many learned perſons. At length the deceit was diſcovered, and Pſalmanazar was abandoned by his patrons. He next engaged with the bookſellers in compiling the Antient Univerſal Hiſtory, his ſhare of which ſhews conſiderable erudition. His latter years made ample amends for his former irregularities; and he died penitent in 1763.—Life by Himſelf.

Psammenitus, king of Egypt, ſucceeded his brother Amaſis 525 B.C. Cambyſes declared war againſt him, and having taken him priſoner, put him to death after reigning ſix months.—Univ. Hiſt.

Psammeticus, king of Egypt, was the ſon of Bocoris, who was ſlain by Sabacon, king of Ethiopia. After the retreat of Sabacon, the Egyptians recalled Pſammeticus from Syria, and entruſted him with the government in conjunction with eleven others. His colleagues drove him to the ſea coaſt; but with the aſſiſtance of the Ionians and Carians, he defeated his enemies, at Memphis, B.C. 670, on which he became maſter of Egypt. He greatly encouraged the Greeks, and enriched his country by commerce. He was alſo a patron of the arts and ſciences, and died in 616 B.C.—Univ. Hiſt.

Psellus (Michael), a Greek writer, who lived in the reign of Conſtantine Ducas, to whoſe ſon Michael he was tutor. He wrote, 1. De quatuor Mathematicis Scientiis, 1556, 8vo; 2. De Lapidum virtutibus, 8vo; 3. De Operatione Dæmonum, 8vo.; 4. De victus ratione, 8vo.; 5. Synopſis Legum, verſibus Græcis edita —Moreri.

Ptolemy Lagus, or Soter, king of Egypt, was the ſon of Arſinöe, concubine of Philip of Macedon. Ptolemy became a great favourite of Alexander the Great, on whoſe death he obtained Egypt, Lybia, and part of Arabia, to which, on the death of Perdiccas, he added Cœloſyria, Phœnicia, Judæa, and the iſle of Cyprus. He made Alexandria his capital, where he built a light-houſe, called the Pharos, as a guide to pilots for that harbour. He encouraged literature, and formed an academy with a muſeum at Alexandria. Ptolemy is ſaid to have written the Life of Alexander the Great, and other works, which are loſt. He died B.C. 285.—Univ. Hiſt.

Ptolemy Philadelphus, the ſon and ſucceſſor of the above. He obtained his ſurname in ridicule for having murdered his two brothers. Ptolemy formed an alliance with the Romans. He was a great encourager of commerce, for which purpoſe he built a city on the Red Sea. He alſo conſtructed conſiderable fleets both there and in the Mediterranean. He was a liberal patron of learned men, and is ſaid to have cauſed the Scriptures to be rendered into Greek in that verſion called the Septuagint. He died in 246 B.C. aged 64.

Ptolemy Euergetes, the ſon and ſucceſſor of the preceding. He declared war againſt Antiochus Theus, to avenge the death of his ſiſter Berenice, the wife of that monarch. Ptolemy made himſelf maſter of Syria and Cilicia, and was extending his conqueſts when the news of a revolt recalled him to Egypt. He ſoon quelled the inſurgents, and by the prudence of his reign acquired the name of Euergetes, or benefactor. He died B.C. 221; and was ſucceeded by Ptolemy Philopater, ſo called from his cruelty in poiſoning his father and mother, and ſeveral of his relations. He is ſaid to have expoſed a number of Jews on a plain to his elephants; but thoſe animals, inſtead of deſtroying the intended victims, fell upon the Egyptians; on which the tyrant out of fear conferred great favours on the Jewiſh nation. He died B.C. 204.

Ptolemy Epiphanes, ſucceeded his father Philopater, and at the age of fourteen aſſumed the reins of government. He ſacrificed his tutor Ariſtomenes, who had governed with the greateſt fidelity in his minority. Ptolemy was poiſoned B.C. 180. Ptolemy Philometor ſucceeded him; but having declared war againſt Antiochus Epiphanes, he was taken priſoner by him. The Egyptians then placed Phyſcon his brother on the throne, whom Antiochus depoſed, and reſtored Philometor, who died of a wound received in battle againſt Alexander Balas, king of Syria, B.C. 146.—Ibid.

Ptolemy Physcon, ſo called from the prominence of his belly, ſucceeded his brother Philometor. On account of the perſecutions which they endured, the people of Alexandria emigrated into Aſia; and his ſubjects having revolted againſt him, he murdered his ſon Memphitis from ſuſpicion. He died B.C. 116.—Ibid.

Ptolemy Lathyrus, ſo called from an excreſcence on his noſe, reſembling a pea. He ſucceeded his father Phyſcon, but was ſoon after driven to Cyprus by his mother Cleopatra, who placed the crown on her ſon Ptolemy Alexander. Lathyrus having muſtered an army invaded Judæa, and committed great cruelties on the Jews; after which he marched to Egypt, but was unſucceſsful. On the death of Alexander he aſcended the throne. He died 81 B.C.

Ptolemy Auletes, which name he obtained from his ſkill on the flute, was the illegitimate ſon of the preceding, and aſcended the throne after the death of Alexander III. He ceded Cyprus to the Romans with a large tribute, which ſo diſpleaſed his ſubjects, that they revolted, and placed his daughter Berenice on the throne. By the help of his allies he recovered his dominions, and put his daughter to death. He died B.C. 51.—Ibid.

Ptolemy Dionysius, or Bacchus, king of Egypt, the ſon of the preceding, aſcended

e throne with his ſiſter Cleopatra, whom : married, according to the will of his fa-er. Pompey the Great, who had been his ardian, fled into Egypt after his defeat at arſalia, and was murdered by him. Pto-my, who was no more faithful to Cæſar an he had been to his rival, was drowned the Nile after being defeated by the Roans, B.C. 46.—Ibid.

PTOLEMY (Claudius), a mathematician Peluſium, lived about the year 138. He celebrated for his ſyſtem of the World, in hich he placed the earth as the centre.
is Geography is a valuable work, and was inted at Amſterdam in 1618, folio; his reatiſe on Aſtrology, in 1535, and his armonica, at Oxford in 1683.—Voſſius de Mathem.

PUBLIUS SYRUS, a comic poet of Syria, ho flouriſhed at Rome 44 B.C. He was ve to a patrician named Domitius, who gave m his liberty. A collection of Moral Sen-nces by him was printed at Leyden in 08, 8vo.—Moreri.

PUCCI (Francis), was born of a noble faily at Florence. He quitted the Roman urch and embraced the Proteſtant religion,
: which he went to Poland, but returned his former religion at Prague in 1595.
fterwards he went over again to the pro-ſtant communion, and being ſeized at ltzburg, was ſent to Rome, and burnt out 1600. He held that Chriſt had made isfaction for the ſins of all men; which inion he maintained in a book dedicated to ement VIII. 1592, 8vo.—Bayle.

PUFFENDORF (Samuel de), an eminent vilian, was born at Fleh, in Upper Saxy, in 1631. He ſtudied at Leiptic, where : applied to philoſophy, law, and the maematics. In 1658 he was appointed tutor the ſon of Coyer, ambaſſador of the king Sweden to the court of Denmark; but war eaking out between the two countries, the mily of the ambaſſador was thrown into iſon, and Puffendorf with the reſt. There
: compoſed his Treatiſe on Univerſal Juriſudence, which was printed at the Hague 1660. This work obtained him the place profeſſor of natural law at Heidelberg, om whence in 1670 he removed, by the vitation of the king of Sweden, to Lunn, and was appointed hiſtoriographer to that onarch, who created him a baron. In 1688
: went to Berlin, where he became counſelr of ſtate, and died in 1694. His other orks are, 1. Hiſtory of Sweden from 1628 1654: 2. Hiſtory of Charles Guſtavus, 2
ols. folio; 3. Hiſtory of Frederic William e Great, elector of Brandenburg, 2 vols.
lio; 4. an Hiſtorical and Political Deription of the Papal State; 5. Introduction the Hiſtory of the Principal States of Eu-pe, 8vo.; 6. Treatiſe on the Law of Na-re and Nations, 2 vols. 4to.; 7. Opuſcula avenilia, &c.—Niceron.

PUGET (Peter), a painter, ſculptor, and chitect, was born in 1623, at Marſeilles.
The groupe of Milo of Crotona, and Perſeus and Andromeda, at the entrance of the park of Verſailles, are proofs of his talents, and ſeveral of his paintings are in the churches of Marſeilles, Aix, and Toulon. He died in 1694.—D'Argenville.

PULCHERIA (St.), was the daughter of the emperor Arcadius, and partook with her brother, Theodoſius the younger, the imperial throne: on his death in 550 ſhe eſpouſed Marcianus, and aſſociated him in the government. She convened the council of Chalcedon in 451, and died in 454. Pulcheria patronized learned and religious men.—Moreri.

PULCI (Louis), an Italian poet, was born at Florence in 1432, of a noble family. He wrote an epic poem, entitled, Morgante Maggiore, in which are blended ſacred and obſcene matters in a very diſguſting manner. He alſo wrote a poem on a tournament held at Florence in 1468; entitled, "Gioſtra di Lorenzo de Medici." He died about 1487. His brothers Luke and Bernard alſo diſtinguiſhed themſelves by their poetical talents. —Roſcoe's Life of Lorenzo de Medici.

PULIGO, or PUGLIO (Domenico), a painter, was born at Florence in 1475, and died in 1527. He excelled in painting portraits.—Pilkington.

PULMANNUS (Theodore), or Poelman, was born at Cranenburg, in the duchy of Cleves, about 1510. He ſuperintended the preſs of Plantin, at Antwerp, and gave editions of Virgil, Lucan, Juvenal, Horace, Auſonius, and other Latin writers. He died at Salamanca about 1580.—Moreri.

PULTENEY (William), earl of Bath, was born in 1682. He became a member of the houſe of commons early in life, and oppoſed the miniſtry in the reign of queen Anne. In 1714 he was appointed ſecretary at war; but a difference ariſing between him and ſir Robert Walpole, he became a ſevere and conſtant antagoniſt of that miniſter, for which his name was eraſed from the liſt of privy-counſellors, and put out of the commiſſion of the peace. This only made him more violent in his oppoſition, and at length he ſucceeded in depriving ſir Robert of his place; after which he was created earl of Bath, and admitted again of the privy council. He died without iſſue in 1764.—Engliſh Peerage.

PULTENEY (Richard), a phyſician and botaniſt, was born at Loughborough, in Leiceſterſhire, in 1730. He ſerved his apprenticeſhip to an apothecary, after which he commenced practice at Leiceſter, where he ſtudied botany with ardour, and correſponded with the Gentleman's Magazine, in the volumes of which are numerous communications on botanical ſubjects by him, and ſome on antiquities. Several of his papers alſo appeared in the Philoſophical Tranſactions. In 1764 he took his doctor's degree at Edinburgh, his inaugural oration for which was de cinchona officali. Soon after this he was appointed phyſician to his relation the earl of Bath, on whoſe death he ſettled at Blandford in Dorſetſhire, where he acquired a conſiderable practice. In 1781 he publiſhed his General View of the Life and Writings of Linnæus; and in 1790, Hiſtorical and Biographical Sketches of the Progreſs of Botany in England, 2 vols. 8vo.; to which we have been indebted for much valuable information. He alſo made conſiderable communications to Nichols's Hiſtory of Leiceſterſhire, and Gough's edition of Hutchins's Dorſetſhire. Dr. Pulteney died in 1801. He was a fellow of the royal ſociety and other learned bodies at home and abroad.—Life by Dr. Maton, 4to. 1805.

Puntormo (Giacomo), an Italian painter, was born in 1493. He was the diſciple of Leonardo da Vinci, and completed his ſtudies under Andrea del Sarto. His ſubjects are chiefly taken from the ſacred hiſtory. He died in 1558.—De Piles.

Purbach (George), ſo called from a village of that name in Germany, where he was born in 1423. He ſtudied philoſophy and divinity at Vienna, but devoted himſelf principally to aſtronomical purſuits, and died at Vienna in 1462. He tranſlated Ptolemy's Almageſt, invented ſome aſtronomical inſtruments, conſtructed tables, and made numerous obſervations.—Melch. Adam. in Vit. Germ. Phil.

Purcell (Henry), an eminet muſical compoſer, was born in 1658. He was brought up in the king's chapel, and at the age of eighteen was made organiſt of Weſtminſter abbey, and in 1682 one of the organiſts of the chapel royal. His church muſic is in the grandeſt ſtyle; and his operas are very fine. Dryden, whoſe ſongs he ſet, has paid a fine compliment to his talents. He died in 1695, and was buried in Weſtminſter abbey. His principal work is entitled, Orpheus Britannicus. Daniel Purcell, his brother, was organiſt of Magdalen college, Oxford, and of St. Andrew, Hoborn. He was a great puniſter.—Hawkins. Burney.

Purchas (Samuel), an Engliſh divine, was born at Thaxted in Eſſex, in 1577, and educated at Cambridge. He obtained the vicarage of Eaſtwood in his native county; but having engaged in compiling a collection of voyages, he left his cure to his brother, and ſettled in London, where he was preſented to the rectory of St. Martin, Ludgate. He was alſo chaplain to archbiſhop Abbot, and died in 1628. His work is entitled, Purchas his Pilgrimage, or Relations of the World, &c. 5 vols. folio. It is a collection of great merit and labour.—Biog. Brit.

Purver (Anthony), a remarkable inſtance of patient induſtry in literature, was born in Hampſhire in 1702 of parents who were quakers. He was bred a ſhoemaker, and had only an ordinary education, but by uncommon application he is ſaid to have acquired a competent knowlege of the learned languages. Being of a ſerious turn he ſat about reading the Scriptures in the originals, after which he undertook and completed a new tranſlation of them; which was printed at the charge of Dr. John Fothergill, in 2 vols. folio. Purver became preacher among the quakers, and died at Andover in 1775.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Puteanus (Erycius), or Du Puy, was born at Venloo, in Guelderland, in 1574. He ſtudied at Louvain, after which he became profeſſor of eloquence at Milan in 1601. He ſucceeded Lipſius in the profeſſorſhip at Louvain, and was appointed hiſtoriographer to the king of Spain. He died in 1646. He wrote a treatiſe entitled, Statira Belli et Pacis, and other political works.—Niceron.

Putschius (Elias), a critic, was born at Antwerp about 1580. He publiſhed Salluſt with fragments and notes; alſo a collection of the antient grammarians. He died at Stade in 1606.—Moreri.

Puy (Peter du), was born at Paris in 1583. He was the author of ſeveral hiſtorical and political works. He died in 1652. —Ibid.

Puysegur (James de Chaſtenet, lord of), a general, was born of a noble family in Armagnac, in 1600. He was forty-three years in active ſervice, during which he was preſent at one hundred and twenty ſieges, and above thirty battles, without receiving a ſingle wound. He died in 1682. His Memoirs from 1617 to 1658, were printed in 2 vols. 12mo. 1690. His ſon James de Chaſtenet, marquis of Puyſegur, became marſhal of France, and died in 1743, aged 88. He wrote a work on the Art Military, in folio, and 2 vols. 4to. 1748.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

Pyle (Thomas), a learned divine, was born in Norfolk in 1674, and educated at Cambridge, where he took the degree of M.A. after which he became miniſter of King's Lynn. He diſplayed great zeal in the defence of Hoadley in the Bangorian controverſy, for which, that prelate gave him a prebend in the cathedral of Saliſbury. Mr. Pyle wrote an eſteemed Paraphraſe on the Acts and Epiſtles; alſo two volumes of Sermons. He died in 1715.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Pym (John), a leading man againſt Charles the firſt, was member of parliament for Taviſtock, and on account of his great influence with the popular party was called "King Pym." He was a furious demagogue; but it is queſtioned whether he intended the revolution which he had excited ſhould go to the extent it afterwards did. He died of an impoſthume in his bowels, in 1643.—Clarendon.

Pynaker (Adam), a landſcape painter, ſo called from a village near Delft, in Holland, where he was born in 1621. His pictures are highly eſteemed. He died in 1673.

Pyndar (Paul), an eminent merchant, was born at Wellingborough, in Northamptonſhire, in 1566. He received a liberal ucation, and was intended for the universi-

; but, preferring a mercantile occupation, s apprenticed to an Italian merchant in ndon. His maſter ſent him as factor to nice, and he reſided in various parts of ly many years. In 1611 he was apinted ambaſſador to the grand ſignior at nſtantinople, where he rendered great ſer-e to the Turkey company. After his ren in 1620, he was offered the lieutenancy the Tower, which he refuſed, but acted the place of one of the farmers of the ſtoms. He advanced ſuch large ſums to g Charles in the rebellion as to reduce nſelf to poverty. He inſtituted large m works, and acquired a fortune of above
0,000l. He died in 1650.—Vox Verita-
; or, Abſtract of the Caſe of G. Carew, eſq.
. 1683, 4*to.*

PYRRHO, a Greek philoſopher, was a nae of Elis, and founder of the ſect denomi-ed the Sceptics, becauſe they doubted the th of every thing. After ſtudying under axarchus he went into India, where he ended the Gymnoſophiſts. He died about 0 B.C.—Diog. Laert. Bayle.

PYRRHUS, king of Epirus, was an infant the breaſt when his father was ſlain; but ed from the fury of the inſurgents by e faithful ſervants, and conveyed to Glaus, king of Illyricum, who brought him up reſtored him to his throne. He was liged to take Neoptolemus as a partner in government, but having defeated that rper, he reigned alone. He ſeized a at part of Macedonia, and aſſiſted the Tattines againſt the Romans, but was defeated obliged to ſue for peace. He afterds went to Sicily, and contributed to ex-the Carthaginians; but in ſailing to Tatum his fleet was defeated, and only a of his ſhips eſcaped. He afterwards ſiege to Sparta, but without ſucceſs. was ſlain in an attempt on Argos, by a which a woman threw on his head from top of her houſe, B.C. 272.

PYTHAGORAS, a celebrated philoſopher, was born at Samos, where his father was a ſculptor, about 600 B.C. He ſtudied in Egypt many years, and after travelling over a great part of Aſia, he returned to his native place; but finding that Polycrates had uſurped the government, he went to Crotona in Italy, where he taught philoſophy with uncommon reputation. Students came to him from all parts, on whom he impoſed a probationary ſilence for five years; after which they were required to place their property in the common ſtock. He greatly reformed the manners of the people of Crotona and its neighbourhood, and ſeveral of his diſciples became excellent legiſlators, particularly Zeleucus. Pythagoras is ſaid to have viſited Phalaris, the tyrant, who was ſo provoked with his diſcourſes as to order him to be put to death, but the aſſaſſination of the tyrant ſaved his life. He was the firſt who aſſumed the title of philoſopher. He diſcovered the famous demonſtration in geometry of the ſquare of the hypothenuſe, for which he ſacrificed a hecatomb to the gods. He held that the ſun is in the centre of the univerſe, and that the earth revolves round it with the other planets. His other principles were leſs rational, for he maintained the doctrine of a tranſmigration of ſouls, and the unlawfulneſs of eating animal food. He died about 490 B.C. The Golden Verſes which go by his name are queſtionable.—Iamblichus in Vit.

PYTHEAS, a Greek philoſopher, who was the cotemporary of Ariſtotle, and rendered himſelf famous by his ſkill in mathematics He travelled into various countries, and made numerous diſcoveries, particularly with reſpect to the length of the days in different climates, and the obliquity of the ecliptic.—Polybius. Strabo.

PYTHEAS, a rhetorician of Athens, who oppoſed Demoſthenes, and ſarcaſtically ſaid that his orations ſmelt of the lamp.—Suidas.

Q.

UADRATUS, a diſciple of the apoſtles, was a native of Athens, and according ſome, the angel or biſhop of Philadelphia, ntioned in the Revelations. He is alſo to have been biſhop of Athens He pre-ted an Apology for the Chriſtians to the peror Adrian, of which only a frag-nt remains.—Dupin. Cave.

QUADRIO (Francis Xavier), a learned it, was born in the Valteline in 1695. became a ſecular prieſt, and died at Milan 1756. His works are; 1. On the Italian try; 2. Hiſtory of Italian Poetry, 7 s; 3. Hiſtorical Diſſertations upon the lteline, 3 vols.—Tiraboſchi.

QUAINI (Louis), a painter, was born at ogna, in 1613, and died in 1717. He was the diſciple of Cignani, whom he aſſiſted in ſome of his greateſt works.—D'Argenville.

QUARLES (Francis), an Engliſh poet, was born near Rumford, in Eſſex, in 1592, and educated at Chriſt's college, Cambridge, from whence he removed to Lincoln's Inn. He was cup-bearer to Elizabeth, daughter of James I. and queen of Bohemia, after which he became ſecretary to archbiſhop Uſher, and chronologer to the city of London. He was a zealous royaliſt, for which his eſtates were ſequeſtrated and his goods plundered. The loſs of his manuſcripts is ſaid to have preyed ſo much upon his ſpirits as to occaſion his death in 1644. He wrote ſeveral ingenious pieces, the moſt known of which are, his Emblems, Meditations, and Hieroglyphics.

Pope is ſuppoſed to have been conſiderably indebted to his works.—Biog. Brit.

QUATTROMANI (Sertorio), a learned Italian, was born at Coſenza in the kingdom of Naples about 1541. By the friendſhip of Paul Manutius he was admitted into the library of the Vatican, where he ſtudied the Greek writers with great avidity. He was afterwards taken into the ſervice of the duke of Nocera, who held him in great eſteem. After the death of his patron he accepted an invitation from the prince de Stigliano, but he did not long remain in his ſervice, owing to the envy of ſome of the courtiers. He died about 1606. He tranſlated the Æneid into Italian verſe; and his works were printed together at Naples in 1714, 8vo.—Tiraboſchi.

QUELLIN (Eraſmus), a painter, was born at Antwerp in 1607, and died in 1678. He was the diſciple of Rubens, whoſe ſtyle he imitated with great ſucceſs. His ſon John Eraſmus was alſo a good artiſt, and painted ſome fine pieces for the churches of Antwerp, where he died in 1715.—Pilkington.

QUENSTEDT (John Andrew), a lutheran divine, was born at Quedlinburgh in 1607, and died in 1688. He wrote an Account of Learned Men from Adam to 1600, 4to.; 2. De Sepultura Veterum, 8vo.; 3. A Syſtem of Divinity, 4 vols. folio.—Moreri.

QUERENGHI (Anthony), a poet, was born at Padua in 1546. He became ſecretary of the ſacred college, and died at Rome in 1633. His Latin poems were printed at Rome in 1629, and the Italian in 1616, 8vo.—Tiraboſchi.

QUÉRLON (Anne-Gabriel Meuſnier de), a French writer, was born at Nantes in 1702. He publiſhed a periodical paper in Brittany above twenty years, and he was alſo the editor of the "Journal Encyclopedique," the Gazette of France, &c. He wrote a romance, entitled, The Innocent Impoſtors; and publiſhed editions of Anacreon and Lucretius, with other works. He died in 1780.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

QUERNO (Camillus), an Italian poet, who died in a hoſpital at Naples in 1528. He went to Rome with a ridiculous poem, called Alexiada, which procured him the place of buffoon to pope Leo X.—Tiraboſchi.

QUESNAY (Francis), phyſician to the king of France, member of the academy of ſciences of Paris, and of the royal ſociety of London, was born at Ecquevilli in 1694, and died in 1774. He was the principal of the ſociety called Economiſts; and in his youth wrote a pleaſing poem, called the Farm Houſe. His other works are, on the Effects of Bleeding, 12mo; Phyſical Eſſay on the Animal Economy, 3 vols. 12mo.; Treatiſe on Fevers, 2 vols.; On Gangrene, 12mo.; On Suppuration, &c.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

QUESNE (Abraham, marquis du), was born in Normandy in 1610. He was brought up to the naval ſervice under his father. In 1637 he was at the attack of St. Marguerite, and the year following defeated the Spaniſh fleet before Cattari. In 1644 he entered into the Swediſh ſervice, and diſtinguiſhed himſelf greatly againſt the Danes. In 1647 he returned to France, and was appointed commander of a fleet in the Mediterranean. In 1676 he diſplayed great bravery againſt the Dutch fleet under de Ruyter. He died at Paris in 1688.—Moreri.

QUESNEL (Paſquier), was born at Paris in 1634. He ſtudied theology in the Sorbonne with great reputation, after which he entered of the congregation of the oratory, and was diſtinguiſhed by his learning and piety. In 1675 he publiſhed an edition of the works of St. Leo; but being a zealous janſeniſt he was obliged ta retire to Bruſſels, where he publiſhed his Reflections on the New Teſtament, which work was attacked by the Jeſuits, and occaſioned ſo much controverſy that pope Clement XI. iſſued his famous bull, called Unigenitus, againſt Queſnel's book. By means of the Jeſuits he was thrown into priſon, and put in irons, but he effected his eſcape, with the aſſiſtance of a Spaniſh gentleman, and went to Amſterdam, where he died in 1719. He wrote a number of pieces of practical and controverſial divinity. One Peter Queſnel who died at the Hague in 1774 wrote a Hiſtory of the Jeſuits.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

QUESNOY (Francis du), a ſculptor, was born at Bruſſels, and died at Leghorn in 1644, aged 52. His performances are chiefly ſmall bas-reliefs in bronze, marble, or ivory, repreſenting children, and bacchanals, executed with great elegance. His brother Jerom was alſo a good ſculptor. He died at Ghent in 1654.—D'Argenville.

QUEVEDO DE VILLEGAS (Francis), a Spaniſh author, was born at Villeneuve de l'Infantado in 1570, of a noble family. He cultivated poetry, and his performances were much eſteemed; but ſome of them gave ſuch offence to count Olivares, that he cauſed the author to be ſent to priſon, where he remained till that miniſter was diſgraced. He died at his native place in 1645. His works were publiſhed at Madrid in 1650, under the title of Parnaſſo Eſpagnolo. His Viſions of Hell have been tranſlated into Engliſh, but very indifferently from a French verſion.—Moreri.

QUIEN (Michael le), a Dominican, was born at Boulogne, in 1661. He publiſhed an edition of John Damaſcenus, in 2 vols. folio; and was the author of, 1. Panoplia contra Schiſma Græcorum, 4to.; 2. Nullity of the Engliſh Ordinations, againſt Courayer; 3. Oriens Chriſtianus, in quatuor Patriarchatus digeſtis; in quo exhibentur Eccleſiæ, Patriarchæ cæterique Præſules orientis, 3 vols. fol.; 4 Defence of the Hebrew Text, againſt Perron.—Ibid.

QUIEN DE LA NEUFVILLE (James le), was born at Paris in 1647. He ſerved firſt in the army, and afterwards became an advocate, but without ſucceſs, on which he had recourſe to literature for a ſupport. He publiſhed the Hiſtory of Portugal, in 4to. which obtained him a place in the academy of inſcrip-

ns. His Treatiſe on the Uſe of Poſts ong the Antients and Moderns, procured n the direction of the poſts of French nders, and a penſion. He died at Liſbon 1728.—Moreri.

QUILLET (Claude), a phyſician and poet, s born at Chinon in Touraine about 1602. ving expoſed the impoſtor of the devils of adun [See GRANDIER], he retired to ly to avoid the reſentment of Richelieu. Rome he wrote his Callipædia, a Latin m, on the art of having beautiful children. this piece he was very ſatirical on cardinal azarine, who, inſtead of puniſhing him, e him an abbey. In 1656 Quillet pub- ed a new edition of his poem, dedicated he cardinal, ſubſtituting an eulogy inſtead ſatire. He died in 1661. He alſo wrote atin poem called the Henriade. His Cal- ædia has been tranſlated into Engliſh by we.—Bayle. Niceron.

QUIN (James), was born in London in 93, and died at Bath in 1766. He was ended for the law, but having a ſtrong in- nation for the ſtage, he joined a company players, and after performing at Dublin l other places with applauſe, was engaged Rich at Covent Garden, where he played ſtaff to crowded houſes. He became the t actor of his time till Mr. Garrick ap- ared, and drew the town after him to oodman's Fields, on which occaſion Quin temptuouſly ſaid, that the rage was only e a new ſect, which would ſoon ſink to thing, and the people return to church ain. But in this prediction he was miſ- ken. In 1746 theſe two rival actors per- med together in the Fair Penitent, and ex- bited an aſtoniſhing diſplay of powers. in was employed by Frederic prince of ales to inſtruct the royal children in elo- tion; and when Quin was informed of the aceful manner in which his preſent majeſty livered his firſt ſpeech from the throne, he phatically ſaid, "Aye, it was I who taught e boy to ſpeak." About this time he obtain- a penſion, having retired from the ſtage ſome ars before. He had much roughneſs in manner, and was a great epicure; yet ere was much benevolence in his diſpoſi- on, a remarkable inſtance of which appear- in his conduct to Thomſon, the author of e Seaſons, whom he releaſed from a onging houſe, by paying the debt and coſts, thout having had any previous acquaint- ce with him.—Europ. Mag.

QUINAULT (Philip), a French dramatic et, was born at Paris in 1636. His firſt ece was a comedy called the Rival Muſes, rformed with applauſe in 1653. He alſo oduced ſeveral tragedies, comedies, and eras, of conſiderable merit. He married e widow of a merchant, and was appointed ditor in the chamber of accounts. He as alſo admitted a member of the French ademy. He died in 1688. The works of uinault were printed at Paris with his fe in 1778, 5 vols. 12mo.—Moreri QUINCY (John), an Engliſh phyſician, who practiſed with reputation in London, and publiſhed a Dictionary of Phyſic, 8vo.; a Univerſal Diſpenſatory, 8vo.; Chemical Pharmacopæia, 4to.; a tranſlation of Sanctorius's Aphoriſms; and other works of merit. He died in 1723.

QUINTILIAN (Marcus Fabius), a celebrated orator and critic, is ſaid by ſome to have been a native of Spain, and by others to have been born at Rome. At the commencement of the reign of Galba he opened a ſchool of rhetoric in that city, where he taught with great reputation, and was liberally rewarded by the government. He alſo pleaded in the forum, and was entruſted by Domitian with the education of his two nephews. He is ſuppoſed to have died about A.D. 60. His Inſtitutiones Oratoricæ may be juſtly pronounced the fineſt ſyſtem of rhetoric ever written. This invaluable work was diſcovered by Poggio in 1415, in the abbey of St. Gal. The beſt edition is that of Burman in 1724, Leyden, 4 vols. 4to.—Bayle.

QUINTINIE (John de la), an eminent gardener, was born at Poitiers in 1626. His education was liberal, and he became an advocate; but he renounced the law, and applied wholly to agricultural purſuits. Louis XIV. appointed him director-general of his fruit and kitchen gardens. He died at Paris about 1700. Quintinie wrote an eſteemed book on Gardening, in 2 vols. 4to.—Moreri.

QUIRINI (Angelo Maria), a cardinal, was born at Venice in 1684. At the age of fourteen he entered among the Benedictines. In 1710 he travelled into Germany, from whence he paſſed to Holland, England, and France, in which countries he contracted an intimacy with the moſt learned men of the age, particularly Newton, Bentley, Fenelon, and Montfaucon. Benedict XIII. made him archbiſhop and cardinal, which dignities he filled with great reputation. He died in 1755. Cardinal Quirini gathered a magnificent library, which he gave to the Vatican. His principal works are, 1. Primordia Corcyræ ex antiquiſſimis monumentis illuſtrata, 4to.; 2. Veterum Brixiæ Epiſcoporum, &c; this work contains the lives of the biſhops of Breſcia who have been canonized; 3. Specimen variæ Litteraturæ, quæ in urbe Brixia ejuſque ditione paulo poſt, Typographiæ incunabula florebat, 4to.; 4. Enchiridion Græcorum; 5. Geſta et Epiſtolæ Franciſci Barbari; 6. De Moſaicæ Hiſtoriæ Præſtantia.—Tiraboſchi.

QUIROS (Fernand de), a Spaniſh navigator, who was employed by Philip III. in making diſcoveries in the Pacific Ocean. In 1605 he diſcovered the Society Iſles, and other places.—Cook's Voyages.

QUISTORP (John), a Lutheran divine, was born at Roſtock in 1584. He attended Grotius in his laſt illneſs, and died at Roſtock in 1646. His works are, 1. Articuli formulæ Concordiæ illuſtrati; 2. Manuductio ad Studium Theologicum; 3. Commentaries on the Epiſtles of St. Paul.—Moreri.

R.

RABAN-MAUR (Magnentius), a learned prelate, was born at Fulda in 788, of a noble family. After ſtudying under Alcuinus he entered into orders, and was elected abbot of Fulda. In 847 he became archbiſhop of Mentz, and diſtinguiſhed himſelf by writing againſt Goteſchalcus the monk, whom he delivered up to Hincmar, archbiſhop of Rheims. Raban died in 856. His works have been publiſhed in 6 vols. folio.—Moreri.

RABAUD-SAINT-ETIENNE (John Paul), a proteſtant miniſter, was a native of Niſmes. He became a member of the national convention of France. In the tyranny of Robeſpierre he was proſcribed, and fled, but was taken and ſent to Paris, where he was guillotined in 1793. He wrote a Letter on the Life and Writings of Count de Gibelin; Letters on the Primitive Hiſtory of Greece; Conſiderations on the Intereſts of the Third Eſtate, &c.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

RABELAIS (Francis), was the ſon of an apothecary at Chinon in Touraine. He entered into the order of Cordeliers; but on account of an intrigue he was inpriſoned in a monaſtery, from whence he made his eſcape, and obtained permiſſion of pope Clement VII. to quit his order. He then ſtudied medicine at Montpellier, where he took his doctor's degree, and became profeſſor in 1531. The chancellor Duprat having aboliſhed the privileges of that univerſity, Rabelais was deputed to wait on him, and he ſucceeded in obtaining a reverſal of that decree. The cardinal du Bellay appointed him his phyſician, and took him in his ſuite to Rome. On his return to France he was rewarded with an abbey and the benefice of Meudon. About this time he publiſhed his Pentagruel, a comic ſatire, which is licentious and obſcene. He died in 1553, aged 70. Beſides the above piece he wrote ſome medical works, and numerous letters, printed together in 5 vols. 8vo. 1715.—Moreri.

RABIRIUS, a Latin poet in the reign of Auguſtus, whom he complimented in a poem on his victory over Anthony at Actium. He is not to be confounded with an architect of the ſame name who built a famous palace for Domitian at Rome, the ruins of which remain.—Ibid.

RACAN (Honorat de Bueil, marquis de), a poet, was born at Touraine in 1589. He was one of the firſt members of the French academy. He died in 1670. His works were printed in 1660, 8vo. and 1720, 2 vols. 12mo.—Ibid.

RACCHETTI (Bernard), an Italian painter, was born in 1639, and died in 1702. He painted perſpective and architecture in an excellent taſte.—Pilkington.

RACINE (John), a French poet, was born at Ferre-Milon, in 1639, of a noble family. He was educated in the ſociety of Port Royal, where he devoted his principal attention to the Greek tragic poets. His firſt publication was an Ode on the Marriage of the King, which procured him a penſion. In 1664 he produced his tragedy of Thebaide, which was followed in 1666 by Alexander. Till this time he wore the eccleſiaſtical habit, which he now renounced. Nicole, in a letter written againſt Deſmarets, having charged the dramatic poets as poiſoners of the ſoul, Racine replied in a ſevere manner. In 1688 appeared his Andromache, which was attacked by ſeveral critics, particularly St. Evremond. His next piece was the tragedy of Britannicus, which far ſurpaſſed his former productions. In 1677 appeared his tragedy of Phædra, which was oppoſed by one on the ſame ſubject written by Pradon, and occaſioned violent heats between the partiſans of the reſpective poets. The ſame year Racine was aſſociated with Boileau in writing the Hiſtory of Louis XIV. which work was never publiſhed. About this time he wrote his ſacred drama of Eſther, at the deſire of madame de Maintenon, and it was acted by the young ladies of her inſtitution of St. Cyr. His beſt piece of this kind, was his Athalia. He died in 1699, of chagrin, occaſioned by the king's diſpleaſure at a memorial on the miſeries of the people, which he had written at the requeſt of madame de Maintenon. Beſides his dramatic works he wrote, Canticles or Hymns for the uſe of St. Cyr; the Hiſtory of Port Royal; Letters and Epigrams. —Life by his Son, 2 vols. 1747.

RACINE (Louis), ſon of the above, was born at Paris in 1692, and died in 1763. He embraced the eccleſiaſtical ſtate, but cardinal Fleury gave him a civil appointment. He wrote ſeveral good poems; Reflections on Poetry; a proſe tranſlation of Milton's Paradiſe Loſt; Life of John Racine; and other works.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

RACK (Edmund), an ingenious writer, was born at Ellingham, in Norfolk, of poor but honeſt parents. At the age of eight years he loſt his father, and till he was eleven he was ſupported by the labour of an induſtrious mother, who kept him at the ſpinning wheel. At length he became errand boy to a woollen draper, who put him to a day ſchool, where he learned writing and arithmetic. His maſter at the end of two years took him as an apprentice, and he afterwards ſerved as a journeyman. In 1758 he removed to Bradford, in Eſſex, where he carried on buſineſs ſome years, married, and gained a competency. He then retired to Bath, where he formed the ſociety for the encouragement of agriculture, to which he became ſecretary. Mr. Rack publiſhed a poem, entitled The Ruins of an antient Cathedral, 1768; in 1775, a pocket volume of his Poems; in 1777, Mentor's Letters, ch were well received; and in 1781 he prod an octavo volume of Poems and Eſſays.

had alſo a concern in Collinſon's Hiſtory omerſetſhire. Mr. Rack was of the ſo-y called Quakers. He died in 1787, 52.—Europ. Mag.

ACLE (Leonard), a French architect, a native of Dijon, and died at Pont-de-ix in 1792. In 1786 he obtained a prize the academy of Toulouſe for a memoir he conſtruction of an iron bridge of a ſin-arch of 400 feet ſpan. He alſo wrote rs on the properties of the cycloid, and egulating the courſe of the Rhone. He the intimate friend of Voltaire, and his houſe at Ferney.—Nouv. Dict.

ADCLIFFE (Alexander), an Engliſh
, who died about 1700. He wrote a eſque of Ovid's Epiſtles, a poem called ews from Hell," and other works of the nature.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

ADCLIFFE (John), an eminent phyſi, was born at Wakefield in Yorkſhire in
0. At the age of fifteen he was entered University college, Oxford, but not ining a fellowſhip there, he removed to oln college, where he ſucceeded. Havaken his bachelor's degree in phyſic, he menced practice, and obtained a conſider-reputation. In 1682 he took his doc-degree, and not long after removed to don, where he roſe to the height of his pro-on. Aſtoniſhing things are related of his
. He attended king William, who hav-hewn him his ſwelled ancles, and aſked he thought of them, "Why, truly," Radcliffe, "I would not have your ma's two legs for your three kingdoms," h uncourtly anſwer gave great offence.
died in 1714, having the year before choſen member of parliament for Buck-am. His remains were interred in St.
y's church, Oxford, to which univerſity was a munificent benefactor, particularly ounding the famous library which is cal-y his name.—Biog. Brit.

ADEMAKER (Gerard), a painter, was at Amſterdam in 1673, and died in 1711.
painted architecture and perſpective. A ion of his, Abraham Rademaker, who at Haerlem in 1735, aged 60, was a landſcape painter.—Houbraken.

AGOTZKI (Francis Leopold), prince of ſylvania, was ſent to priſon in 1701, charge of exciting the Hungarians to lt; but after a confinement of ſome ths he effected his eſcape into Hungary, inhabitants of which declared him pror of their kingdom. He was for ſome very ſucceſsful, but the Hungarians ing peace with the emperor in 1713, otzki went to France, and from thence Conſtantinople, where he was held in eſteem. He died in Turkey in 1735.
re paſſes under his name a work entitled, Political and Moral Teſtament of Prince Ragotzki," but it is of dubious authorrity.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

RAGUENET (Francis), a native of Rouen, and an eccleſiaſtic. He obtained a prize from the French academy in 1689, for a diſ-courſe on the merit of martyrdom. In 1701 he publiſhed a Parallel of the Italians and French, with regard to Muſic and the Opera, in which he defended the ſuperiority of the former. This work occaſioned a literary warfare. Raguenet died in 1722. His other works are, 1. the Monuments of Rome, or a Deſcription of the Works of Art, &c. in that City; 2. the Hiſtory of Oliver Cromwell, 4to.; 3. Hiſtory of the Old Teſtament; 4.
Hiſtory of the Viſcount Turenne, 12mo.—
Moreri.

RAINALDI, or, as the French writers ſpell it, Raynaud (Theophilus), an eccentric genius, was born at Goſpello, in Piedmont dominions, in 1583, and became a Jeſuit. He was celebrated for a deep penetration, uncommon memory, and of prodigious learning. But his ideas were ſo extravagant, that, notwithſtanding his zeal for the ſupport of the Romiſh doctrines, many of his publications were proſcribed. He died at Lyons, in 1663, and his works were publiſhed at the ſame place, in 1665, in 20 vols.
fol. This writer is not to be confounded with another of the ſame name (Oderic Rainaldi), the author of the Eccleſiaſtical Annals, 8 vols. in fol.—Moreri.

RAINOLDS (William), an Engliſh divine, was born at Pinhoe in Devonſhire, and educated at New college, Oxford, where he obtained a fellowſhip, and entered into orders.
His brother John was a member of Corpus Chriſti college, and a zealous Romaniſt, while William was as warm in defence of the reformation. This difference occaſioned frequent diſputes, the reſult of which was that William became a convert to popery, and John turned proteſtant. The former went abroad, and was made profeſſor of Hebrew in the Engliſh college at Rheims; and died at Antwerp in 1594. He wrote a Defence of the Rhemiſh Tranſlation of the New Teſta-ment, againſt Whitaker, 8vo.; Calvino Turciſmus, 8vo. and other works. His brother John became dean of Lincoln in 1598, but the year following exchanged that preferment for the preſidentſhip of Corpus Chriſti college. He was a man of great learning, and called, on account of his memory, a living library. He died in 1607. His principal works are, Cenſura librorum apocryphorum vet. Teſtamenti; apologia theſi-um de Sacra Script. & Eccleſia; De Romanæ Eccleſiæ idolatria in cultu Sanctorum; and a tranſlation of part of the Old Teſta-ment in the preſent public verſion.—Wood.
Prince.

RALEIGH (ſir Walter), was born at Hayes, in the pariſh of Budley, in Devon-ſhire, of an ancient family, in 1552. After a proper education he was ſent to Oriel college, Oxford, but did not long remain there, for having an enterprifing turn he entered into the troop of gentlemen volunteers, who went to the aſſiſtance of the Proteſtants in France, where he continued about five or ſix years. In 1576 he was a ſtudent in the Middle Temple, but the year following he ſerved under general Norris in the Netherlands. Soon after his return he engaged with his brother-in-law, ſir Humphry Gilbert, in a voyage to America, from whence they returned in 1579. The next year he was in Ireland, where he diſtinguiſhed himſelf againſt the rebels in Munſter. On his return to England he introduced himſelf to the notice of queen Elizabeth by a piece of gallantry. Her majeſty was taking the air in a walk, when ſtopping at a dirty place, ſhe heſitated whether to proceed or not; on which Raleigh took off his new pluſh cloak, and ſpread it on the ground. The queen trod gently over the foot-cloth, and ſoon rewarded the ſacrifice of a cloak with a handſome ſuit to the owner. Being ſtill intent upon making diſcoveries, he ſailed again with Gilbert, who was loſt in the voyage. This however did not diſcourage Raleigh, who fitted out another ſquadron, which diſcovered the country called, in honour of Elizabeth, Virginia. In 1584 he was elected into parliament for the county of Devon, and knighted. He continued indefatigable in his favourite object of improving navigation, and was concerned with his relation ſir Richard Greenvile in colonizing Virginia, from whence the firſt tobacco was brought by this fleet to England. About this time he was made captain of the queen's guard, and lord warden of the ſtannaries. In the defeat of the Spaniſh armada ſir Walter bore a glorious part, for which he received diſtinguiſhing marks of favour from the queen, but having obtained a grant of the manor of Sherborn in Dorſetſhire, which had belonged to the biſhopric of Saliſbury, it gave great offence, and he was ſtigmatized unjuſtly as an atheiſt. About the ſame time he incurred the queen's diſpleaſure by an intrigue with one of her maids of honour, whom he afterwards married. In 1595 he ſailed to Guiana, and deſtroyed the capital of Trinidad. The year following we find him principally engaged in the taking of Cadiz. Honours were laviſhed in abundance upon him, and he obtained the lordſhip of St. Germaine, in Cornwall. Sir Walter had an active concern in the fall of Eſſex; and remained in the favour of the queen till her death. But in the ſucceeding reign the face of his affairs was changed. He was ſtripped of his preferments, tried, and condemned for high treaſon, on a charge the moſt frivolous, and without the leaſt evidence. He lay in the Tower twelve years, during which he wrote ſeveral pieces on various ſubjects of national importance; but his greateſt performance was the Hiſtory of the World, which was publiſhed in folio in 1614. The year following he was releaſed, occaſioned by the flattering account which he had given of ſome rich mines in Guiana. On gaining his liberty he ſailed to that country in ſearch of thoſe pretended mines, inſtead of diſcovering which he burnt the Spaniſh town, and returned to England, where, in conſequence of the complaint of Gondamor, the Spaniſh ambaſſador, he was apprehended, and, in a moſt unprecedented manner, beheaded, on his former ſentence, in Palace-yard, Weſtminſter, in 1617. His works are hiſtorical, philoſophical, poetical, and political. His ſon, Carew Raleigh, who was born in the Tower, became governor of Jerſey in 1659, and died in 1666. He wrote ſome ſonnets, and a vindication of his father againſt James Howell.—Biog. Brit.

RALPH (James), a miſcellaneous writer, was originally a ſchoolmaſter at Philadelphia, and came from thence about 1729 to London, where he publiſhed a poem entitled Night. He alſo wrote a Hiſtory of England, and ſeveral political pamphlets, and died in 1762. Pope has given him a place in his Dunciad.

RAMAZZINI (Bernardin), an Italian phyſician, was born at Carpi, near Modena, in 1633. After taking his degree at Parma he went to Modena, where he was medical profeſſor many years, and then removed to Padua. He died in 1714. His works were publiſhed at London in 1716, 4to.—Hutchinſon's Med. Biog.

RAMEAU (John Philip), a celebrated muſician, was born at Dijon in 1683. After practiſing as organiſt at his native place he diſcharged the ſame office in the cathedral of Clermont. In 1733 he produced his opera of Hippolytus, which was followed by ſeveral others, and greatly admired. But it is as a theoriſt in muſic that Rameau ſhines; and on account of his two works, the Demonſtration of the Principles of Harmony and the Code of Muſic, he has been called the Newton of that ſcience. Louis XV to whom he was compoſer, conferred on him the title of nobility, and the order of St. Michael. He died in 1764.—New. Dict. Hiſt.

RAMELLI (Felix), an Italian prieſt and painter, was born at Aſti in 1666, and died in 1740. He was invited to the court of the king of Sardinia, where he painted many portraits in miniature with great elegance.

RAMSAY (Andrew Michael), called the chevalier Ramſay, was born at Ayr in Scotland, in 1686, and educated at Edinburgh; after which he became tutor to a nobleman's ſon at St. Andrew's. In 1710 he was at Cambray, where he was converted to the roman catholic religion by the celebrated Fenelon, whoſe life he wrote. He was afterwards employed as tutor to the duke de Chateau Thierry, and made night of the order of St. Lazarus. He was alſo engaged by the ſon of James II. called the Pretender, in inſtructing his children. He died in 174[illegible]. His works are, Diſcourſe upon Epic Poetry

Eſſay upon Civil Government; Remarks on Shaftesbury's Characteriſtics; the Travels of Cyrus; Hiſtory of M. de Turenne; Plan of Education; Philoſophical Principles of Natural and Revealed Religion, 2 vols. 4to. One Charles Ramſay wrote a Syſtem of Short-hand, dedicated to Louis XIV. in 1681. —Biog. Brit.

RAMSAY (Allan), a Scotch poet, was born at Peebles in 1696. He was bred a barber at Edinburgh, but diſtinguiſhed himſelf by ſeveral ingenious poems and ſongs in the Scotch dialect. His principal performance is a rural drama, entitled, the Gentle Shepherd, which has been ſeveral times performed, and oftener read. The author died in 1753.—Biog. Dram.

RAMSDEN (Jeſſe), an excellent mechanic, was born at Halifax in Yorkſhire, in 1730. His father was a clothier, which buſineſs he alſo followed till he was twenty-one, when he came to London and applied to engraving. In the courſe of this employment, mathematical inſtruments were frequently brought to him to be engraved, which induced him to try his genius in that way; and with ſuch ſucceſs, that in 1763 he made inſtruments for ſeveral of the beſt artiſts. In 1768 he opened a ſhop in the Haymarket, and in 1775 he removed to Piccadilly, where he carried on buſineſs till his death. He greatly improved Hadley's quadrant, or ſextant; and he invented a machine for dividing mathematical inſtruments. He received a premium from the board of longitude for his diſcovery. Mr. Ramſden alſo improved the conſtruction of the theodolite; and the perpetual meter for meaſuring the heights of mountains. The pyrometer for meaſuring the dilatation of bodies by heat, alſo employed his talents; and he made many important diſcoveries and improvements in optics. But his aſtronomical inſtruments appear to have been the principal of his works. He improved the refracting micrometer, and the tranſit inſtrument and quadrant. He procured a patent for an improved equatorial. His mural quadrants were admirable, and much ſought for. Mr. Ramſden was choſen Fellow of the Royal Society in 1786.—Memoir by Lalande.

RAMUS (Peter), a philoſopher and mathematician, was born in 1515, at Cuth, in Picardy. His birth was mean, and he received his education in the college of Navarre, where he was a ſervant. He ſtudied with ſuch ardour, as to be admitted to the degree of maſter of arts, his theſis on which diſſertation was an attack upon the doctrine of Ariſtotle, which occaſioned a violent controverſy, and Ramus was prohibited from teaching.

But in 1551 he was nominated to the royal profeſſorſhip, but was again perſecuted for not pronouncing Q in Latin as K. He was alſo obnoxious to the Sorbonne for being a proteſtant, and in the maſſacre of St. Bartholomew, at Paris, in 1572, this learned and worthy man fell a victim. His works are, 1. Treatiſes on Arithmetic and Geometry; 2. De Militia Cæſaris; 3. De moribus veterum Gallorum; 4. Greek, Latin, and French Grammars.—Moreri.

RAMUSIO (John Baptiſt), ſecretary of the council of ten at Venice, and ambaſſador from that republic to France, Switzerland, and Rome; died at Padua in 1557, aged 72. He wrote a Treatiſe de Nili Incremento; and made the firſt collection of voyages that is known. It was printed in 3 vols. folio at Venice. The fourth periſhed by the burning of the printing-houſe.—Tiraboſchi.

RANC (John), a French painter, was born at Montpellier, and died at Madrid in 1735. He was received into the academy of painting in 1703, and appointed in 1724 firſt painter to the king of Spain.—D'Argenville.

RANCE (Armand John le Bouthillier de), was born at Paris in 1626. He led a gay life in his youth, though he cultivated a literary taſte, and publiſhed an edition of Anacreon with notes. Returning from a journey he haſtened to the houſe of his miſtreſs, and on entering her room found her laid out a corpſe. This ſpectacle effected a reformation, he renounced the world, and after entering among the regulars, retired into the monaſtery of La Trappe, where he died in 1700. He wrote Reflections on the Goſpels; and other pious works.—Moreri.

RANDOLPH (Thomas), an eminent ſtateſman, was born in Kent in 1523, and educated at Oxford, where he became principal of Broadgate hall, but was baniſhed to France in the reign of Mary on account of his religion. Queen Elizabeth employed him in ſeveral embaſſies, and rewarded him with knighthood, and the offices of chamberlain of the exchequer, and maſterſhip of the poſts. He died in 1590. His letters are in different collections, and his account of Ruſſia in Hackluyt's Voyages.—Biog. Brit.

RANDOLPH (Thomas), an Engliſh poet, was born at Newnham, in Northamptonſhire, in 1605. After receiving his education at Weſtminſter ſchool, he was elected to Trinity college, Cambridge, where he obtained a fellowſhip. He was intimate with Ben Jonſon, who uſed to call him his ſon. He died in 1634. His poems, which abound with wit and humour, though ſometimes grave and moral, were collected by his brother Robert, who was alſo a poet, and died vicar of Donnington, in Lincolnſhire, in 1671. Thomas was likewiſe the author of four dramatic pieces.—Wood. Biog. Brit.

RANDOLPH (Thomas), a learned divine, was a native of Oxfordſhire, and educated at Corpus Chriſti college, of which he became fellow, and afterwards preſident. He died in 1788. Dr. Randolph wrote an anſwer to the Eſſay on Spirit; a valuable diſcourſe on Jephthah's vow; and ſeveral ſermons, collected into 2 volumes, 8vo.—Gent. Mag.

RANNEQUIN, a celebrated mechaniſt of Liege, who conſtructed the famous machine of Marly which forces the water of the Seine to the ſummit of a hill, and conveys 5258 tuns every 24 hours. He died in 1708, aged 60.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

RANTZAW (Joſias count de), marſhal of France, was born of a noble family in Holſtein. He ſerved firſt in the Swediſh army, but on viſiting France with chancellor Oxenſtiern he was made field-marſhal by Louis XIII. At the ſiege of Dole, in 1636, he loſt an eye; afterwards an arm and a leg, and one of his ears. In 1645, having abjured the proteſtant religion, he was made marſhal of France. He ſerved in Flanders, but was ſent to priſon in 1650, and died there ſoon after.—Moreri.

RAOUX (John), an hiſtorical and portrait painter, was born at Montpellier in 1677, and died at Paris in 1734. He was a member of the academy of painting, and had apartments in the palace of the Temple.—D'Argenville.

RAPHAEL (Sanzio), a celebrated painter, was born at Urbino in 1483. His father firſt employed him to paint china, and afterwards placed him under Perugino. At Florence he ſtudied the famous cartoons of da Vinci and Michael Angelo; after which he went to Rome, where he was employed by pope Julius II. in the Vatican. He alſo painted ſeveral fine pieces for Francis I. of France, who liberally rewarded him. Leo X. employed him in reconſtructing the Baſilique of St Peter. He died at Rome in 1520.—De Piles. D'Argenville.

RAPHAEL D'AREZZIO, a painter, ſo called from a village in Italy, where he was born in 1552. He was the diſciple of Zucchero, and became eminent in portrait and hiſtorical painting. He died in 1580.—Ibid.

RAPHELINGIUS (Francis), a learned critic, was born at Lanoy, near Liſle, in 1539. He ſtudied the learned languages at Paris, after which he came to England, and taught Greek at Cambridge. On his return to the Low Countries, he married the daughter of Chriſtopher Plantin. He publiſhed ſeveral antient writers with notes; and was employed on the Polyglot Bible of Antwerp, printed in 1571. For his learning he was appointed profeſſor in Hebrew and Arabic at Leyden, where he died in 1597. His other works are, a Hebrew Grammar; an Arabic Lexicon; and a Chaldaic Dictionary.—Moreri.

RAPIN (Nicholas), a French poet, was born about 1540, at Fontenai-le-comté, in Poitou. Henry III. made him grand prevot of that town, from whence he was expelled by the leaguers, but reſtored by Henry IV. He died in 1609. His poems are in the 3d volume of "Delices des Poëtes Latins de France."—Ibid.

RAPIN (René), a jeſuit, was born at Tours, in 1621, and died at Paris in 1687. He is chiefly diſtinguiſhed for his Latin poem on Gardens, which was tranſlated into Engliſh by Evleyn. His Reflections on Eloquence, Poetry, Hiſtory, and Philoſophy, have alſo been rendered into our language, in 2 vols. 8vo.—Moreri.

RAPIN DE THOYRAS (Paul), an hiſtorian, was born at Caſtres, in 1661, of an antient family of Savoy. He ſtudied the law, and became an advocate, but being obliged to leave France on the revocation of the edict of Nantes he viſited England, and Holland. In 1688 he accompanied the prince of Orange to this country, and obtained a military rank in Ireland, but being wounded at the ſiege of Limerick, he diſpoſed of his commiſſion. He afterwards became tutor to the ſon of the earl of Portland, whom he accompanied on his travels. He died at Weſel in 1725. His Hiſtory of England, which is very exact, was printed at the Hague, in 10 vols. 4to.; and tranſlated into Engliſh by Mr. Tindal, in folio and octavo.—Ibid.

RASTALL (John), a learned printer, was born at London, and educated at Oxford. He married a ſiſter of ſir Thomas More, and died in 1536. Raſtall wrote a dramatic Deſcription of Aſia, Africa, and Europe, with cuts; Canones Aſtrologici; Dialogues concerning Purgatory; Apology againſt John Fryth; the Rules of a Good Life; Anglorum Regum Chronicon, &c. His ſon William became one of the juſtices of the common pleas in the reign of queen Mary, but on her death he went to Louvain, in 1565. He wrote, 1. The Chartuary, 1580; 2. A Chronological Table from William the Conqueror; 3. Terms of the Engliſh Law; 4. Collection of the Statutes; 5. Life of Sir Thomas More, &c.—Wood.

RATRAMNUS, or BERTRAM, a monk of the abbey of Corby in the 9th century. He defended the doctrine of predeſtination with zeal againſt Hincmar, archbiſhop of Rheims. He alſo wrote a famous piece on the Euchariſt, in which he denies tranſubſtantiation. This book has been often quoted by proteſtants.—Dupin. Cave.

RAVAILLAC (Francis), a regicide, was born in Angouleme, and took the religious habit among the Feuillans, but was expelled on account of his fanatical extravagancies. He afterwards became deranged by the diſcourſes of the leaguers, and conceiving that Henry IV. of France was not a true catholic, he aſſaſſinated him in 1610. He was torn in pieces by wild horſes.—Henault.

RAVIUS (Chriſtian), a learned writer, was born at Berlin in 1613. He profeſſed the oriental languages ſucceſſively at Utrecht, Oxford, Kiel, and Frankfort on the Main, at which laſt place he died in 1677. His works are; 1. Plan of Hebrew Orthography and Etymology; 2. A Grammar, Hebrew, Chaldaic, Syriac, Arabic, Samaritan, and Engliſh, London, 8vo.; 3. A Latin tranſlation from the Arabic of Apollonius Pergæus. His ſon John Ravius, was librarian to the elector of Brandenburg, and wrote a Commentary upon Cornelius Nepos.—Moreri.

RAVESTEYN (John van), a painter, was born at the Hague about 1580. He excelled in painting portraits. There were two others of this name, 1. Hubert, who painted ruſtic ſubjects. He died about 1700. 2. Nicholas, who died in 1750, aged 89. He was a good portrait painter.—Houbraken.

RAULIN (Joſeph), an ingenious phyſician, was born in 1708, and died at Paris in 1784. He was phyſician to the French king, and a member of ſeveral learned ſocieties. He wrote a Treatiſe on Diſeaſes occaſioned by the variations of the Atmoſphere; another on the Vapours in Females; Treatiſe on the Fluor Albus; on the Preſervation of Infants; on Diſeaſes of Lying-in Women; on Pulmonary Conſumption, &c.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

RAUWOLF (Leonard), a phyſician of the 16th century, was a native of Augſburg. In 1573 he travelled into Syria, Arabia, Armenia, and other countries in the eaſt, and returned to his native place in 1576. From thence he removed to Lintz, where he died in 1606. His Travels were printed at Frankfort in 1582. Mr. Ray has publiſhed a tranſlation in Engliſh. Rauwolf's catalogue of plants in the Levant, was publiſhed at Leyden in 1755, with the title of Flora Orientalis.—Halleri. Bibl. Botan.

RAWLET (John), a pious Engliſh divine, was bachelor of divinity, and many years lecturer of Newcaſtle-upon-Tyne, to which place he was ſo much attached that he refuſed the valuable living of Coleſhill, in Warwickſhire. He died in 1686, aged 44. Mr. Rawlet was the author of the Chriſtian Monitor, which has gone through numerous editions; as alſo hath his Treatiſe on Sacramental Covenanting.—Granger.

RAWLEY (Dr. William), an Engliſh divine, was born at Norwich about 1588, and educated at Bene't college, Cambridge, of which he became fellow. Dr. Rawley was chaplain to lord Bacon, ſome of whoſe works he publiſhed. He had the living of Landbeach, in Cambridgeſhire, of which he was deprived in the rebellion, but recovered it at the reſtoration. He died in 1667.—Walker's Sufferings of the Clergy.

RAWLINS (Thomas), an engraver of the firſt in the reigns of Charles I. and II. died in 1670. He wrote three dramatic pieces, called Rebellion, Tom Eſſence, and Tunbridge Wells.—Biog Dram.

RAWLINSON (Thomas, knight), lord mayor of London, of which city he was a native. He beautified and repaired Guildhall, and died in 1724.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

RAWLINSON (Thomas), a remarkable collector of books, of which he had ſo great a number as to be obliged to take London houſe, in Alderſgate-ſtreet, to contain them. He died in 1725. His library was ſold after his death. He is drawn in the Tatler under the name of Tom Folio.—Ibid.

RAWLINSON (Richard), a learned antiquary, was educated at St. John's college, Oxford, where he was admitted by diploma to the degree of doctor of civil law, in 1719. He made collections for a continuation of Wood's "Athenæ Oxonienſes," and "Hiſtory of Oxford," which, with an account of his travels, he bequeathed to the univerſity, with a large collection of medals and books. He alſo founded an Anglo Saxon profeſſorſhip at Oxford. He died in 1755, and his heart, agreeable to his own deſire, was put in a marble urn, and placed in St. John's college chapel. He publiſhed a tranſlation of Freſnoy's Method of Studying Hiſtory, 2 vols. 8vo.—Ibid.

RAY (John), or Wray, an Engliſh divine and botaniſt, was born at Black-Notley, in Eſſex, in 1628. His father was a blackſmith, but gave his ſon a good education at Braintree, from whence he removed to Trinity college, Cambridge, where he became fellow, and Greek and mathematical lecturer. While at the univerſity he cultivated the ſtudy of botany, which was then in a low ſtate; but by his example and exertions it became a favourite purſuit. In 1660 he publiſhed his "Catalogus Plantarum Circa Cantabrigiam Naſcentium," 12mo.; which laid the foundation of his Synopſis Methodica Stirpium Britannicarum, of which excellent work there are two editions in octavo. The ſame year he was ordained by biſhop Sanderſon, but in 1662 he quitted his fellowſhip. After this he made numerous journeys over the kingdom with his friend Mr. Willoughby, and others, in ſearch of plants and other curioſities. He alſo accompanied the ſame gentlemen abroad, of which tour he publiſhed an account in 1673. He was choſen a fellow of the royal ſociety in 1667, and he contributed numerous papers to the Tranſactions of that learned body, on ſubjects of natural hiſtory. In 1679 he fixed his reſidence near Black-Notley, where he continued perfecting his collections and works till his death, which happened in 1705. The botanical writings of this excellent man have been univerſally admired; beſides which he publiſhed, 1. The Wiſdom of God Manifeſted in the Works of the Creation, 8vo., of which there have been ſeveral editions; 2. Three Diſcourſes on the Primitive Chaos, the Creation, Deluge and Conflagration of the World. 8vo.; 3. Synopſis Methodica Animalium, Quadrupedium, Avium et Piſcium; 4. A tranſlation of Rauwolf's Travels in the Eaſt, 8vo.; 5. Perſuaſive to a Holy Life, 8vo.; 6. Collection of Engliſh Proverbs, 8vo., which has been reprinted ſeveral times. After his death were publiſhed by Dr. Derham, his Hiſtory of Inſects, 4to; and a collection of Philoſophical Letters between Mr. Ray and ſeveral of his correſpondents, 8vo.; and his Select Remains were printed by Mr. Scott, in 1760, 8vo.—General Hiſt. Dict. Biog. Brit.

RAY (Benjamin), was born at Spalding in Eſſex, and educated at St. John's college, Cambridge, after which he became curate of Surflect, and Cowbitt. He wrote an account of a water ſpout, printed in the Philoſophical Tranſactions. He died in 1760.—Hiſt. of the Spalding Society.

Raymond (Robert, lord), chief juſtice of the king's bench, died in 1733. His Reports are in great eſteem.

Raynal (William Francis), was born at St. Genies, in Rouergue, in 1718. He entered early into the ſociety of jeſuits, and on taking prieſt's orders became a celebrated preacher. His love of independence induced him to quit his order in 1748, on which he fixed his reſidence at Paris, where he had recourſe to literature for a ſupport; and was engaged in ſeveral works, particularly the Mercury of France. In 1770 he publiſhed his celebrated work, the Philoſophical and Political Hiſtory of the European Commerce in both Indies; which obtained him a great reputation. With a view to a more correct edition he travelled into Holland and England; and when in this country he was honoured with a very flattering mark of diſtinction; on viſiting the houſe of commons, the ſpeaker ordered buſineſs to be ſuſpended till he was accommodated with a convenient ſeat. In 1781 he publiſhed, at Geneva, a new edition of his Hiſtory, greatly improved and enlarged. It was, however, proſcribed by the parliament of Paris, and the author would have been apprehended had he not retired to Germany: In 1788 he returned to Paris, and in 1791 he addreſſed a letter to the national aſſembly, in which he expoſed the dangerous courſe in which they were engaged, and predicted the evils which would reſult from the revolution. Raynal died in 1796. His other works are; 1. Hiſtory of the Stadtholderſhip, 2 vols.; 2. Hiſtory of the Parliament of England, 2 vols.; 3. Hiſtorical Anecdotes, 3 vols. 12mo; 4. Hiſtory of the Divorce of Henry VIII. of England; 5. The Military School, 3 vols.; 6. Hiſtorical Memoirs of Europe, 3 vols.; 7. On the Revolution of the Engliſh Colonies in North America, 12mo.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

Read (Alexander), a phyſician, was a native of Scotland, and a man of abilities. In 1620 he was created doctor of phyſic at Oxford, by royal mandate. He wrote ſeveral books in the line of his profeſſion. He died about 1680.—Wood.

Real (Cæſar Vichard de St.), an hiſtorical writer, was born at Chamberi, where he died in 1692. His works are; Diſcourſes upon Hiſtory; Account of the Conſpiracy of the Spaniards againſt the Republic of Venice; Don Carlos, an hiſtorical novel; the Life of Jeſus Chriſt; Diſcourſe upon Valour; Relation of the Apoſtacy of Geneva; Treatiſe on Criticiſm, &c; all publiſhed together in 8 vols. 12mo.—Moreri.

Real (Gaſpard de), ſeigneur de Curban, was born at Sifteron in 1682, and died at Paris in 1752. He wrote a work of great eſtimation on the Science of Government, printed at Paris, in 8 vols. 4to. His nephew the abbé de Real, wrote a Diſſertation on the Reigning Family of France and Spain. He died in 1774.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

Reaumur (René Antony Ferchault ſieur de), an eminent naturaliſt, was born at Rochelle in 1683. He was bred to the law, which profeſſion he abandoned for the ſtudy of mathematics, philoſophy, and natural hiſtory. In 1708 he was admitted a member of the academy of ſciences. He died in 1757. The principal of his works is a Hiſtory of Inſects, 6 vols. 4to; he alſo wrote a Hiſtory of Rivers in France, and numerous papers in the Memoirs of the Academy of Sciences.—Ibid.

Reboulet (Simon), a French jeſuit, was born at Avignon in 1687, and died at Paris in 1752. He quitted his order on account of ill health, and afterwards married. His works are; 1. Hiſtoire des Filles de l'Enfance, 2 vols. 12mo.; 2. Memoirs of the Chevalier de Forbin, 2 vols.; 3. Hiſtory of Louis XIV. 3 vols. 4to.; 4. Hiſtory of Clement XI. 2 vols. 4to.—Ibid.

Recorde (Robert), an Engliſh phyſician and mathematical writer, who died in the king's bench priſon in 1558. He was the firſt who wrote on Algebra in our language. —Gen. Hiſt. Dict.

Rede (William), biſhop of Chicheſter in the year 1369, was the beſt mathematician of his time. He built the library of Merton college, Oxford, and the caſtle of Ambarley.—Ibid.

Redi (Francis), a celebrated naturaliſt, was born at Arezzo in 1626. He was admitted doctor in medicine, and profeſſor of philoſophy at Piſa, and the grand duke Ferdinand II. appointed him his phyſician. He aſſiſted in compiling the La Cruſca Dictionary, and wrote ſome Italian poems, but he is chiefly known by his works on natural hiſtory, which are; 1. Experiments on the Generation of Animals, 4to.; 2. Obſervations on Vipers; 3. Experiments on Natural Curioſities brought from India, 4to. He was found dead in his bed in 1697.—Tiraboſchi.

Redi (Thomas), a painter, was born at Florence in 1665, and died in 1728. Several of his pictures are in the churches in Tuſcany.—Pilkington.

Rega (Henry Joſeph), a phyſician, and profeſſor in that faculty at Louvaine, where he died in 1754, aged 61. He wrote Sympathia, ſeu de Conſenſu Partium Corporis Humani, 12mo.; De Urinis tractatus duo, 8vo; Accurata Methodus Medendi per Aphoriſmos Propoſita, 4to; Diſſertatio Medica de Aquis Mineralibus fontis Marimontenſis, &c —Nouv Dict. Hiſt.

Regiomontanus, an aſtronomer, whoſe real name was Muller, was born at Konigſberg in 1436. He ſtudied at Vienna under Purbachius, whom he ſucceeded. He afterwards learnt the Greek language of Theodore Gaza, by which means he was enabled to read Ptolemy, and other mathematicians of antiquity. He visited several countries, and received marks of distinction from sovereign princes, particularly Sixtus IV. who made him archbishop of Ravenna, and employed him in reforming the calendar. He died there of the plague, in 1476.—Martin.

Regis (Peter Sylvain), a French philosopher, was born in the county of Agenois, in 1632. He studied at Paris under Rohault, and afterwards read lectures at Toulouse; from whence he removed to Montpellier, and lastly to Paris, where he was admitted a member of the academy of sciences. He died in 1707. His works are; 1 System of Philosophy, 3 vols. 4to.; this is according to the Cartesian doctrine; 2. Use of Reason and Faith, 4to.; 3. Answer to a book of Huet's, entitled, Censura Philosophiæ Cartesianæ, &c.—Moreri. Bayle.

Regius (Urban), or Le Roy, a lutheran divine, was born at Langenargen, on the lake of Constance. He studied at Ingoldstadt, where he taught with reputation, and received the crown of poetry and oratory from the emperor Maximilian; but becoming a protestant he was obliged to retire to Strasburg. He died at Zell in 1541. His works make 3 vols. folio.—Melch. Adam. Vit. Germ. Theol.

Regnard (John Francis), a comic writer, was born at Paris in 1647. He was fond of travelling, and in a voyage from Genoa to Marseilles, was taken by a Barbary corsair, and carried to Algiers, where, by his skill in cookery, he obtained the favour of his master, but being caught in an amour he was condemned to suffer death, or turn Mahometan. The French consul being made acquainted with the affair, ransomed him and sent him to France: after which he travelled through Flanders, Holland, Denmark, Sweden, and Poland. He died near Paris, in 1709. His works, which rank him next to Moliere, have been published in 4 vols. 12mo.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Regnault (Noel), a French jesuit, was born at Arras in 1683, and died in 1762. He wrote, 1. Philosophical Conversations, 2 vols. 12mo.; 2. Origin of the Old and New Philosophy, 3 vols.; 3. Mathematical Conversations, 3 vols.; 4. System of Logic, 12mo.—Ibid.

Regnier (Mathurin), a French poet, was born at Chartres in 1573. He was in favour with cardinal Joyeuse, and obtained a pension and a canonry. He died at Rouen in 1613. His poems, which are chiefly satirical, were printed at London in 1733, 4to.; and at Paris in 1746, 12mo.—Moreri.

Regnier (Francis Seraphin), a French writer, was born at Paris in 1632. His talents recommended him to the patronage of the duke de Crequi, whom he accompanied to Rome in 1662. While there he wrote Italian sonnets in so good a style as to be admitted a member of the academy della Crusca. In 1684 he succeeded Mezeray as secretary of the French academy. He died in 1713. His works are; 1. Translation of Homer's Battle of the Frogs and Mice. This was done at the age of fifteen. 2. A French Grammar; 3. An Italian translation of Anacreon; 4. French, Latin, Spanish, and Italian Poems; 5. History of the Disputes of France with the Court of Rome.—Moreri.

Regulus (Marcus Attilius), a Roman consul, who 267 B.C. reduced the Salentins, and in his second consulate defeated Amilcar and Hanno in a naval engagement off the coast of Sicily. This victory was followed by another on land, and the reduction of several places. The Carthaginians sued for peace, which was refused. Xantippus, a Spartan commander, coming with a reinforcement to the Carthaginians, defeated Regulus, who was taken prisoner. The Carthaginians sent him envoy to Rome to propose terms of peace, but on the condition of his return. Regulus advised the senate not to comply with the terms, for which the Carthaginians put him to a cruel death B.C. 251. The senate gave his widow leave to avenge her husband's death on some illustrious Carthaginians, which she did with such barbarity as obliged them to stop her progress. —Florus. Livy.

Reid (Thomas), a learned divine of the church of Scotland, was born in 1709, and educated at the university of Glasgow, where he took his doctor's degree, and became professor of moral philosophy. His works are; an Inquiry into the Human Mind; and Essays on the Intellectual and Active Powers of Man. He died in 1796.—Life by Stewart.

Reinbeck (John Gustavus), a protestant divine, was born at Zell in 1682, and died at Berlin in 1741. He was chaplain to the queen and princess royal of Prussia, and had some considerable preferment. He wrote a Treatise on Redemption; another on Marriage; several volumes of Sermons; Considerations on the Augsburg Confession; and Metaphysical works.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Reineccius (Reinier), was born at Steinheim, and taught the belles-lettres in the universities of Frankfort and Helmstadt till his death in 1595. His works are, 1. Methodus Legendi Historiam, fol.; 2. Historia Julia, 3 vols fol.; 3. Chronicon Hierosolymitanum, 4to.; 4. Historia Orientalis, 4to. —Moreri.

Reiner (Wenceslaus Laurence), a painter, was born at Prague in 1686, and died in 1743. He excelled in painting landscapes and battles.—Pilkington.

Reinesius (Thomas), a learned German, was born at Gotha in 1587. After being a burgomaster of Altemburg, and counsellor to the elector of Saxony, he retired to Leipsic, where he practised medicine till his death in 1667. He wrote, Syntagma Inscriptionum Antiquarum, 2 vols. fol.; and some Lectures and Epistles.—Moreri.

Reinhold (Erasmus), an astronomer and mathematician, was born in 1511, at Salfeldt in Upper Saxony. He wrote some mathematical and aſtronomical works, and died in 1535.—Ibid.

Reisk (John), rector of the college of Wolfenbuttle, died in 1701, aged 60. He publiſhed a learned Treatiſe on the Sibyls and other Oracles; on Ahaſuerus and Eſther; on the Malady of Job; on the Images of Jeſus Chriſt; and other works of erudition.—Ibid.

Reiske (John James), a learned critic and phyſician, who was profeſſor of Arabic at Leipſic, and died there in 1774, aged 58. He publiſhed, 1. Oratores Græci, 12 vols. 8vo; 2. an edition of Dionyſius Halicarnaſſenſis, 6 vols. 8vo.; 3. the works of Plutarch, 7 vols. 8vo.; 4. a Latin tranſlation of Abulfeda's Hiſtory of the Arabs.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

Reland (Adrian), a learned man, was born at Ryp, in North Holland, in 1676. At the age of twenty-four he was choſen profeſſor of philoſophy at Harderwyk, from whence he removed to Utrecht, on being appointed profeſſor of oriental languages, and eccleſiaſtical antiquities. He died there of the ſmall pox in 1718. His principal works are, 1. Palæſtina Monumentis veteribus illuſtrata, 2 vols. 4to.; 2. Diſſertations on the Medals of the Antient Hebrews, 3 vols. 12mo.; 3. Introduction to Hebrew Grammar; 4. Antiquitates ſacræ veterum Hebræorum; 5. De Religione Mohammedica, 8vo.; 6. De Spoliis templi Hieroſolymitani in arcu Titiano Romæ conſpicuis; 7. an edition of Epictetus. His brother Peter Reland was the learned collector of the Faſti Conſulares, 8vo.—Moreri.

Rembrandt (Van Ryn), an eminent painter and engraver, was born at a village on the banks of the Rhine, near Leyden, in 1606. His paintings of hiſtorical ſubjects are the moſt rare. In the knowlege of the clare-oſcuro he ſtands unrivalled, and his portraits have the force of nature; but the grounds are very dark, of which being once told, he ſaid, "I am a painter, not a dyer." He alſo engraved numerous plates after his own deſigns. Rembrandt died at Amſterdam, according to ſome in 1668, but to others in 1674.—De Piles. Houbraken.

Remi (St.), archbiſhop of Rheims, who converted Clovis to Chriſtianity, and baptiſed that monarch. He died about 535. There are ſome letters which paſs under his name, but they are ſuſpicious. There was another ſaint of this name, or Remigius, who was archbiſhop of Lyons, and preſided in the council of Valentia in 855. He ſupported the doctrine of St Auguſtine on grace and predeſtination in ſome works which are extant. He died in 875.—Dupin. Baillet.

Remi (Joſeph Honore), advocate in the parliament of Paris, where he died in 1782, aged 44. At the age of eight years he became blind from the ſmall pox, but recovered his ſight at fourteen. He wrote a burleſque, called Days, in oppoſition to Young's Night Thoughts; but his principal work is an Eloge on Chancellor de l'Hopital, which was crowned by the French academy in 1777, and cenſured by the Sorbonne. He alſo wrote the Elogies of Moliere, Colbert, and Fenelon; and furniſhed the articles of juriſprudence for the new Encyclopedie.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

Remigio Florentino, a Dominican of Florence in the 16th century, who tranſlated Ammianus Marcellinus and Cornelius Nepos into Italian. He was alſo the author of Reflections upon the Hiſtory of Guicciardini; and Italian poems. He died in 1580.—Tiraboſchi.

Renau d'Elisagaray (Bernard), a mathematician, was born in Bearn in 1652. He diſtinguiſhed himſelf by his improvements in the conſtruction and management of ſhips, and was beſides an able engineer. For his ſervices he was made counſellor of marine, and chevalier of the order of St. Louis, to which was added a conſiderable penſion. He was admitted a member of the academy of ſciences in 1699, and died in 1719. He wrote the Theory of Manœuvring Veſſels, printed in 1689, 8vo.; and ſeveral letters in defence of his theory, againſt Huygens and Bernouilli.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

Renaudot (Theophraſtus), a French phyſician, was born at Loudon in 1585. He was the firſt who publiſhed a Gazette in France, ſo called, as is ſuppoſed, from the Venetian coin, una Gazetta, for which ſuch papers were originally ſold at Venice. Renaudot obtained the privilege of publiſhing the Gazette of France for himſelf and family. He died in 1653. His other works are, an Abridgment of the Life of the Prince de Condé, 4to.; the Life of Marſhal Giſſou; and the Life of Cardinal Michael Mazarin, 4to.—Moreri.

Renaudot (Euſebius), grandſon of the preceding, was born at Paris in 1646. He entered into orders, and diſtinguiſhed himſelf by his knowlege of the oriental languages. The cardinal de Nouailles took him to Rome, where Clement V. paid him great reſpect, and gave him the priory of Foſſey in Brittany. On viſiting Florence the grand duke gave him apartments in his palace; and the academy in that city choſe him a member. He was alſo a member of the French academy, and of other learned ſocieties. He died in 1720. His works are, a Continuation of Nicole's book on the Perpetuity of Faith, 2 vols. 4to.; Hiſtoria Patriarcharum Alexandrinorum, Jacobitarum, &c. 4to.; a collection of the Antient Oriental Liturgies, 2 vols. 4to.; Relations of the Indies and China, with Obſervations; [this is a tranſlation from the Arabic, and has been publiſhed in Engliſh;] a Tranſlation of the Life of Athanaſius from the Arabic, &c.—Moreri.

Rennell (Thomas), an Engliſh painter, was born at Chudleigh in Devonſhire, in 1718. He received a good education at Exeter, and was then apprenticed to a limner in London. When out of his time he ſettled in his native county, as a portrait painter, in which he had great merit. His landſcapes also very fine. He had besides a good n for poetry, and some of his performances this way have been printed. He died at tmouth in 1788.—Europ. Mag.

RESENIUS (Peter), a learned Danish ter, was born at Copenhagen in 1625. studied the law at Leyden, and professed t faculty at Padua. On his return to nmark he was made counsellor of state. died in 1688. His works are, Jus auli- n Norvegicum, 4to.; an Icelandic Dic- ry, 4to.; an edition of the Edda of the anders, 4to.; of this last Mallet gave a slation in his Introduction to the History Denmark.—Bayle.

RESSIUS (Rutger), professor of Greek at uvaine, was a native of the principality Liege, and died in 1545. Erasmus had a h opinion of him. He published Theophi- 's Institutions of the Greek Law, 1536; Aphorisms of Hippocrates; and the Laws Plato, 1533.—Erasmi. Epist.

RESTAUT (Peter), advocate to the king France, was born at Beauvais in 1694. was distinguished by his skill and probity, died at Paris in 1764. He wrote the nciples of the French Grammar, 12mo.; ich is accounted the best book on the sub- t.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

RESTOUT (John), painter in ordinary to French king, was born at Caen in 1692. became director of the academy of paint- , and died in 1768. Two of his finest tures are Alpheus saved by Diana, and the umph of Bacchus. His son John Bernard s a member of the academy of painting. died in 1797. He was an excellent artist. Nouv. Dict. Hist.

RETZ (John Francis Paul de Gondy, car- al de), was born at Montmirel in Brie, a noble family, in 1614. He was edu- ed under the celebrated Vincent de Paul, in 1643 received the doctor's degree m the Sorbonne. The same year he was ned coadjutor of the archbishop of Paris; while he was soliciting the highest digni- s in the church he fought several duels. s conduct in other respects was also very becoming his profession. In the civil wars raised a regiment, to which he gave the ne of Corinth, because he was titular hbishop of that place. At length he made ce with the court on condition of his being ated a cardinal; but he still continued to al against the government, for which he s imprisoned at Vincennes and Nantes. made his escape from the last place, and nt into several countries. In 1661 he rned to France, and obtained his pardon the abbey of St. Dennis. This turbu- t prelate died at Paris in 1679. He ote Memoirs of his own Life, printed in 17, and since at Amsterdam, in 4 vols. mo. He also wrote the History of the nspiracy of Count Fiesco.—Moreri.

REUCHLIN (John), a learned German, s born at Pforzheim in 1455. His name nifying smoke in his native language, he altered it to the corresponding Greek word Capnio, but he is generally known by the former. He acquired a great knowlege of the Latin, Greek, and Hebrew languages. After teaching with reputation at Orleans, he was employed on state matters by some of the German princes. He died at Ingoldstadt in 1522. He wrote De Arte Cabalistica, folio, 1517; and the famous Epistolæ obscurorum virorum have been attributed to him, but not on sufficient grounds.—Ibid.

REUVEN (Peter), a Dutch painter, was born in 1650. He ornamented the palace of Loo in Holland with some fine pieces, and died in 1718.—Pilkington.

REVELY (Willey), an English architect, was a disciple of sir William Chambers. He accompanied Athenian Stuart to Greece, and was the editor of his great work on the Antiquities of that country. Mr. Revely was the architect of the new church at Southampton. He died in 1799.—Gent. Mag.

REYNEAU (Charles René), a French mathematician, was born at Brissac in 1650. He taught philosophy at Toulon, and was elected to the mathematical chair at Angers, in 1683. He published a work called, "Analysis demonstrated," by which he undertook to reduce into a body the Theories of Newton, Descartes, Leibnitz, &c. He was a member of the academy of sciences, and died in 1728. His other works are, the Science of Calculation, 2 vols 4to.; Logic, or the Art of Reasoning, 12mo.—Moreri.

REYNER (Edward), a nonconformist divine, was born in Yorkshire, and educated at Cambridge, where he took his degrees in arts, and about 1627 settled at Lincoln; but in 1662 he was ejected from his living, and died soon after. He wrote Precepts for Christian Practice; Vindication of Human Learning and Universities, &c. His son John Reyner was fellow of Emmanuel college, Cambridge; but being deprived for nonconformity, he practised as a physician at Nottingham, where he died in the flower of his age. He was a man of learning.—Calamy.

REYNOLDS (Edward), an English prelate, was born at Southampton in 1595, and educated at Merton college, Oxford, after which he became preacher at Lincoln's Inn, and rector of Braynton in Northamptonshire. He took the covenant in the civil wars, and was a member of the assembly at Westminster. At the restoration he was one of the presbyterian divines in the Savoy conference, about the Liturgy, but being offered the bishopric of Norwich, he accepted it, and gave great offence to his old friends. He died in 1676. His works have been printed in one volume folio. They are Calvinistic.—Wood, A. O.

REYNOLDS (sir Joshua), a celebrated painter, was the son of a clergyman at Plympton in Devonshire, and born there in 1723. Being intended for the church he received a ſuitable education under his father, and then removed to Oxford, where he took his degrees in arts; but having a great taſte for drawing he reſolved to make painting his profeſſion, and accordingly was placed under Hudſon the portrait painter. About 1749 he went to Italy, in company with the honourable Mr. Keppel, his early friend and patron. After ſtudying the works of the moſt illuſtrious maſters two years, Mr. Reynolds returned to London, where he found no encouragement given to any other branch of the art than to portrait painting. He was of courſe under the neceſſity of complying with the prevailing taſte, and in that walk ſoon became unrivalled. The firſt picture by which he diſtinguiſhed himſelf, after his return, was the portrait of Mr. Keppel. He did not however confine himſelf to portraits, but painted ſeveral hiſtorical pictures of high and acknowleged merit. When the royal academy was inſtituted he was appointed preſident, which ſtation he held with honour to himſelf and advantage to the arts till 1791, and then reſigned it. He was alſo appointed principal painter to the king, and knighted. His literary merits, and other accompliſhments, procured him the friendſhip of the moſt diſtinguiſhed men of genius in his time, particularly Johnſon, Burke, Goldſmith, and Garrick: and ſir Joſhua had the honour of inſtituting the celebrated literary club of which they were members. He was likewiſe a member of the royal ſociety, and of that of antiquaries; and was created doctor of laws by the univerſities of Oxford and Dublin. Sir Joſhua's academical diſcourſes diſplay the ſoundeſt judgment, the moſt refined taſte, and a perfect acquaintance with the works of different maſters; and are written in a clear and elegant ſtyle. He died in 1792, and lies buried in St. Paul's cathedral. Having no children, he bequeathed the principal part of his property to his niece, ſince married to the earl of Inchiquin, now marquis of Thomond.—Preface to his Works, 2 vols. 4to, and 3 vols. 8vo.

Reyrac (Francis Philip de Laurens de), a French divine, was born at Longueville, in Limouſin, in 1734, and died at Orleans in 1782. He became canon-regular of Chancelade, and a member of the academy of inſcriptions and belles-lettres. His works are, 1. A Hymn to the Sun; 2. Idylls, in elegant proſe; 3. Sacred Poems, 8vo; 4. Manuale Clericorum, 12mo.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

Reys (Anthony Dos), a learned Portugueſe divine, was born in 1690. He obtained ſome conſiderable preferment, and was appointed chronologer of the kingdom, but he refuſed ſeveral biſhoprics. He died in 1738. His principal works are; 1. Latin Poems; 2. Life of Ferdinand de Meneza, in Latin; 3. Introduction to a Miſcellaneous Collection of Portugueſe Poets; 4. An edition of the Corpus Illuſtrium Poetarum Luſitanorum qui Latinè Scripſerunt, 7 vols. 4to.—Ibid.

Rhadamistus, the ſon of Pharaſmanes, king of Iberia. He put to death his uncle Mithridates, whoſe daughter Zenobia he had married. He was defeated by the Parthians, on which he ſtabbed his wife; for which his father cauſed him to be put to death, A. D. 52.—Tacitus.

Rhazis, an Arabian phyſician of great learning and experience, who died about 935. He was the firſt who wrote on the ſmall pox, which treatiſe was tranſlated and publiſhed by Dr Mead. All his works were printed in fol. 1548.—Friend's Hiſt. Phyſic.

Rhenanus (Beatus), a learned German, was born at Rheinac in 1485, and died at Straſburgh in 1547. He was corrector of the preſs for Frobedius, and by that means formed an intimacy with Eraſmus. He wrote a Hiſtory of Germany, 4to; Illyrici Provinciarum utrique imperio cum Romano, tum Conſtantinopolitano, ſervientis Deſcriptio, 8vo. He was alſo the editor of Velleius Paterculus, and other works.—Moreri.

Rhenferd (James), profeſſor of oriental languages and divinity at Franeker, was born at Mulheim in 1654, and died in 1712. He wrote ſeveral learned treatiſes on ſubjects more curious than uſeful.—Moreri.

Rhese (John David), was born in the iſle of Angleſey in 1534. He became ſtudent of Chriſt church college, Oxford, and at the age of twenty-one went to Italy, where he took his doctor's degree in phyſic, and was ſo ſkilled in the Italian language as to be appointed moderator of the ſchool at Piſtoia. On his return to his native country he practiſed phyſic at Brecknock, and died there in 1609. He wrote De Italicæ Linguæ Pronunciatione; Cambro Britannicæ, Cymeræcæve Linguæ Inſtitutiones et rudimenta, &c.—Wood.

Rhodiginus (Ludovicus Cælius), was born at Rovigo in the ſtate of Venice in 1450. He taught Latin and Greek at Padua, where he died in 1525. His principal work is Antiquæ Lectiones, printed at Baſil in 1566, and at Frankfort in 1666.—Ibid.

Rhodius (Ambroſe), a mathematician, was born near Wittemberg in 1577. He became profeſſor of phyſic and mathematics at Anſlo in Norway, but in the confuſions of the country he was ſent to priſon, where he died in 1633. He wrote on the Tranſmigration of Souls, and other works.—Moreri.

Rhodius (John), a Daniſh phyſician, was born at Copenhagen in 1587, and died at Padua in 1659. His works are; 1. Notæ & Lexicon in Scribonius Largum de compoſitione medicamentorum, 4to; 2. Medicinal Obſervations, 8vo.; 3. A Treatiſe on Artificial Baths, 8vo.—Moreri.

Rhodoman (Laurence), rector of the univerſity of Wittemberg, was born at Saſſowerf, in Saxony, in 1546, and died in 1606. He wrote Hiſtoriæ Sacræ, 4to; and

lated Diodorus Siculus into Latin, with r works.—Ibid.

HOTENAMER (John), a painter, was at Munich in 1564. He ſettled at Ve-, and ſtudied after Tintoret. His pieces liſtinguiſhed by high finiſhing, and bril-t colouring. The time of his death is known.—De Piles.

IBADENEIRA (Peter), a Spaniſh jeſuit, a native of Toledo. He ſtudied at s, and at Padua, after which he taught oric with reputation at Palermo. He at Madrid in 1611, aged 84. His ks are, Lives of the Saints, folio, 1616; Lives of St. Ignatius Loyola, St. Francis Borgia, and of the Fathers Lainez and Sal-on; a Treatiſe of the Schiſm of England; ther entitled the Prince, full of bad poli-l maxims; and the Library of Writers ng the Jeſuits, 8vo.—Moreri.

RIBERA (Anaſtaſius-Pantaleon de), a niſh poet, called the Scarron of Spain, born at Madrid, and on account of his was entertained at the court of Philip . His poems, printed at Saragoſſa in 10, are of the burleſque kind. There a jeſuit of this name who was a profeſ-at Salamanca, where he died in 1591. wrote Commentaries on the Minor Pro-ts, fol; on the Goſpel of St. John; on Epiſtle to the Hebrews; and on the Apo-ypſe.—Moreri.

RICARD (Dominic), a French eccleſiaſtic, born at Toulouſe in 1743, and died at ris in 1803. He tranſlated the works of utarch into French with fidelity; and ote a poem entitled, the Sphere, enriched h curious notes.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

RICAUT or RYCAUT (ſir Paul), an Eng-h writer, was the ſon of ſir Peter Ricaut, ight. In 1661 he became ſecretary to e earl of Winchelſea, ambaſſador to the toman court, and while at Conſtantinople wrote the Preſent State of the Ottoman pire, printed at London in 1670, fol. d in 1675 in 8vo. He was conſul at Smyr-eleven years; and in 1685 he became ſe-etary for the provinces of Leinſter and onnaught, in Ireland. King William ap-inted him his reſident for the Hans towns, here he remained ten years. In 1700 he turned to England, and died the ſame year. is other works are, 1. A Continuation of nolles's Hiſtory of the Turks, folio.; 2. Continuation of Platina's Lives of the opes, fol.; 3 A tranſlation of Vega's oyal Commentaries of Peru, folio.—Biog. rit.

RICCATI (Vincent), a jeſuit, was born at aſtel-Franco in the territory of Treviſa. e became profeſſor of mathematics at Bo-gna, and publiſhed a learned work on the tegral Calculus, 3 vols. 4to. He died in 775, aged 68.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

RICCI (Matthew), a jeſuit, was born at facerata in 1552. He went miſſionary to e Indies, and having finiſhed his ſtudies Goa, was ſent to China, where on account of his ſkill in mathematics he obtained the favour of the emperor, and leave to build a church at Pekin. He died in that city in 1610. Several of his Letters and Memoirs on China have been printed.—Moreri.

RICCI (Michael Angelo), a cardinal, was born at Rome in 1619. He was a good mathematician, and diſtinguiſhed himſelf by an able treatiſe de Maximis et Minimis. Innocent XI. honoured him with the cardinalſhip in 1681; he died the year following.—Tiraboſchi.

RICCI (Sebaſtian), a painter, was born at Belluno in the Venetian territory in 1659. He viſited Vienna, Paris, and London, at all which places he acquired conſiderable diſtinction. He died at Venice in 1734. His nephew Marc Ricci, was a good painter of landſcape and hiſtory. He died in 1750.—D'Argenville.

RICCI (Laurence), an Italian jeſuit, and the laſt general of the order, was a native of Florence of a diſtinguiſhed family. He was elected general in 1758, but when the ſociety was ſuppreſſed in 1773, Ricci and ſome of his fraternity were confined in the caſtle of St. Angelo at Rome, where he died in 1775.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

RICCIO (Domenico), a painter of Verona, was born in 1494, and died in 1517. In a church at Verona is a fine picture by him of the gathering of the manna in the wilderneſs.—De Piles. Pilk.

RICCIOLI (John Baptiſt), a jeſuit, was born at Ferrara in 1598. He became profeſſor of divinity at Parma and Bologna, but he is known chiefly by his mathematical works, which are; 1. Geographiæ et Hydrographiæ, lib. xii. 1672; 2. Chronologia Reformata, folio; 3. Aſtronomia Vetus, 2 vols. folio.; 4. Aſtronomia Reformata, folio. He died in 1671.—Moreri.

RICCOBONI (Louis), an Italian actor and dramatic writer, was born at Modena. He performed at the Italian theatre in Paris ſome years, but in 1729 he renounced the ſtage from religious ſcruples. He died in 1753, aged 76. He wrote ſeveral comedies, and a Diſcourſe of the Reformation of the Theatre, 12mo.; Obſervations on Comedy, and on the Genius of Moliere, 12mo.; Hiſtorical Reflections on the Theatres of Europe, 8vo.; and a Hiſtory of the Italian Theatre, 8vo. His wife, madame Riccoboni, was a native of Paris, a good actreſs, and an ingenious writer. She wrote a number of novels in an agreeable ſtyle, printed together at Paris in 9 vols. 12mo. She died in diſtreſs in 1792.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

RICHARD I. king of England, ſurnamed Cœur de Lion, aſcended the throne on the death of his father Henry II. in 1189. His coronation was diſtinguiſhed by a maſſacre of the Jews. In 1190 Richard joined the croiſade with Philip-Auguſtus of France, but a diviſion taking place between the two princes, the latter returned to Europe. Richard remained in the Eaſt, where he diſplayed uncommon valour againſt Saladin, whom he defeated near Cæſarea, and having made a truce embarked in a veſſel which was ſhipwrecked on the coaſt of Italy. He then travelled in diſguiſe through part of Germany, but being diſcovered by Leopold, duke of Auſtria, he was made priſoner and ſent to the emperor Henry II. who kept him confined in a caſtle ſome time. At length he was ranſomed by his ſubjects for a large ſum. He landed at Sandwich in 1194, after which he was crowned a ſecond time. Philip-Auguſtus, having, contrary to treaty, ſeized on part of Normandy, Richard invaded France with a large army, but a peace was concluded in 1196. The war was renewed in 1199, and Richard, in beſieging the caſtle of Chalons, received a wound from an arrow, of which he died, aged 42. His valour was diſgraced by ambition and avarice. —Rapin. Hume.

Richard II. was the ſon of Edward, prince of Wales, commonly called the black prince, and ſucceeded Edward III. his grandfather, in 1377. In his minority he diſplayed remarkable promptitude in quelling the dangerous inſurrection headed by Wat the Tyler, in Smithfield. When that inſurgent was ſlain by Walworth, mayor of London, the young king, then about fifteen years of age, rode up to the irritated populace, and ſaid: "Follow your king, I will be your leader and redreſs your grievances." The people, ſtruck with aſtoniſhment, obeyed the call; and diſperſed quietly to their own homes, with the exception of a few ringleaders, who were executed. The remainder of this reign, however, was leſs fortunate. Diſcontents prevailed among the nobility, of which Henry, duke of Lancaſter, availed himſelf, and aſſumed the title of king. Richard was betrayed into his hands by the earl of Northumberland, in 1399, and confined in Pontefract caſtle, where he abdicated the throne in a written inſtrument, but was aſſaſſinated the ſame year.—Ibid.

Richard III. was the brother of Edward IV. and created duke of Glouceſter. He was deformed from the womb, but more depraved in his mind than his perſon. He cauſed his nephews Edward V. and Richard duke of York to be ſecretly murdered in the Tower, after which he procured himſelf to be proclaimed king, in 1483. The duke of Buckingham, who had aſſiſted him in his uſurpation, conſpired againſt him, but was taken priſoner and beheaded. Henry earl of Richmond, afterwards Henry VII. of the houſe of Lancaſter, was abroad, but returned privately and landed at Milford in Wales, where he was joined by a few followers, which ſoon increaſed. He then marched againſt the tyrant, whom he encountered at Boſworth-field, where Richard, after performing prodigies of valour, was ſlain, and his crown being found was placed on the head of Henry, Auguſt 22, 1485.—Ibid.

Richard (Thomas), a native of Devonſhire, and a benedictine monk in the abbey of Taviſtock. He tranſlated into Engliſh verſe Boetius's five books of the Conſolations of Philoſophy, printed in the abbey of Taviſtock in 1525.—Wood.

Richard (Martin,) a landſcape painter, was a native of Antwerp, and born with only his left arm; yet he became an excellent artiſt, and was much admired by Vandyke. He died in 1636, aged 45. His brother David Richard applied alſo to painting, but was inferior to Martin.—Pilk.

Richard (Nathaniel), a dramatic writer, was educated at Caius college, Cambridge, where he took his bachelor's degree in 1634. He wrote a tragedy entitled Meſſalina, and his poems were publiſhed in 1645.—Langbaine's Lives of Poets.

Richardson (Samuel), a printer and ingenious writer, was born in Derbyſhire in 1689. His education was confined, and in 1706 he was bound apprentice to Mr. Wilde, of Stationers' hall, and after the expiration of his time he worked as compoſitor and corrector of the preſs ſome years. At length he took up his freedom and ſet up buſineſs for himſelf, firſt in a court in Fleet-ſtreet, and afterwards in Saliſbury-ſquare. He became one of the principal in his profeſſion, and by the intereſt of Mr. Onſlow, ſpeaker of the houſe of commons, obtained the printing of the Journals of that houſe. In 1754 he was choſen maſter of the ſtationers' company; and in 1760 purchaſed a moiety of the patent of law printer to the king. In 1740 he publiſhed his Pamela, a novel which had uncommon ſucceſs, and encouraged the author to proceed in the ſame career. His next performance was Clariſſa Harlowe, which is eſteemed his maſterpiece, though his novel of Sir Charles Grandiſon poſſeſſes great beauties. Beſides theſe works, which have a fine moral tendency, Mr. Richardſon publiſhed a volume of Familiar Letters, for the uſe of young people; an edition of Æſop's Fables, with Reflections; and a paper in the Rambler. His correſpondence with perſons of eminence was publiſhed in 1804, with his life by Mrs. Barbauld, from whence this is taken. Richardſon poſſeſſed an amiable and friendly diſpoſition, and had a ſtrong ſenſe of religion. He died in 1761.

Richardson (John), a native of Cheſhire, was bred at Trinity college, Dublin, where he took the degree of doctor in divinity. He afterwards became biſhop of Ardagh, but on the breaking out of the Iriſh rebellion he was obliged to retire to London, where he died in 1654. He wrote Obſervations on the Old Teſtament, in one volume, folio.—Wood.

Richardson (Jonathan), an Engliſh portrait painter, was born in 1665. He was the pupil of Riley, whoſe niece he married. He was, however, but a middling artiſt, though a worthy and ingenious man. Mr. Richardſon aſſiſted his ſon in publiſhing an account of ſtatues, bas reliefs, drawings, and pictures in Italy, 8vo. 1722. He died in 1745. He publiſhed the life of Milton, 8vo.

younger Richardſon wrote the life of his er, and died in 1771.—Gen. Biog. Dict.
pole.

ICHARDSON (Joſeph), a lawyer and
, was born at Hexham in Northumber-
, and in 1774 entered of St. John's col-
, Cambridge, from whence he removed he Middle Temple, and was called to bar. He was brought into parliament he duke of Northumberland, but did not e any diſtinguiſhed figure as a ſenator or iſter. He died in 1803. Mr. Richard-wrote Criticiſms on the Rolliad, and Pro-onary Odes for the Laureatſhip, two ſa-al works on public characters, which e popular when publiſhed. Beſides theſe was the author of the Fugitive, a comedy, formed with ſucceſs.—Gent. Mag.

ICHELET (Cæſar Peter), a French er, was born in 1681 at Cheminon in mpagne, and died at Paris in 1698. He piled a curious Dictionary of the French guage, the beſt edition of which is that Lyons in 1759, 3 vols. folio. He alſo liſhed a Dictionary of Rhimes, and other ks.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

ICHELIEU (Armand Du Pleſſis de), a brated cardinal and ſtateſman, was born a diſtinguiſhed family at Paris in 1585.
r completing his ſtudies at the Sorbonne went to Rome, and in 1607 was made op of Lucon. On his return to France advanced himſelf into favour by an inſiting addreſs, and for his eloquence was inted almoner to Mary de Medicis, by ſe favour, in 1616, he obtained the ap-tment of ſecretary of ſtate; but the death is friend the marſhal D'Ancre occaſioned temporary diſgrace, on which he went to gnon, but Louis XIII. recalled him to the iſtry, and he ſoon took the lead in the agement of public affairs. Having a at hatred to the proteſtants, he preſſed the e of Rochelle in perſon, and by his vigo-s efforts compelled it to ſurrender in 1628.
er reducing this important place he march-againſt the Huguenots in other provinces, by his promptitude and ſkill reſtored nquillity to the kingdom. He next comnded the army in Italy againſt the Auſns, where he was unſucceſsful. He was in in diſgrace for ſome time, but at length overed the royal favour, which he ened during the remainder of his life. Grey XV. made him a cardinal, and he was o created a duke and peer of France. Nothſtanding his ambition and cruelty, he l great qualities. He founded the French démy; eſtabliſhed the royal botanical gar-, and was a liberal patron of men of let-
s. He died in 1642. His works are,
ThePolitical Teſtament, 2 vols. 8vo.;
Method of Controverſies concerning Points
Faith; 3. Defence of the Catholic Faith; Chriſtian Inſtruction; 5. Perfection of a riſtian; 6. A Journal, which is very cu-us; 7. Letters, Relations, &c.—Life of belieu by Le Clerc.

RICHER (Edmund), a French eccleſiaſtic
l doctor of the Sorbonne, who became a furious defender of the faction of the league, and vindicated the principle of aſſaſſinating heretical princes. He afterwards aſſerted with equal zeal the ſuperiority of councils over popes, which occaſioned conſiderable controverſy. His book on eccleſiaſtical power was proſcribed at Rome, and Richer was obliged to make a retractation. He died in 1631. His principal works are; 1. Vindiciæ Doctrinæ majorum de Auctoritate Eccleſiæ in rebus Fidei et Morum, 4to; 2. De Poteſtate Eccleſiæ in rebus temporalibus, 4to; 3. Hiſtory of General Councils, 3 vols. 4to.; 4. Obſtetrix Animorum.—Dupin. Moreri.

RICHER (Henry), was born in 1685. He was deſigned for the law, which profeſſion he renounced and applied wholly to literature. He died at Paris in 1748. His works are, 1. A Tranſlation of Virgil's Eclogues; 2. A Collection of Fables; 3. The Life of Macænas, with notes; 4. Two Tragedies, Sabrinus and Coriolanus.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

RICIUS (Paul), a converted Jew in the 16th century. He was a German, and taught philoſophy at Pavia with great reputation. The emperor Maximilian appointed him his phyſician. He had a controverſy with Eccius on the queſtion whether the heavenly bodies are animated, which Ricius maintained in the affirmative. He wrote, De Cæleſti Agriculturæ, folio; Talmudica Commentariola, quarto; De LXXIII. Moſaicæ Sanctionis Edictis, 4to. &c.—Moreri.

RICOBONI (Anthony), profeſſor of eloquence at Padua, where he died in 1599. aged 58. His works are, 1. Hiſtorical Commentaries; 2. Treatiſe on Rhetoric, 8vo.; 3. Hiſtory of the Univerſity of Padua; 4. Commentaries on ſome of the Works of Ariſtotle and Cicero; all written in pure Latin.—Tiraboſchi.

RIDER (William), an Engliſh divine, ſeveral years under maſter of St. Paul's ſchool, and lecturer of St. Vedaſt, Foſter-lane. He publiſhed a Hiſtory of England; a Commentary on the Bible; and other compilations. He died in 1785.—Gent. Mag.

RIDGLEY (Thomas), a diſſenting miniſter, was born in 1670 at London, in which city he became paſtor of an independent congregation, and obtained a doctor's degree from Scotland. He wrote, a Body of Divinity, in folio, and died in 1737.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

RIDLEY (Nicholas), a learned biſhop and martyr, was born in Northumberland in 1500, and educated firſt at Newcaſtle, and next at Pembroke-hall, Cambridge, where he was elected fellow in 1524. His great abilities and piety recommended him to the notice of archbiſhop Cranmer, by whoſe intereſt he was made chaplain to the king, and choſen maſter of Pembroke-hall. In the reign of Edward VI. he was nominated to the ſee of Rocheſter, and had a principal ſhare in framing the liturgy, articles, and homilies. In 1550 he was tranſlated to the biſhopric of London, and by his intereſt with the young king he obtained the foundation of thoſe noble charities of Chriſt's hoſpital, St. Bartholomew's, St. Thomas's in Southwark, and Bridwell. On the deceaſe of Edward, he unfortunately joined the friends of lady Jane Grey, for which, and his zeal in the reformation, he was by queen Mary ſent to Oxford, to diſpute with ſome of the popiſh biſhops, and on his refuſing to recant was burnt there oppoſite Baliol college, in company with biſhop Latimer, in 1555. He wrote againſt Tranſubſtantiation, and after his death were printed his Sermons and Letters.—Biog. Brit. Life by Dr. G. Ridley.

Ridley (ſir Thomas), a learned civilian, was of the ſame family as the preceding, but born at Ely. He was educated at Eton, and next at King's college, Cambridge. He afterwards became a maſter in chancery, and vicar-general to the archbiſhop of Canterbury. He died in 1628. He wrote a View of Civil and Eccleſiaſtical Law, 8vo.—Wood.

Ridley (Gloſter), an Engliſh divine, was deſcended from biſhop Ridley, whoſe Life he wrote. He obtained his chriſtian name from being born on board the Gloſter Eaſt Indiaman at ſea in 1702. He received his education at Wincheſter ſchool, from whence he was ſent to New college, Oxford, where he was choſen fellow, and in 1729 took his degree of bachelor of laws. His only church preferment for a long time was the college living of Weſton, in Norfolk, and the donative of Poplar, in Middleſex. At laſt archbiſhop Secker gave him a prebend in the cathedral of Saliſbury, and conferred on him the degree of doctor of laws. He died in 1774. Beſides the Life of his anceſtor he wrote an Anſwer to the Confeſſional, in three Letters; Sermons at Lady Moyer's Lectures; Melampus, a Poem; and two Tragedies which were never printed. His ſon James, who was educated at Wincheſter, became fellow of New college, Oxford. He obtained the chapelry of Rumford in Eſſex, and wrote the Tales of the Genii, 2 vols., a work of merit; alſo a novel entitled, James Lovegrove. He died young. —Anecd of Bowyer.

Ridolfi (Claudio), a painter of Verona, was born in 1560, and died in 1644. His portraits and hiſtorical pictures poſſeſs great excellence.—D'Argenville.

Ridpath (George), a Scotch miſcellaneous writer, was born in Stirlingſhire in 1663, and died in 1717. He was one of the clerks of ſeſſion.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Riedesel (John Herman, baron de), miniſter from the king of Pruſſia to the court of Vienna, where he died in 1785, aged 45. He publiſhed his Travels in Greece, in the German language.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

Riegels (M.), governor of the pages at the court of Copenhagen, publiſhed an excellent Hiſtory of Denmark. He died in 1802, in his 74th year.—Ibid.

Rienzi (Nicholas Gabrino de), an obſcure Roman in the 14th century, who had an excellent education, which was improved by a ſtrong memory and vigorous underſtanding. He was ſent by his fellow citizens to Clement VI. at Avignon in order to prevail with that pontiff to return to Rome. His eloquence pleaſed the pope, though it did not perſuade him. Gabrino, on his return, formed the deſign of making himſelf maſter of Rome, with the title of Tribune. Having gained ſome partizans he entered the capitol, harangued the people, and elevated the ſtandard of liberty. For ſome time he was ſucceſsful, his government was popular, and even Petrarch wrote in his favour, comparing him to Brutus. At length a conſpiracy was formed againſt him, on which he fled, but was taken and put to death in 1354.—Life by Brumoy and Cerceau.

Rigaltius (Nicholas) or Rigault, a learned Frenchman, was born at Paris in 1577. He received his education among the jeſuits, who endeavoured to prevail on him to enter into their order, which he refuſed, and embraced the profeſſion of an advocate. On Caſaubon's going to England, Rigault ſucceeded him as librarian to the king, who appointed him procureur-general of the ſupreme court of Nanci. He was afterwards intendant of Metz. He died at Toul in 1654. His works are, 1. Excellent editions of Cyprian, Turtullian, and Minutius's Felix, with Obſervations and Notes; 2. Continuation of Thuanuſs's Hiſtory; 3. De Verbis quæ in Novellis Conſtitutionibus poſt Juſtinianum occurrunt Gloſſarium, 4to.; 4. Diatriba de Satira Juvenalis; 5. Funus Paraſyticum; 6. Auctores finium Regundorum; 7. De Modo fœnori Propoſito, &c.—Moreri.

Rigaud (Hyacinth), an eminent painter, was born at Perpignan in 1663. He was director of the academy of painting, and Louis XV. gave him letters of nobility, and the order of St. Michael. He died at Paris in 1743. He has been called the Vandyck of France —D'Argenville.

Riley (John), a painter, was born at London in 1646. After the death of ſir Peter Lely he gained conſiderable reputation and employment as a portrait painter. He died in 1691.—Vertue.

Riminaldi (Orazio), an hiſtorical painter, was born at Piſa in 1598, and died in 1638.—Felibien.

Rincon (Antonio del), a Spaniſh painter, was born at Guadalaxara, and died in 1500.—Ibid.

Rinuccini (Octavio), an Italian poet, was born at Florence, and accompanied Mary de Medicis to France. He invented operas, though there are ſome who attribute the contrivance to a Roman gentleman named Emilio del Cavalero. The operas of Rinuccini are greatly admired; and his poetry is elegant. He died at Florence in 1621 —Tiraboſchi.

Riolan (John), a phyſician, was born at Amiens, and died at Paris in 1605. He was a zealous defender of the doctrine of Hippocrates againſt the chemiſts, and left ſeveral works on medicine and anatomy, printed at Paris in 1610 in folio. His ſon John Riolan was alſo an able phyſician at Paris, where he died in 1657. He wrote, 1. Compa-veteris Medicinæ cum novâ, 12mo.; hola Anatomica, 8vo.; reprinted after- in folio, under the title of Anatomia oris Humani; 3. Gigantomachia, 8vo. was on the subject of a discovery of the of pretended giants.—Moreri.

RPLEY (George), an English alchemist, died in 1490. He wrote a work enti- "A Compound of Alchymie, &c." and rum Potabile, or the universal Medi- "—Ashmole Theat. Chymic.

RPERDA (John William, baron de,) an ordinary character, was born of a no- family in Groningen, and served some as colonel of infantry in the Dutch ser- In 1715 he was nominated ambassa- to the court of Spain, where he gained favour of Philip V., who made him a duke of the kingdom, and minister of and finances. But afterwards he fell disgrace, and was imprisoned at Segovia. escaped from thence, and going through tugal came to England, from whence he to Holland. Lastly he made a voyage Morocco, where he turned Mahometan, endeavoured to introduce a new religion ded of christianity, judaism, and mo- medanism. He died at Tetuan in 1737. Nouv. Dict. Hist.

RISDON (Tristram), a topographical wri- was born at Winscot, in Devonshire, t 1580. He was educated at Oxford, died at his family seat in 1640. He e the History of his native county; y copies of which are extant in MS. re was printed a mutilated edition of it 1714, in 2 vols. 8vo. The Chorogra- l Description was printed from the ori- l in one volume, quarto, in 1735.— ce's Worthies of Devon.

RISLEY (Thomas), a puritan divine, was at Warrington, in Lancashire, in 1630, educated at Pembroke college, Oxford, re he obtained a fellowship, of which he deprived in 1662 for nonconformity. He in 1716. He wrote a book called the ed Family, 8vo. 1700.—Calamy.

RITSON (Joseph), an English lawyer and quary, was born at Stockton-upon-Tees 1752. He became a conveyancer in Gray's , and in 1785 purchased the office of bailiff of the liberties of the Savoy. He a man of extreme irascibility of temper self-conceited. He died in 1803. His ks are, Observations on Johnson and Ste- 's Edition of Shakespeare; 2. Cursory Cri- ms on Malone's edition of Shakespeare; 3. ervations on Warton's History of English try; 4. Descent of the Crown of England; partan Manual; 6. Collection of English gs, 3 vols. and of Scotch Songs, 2 vols.; nglish Anthology; 8. Metrical Roman- 3 vols.; 9. Bibliographia Poetica; 10. atise on Abstinence from Animal Food. had a most uncouth and whimsical mode rthography.—Gent. Mag.

RITTENHOUSE (David), an American as- omer, was a native of Philadelphia, and ed his apprenticeship to a clock-maker. He was also a farmer, but pursued his mathematical and astronomical studies with such success that in 1769 the American philosophical society requested him to make observations on the transit of Venus over the sun's disk, which he performed with great accuracy. He succeeded Franklin as president of that society, and died in 1796, aged 64. Several of his papers are in the American Transactions.—Gent. Mag. Month. Mag.

RITTERSHUSIUS (Conrad), a German civilian, was born in 1560 at Brunswick, and died professor of law at Altorf in 1613. He published an edition of Oppian's Cynegeticon, and other works. His son Nicolas became professor of law at the same university, and died in 1670. He published Genealogiæ Imperatorum, Regum, Ducum, Comitum, &c. 7 vols. folio.—Moreri.

RIVALZ (Anthony), an historical and portrait painter, was born in 1667 at Thoulouse, and died in 1735. He studied under his father, and afterwards at Rome, where he obtained a prize of the academy of St. Luke.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

RIVAROL (Anthony de), a French writer, was born in Languedoc in 1757, and died at Berlin in 1801. He translated Dante's Poem on Hell, but his version is not exact. His other works are, a Discourse on the Universality of the French Language, crowned by the academy of Berlin in 1784; Letters on Religion and Morality; a Little Almanack of Great Men, a satire; Letters to the French Nobility, 1792, 8vo.; the Political Life of La Fayette; Prospectus of a new Dictionary of the French Language, with a Discourse on the intellectual and moral Faculties of Man, 4to; Poems.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

RIVET DE LA GRANGE (Anthony), a learned benedictine, was born in Poitou in 1683, and died in 1749. He employed thirty years of his life in writing the Literary History of France, of which he published 9 vols. in 4to.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

RIVINUS (Andrew), whose true name was Barchmann, a physician, was born at Hall in Saxony, in 1600. He was professor of poetry and philosophy at Leipsic, where he died in 1656. He wrote Remarks upon the ancient Christian Poets, and other pieces printed under the title of Philo-Physiologica, 1656, 4to. His other works are, 1. Veterum bonorum Scriptorum de Medicina Collectanea, 8vo.; 2. Mysteria Medico Physica, 12mo.—Moreri.

RIVINUS (Augustus-Quirinus), professor of physic and botany at Leipsic, where he died in 1722, aged 70. His works are, 1. Introductio in rem Herbariam, folio, with plates; 2. Ordo Plantarum quæ sunt flore irregulari monopetalo-tetrapetalo-pentapetalo, folio; 3. Censura Medicamentorum Officinalium, 4to.; 4. Dissertationes Medicæ, 4to; 5. Manuductio ad Chymiam pharmaceuticam, 8vo.; 6. Notitia Morborum.—Ib.

RIZZIO or RICCIO (David), an Italian musician, was born at Turin. He played and ſung with equal excellence, and accompanying the ambaſſador of the duke of Savoy to the court of Mary, queen of Scotland, that princeſs ſhewed him great favour, and made him ſecretary for foreign languages. This gave ſuch offence to Henry Darnley, her huſband, that he and his aſſociates aſſaſſinated Rizzio in her preſence in 1566.—[See MARY.]

ROBERT, king of France, called the ſage and devout, was crowned in 996, on the death of Hugh Capet, his father. He married his couſin Bertha, but pope Gregory V. declared the marriage void, and excommunicated the king, who took for his ſecond wife the daughter of the count of Arles and Provence. He died in 1031.—Henault. Millot.

ROBERT BRUCE, a Scotch gentleman, who oppoſed John Baliol for the crown of Scotland, which was awarded to the latter by Edward I. of England. When Baliol was depoſed, Bruce was elected king, and in 1314 defeated the Engliſh in the battle of Bannockburn. He afterwards made peace with Edward III. who renounced all claim to Scotland, for himſelf and his heirs. Bruce died in 1329, and on his death-bed deſired that his heart might be carried to the Holy Land and depoſited in the holy ſepulchre.—Buchanan.

ROBERTELLS (Francis), profeſſor of philoſophy and rhetoric at Padua, where he died in 1567. He wrote "Commentaries on ſome of the Greek and Latin Poets," and other works.—Moreri.

ROBERTSON (George) a landſcape painter, was born in London. He made the tour of Italy, where he ſtudied nature as well as the beſt maſters. His manner bears the neareſt reſemblance to that of Salvator Roſa. He died in 1788.—Europ. Mag.

ROBERTSON (William), a divine, was born at Dublin in 1705, and educated at Glaſgow, after which he obtained ſome preferment in Ireland, which he reſigned on turning Arian in 1764. He publiſhed an Apology for his Faith and Conduct, and having obtained a doctor's degree from Glaſgow was preſented by the company of merchant taylors in London to the maſterſhip of the grammar-ſchool at Wolverhampton, where he died in 1783.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

ROBERTSON (Joſeph), an ingenious divine, was born at Knipe, in Weſtmoreland, in 1726, and educated at Appleby ſchool, from whence, in 1746, he removed to Queen's college, Oxford, where he took his degrees in arts, and on entering into orders was preſented to the vicarage of Herriard, in Hampſhire. In 1764 he engaged as a writer in the Critical Review, and continued in that capacity till 1785. In 1770 he was preſented to the rectory of Sutton, in Eſſex, and in 1779 to the vicarage of Horncaſtle in Lincolnſhire. In 1782 he publiſhed an Introduction to the Study of Polite Literature, a ſmall but uſeful volume. This was followed in 1785 by his Eſſay on Punctuation, a work of great merit. In 1788 appeared his Diſſertation on the Parian Chronicle, which performance did not receive the encouragement it deſerved. In 1795 he publiſhed a new tranſlation of Telemachus, with Notes and the Life of the Author. In 1798 he printed an Eſſay on the Education of Young Ladies, and the year following an Eſſay on the Nature of the Engliſh Verſe. He died in 1802.—Monthly Mag.

ROBERTSON (William), an hiſtorian and divine of the church of Scotland, was born in 1721, and educated at the univerſity of Edinburgh, where he took the degree of doctor in divinity, and having entered into orders became miniſter of the Grey Friars church in that city. He was alſo appointed one of his majeſty's chaplains in ordinary for Scotland, and was offered conſiderable preferment in the church of England, which he declined. His firſt performance was the Hiſtory of Charles V., a work which diſplayed ſuperior powers of diſcrimination, and written in a very luminous ſtyle. For this he was appointed royal hiſtoriographer for Scotland. He was alſo elected principal of the univerſity of Edinburgh. His other works were, the Hiſtory of Scotland, not altogether void of partiality; the Hiſtory of America; an Hiſtorical Diſquiſition concerning India; and a Sermon before the Scotch Society for promoting Chriſtian knowlege. Dr. Robertſon was a man of amiable manners and brilliant accompliſhments. He died in 1793.—Encycl. Brit. Suppl.

ROBERVAL (Gilles Perſonne, ſieur de), was born in the dioceſe of Beauvais in 1602. He became profeſſor of mathematics at Paris, where he acquired the eſteem of Gaſſendus and Morin. He ſucceeded the latter in the mathematical chair of the royal college. His principal works are, 1. A Treatiſe of Mechanics, inſerted in the harmony of Father Merſennus; 2. An edition of Ariſtarchus Samius. He died in 1675.—Moreri.

ROBESPIERRE (Maximilian-Iſidore), was born at Arrat, of a poor family, in 1759, and brought up at the expenſe of the biſhop of the dioceſe. After finiſhing his ſtudies at Paris he entered upon the profeſſion of the law, but not with ſucceſs. On the breaking out of the revolution he became a member of the National Aſſembly, and commenced a newſpaper called L'Union ou Journal de la Liberté, conducted with extreme violence. He became the chief of the jacobins, and at length obtained the ſupreme command in France. To maintain his power he had recourſe to the moſt cruel expedients. The priſons were crowded with unfortunate victims of all ages and of both ſexes. Numbers were daily put to death, and the ſtreets were deluged with blood. At length a conſpiracy was formed againſt the tyrant, and he was accuſed in the convention. An attempt was made by the jacobins to ſupport their chief, but in vain. After being wounded by a piſtol ſhot which broke his jaw, he was led he guillotine with twenty-two of his accplices, July 28th, 1794.—Nouv. Dict. Hist. ed. of the French Republic.

Robin Hood, a captain of a band of robs who made the foreſt of Sherwood, in ttinghamſhire, their haunt, from whence y made excurſions into different parts of gland. Some writers affirm that this was ame aſſumed by Robert, earl of Hunting, who was baniſhed from court in the n of Richard I. Robin Hood had a celeted ſecond under him called Little John, they continued their marauding courſe of without being brought to juſtice from 39 to 1247.—Stowe's Chron.

Robins (Benjamin), an ingenious mathetician, was born at Bath in 1707, of pats who were quakers, which profeſſion he tted and ſettled in London as teacher of thematics. He diſtinguiſhed himſelf by futing a Memoir of Bernouilli's on the rce of Bodies in Motion, and by a demonation of the laſt propoſition of Newton's eatiſe on Quadratures. In 1742 he pubhed his Principles of Gunnery, the reſult his own experiments. On the return of mmodore Anſon from his voyage round the rld Mr. Robins was employed to prepare r narrative of that famous expedition for r preſs, which he executed in an admirable nner, though the work paſſes under the me of Mr. Walker, chaplain of the Cenrion. Our author alſo contributed to the provements in the royal obſervatory at eenwich, and in 1749 was appoiated engneer-general to the Eaſt India company. r died at Madras in 1571.—Martin's Biog. il.

Robinson (Robert), a baptiſt teacher, s born at Swaffham, in Norfolk, and bred barber, but being converted by Whitfield, e celebrated methodiſt, he became a zeaus preacher among the calviniſts. He afrwards turned baptiſt and officiated to a conegation of that ſect at Cambridge, where wrote ſeveral pieces, among which was a indication of Chriſt's Divinity. He alſo anſlated into Engliſh Saurin's Sermons, and aude's Eſſay on the Compoſition of a Seron. Before his death he turned Socinian, d died at Birmingham ſuddenly in 1790. -Life by Dyer.

Robinson (Tancred), an eminent Engh phyſician and naturaliſt, was fellow of e royal ſociety and of the college of phyſians. He died in 1748, at a very advanced ge. He wrote ſome medical books and pats on natural hiſtory.—Mortimer.

Robinson (Mary), an ingenious Engliſh dy, was born at Briſtol, where ſhe was ducated in the ſeminary kept by the celerated Miſs More and her ſiſters. Her maiden ame was Darby, and her father was captain f a ſhip. At the age of fifteen ſhe married attorney of the name of Robinſon, which recipitate ſtep appears to have embittered e reſt of her life Being reduced in cirumſtances ſhe had recourſe to the ſtage, and made her firſt appearance at Drury lane in the character of Juliet, in which ſhe was inſtructed by Mr. Garrick. Her reception was very flattering, and ſhe continued to perform in various characters till her repreſentation of Perdita in the Winter's Tale attracted the admiration of an illuſtrious perſonage, in conſequence of which ſhe quitted the ſtage. A ſeparation afterwards took place, and ſhe received a penſion. In 1784 ſhe had the misfortune to be attacked by a violent rheumatiſm, which progreſſively deprived her of the uſe of her limbs. She died in 1800. Mrs. Robinſon wrote a number of poetical pieces under the name of Laura Maria; beſides which ſhe was the author of Vancenza, a Romance; Poems, 2 vols. 8vo.; and Nobody, an unſucceſsful farce.—Memoirs written by herſelf.

Robinson (Richard), archbiſhop of Armagh and baron Rokeby, was born in Yorkſhire in 1709, He was educated at Weſtminſter ſchool, from whence he was elected to Chriſt church, Oxford, after which he became chaplain to archbiſhop Blackburne of York, who gave him a prebend in his cathedral. In 1751 he went with the duke of Dorſet to Ireland, and was preferred to the ſee of Killala, from whence in 1759 he was tranſlated to Leighlin and Ferns, and in 1761 to Kildare. In 1765 he was advanced to the primacy, and in 1777 created a peer. He built an elegant palace in his dioceſe of Armagh, with an obſervatory. He alſo founded a ſchool, and built four new churches. He died in 1794.—Europ. Mag.

Robison (John), profeſſor of natural philoſophy at Edinburgh, where he obtained the degree of doctor of laws. He became director of the marine cadet academy, at Cronſtadt in Ruſſia; and on his return to his native country, was appointed profeſſor of chemiſtry at Glaſgow, from whence he removed to Edinburgh, where he died in 1805. Dr. Robiſon publiſhed, in 1797, a book entitled, "Proofs of a Conſpiracy," in which he developed the cauſes of the Revolution in France, and proved that it was the reſult of an organized ſyſtem formed by French and German Infidels, to overturn by means of ſecret ſocieties, ſocial order and religion. This work excited conſiderable notice and controverſy. He was alſo the author of the Elements of Mechanical Philoſophy; and ſome articles in the Encyclopædia Britannica.—Monthly Mag.

Rochefort (William de), a French writer, was born at Lyons in 1731, and died in 1788. He was a member of the academy of inſcriptions, and belles lettres, and publiſhed a tranſlation of Sophocles, faithful and elegant. He wrote alſo a Refutation of Mirabaud's Syſtem of Nature, and other works.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

Rochefoucault (Francis, duke of), an eminent French writer, was born in 1603. He diſplayed great talents in a military capacity in the war of the Fronde, and for ſome time loſt his ſight by the blow of a muſquet. One of his ſons was ſlain at the paſſage of the Rhine, and another ſeverely wounded. The duke de Rochefoucault, however, is moſtly known as an elegant writer. His works are, 1. Memoirs of the Regency of Anne of Auſtria, 2 vols. 12mo.; 2. Reflections and Maxims, often printed in one ſmall volume. He died in 1680.—Moreri.

Rochester (John Wilmot, earl of), a celebrated Engliſh nobleman, was born in Oxfordſhire in 1648. He had a liberal education, and poſſeſſed uncommon powers of wit and a fertility of imagination; but he diſgraced his fine qualities by the moſt diſſolute principles and licentious conduct. He ſhortened his days by intemperance, but died very penitent in 1680. His ſatirical poems are keen, but their obſcenity and impiety render them exceſſively diſguſting.—See his Life by Burnet.

Rodney (George Bridges, lord), a gallant Engliſh admiral, was born of an ancient family in Somerſetſhire about 1718. He entered early into the navy, and diſtinguiſhed himſelf in ſeveral actions. In 1759 he obtained a flag, and was employed to bombard Havre-de-Grace. In 1761 he was ſent againſt Martinico, and for his ſervices was created a knight of the bath. Owing to a violent electioneering conteſt for Northampton, and other cauſes, he was reduced to ſuch a ſtate of embarraſſment as to be obliged to reſide on the Continent, where, in the American war, he was tempted by the count de Sartine by brilliant offers to enter into the French ſervice. Theſe overtures he refuſed, of which Sartine liberally informed the Britiſh government, by whom ſir George was recalled home, and obtained a command. In 1780 he defeated the Spaniſh fleet, and took ſeveral ſhips; this was ſoon after followed by a more ſplendid victory, and the capture of the Spaniſh admiral don Juan de Langara. But the moſt important exploit of this brave officer was the defeat of the French fleet under count de Graſſe in the Weſt Indies, April 12, 1782, in which the French admiral and a number of his ſhips were taken. For this he was created a peer, and obtained a penſion. His lordſhip died in 1792.—Annual Regiſter.

Rodolph I. of Hapſburg, emperor of Germany, ſurnamed the Clement, was elected in 1273. He defeated Ottocar, king of Bohemia, who did him homage; but afterwards renewing the war, Ottocar loſt his kingdom and his life. Rodolph died in 1291, aged 73.—Univ. Hiſt.

Rodolph II. ſon of the emperor Maximilian II. was born in 1552, and became king of Hungary in 1572; of Bohemia in 1575; elected king of the Romans the ſame year; and in 1576 aſſumed the imperial throne. His reign was unfortunate: the Turks ravaged his territories; and his brother Matthias having revolted againſt him obtained the kingdoms of Hungary and Bohemia. Rodolph was, however, a patron of ſcience, and had ſome ſkill in aſtronomy. He died in 1612.—Ibid.

Roe (ſir Thomas), an able ſtateſman, was born at Low-Layton, in Eſſex, about 1580, and educated at Magdalen college, Oxford. In 1614 he was ſent ambaſſador to the great mogul, at whoſe court he remained near four years, of which embaſſy he publiſhed a journal. In 1621 he went in the ſame character to the grand ſeignior; and his conduct proved of great advantage to the Engliſh commerce. During his reſidence in the Eaſt he made a large collection of valuable manuſcripts in the Greek and Oriental languages, which, in 1628, he preſented to the Bodleian library. He alſo brought over the famous Alexandrian MS. of the New Teſtament, ſent from Cyril Lucar, patriarch of Conſtantinople, to Charles I. In 1629 he was ſent to negotiate peace between the kings of Poland and Sweden, in which he ſucceeded. In 1641 he went ambaſſador to the diet of Ratiſbon; and on his return was made a privy counſellor and chancellor of the garter. He died in 1644. Beſides the relation of his travels, which is very curious, there are in print of his, Speeches in Parliament; Account of his Negotiations at the Porte; and a Diſcourſe on the King of Spain's ſurpriſing the Valteline.—Biog. Brit.

Roemer (Olaus), a Daniſh aſtronomer, was born at Arrhus, in Jutland, in 1644, and educated at Copenhagen. On viſiting Paris he became mathematical tutor to the Dauphin; but in 1681 he was recalled by the king of Denmark, who appointed him profeſſor of aſtronomy at Copenhagen, where he died in 1710. His obſervations, under the title of Baſis Aſtronomiæ, were printed in 1735, 4to.—Moreri.

Roepel (Conrad), a Dutch painter, was born at the Hague in 1677. He excelled in painting fruits and flowers, and died in 1748. —Pilkington.

Roestraeten (Peter), a portrait painter, was born at Haerlem in 1698. He alſo painted repreſentations of muſical inſtruments, vaſes, china ware, agates, and ſhells. —Ibid.

Roger I. king of Sicily, was born in 1097. He eſpouſed the cauſe of Anacletus the anti pope, and took Innocent II. priſoner, whom he releaſed on condition of being acknowleged in his newly-acquired dominions. He died in 1154.—Univ. Hiſt.

Roger (of Hexham), prior of Hexham about 1138. He wrote a Hiſtory of the Campaign of the Scotch Army under King David, when the battle of the ſtandard was fought.—Gen. Hiſt. Dict.

Rogers (Captain Woods), an Engliſh navigator, who ſailed in a private ſhip of war from Briſtol againſt the Spaniards in the South Sea; in which voyage he circumnavigated the globe, and publiſhed an Account of his Adventures on his return in 1711. He died in 1732.

ROGERS (John), an Engliſh divine, was ucated at Cambridge, and became chaplain the factory at Antwerp, where he aſſiſted ndal and Coverdale in tranſlating the Bible o Engliſh. In the reign of Edward VI. returned to England, and obtained a pre- d in St. Paul's cathedral, where he was a quent and zealous preacher. He was the t perſon executed in the ſucceeding reign religion, being burnt at the ſtake in ithfield in 1555.—Fox's Acts and Mon.

ROGERS (John), a learned divine, was n at Enſham, in Oxfordſhire, in 1679, educated at Corpus-chriſti college, of ich he became fellow. He wrote an able atiſe on the Viſibility of the Church inſt Hoadley; four volumes of Sermons; he was alſo the author of a piece in an- r to Collins's Scheme of Prophecy. Dr. ers obtained the living of St. Giles's, pplegate, and died in 1729.—Gen. Hiſt.

OGHMAN (Roland), an eminent land- e painter, was born at Amſterdam in 7, and died in 1686.—Houbraken.

OHAN (Henry, duke of), prince of Leon, born at the caſtle of Blein, in Brittany, 9. He diſtinguiſhed himſelf by his bravery he ſiege of Amiens, and thereby obtained friendſhip of Henry IV. He became the f of the Huguenots in the reign of Louis . but after the taking of Rochelle and eſtabliſhment of peace in 1629 he retired enice, where he was choſen generaliſſimo e armies of the republic againſt the im- liſts; but he was recalled by the king, employed him in the Griſons againſt the nans and Spaniards. But the duke in gave up the command, and went to va. He afterwards had the regiment of u, at the head of which he was wounded 38, and died ſoon after. He wrote the eſts of Princes, printed at Cologne in , 12mo.; the Perfect Captain, or an dgment of Cæſar's Commentaries, ; On the Government of the thirteen ons; and Memoirs, 2 vols. 12mo. The erformance is curious, and has gone gh many editions. Anne de Roban, of the duke, was a woman of fine ge- and wrote ſome poems of merit. She cquainted with the hebrew language.— i.

HAULT (James), a French philoſopher, orn at Amiens in 1620. He ſtudied at and became a zealous defender of the ian ſyſtem, of which he publiſhed a r view in 2 volumes. Of this work amuel Clarke gave an edition, with adapting it to the Newtonian ſyſtem. been tranſlated into Engliſh, in 2 vols. Rohault was alſo the author of Ele- of Mathematics; and a Treatiſe on nics. He died in 1675.—Moreri.

AND DE LA PLATIERE (J. M.) was t Villefranche of a reduced family. s deſigned for the church, but diſliking rofeſſion, he left his native place and went to Nantes with an intention of going to the Indies, but was prevented by the bad ſtate of his health. From thence he went to Rouen, where he was employed by ſome relations who were engaged in trade. For his commercial abilities he became inſpector-general of the manufactories of Picardy, and afterwards of thoſe of Lyons, in which ſituation he formed an intimacy with Briſſot, and in 1789 was nominated deputy for the city of Lyons to the conſtituent aſſembly. In 1792 he became miniſter of the interior, but did not long retain that ſituation. When the party of Girondiſts to which he belonged was proſcribed, he fled from Paris and retired to Rouen, where he ſtabbed himſelf in 1793. He wrote ſome works on the cotton and linen manufactures; Letters from Switzerland, Italy, Sicily, and Malta, 6 vols.; Dictionary of Manufactures and the Arts depending on them, 3 vols. 4to, &c.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt. Memoirs of Madame Roland.

ROLAND (Marie-Jane-Phlipon), the wife of the preceding, was born at Paris in 1756. Her father was an engraver named Phlipon, who was eminent in his profeſſion, and gave her an excellent education. At the age of twenty-five ſhe married M. Roland, though there was a great diſparity in their ages. She rendered important ſervices to him in his capacity as miniſter, and moſt of the official writings which he publiſhed were the productions of her maſculine mind. On his flight ſhe was ſent to the abbey, and after an impriſonment of ſome weeks was releaſed; but ſhe had ſcarcely reached her own houſe before ſhe was again apprehended. In her laſt confinement ſhe wrote an intereſting work, entitled, an Appeal to Poſterity, or Hiſtorical Notices, Anecdotes, and Memoirs of herſelf, 2 vols. 8vo. At length ſhe was dragged before the revolutionary tribunal and ſentenced to the guillotine, which ſhe endured with fortitude, ſaying as ſhe looked on the ſtatue of Liberty—'O Liberty, how many crimes are committed in thy name!' She ſuffered November 8, 1793.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

ROLLE (Michael), a mathematician, was born at Ambert, in Auvergne, in 1652. He became a member of the academy of ſciences, and died in 1719. His works are, a Treatiſe of Algebra; Method of Reſolving Equations of all Kinds, &c.—Ibid.

ROLLIN (Charles), a celebrated writer, was born at Paris in 1661. After ſtudying in the college of Pleſſis and at the Sorbonne, he became ſucceſſively profeſſor of languages, rhetoric and eloquence. In 1694 he was appointed rector of the univerſity of Paris, which flouriſhed uncommonly under his direction. He revived the ſtudy of the Greek, and introduced many important regulations in the academical exerciſes. He died in 1741. His works are, 1. An edition of Quintilian, 2 vols.; 2. Treatiſe on Studying and Teaching the Belles Lettres, 4 vols.; 3. Antient Hiſtory of the Egyptians, Carthaginians, Babylonians, &c. 13 vols.; 4. The Roman History from the Foundation of that City to the Battle of Actium; 5. Miscellaneous Pieces, as Lectures, Discourses, &c.—Ibid.

Rollius (Reinhold Henry), a German philologist, who published in 1709 a useful work containing the Lives of Philosophers, Orators, Poets, Historians, &c.—Ibid.

Rollo, a chieftain of Norway, who being driven from that country by the king of Denmark, landed in Normandy, which was ceded to him by Charles the Simple in 912. Rollo embraced the christian religion, and was baptized by the name of Robert. He assumed the title of duke of Normandy, and was ancestor of William the Conqueror.—Moreri.

Rollock (Robert), a Scotch divine, was born in Stirlingshire in 1560, and educated at St. Andrews. When James VI. founded the university of Edinburgh Mr. Rollock was appointed the first principal. He wrote several works in latin, and died in 1601.—Ibid.

Romaine (William), an English divine, was born at Hartlepool, in Durham, in 1714, and educated at Hertford college, Oxford, from whence he removed to Christ church, where he took his degrees in arts. On entering into orders he became a frequent preacher before the university till he fell into the calviniftic scheme. He then removed to London, and in 1749 became lecturer of St. Dunstan in the west. He was also for some time morning preacher at St. George, Hanover-square, and for a short period Gresham professor of astronomy, which situation he resigned. In 1764 he was chosen rector of St. Anne's Blackfriars, where, and at St. Dunstan's, he continued to preach to large congregations almost to his death, which happened in 1795. His works have been printed in 8 vols. 8vo. He was the editor of Calasio's Concordance to the Hebrew Bible, 4 vols. folio, 1749, in which he made some unwarrantable alterations to serve the Hutchinsonian doctrine.—Life by Cadogan.

Romanelli (John Francis), an historical painter, was born at Viterbo in 1617. He was the disciple of Pietro da Cortona, whose style he imitated. Louis XIII. employed him, and honoured him with the order of St. Michael. He died in 1662. His son, Urban Romanelli, was also a good painter, and died in 1682, aged 44.—Pilkington.

Romano (Julio), a celebrated painter and architect, whose family name was Bippi, was born at Rome in 1492. He was the disciple of Raphael, who made him his heir. His greatest pictures are, the Fall of the Giants, and the Battles of Constantine. He built some fine structures at Mantua, where he was patronized by the duke. He died in 1546.—De Piles. Felibien.

Romanus I. emperor of the East, was born in Armenia. He became a common soldier in the army of the emperor Basil, whose life he saved in a battle against the Saracens, which proved the foundation of his fortune. Constantine X. whose daughter he espoused, associated him in the empire in 919. He displayed great military talents against the Muscovites and the Turks. To his other eminent qualities he added the virtues of humanity and piety. He died in 948.—Univ. Hist.

Romanus II. called the younger, was the son of Constantine Porphyrogenitus, whom he succeeded in 959, and died of intemperance in 963. He banished his mother Helena, and debauched his sisters.—Ibid.

Romanus III. obtained the imperial throne by his marriage with Zoe, daughter of Constantine the younger, in 1028. He was a weak prince, and was put to death by his wife in 1034.—Ibid.

Romanus IV. succeeded in 1068 Constantine Ducas, whose widow Eudocia he married. He defeated the Turks who had ravaged the empire, but in 1071 he was taken prisoner by them, and was generously set at liberty by the sultan Asan. He was afterwards dethroned by Michael the son of Constantine, who deprived him of his eyes. He died the same year.—Ibid.

Rombouts (Theodore), a painter of Antwerp, was born in 1597, and died in 1637. He was the disciple of Abraham Janssens, and excelled in painting historical subjects and conversations.—De Piles. Houbraken.

Rome, was antiently called Latium, from its king, Latinus, whose daughter Lavinia married Æneas the Trojan. Romulus founded the city of Rome, to which he gave his name, B.C. 753. He and his followers seized upon the Sabine women at a public spectacle, 750. Alba united to Rome B.C. 675. Sextus Tarquinius having ravished Lucretia, the monarchy was abolished, and the republican government adopted, with two annual consuls, 508. The Romans subdue Carthage B.C. 146. Pompey and Cæsar contend for the sovereignty, which occasions a civil war, B.C. 59. Cæsar assassinated in the senate-house, 44. The republican government destroyed by Octavianus, who assumes the title of emperor and Augustus, 27 B.C. The Goths and other northern nations invade the empire about A.D. 250. The seat of empire removed to Constantinople by Constantine, 330. Divided into the eastern and western empires, 379. Rome taken by Alaric, king of the Goths, 410; again by Genseric the Vandal in 455; and by the Heruli in 476. Belisarius recovers Rome for Justinian in 537; but it is retaken by the Goths in 547. Captured by Narses, one of Justinian's generals, in 553. A.D. 726 it separated from the eastern empire, and became an independent state. In 800 the pope obtained the full possession of Rome, and the surrounding territory, called the ecclesiastical state. Taken by the French in 1798.—Univ. Hist.

ROME DE L'ISLE (John Baptiſt Louis), a nch mineralogiſt, was born at Gray in nche-comté in 1736, and died at Paris in 0. He invented a new ſyſtem of mine- gy, in which he aſſerts, that all bodies in mineral kingdom have a primitive form figure of their own, to which, after all various combinations and ſeparations y may ſuffer, they will again return. wrote, Criſtallography, 4 vols. 8vo.; ernal Characters of Minerals, 1 vol.; trology, 1 vol.; the Action of the Central of the Earth, &c.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

ROMILLY (John), a celebrated watch- er, was born at Geneva in 1714, and at Paris in 1796. He wrote all the ar- es on clock and watch making in the En- lopedie; a letter on the impoſſibility of a petual motion; meteorological obſerva- s, &c.—Ibid.

ROMNEY (George), an excellent painter, born in Lancaſhire of mean parentage. ſerved his time to an itinerant painter, m he ſoon ſurpaſſed. He came when young to London with a picture of the th of General Wolfe, which obtained the nd prize in the exhibition, and ſold for a iderable ſum. As ſoon as he had realized fficiency to enable him to viſit Italy, he ed the Alps, and after ſtudying there avidity, returned to London, where he ined great reputation by his portraits, gh he alſo painted ſome excellent hiſto- pieces. He died at Kendal in 1802.— thly Mag.

ROMULUS, the founder of Rome, and ner of Remus, was the ſon of Rhea Syl- daughter of Numitor, king of Alba. was placed among the veſtals, but being ered of theſe two children at a birth, ured that the god Mars was their father. ilius, who had uſurped the throne of Nu- r, his brother, cauſed the children to be n into the Tiber, where they were d by Fauſtulus. On coming of age they vered their origin, put Amulius to death, reinſtated Numitor. A difference, how- aroſe between the two brothers, and ulus put Remus to death. He after- s founded the city of Rome by collect- number of ſtrangers, and died B.C. —Plutarch.

RONCALLI (Chriſtofano), an hiſtorical r, ſometimes called Pomerancio from lace of his birth. He was the diſciple rcignano, and died in 1626.—Pilkington.

RONDELET (William), profeſſor of phy- nd anatomy at Montpellier, was born in 1507, and died in 1566. He wrote atiſe on Fiſhes, 2 vols. folio, in Latin; ſeveral works on medical ſubjects.— ri.

RONSARD (Peter de), a French poet, was in the Vendomois, in 1524. He was to the duke of Orleans, and afterwards James V. king of Scotland, in which ry he remained two years, and then re- d to France, where he was employed in ſeveral negotiations of importance. He ob- tained ſome eccleſiaſtical benefices, and died in 1585. His poems were in his age ſo much eſteemed as to procure him the title of the Poet of France. They were printed at Paris in 6 vols. 4to. in 1567.—Moreri.

ROODSEUS (John Albert), a portrait painter, was born at Hoorn in Holland in 1615, and died in 1674. His pictures are finely coloured and beautifully finiſhed.— Houbraken.

ROOKE (ſir George), a gallant admiral, was born of an antient family in Kent, in 1650. He entered early into the navy, and roſe by his merit to the firſt honours of his profeſſion. He gave eminent proofs of his ſkill and courage in many expeditions, particularly in burning the French ſhips at La Hogue, and in the glorious action off Vigo. July 23, 1703, he took Gibraltar by bombardment, after which he obtained a deciſive victory over the French fleet off Malaga. Notwithſtanding theſe eminent ſervices, he was, by the influence of the whig party, obliged to reſign the command, and to retire to his eſtate in Kent, where he died in 1709. —Campbell's Admirals.

ROOKE (Laurence), an Engliſh aſtronomer, was born at Deptford, in Kent, in 1623, and educated at King's college, Cambridge, from whence he removed to Oxford. In 1652 he was choſen Greſham profeſſor of aſtronomy, which place he afterwards exchanged for that of geometry. He was one of the firſt members of the royal ſociety, and died in 1662. His writings are, Obſervations on Comets; Directions to Seamen; Method of obſerving the Eclipſes of the Moon; and Obſervations on the Eclipſes of the Satellites of Jupiter.—Ward's Lives of Greſham Profeſſors.

ROOME (Edward), ſolicitor to the treaſury. He wrote ſome ſatirical papers called Paſquin, againſt Pope, who gave him a place in his Dunciad. He was alſo the author of a dramatic piece called, the Jovial Crew. He died in 1729.—Biog. Dram.

ROORE (James), a painter, was born at Antwerp in 1686, and died in 1747. He painted hiſtorical ſubjects with great elegance.—Pilkington.

ROOS (John Hendrick), a Dutch painter, was born at Otterburg in 1631. He painted landſcapes and portraits, but excelled in the former. His brother Theodore was a good artiſt in the ſame line. He died in 1698. Philip Roos, ſon of John Hendrick, far excelled the reſt of the family; he had a brother who was alſo a good painter, and died in 1731, aged 72.—Pilkington.

ROQUE (John de la), member of the academy of belles-lettres at Marſeilles, died in 1745 at Paris, aged 84. He aſſiſted his brother Anthony in conducting a periodical journal called the Mercury; and he alſo publiſhed Travels in the Eaſt, 3 vols and ſome operas.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

ROSA (Salvator), a painter and poet, was born at Reneſſa, near Naples, in 1615. He excelled in painting combats, ſea-pieces, and landſcapes, generally romantic ſcenery, with banditti. He painted with great rapidity, and frequently completed a picture in one day. His Satires have entitled him to the appellation of the Juvenal of Italy. They were printed at Amſterdam in 1719, 8vo. He died at Rome in 1673.—Felibien. Tiraboſchi.

Rosamond, uſually called fair Roſamond, was the daughter of Walter de Clifford, baron of Hereford. She was the favourite miſtreſs of Henry II. who is reported to have ſecreted her in a labyrinth, at his palace of Woodſtock, where, according to ſome writers, ſhe was diſcovered, and poiſoned by Eleanor, queen of that monarch. But it ſeems more certain that ſhe died in the nunnery of Godſtow, in Oxfordſhire. She had two ſons by Henry: William, called Long-ſword, and Jeffery, who became archbiſhop of York.

Roscius (Quintus), a native of Gaul, who was contemporary with the celebrated performer Æſop, and became the moſt famous actor of his age. Cicero, who ſpeaks in the higheſt terms of his talents, undertook his defence againſt Fannius. The Roman ſtate aſſigned him a conſiderable penſion, which he appears to have deſerved as much by his virtues as his abilities. He died about 61 B.C.—Cic. pro Roſcio. Quintilian.

Rose (Alexander), a Scotch prelate, was born at Aberdeen in 1640, and educated at St. Andrew's. He was promoted to the biſhopric of Edinburgh, but when epiſcopacy was put down in Scotland, he was deprived of the revenues. He died at Edinburgh in 1720.—Skinner's Hiſt. Ch. of Scotland.

Rosewell (Thomas), a preſbyterian divine, was born in Somerſetſhire in 1650, and educated at Oxford. After leaving the univerſity he was preſented to the living of Strode in his native county, from whence he was ejected by the Bartholomew act in 1662. In 1674 he officiated to a diſſenting congregation at Rotherhithe, and in 1684 was ſent to priſon on a charge of high treaſon. At his trial the charge amounted to nothing more than to his ſaying in his ſermon ſomething diſreſpectful of the king's pretenſions to curing the evil or ſcrophula. Notwithſtanding the abſurdity of the indictment he was found guilty, but Charles II. granted him a pardon. He died in 1691.—Calamy.

Rosin (John), or Roſinus, an antiquary, was born at Eiſenach in 1551, and died of the plague in 1626. He wrote Antiquitatum Romanarum, a work of value; the beſt edition of which is that of Utrecht in 1701, 4to.—Moreri.

Ross (Alexander), a native of Aberdeen, was maſter of the grammar ſchool at Southampton, and chaplain to Charles I. His works are very numerous; the moſt known of which is, a View of all Religions, in one volume octavo. He was alſo the author of a curious performance, called, Virgilius Evangelizans, which is a cento on the life of Chriſt, taken wholly from Virgil. He died in 1654, aged 64.—Granger.

Ross (John), a learned prelate, was born in Herefordſhire, and educated at St. John's college, in Cambridge, where he proceeded D.D. 1756. In 1746 he publiſhed a pamphlet in defence of Dr. Middleton againſt the criticiſms of Mr. Markland; and in 1749 an edition of Cicero's Epiſtolæ ad familiares, 2 vols. 8vo. He was preſented to the vicarage of Froome in Somerſetſhire; and in 1778, advanced to the biſhopric of Exeter. He died in 1792.—Europ. Mag.

Rossi (John Victor), better known under his aſſumed name Janus Nicius Eritbræus, was born at Rome about 1577, of a noble family, and died in 1647. His principal works are, 1. Pinacotheca imaginum illuſtrium virorum, 8vo.; 2. Epiſtolæ, 2 vols. 8vo.; 3. Dialogi, 8vo.; 4. Exempla virtutum et vitiorum, 8vo.; 5. Eudemiæ, lib. x. 8vo.—Tiraboſchi.

Rossi (Bernard Marie de), a learned dominican, was born at Forly in Italy in 1687. He was educated at Florence, and became profeſſor of theology in the convent of his order at Venice, but reſigned that ſituation, and refuſed ſeveral dignities. He died in 1775. His works are numerous. The principal relates to the hiſtory and antiquities of the church of Aquileia.—Ibid.

Rosslyn (Alexander Wedderburne, earl of), an eminent lawyer, was born of a reſpectable family in Scotland, in 1733. He received his education at Edinburgh, and as early as 1752 was admitted an advocate at the Scotch bar. The year following he entered of the Inner Temple, and was called to the bar in 1757. His application was indefatigable, and in 1763 he obtained a ſilk gown as king's counſel. Not long afterwards he was returned to parliament, for Richmond. He joined Mr. George Grenville in oppoſition to the adminiſtration, and diſtinguiſhed himſelf by his eloquence on ſeveral occaſions. On the death of his friend, Mr. Wedderburne accepted the office of ſolicitor-general, and he zealouſly ſupported government in the endeavour to ſubjugate America. In 1778 he was made attorney-general, and in 1780 was appointed chief juſtice of the common pleas, being at the ſame time created baron Loughborough. Soon after his appointment to that office, he was called upon to preſide at the trial of the rioters in Southwark, on which occaſion he incurred ſome cenſure by trying ſeveral, who were ſtrangers to each other, in one indictment. He was, however, popular in the common pleas, particularly by protecting ſeafaring men, who had been ill uſed by their commanders. On the formation of the coalition between lord North and Mr. Fox, we find lord Loughborough giving his aid to that adminiſtration, and afterwards he voted with them in oppoſition. But in 1793 he was made lord chancellor, he ſupported government with energy ng the war with France. In 1801 he created earl Roſslyn; and reſigned the the ſame year. He died ſuddenly in 5, and was buried in St. Paul's cathedral. lordſhip wrote a pamphlet entitled, "Obitions on the State of the Engliſh Priſons, the Means of improving them."—Monthg.

OSSO, commonly called Maſter Roux, a er, was born at Florence in 1496. He ed the works of Michael Angelo and ueſan, but without the aſſiſtance of a er. His talents recommended him to atronage of Francis I. king of France, appointed him ſuperintendant of the s of Fontainbleau. He died there in .—D. Piles.

ITARI (Peter), an hiſtorical and porpainter, was a native of Verona, and living in great reputation in 1757. The before he was at Peterſburg, where he ed the portrait of the czarina, and others imperial family.—Pilkington.

ITGANS (Luke), a Dutch poet, was at Amſterdam in 1645. He bore arms e war of 1672, but after two years ſerretired to his country ſeat, where he f the ſmall pox in 1710. He wrote an oem on the life of William III. king gland, which is eſteemed by the Dutch. is alſo the author of ſome other pieces t language.—Moreri.

THENAMER (John), a celebrated hiſpainter, was born at Munich in 1564, ed in 1604. He imitated the manner intoret, and was liberally patronized by peror Rodolph II.—Ibid.

THERAM (Dr. John), an Engliſh phywas a native of Yorkſhire. He took grees at Edinburgh; and wrote a phiical enquiry into the nature and proof water, and ſome other works. He 1787. He is not to be miſtaken for Rotheram, A.M. a divine of the church land, and rector of Houghton-le-ſpring county of Durham. He died in 1788. rote a valuable diſcourſe on faith, and nection with good works, 8vo.; Eſſay Truth of Chriſtianity; Apology for hanaſian Creed, &c.—Gent. Mag.

THMAN (Chriſtopher), aſtronomer to dgrave of Heſſe, died in 1592. He a treatiſe on comets, and aſtronomical to Tycho Brahe.—Hutton.

ROU (John), a French poet, was 1609 at Dreux. Peter Corneille had veneration, for him and called him his in tragedy. He wrote thirty-ſeven ic pieces, of which the beſt are, Choſntigone, and Venceſlas. He died in —Moreri.

ELLE (William Francis), an apothe- Paris, and demonſtrator in chemiſtry royal botanical garden there, was a of Mathieu, near Caen, and died in ged 68. He left his lectures on che- in manuſcript. His brother Hilary who ſucceeded him died in 1779.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

ROUILLE (Peter Julian), a Jeſuit, was born at Tours in 1681. He wrote the Roman Hiſtory in conjunction with father Catrou, and had a concern in the Journal de Trevoux. He died in 1740.—Ibid.

ROUBILLIAC (Francis), an eminent ſtatuary, was a native of Switzerland, but reſided in London, where he died in 1762. He executed ſeveral beautiful monuments in Weſtminſter-abbey.

ROUS (Francis), a violent fanatic in the reign of Charles I. was born of a good family in Cornwall, and repreſented Truro in the long parliament, where he inveighed againſt arminianiſm and the biſhops. He was one of the lay-members of the aſſembly of divines, and ſpeaker of Barebone's parliament. He was appointed provoſt of Eton by the ruling party, and was called the illiterate Jew of Eton. He died in 1659. His works, which are highly enthuſiaſtic, were publiſhed in one vol. folio 1657.—Clarendon. Granger.

ROUSE (John), an antiquary, was the author of "A Chronicle of the Kings of England," and "The Antiquities of Warwick." He died in 1491.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

ROUSSEAU (James), a French painter, was born at Paris in 1630. He excelled in landſcapes and repreſentations of architecture, and died at London in 1693.—Ibid.

ROUSSEAU (John Baptiſt), a French poet, was the ſon of a ſhoemaker at Paris, and born in 1669. His education was liberal, and he wrote ſome poetical pieces in his youth, which brought him into ſo much notice that marſhal Tallard took him to England as his ſecretary. But though he had many opportunities of advancing his fortune, he neglected riches, and refuſed ſome lucrative offices. Several virulent ſatires having been circulated againſt perſons of eminence, to whom Rouſſeau was known to have an averſion, the general voice attributed them to him: when, to rid himſelf of the charge, he ſuborned a witneſs to accuſe an innocent perſon of being the writer. The ſubornation being proved, Rouſſeau was baniſhed the kingdom in 1712. He then went to Switzerland, and being introduced to prince Eugene, accompanied him to Vienna. He afterwards loſt the favour of the prince, on which he went to Bruſſels, where he contracted an intimacy with Voltaire, which ended in a quarrel, and the two poets lampooned each other without mercy. Rouſſeau died in 1741. Beſides his epigrams, ſonnets, and other poems, he wrote ſome comedies, and letters.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

ROUSSEAU (John James), was the ſon of a watch-maker at Geneva, where he was born in 1712. His mother died in the delivery, which he ſays was the firſt of his misfortunes. Some of the firſt books which fell in his way were Plutarch and Tacitus. His education, however, was very confined, and he was put apprentice to an engraver;

but, according to his own account, he learned nothing but pilfering. He ran away from his maſter, and in a deſtitute condition was taken under the protection of a lady named madame de Warens, who had quitted the proteſtant religion for the catholic. This good woman appears to have had ſomewhat of the zeal of proſelytiſm in her charity, for ſhe ſent the young fugitive to a ſeminary of her perſuaſion at Turin. He did not long remain there, but hired himſelf as footman to a lady, who died ſhortly after. Having ſome talents for muſic, he ſet up as a teacher in that art at Chamberi, from whence in 1741 he went to Paris, where he lived in great poverty a conſiderable time. At length he was taken into the ſervice of M. Montague, French ambaſſador at Venice, but having a miſunderſtanding with his employer he returned to Paris, where Dupin, farmer-general, gave him a place in his department. In 1750 he obtained a prize from the academy of Dijon for the beſt anſwer to the queſtion "Whether the re-eſtabliſhment of the arts and ſciences has conduced to the purity of morals?" This ſucceſs prompted him to produce a diſcourſe on the inequality of men, and on the origin of ſocieties; a work full of bold flights and dangerous poſitions. In 1758 he publiſhed a letter to d'Alembert upon the project of eſtabliſhing a theatre at Geneva. In this letter, which was well written, he declared himſelf againſt theatrical exhibitions, though he had before publiſhed a comedy, and alſo a paſtoral, both adapted for the ſtage. He next publiſhed his Dictionary of Muſic, in which are many excellent articles. He had before given a letter on the French muſic, or rather a cenſure of that muſic. In 1761 appeared his romance of the New Heloiſe, 6 vols. It is in the form of letters, exhibiting a ſtrange mixture of beauties and deformities; but it was read with avidity. This work was eclipſed by his Emilius, a moral romance in 4 vols. in which he condemns every other mode of education but that of following nature. Rouſſeau in this work attacks the prophecies and miracles of the Chriſtian religion, while he praiſes the goſpel, and draws a beautiful picture of its divine author. The parliament of Paris condemned the book, and proſecuted the writer, who fled to Switzerland, where he received ſo many inſults on account of his principles that he returned to Paris, and on the invitation of Mr. Hume went to London in 1766, where he obtained a penſion; but having quarrelled with his friend he went back to France, and ſometimes appeared in the Armenian dreſs. He was of a reſtleſs, proud and fretful diſpoſition, imagining that there was a conſpiracy of the men of letters againſt him, and that all mankind were his enemies. He died of an apoplexy, at Ermenonville, near Paris, in 1778. His works have been publiſhed in 33 vols. 8vo. and 12mo.—Rouſſeau's Confeſſions. Nouv. Dict.

Roux (Auguſtin), a phyſician, was born in Gaſcony in 1726, and took his degrees at Bourdeaux. He died in 1776. He continued Vandermonde's Journal of Medicine; and was the author of a treatiſe on Purifying Liquors; Typographical Annals; the New Portable Encyclopædia, 2 vols. 8vo.; Memoirs of Chemiſtry, &c.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

Rowe (Nicolas), an Engliſh poet, was born at Little-Beckford, in Bedfordſhire, in 1663, and educated at Weſtminſter-ſchool, after which he entered of the Middle Temple, where he was called to the bar, but never diſtinguiſhed himſelf in that profeſſion. At the age of twenty-five he produced his Ambitious Step-mother, a tragedy; which was well received, and encouraged him to purſue the dramatic career, which he did with increaſing reputation. In 1709 he publiſhed an edition of Shakſpeare, with an account of his life. The duke of Queenſberry appointed him under-ſecretary of ſtate; and on the acceſſion of George I. he was made poet-laureat, and land ſurveyor of the cuſtoms in the port of London. He died in 1718. Beſides his tragedies, many of which ſtill hold their place on the Engliſh ſtage, he wrote ſome poems, and tranſlated Lucan's Pharſalia, and Quillet's Callipædia, into verſe.—Biog. Brit.

Rowe (Elizabeth), an ingenious and pious lady, whoſe maiden name was Singer, was born at Ilcheſter, in Somerſetſhire, in 1674. At the age of twenty-two ſhe publiſhed a collection of poems, under the name of "Philomela." Matt. Prior is ſaid to have paid his addreſſes to her, but ſhe declined the offer, and married Mr. Thomas Rowe, an ingenious young gentleman, who ſoon left her a widow, in which ſtate ſhe continued the remainder of her life. She died ſuddenly at Frome in 1737. The principal of her poems is one on the Hiſtory of Joſeph. She was alſo the author of a collection of letters, entitled, "Friendſhip in Death," and after her deceaſe Dr. Watts printed a volume of her thoughts, under the title of Devout Exerciſes of the Heart.—Ibid.

Rowe (Thomas), an ingenious gentleman, was the ſon of Mr. Benoni Rowe, a diſſenting miniſter, and born in London in 1687. He was educated at the Charter-houſe, and afterwards at Leyden; and in 1708 returned to London. Two years afterwards he married miſs Singer, mentioned in the preceding article. Some time after this marriage, he addreſſed a beautiful ode to his wife, under the name of Delia. He formed the deſign of giving a tranſlation of the whole of Plutarch's Lives, but finiſhed only eight. He died in 1715.—Ibid.

Rowe (John), a diſſenting divine, was the ſon of a pious miniſter at Crediton in Devonſhire, and was educated at Oxford, after which he became lecturer at Witney in that county. In 1654 he was appointed preacher at Weſtminſter-abbey, from whence he was ejected for nonconformity in 1662. He died in 1677. His works are, Immanuel, or rift's Love explained; Heavenly Minded-s, and Earthly Mindedneſs, 12mo.; Life his Father; Sermons.—Calamy.

ROWE (Thomas), a nonconformiſt divine, born at North-Petherwin in Devonſhire, educated at Exeter college, Oxford, after ich he became miniſter of Litchet in Dor-ſhire, where he was ſilenced in 1662. He n officiated to a diſſenting congregation at mborn, and died about 1698. He wrote ious book called the Chriſtian's Work.—d.

ROWLAND (Henry), a Welſh divine and iquary, was a native of Angleſey, of ich iſland he publiſhed an elaborate ac-nt, in a quarto volume, entitled, Mona ſtaurata. He died in 1722.—Owen's Camb. g.

ROWLEY, a monk of Briſtol. [See CHAT-RTON.]

ROWLEY (William), a dramatic writer the reign of queen Elizabeth. Wood uks of him with commendation, and akſpeare aſſiſted him in one of his plays. ere was alſo one Samuel Rowley of the ne period, who wrote two hiſtorical plays. Biog. Dram.

ROWNING (John), an ingenious divine, fellow of Magdalen college, Cambridge, rector of Anderbury in Lincolnſhire. He d in 1771, aged 72. Mr. Rowning pub-ed an excellent Compendium of Natural loſophy, in 2 vols. 8vo. which has paſſed ough ſeveral editions, and uſed formerly be a text book for ſtudents at Cambridge. Gen. Biog. Dict.

ROXANA, the wife of Alexander the at, was the daughter of a Perſian prince, celebrated for her beauty. At the death Alexander ſhe was pregnant of a ſon, who named the young Alexander. Caſſander rdered both the mother and child.—Juſ-

ROY (Julian le), a celebrated clock and tch maker, was born at Tours in 1686. hen very young he ſhewed an uncommon n for mechanical purſuits, and in 1713 he s admitted into the company of clock-kers at Paris, where he acquired a high utation, and died in 1759. His ſon, ter Le Roy, became watch-maker to the g, and died in 1785. He publiſhed, 1. moires pour les Horlogers de Paris, 4to.; Etrennes Chronometriques; 3. Treatiſe the Labours of Harriſon and Le Roy, for Diſcovery of the Longitude at Sea, 4to.; Letter to M. de Marivetz.—Julian David Roy, another ſon of Julian, became a mber of the national inſtitute, and at-hed himſelf to architecture. He wrote, 1. the Ruins of the fineſt Monuments of ece, folio; 2. On the Conſtruction of riſtian Temples, 8vo.; 3. Obſervations on Edifices of the Antients; 4. Of the Ma-e of the Antients, &c.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

ROZEE (Mademoiſelle), an ingenious ar-, was born at Leyden in 1632. She nei-r uſed oil nor water colours in her pic-tures, but ſilk floſs on the ground, diſpoſed according to the different degrees of the bright and dark tints, which ſhe applied with great judgment and taſte. In this manner ſhe executed hiſtorical ſubjects, land-ſcapes, and portraits. She died in 1682.—Houbraken.

ROZIER (Francis), a French agriculturiſt, doctor in divinity and prior of Nanteuil, was born at Lyons in 1734, and ſlain at the ſiege of that place by a bomb in 1793. He made obſervations on the improvement of lands, and the means of ſimplifying the various objects of huſbandry. His principal work is, A Complete Courſe of Agriculture, 10 vols. 4to.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

RUBENS (Peter Paul), a famous painter, was born at Antwerp in 1577. After ſtudying in his own country, he went to Italy, where he greatly improved himſelf after the works of the beſt maſters, but chiefly Titian. On his return to Antwerp he gained ſo great a reputation as to be ſent for to Paris to paint the gallery of the palace of Luxemburg. He was afterwards employed by the infanta Iſabella and the king of Spain in ſome important negociations, which he executed with ſuch credit as to be appointed ſecretary of the privy council. On going to England with a commiſſion from the king of Spain, he obtained the favour of Charles I. who conferred on him the honour of knighthood, and made him ſome valuable preſents. While here he painted the banqueting-houſe. Rubens died very rich at Antwerp in 1640. He wrote a treatiſe on painting, and another on Italian architecture, folio.—De Piles. D'Argenville

RUBENS (Albert), ſon of the preceding, was born at Antwerp in 1614. He was greatly eſteemed by the archduke Leopold, governor of the Low Countries, and died in 1657. He wrote, 1. De Re Veſtiaria Veterum; 2. Diatribæ de Gemma Tiberiana, de Gemma Auguſtæa, &c.; 3. Regum et Imperatorum Romanorum Numiſmata, folio; 4. De Vita Flavii Manlii Theodori, 12mo.—Moreri.

RUCCELLAI (John), an Italian writer, was born of a noble family at Florence in 1475. He embraced the eccleſiaſtical ſtate, and was ſent on an embaſſy to France by his relation pope Leo X.; but the death of that pontiff deſtroyed his hopes of preferment. He died in 1526. He wrote the tragedies of Roſamonde, and Oreſtes; but his principal performance is an excellent poem on Bees, printed at Padua in 1714, 8vo.—Tiraboſchi.

RUDBECK (Olaus), a Swediſh phyſician, who was profeſſor of medicine at Upſal, where he died in 1702, aged 73. His chief works are, Exercitatio Anatomica, 4to.; Atlantica, ſive Manheim, vera Japheti poſterorum ſedes ac Patria, 3 vols. folio, with an atlas in another volume; Leges Weſt-Gothicæ, folio; a Collection of Plants engraved on plates, 2 vols. folio; Laponia illuſtrata, et iter per Upſandiana, 4to.; Diſſertation upon the Bird called Selai in the Bible. His ſon was alſo a learned phyſician and botaniſt. He publiſhed a Catalogue of Lapland plants; Specimen Linguæ Gothicæ, &c.—Halleri. Bibl. Botan.

RUDDIMAN (Thomas), a Scotch ſchoolmaſter and printer, was born in 1674, and died in 1757. He was near fifty years keeper of the advocates' library at Edinburgh. He completed the "Diplomata et Numiſmata Scotiæ," to which he prefixed an excellent preface. He alſo publiſhed Inſtitutions of Latin Grammar, and ſome other works.—Life by Chalmers.

RUE (Charles de la), a French poet, was born at Paris in 1643. He entered among the jeſuits, and became profeſſor of belles-lettres and rhetoric. In 1667 he publiſhed a Latin poem on the Conqueſts of Louis XIV. which Corneille tranſlated into French verſe. He was an eloquent preacher, and died at Paris in 1725. He wrote Latin tragedies, poems in that language, and 3 vols. of Sermons. He is not to be confounded with another of the ſame name, who was a benedictine, and publiſhed an edition of Origen. He died in 1739.—Moreri.

RUFFHEAD (Owen), an Engliſh law writer and biographer, who died in 1769. He wrote the Life of Pope, and publiſhed a Collection of the Statutes at Large.

RUFINUS, a father of the church, was born at Aquileia. He was for ſome years the moſt intimate friend of St. Jerome, but attaching himſelf to Origen, a diviſion broke out between them, and they wrote againſt each other with great aſperity. Rufinus retired to Paleſtine, where he founded a monaſtery on mount Olivet, and had numerous followers. He died in Sicily in 410. Rufinus tranſlated into Latin the works of Joſephus, and ſeveral of the writings of Origen. He alſo gave a verſion and continuation of Euſebius, and wrote a Defence of Origen, Lives of the Fathers of the Deſert, Explanation of the Creed, and other works.—Cave. Dupin.

RUFUS, a phyſician of Epheſus, who gained a great reputation in the reign of Trajan. Of all his works we have only the Greek names of parts of the body; and a treatiſe on the Diſeaſes of the Reins and Bladder.—Friend.

RUGENDAS (George Philip), a painter, was born at Augſburg in 1666, and died in 1742. He painted with his left hand, and excelled in repreſenting ſieges and battles.—Pilkington.

RUGGLE (George), fellow of Clare hall, Cambridge, and author of the famous Latin comedy, called Ignoramus, performed in that univerſity before James I. in 1614. He died about 1640.—Biog. Dram.

RHUNKENIUS (David), a learned critic, was born in Pruſſian Pomerania in 1723. He became profeſſor of hiſtory, and librarian of Leyden; and died in 1798. His works are; Epiſtolæ Criticæ in Homeri et Heſiod hymnos; De Vita et Scriptis Longini; Timæi Sophiſtæ Lexicon; Hiſtoria Critica Oratorum Græcorum, 2 vols. He alſo publiſhed accurate editions of Velleius Paterculus, and Rutilius Lupus.—Life by Wyttenbach.

RUINART (Thierry), a learned benedictine, was born at Rheims in 1657, and died in 1709. He was the coadjutor of Mabillon in his literary labours, and publiſhed, 1. The Acts of the Martyrs, 4to.; 2. Hiſtory of the Perſecution of the Vandals, 4to; 3. An edition of the works of Gregory of Tours, folio; 4. The Life of Father Mabillon; 5. Life of Pope Urban V.—Moreri.

RULE (Gilbert), a Scotch divine, was born at Elgin in 1628, and educated at Aberdeen. He was ejected from the living of Alnwick in Northumberland in 1662 for nonconformity. After this he ſtudied phyſic, and took his doctor's degree, but at the revolution he was appointed principal of the univerſity of Edinburgh, where he died in 1705. He wrote a defence of Nonconformity; and ſome weak pieces againſt epiſcopacy. There are ſome curious ſpecimens of his pulpit oratory in the Scotch Preſbyterian Eloquence.—Calamy.

RULLAND (Martin), a German phyſician, was profeſſor of medicine at Lawingen in Suabia, and phyſician to the emperor Rodolph II. He died in 1602. His works are, Medicina Practica, 12mo.; Lexicon Alchymiæ, 4to; Hydriaticæ, 8vo. This is a treatiſe on Mineral Waters. His ſon Martin was alſo a phyſician, and wrote ſome books, which are now obſolete.—Moreri.

RUMPHIUS (George-Everard), a phyſician and naturaliſt, was born in 1627. He became conſul at Amboyna, where he applied to botanical reſearches with ardour. What is aſtoniſhing, is, that though he became blind at the age of forty-three, he ſtill continued his favourite purſuits. His collection of the plants of Amboyna was publiſhed in 1755, in 6 vols. folio. He alſo wrote Imagines Piſcium Teſtaceorum, folio; and the Political Hiſtory of Amboyna.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

RUNDLE (Thomas), an eminent prelate, was of Exeter college, Oxford, where he proceeded to the degree of LL.D. in 1723. He was chaplain to biſhop Talbot, archdeacon of Wilts, and treaſurer of Sarum: collated to the rectory of Sedgefield, and preſented to a prebend in Durham cathedral, which preferments he reſigned in 1735, on being conſecrated biſhop of Derry. He died in 1743. A volume of his Letters has been printed.—Whiſton's Life, and Hutchinſon's Hiſt. of Durham.

RUPERT (Prince), ſon of Frederick, king of Bohemia, by Elizabeth, daughter of James I. He came to England at the beginning of the civil war, and diſtinguiſhed himſelf gallantly in defence of his uncle Charles I. In the reign of Charles II. he commanded the fleet, and defeated the Dutch in 1673. He was well ſkilled in chemiſtry; and was he inventor of mezzotinto, of which he is id to have taken the hint from a ſoldier raping his ruſty fuſil. It is alſo ſaid that he firſt print executed in this way was one by him. It is in the firſt edition of velyn's Sculptura. The prince died in 682.—Granger.

Ruscelli (Jerome), an Italian writer, as born at Viterbo, and educated at Venice. is principal works are, Rimario (a Dictionry of Rhimes), and Impreſe Illuſtri (the Illuſtrious Coats of Arms). He died at Rome 1565.—Tiraboſchi.

Rushworth (John), an induſtrious collector, was born in Northumberland about 607, and educated firſt at Oxford, and next Lincoln's-inn, where he was called to the ar. In 1640 he was appointed aſſiſtant clerk the houſe of commons, being expert in king down ſpeeches in ſhort hand. He as employed by the parliament in ſeveral oncerns; and his relation, ſir Thomas Fairx, general of the forces, made him his ſeretary. He ſat for Berwick in Richard romwell's parliament; but died in the ing's bench, where he was confined for ebt, in 1690. His Hiſtorical Collections, 7 vols. folio, are uſeful, but his fidelity queſtionable.—Biog. Brit.

Russel (lord William), the third ſon of William, the fifth earl and firſt duke of Bedrd, was born about 1641. In 1667 he arried Rachael, ſecond daughter of Thomas Vriotheſley earl of Southampton, and widow lord Vaughan, a lady of diſtinguiſhed taents and piety His lordſhip ſoon obtained a at in the houſe of commons, where he iled with the whigs, and laboured with eat zeal for the excluſion of the duke of ork from the ſucceſſion. He afterwards ntered into various ſchemes for effecting is object, and ſome of them being conſiered treaſonable, he was tried, condemned, d beheaded in 1683. After the Revolucon the parliament paſſed an act to conſider ho were the adviſers of the murder (ſo they lled it) of his lordſhip. His excellent lady, hoſe letters have been printed in one voume octavo, continued a widow till her eath in 1723, at the age of 87, having ved to ſee her ſecond ſon ſucceed to the edford title and eſtates.—Ibid.

Russel (Elizabeth, lady), was the third ughter of ſir Anthony Cooke, and born 1529. She received a learned education, d married firſt ſir Thomas Hobbey, who ed in 1566. Her next huſband was lord hn Ruſſel, ſon and heir of Francis, the cond earl of Bedford, who left her a widow 1584. She had by her laſt marriage one n and two daughters, Anne and Elizabeth. he latter was buried in Weſtminſter-abbey, here the attitude of the ſtatue on her moument leads the vulgar to believe the ſtory at ſhe died by pricking her finger with a edle. Lady Ruſſel tranſlated from the ench a religious book on the Sacrament, inted in 1605. She died about 1600.—Ib.

Russel (Alexander), phyſician to the Engliſh factory at Aleppo, was born and educated at Edinburgh. In 1755 he publiſhed the Hiſtory of Aleppo, which has been reprinted, and tranſlated into different languages. He returned to England in 1759, and became phyſician to St. Thomas's hoſpital. He died in 1770. He is not to be confounded with Dr. Richard Ruſſel, who wrote an excellent treatiſe on the Virtues of Sea Water, and died in 1768.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Russia. In 862, Rurick, great duke of Novogrod, reigned here, and in 981, Wolodimer, the 4th prince, was the firſt Chriſtian king. About 1058 Boleſlaus, king of Poland, conquered Ruſſia. Andrew I. who began his reign in 1158, laid the foundation of Moſcow. About 1200 the Mungul Tartars conquered it, and held it till 1540, when John Baſilowitz threw off their yoke. About the middle of the 16th century the Ruſſians reduced Siberia. In 1721 Peter the Great aſſumed the title of Emperor.—Univ. Hiſt.

Rust (George), a learned biſhop, was educated at Chriſt college, Cambridge. After the reſtoration he became dean of Connor by the intereſt of biſhop Jeremy Taylor, whoſe funeral ſermon he preached. He was afterwards advanced to the ſee of Dromore, and died in 1670 He wrote a Diſcourſe on Truth; and ſome other theological pieces.—Wood.

Ruth, a Moabitiſh woman, who married firſt Mahalon, ſon of Elimelech and Naomi, and afterwards Boaz, by whom ſhe had Obed, the father of Jeſſe, and grandfather of David. Her hiſtory forms a diſtinct and beautiful book in the ſacred canon. It is ſuppoſed to have been written by Samuel.—Gray's Key O. T.

Rutherforth (Thomas), an Engliſh divine, was born in 1712, He became fellow of St. John's college, Cambridge; and rector of Shenfield, in Eſſex, and Barley, in Hertfordſhire. He wrote a Syſtem of Natural Philoſophy, 2 vols. 4to.; and ſome works on the nature of moral virtue. He alſo communicated to the Spalding Society, a correction of Plutarch's deſcription of the inſtruments uſed to renew the veſtal fire. He died in 1771.—Hiſt. of the Spalding Society.

Rutilia, a Roman lady, was the ſiſter of Publius Rutilius, and the wife of Marcus Aurelius Cotta. Seneca, in a book which he wrote in his exile, ſpeaks of her as a model for her ſex.—Moreri.

Rutilius-Rufus (Publius), conſul of Rome 105 B. C. His love of juſtice gave ſuch offence to ſome of the Roman knights that they accuſed him of peculation, and he was baniſhed. Upon his paſſage from Italy to Aſia, all the cities where he came ſhewed him the greateſt honours, ſo that his progreſs had more the appearance of a triumph than an exile.—Livy.

Rutilius (Claudius), a Latin writer in the fifth century, was born at Toulouſe,

He left an Itinerary in elegiac verſe, printed at Amſterdam in 1687, 12mo.—Voſſius de Poet. Lat.

Ruysch (Frederic), an eminent anatomiſt, was born in 1638 at the Hague. After taking his doctor's degree he ſettled at Amſterdam; and when the czar, Peter the Great, viſited that city, he became his pupil, and purchaſed his collection of natural curioſities and preparations. Ruyſch was a member of the royal ſociety of London, the academy of ſciences at Paris, and other learned bodies. He died in 1731. His anatomical works, which contain many new diſcoveries, have been printed in 4 vols. 4to. His ſon Henry publiſhed Theatrum Animalium, 2 vols. folio.—Halleri Bibl. Anat.

Ruysdaal (Jacob), an eminent landſcape painter, was born at Haerlem in 1636. His pictures, which exhibit nature with great force and clearneſs, are very valuable. He died in 1681. His brother, Solomon, who died at Haerlem in 1670, was alſo a good landſcape painter, but not equal to Jacob.—Houbraken.

Ruyter (Michael Adrian), a brave Dutch admiral, was born at Fluſhing in 1607. He went to ſea at an early age, and after paſſing through the different ranks of the ſervice, became an admiral in 1641. Not long afterwards he defeated the corſairs on the coaſt of Barbary. In 1653 he was ſecond in command under Van Tromp, whom he ably ſupported againſt the Engliſh in three engagements. In 1659 he was ſent to ſuccour the king of Denmark againſt the Swedes, and for his ſervices was ennobled by that monarch. After many gallant actions he was killed on the coaſt of Sicily in a combat with the French in 1676.—Moreri.

Ryan (Lacy), a dramatic writer and actor, was born in Weſtminſter in 1694. He was the firſt performer of Marcus in Cato, and died at Bath in 1760.—Biog. Dram.

Ryckhaert (Martin), a landſcape painter of Antwerp, was born in 1591, and died in 1636. He was eſteemed by Vandyck and other eminent artiſts. There was alſo one David Ryckhaert, of the ſame place and age, who painted rural ſubjects.—Houbraken.

Ryer (Peter du), a French dramatic writer, was born at Paris in 1605, and died in 1658. He was ſecretary to Louis XIII. which place he ſold, and afterwards held a ſimilar ſituation under the duke of Vendome. His works procured him a place in the French academy.—Moreri.

Ryland (John), a diſſenting miniſter, who kept an academy, and officiated many years to a Baptiſt congregation at Northampton. He received the degree of maſter of arts from a univerſity in Scotland; and was on terms of intimacy with Dr. Johnſon, Dr. Doddridge, Mr. Hervey, and other pious and learned men. Mr. Ryland publiſhed, The Chriſtian Student; a Paſtor; Elements of Mechanics; The Preceptor; and ſeveral tracts and ſermons. He died at Enfield in 1792.—Europ. Mag.

Ryland (William Wynne), an engraver, was the ſon of a copper-plate printer in London, and bred up under Mr. Francis Ravenet, as an apprentice. On the expiration of his time he went abroad, and greatly improved himſelf in France and Italy. After his return he introduced the art of engraving copper-plates to yield an impreſſion reſembling drawings in chalk. He was appointed engraver to his majeſty, and had a ſalary of 300l. a year conferred on him. Some of his firſt productions were a whole length figure of the king, another of the queen, and one of lord Bute. Mr. Ryland went into partnerſhip with a printſeller in Cornhill, but their affairs becoming embarraſſed a bankruptcy enſued. In 1782 he committed a forgery on the Eaſt India company, for which he was tried and executed the year following.—Ibid.

Rymer (Thomas), an Engliſh antiquary and critic, was born in Yorkſhire, and educated at the ſchool of Northallerton, in Yorkſhire, from whence he removed to Cambridge. He became hiſtoriographer royal, and formed an immenſe collection of public acts, treatiſes, conventions, and ſtate letters, under the title of Fœdera, publiſhed at London in 20 volumes folio. An edition alſo has been printed at the Hague in 10 vols. Rymer was the author of a View of the Tragedies of the Laſt Age, in which he ſhews more ſpleen than judgment. He died in 1713.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Rysbrac (John Michael), an excellent ſtatuary, who died in London in 1770, aged 78.—Mortimer.

Rysbraeck (Peter), an eminent landſcape painter of Antwerp, was born in 1657. His figures and trees are well deſigned, and he painted expeditiouſly, and with ſpirit.—Houbraken.

Ryves (ſir Thomas), a civilian, was educated at Wincheſter ſchool, from whence he was ſent to Oxford, where he ſtudied the law, and afterwards became king's advocate in Doctor's Commons. He died in 1631. He wrote, The Vicar's Plea; Hiſtoria Navalis Antiqua; Hiſtoria Navalis Media, &c.—Wood, A. O.

Ryves (Bruno), an engliſh divine, was a relation of the above. In the reign of Charles I. he was perſecuted by the preſbyterians; but at the reſtoration he obtained the deanry of Windſor. He died in 1677. Dr. Ryves wrote Mercurius Ruſticus, a loyal paper in the rebellion; alſo ſeveral pamphlets and ſermons.—Wood.

Ryves (Eliza), an ingenious lady, was born in Ireland, of a reſpectable but reduced family, and the ſmall fortune which was left her was conſumed in a law-ſuit, on which ſhe had recourſe to her pen for a ſubſiſtence, and compiled part of the Annual Regiſter. She alſo wrote, "The Hermit of Snowdon," a novel; and tranſlated ſeveral pieces from the French. Miſs Ryves died in 1797.—M. Mag.

S.

SA, or SAA (Emanuel), a Portugueze Jesuit, who was employed by pope Pius V. in reviſing a new edition of the Bible. He died in 1596. His works are, Scholia in quatuor Evangelia; Notationes in totam Sacram Scripturam; Aphoriſmi Confeſſariorum.—Moreri.

SA DE MIRANDA (Francis), a Portugueze writer, and chevalier of the order of Chriſt, was born at Coimbra in 1495, and died in 1558. His poetical works conſiſt of ſatires, comedies, and paſtorals, printed at Liſbon in 1614, 4to.—Ibid.

SAADAS-GAON, a Jewiſh rabbi, who was chief of the ſchool at Sora, near Babylon, and died in 943. His works are, a book on the Belief of the Jews; Arabic tranſlation of the Old Teſtament; and Commentaries on Ezra and Daniel.—Buxtorf.

SAAS (John), member of the academy at Rouen, was born in 1708, and died in 1774. He was an eccleſiaſtic, and wrote, an Account of MSS. of the Cathedral of Rouen; an Abridgment of the Hiſtorical Dictionary in 44 vols.; Criticiſms on the Supplement to Moreri; and ſome religious pieces.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

SAAVEDRA (Miguel Cervantes de), a celebrated Spaniſh writer, was born at Madrid in 1549. He appears to have had a liberal education, though of his early life little is known, but he ſerved as a common ſoldier under Colonna, and loſt his left hand at the victory of Lepanto After this misfortune he became chamberlain to the cardinal Aquaviva at Rome, but in 1574 he had the misfortune to be taken by a Barbary corſair, and was carried to Algiers, where he continued in ſlavery above five years. At length he was ranſomed by the religious ſociety of redemption; and on his return to Spain, being in a very reduced ſtate, he had recourſe to his pen for a ſubſiſtence. He wrote a great number of dramatic pieces, which were performed with ſucceſs at Madrid. But he ſeems to have gained more fame than fortune, for he wrote the firſt part of his immortal work, Don Quixote, in priſon, where he was confined for debt! It was printed at Madrid in 1605, and the remainder in 1615. Though this romance was written to expoſe local and temporary folly, it will be read at all times and in all countries with delight. Cervantes wrote beſides this, his exemplary novels, another entitled, Perſiles and Sigiſmunda, and Galatea. He died in 1617.—Nich. Antonio. Bibl Script. Hiſpan.

SAAVEDRA FAJARDO (Diego), a Spaniſh writer and ſtateſman, was born of a noble family in the kingdom of Murcia, and after being ambaſſador in Switzerland, was appointed a member of the ſupreme council of the Indies He died in 1648. His works are, the Idea of a Politic Prince; the Gothic Crown and the Literary Republic: this laſt is curious and well written.—Ibid.

SABAS, the founder of a ſect called Meſſalians, who maintained that the Goſpel is to be followed literally. In conformity with this rule Sabas made himſelf an eunuch. This ſect appeared about 310, but became extinct at the cloſe of that century. There was a ſaint of this name who was ſuperior of the monaſteries in Paleſtine, and died in 531.—Dupin. Moſheim.

SABATEI-SEVI, a Jewiſh impoſtor, was born at Smyrna in 1626. He declared himſelf the Meſſiah, and was acknowleged by ſeveral rabbins and other Jews, who ſent letters to their diſperſed brethren in all parts of the world, announcing the great event. Sabatei, however, was arreſted at Conſtantinople, and ſent to priſon, whither the miſguided Jews flocked in crowds, and bribed the governor by large preſents for the liberty of kiſſing his chains. The ſultan Mahomet having ordered him to be brought into his preſence, demanded of him a miracle as a proof of his miſſion, which Sabatei declined. Mahomet then gave him his choice to turn Muſſulman or be put to death, on which the pretended prophet accepted the former condition, but was afterwards ſent to priſon, where he died in 1676.—Kidder's Demonſtration of the Meſſias, folio.

SABBATHIER (Peter), a benedictine of St. Maur, was born at Poictiers in 1682, and died at Rheims in 1742. He ſpent twenty years in a collection of the Latin verſions of the Bible, which was publiſhed in 1743, under the title of Bibliorum ſacrorum Latinæ verſiones antiquæ, 3 vols. folio.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

SABELLICUS (Mark Anthony Coccius), an Italian writer, was born at Vicovaro about 1436. He became profeſſor of the belles-lettres at Udina, and afterwards librarian of St. Mark at Venice. He died in 1506. His works are, a Univerſal Hiſtory, 1 vol. folio; Hiſtory of the Republic of Venice, fol.; and ſome miſcellanies in proſe and verſe.—Tiraboſchi.

SABELLIUS, the founder of a religious ſect called by his name in the third century, was a native of Lybia. He maintained, that there is no diſtinction of perſons in the Trinity, and his followers became very numerous The hereſy was condemned in the council of Conſtantinople in 381.—Cave. Dupin. Moſheim.

SABEO (Fauſtus), an Italian poet, who publiſhed a good edition of Arnobius at Rome in 1542, folio, and Latin epigrams in 1556, for which the emperor gave him a gold chain. He died in 1553.—Moreri.

SABINA (Julia), the wife of the emperor Adrian, and celebrated for her private and public virtues. When Adrian found his end approaching he compelled her to take poiſon, that ſhe might not ſurvive him, A.D. 138.—Aurelius Victor.

SABINUS (Aulus), a Latin poet, who compoſed elegant epiſtles in verſe, which are loſt. He was the contemporary and friend of Ovid.—Moreri..

SABINUS (Francis Floridus), a learned Italian, who died in 1547. He compiled a book of Interpretations of the Civil Law, and wrote an able Apology for the Latin Language.—Ibid.

SABINUS (George), a modern Latin poet, was born in the electorate of Brandenburgh, in 1508: he became profeſſor of the belles-lettres at Frankfort on the Oder, rector of the academy of Konigſberg, and counſellor to the elector of Brandenburgh. He died in 1560.—Ibid.

SABLIERE (Anthony de Rambouillet de la), a French poet, who died at Paris in 1680. His Madrigals were publiſhed by his ſon. His wife Heſſelin de la Sabliere was greatly eſteemed by the moſt celebrated wits of the age. She entertained La Fontaine in her houſe many years, and the poet, in return, has immortalized her in his verſes—Ibid.

SACCHI (Andrew), an Italian painter, was born at Rome in 1599. He ſtudied under Albano, and ſurpaſſed all the artiſts of the Italian ſchool in the force and beauty of colouring. His pictures are very valuable. He died at Rome in 1661.—Felibien. D'Argenville.

SACCHINI (Antony Marie Gaſpar), an eminent muſician, was born at Naples in 1735, and died at Paris in 1786. His operas are compoſed in a fine ſtyle, and many of the beſt were executed by him in London.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

SACHEVERELL (Henry), a celebrated divine, was born at Marlborough, and educated at Magdalen college, Oxford, of which he became fellow, and proceeded to the degree of doctor in divinity in 1709. He tranſlated into Engliſh verſe part of Virgil's firſt Georgic in Dryden's Miſcellanies, and Mr. Addiſon addreſſed to him his Account of Engliſh Poets: but what has made his name remarkable was his trial by impeachment for two political ſermons, before the lord mayor in 1709. This trial occupied the public attention in an extraordinary manner; and though the doctor was ſuſpended for three years, as ſoon as that period expired he was preſented to the valuable living of St Andrew, Holborn. He died in 1724.—Gen. Hiſt. Dict.

SACHTLEVEN (Herman), a landſcape painter, was born at Rotterdam in 1609, and died in 1685. His pictures are valuable. There was alſo Cornelius Sachtleven, a landſcape painter, but he was not equal to Herman.—Houbraken.

SACKVILLE (Thomas), the firſt lord Buckhurſt, and earl of Dorſet, was born in 1536. He wrote, "The Induction, or Introduction to the Mirror of Magiſtrates," a ſeries of poems; and a tragedy called Gorboduc, which was acted in 1561 before the queen at Whitehall. He became a member of the privy council, and was one of the commiſſioners on the trial of Mary queen of Scots. In 1598 he was appointed lord treaſurer, and in 1601 ſat as high ſteward on the trial of the earl of Eſſex. At the acceſſion of James I. he was created earl of Dorſet. He died in 1608.—Biog. Brit.

SACKVILLE (Edward), earl of Dorſet, grandſon of the above, was born in 1590. In 1613 he fought a deſperate duel in Zealand with lord Bruce, who was ſlain, of which an account may be ſeen in the Guardian, vol. 2, No. 129. He was one of the principal commanders ſent in 1620 to aſſiſt Frederick, king of Bohemia, and was at the memorable battle of Prague in 1620. The year following he was ſent ambaſſador to the court of France. In 1624, by the death of his elder brother, he ſucceeded to the title and eſtate. He was in great favour with king Charles, and became knight of the garter, preſident of the council, and lord privy ſeal. He died in 1652. He was ſucceeded by his ſon Richard, who dying in 1677, the title devolved to his ſon.

SACKVILLE (Charles), who was born in 1637. He received a private education, after which he went on his travels, and on his return to England was elected member of parliament for Eaſt Grinſtead. In the Dutch war of 1665 he ſerved as a volunteer under the duke of York, and the night before the famous ſea engagement wrote a famous ſong. On the death of his uncle the earl of Middleſex, he ſucceeded to the title and eſtate, as he did to his father's in 1677. His lordſhip engaged early in the intereſt of the prince of Orange, and conducted the princeſs Anne to Northampton. For this he was made a member of the privy council, lord chamberlain, and knight of the garter. He died in 1706. Lord Dorſet was a great patron of men of letters, particularly Prior. He was himſelf a man of genius, and wrote ſome poetical pieces of merit.—Biog. Brit.

SACKVILLE (George, lord viſcount), was the third ſon of the firſt duke of Dorſet, and born in 1716. He received his education firſt at Weſtminſter ſchool, and next at Trinity college, Dublin, when his father was lord lieutenant of Ireland. In 1737 he obtained a commiſſion in the army, and diſtinguiſhed himſelf at the battles of Dettingen and Fontenoy. He was afterwards with the duke of Cumberland in Scotland, where he contributed to the quelling of the rebellion. In 1758 he was appointed lieutenant-general, and ſworn a member of the privy council. The ſame year he commanded with the duke of Marlborough in the expedition againſt St. Malo. Soon afterwards he went to Germany, where, at the battle of Minden, Aug. 1, 1759, he commanded the Britiſh and Hanoverian horſe. In the action, orders were ſent to bring them up, but theſe were ſo confuſed and unintelligible that the troops did ot arrive in time to have any ſhare in the ictory. The Britiſh general was in conſeuence violently cenſured, his name was ruck out of the liſt of the privy council, and court martial diſmiſſed him from the ſerice. On the acceſſion of the preſent king e was reſtored to favour; and in 1769, by he will of lady Elizabeth Germaine, he ſucceeded to her property, on which occaſion he ook her name. The next year he fought a uel with governor Johnſtone, who had reflected on him in a ſpeech in the h uſe of ommons. In 1775 his lordſhip was appointed ſecretary of ſtate for the American olonies, and firſt lord of trade; but on a hange of adminiſtration he loſt his places, nd was advanced to the peerage. He died 1785.—Europ. Mag. vol. viii.

SACY (Louis de), a French writer, was dvocate of the parliament of Paris, and a ember of the French academy. He died in 727, aged 73. He publiſhed a Tranſlation f Pliny's Letters, and the Panegyric on Tran, 3 vols; alſo Treatiſes on Friendſhip nd Glory; with other pieces in an elegant yle.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

SADDER, or Saahdi, a Perſian poet, was orn at Schiraz A.D. 1193. He quitted erſia when it was invaded by the Turks, nd went into Paleſtine, where he was taken riſoner by the cruſaders, and compelled to hour in the fortifications. He was afterards ranſomed by a merchant of Aleppo, hoſe daughter he eſpouſed with a handſome owry; but the marriage was unhappy, owg to the bad temper of his wife. Saahdi ed in 1291. His poems are highly eſteemed. he principal are, Guliſtan, or the Garden Flowers; Boſtan, or the Garden of Fruits; nd Molaamat, the Sparkles; an Engliſh rſion was printed at Calcutta in 1795, fo.—D'Herbelot.

SADELER (John), an engraver, was born Bruſſels in 1550. His merits recommend him to the patronage of the duke of Bava, by which means he was enabled to viſit aly; but he died at Venice, not long after s arrival. His brother and diſciple Raphael deler, was alſo a good artiſt. Giles Sadeler, eir nephew, died at Prague in 1629. He rpaſſed his uncles; and was penſioned by e emperor Rodolph II. His Veſtigi della ntichrita di Roma, folio, 1660, is an teemed work.—Moreri.

SADLER (ſir Ralph), a ſtateſman, was rn at Hackney, in Middleſex, about 1507. e was educated under Thomas Cromwell rl of Eſſex, and became maſter of the royal rdrobe, afterwards a member of the privy uncil, and ſecretary of ſtate. He died in 87.—Gen. Hiſt. Dict.

SADLER (Anthony), an Engliſh divine, s born at Chilton, in Wiltſhire, in 1610. e was educated at Edmund hall, Oxford, here he proceeded to his doctor's degree, d at the reſtoration was appointed chaplain the king. He died in 1680. He wrote a divine maſque, dedicated to general Monk, and ſeveral ſermons and tracts.—Wood, A. O.

SADLER (John), a law writer, was born in 1615. He publiſhed a work, entitled, "Rights of the Kingdom, or Cuſtoms of our Anceſtors." He died at Warmwell, in Dorſetſhire, in 1674.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

SADOC, a famous Jewiſh doctor, and founder of the ſect of Sadducees, lived two centuries before Chriſt. He taught that virtue is to be practiſed for its own ſake, and that there are neither puniſhments nor rewards hereafter. His followers were very numerous.—Joſephus.

SADOLET (James), an Italian writer, was born at Modena in 1478. He became ſecretary to Leo X. who compelled him to accept the biſhopric of Carpentras, which he would modeſtly have declined. Paul III. made him a cardinal, and appointed him legate to the court of France. He died in 1547. His works are, Diſcourſes, Epiſtles: Expoſitions of the Pſalms, and St. Paul's Epiſtles; and Poems; all publiſhed together at Verona in 3 vols. 4to. His Latinity is correct and beautiful.—Tiraboſchi.

SAGE (Alain-Renéle), an ingenious French writer, was born at Ruys, in Brittany, in 1677, and died at Paris in 1747. He wrote ſome good dramatic pieces, but his greateſt performances, are the Adventures of Gil Blas; the Bachelor of Salamanca; and the Devil on Two Sticks; in compoſing which, however, it is evident he was much indebted to ſome Spaniſh works. He alſo publiſhed Guzman de Alfarache, or the Spaniſh Rogue; the Letters of Ariſtenætus, from the Greek; and New Adventures of Don Quixote, &c.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

SAGE (David le), a French poet, was born at Montpellier, and was the author of a collection of ſonnets, elegies, ſatires, and epigrams, called, "The Follies of Le Sage." He died about 1650.—Moreri.

SAGE (John), a Scotch divine, was born in Fifeſhire in 1652. He was educated at St. Andrew's, and in 1684 was epiſcopally ordained. After the revolution he was choſen by the epiſcopalians biſhop of Edinburgh, but he was much perſecuted by the preſbyterian party. He died in 1711. Biſhop Sage wrote an able defence of epiſcopacy, entitled, the Principles of the Cyprianic Age; and ſome other works.—Skinner's Hiſt. Ch of Scotland.

SAGITTARIUS (Gaſpard), a Lutheran divine, and profeſſor of hiſtory at Halle, in Saxony, was born at Lunenburgh in 1643, and died in 1694. He publiſhed Diſſertations on the Oracles; the Succeſſion of the Princes of Orange, to William III.; Hiſtory of the City of Hardewyck; Life of St. Norbert; Hiſtoria Antiqua Norbergiæ; Genealogy of the Dukes of Brunſwick, &c.—Moreri.

SAGREDO (John), a noble Venetian, who was procurator of St. Mark, and elected doge in 1675. He published a History of the Ottoman Empire, in Italian, 1677, 4to.

SAINT-AMAND (Marc Anthony-Girard de), a French writer, was born at Rouen. He passed the greatest part of his life in travelling and rhyming, by which he did not better his fortune. His best piece is an ode "On Solitude." He died in 1660.—Moreri.

SAINT-AULAIRE (Francis-Joseph de Beaupoil, marquis de), an ingenious French nobleman, was born in the Limousin, and bore arms in his youth, but afterwards quitted that profession, and devoted himself to ease and literature. He was admitted a member of the French academy in 1706, and died at Paris in 1742, aged 98. He wrote some lively pieces in the manner of Anacreon.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

SAINTE-ALDEGONDE (Philip de Marnix lord du Mont), a statesman, was born at Brussels in 1538. The cruelties of the Spaniards in the Low Countries induced him to retire to Heidelberg, where he became a member of the ecclesiastical council. In 1572 he returned to his own country, and was deputed by the states to go to England, to solicit aid from queen Elizabeth. He afterwards went to France for the same purpose, and to offer the sovereignty of Flanders to the duke de Alençon, whom he accompanied to England. He wrote a book called Alvearium Romanum; by way of ridiculing the church of Rome. He died at Leyden in 1598.—Moreri.

SAINT-CYRAN. [See VERGER.]

SAINT-JOHN (Henry), viscount Bolinbroke, was born at Battersea in Surry in 1672. He was educated at Eton school, from whence he removed to Christ church, Oxford. In 1707 he became member of parliament for Wotton Basset, when he joined the tory party, of which Mr. Harley, the speaker, was the head. In 1704 he was appointed secretary at war, but when his friend Harley resigned the seals in 1707 Mr. St. John followed his example. In 1710 he became secretary of state on Mr. Harley's being made chancellor of the exchequer. He sustained almost the whole weight of the difficulties in negociating the peace of Utrecht, and in 1712 was created baron St. John, viscount Bolinbroke, and at the same time appointed lord lieutenant of the county of Essex; but these honours not answering his expectations he formed the design of taking the lead in public affairs from his friend Harley, earl of Oxford, which in the end was unfortunate to both. On the accession of George I. the seals were taken from the secretary, and the papers in his office secured, on which he withdrew to France, where the pretender invited him into his service, which he declined at first, but afterwards accepted. In the mean time he was impeached of high treason in England, and the same year lost the favour of his new connections. In this situation he set himself about making his peace at home, in which he succeeded, but did not receive a full pardon till 1723, on which he returned to England, and recovered his family inheritance. During his residence abroad he married a niece of madame de Maintenon, with whom he had a large fortune. His ambitious turn led him to join the opposition, against sir Robert Walpole, whose administration he attacked in the Craftsman, and several pamphlets. His lordship died of a cancer in his face, at Battersea, in 1751. The best of his works appears to be his Letters on the Study and Use of History. His genius was fine and vigorous, and his style flowing and neat; but his prejudices against Christianity were inveterate. All his works were published after his death by Mallet, in 5 vols. 4to. Lord Bolinbroke was the friend of Swift and Pope, the latter of whom has immortalized his name in his Essay on Man.—Biog. Brit.

SAINTE-MARTHE (Gaucher de), more known under the name of Scævola de St. Marthe, was born in 1536. He exercised several state employments in the reigns of Henry III. and Henry IV. and died greatly esteemed in 1623. He wrote a number of Latin poems, and some in French; also a work entitled, Gallorum doctrina illustrium, &c. He had three sons: Abel de St Marthe, the eldest, became counsellor of state, and keeper of the library at Fontainbleau. His poems were published in one volume quarto. He died in 1652. Scævola and Louis were twins, and resembled each other in person and mind. They were historiographers of France, and published in conjunction some genealogical works of merit. The former died in 1650, and the last in 1656. There were some other ingenious persons of this family.—Moreri.

SAINT-FOIX (Germain Francis Poullain de), a French writer, was a native of Rennes in Brittany. He served some time in the army, but quitted that career, and devoted himself to literature at Paris, where he became historiographer of the order of the Holy Ghost. He died in 1776, aged 74. His works are, 1. Turkish Letters, an epistolary romance; 2. Historical Essays on Paris, 7 vols. 12mo.; 3. History of the Order of the Holy Ghost, 3 vols. 12mo.; 4. Comedies, 3 vols. 12mo.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

SAINT-GERMAIN (Robert, count de), was born in Franche-Comté in 1708, and received his education among the Jesuits, after which he entered into the army, and distinguished himself in the wars of 1741 and 1757. Being disgusted with the treatment he received in his own country, he entered into the Danish service, and was made field-marshal. Having lost his property by the bankruptcy of a house at Hamburgh, he retired to a small estate in Alsace; but after the accession of Louis XVI. he was drawn from his retreat, and made minister at war, in which department he introduced several od regulations, and reformed many abuſes. : died in 1778. He wrote his own Me- oirs, which were printed in 1779, in 1 vol. o.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

SAINT-LAMBERT (Charles Francis de), mber of the French academy, and after- rds of the national inſtitute, was born at ncy in 1717, and died in 1802. His rks are, 1. the Feats of Love, a Comedy; Eſſay on Luxury; 3. the Four Parts of Day, a poem; 4. the Seaſons, a poem. oltaire gave this the preference to the ce- rated work of Thomſon, but without rea- . 5. Oriental Tales, &c.—Ibid.

SAINT-PIERRE (Euſtace de), a burgher Calais, who ſignalized himſelf when that ce was beſieged by Edward III. king of gland, in 1347. The brave reſiſtance de by the inhabitants ſo irritated the mo- ch, that he is ſaid to have demanded ſix their principal citizens to be delivered up him that they might be put to death. ſtace offered himſelf for one, and was join- by five others, who went out to the Eng- camp in their ſhirts, with halters about ir necks, and bearing the keys of the city. the entreaty of queen Philippa Edward doned theſe virtuous men, and diſmiſſed m with preſents. The ſtory, however, is certain.—Rapin.

SAINT-PIERRE (Charles Irenæus Caſtel , a French eccleſiaſtic and politician, was n in Normandy in 1658. He accompani- cardinal Polignac to the conference at recht, and he was alſo admitted a member the French academy; but after the death Louis XIV. he was excluded for ſome po- cal opinions which he had hazarded. He d in 1743. His principal works are, Pro- t for a Univerſal Peace between the vers of Europe, 3 vols. 12mo.; Memoirs Correcting the Police; Critical Reflec- ns on the Labours of the French Academy, —Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

SAINT-SIMON (Louis de Rouvroi, duke , was born at Paris in 1675. After ſerv- in the army he was employed in ſtate af- s, and in 1721 ſent ambaſſador to Spain demand the infanta in marriage for Louis . Having a difference with the regent, duke of Orleans, he retired to his eſtate, ere he died at a very advanced age. His moirs, which are very curious, have n printed in 13 vols. 8vo. Straſburg.— l.

SAINT-YVES (Charles), an able oculiſt, born near Rocroi in 1667, and died in 36. His Treatiſe on Diſorders of the Eyes, nted at Amſterdam in 4to. and 8vo. is very ch eſteemed.—Ibid.

SALADIN, or SALAHEDDIN, a celebrated an of Egypt and Syria, ſucceeded Adad, diſtinguiſhed himſelf in the time of the ſades by his valour. He made great con- ſts in Syria, Arabia, Perſia, and Meſopo- ia; after which he defeated the Chriſtians h a great ſlaughter, near Tiberius, and k Guy de Luſignan, king of Jeruſalem, priſoner. This was followed by the ſurren- der of Jeruſalem, where he behaved with great generoſity to the Chriſtians. He died in 1193. Before his death he cauſed his winding ſheet to be diſplayed as a ſtandard before his army, and a herald to proclaim this leſſon of mortality, "Behold all that remains to Saladin, the vanquiſher of the Eaſt, after all his conqueſts."—Hiſtory of Saladin by Marin, 1758.

SALARIO (Andrew), a painter of Milan, was a diſciple of Leonardo da Vinci. His pictures are valuable. He died at Florence in 1559, aged 72.—De Piles.

SALE (George), an Engliſh writer, who was well verſed in the oriental languages. His greateſt work is an excellent tranſlation of the Koran, to which he prefixed a curious diſſertation. Mr. Sale was alſo one of the principal authors of the Antient Univerſal Hiſtory. He died in 1736.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

SALESBURY (William), a Welſh grammarian at the beginning of the 17th century, was bred to the law. He aſſiſted biſhop Davies in tranſlating the New Teſtament into Welſh, printed in 1620. He was alſo the author of a Welſh Dictionary; a Treatiſe on Rhetoric; and poems.—Owen's Camb. Biog.

SALIMBENI (Venura), an hiſtorical painter, was born at Sienna in 1557, and died in 1613. At Wilton there is a fine picture by him of the deſcent of the Holy Ghoſt.—Pilkington.

SALLENGRE (Albert Henry de), an ingenious writer, was born at the Hague in 1694. He was educated at Leyden, after which he became an advocate; He died in 1723. He wrote the Hiſtory of Montmaur, 2 vols. 12mo.; Memoirs of Literature, 2 vols.; Novus Theſaurus Antiquitatum Romanarum, 3 vols. fol.; Eſſay on the Hiſtory of the United Provinces, 4to.—Moreri.

SALLO (Dennis de), was born at Paris in 1626. He was a counſellor in the parliament of Paris, and diſtinguiſhed himſelf by his literary talents, and the urbanity of his diſpoſition. He formed the project of the Journal des Savans, which commenced in 1665, and was the firſt literary journal ever publiſhed. He died in 1669.—Moreri.

SALLUST (Caius Criſpus), a Latin hiſtorian, was born at Amiturnum, in Italy. He was educated under the grammarian Pretextatus, and after going through different employments at Rome, became ſucceſſively quæſtor and tribune. His manners were depraved, and he was degraded from the rank of ſenator, but was reſtored by Cæſar, who gave him the government of Numidia, to repair his diſſipated fortune. On his return to Rome he built a ſuperb palace, and ſpent the reſt of his life in luxury and debauchery. He died B. C. 34. It is ſurpriſing that ſuch a man as Salluſt ſhould ſpare time to literature; yet his talents were great, and his Hiſtories of Catiline's Conſpiracy, and of the Jugurthine Wars, throw a veil over the defects of his moral character. The beſt editions of Salluſt are the Elzevir, 1634, 12mo.; the Variorum, Amſtel, 8vo.; and Barbou, Paris, 1761, 12mo.—Biog. Claſſica.

SALMANASAR, king of Aſſyria, ſucceeded his father Tiglathphalaſar, B. C. 728. He took Samaria, and carried the inhabitants into captivity, thereby putting an end to the kingdom of Iſrael. He was defeated at ſea by the Tyrians, and died 714 B.C.—Joſephus.

SALMASIUS, or Saumaiſe (Claude), a learned writer, was born at Saumur in 1588. He received his firſt education under his father, and afterwards ſtudied at Paris and Heidelberg. He ſucceeded Scaliger as profeſſor of hiſtory at Leyden. Richelieu offered him a conſiderable penſion on condition of ſettling in France, which Salmaſius refuſed. The king, however, conferred on him the order of St. Michael, and the brevet of a counſellor of ſtate. In 1649 he wrote an able defence of Charles I. king of England, which was replied to by Milton. The year following he went to Sweden on an invitation from queen Chriſtina. He died at the Spa in 1653. His principal works are, Hiſtoriæ Auguſtæ Scriptores Sex, folio; De Modo Uſurarum; Diſſertatio de fœnore trepezetico, in tres libros diviſo; De re militari Romanorum; De Helleniſtica, 8vo.; and ſeveral editions of ancient authors, as Florus, Polyhiſtor, Simplicius on Epictetus, &c.—Bayle.

SALMERON (Alphonſus), a learned Jeſuit, was born at Toledo, and ſtudied at Paris. He was one of the firſt and moſt zealous diſciples of Loyola; and gained great reputation at the council of Trent. He contributed to the eſtabliſhment of a college at Naples, where he died in 1585. He left numerous Commentaries on the Scriptures, and other works, in 8 vols. folio.—Moreri.

SALMON (William), a practiſer in phyſic, and a voluminous compiler of books, as "The Complete Phyſician, or Druggiſt's Shop opened;" a large Herbal in 2 vols. folio; Treatiſe on Aſtrology; Polygraphice, or the Art of Painting, &c. This laſt is the beſt of his works. He died about 1700.—Granger.

SALMON (Thomas), an Engliſh hiſtorian, and general writer, who died in 1743. He had a concern in the Univerſal Hiſtory; compiled a work, called, the Preſent State of all Nations; and was the author of a Grographical Grammar, 8vo; the plan of which was adopted by Guthrie. Salmon was alſo the author of a valuable book, entitled, the Chronological Hiſtory of England, 2 vols. 8vo.; and of an Examination of Burnet's Hiſtory of his own Times.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

SALMON (Nathaniel), brother of the above, was educated at Bene't college, Cambridge. He entered into orders, but becoming a non-juror, he turned phyſician. He died in 1742. His works are, a Survey of the Roman Stations in Britain, 2 vols. 8vo.; the Hiſtory of Hertfordſhire, folio; the Antiquities of Surry, 8vo.; Lives of Biſhops ſince the Reſtoration, 1 vol. 8vo.—Ibid.

SALONINA, wife of the emperor Gallienus, was a great benefactreſs to the city of Rome, and a friend of men of learning and genius. She accompanied her huſband in moſt of his military expeditions, and was murdered with him in 268.—Moreri.

SALTER (Samuel), an Engliſh divine, was born at Norwich, and educated at the Charter-houſe, from whence he was ſent to Bene't College, Cambridge, where he obtained a fellowſhip. He became preacher to the Charter-houſe, and in 1761 maſter. He died in 1778. Dr. Salter was a man of extenſive learning and prodigious memory; and always preached without notes.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

SALVI (John), an hiſtorical painter, was born near Urbino in 1504, and died in 1590. He copied the works of great maſters with ſurpriſing accuracy.—Pilkington.

SALVI (Nicolas), an architect, was born at Rome in 1699. The moſt conſiderable of his works is the fountain of Trevi, executed by the order of Clement XII. He died in 1751.—D'Argenville.

SALVIAN, or SALVIANUS, a divine of the 5th century, is ſuppoſed to have been a native of Cologne, and died at Marſeilles about 484. His principal piece is a Treatiſe on Providence. His works, which are written in an elegant ſtyle, were printed in 2 vols. 8vo. 1628.—Dupin. Moreri.

SALVIANI (Hyppolitus), a learned phyſician, was born of a noble family in Umbria, and practiſed with reputation at Rome, where he died in 1572, aged 59. He wrote, 1. a Treatiſe on Fiſhes, folio; 2 De Criſibus ad Galeni cenſuram; 3. Italian Poems and Comedies.—Tiraboſchi.

SALVIATI (Francis), a Florentine painter, was born in 1510. His family name was Roſſi, which he changed out of reſpect to his patron cardinal Salviati. He died in 1563. His heads are admirably executed, and the draperies and attitudes are alſo very fine. Joſeph Porta, his diſciple, altered his name to that of Salviati. He was an excellent painter, and well verſed in chemiſtry and the mathematics. He was a native of Venice, and died in 1585.—De Piles. Felibien.

SALVIATI (Leonard), a learned writer, was born at Florence in 1540, and died in 1589. He was a member of the academy Della Cruſca, and one of the compilers of the dictionary publiſhed under the name of that ſociety. He wrote two comedies; a criticiſm on Taſſo, called, Infarinato; and Obſervations on Boccacio.—Tiraboſchi.

SALVINI (Antony Marie), was a native of Florence, and profeſſor of Greek in that univerſity. He was a member of the academy Della Cruſca, and had a conſiderable ſhare in compiling its dictionary. He alſo publiſhed tranſlations from ſeveral Greek authors; the Satires and Art of Poetry of Horace; the Metamorphoſes of Ovid; and other works from the Latin; Boileau's Art Poetry, from the French; and Addiſon's ...o, from the Engliſh. His own writings ..., a Funeral Oration for Magliabechi; ...nets; and Academical Diſcourſes. He ...d in 1729.—Tiraboſchi.

SAMBUCUS (John), a phyſician, was born ...Tirnau, in Hungary, in 1531. He was ...nſellor of ſtate, and hiſtoriographer of the ...ire, and died at Vienna in 1584. He ...te the Lives of the Roman Emperors; a ...tory of Hungary; Emblemata; Icones ...dicorum; and other works.—Lit. Hiſt. of ...gary.

SAMPSON (William), an author in the ...n of king Charles I. who wrote a play, ...tled, The Vow Breaker. He alſo aſ...d Markham in his tragedy of Herod and ...ipater.—Biog. Dram.

SAMPSON (Henry), an Engliſh divine and ...ſician, was born at South Leverton in ...tinghamſhire, and educated at Pembroke-..., Cambridge, where he took his degrees ...rts, and became fellow; but was ejected ...he reſtoration for non-conformity. He ...n went abroad and ſtudied phyſic at Padua ...Leyden, where he took his doctor's degree. ...his return to England he was choſen a ...mber of the college of phyſicians. He ... in 1705. He made collections for a ...tory of Nonconformiſts, which he never ...liſhed.—Fun. Serm. by Howe.

SAMSON, the ſon of Manoah, of the tribe ...Dan. He was endowed with extraordinary ...ngth, and obtained ſeveral advantages ...nſt the Philiſtines. At length his miſ... betrayed him into the hands of his ene..., who put out his eyes, and made him ...k at a mill. On a public feſtival, when ...Philiſtine lords were aſſembled in the ...ple of Dagon, Samſon was ſent for to ...them ſport. Laying hold of two pillars ...the temple as if to ſupport himſelf, he ...ed down the building, and was buried in ...ruins with above 3000 Philiſtines, B.C. ...—Bible.

SAMUEL, a prophet of the tribe of Levi, ...called in his youth while attending Eli ...high prieſt. He conſecrated Saul king ...Iſrael, and afterwards anointed David to ...office. The books of Judges and Ruth ...attributed to him. He died aged 98, ... 1057. After his death Saul had re...ſe to a witch at Endor to bring up his ...t.—Ibid.

SAMWELL (David), a native of Nantglyn ...Denbighſhire. He was ſurgeon of the ...Diſcovery, with captain Cook, and was ...ye-witneſs of the death of that cele...d navigator, of which event he wrote a ...mſtantial account in a quarto pamphlet. ...was alſo the author of ſome Welſh ...s. He died in 1799.—Owen's Cambr.

SANADON (Noel Stephen), a learned Je... was born at Rouen in 1676. He be... profeſſor of rhetoric at Paris, and had ...harge of educating the prince of Conti. ...was afterwards appointed librarian to the king, and died in 1733. His principal works are Latin poems, 2 vols.; and a Tranſlation of Horace, with Notes, 2 vols. 4to.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

SANCHES (Antonio Nunes Ribeiro), a Portugueſe phyſician, was born in 1699. He ſtudied at Leyden under Boerhaave, after which he ſettled in Ruſſia, where he became phyſician to the empreſs and to the army. In 1742 he left that country and went to Paris, where he died in 1783. He wrote a Diſſertation on the Origin of the Venereal Diſeaſe; another on Earthquakes; and a Method of Studying Medicine.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

SANCHEZ (Thomas), a Spaniſh Jeſuit, was born at Corduba in 1551, and died at Grenada in 1610. His works, in 5 vols. folio, diſplay great learning.—Nic. Antonio. Bibl. Scrip. Hiſp.

SANCHO, called the Strong, king of Caſtille, and ſon of Ferdinand. He dethroned his brothers, the kings of Gallicia and of Leon, and ſeized their dominions. He was ſlain in 1072.—Mariana.

SANCHO (Ignatius), an extraordinary negro, was born in 1729, on board a ſlave ſhip, in the paſſage to Spaniſh America. At Carthagena he was baptized, and received the name of Ignatius. He was brought to England by ſome ladies, and afterwards became butler to the ducheſs of Montague, who left him 30l a year. He then ſet up a ſmall ſhop in the grocery line, having married a young woman of Weſt Indian origin. Being paſſionately fond of the ſtage, an attempt was made to bring him forward in the characters of Othello and Oroonoko, but a defect in his articulation put a ſtop to it. He was intimate with Sterne, Garrick, and other eminent men; his correſpondence has been publiſhed, and ſhews marks of genius and obſervation. He died in 1780.—Life by Jekyll, prefixed to his Letters.

SANCHONIATHON, a Phœnician hiſtorian, who wrote antiquities of his country, tranſlated into Greek by Philo of Byblos. But only ſome fragments remain in Porphyry and Euſebius. Sanchoniathon is ſuppoſed to have lived in the time of Gideon, judge of Iſrael.—Voſſius de Hiſt. Græc.

SANCROFT (William), archbiſhop of Canterbury, was born at Freſingfield, in Suffolk, in 1616, and educated at Emanuel college, Cambridge, where he obtained a fellowſhip; which he loſt on account of his loyalty, in 1649. After the reſtoration he became chaplain to the biſhop of Durham, who preſented him to the valuable living of Houghton-le-Spring, and a prebend in his cathedral. In 1664 he was made dean of York, from whence he removed to the deanry of St. Paul's, towards rebuilding which he contributed 1400l. In 1677 he was raiſed to the higheſt ſtation in the church, where he conducted himſelf with zeal and judgment. He was one of the ſeven biſhops ſent to the Tower by James II.; but at the revolution he ſcrupled taking the oaths, for which he was deprived of his ſeat. He then led a private and devout life at Freſingfield, where he died in 1693. He wrote a curious little dialogue in Latin, againſt Calviniſm, called, the Predeſtinated Thief; alſo, Modern Politics, taken from Machiavel, &c. and ſeveral ſermons. His manuſcripts were purchaſed by biſhop Tanner, who gave them to the Bodleian library, Oxford.—Biog. Brit.

SANCTORIUS, profeſſor of medicine at Padua, was born at Capo d'Iſtria in 1561. He made a number of curious experiments on inſenſible perſpiration; to eſtimate which he cauſed a balance to be made with a ſeat, in which he placed himſelf after his meals. The reſult of his obſervations he publiſhed in his Medicina Statica Aphoriſmi; which has been tranſlated into Engliſh by Quincy. Sanctorius alſo wrote Methodus Vitandorum Errorum qui in Arte Medica Contingunt, 4to. He died at Venice in 1636.—Moreri.

SANDEY (Thomas), profeſſor of architecture in the royal academy of London, was born at Nottingham in 1721, and died in 1798.—Gent. Mag.

SANDEMAN (Robert), a Scotch miniſter, was born at Perth in 1723, and educated at St. Andrew's. He formed a ſect which ſtill goes by his name. In 1766 he went to New England, where he gathered many followers, and died in 1772. He wrote an Anſwer to Hervey's Dialogues, in two volumes, exhibiting more aſperity than argument.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

SANDERS (Nicholas), a zealous Roman-catholic writer, was born at Charlewood in Surry, and educated firſt at Wykeham's ſchool near Wincheſter, and next at New college, Oxford, of which he became fellow. About 1560 he went to Rome, where he entered into prieſt's orders, was made doctor of divinity, and accompanied cardinal Hoſius to the council of Trent, and afterwards to Poland. Pope Gregory XIII. ſent him nuncio to Ireland, where, to avoid falling into the hands of the Engliſh, he wandered about in the woods and bogs, and periſhed of want in 1581. His principal work is his treatiſe againſt the reformation, entitled, De Origine ac Progreſſu Schiſmatis Anglicani, 8vo.—Wood, A. O.

SANDERS (Robert), a literary compiler, was born in Scotland about 1729. He wrote a novel called Gaffer Greybeard, 4 vols. 12mo.; and put together for the bookſellers, the Complete Engliſh Traveller, folio; and the Newgate Calendar. He was alſo amanuenſis to lord Lyttleton, when his lordſhip was engaged on the Hiſtory of Henry II. He died in 1783.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

SANDERSON (Robert), a learned Engliſh prelate, was born at Rotherham, in Yorkſhire, in 1587, and educated firſt at the grammar ſchool there, and next at Lincoln college, Oxford, where he was choſen fellow in 1606. He reſigned his fellowſhip in 1619, on obtaining the rectory of Boothby Pagnel, in Lincolnſhire, which he enjoyed above forty years. In 1631 he became chaplain to the king, who always had a great regard for him; and in 1642 appointed him regius profeſſor of divinity at Oxford. Dr. Sanderſon attended his majeſty to the Iſle of Wight; and at his deſire wrote his Judgment of Epiſcopacy, when the parliament propoſed to aboliſh that form of church government. At the reſtoration he was promoted to the biſhopric of Lincoln, and was moderator at the Savoy conference between the Epiſcopal and Preſbyterian divines. He died in 1663. The biſhop was one of the moſt eminent caſuiſts of his time, profoundly learned, and of great piety and moderation. His chief works are, Artis Logicæ Compendium; a Collection of Sermons, folio; Caſes of Conſcience; Lectures read in the divinity ſchool at Oxford; De Juramenti Obligatione; De Obligatione Conſcientiæ; Pax Eccleſiæ, about predeſtination, &c.—Life by Walton. Biog. Brit.

SANDERSON (Robert), a learned antiquary, was uſher of the court of chancery, and clerk of the rolls. He continued Rymer's Fœdera, from the 16th to the 20th volume, and died in 1741.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

SANDIUS (Chriſtopher), a Socinian writer, was born in 1644, at Konigſberg, in Pruſſia, and died at Amſterdam in 1680. He wrote, 1. Nucleus Hiſtoriæ Eccleſiaſticæ; 2. Library of Socinian Writers, 8vo.; 3. Interpretationes Paradoxæ in Joannem; 4. De Origine Animæ; 5. Scriptura Sanctæ Trinitatis Revelatrix, &c.—Moreri.

SANDRART (Joachim), a painter, was born at Frankfort in 1606. He was employed by the king of Spain; but he is principally known by his work, entitled, the Lives of Celebrated Painters; and as the founder of an academy at Nuremburg, where he died in 1683.—Felibien.

SANDYS (Edwin), an Engliſh prelate, was born in 1519, at Hawkſhead, in Lancaſhire. He received his education at St. John's college, Cambridge, and about 1547 was elected maſter of Catherine hall. At the acceſſion of Mary he was vice-chancellor, and on refuſing to proclaim her was deprived of his office, and ſent firſt to the Tower, and afterwards to the Marſhalſea; but after a confinement of ſome weeks he was ſet at liberty, on which he went abroad. When Elizabeth came to the throne he returned, and was appointed one of the commiſſioners for reviſing the Liturgy. He was alſo made biſhop of Worceſter, and had a ſhare in the tranſlation of the Scriptures commonly called the Biſhops Bible. In 1570 he was tranſlated to London, and in 1576 to York, where a wicked conſpiracy was formed to fix on him the imputation of adultery, which was diſcovered and the actors puniſhed. He died in 1588. His ſermons and letters have been printed.—Biog. Brit.

SANDYS (ſir Edwin), ſecond ſon of the above, was born about 1561, and educated at ford, under the learned Hooker. He n went on his travels, and the result of observations he published under the title Europæ Speculum, in quarto. He was ghted by James I. and died in 1629. He 1500l. to the university of Oxford, for endowment of a metaphysical lecture.—

ANDYS (George), brother of the prece-, was born at Bishopsthorpe in York- in 1577. He received his education at ford, after which he travelled through se- al parts of Europe and Asia. In 1615 an unt of his travels was printed in folio, plates. Of this curious and accurate numerous editions have been published. lso translated the Psalms into verse, and 's Metamorphoses; and both Dryden and bestow upon him great commendations. died in 1643.—Wood. Granger.

ANNAZARIUS (James), an Italian poet, born at Naples in 1458, and died in 0. His Latin poems were printed at es in 1718, 12mo., and are written in legant style. The most celebrated of talian poems is his Arcadia, printed first 502, and several times since.—Tira-i.

ANSON (Nicholas), a French geographer, born at Abbeville in 1600, and died in . He was engineer and geographer to ing. His maps are accurate and valua- He wrote Disquisitiones Geographicæ in um Galliæ, 2 vols. 12mo.; and other s on geography.—Niceron.

ANSOVINO (James, called Fatti), a sculp- nd architect, was born at Florence in . The mint, and the library of St. at Venice, are magnificent specimens skill. When a tax was laid upon the bitants of Venice, Titian and himself exempted. He died in 1570. His son, is Sansovino, took his degrees in law at a, but afterwards set up a printing-office nice, where he died in 1586. He pub- a translation of Plutarch; Chronology e World; Annals of the Ottoman Em- and a collection of novels, entitled, Novelle Scelte de piu Nobili Scrittori della Volgare, 4to.—D'Argenville. Tira-

NTEUL (John Baptist), a poet, was at Paris in 1630. He became a mem- the society of canons regulars of St. r, and obtained a pension from the He died in 1697. His Latin poems eservedly admired; they are in 3 vols. .; and a collection of Hymns in the language, in 1 vol. 12mo. His brother e was also a good Latin poet. He died 4.—Moreri.

NTI di Titi, an historical and portrait r, was born at Florence in 1538, and n 1603. There are some beautiful es by him in his native city.—De Piles.

OR I. king of Persia, succeeded his Artaxerxes about A.D. 238. He Mesopotamia, Syria, and Cilicia, and made the emperor Valerian prisoner, but after being defeated by Odenatus, he was assassinated by his subjects, A.D. 273. Sapor II. succeeded his father Hormisdas. He was a warlike prince, and gained many advantages over the Romans; but tarnished his glory by a dreadful persecution of the christians. He died in 380.—Univ. Hist.

SAPPHO, was a native of Mitylene, in the isle of Lesbos. She excelled in lyric poetry, and flourished about 600 B.C. She was held in such estimation by her countrymen that they stamped her image on their coins. The manners of Sappho were loose, and she is said to have fallen in love with a young man named Phaon, who slighted her, on which she threw herself into the sea. Fragments of her poems are extant.

SARASIN (John Francis), a French author, was born at Hermanville, near Caen, in 1604, and died in 1654. He wrote Odes, Eclogues, Epigrams, and other poems; also a History of the Conspiracy of Walstein; a Treatise on the Game of Chess; History of the Siege of Dunkirk, &c —Moreri.

SARAVIA (Adrian), a protestant divine, was born at Hesdin in Artois in 1530. He became professor of divinity at Leyden, but afterwards came to England, where he obtained a canonry of Canterbury. He was the intimate friend of the famous Hooker, and attended him on his death-bed. Dr. Saravia died in 1611. His theological works have been printed in 1 vol. folio.—Wood.

SARBIEWSKI (Mathias Casimir), a jesuit, was born in Poland in 1595. After studying at Rome, where he received marks of favour from pope Urban VIII. he returned to Poland, and became professor of philosophy and theology at Wilna. He was also appointed preacher to king Ladislaus V. He died in 1640. His Latin poems are very elegant; the best edition is that of Barbou, at Paris, in 1759, 12mo.—Moreri.

SARDANAPALUS a famous king of Assyria, who is supposed to have been the same with Phul, mentioned in the Scripture. Arbaces, governor of Media, entering the royal palace, and seeing Sardanapalus dressed as a courtesan, surrounded by his eunuchs and mistresses, was so disgusted that he formed the design of conspiring against him. Belesis, governor of Babylon, entered into his views; and a civil war commenced, in which the king was defeated and besieged in Nineveh, where he set fire to his palace, and perished in the flames, B.C. 820.—Univ. Hist.

SARJEANT (John), a Romish priest, whose real name was Smith. He was born in Lincolnshire about 1621, and educated at Cambridge. He became secretary to the bishop of Durham, but in 1642 he went to Lisbon, and changed his religion. In 1652 he returned to England, and wrote some books against the protestant religion, one of which was answered by Dr. Tillotson. Sarjeant died about 1670.—Gen. Hist. Dict.

SARPI (Peter Paul), commonly called

Father Paul, was born at Venice in 1552. He became a member of the religious order of Servites, and when a young man acquired an uncommon reputation for his various learning and penetrating genius. Beſides his acquaintance with the languages, ancient and modern, he was well verſed in mathematics, philoſophy, theology, and medicine. Some authors have attributed to him, but without reaſon, the diſcovery of the circulation of the blood. In the diſputes between the republic of Venice and pope Paul V. father Paul diſtinguiſhed himſelf with ſuch ability in behalf of his country, that the pope ordered him to Rome, and on his refuſal to go thither excommunicated him. This did not abate the zeal of this virtuous citizen, who continued to maintain the rights of Venice againſt the pretended authority of the pope with vigour. An attempt was then made to murder him, and he was attacked on the bridge of St. Mark by five aſſaſſins, who left him pierced with wounds. This infamous deed rouſed the indignation of the ſenate, who proclaimed large rewards for the apprehenſion of the aſſaſſins, but they were never diſcovered. Though Father Paul recovered from his wounds, they ruined his health, and he died in 1623. His laſt words were, Eſto perpetua, ſuppoſed to allude to the liberties of his country. He wrote ſeveral eſteemed works; 1. The Hiſtory of the Council of Trent, printed in Italian at London in 1619, and in Latin the year following; 2. Conſiderations on the Cenſures of Paul V. againſt the Republic of Venice; 3. Treatiſe on the Interdict; 4. De Jure Aſylorum; 5. Treatiſe concerning the Inquiſition; 6. Treatiſe of Benefices; 7. Letters.—Memoirs printed at Venice, 1766.

SARTO (Andrew de), a painter, ſo named from being the ſon of a taylor, was born at Florence in 1478, and died in 1530. His pictures are admirably deſigned, and are remarkable for the excellence of the draperies. —De Piles.

SATURNINUS, a heretic of the ſecond century, who held that the world was created by angels, and that the intercourſe of the ſexes is unlawful.—Dupin. Moſheim.

SATURNINUS (Publius Sempronius), a Roman general, who having gained ſeveral victories over the Barbarians, aſſumed the title of emperor A D. 263. He was a man of great bravery, but was murdered by his ſoldiers for his ſeverity in 267. There was another of this name who was highly eſteemed by Aurelian, and regarded as the beſt of his generals. The people of Alexandria proclaimed him emperor in 280, but he refuſed the title. The troops, however, compelled him to accept it. He ſlew himſelf not long after at Apamea, where he was beſieged by Probus.—Crevier. Univ. Hiſt.

SAVAGE (Richard), an Engliſh poet, was the natural ſon of the counteſs of Macclesfield, by earl Rivers, and born in 1697. This unnatural woman cauſed him to be brought up without a knowledge of his origin, and framed a ſtory of his death to prevent his father from leaving him a proper ſupport. By the death of his nurſe he found ſome papers which diſcloſed the ſecret; but every effort made by him to gain his mother's favour was ineffectual. Having the misfortune to kill another man in a drunken quarrel, his mother deviſed every means ſhe could to get him executed; and when he was condemned ſhe endeavoured to prevent his receiving a royal pardon. However his friends procured him a reprieve; and lord Tyrconnel took him into his family. But the temper and conduct of Savage were moſt unfortunate. He quarrelled with his patron and was diſcarded. Queen Caroline allowed him a penſion of 50l. which he loſt at her death, and was reduced to great diſtreſs. He died in the priſon at Briſtol, where he was confined for a trifling debt, in 1743. Savage had conſiderable genius, but it was uncultivated. The beſt of his poems is entitled, the Baſtard.—Life by Dr. Johnſon.

SAVAGE (Samuel Morton), a diſſenting divine, was born at London in 1721. He received his education under Mr. Eames, and afterwards aſſiſted Dr. Jennings as lecturer in mathematics and philoſophy. In 1762, when the academy removed to Hoxton, he filled the divinity chair. In 1785 he quitted the academy. The univerſity of Aberdeen conferred on him the degree of doctor in divinity in 1767. He died in 1791. Dr. Savage printed ſome ſingle diſcourſes, and a volume of his ſermons has been printed ſince his death, with his life prefixed, from whence this article is taken.

SAVAGE (John), an Engliſh divine, was lecturer of St. George, Hanover-ſquare, and rector of Clothall, Hertfordſhire. He was very fond of attending Weſtminſter ſchool, where he had been bred, and when he died in 1747, the ſcholars erected a monument to his memory in the cloiſters.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

SAVARY (James), a French merchant, was born at Douay, in Anjou, in 1622. He made a fortune by commerce, after which he became ſecretary to the king. He wrote the Perfect Negociator, which paſſed through many editions, in 2 vols. 4to. He died in 1690. His ſons, James and Philemon, publiſhed their father's work under the title of a Univerſal Dictionary of Commerce, 3 vols. folio.—Moreri.

SAVARY (N.), a French traveller, was born at Vitre, in Brittany. In 1776 he went to Egypt, from whence he travelled through Greece and the iſlands of the Archipelago. On his return to France, in 1780, he publiſhed the Koran, tranſlated from the Arabic, 2 vols. 8vo.; Letters on Egypt, 3 vols.; and Letters on Greece. He died in 1788.—Nouv. Dict.

SAVERY (Roland), a French painter, was

orn at Cambray in 1576, and died in 1639. e painted landſcapes, with figures, in an xcellent ſtyle.—De Piles.

SAVILE (ſir Henry), a learned Engliſhman, was born at Bradley, in Yorkſhire, in 549, and educated at Merton college, Oxford, of which he became fellow and warden. n 1596, queen Elizabeth gave him the rovoſtſhip of Eton college; and James I. on s acceſſion, conferred on him the honour of nighthood. He died in 1621, and was buried at Eton. Sir Henry was a munificent tron of learning. He founded two profeſſorips at Oxford, one of aſtronomy and the other geometry. He publiſhed editions of Chryſtom's works, and of Bradwardin's Treatiſe Cauſa Dei. He alſo tranſlated part of acitus; and wrote a Treatiſe on Military Fairs, or the Roman Warfare, &c.—Biog. it.

SAVILE (ſir George), baronet, of Yorkre; a public ſpirited and patriotic Engliſh nator, who died in 1784, aged 59. He inguiſhed himſelf by his oppoſition to American war, and by bringing in the ll for repealing the penal ſtatutes againſt Roman catholics, for which his houſe s deſtroyed in the memorable riots of ne, 1780.—Gent. Mag.

SAUL, king of Iſrael, was the ſon of ſh, of the tribe of Benjamin, and anointking 1095 B.C. He obtained ſignal adntages over the Philiſtines and Amalees, but having ſpared the ſpoil, contrary the divine command, the prophet Samuel ormed him the ſceptre ſhould depart from n. Being jealous of David, he endeavoured everal times to take his life. After his eat by the Philiſtines on mount Gilboah, lew himſelf.—Bible.

SAUNDERS (Charles), a dramatic writer the reign of Charles II. While king's olar at Weſtminſter he wrote a play, cal. Tamerlane the Great, but the time his death is not known.—Biog Dram.

SAUNDERS (Richard), an Engliſh aſtroer and quack, who publiſhed the Aſtrolol Judgment and Practice of Phyſic, 4to. 7; and a folio volume on Phyſiognomy Chiromancy, Moles, Dreams, &c. He in 1680.—Granger.

SAUNDERS (ſir Edmund), a perſon who to be a judge from being a common beg. A lawyer of Clement's Inn perceiving genius, took him into his office and made his clerk. He afterwards became an nent counſel, and roſe to be chief juſtice the court of king's bench. He died in 3.—Life of the Lord Keeper North.

SAUNDERSON (Nicholas), an eminent hematician, was born in 1682, at Thurlin Yorkſhire. He loſt his ſight when ve months old by the ſmall pox; but ſent to the free ſchool at Penniſton, re he made a great proficiency in claſſical ning. At the age of eighteen he was oduced to Mr. Weſt, a gentleman of for, and a lover of the mathematics, who inſtructed him in algebra and geometry, and he made ſuch a progreſs that his friends ſent him to Cambridge, where he delivered lectures on mathematics to crouded audiences. Having been created maſter of arts by royal mandate, he was appointed Lucaſian profeſſor of mathematics in 1711; and in 1728 he received the degree of doctor of laws when the king viſited the univerſity. He died in 1739. His Elements of Algebra were printed at Cambridge in 1740, in 2 vols. 4to.; and his Treatiſe on Fluxions was alſo printed after his death in one volume octavo.—Martin. Biog. Phil.

SAVONAROLA, a Dominican, was born at Ferrara in 1452. He became a celebrated preacher at Florence, where he publicly declaimed againſt the vices of the prieſts, and the corruptions of the Roman church, for which he was excommunicated by the pope, and condemned to the flames, which ſentence was executed in 1498. He wrote Sermons; a treatiſe, entitled, the Triumph of the Croſs, and other works, printed at Leyden in 6 vols. 12mo.—Moreri.

SAVOT (Louis), a French antiquary, was born at Saulieu, in Burgundy, in 1579. He was phyſician to Louis XIII. and died in 1640. His works are, 1. Diſcourſe on Ancient Medals, 4to.; 2. Architecture Françoiſe des Batimens Particuliers, 4to.; 3. De Cauſis Colorum, 8vo.—Moreri.

SAURIN (James), was the ſon of a proteſtant lawyer at Niſmes, where he was born in 1677, and went with his father into exile to Geneva after the repeal of the edict of Nantz in 1685. In the 17th year of his age he quitted his ſtudies for the army, but ſoon returned to Geneva. On finiſhing his education he came to London, and preached with acceptance among his fellow exiles for about five years. Here he married, and ſoon after went to Holland, where he became miniſter of the French church, at the Hague, and died in 1730. He was an eloquent preacher, and followed by crowds of hearers. His Sermons, in 12 vols. are impaſſioned, and powerfully perſuaſive. They have been tranſlated into Engliſh by Robinſon and Hunter. But Saurin's greateſt work is entitled, Diſcourſes, hiſtorical, critical, and moral, on the moſt memorable Events of the Old and New Teſtament, 6 vols. folio.—Ibid.

SAURIN (Joſeph), a mathematician, was born in 1659 at Courteſon, in the principality of Orange. He entered into the miniſtry among the proteſtants, but in 1690 he abjured that religion at Paris, and obtained a penſion from the government. He was alſo a member of the academy of ſciences. Rouſſeau having been accuſed of writing ſome libellous verſes againſt perſons of diſtinction, falſely charged Saurin as the author, who was acquitted, and his accuſer baniſhed He died at Paris in 1737. He contributed many valuable papers to the Journal des Savans, and wrote his own Life.—Ibid.

SAURIN (Bernard Joſeph), ſon of the laſt mentioned, was an advocate of parliament, and a member of the French academy. He was intimate with Voltaire, Monteſquieu, and Helvetius, the latter of whom allowed him a penſion. He died in 1782. He wrote ſeveral plays of great merit, as Spartacus, and Blanche and Richard, tragedies; and the Anglomania, a comedy. His dramatic works were printed in 1783, in 2 vols. 8vo. —Ibid.

SAUSSURE (Horace Benedict de), a naturaliſt, was born at Geneva in 1740. His father, who was a member of the council of two hundred, wrote ſeveral works on agriculture, and died in 1790. The ſon diſplayed ſo early a genius as to be appointed profeſſor of philoſophy at Geneva when he was only twenty-one. He travelled into ſeveral countries, particularly Italy, and when at Naples made ſeveral obſervations on Mount Veſuvius with ſir William Hamilton. He afterwards viſited and meaſured Mount Ætna; and aſcended the higheſt parts of the Alps. This virtuous and ingenious man, after enriching the republic of letters by his enquiries, and rendering his country eſſential benefits, was nearly ruined by the French revolution, and died of chagrin in 1796. He wrote, 1. An Eloge on Bonnet; 2. Diſſertatio Phyſica de Igne; 3. Diſſertatio Phyſica de Electricitate; 4. Project for Reforming the College of Geneva; 5. Eſſays on Hygrometry; 6. Travels in the Alps, 4 vols. 4to. &c.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

SAUVAGES (Francis Boiſſier de), a French phyſician, was born at Alais in 1706. He became royal profeſſor of medicine and botany at Montpellier, member of the royal ſociety of London, and of ſeveral other learned bodies. He was called the Boerhaave of Languedoc, and died in 1767. His works are, 1. Theoria Febris; 2. Noſologia Methodica, 5 vols. 8vo.; 3. Phyſiologiæ Mecanicæ, 12mo.; 4. Methodus Foliorum, 8vo; 5. Tranſlation of Hales's Statiſtical Eſſays from the Engliſh, &c.—Ibid.

SAUVEUR (Joſeph), a French mathematician, was born at La Fleche, in 1653. He was dumb till he was ſeven years of age, and then the organs of ſpeech were ſo imperfect that he was never able to ſpeak plain. He ſhewed an early turn for mathematics, which ſtudy he cultivated at the Jeſuits' college, Paris, and at the age of twenty had prince Eugene for a pupil. In 1686 he was appointed mathematical profeſſor of the royal college. He wrote a Treatiſe on Fortification; and another on Muſic; beſides ſeveral papers in the memoirs of the academy of ſciences, of which he was a member. He died in 1716.—Martin.

SAWYER (ſir Robert), an eminent lawyer, was a great admirer of lord chief juſtice Hale, whoſe virtues he imitated. He was attorney-general from 1681 to 1687, but was removed by James II. for refuſing to aſſiſt him in his arbitrary deſigns. He died in 1692.—Granger.

SAXE (Maurice count), was the natural ſon of Frederic Auguſtus I. elector of Saxony and king of Poland, and of the counteſs of Koningſmark. He was born in 1696, and in his childhood evinced proofs of a martial ſpirit. In 1709 he ſerved with Eugene and Marlborough in the Netherlands. He next diſplayed great valour under his father in the war againſt the Swedes, particularly at the ſiege of Stralſund. In 1717 he was with Eugene in Hungary, where he raiſed the ſiege of Belgrade, and contributed much to the defeat of the Turks. After the peace of Utrecht he went to France, where the duke of Orleans gave him the brevet of field-marſhal. Having obtained a regiment he employed himſelf in improving military tactics, and introducing a new exerciſe. In 1726 the ſtates of Courland elected him their ſovereign, on which Poland and Ruſſia joined againſt him, and after a brave defence the count was obliged to quit the government and the country in 1729. He then returned to France, where he applied to the ſtudy of the mathematics, and in a fit of illneſs wrote his Reveries, or Military Memoirs; a work of equal ſervice to the general and common ſoldier. On the death of his father in 1733 war was rekindled, and the elector of Saxony, his brother, offered him the command of his forces, which he declined, giving the preference to the French ſervice. He then joined marſhal Berwick on the Rhine, and diſplayed great ſkill and bravery at the ſiege of Philipſburg, for which he was made lieutenant-general. In 1741 the count took Prague, which was followed by the capture of Agria. In 1744 he was made marſhal of France, and commander-in-chief in Flanders. The next year he gained the battle of Fontenoy, though he was ſo ill as to be carried on a litter. This victory was followed by the fall of ſeveral ſtrong towns, particularly Bruſſels. In 1746 he gained the battle of Rocoux, and the ſame year was appointed marſhal of all the French armies, and governor of all the places conquered in the Low Countries. He died in 1715, and was buried in the Lutheran church of Straſburg.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

SAXO, ſurnamed the Grammarian, was born in the iſle of Zealand, in Denmark. He went to Paris in 1177, and became a member of the religious order of St. Genevieve. He died in 1204. He wrote the Hiſtory of the Northern Nations, printed at Sora in 1644, folio.—Moreri.

SAY (Samuel), an Engliſh poet, and diſſenting miniſter, was born in 1675, and died in 1743. His poems have been printed in one volume 4to.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

SCACCHI (Fortunato), a learned Italian, was born at Ancona in 1563. He was the illegitimate ſon of a gentleman at that place, and ſent to the foundling hoſpital, after which he was acknowleged by his father, who placed him in a monaſtery of the Auguſtines, where he took the habit, but was expelled in purſuance of a papal decree excluding baſtards. He en went to the univerſity of Alcala in Spain, here he greatly improved himſelf. He died Fano in 1638. He wrote on the canoni- ion of ſaints, and Sacrorum Cochriſmatum yrotheſium, printed at Rome in 3 vols. fo- , 1637.—Moreri.

SCALA (Bartholomew), an Italian ſtateſ- n, was born at Florence about 1424. He s held in great eſteem by Coſmo, duke of uſcany, and obtained ſeveral honourable ap- ntments in his native country; where he d in 1497. He wrote a Hiſtory of Flo- ace in Latin; Letters; and other works. Tiraboſchi.

SCALIGER (Julius Cæſar), a learned iter, was born in 1484, at Ripa, in the ritory of Verona, of a noble family. In youth he ſerved in the army, and after- rds became page to the emperor Maximi- n; but being obliged to leave Italy he nt to France, where he practiſed as a phy- an, and died at Agen, in 1558. His rks are, 1. Treatiſe on the Art of Poetry, io; 2. De Cauſis Linguæ Latinæ, 4to.; Exercitations againſt Cardan, 4to.; 4. mmentaries on Ariſtotle's Hiſtory of Ani- ls, fol.; 5. Animadverſiones Hiſtorium antarum, 8vo.; 6. In Theophraſti libros; De Cauſis Plantarum Commentarii, fol.; Commentarii in Hippocratis librum de in- niis, 8vo.; 9. Epiſtles, 8vo; 10. Latin ems, 8vo.—Niceron.

SCALIGER (Joſeph Juſtus), ſon of the ceding, was born at Agen in 1540. He died at Paris, where Turnebus was his or in the Greek language. Becoming a lvinift he removed to Leyden, and obtain- a profeſſorſhip. He died in 1609. Scali- was a man of extenſive learning, but pe- ant and illiberal. His principal works , 1. De Emendatione Temporum, folio; Canones Iſagogici; 3. De Tribus Sectis læorum, 2 vols. 4to.; 4. Latin Poems, o.; 5. Notes on Antient Authors —Ibid.

SCAMOZZI (Vincent), a celebrated archi- t, was born at Vicenza in 1552, and died Venice in 1616. His principal works are Venice, and the moſt remarkable is the adel of Palma. He compoſed a treatiſe on art, of great merit. The title is Idea la Architettura Univerſale, 2 vols. folio.— libien. D'Agenville.

SCANDERBEG, or George Caſtriot, king Albania, a province dependent on the nd ſeignior, was born in 1404, and deli- ed by his father John Caſtriot, with his ee brothers, as hoſtages to Amurath II. o poiſoned the reſt, but ſpared him on ac- nt of his youth. The ſultan cauſed him be circumciſed, and gave him the com- nd of ſome troops, with the title of ſan- k. On the death of his father in 1432, formed the deſign of recovering the throne his anceſtors, and being ſent againſt Hun- y he entered into a ſecret treaty with niades Corvinus, king of that country, ed the ſultan's ſecretary, and compelled n to write and ſeal an order to the gover- of Albania, commanding him to deliver capital to Scanderbeg. He then repaired to that country, and aſcended the throne in 1443. Amurath laid ſiege to Crois, the ca- pital of Albania, but was twice defeated. The war was continued by his ſucceſſor Ma- homet II. till 1461, when the independence of the country was ſettled by treaty. Scan- derbeg after this went to Italy to aſſiſt Ferdi- nand, king of Arragon, who was cloſely be- ſieged in Bari. The Albanian hero relieved the place, and contributed to the defeat of the count of Anjou. He died in the ſtates of Venice in 1467.—Life by Poncet, 1709.

SCAPULA (John), a learned lexicographer of the 16th century. He completed his education at Lauſanne, after which he was employed in the printing-houſe of Henry Stephens, and while engaged in correcting his famous Theſaurus Linguæ Græcæ, Scapu- la made a ſecret abridgement, which was printed in 1580, under the title of a Greek Lexicon, and proved the ruin of Stephens.

SCARBOROUGH (ſir Charles), firſt phyſi- cian to Charles II. James II. and William III. He ſucceeded Dr. Harvey as lecturer on anatomy and ſurgery, and was the firſt who applied mathematical principles to anatomy and medicine. He died in 1693. Sir Charles wrote Syllabus Muſculorum; and other works —Granger.

SCARRON (Paul), a celebrated writer, was born at Paris in 1610. His father, who was a counſellor of the parliament, compelled him to enter into the eccleſiaſtical ſtate, and he obtained a canonry at Mans, where he loſt the uſe of his limbs, on which he removed to Paris, and procured a penſion. In 1652 he married mademoiſelle d'Aubigne, after- wards the famous madame de Maintenon. Scarron, who was a man of infinite humour, died in 1660. He wrote a number of come- dies; a traveſty of Virgil's Æneid; and the Comic Romance; beſides ſeveral poems. His works were printed at Paris in 1786, in 7 vols. 8vo.—Niceron.

SCHAAF (Charles), profeſſor of the orien- tal languages at Leyden, was born at Nuys in the electorate of Cologne, in 1646, and died of an apoplexy in 1729. His principal works are, 1. Grammatica Chaldaica et Sy- riaca, 8vo.; 2. Novum Teſtamentum Sy- riacum, with a Latin tranſlation, 4to.; 3. Lexicon Syriacum Concordantiale, 4to.; 4. Epitome Grammatices Hebrææ, 8vo.—Moreri.

SCHACHT (Chriſtian Paul), a learned phy- ſician, was born at Harderwyk in Holland, where he ſtudied and took his doctor's degree in 1781. In 1791 he became profeſſor of phyſic, botany, chemiſtry and natural hiſ- tory of that place. He enriched ſeveral of the Dutch journals with excellent memoirs, and was member of various learned ſocieties; but died in 1800, aged 32.

SCHAGEN (Giles), a painter, was born at Alkmaar in Holland, in 1616. He re- ſided a conſiderable time at Paris, where he acquired great reputation as a portrait and hiſtorical painter. He died in 1668.—Houb.

SCHALCKEN (Godfrey), an eminent pain- ter, was born at Dort in 1643. He was a diſciple of Gerard Douw, and reſided for ſome time in London, where he painted a remarkable portrait of William III. by candle-light, the king holding the candle himſelf. He died at the Hague in 1706.—Houbraken.

SCHATEN (Nicholas), a German jeſuit, who died at the end of the 17th century. He wrote, 1. Hiſtoria Weſtphaliæ, folio; 2. Annales Paderbornenſis, fol.—Moreri.

SCHEELE (Charles William), an able chemiſt, was born at Stralſund in 1742, and died in 1786. He was a member of the academy of Stockholm, and of the royal ſociety of medicine at Paris. His treatiſe on Air and Fire, written in the German language, has been tranſlated into French, and is highly eſteemed.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

SCHEELSTRATE (Emanuel de), librarian of the Vatican, and canon of St. John de Lateran at Rome, was a native of Antwerp, and died in 1692, aged 43. He wrote, 1. Antiquitates Eccleſiæ Illuſtratæ, 2 vols. fol. 2. Eccleſia Africana ſub Primate Carthaginenſi, 4to.; and other works on eccleſiaſtical hiſtory; but he is very partial to the papal authority.—Ibid.

SCHEFFER (John), a learned writer, was born at Straſburgh, in 1621. He became profeſſor of elocution and politics at Upſal, and librarian of that univerſity, where he died in 1679. He wrote, 1. De Militia Navali Veterum; 2. Upſalia Antiqua; 3. Laponia; this has been tranſlated into Engliſh, under the title of the Hiſtory of Lapland, folio; 4. Succia Litterata; 5. De Re Veliculari Veterum.—Moreri.

SCHEGKIUS (James), a phyſician, was born in the dutchy of Wirtemberg, and became profeſſor of philoſophy and medicine at Tubingen, where he died in 1587. His works are, 1. De Animæ Principatu; 2. De una Perſona et Duabus Naturis in Chriſto, adverſus Antitrinitarios; 3. Refutatio Errorum Simonii, folio.—Moreri.

SCHEINER (Chriſtopher), a jeſuit, and mathematician, was born at Schwaben, in 1573, and died at Nice in 1650. He was mathematician and confeſſor to the archduke of Auſtria; and the firſt who obſerved the ſpots in the ſun, of which diſcovery he publiſhed an account in 1630, under the title of Roſa Urſina, folio.—Ibid.

SCHELHAMMER (Gouthier-Chriſtopher), firſt phyſician to the duke of Holſtein, and profeſſor of medicine ſucceſſively at Helmſtadt, Jena, and Kiel. He was born at Jena in 1649, and died in 1716. He wrote, Introductio in artem Medicam, 4to.—Moreri.

SCHELLINKS (William), a Dutch painter, was born at Amſterdam in 1631, and died in 1678. He painted hiſtory, landſcapes, and ſea pieces. His principal picture is one of Charles II. embarking for England. His brother Daniel was alſo a good painter of landſcapes, and died in 1701, aged 68.—Houbraken.

SCHENCK DE GRAFFENBERG (John), a phyſician, was born at Friburg in Switzerland in 1531, and died there in 1598. He wrote, Obſervationum Medicarum, rararum, admirabilium et Monſtroſarum volumen, folio. His ſon, John George Schenck, was alſo an able phyſician, and died at Haguenau in 1620. He wrote, De formandis Medicinæ ſtudiis, 12mo.; Hortus Patavinus, 8vo.; Monſtrorum Hiſtoria, 4to.—Moreri.

SCHENKIUS (John Theodore), profeſſor of medicine at Jena, died in 1671, aged 52. His works are, 1. Obſervationes Medicinæ, fol.; 2. De Sero Sanguinis, 4to.; 3. Catalogue of Plants in the Medical Garden at Jena, 12mo.—Ibid.

SCHEUCHZER (John James), a phyſician and profeſſor of mathematics at Zurich, was born there in 1672, and died in 1733. His principal works are, 1. The Natural Hiſtory of the Bible, 4 vols. in folio; this has been tranſlated into Latin and French, but the German edition is preferred to the others on account of the plates; 2. Itinera Alpina, 4 vols. 4to; 3. Piſcium Querelæ, 4to; 4. Herbarium Diluvianum, fol.; 5. Muſæum Diluvianum, 8vo.; 6. Homo diluvii teſtis, 4to.; 7. Hiſtoriæ Helveticæ naturalis Prolegomena; 8. Sciagraphia Lithologica, 4to.; 9. Nova Litteraria Helvetica; this is a journal of Swiſs literature; 10. Treatiſe on the Mineral Waters of Switzerland. His ſon, John Gaſpard, died at London in 1729. He publiſhed Koempfer's Hiſtory of Japan, in 2 vols. fol. John Scheuchzer, brother of John James, was profeſſor of phyſic at Zurich, where he died in 1738. He wrote Agroſtographia ſeu Graminum, juncorum Hiſtoria, 4to.—Halleri Bibl. Botan.

SCHIAVONE (Andrea), a painter, was born in 1522 at Sebenico, in Dalmatia, and died at Venice in 1582. He was deficient in deſign, but his draperies are fine, and his attitudes graceful.—Pilkington.

SCHICKARD (William), profeſſor of Hebrew in the univerſity of Tubingen, died of the plague in 1635, aged 43. He is the author of an Hebrew grammar, entitled, "Horologium Schickardi," and of ſome other learned works, as, "De Jure regio Judæorum," 1674, 4to.; and "Series Regium Perſiæ," 1621, 4to.—Moreri.

SCHIDONE (Bartholomew), a painter, was born at Modena in 1560, and died at Parma in 1616. The duke of Parma made him his principal painter, but a propenſity to gaming reduced him to poverty. His pictures are rare and valuable.—De Piles.

SCHILLER (Frederic), a German dramatic poet, was born at Marbach in Wirtemberg in 1759. He was educated in the military ſchool at Stuttgard, where he wrote his play of the Robbers, which, on account of the dangerous tendency of its ſentiments, gave offence to his ſuperiors: and Schiller, apprehenſive of the conſequences, fled to Manheim, where he became ſurgeon to a regiment. He afterwards quitted that ſtation, and was choſen dramatiſt to the theatre at Manheim. Here he produced ſeveral plays, as the Conſpiracy of Fieſco; Intrigue and Love; the Rheniſh Thalia, &c. From Manheim he went to Mentz, and next to Dreſden, where he wrote

" History of the Revolt of the Netherlands from the Spanish Government." He then went to Leipzig, where he finished his drama of Don Carlos. After a wandering life he settled at Jena as professor of history, and his lectures were greatly admired. From Jena he removed to Weimar, and there wrote the Maid of Orleans, and several other esteemed dramatic pieces. He died at Weimar in 1805.—Monthly Mag.

SCHILLING (Diebold), a native of Soleure, in Switzerland, in the 15th century. He wrote a History, in German, of the War of the Swiss against Charles, duke of Burgundy, published at Berne in 1743, in folio.—Moreri.

SCHLICTINGIUS (Jonas de Bukowic), a Socinian writer, was born in 1596, in Poland, where he exercised the ministry till he was exiled by the diet of Warsaw in 1647. He died at Zullikaw in Germany in 1661. His works were printed at Amsterdam, in folio, in 1666.—Ibid.

SCHMIDT (Erasmus), professor of Greek and mathematics at Wirtemberg, where he died in 1637. He left an edition of Pindar, with a commentary, 1616, 4to.—Ibid.

SCHMIDT (Sebastian), professor of the Oriental languages at Strasburg, died in 1697. He is not to be confounded with John Andrew Schmidt, Lutheran professor of divinity at Mariendal, where he died in 1726. The latter wrote, 1. Compendium Historicæ Ecclesiasticæ, 8vo.; 2. De Bibliothecis, 4to.; Lexicon Ecclesiasticum minus. 8vo.—Ib.

SCHMIDT (George Frederic), an engraver, was born at Berlin in 1712, and died in that city in 1775. He studied at Paris under Parmessin, and was admitted a member of the academy of painting. He excelled chiefly in engraving portraits.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

SCHOEPFLIN (John Daniel), professor of history in the university of Strasburg, was born at Sultzburg in the Brisgaw in 1694, and died at Strasburg in 1771. His works are, 1 Historia Zaringo-Badensis Carlsruhe, 3 vols. 4to; 2. Alsatia Diplomatica, 2 vols. fol.; 3. Alsatia Illustrata, 2 vols. folio; Alsaticarum rerum Scriptores, fol.; 5. Indiciæ typographicæ, 4to.—Ibid.

SCHOMBERG (Henry de), marshal of France, was descended of a German family. He served in 1617 in Piedmont under marshal d'Estrees, and afterwards against the Huguenots in the civil wars. In 1625 he was made field-marshal, and two years afterwards defeated the English at the isle of Rhe. In 1629 he forced the passage of Susa, in which occasion he was severely wounded. The next year he took Pignerol, and relieved Casal. In 1632 he defeated the rebels in Languedoc at the famous battle of Castelnaudari, for which he was made governor of that province. He died the same year of an apoplexy. He wrote a Relation of the War of Italy, printed first in 1630, and again in 1682.—Moreri.

SCHOMBERG (Frederic Armand, duke of), was born of an illustrious family, but different from the preceding. He served first under Frederic Henry, prince of Orange, and his son William, but in 1650 he passed into the French service, and obtained the government of Gravelines and Furnes. In 1661 he was sent to Portugal, where he commanded with such success as to force Spain to make a peace. On the revocation of the edict of Nantes, he left France and went to Brandenburg, the elector of which, made him minister of state. He accompanied the prince of Orange to England at the revolution, was created a peer, made knight of the garter, and had a large sum voted him by parliament. In 1689 he went with William to Ireland, and was shot by mistake as he was crossing the Boyne, by the French refugees of his own regiment.—Rapin, Moreri.

SCHONER (John), a mathematician, was born at Carlstadt, in Germany, in 1477. When very young he was chosen professor of mathematics at Nuremberg, and gained a considerable reputation by his astronomical tables, published after those of Regiomontanus. His other works are, Treatise on Dialling; Organicum Uranicum; Use of the Globes; and a Treatise on the Astronomical Equator. He died in 1547.—Melch. Adam. Martin.

SCHOOKIUS (Martin), a Dutch writer, was born at Utrecht in 1614. He was successively professor at Utrecht, Deventer, Groningen, and lastly at Frankfort on the Oder, where he died in 1669. His principal works are, Exercitationes variæ; De Harengis, seu Halecibus; De Signaturis fœtus; De Ciconis; De scepticismo; De Sternutatione; De Statu Reipublicæ fœderati Belgii; De imperio maritimo; De Linguæ Hellenistica.—Niceron.

SCHOONFIELD (John Henry), a painter, was born at Bibrach in Germany in 1619. Some fine pictures of his are in the churches and state-house of Augsburg. He died in 1689.—Pilkington.

SCHOONJANS (Anthony), a painter of Antwerp, was born in 1665, and died in 1726. He studied in Italy, after which he settled at Vienna, where he received great favours from the emperor. He painted many fine altar-pieces for the churches in Germany.—Ibid.

SCHOREL (John), a Dutch painter, was born in 1496, at a village of his name near Alkmaar, and studied under Albert Durer, after which he went to the Holy land, where he drew many views. On his return to Europe he was appointed by Pope Adrian VI. superintendant of the buildings at Belvidere. He died in 1572. He was also a poet and musician.—De Piles.

SCHOTT (Andrew), a learned jesuit, was born at Antwerp in 1552. He was professor of elocution at Rome, and afterwards taught Greek at Toledo. He died at Antwerp in 1629. He wrote, Hispania Illustrata, 4 vols. folio; the Lives of Francis Borgia, Ferdinand Nunez, and Peter Ciaconius, &c.—Niceron.

Schott (Gaſpard), a jeſuit, was born in Franconia in 1608, and died at Wurtzburg in 1666. He reſided many years at Palermo, and at Rome, where he was intimate with Kircher. His works are, Phyſica curioſa, 2 vols. 4to.; Magia naturalis et artificialis, 4 vols. 4to.; Technica curioſa; Machina hydraulico pneumatica; Pantometrum Kircherianum, ſive inſtrumentum geometricum novum; Itinerarium ſtaticum Kircherianum; Encyclopædia; [this is a courſe of mathematics]; Matheſis Cæſarea, 2 vols. 4to.; Anatomia Phyſico-hydroſtatica fontium et fluminum, 8vo.; Arithmetica, 8vo; Organum mathematicum, &c.—Moreri.

Schrevelius (Cornelius), a lexicographer, was born at Haerlem in 1615, and died in 1667. He publiſhed editions of Homer and Heſiod, but his principal work is a Lexicon, Greek and Latin, 8vo.—Bayle.

Schulembourg (Matthias John, count), was born in 1661. He was firſt in the Poliſh ſervice, and with a ſmall army repelled ſeveral attacks made by the Swedes under Charles XII. In 1708, he was at the battle of Malplaquet, where his conduct gained him the eſteem of prince Eugene. In 1711 he entered into the Venetian ſervice, and compelled the Turks to raiſe the ſiege of Corfu. In 1726, he came to England on a viſit to his ſiſter, the counteſs of Kendal, but he returned again to Venice, where he died in 1743.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

Schultens (Albert), a learned German divine, was born at Groningen, and became profeſſor of the Oriental languages, firſt at Franeker and afterwards at Leyden, where he died in 1741, aged 70. His principal works are a Commentary upon Job, 2 vols. 4to.; Commentary on the Proverbs, 4to.; the Life of Saladin, tranſlated from the Arabic, folio; Animadverſiones Philologicæ et Criticæ ad varia loca veteris Teſtamenti; a Hebrew Grammar, &c.—Ibid.

Schulze (John Henry), a phyſician, was born at Colbitz, in Germany, in 1687, and died profeſſor of medicine at Hall in 1745. He was well acquainted with the Oriental languages, and wrote, 1. Hiſtoria Medicinæ à rerum initio ad annum urbis Romæ 535 deducta, 4to.; 2. Phyſiologia Medica, 8vo; 3. Pathologia generalis et ſpecialis; 4. De Materia Medica; 5. Diſſertationes Medicæ et Hiſtoricæ, &c.—Ibid.

Schurman (Anna Maria de), a learned lady, was born at Cologne in 1607. At the age of ſix years ſhe cut out figures in paper with great exactneſs, and at eight ſhe painted flowers in crayons in a pleaſing manner. She alſo made a ſurpriſing proficiency in learning. She underſtood the Latin, Greek, and Hebrew languages, and was acquainted with ſeveral modern. She applied to muſic, painting, and engraving with great ſucceſs, and her writing was remarkable for its beauty. In 1650 ſhe became a diſciple of the enthuſiaſt Labadie, after whoſe death ſhe retired to Weiwart, in Frieſland, where ſhe died in 1678. Her Opuſcula, or Pieces in Latin, Greek, and Hebrew, were printed in 1652, 4to. She alſo wrote Latin Poems, and a Defence of Female Study.—Niceron.

Schut (Cornelius), a painter, was born at Antwerp in 1600, and died in 1660. He was a diſciple of Rubens, and painted ſome fine pictures for the churches at Antwerp.—Houbraken.

Schurtz-fleisch (Conrad Samuel), a learned German, was born at Corbac, in the county of Waldeck, and became profeſſor of Greek at Wittemburg, and counſellor and librarian to the duke of Saxe Weimar. He died in 1708. His works are, 1. Diſputationes Hiſtoricæ Civiles, 3 vols. 4to.; 2. Epiſtles, 3 vols. 8vo; 3. a Continuation of Sleidan's Hiſtory, 4to. 1678; 4. Diſſertations on Miſcellaneous Subjects.—Ibid.

Schuur (Theodore Vander), a Dutch painter, was born at the Hague in 1628. He ſtudied at Paris under Sebaſtian Bourdon, after which he viſited Italy. He died in 1705. He enriched his back grounds with repreſentations of ancient ruins.—Pilkington.

Schwartz (Berthold), a monk of the order of Cordeliers at the end of the thirteenth century, was a native of Friburg, in Germany, and an able chemiſt. As he was making ſome experiments with nitre, he diſcovered the compoſition of gun-powder, which was firſt applied to warlike purpoſes by the Venetians in 1300.—Moreri.

Schyndal (Bernard), a Dutch painter, was born at Haerlem in 1659. He painted ſhepherds, ale-houſes, &c. He died in 1716.—Pilkington.

Schwartz (Cornelius), a painter, was born at Ingolſtadt in 1550, and died at Munich in 1594. He painted at Venice under Titian, and gained ſo excellent a ſtyle as to be called the Raphael of Germany.—Felibien.

Schwerin (Chriſtopher, count), a general and field-marſhal in the Pruſſian ſervice, was born in 1684. He entered early into the army, and diſtinguiſhed himſelf on many occaſions. In 1741 he gained the battle of Molwitz at the moment when the Pruſſians thought themſelves loſt. He was ſlain at the battle of Prague in 1757. The king of Pruſſia erected a ſtatue to his honour, and the emperor of Germany a monument on the ſpot where he was ſlain.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

Scioppius (Gaſpar), a learned grammarian, was born at Neumark, in the Upper Palatinate, in 1576. He turned roman catholic, but his character was bad. He wrote an abuſive ſatire on the family of Joſeph Scaliger, who replied by expoſing that of his adverſary. Scioppius alſo wrote againſt James I. of England, and attacked the jeſuits with great aſperity. At the cloſe of life he employed himſelf in explaining the apocalypſe. He died at Padua in 1649. His principal ks are, 1. Verisimilium, lib. iv. 8vo.; 2. mmentarius de Arte Critica, 8vo.; 3. De ad Catholicos Migratione; 4. Notationes ticæ in Phædrum, in Priapeia; 5. Suf- tarum Lectionum; 6. Classicum Belli Sa- ; 7. Collyrium Regium; 8. Grammatica iloſophica, 8vo.—Moreri.

Scipio (Publius Cornelius), surnamed ricanus, a celebrated Roman. He made first campaign, at the age of seventeen, der his father, whose life he saved in the tle of Tesin. After the battle of Cannæ prevented the Roman officers from aban- ning their country as they had intended, t of despair of saving it. Scipio was elected ile at the age of twenty-one. His father uncle having fallen in battle he obtained command in Spain, where he defeated the emy and took New Carthage in one day. put an end to the war in that country by decisive battle, and then crossed over into rica, where he defeated Asdrubal and phax B. C. 203. He afterwards gained the ttle of Zama, which victory produced peace tween Rome and Carthage Scipio ob- ined a triumph, and the appellation of Af- anus for these brilliant services. He was so twice honoured with the consular digni- , but envy of his glory brought upon him a arge of peculation. Scipio appeared before e people and defended himself so effectually at his accusers were left alone, and he en- red the capital with universal acclamations. he affair, however, was brought forward ain before the tribunes, but he had retired his country house, where he died B. C. 0. The virtues and generosity of Scipio, pecially to his female captives, were as stinguished as his valour and prudence.— ivy.

Scipio (Lucius Cornelius), surnameed siaticus, was brother of the preceding, ith whom he served in Spain and Africa. is services obtained him the consulate B. . 189. He afterwards conducted the war in sia against Antiochus, over whom he gained great victory on the plains of Magnesia. or this he was honoured with a triumph d the appellation of Asiaticus. Cato the nsor, however, preferred a charge against im of peculation, and his goods were sold to y the supposed debt he owed to the repub- c.—Ibid.

Scipio-Nasica was the cousin of the receding, whom he defended with great loquence before the people. He was re used the consulship at first, but afterwards btained that dignity, and gained some signal ictories in Spain.—Ib.

Scipio (Publius Æmilianus), was the on of Paulus Æmilius, and adopted by the on of Scipio Africanus. He was called Afri- anus the Younger in consequence of his vic- ories over the Carthaginians. He served he office of ædile and afterwards of consul, n which situation he laid siege to, and suc- eeded in taking Carthage B. C. 147. For this he was chosen consul the second time, and took Numantia B. C. 133, whence he acquired the surname of Numantinus. He was assassinated in his bed five years after- wards, as is supposed by the direction of the triumvirs, who suspected him of aspiring to the dictatorship.—Ibid.

Scipio (Publius), father-in-law of Pom- pey. He retired to Africa with the remains of the vanquished army after the battle of Pharsalia, and having joined the troops of Juba, king of Mauritania, was for some time successful, but he was defeated by Cæsar at Thapsus, and fell in battle.—Plutarch.

Sclater (William), an English divine, was born in Somersetshire and educated at Oxford, where he became fellow of Brase- nose college, and proceeded doctor in divinity. He obtained the living of Otterden, in Kent, where he died in 1647. He wrote elegies and epitaphs under the title of Threnodia Britannica, 4to.; Palæ-Albion, or the His- tory of Great Britain to the reign of James I. folio, in Latin and English verse; Psalms, or Songs of Sion; Genethliacon, sive stemma Regis Jacobi, fol. This is a genealogy of that monarch from Adam. There was an- other William Sclater, doctor in divinity, a member of King's college, Cambridge, and vicar of Pitminster, Somersetshire, where he died in 1626 He wrote a Commentary on the Epistles to the Romans and Thessalonians, folio. His son became minister of Cul- lumpton, in Devon, and prebendary of Exe- ter. He published some sermons —Wood.

Scopas, an architect and sculptor of the isle of Paros, flourished B. C. 430. He built the famous mausoleum for Artemisia in ho- nour of her husband, but his chief work was a statue of Venus, which was esteemed su- perior to that of Praxiteles.—Pliny.

Scorza (Sinibaldo), a painter and en- graver, was born at Voltaggio in the terri- tory of Genoa, and died in 1631, aged 41. He engraved after the designs of Albert Du- rer, with great exactness, and painted ani- mals, flowers, and landscapes —De Piles. Fel bien.

Scot (Reynolde), an English writer, was born in Kent of a genteel family, and edu- cated at Oxford, after which he retired to his paternal estate, where he wrote, 1. A perfect Platform of a Hop Garden, quarto, 1576; 2. The Discovery of Witchcraft, 4to.; 3. Discourse upon Devils and Spirits. In the two last he combats the absurdities of witch- craft and incantations with great success, but he was replied to by many learned men, and also by James I. in his Demonology. Mr. Scot died in 1599.—Wood.

Scotland. The ancient inhabitants of this part of the island of Great Britain were called Caledones, and were of Celtic origin. In the fourth century they were named Picts and Scots. The Romans under Agricola con- quered Caledonia, A. D. 85, but in 121 they built a wall to prevent the incursions of the Picts from the Solway Frith to the Tyne. After the departure of the Romans the Picts extended their territories southward. The first sole king of Scotland was Kenneth II. in 839. In 1296 Edward I. of England subdued the country. In 1602 James VI. succeeded to the crown of England, and thereby became the first king of Great Britain. In 1707 the two countries were united by act of parliament.—Buchanan. Hume.

Scott (Michael), a native of Fifeshire in Scotland, was greatly esteemed by Alexander II. and knighted by him after the battle of Largo. He died in 1291. His skill in chemistry and mathematics made him pass for a magician. Fragments of his works on natural history, mathematics, and philosophy remain.—Life by sir George Mackenzie.

Scott (Thomas) an English divine, who was bachelor of divinity and preacher to the English company at Utrecht, where he was murdered by a soldier as he was going to church in 1626. He wrote, 1. Vox Populi; 2. Vox Dei; 3. Vox Regis; 4. Digitus Dei; 5. The Belgicke Pismire stinging the slothful Sleeper, 4to.; 6. a Tongue Combat lately happening between two English Soldiers in the Tilt-boat of Gravesend, 4to; 7. Symmachia; or a True Love's Knot tyed betwixt Great Britain and the United Provinces, 4to.; 8. the Highwaies of God and the King, in two sermons, 4to.; 9. the Projector, a Sermon before the Judges at Norwich; 10. News from Parnassus, 4to.—Europ. Mag.

Scott (John) a learned divine, was born at Chippenham, in Wiltshire, in 1638, and educated at Oxford, where he proceeded to his degree of doctor in divinity. He was successively minister of St. Thomas's, Southwark, rector of St. Peter le-Poor, London, and of St. Giles in the Fields, to which was added a canonry of Windsor. He wrote an esteemed work called the Christian Life, in one vol. folio, and five vols 8vo. He was also the author of several Sermons, Cases of Conscience Resolved, and Tracts against Popery.—Funeral Serm. by Isham.

Scott (Daniel), a learned writer, was born in London, and educated for the ministry under Mr. Jones at Tewkesbury, and afterwards at Utrecht, where he took the degree of doctor of laws. While there he joined the society of mennonites or baptists, but never entered on the ministerial function. In 1725 he published an Essay towards a Demonstration of the Scripture Trinity, which passed through three editions. In 1741 he printed a new Version of St. Matthew's Gospel, with critical notes, and in 1745 an Appendix to Stephens's Greek Lexicon, 2 vols. folio. He died in 1759.—Monthly Mag. Jan. 1803.

Scott (Thomas), brother of the above, was a dissenting minister first at Hitchin in Hertfordshire, and afterwards at Norwich, where he died in 1746. He published some occasional Sermons and an attempt to prove the Godhead of Christ, by settling the sense of a single text, John xx. 28. He had two sons, viz Dr. Joseph Nicol Scott, who was for some time pastor of an independent congregation at Norwich, but quitted the office on turning arian, and became a physician. He published two volumes of Sermons, and revised the folio edition of Bailey's dictionary. His brother, Thomas Scott, was minister of a dissenting congregation first at Lowestoff, in Suffolk, and next at Ipswich, from whence he removed to Hapton, in Norfolk, where he died about 1775. He published several single Sermons, and a small volume of Lyric Poems; but he is best known by a translation of the book of Job into English verse, with notes, of which two editions have been printed.—Monthly Mag. Jan. 1803.

Scott (John), an English poet, was the son of a tradesman in London, and born in 1730. His father retiring from business to Amwell, in Hertfordshire, our author had his education there. He wrote, when young, Elegies, descriptive and moral, which were admired by some good poets. His poems were printed in one volume octavo, in 1782. Mr. Scott was also the author of Observations on the Poor; a Digest of the Highway and Turnpike Laws; and a pamphlet on the Authenticity of Rowley's Poems. He died in 1783.—Europe Mag.

Scott (Samuel), an English painter, whose sea pieces and views rank with those of Vandervelde. He died in 1772.—Pilk.

Scott (David), an historian, was born near Haddington, in East Lothian, in 1675, and died in 1742. He was imprisoned several times on account of his attachment to the house of Stuart. He was the author of a History of Scotland.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Scougal (Henry), a Scotch episcopal divine, was born at Saltoun, in East Lothian, and educated at Aberdeen, where he took the degree of master of arts, after which he entered into orders and was made professor of divinity, but died at the age of twenty-eight in 1678. His principal performance is an admirable tract on the Life of God in the Soul of Man.—Preface to his works, 8vo.

Scribonius-Largus, a Roman physician in the time of Augustus or Tiberius, some of whose works are extant, and were printed at Basil in 1529.—Friend's Hist. Phys.

Scrimzeor (Henry), a Scots writer, who became successively professor of philosophy and law at Geneva, where he died in 1571. He wrote a History of his native country, printed under the name of Henry of Scotland.—Moreri.

Scriverius (Peter), a Dutch writer, was born at Haerlem, where he died in 1653. He wrote "Batavia Illustrata," 4to.; and Bataviæ Comitumque Historia. He also published editions of Vegetius, and other writers, on Military Affairs.—Ibid.

Scroggs (sir William), an English judge, born at Deddington, in Oxfordſhire, in 3, and educated for the church, but he red into the royal army, and afterwards ray's Inn, where he was called to the In 1669 he was knighted, and made eant at law, and in 1678 chief juſtice of king's bench. He diſplayed ſo much at the trials of the perſons charged with g concerned in the popiſh conſpiracy that cles of impeachment were preferred nſt him by the Commons, and he was re- ved from his place in 1681. He died in 3. Several of his ſpeeches have been ted in the State Trials.—Wood.

SCUDDER (Henry), a preſbyterian divine, miniſter of Colingbourne Ducis in Wilt- e, and bachelor of divinity of Cambridge. wrote a noted book called the "Chriſ- 's Daily Walk," 8vo; and died before reſtoration.—Granger.

SCUDERI (George de), was born at vre-de Grace in 1601, and admitted a mber of the French academy in 1650. He d in 1665. His works, which are very ifferent, conſiſt of Plays, Poems, an Apo- y for the Theatre, Political Diſcourſes Harangues.—Moreri.

SCUDERI (Magdalen de), ſiſter of the ceding, was born in 1607. She was an hor from neceſſity, and wrote a great mber of romances and other works, as elia, 10 vols. 8vo.; Artamenes, or the and Cyrus, 10 vols.; Ibrahim, or the Il- ſtrious Baſſa, 4 vols.; Converſations and iſcourſes, 10 vols.; a Diſcourſe on Glory, . She was admitted a member of the aca- my of Ricovrati at Padua, and had penſions m cardinal Mazarin and Louis XIV. She d in 1701.—Niceron.

SCULTETUS (Abraham), a German di- ne, was born at Grumberg, in Sileſia, in 1566, d died at Embden in 1626. He was pro- ſor of divinity at Heidelberg, and was nt as deputy from that univerſity to the nod of Dordt. He wrote Medulla Patrum, d other learned works.—Moreri.

SCYLAX, a geographer and mathemati- an of Caria, who flouriſhed B. C. 522. He as employed by Darius, ſon of Hyſtaſpes, making diſcoveries in India. Some attri- te to him the invention of geographical bles. His Periplus was publiſhed by Gro- vius in 1697 at Leyden.—Voſſius de Math.

SEAMAN (Lazarus), a non-conformiſt di- ne, was born at Leiceſter, and bred at E- anuel college, Cambridge. In the civil ars he diſtinguiſhed himſelf with ſo much al on the ſide of parliament as to be ap- inted maſter of Peter-houſe, Cambridge, here he took his doctor's degree. He was ſo a member of the aſſembly of divines at Weſtminſter. He died in 1675. His libra- was the firſt ſold by auction in England. e printed ſeveral ſermons.—Calamy.

SEBA (Albert), a native of Etzeel, in aſt Friezland, was the author of a work on atural hiſtory publiſhed at Amſterdam in 1734, in 3 vols. fol. The explanations are in Latin and French.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

SEBASTIAN, king of Portugal, was the poſthumous ſon of the Infant John, by a daughter of the emperor Charles V. and ſucceeded John III. in 1557. He engaged in an unſucceſsful war with the Moors in 1574, and in 1578 he went in perſon to aſſiſt Muly Mohammed, ſon of Abdalla, king of Morocco, againſt the king of Fez; but in a battle fought near Tangiers Sebaſtian was ſlain. As his body was not found two falſe Sebaſtians appeared afterwards in Portugal, but one was executed and the other ſent to the gallies.—Univ. Hiſt.

SEBASTIAN del Plombo, ſo called from a place which was given him by Pope Clement VII., though he is alſo known by the name of Sebaſtian of Venice, was born in that city in 1485, and died in 1547. As a painter he rivalled Raphael, by a beautiful picture of the reſurrection of Lazarus.—De Piles. Felibien.

SECKENDORF (Guy Louis de), a German hiſtorian, was born in Franconia in 1626. He became privy-counſellor to the elector of Brandenburgh, and chancellor of the univerſity of Hall, where he died in 1692. He wrote a Hiſtory of Lutheraniſm, in Latin, 2. vols. fol.; State of the Princes of Germany, 8vo.; and a Deſcription of the Germanic Empire, 8vo.—Moreri.

SECKER (Thomas), a learned and pious prelate, was born at Sibthorpe, in Nottinghamſhire, in 1693. He was educated at Tewkſbury under the learned Mr. Jones with a view to the miniſtry among the diſſenters; but in 1716 he went to Leyden, where he ſtudied phyſic and took his degree in that faculty. After his return to England he entered himſelf of Exeter college, Oxford, and proceeded to the degree of doctor of laws. On entering into orders he became chaplain to biſhop Talbot, and in 1733 was inſtituted to the rectory of St. James, Weſtminſter. The year following he was conſecrated biſhop of Briſtol, and in 1737 tranſlated to Oxford. In 1750 he obtained the deanry of St. Paul's, and in 1758 was advanced to the archbiſhopric of Canterbury. He died in 1768. The ſermons, charges, and lectures of this excellent prelate are diſtinguiſhed by their perſpicuity and eloquence.—Life by Biſhop Porteus.

SECONDUS (John) a Latin poet, was born at the Hague in 1511. He ſtudied law under Alciatus, and afterwards became ſecretary to the archbiſhop of Toledo. He died at Utrecht in 1536. His poems are various and excellent. The moſt celebrated are the Baſia, or the Kiſſes, which have been tranſlated into ſeveral languages.—Moreri.

SECONDAT DE MONTESQUIEU (John Baptiſt), ſon of the celebrated author of the Spirit of Laws, died in 1796, aged 79. He was a counſellor in the parliament of Bourdeaux. His works are, 1. Memoir on Electricity, 8vo.; 2. Obſervations on the Mineral Waters of the Pyrenees, 12mo,; 3. Conſiderations on the Conſtitution of the French Marine 8vo.; 4. Natural Hiſtory of the Oak, folio.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

Secousse (Denis Francis), a French writer, was born at Paris in 1691, and educated under Rollin, after which he became an advocate, but quitted the law for literature. He was employed by the chancellor D'Agueſſean as cenſor-royal, and in other public ſervices. He became blind, and died in 1754. He publiſhed, a Collection of Royal Ordonnances; Memoirs for a Hiſtory of Charles the Bad, 2 vols. 4to.; and ſeveral Diſſertations in the Memoirs of the Academy of Inſcriptions.—Ibid.

Securis (John), a phyſician, was born in Wiltſhire, and educated at New college, Oxford. He practiſed with reputation at Saliſbury, where he died about 1570. He publiſhed an Almanack; alſo a piece entitled, A Detection and Querimony of the daily Enormities and Abuſes committed in the three Branches of Phyſic.—Wood.

Sedaine (Michael John), a French dramatic writer, was born at Paris in 1719. He was a maſon, but a taſte for the theatre induced him to quit his buſineſs, and to write comic operas, which poſſeſs conſiderable merit, and ſome of them have been tranſlated into Engliſh, as Richard Cœur de Lion, and Blue Beard. He was a member of the French academy, and ſecretary of that of architecture. He died in 1797.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

Sedgwick (Obadiah), a non-conformiſt divine, was born at Marlborough, in Wiltſhire, in 1600, and educated at Queen's college, Oxford. On entering into orders he became chaplain to ſir Horatio Vere, whom he accompanied in his expedition to the Low Countries. In the rebellion he was a frequent preacher before the parliament, and a member of the aſſembly of divines. He died at Marlborough in 1657. He wrote religious treatiſes and ſermons. One William Sedgwick predicted the day of judgment, for which he was nick-named Doom's day Sedgwick.—Wood.

Sedley (ſir Charles), a poet, was born at Aylesford, in Kent, about 1639. He was one of the wits of the court of Charles II., who had a great regard for him. His daughter became miſtreſs to James II., who created her counteſs of Dorcheſter; but ſir Charles was zealous for the revolution, and being aſked the reaſon anſwered, "from a principle of gratitude; for ſince his majeſty has made my daughter a counteſs it is fit I ſhould do all I can to make his daughter a queen." He died in 1701. His poems are looſe and indifferent. He alſo wrote ſome plays.—Ibid.

Sedulius (Cæcilius), an eccleſiaſtic and poet of the fifth century, who wrote a Poem on the life of Chriſt, entitled, Paſchale Carmen. It was publiſhed by Aldus in 1502, 8vo.—Moreri.

See-ma-Koang, a Chineſe mandarin and philoſopher of the eleventh century. He enjoyed the favour of the emperor, and had ſeveral important places, which he reſigned and retired to a ſolitary place, where he wrote a Hiſtory of China, commencing at the 403d year before the chriſtian era. He was alſo the author of ſome moral treatiſes.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

Seed (Jeremiah), a learned divine, was born at Cliſton, in Cumberland, and educated at Queen's college, Oxford, where he took his degrees in arts and obtained a fellowſhip. He was afterwards preſented to the rectory of Enham, in Hampſhire, where he died in 1747. His Sermons, in four vols. 8vo., are excellent.—Preface to his Sermons.

Segar (ſir William), garter king at arms, was author of "Honour Civil and Military," folio, 1602. He was impriſoned for granting the royal arms of Arragon, with a canton of Brabant, to George Brandon, the common hangman; but it appearing that he was impoſed upon he was releaſed. He died in 1633. Edmonſon's Baronage is principally taken from Segar's MSS.—Granger.

Seghers (Gerard), a painter, was born at Antwerp in 1592, and died there in 1651. He ſtudied under Janſſens, and improved himſelf in Italy after the beſt maſters. He painted religious ſubjects, alſo muſical aſſemblies and feaſts. His brother Daniel was a diſciple of Velvet Breughel, and entered among the jeſuits, but ſtill continued his profeſſion. He excelled in painting flowers and inſects, and died in 1660.—Felibien.

Segneri (Paul), an Italian jeſuit, was born at Nettuno in 1624. His celebrity as a preacher occaſioned him to be called to Rome by pope Innocent XII. to whom he became chaplain. He died in 1694. His works are, Sermons, 7 vols.; the Unbeliever without Excuſe; the Paſtor Inſtructed; the Illuſions of the Quietiſts, &c., collected in 3 vols. folio.—Moreri.

Segrais (John Regnault de), a French poet, was born at Caen in 1624, of a noble family, and educated at the jeſuits' college for the prieſthood, which profeſſion he declined. Madame de Montpenſier appointed him her gentleman in ordinary, and he was afterwards patronized by madame de la Fayette. In 1676 he retired to his native place, where he married a lady of fortune. He was a member of the French academy, and died in 1701. Segrais wrote ſome elegant Eclogues; and tranſlated the Georgics and Æneid of Virgil into French verſe. His proſe works are, a Collection of Novels; and Segraiſiana, or a Miſcellany of Hiſtory and Literature.—Moreri.

Segui (Joſeph), a French divine, was born at Rodez in 1689. He obtained a poetical prize of the French academy in 1732, and was alſo admitted a member of that body. He died at Meaux, where he had a canonry, in 1761. His works are; Panegyrics, 2 vols. 12mo.; Sermons, 2 vols.; and Academical ourſes, 1 vol. His panegyric on St. is is his maſter-piece.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

EGUIER (John Francis), an eminent bo- ſt, was born at Niſmes in 1703. He bred to the law, but renounced that pro- on to follow his favourite purſuits. He mpanied the marquis Scipio Maffei on travels in France, England, Holland, and many; and on his return to his own ntry became principal of the academy of mes. He died in 1784. His works are; liotheca Botanica, 4to; Plantæ Vero- ſes, 3 vol 8vo.; and a Tranſlation of the ks of Maffei.—Ibid.

EJANUS (Ælius), a celebrated Roman, the ſon of Seius Strabo, a Roman ght, and captain of the prætorian guards. anus firſt introduced himſelf into the fa- r of Caius Cæſar, the grandſon of Auguſ- and afterwards to that of Tiberius, who le him his confident. He alſo contrived, his pliability of temper and inſinuating reſs, to gain the affections of the people, ſoldiers, and the ſenate. He was ap- nted commander of the prætorian guards, had the diſpoſal of all places of truſt and our, which he gave to his own creatures. amed by ambition, he aſpired to the im- al throne, and to gain his end murdered ſus, the ſon of the emperor, after which declared his intention of marrying Livia, widow of Druſus, but this was oppoſed by erius. The emperor at length perceiv- the real views of his favourite cauſed to be accuſed before the ſenate, on which was deſerted by his friends and ſent to pri- where he was ſtrangled A. D. 31. His y, after being dragged about the ſtreets, thrown into the Tiber.—Tacitus.

ELDEN (John), a learned writer, was at Salvington, in Suſſex, in 1584. m Chicheſter ſchool he removed to Hart ., and from thence to the Inner Temple, ere he was called to the bar, and became nguiſhed as a profound lawyer and anti- ry. He drew up a Treatiſe on the Civil vernment of England before the Conqueſt, he age of twenty-two, which gained him t reputation. In 1614 he publiſhed his les of Honour, and in 1618 his Hiſtory of hes, which gave great alarm to the clergy, was anſwered by ſeveral writers. Being ecuted in the high commiſſion court, he cribed an acknowlegement of his fault. 1621 he was committed to cuſtody as the cipal promoter of the proteſt made by the mons reſpecting their privileges. In 3 he was choſen member of parliament Lancaſter, and in the following one he for Great Bedwin, in Wiltſhire. He af- rards ſat again for Lancaſter, and was a nuous oppoſer of the duke of Bucking- , and had alſo a principal ſhare in draw- up the petition of right. For his oppo- n to the court he was ſent to the Tower 628, from whence he was removed to the g's bench, and in 1631 admitted to bail. 1636 he publiſhed his Defence of the King's Dominion over the Britiſh Seas, in an- ſwer to Grotius. In 1642 he was offered the great ſeal, which he refuſed. Though he took the covenant, and was appointed keeper of the records, as alſo a member of the aſſembly of divines, he refuſed to write in defence of the parliament. He died in 1654, and was buried in the Temple-church. His works were publiſhed in 6 vols. folio, 1726.—Biog. Brit.

SELEUCUS NICANOR, king of Syria, was one of the generals of Alexander the Great, after whoſe death he ſeized upon Babylon, but was expelled by Antigonus, on which he fled to Ptolemy, with whoſe aſſiſtance he formed an army and defeated Antigonus, who was ſlain B.C. 301. Seleucus began the Syrian race of kings called Seleucides, but was aſſaſſinated by Ptolemy Ceraunus, B.C. 280

SELIM I. emperor of the Turks, was the ſecond ſon of Bajazet II. whom he dethroned and murdered, as he did his two brothers in 1512. Having ſecured the throne by theſe crimes, he turned his arms with ſucceſs againſt Egypt and Perſia. The former country he completely conquered, and put an end to the dominion of the Mamelukes, which had laſted above 260 years. He died in 1520.—Univ. Hiſt.

SELIM II. grandſon of the above, ſucceeded his father Solyman II. in 1566. In 1570 he broke the treaty which his father had made with the Venetians, and took the iſland of Cyprus, but the year following he loſt the battle of Lepanto, which obliged him to ſue for peace. He died in 1574.—Ibid.

SELIS (Nicolas Joſeph), a French poet, was born at Paris in 1737. He became profeſſor of the belles-lettres in the central ſchool of the Pantheon, and a member of the national inſtitute. He died in 1802. His works are, a Tranſlation of Perſius, with notes, 8vo.; Relation of the Diſorder, Confeſſion, and Death, of M. de Voltaire; Epiſtles in Verſe; Letter to la Harpe on the College of France; Diſcourſe on Central Schools, &c.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

SELKIRK (Alexander), an adventurer, was born at Largo in Scotland about 1680. He was a good navigator, and made ſeveral voyages to the South Sea, in one of which, having a quarrel with his commander, he was put aſhore on the iſland of Juan Fernandez, with a few neceſſaries, a fowling piece, gunpowder, and ſhot. Here he lived alone near three years, and was then taken off by captain Woods Rogers. During the time of his remaining on the iſland he had nearly forgotten his native language. De Foe is ſuppoſed to have worked up his narrative into the romance of Robinſon Cruſoe.—Dampier's Voyages. Rogers's ditto.

SELLER (Abednego), a divine of the church of England, was born at Plymouth in 1647, and educated at Lincoln college, Oxford, which he left without taking a degree. After entering into orders he became rector of Combeintine-head, in his native county, and afterwards had a living in London, but was deprived at the revolution for not taking the oaths. He died about 1720. His works are, 1. Remarks relating to the State of the Church in the three firſt Centuries, 8vo.; 2. The Devout Communicant, frequently reprinted under the title of the Week's Preparation for the Sacrament, 12mo; 3. Tracts againſt Popery.—Wood.

SELLIUS (Godfrey), a native of Dantzic, who was a member of the royal ſociety of London. He reſided chiefly in France, and died at Charenton in 1767. His works are principally tranſlations, as a Voyage to Hudſon's Bay; the Natural Hiſtory of Ireland; Hiſtory of the United Provinces; Hiſtory of the Antient Revolutions of the Globe, &c. —Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

SEMIRAMIS, queen of Aſſyria, was the wife of Ninus, on whoſe death ſhe aſſumed the government during the minority of her ſon Ninias. She built the famous city of Babylon, which ſhe adorned with works of great magnificence. She alſo diſtinguiſhed herſelf as a warrior, and marched with a large army towards India, but was defeated and compelled to retreat with a prodigious loſs. B.C. 2108 ſhe relinquiſhed the throne to her ſon, and died ſoon after.—Bayle.

SENAC (John), a French phyſician, who died at Paris in 1770. He was firſt phyſician to the king, and ſuperintendant-general of the mineral waters of the kingdom. His principal works are, a Tranſlation of Heiſter's Anatomy, with Phyſical Eſſays on the Uſe of the Parts of the Human Body, 3 vols. 12mo.; Treatiſe on the Plague, 4to.; On the Structure of the Heart, 2 vols. quarto; de recondita Febrium natura et curatione, 8vo.; Reflections on drowned Perſons, &c. —Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

SENAULT (John Francis), a Roman Catholic divine, was born at Antwerp in 1599, and died at Paris in 1672. He was a member of the congregation of the oratory, and a celebrated preacher. He wrote a Treatiſe on the Uſe of the Paſſions, which has been tranſlated into Engliſh; a Paraphraſe on Job, 8vo.; the Chriſtian Man, and the Criminal Man, 4to.; the Duties of a Sovereign, 12mo; Lives of Religious Perſons; and Sermons.—Moreri.

SENECA (Lucius Annæus), a celebrated orator, was born at Corduba in Spain. He ſettled at Rome, where he was greatly diſtinguiſhed as a pleader. His declamations are printed with the works of his ſon.—Quintilian.

SENECA (Lucius Annæus), a philoſopher, ſon of the preceding, was born at Corduba, A.D. 8. He received a liberal education at Rome, where he applied himſelf to elocution, and diſplayed great abilities as an orator, but being afraid of exciting the jealouſy of Caligula, who aſpired to the glory of eloquence, he relinquiſhed that profeſſion and obtained the office of quæſtor. But a charge being brought againſt him of having an amour with Julia Livilla, he was baniſhed to Corſica, where he wrote his Epiſtles, and Books of Conſolation. After an exile of ſome years he was recalled by Agrippina, wife of the emperor Claudius, and appointed tutor to her ſon Nero. This office Seneca diſcharged with great honour, and was bountifully rewarded; but when his pupil came to the throne, Seneca, who knew his diſpoſition, ſolicited him to accept of the villas and riches which he had received for his attendance on him, and that he might retire to a life of ſtudy and ſolitude. This the emperor refuſed, but ſoon found an opportunity of deſtroying his preceptor. When the conſpiracy of Piſo was diſcovered, the name of Seneca was implicated, and orders were ſent to him to put an end to himſelf. The philoſopher, without expreſſing any concern, took poiſon, which had no effect; he then had his veins opened, but the blood flowed ſo ſlowly, that he was removed into a hot bath, and from thence to a ſtove, where he was ſuffocated A.D. 65. His wife, Paulina, reſolving to die with him, had alſo her veins opened; but Nero being fearful that this would excite a general indignation againſt him, commanded that the blood ſhould be ſtopped and her life preſerved. The moral treatiſes of Seneca are excellent, and have induced many to believe that he was ſecretly a Chriſtian. Some attribute the tragedies which paſs under his name to the father. The beſt edition of this writer is that of Gronovius, at Amſterdam, 1672, 3 vols.—Tacitus.

SENECAI, or SENÉCÉ (Antony Bauderon de), a French poet, was born at Maçon in 1643. He was valet-de-chambre to Maria Thereſa, wife of Louis XIV. and on her death was taken into the ſervice of the duchеſs of Angouleme. He died in 1737. His works are, epigrams, novels in verſe, ſatires, and fugitive poems, which poſſeſs merit —Moreri.

SENNACHERIB, king of Syria, ſucceeded his father Salmanaſar, B.C. 714. Hezekiah, king of Judah, having refuſed to pay him tribute, he entered that country, where he took ſeveral fortreſſes, and laid ſiege to Jeruſalem. But his army being ſmitten with a peſtilence in the night, he was obliged to return to his own country, where he was ſlain in the temple by his two ſons, B.C. 710. —Bible.

SENNERTUS (Daniel), a phyſician, was born at Breſlaw in 1572. He was at firſt a ſhoemaker, but having a great turn for medical ſtudies, he applied with ſuch diligence as to become profeſſor of phyſic at Wirtemberg. He applied chemiſtry to practice, and by decrying the antients procured enemies among his brethren. He died in 1637. His works were printed at Venice in 1640, in 3 vols. folio, and at Lyons in 1676, in 6 vols. folio. His ſon, Andrew Sennertus, became profeſſor of the Oriental languages at Wir-nberg, where he died in 1689, aged 84. : wrote treatiſes on the Hebrew language. Moreri.

SEPULVEDA (John de), a Spaniſh writer, s born at Cordova in 1491. He became aplain and hiſtoriographer to Charles V. d wrote "A Vindication of the Cruelties the Spaniards in America," againſt Las- ſas; and other works. He died in 1572. Nicb. Antonio de Scrip. Hiſp.

SERAPION (John), an Arabian phyſician, o flouriſhed about A.D. 890. His works re printed at Venice, in folio, 1497. He not to be confounded with Serapion of exandria, a medical author, who lived in : fifth century.—Friend.

SERENUS SAMMONICUS, a phyſician in : third century, who was preceptor to rdian the younger. A Latin poem on me- ine by him, is in Maittair's "Corpus Poe- um." He was put to death by Caracalla. ere was another Serenus, a mathema- an, who wrote a Treatiſe on Conic Sec- s, publiſhed by Halley.—Moreri. Voſ- ..

SERGARDI (Louis), a Roman prelate, ious for his ſatyrical works, was born at nna in 1640. His ſatires were publiſhed elegant Latin under the title of Quinti ſec- i Satyræ, and met with uncommon ſucceſs. wrote, however, with too great aſperity inſt Gravina. He died in 1726.—Tira- bi.

SERGIUS, patriarch of Conſtantinople in), was a native of Syria, and the chief of ſect of Monothelites, the principle of ch was, that there are only one will, and operation in Chriſt. This hereſy was demned in the council of Conſtantinople. gius died in 639.—Dupin. Cave.

SERLIO (Sebaſtian), a celebrated archi- of Bologna, in the 16th century. Francis nvited him to France, where he improved ornamented the royal palaces, particular- Fontainbleau. He died about 1552. He te a Treatiſe on Architecture, printed at nice in 1584, 4to.—Felibien.

SERRES or SERRANUS (John de), a French eſtant divine, who eſcaped with difficulty n the maſſacre of St. Bartholomew, and me miniſter at Niſmes in 1582. He in the confidence of Henry IV. who loyed him in ſeveral affairs. He wrote eatiſe, entitled De Fide Catholica, the ct of which was to reconcile Catholics Proteſtants, and the conſequence was the author was diſliked by both. He in 1598. His other works are, an Edi- of Plato in Greek and Latin, 3 vols. fo- Treatiſe on the Immortality of the , 8vo.; Catalogue of the Hiſtory of ce, 2 vols. folio; De Statu Religionis cip. in Francia; Memoirs of the Third l War, 3 vols. 8vo.; Hiſtory of five gs of France, &c.—Moreri.

SERRES (Oliver de), a French agricultu- was born in 1539, near Viviers. Henry who delighted in his converſation, em- ployed him in the improvement of his plan- tations. He died in 1619. He was the firſt who introduced the culture of the white mulberry tree into France, on which he wrote a treatiſe, reprinted in 1785. His Theatre of Agriculture, printed in 4to. is an eſteem- ed book.—Moreri. Haller's Bibl. Botan.

SERTORIUS (Quintus), a Roman general, was born at Nurſia. He made his firſt cam- paign under Marius, againſt the Cimbri, but loſt his eye in the firſt battle. He after- wards accompanied Marius, and Cinna when they entered Rome, and ſlew their enemies. On being proſcribed by Sylla, he fled to Spain, where he put himſelf at the head of the other exiles, and was regarded as a prince in that country, which he governed with great wiſ- dom and moderation. He repulſed ſeveral armies that were ſent againſt him, but being defeated by Pompey and Metellus, he was aſſaſſinated by one of his officers, B.C. 73 — Livy.

SERVANDONI (John Nicolas), an archi- tect and painter, was born at Florence in 1695. He reſided the greateſt part of his life at Paris, where he had the management of the ſcenery belonging to the theatre. In 1749 he came to London to deſign the edi- fice on Tower-hill, erected for the diſplay of fireworks to celebrate the peace of Aix-la- Chapelle. His "Deſcent of Æneas into Hell" is his beſt performance as a painter, and the portal of St. Sulpice at Paris is his maſter-piece in architecture. He died in 1766.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

SERVETUS (Michael), a phyſician, was born in 1509 at Villaneuva, where his fa- ther was a notary. He was brought up an advocate at Toulouſe, but afterwards ſtudied phyſic at Paris, where he took his doctor's degree. Having embraced the Arian doc- trine he held a correſpondence with Calvin on the ſubject, and many letters paſſed be- tween them which only irritated them againſt each other. Servetus, who was ſet- tled at Vienne, in Dauphiny, publiſhed a book in favour of his notions entitled, Chriſ- tianiſmi reſtitutio, but he avoided putting his name to it. The author, however, was diſ- covered by Calvin, who gave information of it to the magiſtrates of Vienne, by whom Servetus was baniſhed, and his effigy and book burnt at the gallows. He then formed the deſign of going to Naples to practice as a phyſician, but imprudently paſſing through Geneva, in diſguiſe, he was diſcovered by Calvin, by whoſe means he was apprehended, and having refuſed to recant his opinions was burnt alive in 1553. He wrote ſeveral books on the trinity, a tranſlation of Ptolemy's Geography, and ſome medical treatiſes. In one of them he ſays, "that the maſs of blood paſſes through the lungs by means of the pulmonic veins and arteries," from which general aſſertion ſome writers have aſcribed to him the diſcovery of the circulation of the blood.—Moſheim. Moreri.

SERVIUS (Honoratus Maurus), a Latin

grammarian of the fourth century, who left learned commentaries upon Virgil, printed by Stephens in 1532.—Voſſius.

SERVIUS TULLIUS, king of the Romans, was the ſon of a female ſlave. He married the daughter of Tarquin the elder, whom he ſucceeded B.C. 577. He diſtinguiſhed himſelf as a warrior and legiſlator, introduced the diſtinction of ranks among the citizens, and aſcertained the population of Rome, to amount to 84,000. He was murdered by his ſon-in-law, Tarquin the ſuperb, B.C. 534.—Livy.

SESTO (Cæſare de), a painter of Milan, was the beſt of the diſciples of Leonardo de Vinci, and died at the beginning of the ſixteenth century. His pictures are diſtinguiſhed by the ſpirit of the compoſition, and the grace of the figures.—De Piles.

SESOSTRIS, king of Egypt, who lived ſome ages before the ſiege of Troy. His father cauſed all the children who were born on the ſame day with him to be liberally educated, that they might become his companions, by which means Seſoſtris obtained a number of faithful warriors and able miniſters. He extended his conqueſts through various countries, and this inſcription was found in many places after his death—Seſoſtris, the king of kings, has conquered this territory by his arms. He greatly enriched his country, and cultivated the ſciences. At a very advanced age, and having loſt his ſight, he put an end to himſelf.—Univ. Hiſt.

SESSA, an Indian philoſopher or mathematician, and the inventor of the game of cheſs, which he communicated to his king, Scheram, who was ſo pleaſed with it that he ordered him to demand what he pleaſed for a reward. Seſſa aſked only for a ſingle grain of wheat to be laid on the firſt ſquare, two for the ſecond, and ſo on in progreſſion through the ſixty-four ſquares. The king offended that he ſhould demand ſo mean a gift, directed that he ſhould have juſt what he aſked and no more. But before a quarter of the number were gone through it was found that all the granaries in the kingdom would not ſupply the demand. Scheram aſtoniſhed at Seſſa's ingenuity, crowned him with honours. He lived about the eleventh century.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

SETTLE (Elkanah), an Engliſh poet, was born at Dunſtable, in Bedfordſhire, in 1648, and educated at Trinity college, Oxford. He wrote the tragedies of Cambyſes King of Perſia, the Empreſs of Morocco, Fatal Love, &c. alſo poems, particularly the Medal Reverſed, and Azariah and Huſhai, both againſt Dryden, and with ſuch ſucceſs, ſays Dr. Johnſon, that he left the palm doubtful, and divided the ſuffrages of the nation. Settle was likewiſe the author of political pamphlets in favour of the whigs. He died in the Charterhouſe in 1724.—Johnſon's Poets. Biog. Dram.

SEVERUS (Lucius Septimus), a Roman emperor, was born in Africa, of a noble family. He paſſed through various offices of the ſtate, and was diſtinguiſhed for his ambition, activity, and avarice. After the murder of Pertinax he cauſed himſelf to be proclaimed emperor on the borders of Illyricum, and took as his aſſociate Albinus, who commanded the army in Britain. His reception at Rome was gratifying to his vanity, but he was oppoſed by Peſcennius Niger, who had a numerous army in the Eaſt. Many battles were fought between them, but at length Niger was deſtroyed and his head ſent to Severus, who behaved cruelly to all the partiſans of his unfortunate rival. Elated with this ſucceſs he pillaged Byzantium, and attempted to put away Albinus by aſſaſſination, but being foiled he had recourſe to arms. Albinus was defeated and ſlain in Gaul, and his family and adherents ſhared his fate. Severus, on his return to Rome, put to death the wealthieſt citizens that he might poſſeſs himſelf of their property. Tired of an inactive life he marched into the Eaſt, where he made numerous conqueſts. The revolt of Britain recalled him from Aſia; and having reduced the iſland he built a wall acroſs the northern part to defend the Roman poſſeſſions from the invaſions of the Caledonians. While in Britain an attempt was made upon his life by his ſon Caracalla, but it failed; and Severus calling him into his preſence preſented to him his ſword, ſaying, "If you are ambitious of reigning murder me in ſecret, but let not the world be witneſſes of your guilt." This remonſtrance checked Caracalla, who withdrew in ſilence. Severus, worn out with a complication of diſorders, died at York A.D. 211. There were two others of this name who aſſumed the imperial title, both of whom were put to death; the firſt by Maximian in 307, and the laſt in 461.—Crevier.

SEVERUS (Caſſius), an orator, who was baniſhed into Crete by Auguſtus for his ſatyrical language. He was diſtinguiſhed for his eloquence, but it was more zealous than prudent. His declamations were ordered to be deſtroyed by the ſenate.—Quintilian.

SEVERUS (Sulpitius), an eccleſiaſtical hiſtorian, and ſurnamed the Chriſtian Salluſt, who died A.D. 420. The beſt of his works is his Hiſtoria Sacra, which is very elegant, and extends from the creation to A.D. 400. The beſt edition is that of Padua, 1741, two vols. 4to.—Dupin.

SEVERUS (Lucius Cornelius), a Latin poet in the reign of Auguſtus. His poems were printed at Amſterdam in 12mo. 1715.—Voſſius de Poet. Lat.

SEVERUS, a heretic of the ſecond century, who maintained that there are two oppoſite principles, the one good and the other evil, by which man was originally made, and by which he continues to be governed.—Pluquet Dict. des Hereſies.

SEVIGNE (Marie de Rabutin, marchioneſs de), an ingenious French lady, was the daughter of the baron de Chantal, and born 1696. She eſpouſed at the age of eighteen, the marquis de Sevigné, who fell in a duel in 1651, leaving her with one ſon and a daughter, to whoſe education ſhe paid ſtrict attention. The daughter married in 1669 the count de Grignan, commandant in Provence, and it was on a viſit to her that the marchioneſs caught a fever, of which ſhe died 1696. Her letters are models of the epiſtolary ſtyle, being elegant, familiar, and animated. They have been publiſhed often in 4 vols. and in 10 vols. 12mo. In 1756 appeared a work entitled, Sevigniana, or a Collection of Thoughts, Anecdotes, &c. extracted from theſe letters. Her ſon Charles, marquis de Sevigné, was one of the admirers of Ninon de l'Enclos, and had a diſpute with madame Dacier reſpecting the ſenſe of a paſſage in Horace. He died in 1713.—Moreri.

SEVIN (Francis), a member of the academy of the belles-lettres, and keeper of the manuſcripts in the library of the king of France. He undertook, by order of Louis XV. a voyage to Conſtantinople with the abbé Fourmont in ſearch of manuſcripts, of which they procured about 600. Sevin wrote an account of his travels in Letters, which have been publiſhed in one vol. 8vo. He alſo wrote a Diſſertation on Menes the firſt king of Egypt, and ſeveral other curious diſcourſes. He died in 1741.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

SEWARD (Thomas), an Engliſh divine, was born in 1708. He became rector of Eyam, in Derbyſhire, and prebendary of Litchfield, where he died in 1790. Mr. Seward was father of Miſs Seward, ſo well known by her poetical pieces. He publiſhed an edition of Beaumont and Fletcher's dramatic works, and was the author of a Treatiſe on the Conformity between Popery and Paganiſm. Some of his poems are in Dodſley's collection.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

SEWARD (William), an ingenious gentleman, was the ſon of a brewer in London, and born in 1747. He received his education firſt at the Charter-houſe and afterwards at Oxford which he left without taking a degree. Having a good fortune he devoted his life to literary eaſe, and was admitted a fellow of the royal and antiquarian ſocieties. He publiſhed five volumes of Anecdotes of diſtinguiſhed perſons, extracted from curious old books; to which he afterwards added a ſupplement under the title of Biographiana, 2 vols. Mr. Seward died in 1799.—Europ. Mag.

SEWELL (William), the author of the hiſtory of Quakers, in one vol. folio, and of a Dictionary, Dutch and Engliſh, 1 vol. 4to was born at Amſterdam of Engliſh parents, and practiſed as a ſurgeon in that city. He died in 1720.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

SEWELL (George), an Engliſh poet and phyſician, was born at Windſor, and educated firſt at Eton and next at Peter houſe, Cambridge. He wrote the Tragedy of Sir Walter Raleigh, acted at the theatre in Lincoln's-Inn-Fields; a Vindication of the Engliſh Stage; the Life of John Philips; and ſome Poems. He died at Hampſtead in 1726.—Biog. Dram.

SEXTUS-EMPYRICUS a philoſopher of the Pyrrhonian ſect, and a phyſician of that of the empyrics, or thoſe who guided their practice wholly upon experience. He is ſaid to have been one of the preceptors of Antoninus the philoſopher. We have of his three books called Pyrrhonian inſtitutions; and a large work againſt Mathematicians. The beſt edition of this author is that of Fabricius, Greek and Latin, folio, Leipſic, 1718.—Voſſius de Philoſoph.

SEXTUS, a ſtoic philoſopher, was a native of Cheronea, and the nephew of Plutarch. He was of the ſtoic ſect, and preceptor to the emperors Lucius Verus, and Marcus Aurelius.—Ibid.

SEYMOUR (Edward), brother of lady Jane Seymour, wife of Henry VIII., and uncle of Edward VI., was created viſcount Beauchamp and duke of Somerſet. On the acceſſion of his nephew to the throne Seymour became his guardian, and protector of the kingdom. He had a brother Thomas Seymour, admiral of England, whom the protector brought to the ſcaffold, on a pretended charge of treaſon in 1549, but he was himſelf accuſed of abuſing his high truſt by the earl of Warwick and other courtiers, and was beheaded in 1552.—Rapin. Hume.

SEYMOUR (Anne, Margaret, and Jane), daughters of the duke of Somerſet, were diſtinguiſhed for their poetical talents. They compoſed Latin diſtichs on the death of Margaret de Valois, queen of France, which were tranſlated into French, Greek, and Italian, and printed at Paris in 1551. Anne, the eldeſt of theſe ladies, married firſt the earl of Warwick, and afterwards ſir Edward Hunton. The other two died ſingle. Jane was maid of honor to queen Elizabeth.—Bayle. Ballard.

SEYMOUR (Arabella), better known by the name of the lady Arabella, was daughter of Charles Stuart, earl of Lennox, youngeſt brother of Henry Darnley, huſband of Mary, queen of Scots. Her mother was daughter of ſir William Cavendiſh of Chatſworth, in Derbyſhire. Her affinity to the crown was the cauſe of her misfortunes. Several projects were formed for placing her on the Engliſh throne, ſo that ſhe was kept under confinement in the reign of queen Elizabeth. At the beginning of that of James ſhe was ſecretly married to William Seymour, ſecond ſon to the earl of Hertford; which being diſcovered they were ſent to the Tower, but after a confinement of a year they effected their eſcape. Seymour got on board a veſſel, but lady Arabella was taken and conveyed back to the Tower, where ſhe died four years afterwards in 1615.—Ballard. Rapin.

SFONDRATI (Francis), a ſenator of Milan, and counſellor of ſtate to the emperor

Charles V. On the death of his wife he entered into orders, and was elevated to the cardinalſhip. He died in 1550, aged 56. A poem of his on the Rape of Helen was printed at Venice in 1559. His ſon Nicolas became pope by the name of Gregory XIV. There was another cardinal of this name and family, who wrote ſeveral works againſt the liberties of the Gallican church. He died in 1696.—Moreri.

Sforza (James), ſurnamed the great, was born at Cotignola in Romana, in 1369. His father, according to ſome accounts, was a labourer, and to others a ſhoemaker. A company of ſoldiers happening to paſs through his village, young Sforza joined them, and after paſſing through the inferior military ranks became a general. He was a long time in the ſervice of Joan, queen of Naples, who made him conſtable of the kingdom. Pope John XXIII. appointed him gonfalonier of the holy church, and created him count de Cotignola, to which was added a large penſion. He obliged Alphonſus, king of Arragon, to raiſe the ſiege of Naples, and he retook ſeveral important places which had revolted. But being too eager in purſuing the flying enemy he was drowned in the river Aterno, now Peſcara, in 1424.—Ibid.

Sforza (Francis), natural ſon of the preceding was brought up to the profeſſion of arms under his father, and was with him at the time of his unfortunate end. He afterwards commanded with glory againſt the king of Arragon, and on the death of Joan he attached himſelf to the duke of Anjou, whom ſhe had made her heir. The pope, the Venetians, and Florentines, elected him their general againſt the duke of Milan, whoſe daughter he married. On the duke's death in 1447 the Milaneſe choſe him for their general againſt the Venetians, but after ſome actions he turned his arms againſt themſelves, beſieged Milan and compelled the inhabitants to elect him their duke. He alſo made himſelf maſter of Genoa, and died in 1466.—Ib.

Sforza (Catherine,) an heroine of the ſame family, was the natural daughter of Galeazzo Sforza, duke of Milan, who was aſſaſſinated in 1476. She married Jerom Riario, lord of Forli and of Imola, which was her own dowry; but ſhe was left a widow at the age of twenty-two, with ſeveral children. In 1500 Forli was beſieged by the duke of Valentinois, ſon of Pope Alexander VI. but ſhe defended the fortreſs with the greateſt bravery, though the beſiegers threatened to put to death her children, who were in their hands. At length the place was taken, and Catherine ſent priſoner to Rome, but ſhe ſoon recovered her liberty, and was married to John de Medicis, to whoſe family ſhe rendered eminent ſervices.—Ibid.

Sforza (Iſabella), an ingenious lady of the ſame family in the 16th century. Her Letters, which are very ingenious, were printed at Venice in 1549 by Hortenſio Landi.—Bayle. Moreri.

Shadwell (Thomas), a dramatic poet, was born in 1640, and bred at Cambridge. When Dryden was removed from the offices of laureat and hiſtoriographer royal. Shadwell was appointed his ſucceſſor, which expoſed him to the ſeverity of that poet's ſatire, who ridiculed him under the appellation of Mac-flecknoe. Shadwell, however, was a man of genius, and many of his dramatic pieces poſſeſs merit. He died in London in 1692. His principal pieces are, Epſom Wells, Timon the Miſanthrope, the Virtuoſo, the Gentleman of Alſace, and the Lancaſhire Witches, comedies. Charles Shadwell, ſuppoſed to have been the ſon or nephew of the preceding, wrote ſome plays, the beſt of which is entitled, the Fair Quaker of Deal. He died in 1726.—Biog. Dram.

Shakspeare (William), father of the Engliſh drama, was born of a good family at Stratford-upon-Avon in 1564. His father, who was a conſiderable dealer in wool, had ſo large a family that he could give him but a ſcanty education. He was indeed for ſome time at the grammar ſchool at Stratford, where he learnt the rudiments of the Latin language, but was prevented from making any further progreſs by being taken home to follow his father's buſineſs. While he was yet very young he married the daughter of one Hathaway, a ſubſtantial farmer in the neighbourhood. In this kind of ſettlement he continued till, by an act of folly and diſſipation, he was obliged to leave the country and his family. He had, by a misfortune common to young fellows, fallen into bad company, and amongſt them ſome who were in the practice of deer-ſtealing. By them he was prevailed upon, more than once, to engage in robbing the park of ſir Thomas Lucy, of Charlecote, near Stratford. For this he was proſecuted by that gentleman, and out of revenge he made a ballad upon ſir Thomas, which is ſaid to have been ſo bitter that the proſecution was redoubled, and he was obliged to ſhelter himſelf in London. Here he formed an acquaintance with the players, and was enrolled among them, as his name is in the liſt of performers prefixed to ſeveral old plays, though what ſort of characters he performed does not appear. Mr. Rowe obſerves that he never could meet with any further account of him as an actor than that his higheſt part was the Ghoſt in his own Hamlet. We are equally ignorant which was the firſt play he wrote, though the dates of many of his pieces are eaſily fixed by particular paſſages. Queen Elizabeth had ſeveral of his plays acted before her, and without doubt gave him many marks of her favour. She was ſo pleaſed with the character of Falſtaff in the two parts of Henry IV. that ſhe commanded him to exhibit him in love, on which occaſion Shakſpeare wrote his rich and admirable comedy of the "Merry Wives of Windſor." The earl of Southampton was his particular friend, and hearing that he had an inclination to make a purchaſe but wanted the means, he generouſly ſent him one thouſand pounds. Shakſpeare was alſo very intimate with Ben Jonſon, who gives him a high character in his Diſcoveries. After conducting the theatre many years with great reputation, he retired to his native place, where his wit and good nature introduced him to the acquaintance of the gentlemen in the neighbourhood. Amongſt others was one Mr. Combe, an old gentleman noted for his wealth and uſury. In a converſation one day Mr. Combe told Shakſpeare that he ſuppoſed if he outlived him he would write his epitaph, and ſince he could not tell what might be ſaid of him he deſired it might be done immediately, on which our poet produced theſe lines:

Ten in the hundred lies here ingrav'd,
'Tis a hundred to ten his ſoul is not ſav'd;
If any man aſk, who lies in this tomb?
Oh! oh! quoth the devil, 'tis my John-a-Combe.

But the ſharpneſs of the ſatire ſo ſtung the man that he never forgave it.

Shakſpeare died in 1616, and was buried in the church of Stratford, where a monument is placed to his memory. On the grave-ſtone underneath is the following inſcription:

Good friend, for Jeſus' ſake forbear
To dig the duſt incloſed here.
Bleſt be the man that ſpares theſe ſtones,
And curſt be he that moves my bones.

He had three daughters: two lived to be married, Judith to Mr. Thomas Quincy, and Suſanna to Dr. Hall, a phyſician.

The beſt editions of Shakſpeare are Johnſon and Stevens's united in 15 vols. 8vo., and Reed's in 18 vols.—Life by Rowe.

SHARP (James), a Scotch prelate, who ſoon after the reſtoration was advanced to the archbiſhopric of St. Andrews, and had the management of eccleſiaſtical affairs in Scotland; but his conduct gave ſuch offence to the bigoted covenanters and preſbyterians that he was dragged from his coach and murdered by nine aſſaſſins in 1679, after he had ſat in that ſee ſeventeen years.—Gen. Hiſt. Dict.

SHARP (Dr John), an Engliſh prelate, was born at Bradford, in Yorkſhire, in 1644, and admitted of Chriſt's college, Cambridge, in 1660. On entering into orders he became chaplain to ſir Heneage Finch, attorney-general, by whoſe recommendation he obtained the archdeaconry of Berks, and in 1675 was inſtalled prebendary of Norwich. The ſame year he was preſented to the rectory of St. Giles's in the Fields, and in 1681, to the deanry of Norwich. In 1686 he was ſilenced for preaching againſt popery, and upon the biſhop of London's refuſal to ſuſpend him he was himſelf ſuſpended. Soon afterwards Dr. Sharp was reſtored, and in 1689 was advanced to the deanry of Canterbury. In 1691 he was made archbiſhop of York, and in 1702 he preached the ſermon at the coronation of queen Anne. He died at Bath in 1713. The archbiſhop's ſermons, in 7 vols. 8vo, are excellent.—Le Neve's Lives of the Archbiſhops, 8vo.

SHARP (Thomas), younger ſon of the above, was born in Yorkſhire, and admitted of Trinity college, Cambridge, about 1708, aged 15. He obtained a fellowſhip in 1729, and took his doctor's degree the ſame year. Archbiſhop Dawes appointed him his chaplain, and in 1720 he was collated to the rectory of Rothbury, in Northumberland. He was afterwards preferred to a prebend in Durham cathedral, and the archdeaconry of Northumberland. He died in 1758. Dr. Sharp wrote two Diſſertations concerning the Etymology of the Hebrew Words Elohim and Berith, 8vo; Diſcourſes touching the Antiquity of the Hebrew Tongue and Character, 8vo. His ſon, Granville Sharp, eſq. is well known by ſeveral excellent performances, particularly by his Remarks on the Definitive Article in the Greek Teſtament, 12mo.—Hutchinſon's Hiſtory of Durham.

SHARPE (Gregory), a learned divine, but of a different family from the above, was born in Yorkſhire in 1713. He received his education firſt at Weſtminſter ſchool and afterwards at Aberdeen under the learned Blackwell. On entering into orders he became miniſter of St. Margaret's chapel, Weſtminſter, was afterwards appointed chaplain in ordinary to the king, and maſter of the Temple. He was alſo a fellow of the royal and antiquarian ſocieties, and died in 1771. Dr. Sharpe united to great learning a taſte for the fine arts, and etched ſeveral plates in the edition of Dr. Hyde's Syntagma. His own works are, 1. Review of the Controverſy about the Meaning of Demoniacs in the New Teſtament, 8vo; 2. Defence of Dr. S. Clarke againſt Leibnitz, 8vo.; 3. Two Diſſertations upon the Origin of Languages, and on the Power of Letters, &c. with a Hebrew Lexicon, 8vo.; 4. Diſſertation on the Origin and Structure of the Latin Tongue, 8vo.; 5. Two Arguments in Defence of Chriſtianity; 6. Tranſlation of Holberg's Introduction to Univerſal Hiſtory, 8vo.; 7. Sermons, 8vo.—Pref. to his Serm.

SHARROCK (Robert), an Engliſh divine, was born at Adſtock, in Buckinghamſhire, educated firſt at Wykeham's ſchool in Hampſhire, and admitted fellow of New college, Oxford, where he took his doctor's degree in civil law 1661. He obtained the rectory of Horewood, in Buckinghamſhire, and of Biſhop's Waltham, in Hampſhire, to which was added the archdeaconry of Wincheſter. He died in 1684. Dr. Sharrock wrote, 1. the Hiſtory of the Propagating and Improvement of Vegetables, 8vo.; 2. Hypotheſis de Officiis ſecundum humanæ rationis dictata, ſue natura jus, unde caſus omnes Conſcientiæ, &c. 8vo. This book was againſt Hobbes. 3. Judicia (ſeu Legum cenſuræ) de variis incontinentiæ ſpeciebus, &c. 8vo.; 4. De Finibus virtutis Chriſtianæ, or the Ends of the Chriſtian Religion juſtified, 4to.—Wood.

SHAW (John), a divine of the church of England, was born in the county of Durham and educated at Queen's college, Oxford, from whence he removed to Brasenose, and in 1645 he obtained the rectory of Walton, in Northumberland. After the restoration he had the chapelry of St. John, in Newcastle, and was a member of the convocation. He died in 1689. He wrote No Reformation of the established Religion, 8vo., and tracts against popery.—Ibid.

Shaw (Samuel), a non-conformist minister, was born at Repton, in Derbyshire, in 1635. He took his degrees in arts at St. John's college, Cambridge, and became master of the grammar school at Tamworth, in Warwickshire, from whence he removed to Moseley, and lastly to Long-Whatton, in Leicestershire, but was ejected for non-conformity in 1662. In 1666 he became master of the school at Ashby-de-la-Zouch, which he raised to considerable reputation He died in 1696. His works are, the Voice of one Crying in the Wilderness, 8vo.; Immanuel, 8vo.; a Latin Grammar; the true Christian's Test, or Meditations; Words made Visible, or Grammar and Rhetoric, a Comedy; the different Humours of Men, a Comedy. These were acted by his scholars. —Calamy.

Shaw (Thomas), an English divine and celebrated traveller, was born at Kendal, in Westmoreland, about 1692, and educated first at the grammar-school of his native town, and next at Queen's college, Oxford, where he proceeded to his degrees in arts On taking orders he was appointed chaplain to the factory at Algiers, and resided there some years. In his absence he was elected fellow of his college, and on his return to England in 1733 took his doctor's degree. He published his Travels in Barbary and the Levant, in one volume, folio, at Oxford in 1738. It is a work of universal esteem, and has been several times printed. Dr Shaw was appointed principal of Edmund Hall, Oxford, in 1740, and died in 1751.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Shaw (Peter), an English physician of considerable merit, was a member of the college of physicians in London and of the royal society. He published the Practice of Physic, 2 vols. 8vo.; a Course of Chemistry, 4to.; and an edition of Bacon's works, five vols. 4to. He died in 1763.

Shaw (Cuthbert), a poet, was born at Ravensworth in Yorkshire, in 1739. He received his education at Scorton school, where he became usher, and afterwards filled the same station in the grammar school at Darlington. While there he published in 1756 a work, called, Liberty, 4to. He did not remain long at Darlington, but removed to London, and from thence to Bury, where he entered into the Norwich company of players. He published in 1760, under the name of Seymour, "Odes on the four Seasons," 4to. In that year he joined Foote's troop at the Haymarket, and performed Sir George Wealthy in the Minor. In 1761 he appeared at Covent Garden, but without success. In 1762 he attacked Messrs. Lloyd, Churchill, Colman, and Shirley, in a poem entitled, "The Four Farthing Candles." In 1766 he published "The Race, a poem," in which he satirized the chief poets of that period. About this time he wrote an account of the Virtues of a medicine called, The Beaume de Vie, of which he was a proprietor. He soon afterwards married, but lost his wife in 1768; on which occasion he published a Monody. He died in miserable circumstances in 1771.—Europ. Mag. ix.

Shaw (Stebbing), a divine and antiquary, was born at Stowe, in Staffordshire, in 1762, and educated first at Repton school and afterwards at Queen's college, Cambridge, where he took his degrees in arts, and obtained a fellowship. In 1787 he made a tour in the Highlands of Scotland, of which he published an account but anonymously. The following year he made another tour in the West of England, of which he also printed an account in one volume, octavo, these performances are trifling. In 1789 he commenced, in conjunction with a friend, a periodical publication called, The Topographer, chiefly consisting of extracts made from curious books and manuscripts in the British museum. This work continued only two years. He next undertook the History of Staffordshire, of which one volume in folio was published in 1798, and in 1801 the first part of the second volume. In 1799 he succeeded his father in the rectory of Hartshorn, in Derbyshire. He died in 1803.—Gent. Mag.

Shebbeare (John), an English physician, and political writer, was born at Bideford, in Devonshire, in 1709, and educated under Mr. Mudge, master of the grammar-school in that town, after which he served his time to an apothecary. He carried on business for some time at Bristol, but about 1740 he removed to London. Being attached to the Stuarts, he went to Paris, where he took his doctor's degree, and was admitted member of the academy of sciences. On his return to London he published a satirical novel, called, the Marriage Act; and another, called, Lydia, or Filial Piety. In 1759 he was pilloried for writing the Seventh Letter to the People of England; but in the succeeding reign he obtained a pension. He wrote some pamphlets on the side of government in the American war, and died in 1788. His other works are, Letters on the English Nation, under the name of Angeloni, 2 vols.; History of the Sumatrans, 2 vols; Chrysal, or the adventures of a Guinea, 4 vols.; and a Practice of Physic, two vols. octavo.—Europ. Mag. Hist. Bideford.

Sheffield (John), duke of Buckingham, was born in 1648. He served in the fleet during the Dutch war, and afterwards made a campaign in France with Turenne. Charles II. with whom he was a favourite, gave him command of the fleet which was ſent againſt ngier. The duke wrote Eſſays on Poetry Satire; and ſeveral poetical pieces pub- ed in two vols. 4to. 1723. He was a nd to the revolution, and died in 1721.— n. Biog. Dict. Biog. Dram.

SHELDON (Gilbert), an eminent prelate, s born at Stanton, in Staffordſhire, in 98, admitted of Trinity college, Oxford, 1613, and elected fellow of All Souls, in 22. About this time he entered into or- s, and obtained a prebend of Glouceſter. 1635 he was elected warden of his col- e, and appointed clerk of the cloſet to the g, whom he attended in the Iſle of Wight, for his loyalty was deprived of the war- ſhip, and impriſoned. At the reſtoration was made dean of the chapel royal, and hop of London. On the death of archbi- p Juxon he was raiſed to the primacy, in ich ſituation he conducted himſelf with at zeal for the church, and expended ove 66,000l. in charitable uſes. But the ateſt of his works was building the theatre Oxford. He died in 1677, and lies in oydon church under a fine monument.— Neve's Lives of Abps.

SHELLY (George), a writing maſter, was rn about 1666, and died in 1736. His rformances were, the Penman's Magazine; bliſhed in 1708, and Natural Writing, 1714. The firſt was engraved by Nut- g, and the other by Bickham. Shelly s alſo the compiler of a ſmall volume of oral ſentences for ſchools. He was writing- aſter of Chriſt's Hoſpital.—Gen. Biog. ict.

SHENSTONE (William), an ingenious et, was born in 1714, at Hales-Owen, in ropſhire, and educated firſt at the ſchool Solihull, in Warwickſhire, and next at mbroke college, Oxford, on leaving which retired to his paternal eſtate at Hales- wen, which he greatly improved and orna- ented. He died in 1763. His works, hich conſiſt of ſongs, elegies, paſtorals, a em in Spenſer's manner, entitled, the hool Miſtreſs, letters, and miſcellaneous ays, were printed in 3 vols. 8vo. by Dodſ- y, and afterwards Mr. Hull publiſhed two lumes of the epiſtolary correſpondence of enſtone.—Ibid.

SHEPREVE (John), an Engliſh poet, was rn in Berkſhire, and bred at Corpus Chriſti llege, Oxford, where he took his degrees arts, and became Hebrew profeſſor about 38. He had a ſurprizing memory, and s one of the moſt learned men of his time. e died in 1542. His works are, Summa Synopſis Novi Teſt. diſtichs ducentis ſex- inta comprehenſa, 8vo.; Hippolytus Ovi- anæ Phædræ reſpondens, &c. His nephew, illiam Shepreve, was a zealous catholic, d went to Rome, where he died in 1598. e wrote ſome religious pieces.—Wood.

SHERARD (William), or Sherwood, an gliſh botaniſt, was born it Leiceſterſhire, 1659, and educated at merchant-taylors' ſchool, from whence he removed to St. John's college, Oxford, where he became fellow, and took his degree of bachelor of law in 1677. He then went abroad with ſome young noblemen, and on his travels formed an intimacy with Boerhaave, Tournefort, and other eminent men. About 1702 he was appointed conſul at Smyrna, and during his reſidence in the Eaſt he collected ſpecimens of all the plants of Natolia and Greece, and made obſervations on ſubjects of natural hiſtory and antiquities. In 1718 he returned to England, and was admitted to his degree of doctor of laws at Oxford. He afterwards went again on the continent, and viſited the Alps, where, as he was lying down, examining ſome plants, he narrowly eſcaped being ſhot by a peaſant, who miſtook him for a wolf. On his return he brought over the celebrated Dillenius, who reſided with him at his ſeat at Eltham, where he formed a botanic garden. Dr. Sherard died in 1728, and by his will gave 3000l. to provide a ſalary for a profeſſor of botany at Oxford. He publiſhed Herman's Paradiſus Batavus, 4to.; and a work entitled, Schola Botanica, under the name of Wharton, 12mo. He alſo communicated ſeveral papers in the Philoſophical Tranſactions. His brother, James Sherard, was originally an apothecary, and afterwards a phyſician. He was alſo a good botaniſt, and died in 1741.—Pulteney's Sketches of Botany.

SHERBURNE (Edward), an ingenious writer, was born in London in 1618, and educated under Farnaby, after which he went abroad, but returned in 1641, and ſucceeded on his father's death to the office of clerk of the ordnance. He was impriſoned for ſome time by the parliament, and on recovering his liberty joined the king, whom he ſerved with great bravery, by which he ſuffered conſiderably in his eſtate. After the battle of Edgehill he went to Oxford, where he was created maſter of arts. At the reſtoration he recovered his place, was knighted, and made commiſſary-general of the artillery. He died in 1702. He tranſlated Seneca's tragedies, the Sphere of Marcus Manilius, and other works, into Engliſh, and wrote a volume of poems.—Wood's Faſti.

SHEREBATOF (Prince), a learned Ruſſian nobleman, who publiſhed ſeveral works in his own language, the principal of which is the Hiſtory of Ruſſia from the Earlieſt Times, which is well arranged, and faithfully written.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

SHERIDAN (Thomas), a divine and poet, was born in the county of Cavan, in Ireland, in 1684, and educated at Trinity college, Dublin, where he proceeded to his doctor's degree, and entered into orders. He kept a reſpectable ſchool in Dublin ſeveral years, and afterwards was maſter of that at Cavan, which he ſold, as he alſo did a living procured for him by dean Swift, with whom he was in habits of cloſe intimacy. He was an improvident man, and died poor in 1738.

Several of his letters and fugitive pieces are in Swift's works.—Ibid.

SHERIDAN (Thomas), ſon of the above, was born at Quilca, in Ireland, in 1721, and educated at Weſtminſter ſchool, and next at Trinity college, Dublin, where he took one degree in arts. In 1743 he appeared on the ſtage at Smock-alley, in the character of Richard III. The year following he viſited London, and performed at Covent-garden. On his return to Ireland he became manager of the Dublin theatre, but on account of ſome attempts to reform the abuſes that had long prevailed there, riots enſued, for which the leaders were proſecuted. In the end, his theatre was ruined, and he entered on a new career as an itinerant lecturer on elocution, and with ſuch reputation as to receive the degree of maſter of arts from the univerſities of Dublin and Cambridge. In 1760 he engaged at Drury-lane, and ſoon after obtained a penſion from the king. In 1767 he exhibited at the Haymarket an entertainment of reading, ſinging, and muſic, called an Attic Evening. He alſo performed at the ſame theatre and at Covent-garden, but quitted the profeſſion of an actor in 1776. The ſame year he ſucceeded Garrick as manager of Drury-lane theatre, which ſituation he reſigned in 1779. He now returned to his literary labours, and to reading occaſional lectures. He died at Margate in 1788. His principal works are, 1. a Dictionary of the Engliſh Language, one main object of which is to eſtabliſh a plain and permanent ſtandard of pronunciation, 1 vol. 4to. and 2 vols. 8vo.; 2. Lectures on the Art of Reading, 8vo.; 3. Britiſh Education, or the Source of the Diſorders of Great Britain, 8vo.; 4. a Diſſertation on the Cauſes of the Difficulties which occur in Learning the Engliſh Tongue, 4to.; 5. a Courſe of Lectures on Elocution, &c. 4to.; 6. Life of Swift, prefixed to his works, 8vo; 7. Elements of Engliſh, 12mo. His wife, Frances, whoſe maiden name was Chamberlaine, was a very ingenious woman, and wrote Sidney Biddulph, a novel; a moral romance entitled, Nourjahad; and the Diſcovery, a comedy. She died at Blois in 1767. —Europ. Mag. vol xiv.

SHERLOCK (Richard), a pious divine, was born at Oxton, in Cheſhire, and educated firſt at Magdalen-hall, Oxford, and afterwards at Trinity college, Dublin, where he took his degree of M.A. and entered into orders. On the breaking out of the rebellion he came to England, became chaplain in the king's army, and frequently preached before the court at Oxford, where he was created bachelor of divinity. After the reſtoration he was preſented to the rectory of Winwick in Lancaſhire, and received his doctor's degree from Dublin. He died in 1689. His principal works are, the Practical Chriſtian, 8vo., Confeſſions, Meditations, and Prayers for the Sacrament; on the Four Laſt Things, 8vo.; Pieces againſt the Quakers.—Wood.

SHERLOCK (William), a learned divine, was born in 1641, and educated at Eton, from whence he removed to Peter-houſe, Cambridge, where he took his degrees in arts, and entered into orders, after which he obtained a living in London, and the maſterſhip of the Temple. He diſplayed great zeal and abilities againſt popery in the reign of James II. but for ſome time ſcrupled taking the oaths to king William. He at laſt complied, and publiſhed an apology for his conduct, which was ſeverely animadverted on by the nonjurors. He was preferred to the deanry of St. Paul's, and had a long controverſy with Dr. South on the doctrine of the trinity. He died in 1707. He publiſhed ſeveral ſermons, and two excellent practical books on death and the laſt judgment.—Gen. Hiſt. Dict.

SHERLOCK (Thomas), ſon of the above, was born in London in 1678. He was educated at Catherine-hall, Cambridge, of which he was choſen fellow, and afterwards became maſter. He took his degree of doctor in divinity, and ſucceeded his father in the maſterſhip of the Temple. In the controverſy excited by biſhop Hoadley on the conſtitution of the church, Dr. Sherlock bore a conſpicuous part, and attacked the biſhop in an able pamphlet in vindication of the corporation and teſt acts. He alſo anſwered Collins in ſix excellent diſcourſes on the uſe and intent of prophecy, and wrote with equal ſtrength a defence of the miracle of Chriſt's reſurrection, againſt Woolſton, in a work entitled, the Trial of the Witneſſes. He was ſucceſſively dean of Chicheſter, biſhop of Bangor, Saliſbury, and London. On the death of archbiſhop Potter he was offered the ſee of Canterbury, which he declined. He died in 1761. His Sermons, in four volumes 8vo. rank among the firſt in the Engliſh language —Gen. Biog. Dict.

SHERRINGHAM (Robert), a learned divine, was a fellow of Gonvil and Caius college, Cambridge, from whence he was ejected in the civil wars for his loyalty. He then went to Holland, and at the reſtoration was reſtored to his fellowſhip. He died in 1677. His works are, De Anglorum gentis origine diſceptatio, 8vo.; a Tranſlation of a Hebrew book called Joma, into Latin, with an Illuſtration, 4to.; the King's Supremacy Aſſerted; and ſome Sermons, 4to.—Wood.

SHERWIN (John Keyſe), an eminent engraver, was originally a wood-cutter in Suſſex. Being one day at Mr. Mitford's houſe, the attention with which he obſerved ſome of the family who were drawing, attracted the notice of that gentleman, who aſked him if he could do any thing in that way? Sherwin anſwered he could not tell, but he ſhould like to try. On this a portcrayon was put into his hand, and he produced ſuch a drawing as aſtoniſhed all preſent, and the ſociety of arts, to whom it was preſented, voted him the ſilver medal. He was then placed under Bartolozzi, and became his favourite pupil. His engravings are in a ſtyle of the firſt exlence. The principal is one of Moſes in e bulruſhes. He died in 1790.—Europ. ag.

SHIPLEY (Jonathan), an Engliſh prelate, as born in 1714, and bred at Chriſt church, xford, where he wrote ſome verſes on the ath of queen Caroline, and in 1738 took s degree of M.A. He ſoon afterwards en- red into orders, and obtained a living. In 43 he was inſtalled prebendary of Win- eſter, and in 1745 appointed chaplain to e duke of Cumberland, whom he accom- nied abroad. In 1749 he became canon Chriſt church, and in 1760 dean of Win- eſter. In 1769 he was advanced to the e of St. Aſaph. He died in 1788. The iſhop wrote ſome poems, and publiſhed ſer- ons on public occaſions.—Ibid.

SHIRLEY (ſir Anthony), an Engliſh gen- eman, was born at Wiſton, in Suſſex, in 65, and educated at Oxford, where he be- ame fellow of All Souls college. After udying ſome time in the inns of court he ent to the Low Countries, under ſir Philip idney. In 1596 he made a voyage to Ame- ca, and was afterwards with the earl of Eſ- ex in Ireland, where he was knighted. On oing abroad he was received at ſeveral ourts, particularly that of Spain, where he as made admiral of the fleet, and a grandee. ames I. ordered him to return, but he re- uſed, and died in Spain about 1640. He rote, a Voyage to America, in Hackluyt's ollections; Account of Muley Hamet's iſing in the Kingdom of Morocco, &c. 4to; iſtory of his Travels into Perſia, 4to.; oyage over the Caſpian Sea and through uſſia, in Purchas's Pilgrims; Hiſtory of is Ambaſſages, fol. His brother, Robert hirley, ſettled in Perſia, where he was in uch high eſteem with the emperor that he as ſent by his ambaſſador to Poland, and fterwards to England. He alſo gave him is niece in marriage, and conferred on him reat honour and wealth.—Wood.

SHIRLEY (Thomas), a phyſician, was de- ſcended of the above family, born in Weſt- minſter, and bred at Magdalen college, Ox- ford, but took his doctor's degree in France. He became phyſician to Charles II. and died n 1678. He wrote a philoſophical eſſay, declaring the probable cauſes whence ſtones are produced in the greater world, &c. 8vo. —Ibid.

SHIRLEY (James), a dramatic writer, was born in London in 1594, and educated at Merchant Taylors' ſchool, and next at St. John's college, Oxford; but completed his degrees in arts at Cambridge, and entered into orders. He afterwards turned Roman Catholic, and became a ſchoolmaſter in Lon- don. He and his wife both died the ſame day of a fright, occaſioned by the fire of Lon- don in 1666. He wrote thirty-nine plays, a volume of poems, and ſome ſchool-books.— Ibid.

SHORE (Jane), miſtreſs of Edward IV. was the wife of a goldſmith in Lombard- ſtreet, but the king being enamoured of her charms, drew her from her huſband. On the death of Edward ſhe lived with lord Haſt- ings, who was beheaded by order of Richard, duke of Glouceſter, and that miſcreant cauſed Jane Shore to be tried for witchcraft. She was accordingly ſentenced to do public penance, and was robbed by the uſurper of all her property. She died in the reign of Henry VIII. in the extremity of poverty.

SHOVEL (ſir Cloudeſley), a brave Engliſh admiral, was born in 1650, of mean paren- tage. He went early to ſea, and from being a cabin boy, roſe to the firſt honours of his profeſſion. In 1674 he ſerved in the Medi- terranean, under ſir John Narborough, and did ſuch ſervice by burning the ſhips in the harbour of Tripoly, that he received a cap- tain's commiſſion. For his gallant conduct againſt the French on the coaſt of Ireland, he was knighted by king William, and made an admiral. He had a conſiderable ſhare in the victory of La Hogue, and in that off Ma- laga in 1704. The year following he had the command of the fleet in the Mediterra- nean, and contributed to the taking of Bar- celona. In 1707 he proceeded for England, but in the night of October 22, the admiral's ſhip, called the Aſſociation, and ſeveral others, ſtruck upon the rocks of Scilly, and were loſt. The body of ſir Cloudeſley was diſcovered and conveyed to Portſmouth, from whence it was removed to London, and buried in Weſtminſter abbey, where a mo- nument was erected to his memory.—Camp- bell's Admirals.

SHOWER (John), a nonconformiſt divine, was born in London in 1660. In 1687 he became paſtor of a congregation in Jewin- ſtreet, and died at Hoxton in 1718. He wrote Sacramental Sermons, and Reflections on Time and Eternity, two books of great uſefulneſs.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

SHUCKFORD (Samuel), a learned Engliſh divine, was rector of Shelton, in Norfolk, canon of Canterbury, and chaplain to the king. He wrote a Hiſtory of the World, Sacred and Profane, introductory to Pri- deaux's Connections, and died in 1754.— Mortimer.

SHUTE (Joſias), a pious divine, who was archdeacon of Colcheſter, and rector of St. Mary Woolnoth, London, where he was greatly followed as an eloquent preacher. He ſuffered much in the civil wars, and died in 1643. He wrote a folio volume of Ser- mons on the 16th Chapter of Geneſis.— Granger.

SHUTER (Edward), an Engliſh comedian, was the ſon of a chairman in London, and employed for ſome time as a tapſter in a public-houſe, and marker to a billiard table. Having a great turn for the ſtage, and conſi- derable humour, he was engaged at Covent- garden, where by his eminence in low co- medy, he became a great favourite with the public. He died in 1776.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

SIBBALD (ſir Robert), a learned phyſician, was born in Fifeſhire in 1643, and educated at the univerſity of St. Andrew. He projected a royal college of phyſicians at Edinburgh, and formed the botanical garden. He was the firſt medical profeſſor inſtituted in that univerſity, and was knighted by Charles II. He died in 1720. His works are, Scotia Illuſtrata, folio; Miſcellanea quædam eruditæ Antiquitatis, 1710; Hiſtory of the Sheriffdom of Fife and Kinroſs; Phalainologia nova, 4to.; Papers in the Philoſophical Tranſactions.—Pulteney's Sketches.

SIBRECHTS (John), a painter, was born at Antwerp in 1625, and died in 1703. He lived in London ſome years, and was employed by the nobility. He excelled in painting landſcapes with cattle.—Pilkington.

SIBTHORPE (Robert), a divine, was born in Lincolnſhire, and bred at Oxford. On entering into orders he obtained the rectory of Water Stratford, in Buckinghamſhire, and afterwards the vicarage of Brackley in Northamptonſhire. He diſtinguiſhed himſelf by preaching up the king's prerogative in the beginning of the reign of Charles I. for which he obtained a prebend in the cathedral of Peterborough, and the rectory of Burton Latimers, in Northamptonſhire, which he loſt in the rebellion. His Sermons were cenſured by the houſe of commons. He died in 1662.—Wood.

SIBTHORPE (John), a learned botaniſt and phyſician, was born in Lincolnſhire. His father, Dr. Humphrey Sibthorpe, was profeſſor of botany at Oxford, in which ſituation he was ſucceeded by his ſon, who made two voyages to Greece and the neighbouring countries to collect rare plants. His collections are about to be publiſhed in the moſt magnificent form, under the title of Flora Græca. Dr. Sibthorpe printed a Flora Oxonienſis, and died in 1796.—Gent. Mag.

SICINIUS (Dentatus), a Roman tribune, who carried arms with great reputation forty years, gained one hundred and twenty one battles, and was rewarded with fourteen civic and three mural crowns. He had received forty-five wounds, but none on the back, a proof that he never turned from an enemy. He had the name of the Roman Achilles, and was murdered by Appius Claudius, B.C. 405.—Livy.

SICIOLANTE (Girolamo), an Italian painter of hiſtorical ſubjects and landſcapes; born at Sermoneta in 1504, and died in 1550. —Pilkington.

SIDNEY (Henry), an eminent ſtateſman, was born of a noble family in Surry, and became a ſtudent of New college, Oxford, in 1543. He afterwards went to court, where he was a great favourite with Edward VI. who conferred on him the honour of knighthood, and ſent him ambaſſador to France. In the ſucceeding reign he was appointed collector of the revenues in Ireland, and in that of Elizabeth, lord-preſident of the marſhes of Wales, and knight of the garter. In 1568 he was conſtituted lord deputy of Ireland. He died in 1586, and was buried at Penſhurſt in Kent, the manor of which he had obtained ſome years before. He cauſed the Iriſh Statutes to be printed; and ſome of his letters to his ſon have been publiſhed. —Wood.

SIDNEY (ſir Philip), ſon of the above, was born at Penſhurſt in 1554. When young he was ſent to Chriſt Church college, Oxford, and at the age of ſeventeen went on his travels. In 1576 queen Elizabeth appointed him ambaſſador to the emperor Rodolphus, and at that court he contracted an intimacy with the famous don John of Auſtria. On account of his declaring his ſentiments freely againſt the queen's marriage with the duke of Anjou in 1580, he retired from court, and in his retreat wrote his celebrated romance, called Arcadia. In 1582 he received the honour of knighthood, and in 1585 he was appointed governor of Fluſhing, and general of the horſe ſent to the aſſiſtance of the United Provinces. About this time, his reputation for wiſdom and valour ſtood ſo high, that he was thought a fit perſon to be a candidate for the crown of Poland, but the queen would not conſent that England ſhould looſe ſo great a jewel. In September 1586 ſir Philip diſplayed uncommon bravery at the battle of Zutphen, but received a mortal wound in the thigh as he was mounting his third horſe, having had two ſlain under him before. While he was in the arms of his attendants, who had procured for him a bottle of wine to allay his thirſt, a wounded ſoldier was carried paſt him and caſt a wiſhful eye on the bottle, on which ſir Philip ordered it to be taken to him, ſaying, "Poor fellow, thy neceſſity is greater than mine!" This honour of the Engliſh nation died of his wound twenty-five days afterwards. His body was brought home and buried in St. Paul's cathedral. His Arcadia has been ſeveral times printed in 4to. and folio. He alſo wrote an Apology for Poetry, 4to.; Sonnets; Urania, a poem; and ſeveral other pieces.—Biog. Brit.

SIDNEY (Algernon), a political writer, was the ſon of Robert, earl of Leiceſter, and born about 1617. He diſtinguiſhed himſelf at the beginning of the civil wars by his oppoſition to Charles I. became a colonel in the parliament army, and avowed himſelf a republican. He was nominated one of the king's judges, but did not ſit in the high court of juſtice on that occaſion. When Cromwell aſſumed the ſovereignty, under the title of protector, Sidney retired to private life. At the reſtoration he went abroad, but returned in 1667, on obtaining a pardon, the condition of which was that he ſhould conduct himſelf as a peaceable ſubject. In 1683 he was apprehended, on a charge of being concerned in the Rye houſe plot, tried before judge Jefferies, and ſentenced to death, which was executed on Tower-hill the ſame year. The ſentence againſt him was declared illegal in the firſt parliament of liam and Mary. Sidney wrote Dis-rſes on Government, in which he places origin and right of power in the people, l lays down very bold and paradoxical xims deducible from that poſition. They re printed in 1689, and again by Hollis. Great Hiſt. Dict. State Trials.

SIDONIUS APOLLINARIS, a primitive late, was born of an illuſtrious Roman fa-y at Lyons in 430. After diſcharging eral high civil offices, he was choſen hop of Auvergne, againſt his own deſire, 472, which ſituation he diſcharged ſo well as e accounted the oracle of France. He died 488. His epiſtles, poems, and other works, re printed by father Sirdmond, with notes, 1652, 4to.—Dupin. Moreri.

SIGEBERT, king of the Eaſt Angles, is ebrated by Bede as a man of learning and ty. He founded ſeveral churches, monaſ-ies, and ſchools. After abdicating the one, he became a monk at Burgh-caſtle, Suffolk, where he was aſſaſſinated in 642. Bedæ Eccl. Hiſt.

SIGISMUND, emperor of Germany, was e ſon of Charles IV. and born in 1368. was elected king of Hungary in 1386, l emperor in 1410. After eſtabliſhing eral conſtitutional regulations for reſtor-g the peace of the empire, he ſet him-f about effecting the tranquillity of the urch, for which purpoſe he prevailed with pe John XXIII. to convene the council of nſtance in 1414, but he tarniſhed his cha-ter by granting a ſafe conduct to John s to attend that council, and afterwards fering him to be executed in violation of The Huſſites, irritated at this want of th, aroſe under the famous Ziſca, and gain-many advantages over the German forces, d they were not reduced till ſixteen years erwards. Sigiſmund died in 1437.—Univ. ſt.

SIGISMUND I. king of Poland, ſurnamed e Great, was the ſon of Caſimir IV. and ected to the throne in 1507. He employ-the firſt years of his reign in reforming blic abuſes, and reſtored the ſtate to its an-nt glory. He drove the Muſcovites out Lithuania, recovered ſeveral places from e Teutonic knights, and expelled the allachians who had invaded his eſtates. e died in 1548, and was ſucceeded by his n, Sigiſmund II. ſurnamed the Auguſt, be-uſe he was born in that month. He cauſed e honours of queen to be paid to his iſtreſs, and thereby gave great diſſatisfaction his ſubjects. The Socinians having made eat progreſs in his dominions, he iſſued a cree againſt them. He died in 1572. giſmund III. was the ſon of John III. ng of Sweden, and aſcended the throne of oland in 1587, to the excluſion of Maximi-an of Auſtria, who had been elected by the obility. On the death of his father he ſuc-eeded to the Swediſh crown in 1594, but be-g a zealous catholic, the Swedes acknow-dged his uncle, Charles, duke of Suderma-nia, who was crowned in 1604. A long war enſued, in which Sigiſmund was unſuc-ceſsful. His reign was alſo diſturbed by the Tartars and the Muſcovites. He died in 1632.—Ibid.

SIGNORELLI (Luca), a painter, was a na-tive of Cortona, born in 1439, and died in 1521. He excelled in deſigning human figures, and diſplayed great fire and genius in his compoſitions. Michael Angelo did not diſdain to copy after him.—De Piles.

SIGONIUS (Charles), an Italian writer, was born at Modena, and deſigned for the medical profeſſion, which he renounced for literature, and became a profeſſor of lan-guages at Padua. He died in 1584, aged 60. His works are, 1. De Republica He-bræorum, a ſmall treatiſe, but of great merit; 2. De Republica Athenienſium; 3. Hiſtoria de Occidentis Imperio; 4. De Regno Italiæ; 5. An Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory, printed at Milan in 1734, in 2 vols. 4to.—Tiraboſchi.

SILHOUETTE (Stephen de), a French writer, was born at Limoges in 1709. Af-ter being maſter of requeſts to the duke of Orleans, he became comptroller-general and miniſter of ſtate in 1759, but continued in office only nine months, owing to the failure of his ſchemes of reform and economy, which were turned into ridicule. He died in 1767. His works are, General Idea of the Chineſe Government, 4to.; Political Reflections, tranſlated from the Spaniſh of Gracian, 4to.; a Tranſlation of Pope's Eſſay on Man, 12mo.; Warburton's Alliance of Church and State, 2 vols. &c.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

SILIUS ITALICUS (Caius), a Latin poet, was a native of Rome, and made conſul by Domitian. The Tomb of Virgil was on his eſtate, and he reſpected it as a temple. Si-lius wrote a poem upon the ſecond Punic war, which was diſcovered by Poggio in the monaſtery of St. Gal. The beſt edition is that of Drakenborch at Utrecht, 1717, 4to. Silius died A.D. 74, aged 75.—Voſſius de Poet. Lat.

SILVA (John Baptiſt), a phyſician, was born at Bourdeaux in 1684, of Jewiſh pa-rents, but he renounced his religion, and a ter taking his degree at Montpellier, went and ſettled at Paris, where he gained a great reputation by his cures. He died in 1744. He wrote a Treatiſe on the Uſe of Bleeding, 2 vols.; and Diſſertations and Conſultations of M. Chirac and Silva, 3 vols.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

SILVESTER I. pope, was elected to that dignity in 314. The arian hereſy commenced in his pontificate, and he diſtinguiſhed himſelf againſt the Donatiſts. He died in 335. SIL-VESTER II. was born in Auvergne of an ob-ſcure family, and bred up in a monaſtery, but his ſuperior talents exciting the envy and hatred of his companions, he withdrew from the ſociety, and went to Spain. The duke of Barcelona took him to Italy, where he was noticed by the emperor Otho, who gave him an abbey, which he afterwards quitted, and went to Germany, and became preceptor to Otho III. He was afterwards tutor to the ſon of Hugh Capet, by whom he was made archbiſhop of Rheims. By the intereſt of Otho he gained the papacy in 999, and died in 1003. He was a man of conſiderable learning, particularly in the mathematics.—Bower. Platina.

Silvester (Iſrael), an engraver was born at Nancy in 1621, and died at Paris in 1691. His landſcapes are very fine. Louis XIV. employed him in his palace, and Silveſter had the honour of inſtructing the dauphin in drawing.—Moreri.

Silvester (Louis), a painter, was a native of Paris, and the pupil of Le Brun and Boullogne. His principal pictures are at Dreſden, to which place he was invited by the king, of Poland, who conferred on him the rank of nobility, and appointed him director of the royal academy of painting. After reſiding there twenty-four years he returned to France, and died in 1760, aged 85.—D'Argenville.

Simeon Stylites, the founder of a ſect, was a native of Cilicia, and a ſhepherd till the age of 13, when he entered into a monaſtery, after which he practiſed a ſingular kind of auſterity, placing himſelf upon a ſtone pillar, whence he acquired the name of Stylites, and his example was followed by many other devoutees, who ſeated themſelves upon pillars of different heights on a mountain in Syria, where they pretended to ſee viſions. Simeon died about 461.—Moreri.

Simeon Metaphrastes, an eccleſiaſtical hiſtorian, was born at Conſtantinople in the tenth century. He was ſecretary of ſtate under Conſtantine Porphyrogenitus, who engaged him to write the Lives of the Saints, which he performed. This work, which is a kind of religious romance, has been tranſlated into Latin.—Dupin. Moreri.

Simler (Joſias), a proteſtant divine of Zurich, in Switzerland, where he died in 1576, aged 45. He publiſhed an abridgement of Geſner's Bibliotheca, folio; De Helvetiorum Republica, 12mo; Valleſiæ Deſcriptio; and other works. John Simler, an able portrait painter, was a native of Zurich, and died at Stein upon the Rhine, in 1748.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

Simon-Maccabæus, prince, and high-prieſt of the Jews, B.C. 143. He diſplayed great valour under the government of his brothers Judas and Jonathan, and defeated the enemy in many battles, for which he was placed at the head of the nation by the public voice. He repaired the fortifications of Jeruſalem, put the other cities of Judæa in a ſtate of defence, and reſtored the independence of his country. He was aſſaſſinated with his two ſons at a feaſt, by Ptolemy, his ſon-in-law, B.C. 135.—Apocrypha.

Simon, called the brother of our Lord, was the ſon of Cleophas, and elected biſhop of Jeruſalem, after the death of St. James, A.D. 62. In the reign of Trajan he was put to death by being crucified, in 107.—Cave. Euſebius.

Simon (St.), an apoſtle of Jeſus Chriſt, was called Zealotes. He preached the Goſpel in Egypt, Libya, and Mauritania, and ſuffered martyrdom in Perſia.—Ibid.

Simon Magus, or the Magician, an hereſiarch, who is ſuppoſed to have been the firſt of the Gnoſtics. He was a native of Samaria, and perceiving the miracles wrought by St. Philip he was baptized; but on offering money to the apoſtles, that he might receive the Holy Ghoſt, or the gift of tongues, and of working miracles, he was rejected or excommunicated by St. Peter. It is from this circumſtance that the term Simoniac is applied to ſuch as purchaſe ſpiritual things. He afterwards fell into the groſſeſt errors, and maintained that God has left the world to be governed by certain beings called Æons. The ſtory of his acquiring a great reputation at Rome by his pretended miracles, and falling from a great height in the air, in conſequence of the prayer of St. Peter, is a mere fable.—Cave. Dupin.

Simon (of Durham), a monk in the reign of Edward III. A chronicle by him is in the library at Durham, and was publiſhed at Oxford by Hearne. He is ſuppoſed to have died about 1357.—Nicholſon's Hiſt. Lib.

Simon (Richard), a learned French divine, was born at Dieppe in 1638. He entered into the congregation of the oratory, which he quitted for ſome time, but returned in 1662, and left it again in 1678. He died in 1712. Father Simon had vaſt learning, and a great judgment, but he entertained very free opinions, and had many antagoniſts. His principal works are, 1. the Ceremonies and Cuſtoms of the Jews, 12mo.; 2. Critical Hiſtory of the Old Teſtament, 4to.; 3. Critical Hiſtory of the Text of the New Teſtament, 4to.; 4. Critical Hiſtory of the Verſions of the New Teſtament, and of the principal Commentaries thereon, 4to.; 5. on the Inſpiration of the Sacred Books, 4to.; 6. New Obſervations on the Text and Verſions of the New Teſtament, 4to.; 7. Critical Letters, 4 vols. 12mo.; 8. a French Tranſlation of the Naw Teſtament, with literal and critical notes, 2 vols. 8vo.; 9. Hiſtory of the Origin and Progreſs of Eccleſiaſtical Revenues, 2 vols. 12mo.; 10. Bibliotheque Critique, 4 vols. This was ſuppreſſed by the council.—Niceron.

Simon (Claude-Francis), a printer of Paris, who died there in 1767. He wrote a little volume on mythology, the firſt editions of which were very indecent. He was alſo the author of Memoirs of Du Guay Trouin, 4to; Memoirs of Count de Hornville, a romance, 2 vols 12mo.; and two comedies.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

Simon (Thomas), an Engliſh engraver of medals, was inſtructed by Briot, a Frenchman, who was in the ſervice of Charles I. Moſt of Simon's works were executed during Cromwell's protectorate, whoſe great ſeal that of the commonwealth were exqui-cut by him. His brother, Abraham , was a celebrated modeller in wax, and ed him in moſt of his capital works.

was educated for the church, but declined profeſſion to purſue the bent of his ge-He was ſome time in the ſervice of ſtina, queen of Sweden, and was afters employed by Charles II. He died after the revolution.—Vertue. Granger.

SIMONEAU (Charles), a French engraver, born at Orleans about 1639. He was diſciple of Noel Coypel, and died at Paris, 728. He completed the Medallic Hiſ-of Louis XIV. He is not to be miſtaken Louis Simoneau, who publiſhed a ſeries of s on the hiſtory of printing, engraving, other arts, in 2 vols. folio, 1710.—Nouv.
. Hiſt.

SIMONET (Edmund), a Jeſuit, was born angres in 1662. He became profeſſor of oſophy at Rheims and Pont-a-Mouſſon, re alſo he taught divinity. He died in
3. He is the author of Inſtitutiones ologicæ ad uſum Seminariorum, 11 vols.
o.—Ibid.

SIMONIDES, a philoſopher and poet, was in the iſland of Ceos, in the Ægean ſea, flouriſhed B.C. 480. His compoſitions e principally elegiac, and he gained a po-al prize at the age of eighty. He diſced his great qualities by exceſſive avarice.
gments of his poems are in the Corpus arum Græcorum, Geneva, 2 vols folio,
1.—Moreri.

SIMPLICIUS, a peripatetic philoſopher of fifth century, was a native of Phrygia.
Commentaries upon Ariſtotle and Epics were publiſhed at Leyden in 1640, 4to.
bid.

SIMPSON (Edward), a learned divine, was n at Tottenham in Middleſex, and edu-d at Trinity college, Cambridge, where ook his degree of D D. He became rec-of Eaſtling, in Kent, where he died in
2. His Univerſal Chronology, publiſhed atin, in the year he died, was reprinted eyden in 1739, and at Amſterdam in 2.—Granger.

SIMPSON (Chriſtopher), a writer on mu-was patronized by ſir Robert Bolles, in oſe houſe he died about 1662. He wrote mpendium of Practical Muſic, 8vo. which very uſeful book.—Granger. Hawkins.

SIMPSON (John), a Scotch divine, was n at Dumfries in 1677, and educated at ſgow, where he took his degrees in arts, became profeſſor of divinity, but having raced notions repugnant to the ſtandard feſſion of faith, he was perſecuted with it rigour, and excommunicated. Queen oline, however, procured him a penſion.
died in 1744.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

SIMPSON (Robert), an eminent mathema-an, was born at Hamilton in Scotland, in 5, and bred at Glaſgow, where he took doctor's degree in Phyſic, but renounced t profeſſion, and was choſen profeſſor of mathematics in that univerſity. He died in 1768. Dr. Simpſon publiſhed a valuable edition of Euclid, and his poſthumous works were printed at Glaſgow in 1776, 4to.—Hutton. Encycl. Brit.

SIMPSON (Thomas), a mathematician, was born at Market Boſworth in Leiceſterſhire, in 1710. His parents were too poor to give him an education, and he was, when very young, placed at the loom as a weaver of ſtuffs. By means of a travelling pedlar he gained ſome knowledge of arithmetic and aſtrology, and being anxious for farther improvement he viſited London in 1732, and worked for ſome time in Spital-fields, employing his leiſure hours in ſtudy, and alſo in teaching others. So great was his progreſs that in 1737 he publiſhed his excellent Treatiſe on Fluxions, which brought him into conſiderable notice. In 1740 appeared his book on annuities and chances, which occaſioned a diſpute between him and Le Moivre. In 1743 he was appointed profeſſor of mathematics at the military ſchool of Woolwich. He was alſo elected a fellow of the royal ſociety, and a member of the academy of ſciences at Paris. He died in 1761, and a penſion was granted to his widow from the crown. Beſides the above works he wrote the Elements of Algebra and Geometry, and ſome papers in the Philoſophical Tranſactions.—Ibid.

SIRANI (John Andrew), a painter of Bologna, was born in 1610, and died in 1670. He was one of the beſt diſciples of Guido; and his daughter Elizabeth was alſo a good artiſt in hiſtorical painting. She died in 1661.—Pilkington.

SIRI (Vittoro), an Italian monk, who ſettled at Paris, where he became hiſtoriographer to the king, and abbot of Vallemague. He publiſhed an hiſtorical journal, or a Mercury, from 1635 to 1649, and continued under another title to 1670. He died in 1685.—Moreri.

SIRIES (Violante Beatrice), an ingenious lady of Florence, was born in 1710. She was the diſciple of John Fratellini, and equalled him in portrait-painting. Her principal performance is a picture of the grand duke of Tuſcany, and of all the imperial family at Florence. She died about 1760.—Pilkington.

SIRLET (Flavius), an engraver on precious ſtones, died at Rome in 1737. His works are little, if at all, inferior to ſome of the fineſt remains of antiquity. One of his beſt performances is the famous groupe of Laocoon upon anamethyſt.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

SIRMOND (James), a French Jeſuit, was born at Rome in 1559. He became ſecretary to Aquaviva, general of his order at Rome, where he aſſiſted Baronius in compiling his annals. In 1613 he returned to France, and was appointed confeſſor to Louis XIII. which office he diſcharged with great reputation. He died in 1651. Father Sirmond publiſhed an edition of the councils of France, 3 vols. folio; editions of the works of Marcellinus Theodret and Hincmar; and a great number of miſcellaneous pieces on theological ſubjects. His nephew, John Sirmond, was a member of the French academy, and hiſtoriographer of France. He died in 1649. His works are, 1. Life of Cardinal d'Amboiſe, 8vo.; 2. Latin Poems.—Moreri.

SIXTUS IV. pope, was the ſon of a fiſherman on the coaſt of Genoa, and entered among the cordeliers. His abilities procured him the chair of divinity at Padua, and other univerſities of Italy. He alſo became general of his order, and Paul II. honoured him with the cardinalſhip. He ſucceeded that pontiff in 1471. He endeavoured to raiſe a new cruſade againſt the infidels, but without ſucceſs. Sixtus iſſued a bull, granting indulgences to thoſe who celebrated the feaſt of the immaculate conception of the Virgin. He died in 1484. He wrote ſome theological works.—Bower. Ryeaut.

SIXTUS V. pope, was the ſon of a gardener in Ancona, and born in 1521. When very young he was put to keep ſwine, from which ſituation he was taken by a cordelier who was pleaſed with his quickneſs, and placed him in a convent of the order in a menial capacity. He made ſo great a progreſs in learning as to be admitted into orders, after which he became doctor and profeſſor of divinity at Sienna, when he took the name of Montalto. His talents as a preacher procured him the appointment of commiſſary-general at Bologna, and inquiſitor at Venice, but his conduct in the latter city gave ſo much offence to the ſenate that he was compelled to quit their territory. After obtaining ſeveral marks of diſtinction he was made cardinal in 1570. In this ſituation he affected uncommon humility and devotion, and counterfeited the weakneſſes of ſickneſs and age with ſo much art as to dupe the whole conclave. After the death of Gregory XIII. the cardinals were divided about the election, when conſidering that Montalto was an infirm old man who could not live long, they united in chuſing him to the vacant chair. The election was no ſooner declared, than, to the aſtoniſhment of all preſent, he jumped into the midſt of the chapel, threw away his crutch, and began to ſing the Te Deum with a loud voice. He commenced his pontificate by clearing the eccleſiaſtical ſtate of the numerous robbers which infeſted it. He alſo puniſhed with great ſeverity all kinds of vice, and was inflexible in the adminiſtration of juſtice. He limited the number of cardinals to ſeventy, raiſed the famous obeliſk which Caligula had cauſed to be brought from Spain [See FONTANA], and reformed many abuſes which prevailed in the government. He died in 1590. By his orders a new verſion of the Bible in Latin was publiſhed in 3 vols. folio.—Life by Leti.

SKELTON (John), an Engliſh poet, is ſuppoſed to have been born in Cumberland. He had his education at Oxford, and on entering into orders obtained the living of Diſs in Norfolk, but his conduct was very irregular. Having reflected ſeverely on cardinal Wolſey in his writings he was obliged to take refuge with Iſlip, abbot of Weſtminſter, where he continued till his death in 1529. He was poet laureat to Henry VIII. and wrote Satires, Sonnets, and an Invective againſt Lily the grammarian, who anſwered him in his own way.—Wood.

SKELTON (Philip), an eminent divine, was born near Liſburn, in Ireland, in 1707, and educated at Trinity college, Dublin, where he took his degrees in arts. He was for many years curate of Monaghan, and in 1750 was preſented to the living of Peltigo in the county of Donegal, where his conduct was very exemplary and charitable, particularly in a time of ſcarcity, when he ſold his library to provide bread for the poor. In 1759 the biſhop of Clogher gave him the living of Deocniſh, in the county of Fermanagh, and in 1766 that of Fintona, in Tyrone, where he brought over by his preaching, moſt of the diſſenters to the church. He died at Dublin in 1787. Mr. Skelton wrote an excellent work entitled, Deiſm Revealed, in 2 vols. 8vo.; three volumes of admirable ſermons; alſo fugitive pieces and tracts; the whole collected in 7 vols. 8vo. —Life by Burdy.

SKINNER (Stephen), a learned writer, was born in London, and educated at Chriſt church college, Oxford, from whence he went abroad in the civil wars, and took his degree of doctor of Phyſic at Heidelberg, in which he was confirmed at Oxford, in 1664. He died at Lincoln in 1667. His works are, Etymologicon linguæ Anglicanum; Etymologicon Onomaſticon, &c. folio.—Wood. A. O.

SLEIDAN (John), a German hiſtorian, was born at a village of the ſame name near Cologne, in 1506. He was for ſome time in the family of the cardinal Du Bellay, who allowed him a penſion. Afterwards he obtained a ſituation at Straſburgh. He was a zealous proteſtant, and died of grief, occaſioned by the loſs of his wife, in 1556. His works are, 1. De ſtatu Religionis et Reipublicæ Germanorum ſub Carolo V. 1555. 2. De quatuor ſummis Imperiis, 8vo. This is a univerſal hiſtory, of which Voltaire made conſiderable uſe. 3. Tranſlation of the Memoirs of Philip de Commines.—Bayle.

SLINGLAND (John Peter), a painter, was born at Leyden in 1640. He was a diſciple of Gerard Douw, whoſe manner he imitated. His pictures are admirably finiſhed. He died in 1691.—Houbraken.

SLOANE (Hans), an eminent phyſician and naturaliſt, was born at Killileagh, in Ireland, in 1660. He ſtudied in London, where he contracted an intimacy with Boyle and Ray, and afterwards went to Paris and attended the lectures of Tournefort and Du Verney. He returned to London in 1684, and became a favourite with Dr. Sydenham, who took him into his houſe. The ſame year he was choſen a fellow of the royal ſo-ty, and in 1687 admitted of the college of ysicians. About this time he went to Ja-ica with the duke of Albemarle, governor that iſland, and though Dr. Sloane reſided ere only fifteen months he made a collec-n of not leſs than eight hundred different nts. On his return in 1689 he ſettled in ndon, and in 1694 was choſen phyſician Chriſt's hoſpital. The preceding year he s elected ſecretary to the royal ſociety, en he revived the publication of the Phi-ſophical Tranſactions. He was alſo active in omoting the plan of a diſpenſary for the or. In 1707 he publiſhed the firſt volume his Hiſtory of Jamaica, but the ſecond did t appear till 1725. In 1708 he was elect-a member of the academy of ſciences Paris, and on the acceſſion of George I. ated a baronet. In 1719 he was elected eſident of the college of phyſicians, as he s of the royal ſociety, on the death of ewton. Sir Hans died at Cheliſea in 1752. is magnificent cabinet of curioſities was rchaſed by parliament for 20,000l. and aced in the Britiſh muſeum. Several of his pers are in the Philoſophical Tranſactions. alteney. Biog. Brit.

SLODTZ (Réné Michael), ſurnamed Mi-ael Angelo, a ſculptor, was born at Paris 1705. He ſtudied under his father, who s a native of Antwerp, after which he ent to Rome, and on his return was ad-itted a member of the academy of Paris, here he died in 1764. One of his greateſt orks is the monument of Languet in the hurch of St. Sulpice.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

SLUYS (James Vander), a painter, was rn at Leyden in 1660, and died in 1736. is pictures are finely coloured, but the de-gns are not exact.—Pilkington.

SMALBROKE (Richard), an Engliſh pre-te, was fellow of Magdalen college, Ox-rd, and in 1723 advanced to the biſhopric St David's, from whence he was tranſ-ted in 1730 to Lichfield and Coventry. e died in 1749. His lordſhip diſtinguiſhed mſelf by a Vindication of the Miracles of ur Saviour againſt Woolſton, 8vo.—Todd's eans of Canterbury.

SMALCIUS (Valentine), a celebrated ſo-nian, was born in Thuringia, and died at racow, in Poland, in 1622. He wrote a reatiſe againſt the Divinity of Chriſt in atin, printed in 1608, 4to.—Moreri.

SMALRIDGE (George), a learned prelate, as born at Lichfield about 1666, and edu-ated at Weſtminſter ſchool, from whence e was elected to Chriſt church, Oxford. e became prebendary of Lichfield, and ean of Chriſt church, and in 1714 was con-ecrated biſhop of Briſtol. He died in 1719. e wrote an Anſwer to Obadiah Walker on hurch Government; a Latin Poem on the ale of Books of Richard Davis, an Oxford ookſeller; and he was one of the editors of ord Clarendon's Hiſtory of the Rebellion. His ſermons were publiſhed in 1726, folio.—ien. Biog. Dict.

SMART (Peter), a divine, was born in Warwickſhire, and educated at Weſtminſter ſchool, from whence he removed to Oxford, and became ſtudent of Chriſt church. After entering into orders, he obtained a prebend in Durham cathedral, where he diſtinguiſhed himſelf by his puritanical oppoſition to the ceremonies, and the removal of the altar from the middle of the choir to the eaſt end of the church. Smart preached and printed two Sermons on the Vanity and Downfal of Superſtition and Popiſh Ceremonies, for which he was degraded from the miniſtry and impriſoned. He died in 1642. Beſides the above, he wrote ſome Poems, Latin and Engliſh.

SMART (Chriſtopher), a divine and poet, was born at Shipbourne, in Kent, in 1722, and educated at Pembroke hall, Cambridge, where he obtained the Seatonian prize for the beſt poem ſeveral times. He took his maſter's degree in 1747, and in 1753 ſettled in London, but being imprudent he became poor and diſordered in his mind. He died in 1771. His poems, which poſſeſs great merit, were publiſhed in 1791, in 2 vols. 12mo. —Ibid.

SMEATON (John), an eminent mechanic and engineer, was born at Auſthorpe, in Yorkſhire, in 1724. He was intended for the law by his father, who was an attorney, but at his own requeſt he was placed under a mathematical inſtrument maker. In 1753 he became a fellow of the royal ſociety, and in 1759 he obtained the gold medal for his paper on "The Natural Powers of Wind and Water to turn Mills and other Machines depending on a Circular Motion." Being appointed to rebuild the Edyſtone light-houſe he completed it in a manner beyond expectation, and it may be juſtly pronounced a work unparalleled in its kind. He publiſhed a curious account of this ſtructure and its hiſtory in one volume folio. He was alſo the author of an Account of the Improvements in Ramſgate Harbour, which were conducted by him. Mr. Smeaton died in 1792.—Europ. Mag.

SMELLIE (William), a Scotch ſurgeon and phyſician, who diſtinguiſhed himſelf as a lecturer and practitioner in Midwifery in London, and was the firſt who conſidered the ſhape and ſize of the female pelvis, as adapted to the head of the fœtus. He died at an advanced age in 1763. He wrote a Complete Syſtem of Midwifery, and publiſhed a ſet of Anatomical Tables, with Explanations. There was another of the ſame name, who was a printer at Edinburgh, and ſecretary to the ſociety of antiquaries in that city. He wrote a work entitled, the Philoſophy of Natural Hiſtory, 4to. and publiſhed a tranſlation of Buffon's great work. He died in 1795.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

SMITH (Thomas), an eminent ſtateſman, was born at Walden, in Eſſex, in 1512. He received his education at Queen's college, Cambridge, where he was elected fellow, and appointed Greek lecturer, in which capacity he introduced a new method of pronouncing that language which became general in the univerſity, though oppoſed by the chancellor. In 1539 he went abroad, and took his doctor's degree of law at Padua. In 1542 he was made regius profeſſor of that faculty at Cambridge. By the intereſt of the duke of Somerſet he was knighted, and made ſecretary of ſtate by Edward VI., but in the ſucceeding reign he loſt his preferments. Queen Elizabeth employed him in ſeveral embaſſies to France, made him ſecretary of ſtate, and chancellor of the garter. He died in 1577. Sir Thomas wrote a Treatiſe on the Right Pronunciation of Greek, printed at Paris by Stephens, in 1568; and ſome other works.—Life by Strype.

Smith (Miles), a learned biſhop, was born at Hereford, and educated firſt at Corpus Chriſti college, and afterwards at Braſenoſe college, Oxford. He became canon reſidentiary of Hereford, and in 1612 biſhop of Glouceſter. He was well acquainted with the Oriental languages, and was one of the principal perſons engaged in the tranſlation of the Bible, to which he wrote the preface. His Sermons were printed in 1 vol. folio, 1630. He died in 1624.—Wood.

Smith (John), a divine of the church of England, was born at Achurch, in Northamptonſhire, in 1618. He was educated at Emmanuel college, Cambridge, and was afterwards choſen fellow of Queen's college in that univerſity. He died in 1652. His Select Diſcourſes were publiſhed in 1660, in 1 vol. 4to.—Fun. Ser. by P.t.

Smith (John), a learned phyſician, was born in Buckinghamſhire, and educated at Braſenoſe college, Oxford, where he took his degrees, and afterwards became fellow of the college of phyſicians in London. He died in 1679. Dr. Smith wrote a curious and ingenious book, entitled, the Portrait of Old Age, or a Paraphraſe on Eccleſiaſtes XII. London, 8vo., 1660.—Wood.

Smith (Thomas), a learned divine, was born in London in 1638, and educated at Oxford, where he became fellow of Magdalen college. In 1668 he went chaplain to the Engliſh embaſſy at Conſtantinople. In 1688 he was deprived of his fellowſhip by the popiſh preſident, Dr. Giffard, and loſt it again in 1692, for refuſing to take the oaths to William and Mary. He died in 1710. Dr. Smith wrote Diatriba de Chaldaicis paraphraſtis, 8vo; Syntagma de Druidum Moribus ac Inſtitutis, 8vo.; four Epiſtles on the Manners, &c. of the Turks, in Latin and Engliſh; an Account of the Greek Church, 8vo; Life of Camden; Miſcellanies; Papers in the Philoſophical Tranſactions, and Sermons.—Ibid.

Smith (John), a learned divine, was born at Lowther, in Weſtmoreland, in 1659, and educated at St. John's college, Cambridge, where he took his degree of doctor in divinity. In 1695 he was inſtalled prebendary of Durham, and in 1707 he obtained the rectory of Biſhop Wearmouth. At the time of his death, in 1725, he was printing a correct edition of the works of the venerable Bede, which was publiſhed by his ſon in 1722, folio.—General Dictionary.

Smith (Edmund), an Engliſh poet, was the ſon of Mr. Neale, an eminent merchant in London, and born in 1668. He took the name of Smith out of gratitude to his maternal uncle and guardian. Smith wrote Phædra and Hippolitus, a tragedy, and ſome other works. He died poor in 1710.—Biog. Dram.

Smith (John), an excellent mezzotinto engraver, at the beginning of the 18th century. He engraved many portraits after Kneller, but his principal performances were night pieces after Schalken.—Strutt's Dict of Engravers.

Smith (George), a landſcape painter, was born at Chicheſter in 1714. He obtained ſome prizes of the academy of arts, and his pictures are highly valued. He died in 1776. His two brothers, William and John, were alſo good painters, the firſt in portrait, and the latter in landſcape. They both died in 1764.—Pilkington.

Smith (Adam), an eminent writer, was born in Kirkaldy, in Scotland, in 1723. He received his education firſt at Kirkaldy ſchool, and afterwards at the univerſity of Glaſgow, where he became profeſſor of logic and moral philoſophy, and took his degree of doctor of laws. In 1759, by the publication of his Theory of Moral Sentiments, 8vo., he acquired reputation, which was greatly heightened and extended by his Enquiry into the Nature and Cauſes of the Wealth of Nations, printed in 1766, 4to., and ſeveral times ſince in 3 vols. 8vo. Not long after the publication of this work he was appointed a commiſſioner of the cuſtoms in Scotland. Dr. Smith was the intimate friend of Hume, and publiſhed an Apology for his Life, which was ſeverely but juſtly animadverted on by Dr. Horne for its atheiſtical ſentiments. He died in 1790. A volume of his poſthumous eſſays has been printed.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Smith (William), a learned divine, was born at Worceſter in 1711, and educated at New college, Oxford, where he took his degrees in arts, and on taking orders was preſented to the rectory of Trinity church, Cheſter. In 1748 he was appointed maſter of Brentwood ſchool, Eſſex, where he continued only a year. In 1758 he was made dean of Cheſter, and in 1766 he obtained the rectory of Handley in that county. He died in 1787. Dr. Smith publiſhed excellent tranſlations of Longinus and Thucydides, and a volume of Sermons on the Beatitudes.—Europ. Mag. vol. xiv.

Smits (Lodowick), a Dutch painter, was born at Dort in 1635, and died in 1675. His fruit-pieces were painted with aſtoniſhing exactneſs, and ſold at a high price; but the colours did not ſtand.—Houbraken.

SMITZS (Gaſpar), an eminent Dutch nter, who died at Dublin in 1689. He nted portraits, but he excelled in repre- ting Magdalens, which he executed in an airable ſtyle.—Pilkington.

SMOLLET (Tobias), an eminent writer, s born on the banks of the Leven, in Scot- d, in 1720, of a good family. He was d a ſurgeon, and ſerved on board of a ſhip the unſucceſsful bombardment of Cartha- a. He afterwards took his degree of doc- of phyſic, but not meeting with encourage- nt in that line, he became a writer by pro- ion. His firſt performance was the novel Roderick Random, publiſhed in 1749, and ich ſoon ran through ſeveral editions. The r following appeared the Regicide, a trage- of little merit. This was followed by the el of Peregrine Pickle, in which were in- ed Lady Vane's Apology, under the title of moirs of a Lady of Quality. In 1754 he liſhed the Adventures of Ferdinand Count hom. He next inſtituted the Critical view, which was chiefly conducted by him 1763. For an article in this journal he s proſecuted by Admiral Knowles, on ich he was confined in the King's-bench e time, and wrote there the Adventures ir Lancelot Greaves, a feeble imitation of n Quixote. In 1757 he publiſhed the tory of England, in 4 vols 4to., afterwards ted in numbers in octavo. This work, ugh inaccurate and partial, gained him t profit and reputation. In 1762 he be- a periodical paper, called The Briton, in ence of lord Bute's adminiſtration. The r following he went abroad, and in 1766 publiſhed an Account of his Travels, in ols. 12mo. In 1771 appeared his novel Humphry Clinker, which poſſeſſes merit, ugh it is not equal to his former perform- es in that kind. Dr. Smollet wrote ſome ms, compiled a Collection of Voyages and vels, and tranſlated Gil Blas and Don xote into Engliſh. He died in Italy in 1.—Life by Dr. Moore.

SNELL (Rodolph), or Snellius, a Dutch loſopher, was born at Oudewater in 1546. was profeſſor of Hebrew and mathematics Leyden, where he died in 1613. He te ſome eſteemed works on philoſophy mathematics. His ſon, Willebrord Snell, ceeded him in the mathematical chair, died in 1626. He diſcovered the true of the refraction of the rays of light. principal of his works is entitled, Cyclo- ricum, or the Meaſurement of a Circle, —Moreri.

SNORRO (Sturleſonius), a native of Ice- d, who became miniſter of ſtate to one g of Sweden and three kings of Norway. ſedition he retired to his native country, ther he was followed and put to death in 1. He wrote 1. "Chronicum Regum vigorum;" 2. "Edda Iſlandica," or a tory of Iſlandic Philoſophy.—Ibid.

SNYDERS (Francis), a painter and en- ver, was born at Antwerp in 1587, and died there in 1657. He excelled in hunting ſcenes, the animals and landſcapes of which are very fine. The human figures were frequently painted by Rubens. He engraved a book of animals.—Houbraken.

SOBIESKI. See JOHN III. of POLAND.

SOCINUS (Lælius), was born at Sienna in 1525, and deſigned by his father for the profeſſion of the law, but having embraced the principles of the reformation, he deemed it expedient to quit Italy in 1547. After paſſing through ſeveral countries he ſettled at Zurich, where he was ſuſpected of arianiſm, and received a remonſtrance from Calvin on the ſubject. Socinus profited by the hint, but more by the fate of Servetus, and retired to Poland, from whence he went to Venice, and afterwards returned to Zurich, where he died in 1562. He was the author of the ſect of Socinians, having gathered many followers who embraced his opinions, which were, that Chriſt was only a man, that the holy ſpirit is nothing more than an attribute, and that the doctrines of original ſin, atonement, and divine grace, have no foundation in Scripture.—Bayle.

SOCINUS (Fauſtus), nephew of the above, was born at Sienna in 1539. He inherited his uncle's property, papers, and principles; but did not openly avow the latter for ſeveral years. In the mean time he was entertained at the court of the duke of Tuſcany, but in 1574 he went to Germany, from whence he removed to Poland, where the unitarians were eſtabliſhed in great numbers. He died there in 1604. Socinus publiſhed ſeveral books, which are in the Bibliotheca Fratrum Polonorum, 9 vols. folio.—Ibid.

SOCRATES, a celebrated philoſopher of Athens, was the ſon of a ſculptor, and followed the ſame profeſſion for ſome years. Crito obſerving his genius, and admiring his diſcourſes, called him from this employment to the ſtudy of philoſophy. He alſo joined his countrymen in arms, and diſtinguiſhed himſelf in ſeveral actions, in which he ſaved the lives of Xenophon and Alcibiades, with whom he contracted a cloſe friendſhip. On his return to Athens he diſplayed in his manners a remarkable contraſt to his cotemporaries, by the plainneſs of his dreſs and the frugality of his living. In his philoſophical lectures he endeavoured to effect a general reformation by recommending virtue. He was followed by a number of illuſtrious diſciples, whom he inſtructed ſometimes in the groves of Academus, and at others in the Lyceum, or on the banks of the Ilyſſus. The independence of his mind, and the powerful eloquence of his diſcourſes, excited againſt him many enemies, particularly Melitus and Anitus, at whoſe inſtigation Ariſtophanes ridiculed him in a comedy called the Clouds. Socrates was next accuſed before the council of five hundred of corrupting the Athenian youth, of introducing innovations in religion, and of ridiculing the gods. Theſe abſurd charges were ſupported by the perjury of witneſſes, and the judges being moſtly envious of his reputation condemned him to death. The ſolemn celebration of the Delian feſtival hindered the execution for a month, which time he employed in diſcourſing with his friends on the immortality of the ſoul and other ſublime ſubjects. He was urged to make his eſcape, which he eaſily might have done, as the gaoler's permiſſion had been obtained, but he nobly refuſed, ſaying, "Where am I to go to avoid death?" When the term of the feſtival was ended, he drank off the poiſon with perfect compoſure, after making a libation to the gods, and in a few moments he expired. Thus periſhed, 400 years B. C. and in the 70th year of his age, Socrates, whom the oracle had pronounced the wiſeſt man in Greece. The Athenians repented of their ingratitude, and his enemies were univerſally hated and died miſerably. The life and ſayings of Socrates have been faithfully tranſmitted to us by his two moſt eminent diſciples, Xenophon and Plato. By his wife Xantippe, rendered proverbial by the violence of her temper, he had ſeveral children.—Stanley.

Socrates, called the Scholaſtic, was a native of Conſtantinople. He wrote an Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory from the period where Euſebius ends to the year 440. Being a layman, and not exactly acquainted with the ſubjects he treated, his work is frequently inaccurate. It was publiſhed with Euſebius, &c. at Cambridge in 1720, 3 vols. folio. He flouriſhed in the 5th century.—Moreri.

Solander (Daniel Charles), an eminent naturaliſt, and the pupil of Linnæus, was born in the province of Norland in Sweden in 1736. He took his doctor's degree in phyſic at Upſal, and in 1760 viſited England. At the requeſt of ſir Joſeph Banks he accompanied him in the voyage round the world with captain Cook. In 1773 Dr. Solander was appointed one of the librarians of the Britiſh Muſeum. He died in 1782. He wrote a Deſcription of the Collection of Petrifactions found in Hampſhire, and given to the Britiſh Muſeum by Mr. Brander; alſo Obſervations on Natural Hiſtory in Cook's Voyage.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Sole (Antonio), a landſcape painter, was born at Bologna in 1597, and died there in 1677. His pictures are very fine and valuable. Joſeph del Sole, his ſon, born in 1654, was eminent in hiſtorical ſubjects and landſcapes. He died in 1719.—Pilkington.

Solignac (Peter Joſeph, chevalier de), was born at Montpellier in 1687. He was ſecretary to Staniſlaus, king of Poland, and wrote a hiſtory of that country, 5 vols. 12mo. He died in 1773. His other works are, an Eloge upon Staniſlaus; the Amours of Horace; and a Piece on Education.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

Soliman I. emperor of the Turks, ſucceeded his father Bajazet in 1402. After relieving the Ottoman empire by his courage, he fell into a debauched courſe of life, and was aſſaſſinated by his brother Muſa in 1410. —Un. Hiſt.

Soliman II. ſurnamed the Magnificent, ſucceeded his father Selim I. in 1520. Having concluded a truce with Iſmael, ſophy of Perſia, and quelled a rebellion in Syria, he turned his arms againſt Europe. In 1521 he took Belgrade, and in the following year Rhodes fell into his hands, after an obſtinate defence. In 1529 he made himſelf maſter of Buda, and then laid ſiege to Vienna, from whence he was obliged to retreat with the loſs of 80,000 men. In 1534 he marched into the Eaſt, and took Tauris from the Perſians, but was ſoon afterwards defeated by the Schah. His forces were alſo repulſed before Malta; but he took the iſle of Chios in 1566. The ſame year he died at the ſiege of Sigeth in Hungary.—Univ. Hiſt.

Solimene (Francis), a painter, was born near Naples in 1657. His reputation was ſo great that many princes of Europe invited him to their courts, which he declined, and died at Naples in 1747. The emperor Charles VI. conferred on him the honour of knighthood. His pictures are painted in a fine ſtile, and the figures are very expreſſive. He was alſo a good poet.—Tiraboſchi.

Solinus (Caius Julius), a grammarian, was born at Rome, and lived about the middle of the third century. His "Polyhiſtor," a compilation of Hiſtorical and Geographical Remarks, was publiſhed by Salmaſius at Paris in 1629; and printed again at Utrecht, with commentaries, in 2 vols. folio, 1689. Solinus has been called Pliny's Ape, from his ſervile imitation of that writer.—Moreri.

Solis (Antonio de), a Spaniſh writer, was born at Placenza, in Old Caſtile, in 1610. He was ſecretary to Philip IV. and hiſtoriographer of the Indies. He afterwards entered into orders, and died in 1686. He wrote many comedies and poems, but his great work is the Hiſtory of the Conqueſt of Mexico, folio. It has been tranſlated into Engliſh by Townſhend.—Nic. Antonio, de Scrip. Hiſp.

Solomon, king of Iſrael, was the ſon of David and Bathſheba. His reign was glorious, and the fame of his wiſdom ſpread into diſtant regions, ſo that the moſt illuſtrious perſons viſited Jeruſalem to ſee him, and the ſurrounding ſtates courted his alliance. He built a magnificent palace for himſelf and a famous temple to the Lord, which he dedicated with great ſolemnity. In his latter years he tarniſhed his glory by falling into idolatrous and licentious practices by marrying the daughter of the king of Egypt. He died B. C. 975, aged 58. We have in the ſacred canon three of his books, the Proverbs, a miſcellaneous body of ethical ſentences; the Eccleſiaſtes, a treatiſe on human vanity; and the Canticles, ſuppoſed to have been compoſed on his marriage. In the Apocrypha there is a book called the Wiſdom of Solomon, though it is of more modern date.—Gray's Key, O. T.

OLOMON BEN VIRGA, a Spaniſh rabbi physician in the 16th century. He wrote story of the Jews, from the deſtruction the Temple to his own time, a Latin ver- of which was printed at Amſterdam, in , 4to.—Moreri.

OLOMON (Ben Job Jalla), an African ce, who being ſent by his father, in 1731, he ſea-coaſt to ſell ſlaves, was taken pri- r, and ſold to an Engliſh captain, who ed him to America, and diſpoſed of him planter, from whom he was purchaſed eneral Oglethorpe, and brought to Eng- . While here he was employed by ſir Sloane in tranſlating Arabic manuſcripts s library. He was afterwards ſent back s own country with many valuable pre- .—Gent. Mag.

OLON, one of the ſeven wiſe men of ce, was born at Salamis. He was de- ded from Codrus, and the relation of ratus. After ſtudying philoſophy at ens, he travelled for improvement. On eturn home he found his countrymen di- l into factions, and the ſtate reduced to diſtreſs. All eyes were turned upon , and he was unanimouſly elected archon ſovereign legiſlator. He diſcharged his office with great wiſdom and integrity, ducing a reform in every department, liorating the condition of the poor, and ding the rigorous code of Draco. Solon g made the Athenians take an oath to ve his laws, laid down the ſovereignty, etired to Egypt. He died in Cyprus, . 558, aged 80. None of his writings been preſerved.—Plutarch in vit. Sol.

MERS (John, lord), chancellor of Eng- was born at Worceſter in 1652, and ated at Trinity college, Oxford, from ce he removed to the Middle Temple. iſtinguiſhed himſelf at the bar, and in was concerned in writing a piece en- , "A Juſt and Modeſt Vindication of roceedings of the two laſt Parliaments." was one of the counſel for the ſeven ps, and in the convention parliament he ſented the city of Worceſter, and was f the managers for the houſe of com- at a conference with the lords, upon ord "Abdicated." Soon after he was nted ſolicitor-general, and in 1692 at- y-general, and lord keeper. In 1697 as made chancellor with the title of lord rs, but in 1700 the ſeals were taken him, and he was impeached of high s and miſdemeanours, but he was ac- ed by the lords. He died in 1710. Somers was a great conſtitutional law- virtuous patriot, and a patron of learn- —Gen. Dict.

MERVILLE (William), a poet, was born arwickſhire, in 1692, and educated at heſter-ſchool, from whence he was ſent ew college, Oxford, where he obtained owſhip. He afterwards ſettled upon his nal eſtate, and became a uſeful juſtice e peace. He died in 1743. Mr. Somerville wrote the Chace, a poem, which is a very lively and ingenious performance. It has been often printed with a few other pieces by him.—Johnſon's Lives of the Poets.

SOMNER (William), a learned antiquary, was born at Canterbury in 1606. He was the author of "The Antiquities of Canterbury," and a "Saxon Dictionary." He died in 1669.—Gen. Dict.

SOPHOCLES, a tragic poet of Athens, was educated under Æſchylus, after which he diſtinguiſhed himſelf as a ſtateſman and a general. He ſhared the command with Pericles, and bore a honourable part in ſeveral battles. The Athenians having taken the iſle of Scyros, appointed an annual conteſt for the beſt tragedy to commemorate that event. It was on this occaſion that Sophocles firſt diſplayed his poetical talents. His performance gained the prize, though he had his old maſter among his competitors. This ſucceſs encouraged him to continue in the ſame courſe, and he gained the prize twenty times. Euripides was his powerful rival, and they divided the public applauſe. Seven only of the plays of Sophocles are extant. He died, aged 91, B. C. 406, of joy at having gained a prize at the olympic games. The beſt editions of Sophocles are that of Capperonier at Paris, 2 vols. 4to. 1780, and that of Brunck, 4 vols. 8vo. 1786. This author has been tranſlated into Engliſh by Porter.—Biog. Claſſica.

SOPHONISBA, the daughter of Aſdrubal, general of the Carthaginian forces, and the wife of Syphax, king of Numidia. When her huſband was defeated by Maſſiniſſa, ſhe fell into the hands of the victor, who married her. This union, however, was ſoon interrupted by Scipio Africanus, who obliged Maſſiniſſa to quit his new ſpouſe, on which ſhe poiſoned herſelf, B. C. 208.—Livy. Salluſt.

SORANUS, a phyſician of Epheſus, who practiſed at Rome under Trajan and Adrian. Some pieces of his are extant, and were publiſhed in Greek, at Paris, in 1554, and at Baſil in 1528. There was another of the ſame name, who wrote on the diſeaſes of women.—Moreri.

SORBAIT (Paul), a native of Hainault, was phyſician to the imperial court, and profeſſor of medicine at Vienna. He died in 1691. He wrote, "Commentaries on the Aphoriſms of Hippocrates," 4to; "Medicina Univerſalis, theoretica et practica," folio, &c.—Moreri.

SORBIERE (Samuel), a French writer, was born in the dioceſe of Uſez, in 1615. He quitted the ſtudy of divinity for that of phyſic, and in 1653 he renounced the proteſtant religion, on which he obtained a conſiderable penſion from the king. He died at Rome in 1670. Sorbiere was in the habit of correſpondence with Hobbes, whoſe letters he uſed to ſend to Gaſſendi as his own, and having tranſcribed the anſwers, ſent them to Hobbes, who from thence conceived a high opinion of his abilities. His Journey to England is full of groſs falſehoods, and his other works are trifling.—Moreri.

Sorbonne (Robert de), founder of the college of that name at Paris, was born in 1201. He was confeſſor and chaplain to St. Louis, who had a great eſteem for him, and gave him the canonry of Cambray. He founded the college of the Sorbonne in 1253, and died in 1274.—Ibid.

Sorgh (Hendrick), a painter, was born at Rotterdam in 1621. He was the diſciple of Teniers, and his favourite ſubjects were fairs and markets. He died in 1682—Houbraken.

Sorri (Peter), an Italian painter, was born at Sienna in 1556. He excelled in landſcape, portrait, and hiſtorical painting. He died in 1622.—Pilkington Sosigenes, an aſtronomer of Egypt, who was invited to Rome by Julius Cæſar, for the reformation of the calendar. He fixed the year at 365 days, called the Julian year, which commenced B. C. 45. His works are loſt.—Pliny.

Soſtrates, a celebrated architect of Cnidos, who conſtructed the tower of Pharos, in the bay of Alexandria, on which he placed this inſcription, "Soſtrates, of Cnidos, ſon of Lexiphanes, to the gods who protect navigation." He flouriſhed B. C. 273.—Strabo. Pliny.

Sotades, a Grecian poet, was a native of Maronæa in Thrace. He invented a kind of irregular iambics, which were called by his name. Having written a ſatire againſt Ptolemy Philadelphus, king of Egypt, he was thrown into the ſea in a cheſt of lead.—Suidas. Strabo.

Soto (Dominic), a Spaniſh divine, was born at Segovia in 1494. He ſtudied at Alcala and at Paris, after which he entered among the dominicans. He became profeſſor of divinity at Salamanca, and was appointed confeſſor to Charles V. who ſent him to the council of Trent. He refuſed the biſhopric of Segovia, and died in 1560. His works are, Commentary on the Epiſtle to the Romans; de Juſtitia et Jure; de Pauperum Cauſa; de Cavendo juramentorum abuſu, &c. There was another dominican of this name, who came to England with Philip II. huſband of Mary, for the purpoſe of reſtoring the roman catholic religion in the two univerſities. He alſo diſtinguiſhed himſelf at the council of Trent, and died in 1563. He wrote ſome theological works.—Nic. Anton. Script. Hiſp.

Soubise (John de Parthenai, lord of), one of the principal leaders of the proteſtants in France, was born of an illuſtrious houſe in Poitou. He was brought up at the court of the duke of Ferrara, and on his return to France he attached himſelf to the prince of Condé, who ſent him to Lyons to defend that place. He diſcharged his truſt with great ſucceſs, and obliged the duke de Nemours to raiſe the ſiege. He died in 1566.—Moreri.

Soubise (Benjamin de Rohan, duke of), grandſon of the preceding, was the ſon of Renatus de Rohan, the ſecond of that name, and of Catherine de Parthenai. He ſupported his brother, the duke of Rohan, in his defence of Rochelle, and in 1621 he maintained St. John d'Angeli againſt Louis XIII. and when he ſurrendered the place, obtained a free pardon: in 1622 he took Oleron, and made himſelf maſter of Lower Poitou, but he was ſoon after defeated, on which he retired to England, where he died in 1640.—Ibid.

Souchai (John Baptiſt), a French writer, was born at Saint-Amand, near Vendôme, in 1687. He became canon of the cathedral of Rodez, counſellor to the king, and profeſſor of eloquence in the royal college. He died in 1746. He publiſhed a Tranſlation of Sir Thomas Browne's Vulgar Errors, 2 vols.; an edition of Auſonius, 4to.; and diſſertations in the memoirs of the academy of belles lettres.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

Souciet (Stephen), a jeſuit, was born at Bourges in 1671. He was librarian in the college of Louis the Great, and died in 1744. His works are, Aſtronomical Obſervations made in China, 3 vols. 4to.; Diſſertations on Difficult Paſſages of Scripture, 4to.; Diſſertations againſt the Chronology of ſir Iſaac Newton, &c. His brother, Stephen Auguſtin, was profeſſor of divinity in the ſame college, and died in 1744. He wrote a poem on comets, and another on agriculture.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

Soufflot (James Germain), a French architect, was born in 1713. He improved himſelf in Italy, and on his return to France became ſuperintendant of the royal buildings. His greateſt work is the church of St. Genevieve, at Paris. He died in 1780.—Ibid.

South (Robert), an eminent divine, was born at Hackney, in Middleſex, in 1633, and educated at Weſtminſter-ſchool, from whence he was elected to Chriſt church, Oxford. In 1660 he was choſen public orator of the univerſity, and the year following appointed chaplain to lord Clarendon. In 1670 he obtained a canonry of Chriſt church, and a prebend of Weſtminſter. In 1676 he accompanied the Engliſh ambaſſador to Poland, of which country he wrote an account. After his return he was preſented to the rectory of Iſlip, in Oxfordſhire. Though he concurred in the revolution, he refuſed a biſhopric, and died in 1716. His ſermons have been publiſhed in 11 vols. 8vo. They are remarkable for their wit. Dr. South had a ſharp controverſy with Dr. Sherlock on the doctrine of the Trinity.—Wood.

Southern (Thomas), a dramatic writer, was born, according to ſome, in Ireland, but Wood ſays at Stratford upon Avon. He became a ſervitor in Pembroke college, Oxford, where he took one degree in arts, and then ſettled in London. He wrote, the Perſian Prince; Iſabella, or the Fatal Marriage; and Oroonoko, tragedies; the Diſappointment; ambling Lady; and the Wives' Excuſe, dies. He died in 1746, aged 83.—Biog. Wood.

ZOMEN (Hermias), an eccleſiaſtical ian of the fifth century, was born in ine, from whence he paſſed to Conſtan- le, where he practiſed as an advocate. ed about 450. His Eccleſiaſtical Hiſ- from 324 to 439 was printed at Cam- with Euſebius, Socrates, &c. in 3 vols. 1720.—Moreri.

AGNOLETTO (Joſeph Ribera), a paint- as born in 1589, at Xativa, in Spain. ſtudying the works of the greateſt maſ- e ſettled at Naples, where he was em- d by the viceroy and other great per- His ſubjects were moſtly tragical , which he painted with uncommon and expreſſion. He died in 1636.— rland's Anecd. of Spaniſh Painters.

AIN. This country was poſſeſſed chief- the Carthaginians, till they were ex- B. C. 206 by the Romans, who made ſelves maſters of the whole B. C. 16. 409 the Vandals, Alans, and Suevi, l in Spain, but in 428 the Vandals to Africa. In 585 the Suevi were out by the Goths, here called Viſi- who in 586 expelled the Romans. the Saracens invaded the country, ept poſſeſſion till 718, when Don Pela- covered part of it from them. He d in Biſcay and the Aſturias. In 984 do II. of this race was acknowleged of Leon, but in 1037 this kingdom ited to that of Caſtile. In 1080 the ſh kingdom of Toledo was conquered, at city became the capital of the king- f Caſtile. That kingdom was united agon by the marriage of Ferdinand of on to Iſabella of Caſtile, in 1479. See INAND V.—Mariana. Univ. Hiſt.

LLANZANI (Lazarus), an eminent liſt, was born in 1729 at Scandiano, y. He became profeſſor of philoſophy ia, where he made numerous experi- in phyſiology. In 1785 he went to y, and made many obſervations on geo- nd extinct volcanoes. He next paſſed ermany, and received particular marks ention from the emperor Joſeph II. d at Pavia in 1799. His works are, on the Origin of Fountains; Experi- on the Reproductions of Animals; pon Animalcula in Fluids; Microſco- xperiments; Memoirs on the Circu- of the Blood; Travels in the Two and the Apennines, 6 vols.; Obſer- on the Tranſpiration of Plants; Cor- ence with eminent Men.—Nouv. Hiſt.

NHEIM (Frederick), a learned divine, nat Amberg, in the Upper Palatinate, 0. He ſtudied at Heidelberg, and ob- the profeſſorſhip of philoſophy at Ge- which he left in 1642, and was elect- eſſor of divinity at Leyden, where he 1649. His works are, the Life of the Count Dhona, 4to.; Dubia Evangelica, two tomes, 4to.; Exercitationes de Gratia Univerſali, 3 volumes, 8vo.; the Swiſs Mercury, &c.—Moreri.

SPANHEIM (Ezekiel), a learned writer and ſtateſman, was the eldeſt ſon of the preceding, and born in 1629 at Geneva, where he was appointed profeſſor of eloquence at the age of twenty. He ſoon after became tutor to the ſon of Charles Louis, elector palatine, who employed him in ſeveral important miſſions. From his ſervice he paſſed into that of the elector of Brandenburg, who made him a baron and miniſter of ſtate. After the peace of Ryſwick he was ſent to France and from thence to England, where he died in 1710. His principal works are, De Præſtantia et uſu Numiſmatum antiquorum, 2 vols. folio; Letters and Diſſertations on Medals; an edition of the works of Julian, with notes, folio.—Ibid.

SPANHEIM (Frederick), brother of the above, was born at Geneva in 1632. He was educated at Leyden, where he took his degree of doctor in divinity, after which he became profeſſor in that faculty at Heidelberg, and next at Leyden. He died in 1701. His principal work is an Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory, 3 vols. folio.—Ibid.

SPARROW (Anthony), a learned prelate, was born at Depden, in Suffolk, and educated at Queen's college, Cambridge, from whence he was ejected in 1643 for refuſing to take the covenant. After the reſtoration he was made maſter of that college, archdeacon of Sudbury, and in 1667 conſecrated biſhop of Exeter, from whence he was tranſlated to Norwich, where he died in 1685. Biſhop Sparrow wrote, Rationale upon the Book of Common Prayer, 1657, 8vo. This book was greatly improved, and publiſhed with additions in 1722. He alſo compiled a collection of Articles, Injunctions, Canons, &c. 4to.—Wood.

SPARTA. In 1069 B. C. Eurotas, the ſon of Lelex, and Lacedæmon, (who married Sparta, the daughter of Eurotas) reigned in Laconia, and built Sparta. In 708 Lycurgus new-modelled this ſtate, after which it became famous, particularly by the conqueſt of Athens. It became a Roman province A.D. 71. The Venetians conquered the country in 1686, but it was retaken by the Turks in 1715. [See LYCURGUS.]—Univ. Hiſt.

SPARTACUS, a Thracian ſhepherd, famous for his victories over the Romans. He was one of the gladiators of Lentulus, but eſcaping with thirty others he placed himſelf at the head of a numerous army, with which he defeated the Romans in ſeveral battles. At laſt Craſſus was ſent againſt him, and after a bloody conteſt Spartacus was ſlain B. C. 71.—Livy. Florus.

SPARTIANUS (Ælius), a Latin hiſtorian, who wrote the Lives of the Emperors from Julius Cæſar to Diocleſian, of which only a few are extant among the Scriptores Hiſtoriæ Auguſtæ.—Voſſius de Hiſt. Lat.

SPEED (John), an Engliſh hiſtorian and antiquary, was born at Farrington, in Cheſhire, about 1555. He was a taylor, but having a great inclination to ſtudy he was enabled to purſue it by the bounty of ſir Fulk Greville. He was the author of the Theatre of Great Britain, fol. 1596; the Hiſtory of Great Britain, folio; and Tables of Scripture Genealogies, formerly bound up with the Bible. This induſtrious compiler died in 1629.—Gen. Dict.

SPELMAN (ſir Henry), a learned antiquary, was born in Norfolk about 1561. He was employed by king James in ſome public buſineſs in Ireland, and was one of the commiſſioners for reforming the abuſes with regard to fees in the different courts and offices, for which he received the honour of knighthood. Sir Henry was one of the old ſociety of antiquaries, and diſtinguiſhed himſelf by ſeveral learned works, as, 1. a Book againſt Sacrilege, or alienating the Church Lands, under the title of De Non Temerandis Eccleſiæ; 2. Gloſſarium Archæologicum, folio.; 3. an edition of the Engliſh Councils, 2 vols. folio; 4. the Life of Alfred, folio; 5. Villare Anglicanum, folio; 6. Reliquiæ Spelmaniæ, fol. His ſon, ſir John Spelman, was alſo a learned man. He was maſter of the Charterhouſe, and died in 1643. Clement Spelman, another ſon of ſir Henry, wrote a Diſcourſe on the Time of obſerving Eaſter; Tracts on Aſtrology, Rules for Judging the Weather, &c. He died in 1679.—Biog. Brit.

SPENCE (Joſeph), an ingenious divine, was born in Northamptonſhire, and educated at Wincheſter ſchool, from whence he was elected to New college, Oxford, where he obtained a fellowſhip in 1727. The year following he was preſented to the rectory of Birchanger, in Eſſex, which he afterwards reſigned for that of Harwood-Magna, in Buckinghamſhire. In 1742 he was made profeſſor of modern hiſtory, and in 1754 prebendary of Durham. He was drowned in a pond at Byfleet, in Surry, in 1768, aged 65. Mr. Spence wrote, 1. an Eſſay on Pope's Odyſſey, 12mo.; 2. a work entitled Polymetis, folio.—Hutchinſon's Hiſt. Durham.

SPENCER (John), a learned divine, was born in Kent in 1630, and educated at Corpus Chriſti college, Cambridge, of which he became fellow and maſter. In 1677 he was made dean of Ely. He died in 1693. His principal works are, 1. De Legibus Hebræorum Ritualibus & earum Rationibus, folio; 2. a Diſcourſe concerning Prodigies and Vulgar Prophecies, 8vo. He is not to be confounded with William Spencer of Trinity college, in the ſame univerſity, who printed in 1658 an edition of Origen's books againſt Celſus, with notes.—Gen. Dict.

SPENER (Philip James), a Lutheran divine, was born in Alſace, in 1635. He became counſellor in eccleſiaſtical affairs to the elector of Brandenburg, but he is rendered remarkable by being the founder of a ſect called Pietiſts, who held that the word of God cannot be underſtood without the illumination of the Holy Ghoſt. He died at Berlin in 1705.—Moreri.

SPENSER (Edmund), an eminent poet, was born in London in 1553, and educated at Pembroke-hall, Cambridge, where he took his degrees in arts, but not obtaining a fellowſhip he quitted the univerſity. His firſt performance was the "Shepherd's Calendar," which he dedicated to ſir Philip Sidney, who became his patron, and introduced him at court. It is ſaid that Elizabeth, being pleaſed with ſome of his verſes, ordered the treaſurer Burleigh to give him one hundred pounds, on which the old ſtateſman, who had little eſteem for poets, exclaimed, "what ſo much for a ſong?" to which the queen anſwered, "then give him what is reaſon." Spenſer however obtained nothing, in conſequence of which he preſented her majeſty the following addreſs:

I was promiſed on a time,
To have reaſon for my rhime,
But from that time to this ſeaſon
I have had nor rhime nor reaſon.

This ſo pleaſed the queen that ſhe ſeverely reprimanded the treaſurer, and ordered that the poet ſhould be inſtantly paid. In 1579 he was ſent abroad on ſome miſſion by the earl of Leiceſter, and afterwards he accompanied lord Grey, viceroy of Ireland, as his ſecretary, and obtained a grant of lands in that kingdom, where he built a houſe, and finiſhed his celebrated poem entituled, "The Faery Queen." In the rebellion begun by the earl of Deſmond our poet loſt his eſtate, and was plundered. In 1591 he obtained a penſion from the queen of 50l. a year, which has led ſome to ſuppoſe that he was poet laureate. He died in Weſtminſter in 1598, and was buried in Weſtminſter-abbey. The beſt edition of his works is that of Todd, with notes, 1805, 8 volumes, 8vo.—Biog. Brit.

SPERLING (Otto), a phyſician and botaniſt, was born at Hamburgh in 1602. He was appointed phyſician to the king of Denmark, but being concerned with the count Ulfeld, he was ſent to priſon, where he died in 1681. He publiſhed a Catalogue of Plants in Denmark, 1642, 12mo. There was another phyſician of this name, who died at Wittemberg in 1658. He wrote, 1. Inſtitutiones Phyſicæ; 2. Anthropologiæ Phyſicæ.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

SPERONE (Speroni), an Italian writer, was born at Padua in 1500, and died in 1588. His works are, 1. Dialogues in Italian, 8vo.; 2. Canace, a tragedy; 3. Letters, &c.—Tiraboſchi.

SPIELMAN (James Reinhold), was born at Straſburg in 1722. He was a phyſician and profeſſor of chemiſtry at his native place, where, by his means, a botanic garden was eſtabliſhed. He died in 1782. His works are, 1. Elementa Chimiæ, 8vo.; 2. Prodromus Floræ Argentinenſis, 8vo.; 3. Inſtitu-nes Materiæ Medicæ; 4. Syllabus Medi-nentorum; 5. Pharmacopœia generalis, .—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

SPIERINGS (Henry), a landscape painter, s born at Antwerp in 1633. His pictures well designed, and the trees are remark-y beautiful.—Houbraken.

SPIERS (Albert Van), an historical pain-, was born at Amsterdam in 1666. After dying in Italy he returned to his native y, where he painted several beautiful pic-es. He died in 1718.—Pilkington.

SPIGELIUS (Adrian), professor of anato- and surgery at Padua, was born at Brus-s in 1578, and died in 1625. His works re printed at Amsterdam in 3 vols, folio, 45.

SPILBERG (John), an historical and por-it painter, was born at Dusseldorf in 1619. was principal painter to the count Pala-e, and painted several fine altar pieces in native country. He died in 1691. His ughter Adriana painted portraits in cray-. She was the wife of Vander Neer.—ubraken.

SPINCKES (Nathaniel), a pious divine, s born at Castor, in Northamptonshire, in 54, and educated at Jesus college, Cam-dge, where he took his degrees in arts. lost his church preferments at the revo-ion for refusing the oaths. In 1713 he s consecrated one of the bishops among non-jurors. He died in 1727. Mr. nckes published a collection of Devotions, mo.; the Sick Man visited; and several er pious books —Gen. Dict.

SPINELLO (Aretino), a painter, was n at Arezzo, in Tuscany, in 1328. He nted portrait and history in an admirable le, and his pieces are finely finished. He d in 1420. His son was also an eminent ist. He died in 1422.—De Piles. Felibien.

SPINOLA (Ambrose), a celebrated gene-, was born in Spain of a family originally m Genoa. He bore arms early in life, d in 1604 took Ostend, after which he s named commander in chief of the Spanish ces in the Low Countries, where he op-sed Maurice, prince of Nassau, with great ill and bravery. He afterwards signalized mself in Italy, where he took Casal. He d in 1630.—Moreri.

SPINOSA (Benedict), was the son of a rtuguese Jew, and was born at Amsterdam 1632. He studied under a physician, and erwards applied to theology, but having owed some free opinions respecting the saic law he was excommunicated, on ich he was baptised and professed the ristian religion. A love of study induced m to retire from Amsterdam into the coun-y, where he employed himself in making icroscopes and telescopes. He died in 1677. inosa invented a system called by his me, the basis of which is that matter is ernal, and that the universe is God. This e published in a piece entitled, Tractatus heologico-Politicus, 4to.; and the same is refined upon in a mathematical form in his posthumous works, printed in quarto.—Moreri.

SPIRA (Francis), a lawyer of eminence in the Venetian state at the beginning of the sixteenth century. He imbibed the principles of the reformation, of which being accused before the pope's nuncio, he was obliged to make a public recantation to save his life. Shortly after he fell into a deep melancholy, and notwithstanding all the advice of medical men he died of the mere agonies of his mind in 1548.—Collier's Dict.

SPON (Charles), a learned Frenchman, was born at Lyons in 1609. He had a good turn for Latin poetry; and Bayle says, that he had an extemporary piece in iambics, composed by him at fourteen, which would have done honour to an adult, even if written in the hours of leisure. After studying medicine three or four years he went to Montpellier, where he took his doctor's degree in 1632. He afterwards settled at Lyons, where he practised with great success. He died in 1684. He published the Prognostics of Hippocrates in hexameter verse.—Bayle.

SPON (James), son of the preceding, was born at Lyons in 1647. He was admitted doctor of physic at Montpellier in 1667, and a member of the college of physicians at Lyons in 1669. In 1675 he made a voyage to Dalmatia, Greece, and the Levant; of which he printed an account. He died in 1686. He was the author of many valuable and curious works, 1. Recherches des Antiquités de Lyons, 1674, 8vo.; 2. Ignotorum at que obscurorum Deorum aræ, 1677, 8vo.; 3. Voyage de la Grèce & du Levant, 1677, 3 vols. 12mo.; 4. Histoire de la Ville & de l'Etat de Geneve, 1680, two volumes, 12mo. &c. &c.—Ibid.

SPONDANUS (John), or de Sponde, was born in 1557. At the age of twenty he began a commentary on Homer's Iliad and Odyssey, which was printed at Basil in 1538, folio, with a dedication to the king of Navarre, afterwards Henry IV. of France. The same year he caused Aristotle's Logic to be printed at Basil, in Greek and Latin, with marginal notes. He died in 1595.—Ibid.

SPONDANUS (Henry), younger brother of the above, was born in 1568, and educated in the reformed college at Ortez, where he was early distinguished by his facility in acquiring the Latin and Greek languages. He studied the civil and canon law, and his learning and eloquence attracting the notice of Henry IV. then prince of Bearn, he was made by him master of the requests at Navarre. In 1595 he abjured the protestant religion, and on taking orders was preferred to a bishopric in 1643. Spondanus published an abridgment of Baronius's Annals, entitled, Annales Sacra Mundi Creatione ad ejusdem Redemptionem, folio.—Ibid.

SPOTSWOOD (John), a learned Scotch prelate, was born in 1565. In 1603, upon the acceſſion of James to the throne of England, he was appointed to attend the king, and in the ſame year was advanced to the archbiſhopric of Glaſgow, and made one of the privy council in Scotland. In 1615 he was tranſlated to the ſee of St. Andrew's. He was as much the favourite of Charles I., who in 1635 made him chancellor of Scotland; but the troubles obliging him to leave that country he retired to London, where he died in 1639. His Hiſtory of the Church of Scotland was publiſhed in 1655, folio.—Collier.

SPOTSWOOD (ſir Robert), ſecond ſon of the preceding, was eminent for his abilities and knowlege in the laws. He was preferred by king James, and afterwards by king Charles; but was put to death by the covenanters for adhering to the marquis of Montroſe.—Ibid.

SPRAGG (Edward), a brave Engliſh admiral, was a captain in the firſt engagement with the Dutch in 1665, when, for his gallant conduct, he was knighted by the king on board the Royal Charles. He attracted the particular notice of the duke of Albemarle in the four days battle in 1666, and the year following he burnt a number of Dutch fire-ſhips when they came up the Thames, which threw their whole fleet into confuſion. In 1671 he deſtroyed in the Mediterranean ſeven Algerine men of war. He was ſunk in his boat in an engagement with Van Tromp in 1673, as he was going from his ſinking ſhip to another.—Campbell.

SPRANGHER (Bartholomew), a famous painter of Antwerp, was born in 1546. After ſtudying under various maſters he went to Italy, where he was patroniſed by cardinal Farneſe, who recommended him to pope Pius V. On his return to Germany he became chief painter to the emperor Maximilian II. whoſe ſucceſſor, Rodolphus, gave him a patent of nobility, and a penſion. He died in 1623.—De Piles.

SPRAT (Thomas), a learned biſhop, was born at Tallaton, in Devonſhire, in 1636. He was admitted a commoner of Wadham college, Oxford, in 1651, and on taking his degrees in arts obtained a fellowſhip. After the reſtoration he entered into orders, and was one of the firſt members of the royal ſociety, of which he wrote the hiſtory. He became chaplain to the king, prebendary of Weſtminſter, miniſter of St. Margaret's, canon of Windſor, and laſtly dean of Weſtminſter, and biſhop of Rocheſter. He was alſo dean of the chapel royal, and was one of the commiſſioners for eccleſiaſtical affairs in the reign of James II. However, he complied at the revolution, and died in 1713. He wrote, the Plague of Athens, a poem; a poem on the Death of Cromwell; Obſervations on Sorbiere's Voyage to England, 8vo.; the Life of Cowley; Hiſtory of the Rye-houſe Plot; Relation of the wicked Conſpiracy of Stephen Blackhead and Robert Young, folio; ſeveral Sermons, octavo.—Wood.

SPURSTOW (William), a non-conformiſt divine, was maſter of Catharine hall, Cambridge, from whence he was ejected in the rebellion for refuſing the engagement. He afterwards had the living of Hackney, of which he was deprived for non-conformity. Dr. Spurſtow was one of the aſſembly of divines, and a commiſſioner at the Savoy conference. The two firſt letters of his name are the laſt of the word Smectymnuus, the title of a book againſt epiſcopacy. [See NEWCOMEN.] He died in 1666. His works are, a Treatiſe on the Promiſes, 8vo.; the Spiritual Chemiſt, 8vo.; the Wiles of Satan; and ſome Sermons.—Calamy.

SQUARCIONE (Francis), an Italian painter, was born in 1394, and died in 1474. He travelled into Greece to make deſigns after the remains of antiquity, and on his return to Italy he gained ſo great a reputation as to be called the father of painters.—De Piles.

SQUIRE (Samuel), a learned biſhop, was born at Warmiſter, in Wiltſhire, in 1714, and educated at St. John's college, Cambridge, of which he became fellow. In 1760 he was promoted to the deanry of Briſtol, and the year following was made biſhop of St. David's. He died in 1766. His works are, 1. a Defence of the Antient Greek Chronology, and an Enquiry into the Origin of the Greek Language, 8vo.; 2. an Enquiry into the Nature of the Engliſh Conſtitution, 8vo.; 3. Indifference to Religion inexcuſable, 12mo.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

STAAL (Madame de), a French lady, was the daughter of a painter named De Launai, who being obliged to quit the kingdom left his child in great diſtreſs, in which ſtate ſhe found a friend in the abbeſs of a convent, who brought her up. She afterwards became ſervant to the ducheſs of Maine, and being noticed by Fontenelle for her ingenuity, ſhe acquired the friendſhip of many perſons of diſtinction. She married an officer named de Staal, who became a captain in the Swiſs guards. She died in 1750. Her Memoirs were publiſhed after her death, in 4 vols. 12mo. In the laſt are two comedies.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

STAEEN (Henry), a painter, was born in Flanders in 1578, and died in 1658. He was the diſciple of Tintoret, and acquired great excellence in painting hiſtorical ſubjects and views in perſpective.—De Piles.

STACKHOUSE (Thomas), a divine of the church of England, who was many years curate of Finchley, in Middleſex, and vicar of Beenham in Berkſhire. He wrote a Review of the Controverſy concerning Miracles, 8vo.; on the Miſeries of the inferior Clergy, 8vo.; a Syſtem or Body of Practical Divinity, 1 vol. folio; and a Hiſtory of the Bible, 2 vols. folio. This laſt is a work of conſiderable merit, and has gone through any editions. Mr. Stackhouse died in 1752.—Nichols's Anecd. of Bowyer.

STADIUS (John), a mathematician, was born near Antwerp in 1527. He became professor of History at Louvain, and afterwards of mathematics and history at Paris, where he died in 1579. His works are, 1. Ephemerides; 2. Tabula æquabilis & apparentis motus cœlestium corporum; 3. a Latin commentary on Florus.—Moreri.

STAFFORD (Anthony), an English writer, was born of a noble family in Northamptonshire, and educated at Oriel college, Oxford, and in 1623 was created master of arts. He wrote, Niobe Dissolved into a Nilus, or his Age Drowned in her own Tears, 12mo.; Meditations and Resolutions, 12mo.; Life and Death of Diogenes; the Pride of Honour; the Female Glory, or the Life of the Virgin Mary, 8vo. This book gave great offence to the puritans. Honour and Virtue triumphing over the Grave exemplified in the Life and Death of Henry Lord Stafford, 4to. He died about 1641.—Wood.

STAHL (George Ernest), an able chemist, was born at Anspach in 1660. When the university of Hall was founded in 1694 he was appointed medical professor, in which office he gained great reputation. In 1716 he was invited to Berlin, and made counsellor of the court and physician to the king. He died there in 1734. It was his opinion that a physician does not practice well unless he minutely observes the effects of the soul upon the body. But Stahl was more eminent in chemistry than in medicine, because he was less fanciful. He made many important discoveries, and his works are valuable. The principal are, 1. Experimenta et Observationes Chemicæ et Physicæ, 8vo.; 2. Theoria Medica vera, 4to.; 3. Opusculum Chymico-Physico Medicum, 8vo.; 4. Treatise on Sulphur, in German, 8vo.; 5. Fundamenta Chymiæ Dogmaticæ et Experimentalis, 3 vols. 4to.; 6. Negotium Olivosum, 4to.; 7. Commentarium in Metallurgicum Beccheri.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

STAHREMBERG (Conrad Balthasar, count de), governor of Vienna during the time it was besieged by the Turks in 1683. He acquired great glory by the gallant defence which he made of that place. He died at Rome in 1687.—Moreri.

STAHREMBERG (Guido-Balde, count de), another Austrian general, was born in 1657, and died in 1737. He displayed great skill and bravery at the battle of Zenta, and in 1710 he gained that of Saragossa.—Ibid.

STALBENT (Adrian), a landscape painter, was born at Antwerp in 1580, and died in 1660. His pictures are faithful representations of nature, and the figures are pleasingly disposed.—Houbraken.

STAMPART (Francis), a portrait painter, was born at Antwerp in 1675, and died in 1750. He settled at Vienna, where he was patronized by the emperor, who made him his cabinet painter.—Pilkington.

STANHOPE (George), an eminent divine, was born at Hertilhorn, in Derbyshire, in 1660, and educated at Eton, from whence he was elected to King's college, Cambridge, where he proceeded through all his degrees. In 1688 he was presented to the rectory of Tewing, in Hertfordshire, and the year following to the vicarage of Lewisham, in Kent. He was soon after appointed chaplain to William and Mary, and in 1701 he preached the Boyle's lecture. In 1703 he was presented to the rectory of Deptford, and in the same year promoted to the deanry of Canterbury. His life and labours were exemplary, and he united in an eminent degree the scholar, the christian, and the gentleman. He died in 1728. His works are, 1. a Paraphrase and Comment upon the Epistles and Gospels, 4 vols. 8vo.; 2. Sermons at Boyle's Lecture, 8vo.; 3. Miscellaneous Sermons, 2 vols.; 4. Translations of Thomas à Kempis, Rochefoucault's Maxims, St. Augustine's Meditations, Bishop Andrews's Devotions, Charron on Wisdom, Parsons's Christian Directory, Epictetus's Morals, &c. —Todd's Deans of Canterbury.

STANHOPE (James earl of), a celebrated English nobleman, was descended from an ancient family of that name in Nottinghamshire, and was born in 1673. He entered early into the army, and distinguished himself with so much bravery at the siege of Namur in 1695 that king William gave him a company and the rank of colonel. In 1705 he served as a brigadier-general under the earl of Peterborough at the siege of Barcelona. He afterwards contributed to the victories of Almanza and Saragossa, but being intrusted with the defence of Briheuga he was obliged to surrender it after a gallant resistance to the duke de Vendome. George I. appointed him secretary of state, and in 1714 sent him ambassador to Vienna. In 1717 he was appointed first lord of the treasury and chancellor of the exchequer, and afterwards created a peer. He died in 1721.—English Peerage.

STANHOPE (Philip Dormer), earl of Chesterfield, was born in 1694. He received his education at Trinity hall, Cambridge, after which he went abroad, and on his return to England became member of the house of commons. On the death of his father in 1726 he succeeded to the title, and became a particular favourite of George II., who made him high steward of the household and knight of the garter. In 1745 he was appointed lord lieutenant of Ireland, from whence he returned in 1748. He died in 1773. His lordship was a man of brilliant accomplishments, but tainted with vanity and infidelity. He wrote some papers in the World, and several poetical pieces, but he is principally known as the author of Letters to his Son, published with his other works, in 2 vols. 4to. and 3 vols. 8vo.—Life prefixed to his works.

STANISLAUS I. (Leozinski), king of Poland, was the ſon of the grand treaſurer of that kingdom, and born in 1677. In 1704 he was deputed by the aſſembly at Warſaw to Charles XII. of Sweden, who had juſt conquered Poland. That monarch cauſed him to be crowned king at Warſaw in 1705, but when Charles was defeated in 1709 Staniſlaus was obliged to leave his kingdom. On the death of Auguſtus in 1733 he returned in hopes of being acknowleged, but the power of the emperor of Germany and the empreſs of Ruſſia prevailed againſt him, and he was obliged again to fly. He died in conſequence of his night gown taking fire in 1766. He was the author of different pieces printed in 4 vols. 8vo. under the title of The Works of a Beneficent Philoſopher.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

STANISLAUS AUGUSTUS PONIATOWSKY, king of Poland, was the ſon of a gentleman in Lithuania, and born in 1732. After receiving a liberal education he went on his travels and reſided a conſiderable time in England, where he became intimate with ſir Charles Hanbury Williams, whom he accompanied in his embaſſy to Peterſburg. At this court the elegance of his perſon and accompliſhments recommended him to the favour of the grand ducheſs, afterwards Catharine II., which gave ſuch offence to the empreſs Elizabeth that ſhe complained to Auguſtus III. king of Poland, by whom he was recalled. On the death of that monarch in 1763 Catharine interpoſed her influence ſo effectually in behalf of her favourite that he was elected king of Poland, to the great diſlike of the nobility of that kingdom. He began his reign with moderation, but having given his ſanction to the meaſure of allowing the diſſidents or proteſtants a ſhare in the legiſlature, he incurred the hatred of the catholics, who conſpired againſt him, and he was carried off from Warſaw in 1771 by forty perſons in diſguiſe. On the road the party loſt their way, and the king being left alone with a ſingle ſoldier, the man was prevailed upon to conduct him back ſafe to his palace. In 1787 he had an interview with Catharine, and accompanied her in a tour on the borders of Perſia. But in 1791 her armies and thoſe of Pruſſia entered Poland, and made themſelves maſters of Wilna and Warſaw. Staniſlaus was forced to reſign his crown, and Poland was divided between Ruſſia, Auſtria, and Pruſſia. The unfortunate monarch retired firſt to Grodno, from whence he was called to Peterſburg, where he died in 1798.—Tooke's Hiſt. of Catharine.

STANLEY (Thomas), a learned writer, was the ſon of ſir Thomas Stanley, knight, author of two volumes of poems, and born in Hertfordſhire in 1644. He received his education at Pembroke-hall, Cambridge, where he took his degrees in arts, and then went on his travels. After his return he entered of the Middle Temple, but did not follow the law. He died in 1678. His works are, 1. the Hiſtory of Philoſophy and Lives of Philoſophers, folio. This has been tranſlated into Latin and French. 2. An edition of Ælian's Various Hiſtory, 8vo.; 3. an edition of Æſchylus, with a Latin Verſion, fol.—Gen. Dict.

STANLEY (John), an eminent muſician, was born in London in 1713. He became blind at the age of two years, and at ſeven he began to learn muſic, in which he made ſuch a proficiency that he was placed under Dr. Green, and at the early age of eleven he obtained the place of organiſt of Allhallows, Bread-ſtreet. In 1723 he was choſen organiſt of St. Andrew, Holborn, and in 1734 was elected by the benchers of the Temple their organiſt. In 1779, he was appointed maſter of the king's band of muſicians. He died in 1786. His compoſitions are in the firſt ſtyle of taſte and judgment.—Europ. Mag.

STANNINA (Gerard), an hiſtorical painter, was born at Florence in 1354. He was the diſciple of Venetiano, and employed by the king of Spain. He died in 1403.—Pilk.

STANYHURST (Richard), a Roman catholic divine, was born at Dublin in 1545, and educated at Univerſity college, Oxford, after which he went abroad, and entered into orders, and became chaplain to the archduke Albert, governor of the Low Countries. He died at Bruſſels in 1618. He wrote, 1. De Rebus in Hibernia geſtis; 2. Vita St. Patricii; 3. Harmonia ſeu Catena dialectica in Porphyrium; 4. Tranſlation of the four firſt Books of the Æneis into Engliſh. He was uncle to archbiſhop Uſher.—Wood.

STAPLEDON (Walter), an Engliſh prelate, was a native of Devonſhire, and bred at Oxford, after which his merits recommended him to the court, and he was made biſhop of Exeter and treaſurer of England. He founded Exeter college, Oxford, and was beheaded by the inſurgents of London at the Croſs, in Cheapſide, in 1326.—Prince.

STAPLETON (Thomas), an Engliſh divine of the Roman church, was born at Henfield, in Suſſex, and educated at New college, Oxford. In the reign of Mary he obtained a canonry in Chicheſter cathedral, but in that of Elizabeth he went abroad and ſettled at Louvain, where he was appointed profeſſor in divinity, and dean of Hilverbeck. He died in 1598. His works were publiſhed at Paris in 4 vols. folio, in 1620.—Wood.

STAPYLTON (ſir Robert), a poet, was born at Carleton, in Yorkſhire, of a catholic family. After his return from Douay he turned proteſtant, and became gentleman uſher to the prince of Wales, afterwards Charles II. He received the honour of knighthood from Charles I., and was with him at the battle of Edgehill. After the reſtoration his ſervices were rewarded. He died in 1669. He publiſhed a tranſlation of Juvenal, and ſome Plays.—Ibid.

STATIRA, daughter of Darius Codomanus, was taken by Alexander the Great after the battle of Iſſus, and became the wife of that conqueror, on whose decease she was put to death by Roxana, B. C. 323.—Plutarch.

STATIUS (Publius Papinius), a Latin poet, was a native of Naples, and lived at Rome in the reign of Domitian, whose favour he obtained by flattery. He died about A.D. 100. There remain of Statius two heroic poems, Thebais in 12 books, and the Achilles. The best editions of them are that of Barthius, 3 vols. 4to. 1664; that of Leyden, 8vo. 1671; and the Delphin, 1685, 2 vols. 4to.—Biog. Classica.

STAVELEY (Thomas), a learned lawyer and antiquary, was born at Cassington, in Leicestershire, and educated at Peter-house, Cambridge, after which he entered of the Inner Temple, and was called to the bar. He was the author of the Romish Horse-Leech, or a Discovery of the enormous Exactions of the Court of Rome, 8vo. and of the History of Churches, 8vo. This last is a curious book, and was reprinted by Davies. The author died in 1683.—Gen. Dict.

STAUNTON (sir George Leonard), was born in Galway, in Ireland. He studied medicine at Montpellier, where he took his doctor's degree; after which he settled in London, and translated some of the Medical Essays of Dr. Storck of Vienna. About 1762 he went to Grenada, where he acquired a good fortune. He also became secretary to lord Macartney, governor of the island, and having studied the law he discharged the office of attorney-general. On the capture of Grenada by the French he returned to England, and when lord Macartney was appointed governor of Madras he accompanied him as secretary, in which capacity he displayed great abilities in the treaty with Tippoo Sultaun. On his return to England he received a pension from the India company, besides which he was created a baronet, and received the honorary degree of doctor of laws from the university of Oxford. When lord Macartney went out ambassador to China he was accompanied by sir George as secretary of legation. Of this voyage he published an elaborate and highly interesting account in 2 vols. 4to. and 3 vols. 8vo. Sir George died in London in 1801.—Monthly Mag. Pub. Characters, vol. i.

STEBBING (Henry), a learned English divine. He distinguished himself in the Bangorian controversy against Hoadley, and afterwards attacked Warburton's Divine Legation. He had also a dispute with Dr. James Foster on the subject of heresy. Dr. Stebbing became chancellor of the diocese of Salisbury, and died in 1763. His other works are Sermons on Practical Christianity, 2 vols.; Sermons at Boyle's Lecture, 8vo.; Collection of Tracts, 8vo.—Mortimer.

STEDMAN (John Gabriel), was born in Scotland in 1745. He was the author of an interesting "Narrative of an Expedition against the revolted Negroes of Surinam," in 2 vols. 4to., being an account of military transactions in which he was himself concerned. He died at Tiverton, in Devonshire, in 1797.—Gent. Mag.

STEELE (sir Richard), a celebrated writer, was a native of Dublin, where his father, who was a barrister, acted in the capacity of secretary to the duke of Ormond. Our author received his education at the Charter-house, in London, after which he obtained an ensigncy in the guards, and while in that service wrote a little book called "the Christian Hero," which he dedicated to lord Cutts, who appointed him his secretary, and procured him a captain's commission in the fusileers. In 1702 he commenced dramatic writer, in his comedy of the "Funeral, or Grief à la Mode," which had great success. This play was followed by the Tender Husband, and the Lying Lovers; but his best performance in this line was the Conscious Lovers, acted in 1722. In 1709 he began The Tatler, a periodical paper, under the name of Isaac Bickerstaff, and in which he had the able assistance of Addison, as he also had in the Spectator and Guardian: the first commenced in 1711 and the last in 1713. His reputation as a writer procured him the place of commissioner of the stamp office, which he resigned on being chosen member for Stockbridge, but was expelled the house soon after for writing a paper called the Englishman and the Crisis. On the accession of George I. he received the honour of knighthood, and was appointed surveyor of the stables at Hampton-court and governor of the royal company of comedians. He was also returned to parliament for Boroughbridge, in Yorkshire, and made one of the commissioners of the forfeited estates in Scotland. He died at Llangunnor, in Caermarthenshire, in 1729. Sir Richard was a gay thoughtless character, and frequently embarrassed in difficulties from which he was extricated by Addison and other friends.—Biog. Brit.

STEEN (John), a painter, was born at Leyden in 1636. He was the disciple of Brouwer and Van Goyen, and painted burlesque subjects with admirable humour. He died in 1689.—Houbraken.

STEENWICK (Henry), a Flemish painter, was born in 1550. He was the pupil of John de Vries; and excelled in painting architectural subjects, or the insides of churches and gothic buildings. He died in 1603. His son was a good painter of portraits, and died at London in 1640.—De Piles.

STEEVENS (George), an ingenious gentleman, was born in London, and educated at Kingston school, and afterwards at King's college, Cambridge. In 1766 he published twenty of the Plays of Shakespeare, with notes, 4 vols. 8vo. This work produced an intimacy between Mr. Steevens and Dr. Johnson, the result of which was a union of their labours as commentators on Shakespeare. Their united edition appeared in 1773, in 10 vols. 8vo. Twenty years afterwards Mr. Steevens published a still more elegant and accurate edition of the great English dramatiſt, in 15 vols. 8vo. He alſo reviſed the proofs of Boydell's magnificent text of Shakeſpeare. Mr. Steevens had a noble library, and a fine collection of pictures and prints. He died at Hampſtead in 1800.—Gent. Mag.

Stefaneschi (John Baptiſt), an hiſtorical painter, was born at Florence in 1582. He painted ſacred ſubjects in miniature for the grand duke of Tuſcany, and died in 1659.—Pilkington.

Stella (James), a painter, was born at Lyons in 1596, and died at Paris in 1647. He was employed firſt by Coſmo de Medicis, grand duke of Florence, and afterwards by Louis XIII., king of France, who honoured him with the order of St. Michael, and a penſion. His pictures are moſtly paſtoral ſubjects, and the ſports of children. His brother Francis was a good artiſt, but did not equal James. He died in 1661.—Ibid.

Stellini (James), an Italian eccleſiaſtic, was born at Forly in 1699, and died a profeſſor at Padua in 1770. His works, which are wholly on ethics, were printed in Latin at Padua in 1778, 4 vols. 4to.

Steno (Nicholas), an anatomiſt, was born at Copenhagen in 1638. He ſtudied under Bartholin, and afterwards travelled into Germany, France, Holland, and Italy. Ferdinand II., grand duke of Tuſcany, appointed him his principal phyſician, and in 1669 he renounced the proteſtant religion. He alſo became tutor to the young prince Coſmo, and embracing the eccleſiaſtical ſtate was made a biſhop by the pope, who ſent him with the title of vicar-apoſtolic to Germany. He died in 1686. An account of his Anatomical Obſervations and Diſcoveries was printed at Leyden in 1680, 12mo. His other works are, Elementorum Myologiæ Specimen; Diſcourſe on the Anatomy of the Brain, in Latin, 12mo.—Haller Bibl. Anat.

Stephen (St.), the firſt martyr of Chriſtianity, was one of the ſeventy deacons, and had been the diſciple of Gamaliel. He was ſtoned to death by the Jews, A.D. 33, on a pretended charge of blaſphemy.—Acts of the Apoſt.

Stephen of Byzantium, a grammarian and lexicographer of the 6th century, who wrote a Geographical Dictionary, of which there remains a bad abridgment, made by Hermolaus in the reign of Juſtinian. This was printed at Leyden in Greek and Latin, in 1694, folio.—Moreri.

Stephen, king of England, was born in 1105, and crowned in 1135. He was the third ſon of Stephen, earl of Blois, by Adela, daughter of William the conqueror. Maud, daughter of Henry I. and wife of Henry IV. emperor of Germany, was the legitimate heir to the throne, but Stephen taking advantage of her abſence, obtained poſſeſſion of it. In 1139 Maud landed in England, and in 1141 took Stephen priſoner at the battle of Lincoln; but he was exchanged the ſame year for Robert, earl of Glouceſter, illegitimate brother to the empreſs. Maud, after many unſucceſsful engagements, quitted the kingdom in 1147, and two years afterwards her ſon Henry, by Jeffrey Plantagenet, earl of Anjou, claimed the crown, but in 1153 a peace was concluded between the rivals, by which it was ſettled that Stephen ſhould enjoy the crown for his life, and that Henry ſhould be his ſucceſſor. Stephen died the year following, aged 50.—Rapin.

Stephen (St.), king of Hungary, ſucceeded his father Geiſa in 947, and died at Buda in 1038. He reformed the manners of his ſubjects, enacted excellent laws, and introduced Chriſtianity among them. His queen Giſela aided him in all his good works.—Moreri.

Stephen I. pope aſcended the pontifical chair after Lucius in 253. He had a difference with St. Cyprian and Firmilian about rebaptizing repenting heretics, which practice the pope condemned. He died a martyr in the reign of Valerian in 257.—Platina.

Stephen II. was a native of Rome, and elected pope in 752. Aſtolphus, king of the Lombards, having menaced the city of Rome, Stephen implored the aid of Conſtantine Copronymus, emperor of the eaſt, but he being engaged in a war, recommended his cauſe to Pepin, king of France, who marched into Italy, and deprived Aſtolphus of the exarchate of Ravenna and ſeveral cities, which he gave to the pope, and thus laid the foundation of the temporal ſovereignty of the church of Rome. Stephen died in 757. There were ſome other popes of this name, but not worth recording.—Ibid.

Stephens (Henry), the father of the celebrated family of printers, was born at Paris, and died at Lyons in 1520. He printed ſeveral books, the moſt remarkable of which was a Pſalter, in five columns, publiſhed in 1509. His widow married Simon de Colinæus, the celebrated printer, who carried on the buſineſs till his death in 1547.

Stephens (Robert), ſon of the above, was born at Paris in 1503. He received a learned education, and conducted the concern with Colinæus. In 1539 he was appointed printer to the king, on whoſe death he retired to Geneva, where he died in 1559. He had given offence to the Sorbonne, by printing a Latin Bible with the notes of Calvin, and therefore did not conclude himſelf ſafe in France. He was ſo exact in printing the works which iſſued from his preſs, as to expoſe the ſheets in public for examination, offering rewards for the detection of errors. His Hebrew Bible, 8 vols. in 16mo. 1544; and his Greek Teſtament, 1546, 2 vols. 16mo, are very ſcarce and valuable. The laſt is commonly called O Miriſicam, from the firſt words of the preface. Stephens compiled a great work, entitled, Theſaurus Linguæ Latinæ, 4 vols. folio, and he wrote an Apology in Latin for his Bible which had been cenſured by the Sorbonne. His brother Charles ſtudied medicine, and took his doctor's degree in that hitect, who erected a great number of bridges. culty. He accompanied Lazarus de Baif n his embaſſy into Germany; but he con- nued the family profeſſion, and became rinter to the king. He died in 1564. He rinted, 1 De Re Ruſtica, 2 vols. 4to.; 2. e Vaſculis, 8vo.; 3. An Hiſtorical, Geo- raphical, and Poetical Dictionary, &c.

STEPHENS (Henry), the moſt learned of his ingenious family, was the ſon of Robert, nd born at Paris in 1528. He was account- d the beſt Grecian of his time, and he pub- iſhed beautiful and correct editions of the eſt Greek writers. He alſo compiled a heſaurus of the Greek language, 4 vols. fo- o, the printing of which proved his ruin by is aſſiſtant Scapula's publiſhing an abridg- ment of it. Stephens having written a ſatire gainſt the monks, was obliged to fly from aris. He died in a hoſpital at Lyons in 598. Beſides the above works he was the uthor of a Verſion of Anacreon, in Latin erſe; Corrections of Cicero; De Origine mendorum; Juris civilis fontes et rivi; Apology for Herodotus, 3 vols. 8vo. &c. His ſon, Paul Stephens, carried on the print- ng buſineſs at Geneva, where he died in 627, leaving a ſon, Anthony, who was the aſt printer of his name. He turned Roman atholic, and went to Paris, where he became rinter to the king; but managing his affairs ill, he was reduced to poverty, and died in a oſpital in 1674, aged 80.—Hiſt. of the family f Stephens, by Maittaire.

STEPHENS (John), an Engliſh gentleman f talents. He received his education at Douay, and being zealouſly attached to the houſe of Stuart, followed king James, and had captain's commiſſion when that prince in- aded Ireland. He afterwards ſettled in Lon- on, and publiſhed ſome works, the principal of which are, a Continuation of Dugdale's Monaſticon; and a Dictionary, Engliſh and Spaniſh, folio. He died in 1726.—Gen. Dict.

STEPHENS (Robert), a learned antiquary, was born at Eaſtington, in Glouceſterſhire. He was educated at Lincoln college, Oxford, in 1631, from whence he removed to the Middle Temple, and was called to the bar. He died in 1732. He publiſhed lord Bacon's Letters, with curious notes.—Anecd. of Bowyer.

STEPNEY (George), an Engliſh poet and ſtateſman, was born in Weſtminſter in 1663. He received his education at Weſtminſter ſchool, and Trinity college, Cambridge, where he contracted a friendſhip with Charles Montague, afterwards earl of Halifax, by which means he was employed on ſeveral embaſſies, and laſtly appointed a commiſſion- er of trade. He died in 1707. He tranſlat- ed part of Juvenal, and wrote ſome poetical pieces of moderate merit.—Johnſon's Poets.

STERNE (Laurence), was born at Clon- mell, in Ireland, in 1713. He received his education at Halifax, in Yorkſhire, from whence he was ſent to Jeſus college, Cam- bridge, and having taken his degrees entered into orders. His uncle, Dr. Jacques Sterne, prebendary of Durham, procured him the living of Sutton, and about 1741 a prebend in York cathedral. He afterwards obtained the rectory of Stillington in the ſame county. He died of a decline at London in 1768, and was buried in the church-yard belonging to St. George, Hanover-ſquare. He is known as the author of a ſtrange kind of romance called Triſtram Shandy; a Sentimental Jour- ney in France; Sermons under the name of Yorick, and Letters. There are ſome pathe- tic tales in his works, and a conſiderable por- tion of eccentricity and obſcenity. Dr. Fer- riar has produced a great number of plagi- ariſms by this author, from Burton's Anato- my of Melancholy, biſhop Hall's works, and other old books.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

STERNHOLD (Thomas), an Engliſh poet, was born in Hampſhire, and educated firſt at Wincheſter ſchool, and next at Oxford. He became groom of the robes to Henry VIII. who at his death bequeathed him one hun- dred marks. He continued in the ſame of- fice under Edward VI. and was in ſome eſteem at court for his poetical abilities. He turn- ed into Engliſh metre fifty-one of David's Pſalms, the remainder were done by Hop- kins, Norton, and others. Though never received by authority, they continued to be univerſally ſung in churches, till ſuperſeded by the verſion of Tate and Brady. Stern- hold died in 1549.—Wood.

STESICHORUS, was a native of Himera, in Sicily. His name was originally Tyſias, which he changed to Steſichorus, on account of his being the firſt who taught the chorus to dance to the lyre. He was a man of the firſt rank among his fellow-citizens; and was diſtinguiſhed as a ſtateſman. He died at Catana, in Sicily, aged 80.

STEUART (ſir James), a Scotch baronet and political writer, who was born in 1713, and died in 1789. He publiſhed a work en- titled, Apologie du Sentimens de Monſ. le Chevalier Newton ſur l'ancienne Chrono- logie; and another on Political Economy, 2 vols. 4to. This laſt is a performance of profound and curious enquiry; and contains much valuable information, but written in a perplexed and tedious ſtyle.—Life prefixed to the laſt mentioned work.

STEVENS (George Alexander), a dramatic writer and performer, was born in London, and bred to a mechanical buſineſs, which he quitted for the ſtage, but his acting was very indifferent. At length he compoſed a ſtrange medley of humour and ribaldry, called a Lecture on Heads, which produced him a ſum ſufficient for the remainder of his life. Af- ter travelling over the three kingdoms and America, he diſpoſed of his lectures to Lee Lewes, and died a lunatic in 1784. He wrote ſome farces, ſongs, a novel called Tom Fool, 2 vols. 12mo.; and the Dramatic Hiſtory of Maſter Edward. This laſt was intended to ridicule his old friend Shuter.—Europ. Mag. vol. vi.

STEVENS (Alexander), an Engliſh ar-

That over the Liffey, in Dublin, the locks on the grand canal in Ireland, and the aqueduct over the Lune at Lancaſter, are monuments of his ſkill. He died at an advanced age in 1796.—Gent. Mag.

STEVENS (William Bagſhaw), a divine and poet, was born at Abingdon about 1755, and educated at Magdalen college, Oxford, where he obtained a fellowſhip and took his degree of D. D. He was at firſt uſher and afterwards maſter of Repton ſchool in Derbyſhire; and he alſo obtained the rectory of Seckindon, in Warwickſhire, with the vicarage of Kingſbury. He died in 1800. Dr. Stevens publiſhed a poem in blank verſe, entitled, Retirement, 1782, 4to.; Indian Odes, 4to.; Idylls in the Topographer, and ſome pieces in the Gentleman's Magazine.

STEVERS (Palamedes), an eminent painter, was born at London in 1607, but his father was a Fleming. He ſtudied painting at Delft, and acquired great excellence in the repreſentation of battles and encampments. He died in 1638. His brother Anthony was a good painter of converſations and portraits. He died in 1680.—Vertue.

STEVIN (Simon), or Stevinus, a mathematician of Bruges, who died in 1633. He was maſter of mathematics to prince Maurice of Naſſau, and inſpector of the dykes in Holland. He was the inventor of the ſailing chariots made uſe of in that country. He wrote ſeveral mathematical books in Dutch, which were tranſlated into Latin by Snellius, in 2 vols. folio.—Moreri.

STEWART (Matthew), an eminent mathematician, was born at Rothſay, in the iſle of Bute, in 1717. After receiving an education under his father, who was miniſter of that pariſh, he was ſent to Glaſgow, where he became ſtudent of divinity. He afterwards ſtudied mathematics at Edinburgh under Maclaurin, whom he ſucceeded in his profeſſorſhip; on which occaſion he publiſhed his General Theorems. In 1761 appeared his Tracts, Phyſical and Mathematical, in which he propoſed to deduce a theory of the moon, and to determine the ſun's diſtance from the earth. He was alſo the author of a Treatiſe on the Sun's Diſtance, and one entitled "Propoſitiones more veterum demonſtratæ." He died in 1785.—Encyclop. Brit.

STIFELIUS (Michael), a proteſtant divine and mathematician, was born at Eſtingen, in Germany. He publiſhed in his native language a Treatiſe on Algebra, and another on the Calendar. He died at Jena in 1567, aged 58.—Moreri.

STILLINGFLEET (Edward), a learned prelate, was born at Cranbourn, in Dorſetſhire, in 1635. He was educated at St. John's college, Cambridge, of which he was choſen fellow in 1653. In 1657 he was preſented to the rectory of Sutton, by his friend ſir Roger Burgoyne, to whom he dedicated, in 1662, his great work, entitled, "Origines Sacræ, or a Rational Account of the Grounds of Natural and Revealed Religion," 4to. It was afterwards publiſhed in folio, and has ſince appeared from the Oxford preſs, in 2 vols. 8vo. He was ſoon after choſen preacher of the Rolls chapel, and in 1665 was preſented to the rectory of St Andrew's, Holborn. In 1670 he was made canon-reſidentiary of St. Paul's, and on the promotion of Dr. Sancroft ſucceeded him in the deanry of that cathedral. He wrote and preached with great ability againſt popery in the reign of James II. and in 1689 was made biſhop of Worceſter. He died in 1699. He was a man of profound learning, a cloſe and energetic writer, and an excellent divine. All his works have been collected in 6 vols. folio.—Wood. Gen. Dict.

STILLINGFLEET (Benjamin), a naturaliſt and poet, was grandſon of the preceding, and educated at Norwich ſchool, from whence he removed to Trinity college, Cambridge, where he took the degree of B. A. He afterwards travelled into Italy, and on his return to England obtained the place of barrack maſter at Kenſington. He died in 1771, aged 69. Mr. Stillingfleet wrote, 1. The Calendar of Flora, 1761; 2. Miſcellaneous Travels, 8vo.; 3. The Principles and Powers of Harmony, 4to.; 4. Poems in Dodſley's Collection, &c.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

STOBÆUS (John), a Greek author of the fifth century. He made a collection of extracts from antient poets and philoſophers; which was publiſhed at Paris in 1623, 4to. and tranſlated into Latin by Conrad Geſner, in folio, Geneva, 1608.—Moreri.

STOCK (Chriſtian), a learned German, was born at Camburg in 1672. He became a profeſſor at Jena, where he died in 1733. His works are, 1. Diſputationes de pœnis Hebræorum capitalibus; 2. Clavis Linguæ Sanctæ veteris Teſtamentis; 3. Clavis Linguæ Sanctæ Novi Teſtamenti.—Ibid.

STOCKADE (Nicholas de Helt), a painter, was born at Nimeguen in 1614. He ſtudied under Ryccaert, and painted hiſtorical ſubjects and portraits in a good taſte.—Houbraken.

STOFLER (John), a mathematician, was born in Swabia in 1452. He was profeſſor at Tubingen, where he was greatly reſpected for ſome years, but at laſt loſt his reputation by foretelling a deluge to happen in 1524, and which ſpread a terror over all Europe. He wrote ſeveral books on mathematics and aſtrology, and died in 1531.—Moreri.

STONE (Nicholas), an eminent ſtatuary in the reigns of James and Charles I. He executed a number of monuments, the moſt conſiderable of which is one of the Bedford family, for which he received 1120l. He was employed as maſter maſon in building the Banqueting-houſe, Whitehall. The great gate and front of St. Mary's, Oxford, were alſo built by him. He died in 1647, aged 61. His ſons, Nicholas and Henry, were excellent ſtatuaries. The latter was alſo a good painter, and copied ſome fine pictures after ndyck. He died in 1653.—Granger.

rtue.

STONE (Edmund), an eminent mathema-ian, was a native of Scotland. His father as gardener to the duke of Argyle, and mund's education was of courſe confined thin very narrow limits. His own ap-ication, however, made up the deficiency, d at the age of eighteen, with no other ſiſtance than a little received from the duke's tler, he made himſelf maſter of arithme-, algebra, and geometry. He afterwards
plied to the French and Latin languages, which he made ſuch a progreſs as aſtohed the duke, who drew him from his ſcurity and placed him in a reſpectable uation. He died about 1750. He pubhed a Mathematical Dictionary; a Trea-e on Fluxions; and ſome other works.

STONEHOUSE (ſir James), a pious phyian and divine, was born at Tubney, near bingdon, in Berkſhire, in 1716. He re-ived his education firſt at Wincheſter hool, and next at St. John's college, Ox-
rd. Having ſtudied medicine under Dr.
cholls, he went abroad, and on his return ttled at Coventry, from whence he remov-to Northampton, where he founded the unty infirmary. After practiſing twenty ars, he entered into orders, and obtained e lectureſhip of All Saints, Briſtol, to hich were afterwards added the livings of reat and Little Cheverel, in Wiltſhire.
e was for ſeveral years of his life an infidel,
d even wrote a pamphlet againſt revealed ligion, which reached three editions; but reading Dr. Doddridge's Riſe and Progreſs Religion, he was converted. He was a oſt exemplary divine, and an eloquent eacher. He ſucceeded to the title of barot in 1791, and died at Briſtol in 1795.
e wrote Friendly Advice to a Patient, and veral religious pamphlets. — Stonehouſe's
tters, publiſhed by Stedman, 1800, 12*mo*.

STORACE (Stephen), a favourite muſician d compoſer for the Engliſh theatre. His uſic in "The Haunted Tower," "Siege Belgrade," "No Song no Supper," as ell as ſeveral pieces compoſed for the Itan opera, have been well received by the blic. He was born in 1763, and died in 96.—Gent. Mag.

STORCK (Abraham), a Dutch painter, ho died in 1708. He painted marine pieces, d views of ſhipping in harbours, with great mbers of figures, in an excellent ſtyle.
is brother was a good landſcape painter,
d drew ſeveral views on the Rhine.—Hou- aken.

STOW (John), an eminent antiquary, was rn in 1525. He is ſuppoſed to have been ought up a taylor, which was his father's ſineſs. About 1560 he began to collect aterials for his Chronicle, in which he was ſiſted by archbiſhop Parker. The firſt edion of this book appeared in 1573, 8vo.
1598 he publiſhed his Survey of London,
o.; and in 1600 his Flores Hiſtoriarum, or Annals of England, which is an enlargement of his Chronicle. He was reduced to great poverty, and had two briefs from James
I. to collect charity for ſupport in his old age. He died in 1604.—Life prefixed to Strype's edition of his Survey.

STRABO, a philoſopher and hiſtorian of antiquity, was born at Amaſia, a city of Cappadocia, and flouriſhed in the reigns of Auguſtus and Tiberius. He was educated under Xenarchus, the peripatetic, but afterwards he embraced the ſtoical opinions. Of all his works only his Geography is extant, the firſt edition of which is that of 1574,
folio; and the beſt by Xylander, Paris, 1620, and of Amſterdam, 1707, 2 vols. folio.—
Voſſius.

STRADA (Famianus), a famous jeſuit, who was a native of Rome, and died there in 1649, aged 78. He was profeſſor of the belles-lettres a long time in his ſociety, and wrote the Hiſtory of the Wars in the Low Countries, folio; the Latin of which is remarkable for its purity. He was alſo the author of Prolufiones Academicæ —Moreri.

STRADA (John or Stradanus), a Flemiſh painter, was born at Bruges in 1536, and died at Florence in 1604. He painted hiſ-torical ſubjects taken from the ſcriptures, alſo hunting ſcenes.—De Piles.

STRAETEN (N. Vander), a Dutch painter, was born in 1680. He travelled through a great part of Europe, and was conſidered one of the beſt landſcape painters of his time.
He led, however, a diſſipated life, and fell a victim to his intemperance.—Houbraken.

STRAFFORD (earl of). See WENTWORTH.

STRAHAN (William), an eminent printer, was born at Edinburgh in 1715. After ſerv-ing his apprenticeſhip in his native city, he came to London, where, by his application and integrity, he raiſed himſelf to affluence.
In 1770 he purchaſed a ſhare of the patent office of king's printer, and in 1775 was elected member of parliament for Malmeſ-bury, in Wiltſhire; but in the ſucceeding parliament he was returned for Wotton Baſſet. At his death in 1785 he bequeathed 1000l. to the company of ſtationers; the in-tereſt to be divided, in annuities of 5l each, amongſt infirm old printers.—Gent. Mag.

STRAIGHT (John), reſtor of Findon, in Suſſex, to which he was preſented by Magdalen college, Oxford, of which ſociety he was fellow. He was author of ſome poems in Dodſley's Collection; and 2 vols. of his Sermons were publiſhed after his death, which happened about 1740.—Gen. Biog.
D.A.

STRANGE (ſir Robert), an eminent engraver, was born in one of the Orkney iſlands, in 1721. He ſerved his time under
Mr. Cooper at Edinburgh, and in 1751 viſited London, where he applied to hiſtorical engraving, in which he arrived at great excellence. In 1760 he went to Italy, where he was choſen a member of the academies of Rome, Florence, and Bologna, and appointed professor of the royal academy at Parma; and at Paris he was made a member of the royal academy of painting. In 1787 he received the honour of knighthood. He died in 1792.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

STRAUCHIUS (Giles), a German divine and mathematician, was born at Wittemberg in 1632. He studied at Leipsic, and afterwards became professor and doctor in divinity at his native place. He next accepted an invitation from Dantzic to be rector of the college and professor of theology; but owing to the disputes between the catholics and protestants he went for Hamburgh, but was arrested on the road by order of the elector of Brandenburg, for something said in his preaching. He at last recovered his liberty, and died in 1682. His principal works are, 1. Breviarium Chronologicum; this has been translated into English by Sault; Breviarium Historicum; Geographia Mathematica; Doctrina Astrorum Mathematica, &c. —Moreri.

STREATER (Robert), an English painter, was born in 1624. At the restoration he was made serjeant painter to the king. He died of the stone in 1680.—Granger.

STREEK (Jurian Van), a Dutch painter, was born at Amsterdam in 1632, and died in 1678. He excelled in painting portraits and still life. His son Henry was a good historical painter. He died in 1713, aged 54.—Houbraken.

STRIGELIUS (Victorinus), a protestant divine, was born at Kaufbier, in Suabia, in 1524. He was one of the first disciples of Luther, and taught divinity and logic at Leipsic, but having opposed some of the lutheran tenets, he was deposed and imprisoned. On recovering his liberty, he went to Heidelberg, where he obtained a professorship, and died in 1569. He wrote Notes on the Old and New Testament, and some other works.—Moreri.

STROBELBERGER (John Stephen), a physician, was born at Gratz in Styria, and took his doctor's degree in medicine at Montpellier in 1615. He became physician at the baths of Carlsbad, where he died in 1630. He wrote, 1. Galliæ Politica-Medica Descriptio, 12mo.; 2. Historia Montpelienſis, 12mo.—Ibid.

STRONG (Joseph), a singular genius, was a native of Carlisle, and though blind from his infancy he obtained a great skill in mechanics. When young, he constructed an organ for himself, and was a good performer on that instrument. He made all his own wearing apparel, and a number of curious mechanical figures and machines. He died at Carlisle in 1798.—Monthly Mag.

STROZZI (Titus and Hercules), two Latin poets of Ferrara, were father and son. Their poems, which were printed in 1 vol. 8vo. at Venice in 1513, consist of elegies and other pieces. Titus died about 1502, at the age of 80. Hercules was killed by a rival in 1506.—Moreri.

STROZZI (Cyriaco), a peripatetic philosopher, was born at Florence in 1504. He was successively professor of Greek and philosophy at Florence, Bologna, and Pisa. He died in 1565. He added two Books in Greek and Latin to Aristotle's Treatise de Republica. His sister, Laurentia Strozzi, became a nun, and died in 1591. She understood the Greek and Latin languages, and wrote hymns in Latin on the feasts of the church. —Moreri.

STROZZI (Julius), an Italian poet, who died about 1636. He wrote a poem on the origin of Venice, under the title of Venitia Ædificata, 1624, folio. There was another of this name, who died in 1654. He wrote Idyls and Sonnets.—Tiraboschi.

STRUENSEE (Count), a physician, who by his abilities and address gained the favour of the king of Denmark, and was ennobled and made minister of state. The young queen, Caroline Matilda, placed particular confidence in Struensee; whose ruin being determined on by the queen-mother, a party was formed, and he was arrested with his friend Brandt, and beheaded at Copenhagen in 1772. The queen was confined in a prison till demanded by the English court, on which she was delivered up and removed to Zell, in Hanover, where she died in 1776.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

STRUDEL (Peter), an historical painter, was born in the Tyrol in 1680. He resided at Vienna, where he adorned the churches and palaces with a number of fine pictures. He died in 1717.—Pilkington.

STRUTT (Joseph), an English antiquary, who died in 1787. He compiled a Dictionary of Engravers, 4to.; and an Historical Treatise on the Manners and Customs of the Antient Inhabitants of England, 2 vols. 4to. —Gent. Mag.

STRUVIUS (George Adam), a learned German, was born at Magdeburg in 1619. He became professor of jurisprudence at Jena, and counsellor to the duke of Saxony. He died in 1692. The principal of his works is his Syntagma Juris Civilis.—Moreri.

STRUVIUS (Burcard Gotthelf), son of the preceding, was born at Weimar in 1671. He settled at Jena, where he followed the profession of his father, and died in 1738. His works are, 1. Antiquitatum Romanorum Syntagma, 4to.; 2. Bibliotheca Historica Selecta, 8vo.; 3. Syntagma Juris Publici, 4to.; 4. Syntagma Historiæ Germanicæ, 2 vols. fol.; 5. A History of Germany, in that language; 6. Historia Misnensis, 8vo.—Ibid.

STRUYS (John), a Dutch traveller, who went to Muscovy, Tartary, Persia, and the Indies, of which an account has been published in 4to. He died about 1680.—Ibid.

STRYPE (John), an English divine and historian, was born at London, and educated at Catherine hall, Cambridge, where he took the degree of M.A. In 1669 he was presented to the rectory of Theydonboys, in ſſex, which he reſigned the ſame year for he rectory of Low Layton. He was alſo ecturer of Hackney, where he died in 1737. He publiſhed the Lives of archbiſhops Cranmer, Parker, Grindal, and Whitgift, folio; iſhop Aylmer, ſir Thomas Smith, and ſir ohn Cheke, 8vo.; alſo Eccleſiaſtical Memorials, 3 vols.; and Annals of the Reformation, 4 vols. folio. He was the editor of ightfoot's works.—Gen Dict.

STUART (Arabella), ſee Seymour.

STUART (James), a celebrated architect, ommonly called Athenian Stuart, was born London in 1713. His mother was left a idow in poor circumſtances, with four ildren, of whom James was the eldeſt, ho when very young maintained the reſt of e family by painting fans. Having loſt s mother, and placed his brother and ſiſrs in good ſituations, he went to Italy, and rming an intimacy with Mr. Revett, the chitect, they went to Athens, where they ade a number of drawings of the remains of cient architecture. In 1762 the firſt voume appeared of The Antiquities of Athens, which 2 volumes more were added after e death of Stuart. This ingenious man, his return to England, was appointed ſurvor to Greenwich hoſpital. He died in 88.—Europ. Mag.

STUART (Gilbert), an hiſtorical writer, s born at Edinburgh in 1742. He received education at that univerſity, where his ther was profeſſor. At the age of little re than twenty he wrote a Diſſertation cerning the Antiquity of the Britiſh Conution; for which he was complimented h the degree of doctor of laws. His next k was A View of Society in Europe, . Being diſappointed of the profeſſorof law at Edinburgh, he removed to don, and became a writer in the Monthly iew. In 1774 he returned to Edinburgh, began a Magazine and Review, which d, and he again came to London, where ngaged in the Political Herald and the liſh Review. He died in 1786. His r works are, 1. Obſervations concerning Public Law and Conſtitutional Hiſtory cotland; 2. The Hiſtory of the Reformon in Scotland; 3. The Hiſtory of Scotfrom the Reformation to the Death of en Mary, whom he defends with ability ainſt Dr. Robertſon and others.—Europ. Gent. Mag.

STUBBE (Henry), an Engliſh phyſician, born in Lincolnſhire in 1631. He reed his education at Weſtminſter ſchool, whence he was elected to Chriſt church, d. In 1657 he was appointed underer of the Bodleian library, but was deed at the reſtoration for non-conformity, hich he ſettled at Stratford in Warwick-. He was a zealous defender of the telian philoſophy, and a bitter enemy royal ſociety, which brought him into ute with Mr. Glanville. He was ed near Bath in 1676, and was buried in the abbey church there by his old antagoniſt, who preached his funeral ſermon. His writings are numerous, but inſignificant and abuſive.—Wood.

STUBBS (George), an ingenious Engliſh writer, though but little known, was rector of Gunville, in Dorſetſhire. He wrote ſeveral papers in the Freethinker, 1718; a New Adventure of Telemachus, 8vo; and ſeveral other pieces in proſe and verſe.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

STUCKIUS (John William), a learned antiquary, was a native of Zurich, and died in 1607. He wrote an elaborate work on the Feſtivals of the Antients and their Sacrifices, folio; alſo a Commentary on Arrian; and a treatiſe, entitled Carolus Magnus redivivus, 4to.—Melch. Adam. Vit. Theol.

STUDLY (John), a poet in the reign of queen Elizabeth. He received his education firſt at Weſtminſter ſchool, and afterwards at Trinity college, Cambridge. He was killed in 1587 at the ſiege of Breda, where he had a command under prince Maurice. He tranſlated ſeveral of the tragedies of Seneca.—Theat. Poet.

STUKELY (William), a learned antiquary, was born at Holbeach, in Lincolnſhire, in 1687. He received his education at Benet college, Cambridge, where he ſtudied phyſic and botany. After taking his doctor's degree he ſettled at Boſton in Lincolnſhire, from whence he removed to London, and was choſen member of the royal ſociety, and alſo of the ſociety of antiquaries on its revival. In 1730 he entered into orders, and was preſented to the living of All Saints, Stamford, and in 1747 to the rectory of St. George, Queen-ſquare, London. He died in 1765. His principal works are, 1. Itinerarium Curioſum; or, An Account of the Antiquities and Curioſities in Great Britain, folio; 2. An Account of Stonehenge and Abury, folio; 3. Palæographia Sacra; or, Diſcourſes on the Monuments of Antiquity that relate to ſacred Hiſtory, 4to; 4. Palæographia Britannica, 4to; 5. Hiſtory of Carauſius, 2 vols. 4to.; Diſſertation on the Spleen, folio. He was called, on account of his knowlege of Britiſh antiquities, the Arch Druid.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

STUNICA (James Lopez), a Spaniſh divine of the univerſity of Alcala, who wrote againſt Eraſmus and againſt the notes of James le Fevre on St. Paul's Epiſtles. He publiſhed alſo an account of a journey from Alcala to Rome, entitled, Itinerarium, dum Compluto Romam profiſciceretur. He died at Naples in 1530.—Nic. Antonio de Hiſp. Script.

STURMIUS (James), a German ſtateſman, was born at Straſburg in 1489. He went ambaſſador to foreign countries, and was deputy to the diets of the empire. He contributed to the reformation of religion at Straſburg and to the erecting of a college, and he aſſiſted Sleidan in his Hiſtory of the Reformation. He died at Straſburg in 1553.—Melch. Adam. in vit. Germ.

Sturmius (John), was born near Cologne in 1507. He ſtudied at Liege, after which he ſet up a printing-preſs, and printed ſeveral Greek authors. In 1529 he viſited Paris, where he read lectures upon Greek and Latin authors, and alſo on logic. But being a proteſtant he was obliged to remove to Straſburg, where he became the firſt principal of the univerſity. He died in 1589. His principal works are, 1. Linguæ Latinæ reſolvendæ Ratio, 8vo.; 2. Excellent Notes on Ariſtotle's Rhetoric, and other authors.—Ibid.

Sturmius (John Chriſtopher), a mathematician, was born at Hippolſtein in 1635. He became profeſſor of philoſophy and mathematics at Altorf, where he died in 1703. He publiſhed, 1. a Tranſlation of Archimedes into German; 2. A Courſe of Mathematics, which has been tranſlated into Engliſh, in 3 vols. 8vo.; 3. Collegium Experimentale curioſum, 4to.; 4. Phyſica Electrica ſive hypothetica, 2 vols. 4to. 5. Phyſicæ conciliatricis conamina, 12mo.; 6. Prælectiones contra Aſtrologiæ divinitracis vanitatem, 2 vols. 4to —Moreri.

Sturmius (Leonard Chriſtopher), an architect, was born at Altorf in 1669, and died in 1719. He publiſhed a Complete Courſe of Architecture, 16 vols. Augſburg.—Ibid.

Stuvel (Erneſt), a painter of fruits and flowers, was born at Hamburg in 1567, and died in 1712.—Pilkington.

Suarez (Francis), a Spaniſh jeſuit, was born at Grenada in 1548. He was profeſſor of divinity at Alcala, Salamanca, and Rome, and laſtly at Coimbra in Portugal. He died at Liſbon in 1617. His Treatiſe on Laws has been highly eſteemed. All his works have been printed in 23 vols. folio. They have a great deal of learning, and much trifling ſophiſtry.—Nic. Anton. Hiſp. Script.

Subleyras (Peter), a French painter, was born in Languedoc in 1699, and died in 1759. He excelled in hiſtory and portrait. —D'Argenville.

Subtermans (Juſtus), a portrait and hiſtorical painter of Antwerp, who died in 1681, aged 84. There is a celebrated picture by him in the palace at Florence, repreſenting the homage of the Florentines to Ferdinand II.—Pilkington.

Suckling (ſir John), an Engliſh poet, was born at Witham, in Eſſex, in 1613. After receiving a liberal education he went abroad, and made a campaign under Guſtavus Adolphus. On his return to England he raiſed a troop of horſe for the king's ſervice, but they behaved ſo ill in the engagement with the Scots on the Engliſh borders as to haſten his end. He died in 1641. His works conſiſt of poems and letters; An Account of Religion by Reaſon; A Diſcourſe upon Occaſion, preſented to the earl of Dorſet; and four plays.—Biog. Dram. Granger.

Sue (John), an eminent French ſurgeon, was born at Cotte St. Pol. He ſtudied under Devaux at Paris; and learnt Latin at the age of forty-five, that he might be able to examine ſtudents in that language. He died in 1782. He wrote ſome Memoirs on medical ſubjects.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

Sue (John Joſeph), brother of the preceding, was born in 1710, and died in 1792. He was the diſciple of the celebrated anatomiſt Verdier, whom he ſucceeded in his profeſſorſhip. He wrote an Abridgment of Anatomy, 2 vols. 12mo.; Treatiſe on Bandages, 12mo.; Elements of Surgery, 8vo.; Anthropolomia, or a Treatiſe on the Art of Injecting, Diſſecting, and Embalming, 8vo.; Oſteology, 2 vols. folio. This is a tranſlation of Monro's elegant work.—Ibid.

Suetonius (Caius Suetonius Tranquillus), an hiſtorian, was born at Rome. He was bred to the bar, and was the intimate friend of Pliny the younger, by whoſe means he was made tribune. Suetonius was afterwards ſecretary to the emperor Adrian. Of his works, his Lives of the firſt twelve Emperors, and part of his treatiſe concerning illuſtrous Grammarians, only have been preſerved. The beſt editions are that of Oudendorp, 2 vols. 8vo. L. Bat. 1751; and that of Erneſti, 8vo. Lipſ. 1775.—Biog. Claſſica.

Sueur (Nicholas le), or Sudorius, a counſellor, and afterwards preſident of the parliament of Paris, was aſſaſſinated by robbers in 1594, aged 55. He tranſlated Pindar with great fidelity and elegance into Latin, publiſhed at Paris in 1582, 8vo. and at Oxford in 1677, folio.—Moreri.

Sueur (Thomas le), a friar of the order of Minims, was born in Champagne in 1703. He taught theology, philoſophy, and mathematics, with great reputation at Rome, where he died in 1770. He formed a cloſe friendſhip with the father Jacquier, and theſe learned men publiſhed in conjunction a Commentary on Newton's Principia: a work on the Integral Calculus, 2 vols. 4to.; and Inſtitutiones Philoſophicæ, 5 vols. 12mo.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

Sueur (Euſtache le), a French painter, was born at Paris in 1617, and ſtudied under Simon Vouet. His works are in a fine ſtyle, formed upon antiquity, and after the beſt maſters. He died in 1655.—D'Argenville.

Suger (the abbé), a miniſter of ſtate, and abbot of St. Dennis, in the 11th century. He was miniſter of foreign affairs as well as of war under Louis le Gros; and Louis VII. appointed him regent of the kingdom in his abſence. He was a man of great integrity and piety, and died at St. Dennis in 1152, aged 70.—Moreri.

Suicer (John Gaſpard), a learned divine, was born at Zurich in 1620. He became profeſſor of Greek and Hebrew at his native place, where he died in 1683. He compiled a great work entitled, Lexicon ſive Theſaurus Eccleſiaſticus Patrum Græcorum, 2 vols. folio. His ſon, John Henry Suicer, became profeſſor at Heidelberg, where e died in 1705. He wrote several learned orks, particularly a Chronology of Switzerand in Latin.—Ibid.

SUIDAS, a Greek writer, who is supposed have flourished in the reign of Alexis mnenus. We have by him a Greek exicon, historical and geographical, which ntains much valuable information. The ist edition is that of Kuster, at Cambridge, 05, 3 vols. folio.

SULLY (Maximilian de Bethune, duke), was born at Rosni in 1559, of a noble mily. At an early age he became the mpanion of Henry of Navarre, afterwards enry IV. of France, whom he accompanied Paris, and fortunately escaped in the hor- massacre of St. Bartholomew by the kindss of the principal of the college of Burndy, who kept him concealed three days. e displayed great valour on many occasions, rticularly at the siege of Marmande, and e battles of Coutras, Arques, and Ivry. e also manifested equal abilities as a statesan. In 1586 he concluded a treaty with e Swiss; and by his persuasions Henry was duced to change his religion, for the purse of gaining the throne of France, though arguments could prevail upon Sully himf to turn Roman catholic. Being sent ambassador to the court of queen Elizabeth, he played uncommon talents amidst the deep- politicians in Europe. On her death he turned to France, where he obtained the ghest offices in the state. After the mur- r of the king, Sully retired from court. e died at his castle of Villebon in 1641. e his Memoirs written by himself; the st edition of which is that of Paris, 1745, vols. 4to.

SULPICIA, a Roman lady who lived in e reign of Domitian, and was called the oman Sappho. She wrote a satyrical poem ainst Domitian, printed in the Corpus Poerum of Maittaire.

SULPICIUS SEVERUS, an ecclesiastical storian, of the fifth century, was born of a ble family in Aquitaine, and distinguished mself by his eloquence and piety. He rote the Life of St. Martin of Tours; and abridgment of Ecclesiastical History, inted by Le Clerc in 1709, 8vo.—Moreri.

SULZER (John George), a philosophical riter, was born at Winterthurn, in the nton of Zurich, in 1720. He became profor of mathematics at Berlin, and member the royal academy in that city, where he d in 1779. His works are, Moral Conmplations on the Works of Nature; Treae on Education; Universal Theory of the ne Arts, 2 vols. 4to. &c.—Nouv. Dict. ist.

SUMOROKOF (Alexander), the father of e Russian stage, was born at Moscow in 27. His tragedy of Koref laid the foun- tion of the Russian theatre, and being per- rmed with applause before the empress, imated him to proceed in the dramatic ca- er, which he did with great success, and was appointed to the rank of brigadier, and director of the theatre. He also received a pension, was nominated counsellor of state, and knighted. He wrote several poems and some historical works. He died in 1777.—Ibid.

SURENHUSIUS (William), a German author of the eighteenth century, who was professor of Hebrew at Amsterdam, and distinguished himself by a fine edition of the Mischna, with the Commentaries of Maimonides and Bartenora, printed in 3 vols. folio, 1705.—Ibid.

SUTCLIFFE (Mathew), a learned English divine, and the founder of Chelsea college, was dean of Exeter, and died about 1610. He wrote a curious treatise on the Conformity of Popery and Mahometism, 4to. 1604; this work was anonymous. Under his name we have, 1. De vera Christi Ecclesia, 1600, 4to.; 2. De Purgatorio, 8vo.; 3. De Missa Papistica, 4to.—Collier's Hist. Dict.

SUTTON (Thomas), the founder of the Charter-house, was born in Lincolnshire, in 1532. He was educated at Eton college, and studied the law in Lincoln's-inn, but never followed that profession. Having made some valuable purchases in the bishopric of Durham, he discovered coal-mines there which produced him immense property. He also gained a large fortune by commerce and marriage. On the death of his wife, in 1602, he led a retired life; and having no issue he purchased the Charter-house, which he erected into a hospital and seminary of learning. He died at Hackney in 1611.—Life of Sutton, 8vo.

SUTTON (Samuel), a mechanic, was born at Alfretton, in Derbyshire. He served under the duke of Marlborough in queen Anne's wars, and afterwards kept a coffee-house in Aldersgate street. About 1704 he invented a method for extracting foul air from the wells of ships, by pipes communicating with the fire-places of the coppers. His plan, however, was superseded by Dr. Hales's invention of ventilators. Sutton died in 1752.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

SUWARROFF (Alexander), a celebrated Russian general, was born of an antient family in 1730, and entered into the army at the age of twelve. After passing through the inferior stations he became a colonel in 1762. He displayed uncommon bravery when serving under Romanzoff against the Turks, and having slain several janissaries with his own hands, he put their heads into a sack, which he laid at the feet of his general. In 1783 he compelled the Tartars of Kuban and Budziack to submit and swear allegiance to the empress, for which he was named general in chief. In 1787 he defeated the Turkish fleet near Oczakow, which place was taken by storm. In 1789 he attacked the Turks with a very inferior force, and defeated them near the river Rimnisk, for which he was created a count of the Roman empire, and obtained the surname of Rimniſki. By this victory he ſaved the prince of Saxe Cobourg and the imperial army. In the following year he ſtormed Iſmailow, wherein periſhed above thirty thouſand Turks who refuſed quarter. On this occaſion Suwarroff in his letter to prince Potemkin wrote only theſe words: "The Ruſſian colours wave on the ramparts of Iſmailow." Indeed he was always laconic in his diſpatches, obſerving that the pen was not a fit inſtrument for a ſoldier. In December 1791 peace was concluded, and Suwarroff was covered with honours. His talents were again called into action in the war of Poland, when he took Prague, where thirty thouſand Poles fell dead in the field of battle. This was followed by the fall of Warſaw and the partition of Poland. For this ſervice he was made field-marſhal, and obtained the grant of a large eſtate. When the emperor Paul entered into the war againſt France in 1799, Suwarroff had the command of the army, with which he marched into Italy, where he was oppoſed by Moreau. Overpowered by numbers, the Ruſſian hero effected perhaps the moſt brilliant retreat ever known over the heights of Swiſſerland, and entering Germany, marched to Ruſſia by order of his ſovereign. For his ſervice in this campaign he was created a prince by the title of Italiſky. But he was treated by Paul with great ingratitude, which is ſuppoſed to have deeply affected his ſpirits. He died at Peterſburg in 1800.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

Suze (Henrietta counteſs de la), an ingenious French lady, was born at Paris in 1618. She was the daughter of the count de Coligni, ſon of the admiral of that name; and was married firſt to a noble Scotchman of the name of Hamilton, and afterwards to the count de la Suze, who uſed her very cruelly. She however obtained a divorce, but loſt the greateſt part of her fortune. She died in 1673. Her poems were printed with thoſe of Peliſſon and madame de Scudery, in 4 vols. 12mo —Ibid.

Swammerdam (John), a celebrated naturaliſt, was born at Amſterdam in 1637, and educated at Leyden, where he took his doctor's degree in medicine in 1667. He applied with great aſſiduity to the ſtudy of the human body, and of inſects. He invented a method of injecting the veſſels with a liquified matter which afterwards became ſolid; alſo a thermometer to aſcertain the degree of heat in animals. At the end of life he embraced the myſterious dogmas of madame Bourignon. He died in 1680. His works are, 1. Treatiſe on Reſpiration, 4to.; 2. De Fabrica Uteri Muliebris, 4to.; 3. General Hiſtory of Inſects, 2 vols. folio. They have been tranſlated into Engliſh.—Moreri.

Swanefeld (Herman), a Flemiſh painter, was born in 1620. He was the diſciple of Gerard Douw, and afterwards of Claude Lorraine, at Rome, where he led ſo retired a life as to be called the hermit of Italy. He died in 1680. His landſcapes are very beautiful and ſcarce.—De Piles.

Sweden. Of this country we have no certain account till 714, when it was converted to chriſtianity. In 1387, Margaret, queen of Denmark and Norway, was choſen queen of Sweden in the room of king Albert, who was conſidered as unfit to reign. In 1411, Eric, duke of Pomerania, ſucceeded to the three kingdoms, and Sweden remained ſubject to Denmark till 1523, when Guſtavus Vaſa reſtored the independence of his country. The monarchy became abſolute in 1772. See Gustavus—Univ. Hiſt.

Swedenborg (Emmanuel), was born at Stockholm in 1689. His father was a biſhop of the Lutheran perſuaſion, and preſident of the Swediſh churches. The ſubject of the preſent article went on his travels in 1710, and at his return to Sweden was appointed aſſeſſor of the metallic college, which office he held till 1747, and then reſigned it. He was ennobled in 1719. His ſcientific purſuits were highly honourable to him, and he publiſhed ſeveral excellent works, the principal of which was the Regnum Minerale, printed at Leipſic in 1734, 3 vols. folio. He alſo wrote a Treatiſe on the Poſition and Courſe of the Planets, and another on the Tides. At length he abſtracted himſelf from thoſe ſtudies, imagining "that he belonged to the Society of Angels, in which things ſpiritual and heavenly are the only ſubjects of diſcourſe and entertainment." Filled with this notion, he ſent into the world a number of myſtical books on the New Jeruſalem; on Heaven and Hell; Spiritual Influx; the White Horſe in the Revelations, &c. The baron died in London in 1772. His opinions obtained little notice in his lifetime, but ſince his death they have produced a ſect; and ſeveral conventicles have been erected in London and elſewhere, called New Jeruſalem Temples, in which the memory of Swedenborg is reſpected as that of a prophet. —Europ. Mag.

Swift (Jonathan), a celebrated divine, was born at Dublin, of Engliſh parents, in 1667. His father died a few months before the birth of this child, leaving his widow in narrow circumſtances. At the age of ſix years Jonathan was ſent to Kilkenny ſchool, from whence, in 1682, he was removed to the univerſity of Dublin, the expenſe of his education being defrayed by his uncle. While at college he paid more attention to books of hiſtory and poetry than logic and the claſſics, ſo that he was denied his degree on his firſt application, and obtained it with difficulty on the ſecond. On the death of his uncle, in 1688, he came to England, where he was hoſpitably entertained by ſir William Temple, who had married a relation of his mother's. During his reſidence with ſir William, who employed him in reviſing his works, he formed the reſolution of embracing the eccleſiaſtical life; and having taken his maſter's degree he was ordained, and ob-

ined the prebend of Kilroot, in the diocefe Connor, worth about one hundred pounds year. Being diſappointed of preferment in gland, he accompanied the earl of Berke-y, one of the lords juſtices of Ireland, as s chaplain and private ſecretary; but he as again diſappointed, and diſmiſſed with e livings of Laracor and Rathbeggin, and e rectory of Augher, inſtead of the deanry Derry, which had been promiſed him. e then ſettled at Laracor, where he rebuilt e parſonage houſe, repaired the church, d diſcharged his parochial duties in an ex-mplary manner. About this time he was ſited by Mrs. Johnſon, the celebrated Stella, hom he afterwards ſecretly married, but ould never own it, in conſequence of which e broke her heart. This amiable woman as the daughter of ſir William Temple's eward, and had an independent property left r by that gentleman. At the acceſſion of een Anne, Swift embarked in politics in pes of preferment in England, which he ain miſſed, and in 1713 was promoted to e deanry of St. Patrick's, Dublin. The ath of queen Anne cloſed all his proſpects, d completely embittered his temper. He as for ſome time very unpopular in Dublin, t came at laſt to be revered as an oracle. ne Wood projected a coinage of 180,000l. Iriſh halfpence, for which he obtained a tent. Swift immediately addreſſed a ſeries letters to the people, under the ſignature a Drapier, urging them not to receive this ſe coin; and ſo ſucceſsful was he that the tent was withdrawn. After the death of ella, in 1727, he led a very retired life, d waſted his time in literary trifles which re unworthy of public notice. In 1736 entirely loſt his memory, and almoſt to his ath he was ſecluded from the viſits of angers, as his paſſions ſtill continued to be tremely violent. He died in 1745, and as buried in the cathedral of St. Patrick. is ill-treatment of Stella having been men-oned, it is neceſſary to notice his conduct to e lady celebrated in his works under the ppellation of Vaneſſa. She was the daugh-r of Mr. Vanhomrigh, a Dutch merchant Dublin, and conceived a ſtrong inclination the dean, which he ſeems to have encou-ged; but when at laſt ſhe declared her mind, told her he was married, which had ſuch effect upon her that ſhe died a few weeks erwards. He left the greateſt part of his operty for the purpoſe of building a hoſpi-for lunatics at Dublin. The poetical eces of Swift are moſtly of the humourous nd, and ſome of them very coarſe and li-ntious. His proſe ſtyle is remarkably clear d forcible. The principal of his works , a ſatirical romance, called Gulliver's ravels; the allegory of a Tale of a Tub, which he ridicules popery and puritaniſm; d Political Tracts againſt the Whigs. All works have been collected into 22 vols. o.—Life by Sheridan.

SWIFT (Deane), a near relation of the above, publiſhed in 1755 "An Eſſay upon the Life, Writings, and Character, of Dr. Jonathan Swift;" and two volumes of his "Letters." He died at Worceſter in 1783. —Gen. Biog. Dict.

SWINBURNE (Henry), a law writer, was born at York, and educated at Oxford, where he took his bachelor's degree in civil law, after which he became proctor to the archbiſhop and judge of the prerogative court at York, where he died in 1620. He wrote, Brief Treatiſe on Teſtaments and Laſt Wills, 4to.: Treatiſe of Spouſals, or Matrimonial Contracts, 4to.—Wood.

SWINDEN (Tobias), a divine of the church of England, who was vicar of Cuxton in Kent, and died about 1720. He wrote a curious book, entitled "An Enquiry into the Nature and Place of Hell, 8vo. 1714. In this work he endeavours to prove that the ſun is the real Tartarus; a ſecond edition, with an appendix, was publiſhed in 1727, at which time the author was dead. The book was tranſlated into French by Bion.

SWINNOCK (George), a non-conformiſt miniſter, was born at Maidſtone in Kent, and educated firſt at Cambridge, and afterwards at Oxford, where he took his maſter's degree in arts. In 1662 he was deprived of the living of Great Kymbels, in Buckinghamſhire, for non-conformity. He died at Maidſtone in 1673. He wrote a uſeful book, called the Chriſtian Man's Calling, 3 vols. 4to.; Heaven and Hell Epitomized, 4to.; the Door of Salvation Opened, 8vo.; and ſome other works —Calamy.

SWINTON (John), a learned divine and antiquary, was born in 1703. He received his education at Wadham college, Oxford, where he proceeded to his degree of B. D. He was for ſome time chaplain to the Engliſh factory at Legkorn, and on his return to England ſettled at Oxford, where he was appointed keeper of the univerſity records. He died in 1767. Mr. Swinton had a concern in writing the Univerſal Hiſtory; and was the author of ſome ſermons and tracts on antiquarian ſubjects.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

SWITZERLAND. The ancient inhabitants of this country were the Helvetii, who were ſubdued by Cæſar, B. C. 57. A. D. 395 it was conquered by the Alemani, a German nation who were expelled by Clovis, king of France, in 496. In 888 it became part of the kingdom of Burgundy, and was given by Rodolphus, the laſt king of that country, to Conrad II. emperor of Germany, in 1032, from which time it was a part of the empire; but in 1307 the inhabitants revolted and ſet up the republic of the thirteen cantons, who in 1315 made their league perpetual. In 1649 their liberty was confirmed by treaty. See TELL.—Planta's Hiſt. of Switzerland.

SYBRECHT (John), a landſcape painter, was a native of Antwerp. He drew ſeveral fine views on the banks of the Rhine, and ſome in Derbyſhire. He was invited to England by the duke of Buckingham, and died here in 1703, aged 73.—Walpole. Granger.

SYDENHAM (Thomas), an eminent phyſician, was born at Woodford, in Dorſetſhire, in 1624. In 1642 he entered of Magdalen hall, Oxford, but left that place when it became a garriſon for Charles I. He afterwards returned to the univerſity, and after taking his doctor's degree ſettled in Weſtminſter, and became the moſt noted phyſician of his time. He died in 1689. Dr. Sydenham guided his practice by experience, and rejected theory. He was the firſt who introduced the cool regimen in the ſmall pox; and his writings on conſumption, fevers, and nervous diſeaſes, though brief, are univerſally eſteemed. The beſt edition is that of Swan, in one volume 8vo.—Biog. Brit.

SYDENHAM (Flower), a learned critic, was born in 1710, and educated at Wadham college, Oxford, where he took the degree of M. A. in 1734, after which he ſettled in London. He tranſlated ſome of the works of Plato into Engliſh; and was diſtinguiſhed as much by his modeſty and the gentleneſs of his manners, as his erudition. He died under arreſt for a trifling debt due to a victualler in 1788, and this circumſtance gave riſe to that excellent inſtitution the literary fund for the benefit of authors in diſtreſs —Gen. Biog. Dict.

SYLBURGIUS (Frederic), a learned German, was born at Marpurg in 1546, and died in 1596 He had a concern in compiling the Greek Theſaurus of Stephens, and wrote ſome poems in that language. His Greek Grammar and Etymologicon Magnum, folio, 1594, are highly eſteemed.—Melch. Adam.

SYLLA (Lucius Cornelius), a famous Roman, was born of a reduced but noble family. In his younger years he was maintained by the courtezan Nicopolis, who left him her fortune. He entered the army under Marius, and accompanied him to Numidia as quæſtor: but his military talents exciting the jealouſy of that general, he went and ſerved under Catullus. Being choſen prætor he was appointed to place Ariobarzanes on the throne of Cappadocia, which he effected. He afterwards terminated the war with the Marſi, for which he was rewarded with the conſular dignity. He now aſpired to the title of perpetual dictator, but met with a powerful opponent in Marius. However, after putting an end to the war with Mithridates, and conquering Greece, he entered Rome in triumph, and murdered all whom he conſidered as inimical to his ambitious views. The ſtreets of Rome were filled with dead bodies, and thoſe to whom he had promiſed pardon were inhumanly maſſacred. After reigning in terror, and altering the laws according to his own humour, Sylla voluntarily reſigned the dictatorſhip, and retired to his eſtate at Puteoli, where he ſpent the remainder of his days in debauchery with ſome of the moſt vicious of the common people. He died miſerably B.C. 78, and in the 60th year of his age.—Plutarch.

SYLVESTER (Joſhua), an Engliſh poet, was born in 1563. He became a merchant adventurer, and was in great eſteem with queen Elizabeth and king James. Prince Henry, ſon of the laſt monarch, appointed him his poet penſioner. He was acquainted with ſeveral languages, and died in Holland in 1618. He tranſlated into Engliſh verſe Du Bartas's Divine Weeks and Works, 4to.; and ſome pieces from Fracaſtorius —Wood.

SYLVESTER (Matthew), a non-conformiſt divine, was educated at Cambridge, and ejected in 1662 from the living of Gunnerby in Lincolnſhire. He afterwards officiated to a congregation of diſſenters in London, where he died in 1708. He publiſhed the Hiſtory of the Life and Times of Mr. Baxter, folio, and ſeveral ſermons —Calamy.

SYLVIUS (Francis), profeſſor of eloquence, and principal of the college of Tournay at Paris, was born near Amiens. His family name was Du Bois, which he latiniſed according to the cuſtom of the age. He corrected the barbarous method of reading Latin, and recommended Cicero as a model for ſtyle. He publiſhed many learned commentaries, and a work on oratory. He died in 1530.—Bayle.

SYLVIUS (James), a celebrated phyſician, was brother of the above, and born at Amiens in 1478. He became profeſſor of medicine in the royal college at Paris, and was a man of great learning, but miſerably avaricious. He died in 1555. His works were printed at Cologne in 1630 with the title of Opera Medica.—Bayle.

SYLVIUS (Lambert), or Vanden Boſch, a Dutch writer, who died about 1688. He wrote in the German language, 1. Theatre of illuſtrious Men, 2 vols. 4to.; 2. Hiſtory of our Times; 3. Lives of Naval Heroes, 4to.; 4. Tragedies —Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

SYLVIUS (Francis de la Boe), a phyſician, was born at Hanau in 1614. He became profeſſor at Leyden, where he was a zealous advocate for Harvey's diſcovery of the circulation of the blood, and died in 1672. His works were printed by Elzevir in 4to and at Venice in 1708 in folio.—Halleri Bibl. Anat.

SYMMACHUS (Quintus Aurelius Avianus), prefect of Rome, and conſul in 391. He diſplayed great zeal for the re-eſtabliſhment of paganiſm, but was oppoſed by St. Ambroſe, and baniſhed by Theodoſius. His epiſtles were printed in 1653, 12mo.—Mercri.

SYNESIUS, a primitive biſhop, was a native of Africa, and the diſciple of the celebrated Hypatia, at Alexandria, where he became a convert to Chriſtianity. In 410 he was choſen biſhop of Ptolemais, in which ſtation he conducted himſelf in an apoſtolical manner, but the period of his death is unknown. His epiſtles and homilies were printed at Paris in Greek and Latin in 1633, folio. Before he became a biſhop he advanced ſome notions againſt the generally received doctrine of the reſurrection and laſt judgment, but he afterwards retracted his errors. There was a platonic philoſopher of this name, who wrote a Treatiſe on Natural Philoſophy, and one on Dreams; the firſt printed at Paris in 1612, 4to. and the laſt in the edition of Iamblicus, Venice, 1497, folio.—Ibid.

Syncellus (George), a monk of Conſtantinople, who flouriſhed about A.D. 792. There remains of his a Chronography, publiſhed in Greek and Latin in 1652, folio. It is valuable as furniſhing a knowlege of the dynaſties of Egypt.—Ibid.

Synge (Edward), a pious prelate, was the ſon of Dr. Synge, biſhop of Cork, and born there in 1659. He received his education partly at Chriſt church, Oxford, and afterwards at Dublin. In 1714 he was made biſhop of Raphoe, from whence in 1716 he was tranſlated to the archbiſhopric of Tuam, where he died in 1741. He wrote ſeveral pious tracts on practical religion, which have been printed by the Society for promoting Chriſtian Knowlege, in 4 vols. 12mo.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Syphax, king of part of Numidia, who took the ſide of the Romans againſt the Carthaginians at the beginning of the ſecond punic war. But having eſpouſed the daughter of Aſdrubal, he joined Carthage. He was defeated by Maſſiniſſa and Lælius, and conducted in triumph to Rome, where he died in priſon, B. C. 201.—Livy.

Syria. In 901 B. C. the inhabitants of this country began to be powerful under Benhadad, but in 740 it was reduced by the king of Aſſyria. Alexander the Great conquered Syria, B. C. 322, and after his death Seleucus erected it into an independent kingdom. The Romans laid it under tribute B. C. 65. It was ſubdued by the Saracens A. D. 640, and by the Turks in 1517, in whoſe poſſeſſion it remains.—Univ. Hiſt.

T.

Tabor (John Otho), a German lawyer, was born at Bautzen, in Luſatia, in 1604. He became counſellor to the landgrave of Heſſe Darmſtadt, and died at Frankfort in 1674. His works upon law were printed in 1688, in 2 vols. folio.—Life by Paſchius.

Tacca (Peter James), a celebrated ſculptor, was born at Carara, and died at Florence in 1640. He was a pupil of John Bologna. One of his greateſt works is the ſtatue of Ferdinand III. grand duke of Tuſcany, with four ſlaves chained at the foot. This fine piece of art is at Leghorn.

Tachard (Guy), a French jeſuit, who went as a miſſionary with Chaumont and Choiſi, ambaſſadors to Siam. In 1688 he returned to Europe after an abſence of two years, but went again to India ſome time afterwards, and died in Bengal about 1694. His two Voyages to Siam were printed at Paris in 1689, in 2 vols. 12mo.—Moreri.

Tacitus (Caius Cornelius), a Roman hiſtorian, of whoſe family or early life nothing is known. His firſt employ is ſaid to have been as procurator to Veſpaſian in Gallia Belgica. In the reign of Domitian he ſerved the office of prætor, and that of conſul under Nerva, A. D. 97. He diſplayed great elocution at the bar in pleading the cauſe of the oppreſſed Africans, who had been cruelly uſed by Marius Priſcus, but it is in the character of an hiſtorian that he has acquired immortality. Of his lives of the emperors only a part remains. His annals were the moſt important of his works, but of theſe we have to lament the loſs of a valuable portion. The treatiſe on the manners of the Germans, and the life of his father-in-law Agricola, are perfect, and cannot be too highly admired, but his hiſtory of the reign of Tiberius may be conſidered as his maſter-piece. His Latin is remarkable for its purity and elegance, and his greateſt ſtrength lay in drawing biographical characters. His friendſhip with Pliny is proverbial. The beſt editions of Tacitus are that of Amſterdam, 2 vols. 8vo. 1685, and that of Paris, 4 vols. 4to. 1771. Tranſlations of this author have been publiſhed in Engliſh by Gordon in 12mo.; and Murphy in 4 vols. 4to.—Biog. Claſſica.

Tacitus (Marcus Claudius), emperor of Rome, was elected by the ſenate after the death of Aurelian in 275. He diſplayed great wiſdom in the adminiſtration of juſtice, and the government of the ſtate. He alſo inſtituted ſome excellent regulations for the reformation of the public morals, and he reſtored the ſenate to their antient dignity. Tacitus was likewiſe diſtinguiſhed as a warrior: he repelled the barbarians who had invaded the Roman territories; and he was preparing for a war againſt Perſia, when he died at Cilicia of a violent diſorder, though according to ſome he was aſſaſſinated, A. D. 276, aged 70.—Crevier.

Tacquet (Andrew), a jeſuit and mathematician, was born at Antwerp, and died in 1660. He wrote a Treatiſe on Aſtronomy, an Explanation of Euclid, &c. His works were printed at Antwerp in 1 vol. folio, 1707. —Moreri.

Taffi (Andrew), a painter, was born at Florence in 1213, and died in 1294. He introduced into Italy the art of deſigning in moſaic, which he acquired from ſome Greek painters. He executed in this way ſeveral pieces at Florence.—Felibien.

Talbert (Francis Xavier), a French writer, was born at Beſançon in 1725. He was bred to the law, which he renounce for the eccleſiaſtical ſtate, and obtained a canonry at his native place. He died at Lemberg in Gallicia in 1803. His works are, 1. Diſcourſe on the inequality among Men; this was crowned by the academy of Dijon in 1755. 2. Panegyric on St. Louis; 3. The Elogies of Bonnet, Montaigne, cardinal d'Amboiſe, chancellor de l'Hopital, Philip, regent of France, and Boileau. He alſo wrote ſome poems.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

TALBOT (John), earl of Shrewſbury, was born of a noble family in Herefordſhire. He diſplayed great valour in the reduction of Ireland, where he was commander-in-chief for Henry V. Afterwards he went to France, and ſerved under the duke of Bedford. At the battle of Patay he was made priſoner, but recovered his liberty not long after. He was for ſome time again in Ireland; and on his return to France he gained ſeveral victories, and took ſome ſtrong places, ſo that his name became a terror to the French. He was ſlain at the ſiege of Caſtillon in 1453.—Rapin.

TALBOT (Charles), earl, afterwards duke of Shrewſbury, was deſcended from the above, and born in 1660. He was one of the firſt promoters of the revolution, for which he was created a duke, and made lord chamberlain, viceroy of Ireland, and high treaſurer. He died at London without iſſue in 1717.—Eng. Peerage.

TALBOT (William), an Engliſh prelate, was born at Litchfield, and admitted a commoner of Oriel college, Oxford, in 1674. By the intereſt of his relation the earl of Shrewſbury he was preferred to the deanry of Worceſter in 1691, and in 1699 to the biſhopric of Oxford. In 1715 he was tranſlated to Saliſbury, and in 1721 to Durham. He died in 1730. His ſermons have been publiſhed in one volume octavo.—Hutchinſon's Hiſt. Durham.

TALBOT (Charles lord), chancellor of Great Britain, was the ſon of the laſt mentioned. He was an excellent lawyer, and a man of high virtue and public integrity. He died in 1737, aged 51.—Birch's Illuſt. Characters.

TALHAIARN, a celebrated Welſh bard, who flouriſhed in the ſixth century. He compoſed a prayer, which became the general formulary of the bardic circles. He became a hermit, and was regarded as a ſaint. —Owen's Cambr. Biog.

TALIACOTIUS (Gaſpar,) or Tagliacocci, profeſſor in medicine and ſurgery at Bologna, his native place, where he died in 1553, at the age of 64. He became famous by his book "De Curtorum chirurgia per inſitionem;" in which he pretends to teach the art of repairing the loſs of the noſe, ears, and lips, in caſes of mutilation, diſeaſe, or deformity. He is ſaid alſo to have practiſed what he has taught, and his ſtatue in the lecture room at Bologna repreſents him with a noſe in his hand. Butler in his Hudibras has a whimſical alluſion to this phyſician:

'So learned Taliacotius from,' &c.—Moreri.

TALIESIN, the moſt celebrated of the Welſh bards who flouriſhed in the ſixth century. Many of his compoſitions are printed in the Archaiology of Wales.—Owen's Cambr. Biog.

TALLARD (Camille d'Hoſtun count de), marſhal of France, was born in 1652, in Dauphiny. He ſerved under Louis XIV. in Holland, in 1672, and diſplayed ſuch talents and bravery that Turenne gave him a diſtinguiſhed command at the battles of Mulhauſen and Turkheim. In 1693, he was made lieutenant-general, and in 1697 he was ſent ambaſſador to England, to treat about the ſucceſſion of Charles II. to the crown of Spain. The war being renewed, he aſſumed the command on the Rhine in 1702, and the year following was made marſhal of France. At this time he laid ſiege to Landau, and having gained a great victory over the prince of Heſſe, who endeavoured to raiſe the ſiege, the place was ſoon taken. On that occaſion he wrote to Louis, ſaying that "he had taken more colours and ſtandards than his majeſty had loſt ſoldiers." In 1704 he was defeated at Hochſtet by the duke of Marlborough, taken priſoner, and conveyed to England, where he remained ſeven years. On his return to France in 1712 he was created a duke, and in 1726 was nominated ſecretary of ſtate. He died in 1728.—Moreri.

TALLIS (Thomas), an Engliſh muſician, in the 16th century. He was gentleman of the chapel to Edward VI. and queen Mary, and his ſalary is ſaid to have been ſevenpence-halfpenny a day. In the reign of Elizabeth he was appointed organiſt in conjunction with Bird, with whom he publiſhed a collection of hymns for church ſervice.—He died in 1585. —Hawkins. Burney.

TAMERLANE, called by his relations Timur-bec, or Timur-the-lame, was, according to ſome hiſtorians, the ſon of a ſhepherd, and to others, of royal deſcent. He was born in 1335, at Kelch, in the territory of the ancient Sogdiana, and early in life teſtified uncommon courage and an enterprizing diſpoſition. Having gained a number of followers of a ſimilar diſpoſition, he made himſelf maſter of Balk, the capital of Khoraſan, after which he made an eaſy conqueſt of the province of Candahar. He next ſubdued the whole of antient Perſia, and then took Bagdad. Flaſhed with his ſucceſs he marched into India, where he took Delhi the capital, and thus gained poſſeſſion of immenſe treaſures. But while he was engaged in this expedition Bagdad revolted, on which he haſtened back, delivered the city up to pillage, and put to death above 80,000 perſons. He alſo invaded Syria, and took Damaſcus. In this ſplendid career the Greek emperor and ſome inferior princes implored his aſſiſtance againſt Bajazet, emperor of the Turks. Tamerlane ſent to him to withdraw from before Conſtantinople, and to replace the princes whom he had depoſed. Bajazet returned a fierce anſwer, on which Tamerlane marched againſt him, and after a battle of three days the Turkiſh emperor was defeated and taken priſoner. Different and very irreconcileable accounts are given of the conqueror's treatment of his captive: ſome aſſert that he was confined in an iron cage, and expoſed to ſcorn and contempt, while others relate that Tamerlane behaved to him and his family with the greateſt liberality. The laſt ſeems to be the moſt likely. Tamerlane fixed the ſeat of his vaſt empire at Samarcand, where he received the homage of numerous ſovereigns, and among the reſt the ambaſſadors of the emperor Manuel Paleologus, and Henry III. king of Caſtille. He died in 1405, while engaged in preparing for an expedition againſt China.—Univ. Hiſt.

TANAQUIL, or Caia Cæcilia, wife of Tarquin, fifth king of Rome. She was a native of Tarquinia; and ſo well ſkilled in augury that ſhe perſuaded her huſband to go to Rome, where he was elected king. After he was murdered ſhe raiſed her ſon Servius Tullius to the throne. She was a woman of ſuch liberality that the Romans preſerved her girdle with great veneration.—Livy.

TANNER (Thomas), a learned prelate, was born at Market Lavington, in Wiltſhire, in 1674. He received his education at Queen's college, Oxford. In 1695 he was elected fellow of All-ſouls, and conſecrated biſhop of St. Aſaph in 1732. He died in 1735, and was buried in the cathedral of Chriſt-church, Oxford. He wrote, Notitia Monaſtica, or an Account of all the Religious Houſes in England and Wales, folio; Bibliotheca Britannico-Hibernica. He alſo contributed to the laſt edition of Wood's Athenæ Oxonienſes.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

TANSILLO (Lewis), an Italian poet, was born at Nola, about 1510. He ſpent a great part of his life in the family of the marquis de Villafranca, viceroy of Naples, and is ſaid to have died judge of Gayeta, in 1570. He wrote in his youth a poem entitled il Vindemiatore (or the Vintager), printed at Naples in 1534. On account of its indecency all his works were laid under an interdict, but having afterwards preſented another to the pope on the Tears of St. Peter, his holineſs took off the prohibition from all his poems except the culpable one.—Tiraboſchi.

TARIN (Peter), a French phyſician, was born at Courtenai, and died in 1761. His works are, 1. Adverſaria Anatomica, 4to.; 2. Anatomical Dictionary, 4to.; 3. Oſteographia, 4to.; 4. the Art of Diſſecting, 2 vols. 12mo; 5. Treatiſe on Ligaments; 6. Obſervations on Medicine and Surgery, 3 vols. 12mo.; 7. Deſcription of the Muſcles, 4to. —Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

TARLETON (Richard), a celebrated actor and jeſter, was born at Condover, in Salop. He performed at the Bull, in Biſhopſgate-ſtreet, the Judge's character in a play called Henry V. which was prior to that of Shakſpeare. Stowe ſays, he was conſtituted one of the queen's players in 1583. He died about 1589. He was the author of a dramatic performance, called, the Seven Deadly Sins. Many of his jeſts have been printed in different books.—Biog. Dram.

TARPA (Spurius Mætius), a Roman critic in the time of Auguſtus. He was appointed with four others in the temple of Apollo, to examine the merit of poetical pieces and plays. Cicero and Horace mention him with honour.—Bayle.

TARPEIA, the daughter of Tarpeius, governor of the capitol under Romulus. She betrayed that place to the Sabinian general Tatius, on condition of receiving what his ſoldiers wore on their left arms, meaning their bracelets of gold. When Tatius entered the place he threw his bracelet and ſhield on Tarpeia, in which he was imitated by all his followers, ſo that ſhe periſhed under the weight. She was buried on the mount which was afterwards called by her name, and from whence perſons convicted of treaſon were precipitated.—Livy.

TARQUIN the elder, 5th king of Rome, was the ſon of Greek parents, and born in the town of Tarquinii, in Etruria. His name was Lucumon, which he changed on going to Rome by the advice of his wife Tanaquil. He ſo endeared himſelf to the Romans by the liberality of his manners, that Ancus Martius nominated him guardian of his children. The people on the death of that monarch placed the crown on the head of Tarquin, who reigned with great moderation and popularity. He defeated the Latins and Sabines, and conquered Etruria. He encreaſed the number of the ſenate, repaired the capitol, which he ornamented with ſeveral elegant buildings, and formed aqueducts and ſubterraneous ſewers. He alſo introduced regulations for the magiſtrates, and ordered that the axes carried before them ſhould be ſurrounded by bundles of ſticks. He was aſſaſſinated by the ſons of his predeceſſor, B.C. 578, and in the 80th year of his age.—Livy.

TARQUIN the ſecond, called the Superb, was grandſon of the preceding. He married Tullia, daughter of Servius Tullius, and at her inſtigation murdered his father-in-law, and ſeized on the kingdom. His reign was tyrannical and extravagant, ſo that his ſubjects were about to revolt, when, to divert their attention, he engaged in a foreign war. But while he was at the ſiege of Ardea, the infamous conduct of his ſon proved the ruin of his family. [See LUCRETIA and BRUTUS.] The Romans roſe and ſhut the gates againſt Tarquin, who retired to Etruria, where he died in the 90th year of his age. He purchaſed the famous Sybilline books, and finiſhed the capitol.—Ibid.

TARTINI (Joſeph), a celebrated muſician, was born in 1692, at Piſano, in Iſtria. He became ſo excellent a performer on the violin, that he was appointed maſter of the band in the church of St. Anthony at Padua. He died in 1770. His works are Sonatas, and a Treatiſe on Muſic, 1754.—Burney.

TARUFFI (Emilio), an Italian painter, was born at Bologna in 1632, and died in 1694. His landſcapes are beautiful, and the ſcenes and figures are very animated.—Pilkington.

TARRANTIUS (Lucius), an ancient aſ-trologer, who was the intimate friend of Cicero. He made two famous horoſcopes, one of Romulus, the other of Rome. He has been called the Prince of Aſtrologers.—Moreri.

TARTAGLIA (Nicholas), a mathematician, was born at Breſcia, and died about 1558. He publiſhed an Italian verſion of Euclid, with a Commentary, printed at Venice in 1543, folio. He was alſo the author of a Treatiſe on Numbers and Meaſures, in Italian, fol. 1556.—Ibid.

TASKER (William), an Engliſh divine and poet, was born in Devonſhire. He took a bachelor's degree at Exeter college, Oxford, entered into orders, and had the living of Iddeſleigh in his native county. He died in 1800. His principal works are, Odes of Pindar and Horace, tranſlated into Engliſh verſe, 3 vols. 8vo; Ode to the Warlike Genius of Britain; Letters on Phyſiognomy. —Gent. Mag.

TASSO (Torquato), an Italian poet, was born at Sorrento, in the kingdom of Naples, in 1544. His father was ſecretary to the prince of Salerno, who, being charged to repreſent to Charles V. the injuſtice of the viceroy of Naples, was obliged to fly to Rome, and was accompanied by Bernard Taſſo and his ſon, who, though he was but nine years old, wrote verſes on their misfortune, in which he compared himſelf to young Aſcanius eſcaping with Æneas. Young Taſſo was ſent to Padua to ſtudy the law, and while there he wrote his poem of Rinaldo, at the age of ſeventeen. In 1565 he was taken into the ſervice of the duke of Ferrara, with whoſe ſiſter the princeſs Eleanora he fell in love, and this fatal paſſion proved the ſource of that melancholy humour which preyed upon him twenty years. Quitting Ferrara he went to his ſiſter at Sorrento, and was joyfully received by her; but his flame becoming ſtronger by abſence, he returned to the court of Ferrara, where, in the preſence of the duke, he had the imprudence to embrace the princeſs with tranſport. Alphonſo with great coolneſs ordered him to be taken to a hoſpital, as a man deprived of his reaſon. At the deſire of the duke de Gonzaga he obtained his liberty in 1586, on which he retired to Naples, where for ſome time he enjoyed repoſe. Pope Clement VIII. who was a great admirer of his talents, called him to Rome, where he was received with honourable marks of diſtinction, and great preparations were made for ſolemnly crowning him in the capitol as the prince of poets, when he fell ſick, and died on the evening before the intended ceremony, April 15, 1595. The work which has immortalized his memory is the epic poem of Jeruſalem Delivered, tranſlated into Engliſh by Hoole. All the works of Taſſo were printed at Florence, in 6 vols. folio, in 1724.—Life by Manzo in Italian.

TASSO (Bernardo), the father of the above, wrote a poem called Amadis, printed at Venice in 1560, 4to. His Letters were printed at Padua in 1733, in 3 vols. 8vo. He died at Rome in 1575.—Tiraboſchi.

TASSONI (Alexander), an Italian poet, was born at Modena in 1565, and died in 1635. His Secchia Rapita, or, Rape of the Bucket, a mock-heroic poem, was written on the occaſion of the war between Modena and Bologna. Beſides this he wrote, Obſervations on Petrarch; an Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory, &c.—Life by Muratori.

TATE (Nahum), a poet, was a native of Dublin, and intimate with Dryden. He was appointed laureat in 1692. He died in 1715. Tate wrote ſeveral poems, the beſt of which is that on the death of queen Anne. In conjunction with Brady he tranſlated the Pſalms into metre.—Cibber.

TATIAN, a diſciple of Juſtin Martyr, was a native of Syria, and educated among the Greeks in the pagan religion, which he renounced for chriſtianity. He ſtill however retained the Platonic ideas. He fell into dangerous errors, particularly that of Marcion, reſpecting two ſupreme principles. He rejected ſome of St. Paul's Epiſtles, and formed a ſect called the Encratites, or continent. Tatian was the author of a Harmony of the four Goſpels, but nothing remains of his except an Apology for the Chriſtian Religion, printed at Oxford in 1700, 8vo.—Dupin.

TATISCHEF (Vaſſili), the compiler of an unfiniſhed Hiſtory of Ruſſia, who died in 1750. His work is an unconnected ſeries of chronicles.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

TATIUS, king of the Sabines, who made war againſt the Romans, and by treachery obtained poſſeſſion of the capitol. [See TARPEIA.] The mediation of the Sabine women effected a reconciliation, and Tatius brought his ſubjects to reſide at Rome, where he ſhared the government with Romulus, who cauſed him to be murdered at Lavinium, B. C. 742.—Livy.

TATIUS (Achilles), a native of Alexandria, who embraced the chriſtian religion, and wrote a Commentary on the Phænomena of Aratus, which is extant; alſo a Greek romance, called the Amours of Leucippus and Clitophon, printed in 1540, 12mo.—Voſſius.

TAVARONE (Lazarus), an hiſtorical and portrait painter, was born at Genoa in 1556, and died in 1631. He was the diſciple of Luca Cangiagio, and ſucceeded him as painter to the king of Spain.—Pilkington.

TAUBMAN (Frederic), a German critic, was born in Franconia, about 1565. He was profeſſor of poetry and the belles-lettres at Wirtemberg, and died in 1613. He wrote Latin Poems and commentaries on Plautus and Virgil.—Moreri.

TAVERNIER (John Baptiſt), a traveller, was born at Paris in 1605. He went through Turkey, Perſia, and the Eaſt Indies, ſix times, and died at Moſcow in 1689. He gained a great fortune by trading in jewels, with which he purchaſed an eſtate, and was ennobled by Louis XIV. His Collection of Travels in 6 vols. 12mo. is greatly eſteemed, and has been tranſlated into Engliſh.—Moreri.

TAYLOR (Jeremiah), a learned prelate, was the ſon of a barber at Cambridge, where he received his education in Caius college, after which he entered into orders, and became ſo eminent a preacher that archbiſhop Laud procured him a fellowſhip of All Souls college, Oxford. He was alſo appointed chaplain to that prelate, and rector of Uppingham, in the county of Rutland. In 1642 he received the degree of doctor in divinity by mandate. On the decline of the royal cauſe, in which he was a ſufferer, he retired into Caermarthenſhire, where he taught ſchool for a livelihood. He afterwards went with lord Conway to Ireland, where he wrote his Caſes of Conſcience, a work of ſterling value. In 1661 he was made biſhop of Down and Connor, privy counſellor, and vice chancellor of Trinity college, Dublin. He died in 1667. Biſhop Taylor wrote, the Great Exemplar, or the Life and Death of Jeſus Chriſt, folio; an excellent practical book called Holy Living and Dying, 8vo.; and ſeveral ſermons and controverſial and pious treatiſes.—Fun. Serm. by Ruſt. Wood.

TAYLOR (John), commonly called the water-poet, was born at Glouceſter, and after going through his Accidence at the ſchool there was bound apprentice to a waterman in London; but notwithſtanding the laborioufneſs of his employment he wrote ſeveral books, which were collected into one volume folio. On the breaking out of the rebellion he went to Oxford, where he kept a victualling houſe, which was much reſorted to by the ſtudents, and Taylor did ſome ſervice to the royal cauſe by his ſatires and ſongs. When Oxford ſurrendered he retired to Weſtminſter, and ſet up the ſign of the Mourning Crown. This, however, he was obliged to remove, on which he hung up his own picture, with the following verſes:

There's many a head ſtands for a ſign;
Then, gentle reader, why not mine?

On the other ſide,

Though I deſerve not I deſire,
The laurel wreath, the poet's hire.

He died in 1654, aged 74.—Wood

TAYLOR (John), a learned diſſenting miniſter, was born near Lancaſter. He was paſtor of a congregation at Norwich many years, and removed from thence to Warrington, where he ſuperintended the academy. He died in 1761. His greateſt work was an Hebrew and Engliſh Concordance, in 2 vols. folio. He alſo wrote a book on Original Sin, and other theological treatiſes.—Gen. B. D.

TAYLOR (John), a learned critic, was born in 1703 at Shrewſbury, where his father was a barber. He received his education at the grammar-ſchool of his native town, after which he was ſent to St. John's college, Cambridge, where he obtained a fellowſhip. He took his doctor's degree in the civil law, became librarian and regiſtrar of the univerſity, and a member of doctors' commons. But afterwards he entered into orders, and was preferred to a canon-reſidentiaryſhip of St. Paul's, and the archdeaconry of Buckingham. He died in 1766. Dr. Taylor publiſhed excellent editions of Lyſias and Demoſthenes, and wrote a work entitled, Elements of the Civil Law.—Anecd. of Bowyer.

TAYLOR (Brook), a mathematician, was born at Edmonton, in Middleſex, in 1685. In 1701 he entered of St. John's college, Cambridge, and in 1708 wrote his Treatiſe on the Centre of Oſcillation. In 1709 he took the degree of bachelor of laws. In 1714 he was choſen ſecretary to the royal ſociety, and in the ſame year took his degree of doctor of laws. He publiſhed ſeveral elaborate works on mathematical ſubjects, the principal of which is his Treatiſe on Linear Perſpective. He died in 1731.—Gen Biog. Dict.

TAYLOR (Henry), a divine, who was for many years rector of Cranley and vicar of Portſmouth. He was an Arian, and wrote ſeveral learned works as; 1. An Eſſay on the Beauty of the Divine Economy, 8vo. 2. Ben Mordecai's Apology for embracing Chriſtianity, 4to. and 8vo. 3. Farther Thoughts on the Nature of the Grand Apoſtacy of the Chriſtian Churches, 8vo.; and 4. Ruin upon Ruin! Rout upon Rout! Confuſion worſe confounded! 8vo. He died in 1785.—Gent. Mag.

TEILO, a Britiſh ſaint. He founded a college at Landaff, which was afterwards erected into a biſhopric. There are ſeveral churches dedicated to him in Wales. He lived in the fifth century.—Owen's Camb. Biog.

TEISSIER (Anthony), a French proteſtant writer, was born at Montpellier in 1632. On the revocation of the edict of Nantes he went to Pruſſia, and was appointed hiſtoriographer, and obtained a penſion. He died at Berlin in 1715. His works are, 1. Panegyrics on great Men, 4 vols. 12mo.; 2. Catalogus Auctorum qui Librorum Catalogos, Indices, Bibliothecas, Virorum Litteratorum Elogia, Vitam, aut Orationes Funebres, ſcriptis conſignarunt, 8vo; 3. Lives of Illuſtrous Princes, &c.—Moreri.

TELL (William), one of the principal confederates who reſtored the independence of Swiſſerland in 1307. Geiſler, the Auſtrian governor for the emperor Albert, put his cap on a pike which was fixed on a public place at Altorf, and all who paſſed were required to pay their obeiſance to it. This was refuſed by Tell, who was ſentenced to ſhoot an arrow at an apple placed on the head of his own ſon. He fortunately ſucceeded in cleaving the apple without injuring the child. Geiſler, obſerving another arrow in his girdle, aſked what it was for, to which Tell boldly replied, "to have ſlain thee if I had killed my ſon." The governor on this ordered him to be bound, and put into a boat in order to convey him to a dungeon in his own caſtle. But a ſtorm coming on the boatmen declared they ſhould be loſt if Tell, who was accounted the beſt navigator on the lake, was not entruſted with the helm. On this Geiſler ordered him to be releaſed, and Tell ſteering for a point of land, ſince called the rock of Tell, jumped aſhore, and gained the mountains. Shortly after he ſhot the governor, and the confederates having taking arms effected the deliverance of their country. This ſtory, however, is conſidered as partly romantic by ſome writers. —Glareanus Deſcript. Helvit. Moreri.

TELLIER (Michael le), a French lawyer and ſtateſman, was born at Paris in 1603. After paſſing through different offices, cardinal Mazarine propoſed him to Louis XIII. for the place of ſecretary of ſtate, which he filled with conſiderable reputation till 1666, when he reſigned it to his ſon. In 1677 he was made chancellor, and diſgraced himſelf by propoſing the revocation of the edict of Nantes, on ſigning which he profanely exclaimed, Nunc dimittis ſervum tuum, Domine! He died in 1685.—Moreri.

TELLIER (Francis Michael le), marquis de Louvois, ſon of the preceding, was born at Paris in 1641. At the age of twenty-three he became miniſter of war, in which office he diſplayed great activity, and was crowned with favours by the king. After the death of Colbert in 1683 he had the charge of ſuperintendant of the buildings, arts, and manufactures, of France. Louvois had great abilities, but he was arbitrary, mercenary, and oppreſſive. He gained a complete aſcendancy over Louis XIV., and even went ſo far as to remove the guards whom the king had appointed. But being one day received with ſeverity by Louis at the council-board, he retired to his apartment, and died of chagrin in 1691 —Ibid.

TEMPESTA (Antonio), a painter, was born at Florence in 1555, and died in 1630. He was the diſciple of Strada, and excelled in landſcapes with figures. He was alſo an engraver —Felibien.

TEMPLE (William), a celebrated Engliſh ſtateſman, was the ſon of ſir John Temple, maſter of the rolls in Ireland, and was born in London in 1629. He received part of his education under his maternal uncle, Dr. Henry Hammond, and next at the ſchool of Biſhop Stortford, from whence he removed to Emanuel college, Cambridge. At the reſtoration he became a member of the parliament of Ireland, but ſoon left that kingdom and ſettled in England. He rendered his country important ſervices as ambaſſador to the United States; particularly in effecting the league between England, Holland, and Sweden, in 1668, and in bringing about the marriage of the prince of Orange with Mary, daughter of the duke of York. In 1680 he retired from public affairs, and divided his time between his books and his gardens, but he was often conſulted by the miniſters, and by king William in perſon. He died at his ſeat of Moor Park, in Surrey, in 1700. His works conſiſt of Memoirs of what paſſed in his public employments; Letters; Miſcellanies; and Obſervations on the United Provinces of the Netherlands, in 2 vols. folio. His ſon John Temple was appointed ſecretary at war immediately after the revolution, but drowned himſelf the ſame year —Biog. Brit.

TEMPLEMAN (Peter), a phyſician, was born at Dorcheſter in 1711. He was educated at the Charter-houſe, next at Trinity college, Cambridge, and laſtly at Leyden under Boerhaave. Having taken his doctor's degree he ſettled in practice at London, and on the eſtabliſhment of the Britiſh muſeum was appointed keeper of the reading room, which place he reſigned on being elected ſecretary to the ſociety of arts. He died in 1769. Dr. Templeman wrote ſome poetical pieces, and tranſlated Norden's Travels in Egypt. He is not to be confounded with Thomas Templeman, a ſchool-maſter at Bury, in Suffolk, who publiſhed Tables of the Size and Population of the different kingdoms of the World, folio —Aneca. of Bowyer.

TENCIN (Claudine-Alexandrine-Guerin de), was the ſiſter of the cardinal de Tencin, who died in 1758. She was born at Grenoble, and took the veil in the monaſtery of Montfleury; but with the conſent of the pope ſhe threw off the religious habit, and entered into the gay world at Paris, where ſhe led the faſhion for ſome time, and was celebrated for her intrigues, for which ſhe was once confined in the Chatelet, and afterwards in the Baſtile. She died in 1749. Madame de Tencin wrote the Siege of Calais, or the Misfortunes of Love, and ſome other romances.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

TENIERS (David), called the old, a painter, was born at Antwerp in 1582. He was the diſciple of Rubens, after which he went to Rome, where he imitated the manner of Elſheimer. He returned to Antwerp, and died in 1649. His ſubjects are chemiſts, country fairs, ale-houſes, and merry meetings, painted in an admirable ſtyle. His ſon David, called the young, was born at Antwerp in 1610, and died there in 1694. He ſurpaſſed his father. He painted night ſcenes, feaſts, the temptation of St. Anthony, &c. His pieces are numerous, and valuable. Abraham, another ſon of old Teniers, was alſo a good painter, and particularly excelled in a knowlege of the chiaro obſcuro —De Piles. Felibien.

TENISON (Thomas), an eminent prelate, was born at Cottenham, in Cambridgeſhire, in 1636, and educated at the free ſchool of Norwich, from whence he removed to Corpus Chriſti college, Cambridge, where he took his degrees. In 1680 he was preſented to the rectory of St. Martin in the Fields, and in 1689 to the archdeaconry of London. He was ſo ſtrenuous an advocate for the proteſtant cauſe in the reign of James II. that king William advanced him to the biſhopric of Lincoln in 1691, and to the ſee of Canterbury in 1694. He died in 1715. He wrote ſome ſermons, tracts againſt popery, and publiſhed the Remains of Lord Chancellor Bacon, in one volume, octavo. He founded a library and ſchool in St. Martin's pariſh.—Le Neve's Lives of the Abps.

TENTZELIUS (William Erneſt), a learned German, was born at Armſtadt, in Thuringia, in 1659, and died in 1707. His works are, 1. Saxonia Numiſmatica, 4 vols.; 2. Supplementum Hiſtoriæ Gothanæ, 3 vols. to.—Moreri.

TERBURG (Gerard), a Dutch painter, was born at Zwol, in Holland, in 1608. He was employed at the court of Spain, where he gained great wealth, and was made a chevalier. On his return to his own country he ſettled at Daventer, and was choſen one of the magiſtrates. He died in 1681. He painted portraits, converſations, and humorous ſcenes —Houbraken.

TERENCE (Publius Terentius), a dramatic poet, was a native of Africa, and ſold as a ſlave to Terentius Lucanus, a Roman ſenator, who gave him his liberty on account of his genius. He ſtudied Greek with ſuch aſſiduity as to tranſfuſe the beſt comedies from that language into the Latin: of which, however, only ſix remain, the ſtyle of which is elegant and the ſentiments delicate. He is ſaid to have been drowned in a voyage from Greece, B. C. 159. The beſt editions of Terence are thoſe of Weſterhovius, 2 vols. 4to., Amſt. 1726; Edinb. 12mo. 1758; Cambridge 4to., 1723; and that of Zeunius, 8vo. Lipſ. 1774.—Biog. Claſſica.

TERRASSON (Andrew), a French divine and prieſt of the oratory, was born at Lyons, and died at Paris in 1723. His Sermons in 4 vols. 12mo are diſtinguiſhed by their eloquence.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

TERRASSON (John), brother of the above, was alſo of the congregation of the oratory, which he quitted contrary to the wiſh of his father, who was ſo religious that he deſtined all his ſons for the monaſtic order. In 1707 the abbé Terraſſon was admitted a member of the academy of ſciences, and in 1721 he obtained the profeſſorſhip of philoſophy, Greek, and Latin. He died at Paris in 1750. His works are, 1. Critical Diſſertation on the Iliad, 2 vols. 12mo. This has been tranſlated into Engliſh. 2. Reflections in Favour of Law's Syſtem. This was a defence of the Miſſiſippi project 3. Sethos, a moral romance. This has alſo been tranſlated into Engliſh, in 2 vols. 8vo. 4. A tranſlation of Diodorus Siculus, in 7 vols. 12mo. Gaſpard Terraſſon, another brother of John, became a member of the oratory, which he afterwards quitted. He died in 1752. His ſermons have been printed.—Ibid.

TERRASSON (Anthony), of the ſame family as the above, was born at Paris in 1705. He diſtinguiſhed himſelf as an advocate, and compoſed, by order of the chancellor D'Agueſſeau, the Hiſtory of Roman Juriſprudence, folio; for which he was named cenſor royal, and profeſſor in the royal college. He died in 1782. Beſides the above work he wrote Miſcellanies of Hiſtory, Literature, &c. 12mo.—Ibid.

TERTRE (John Baptiſt), a dominican, was born at Calais in 1610. He had been both a ſoldier and ſailor before he entered into the monaſtic ſtate. He afterwards became a zealous miſſionary in America, from whence he returned in 1658, and died at Paris in 1687. He wrote a General Hiſtory of the Weſt India Iſlands belonging to the French, 4 vols. 4to.—Moreri.

TERTRE (Francis Joachim Duport du), a French jeſuit, was born at St. Malo in 1715, and died in 1759. He wrote, An Abridgment of the Hiſtory of England, 3 vols. 12mo.; a Hiſtory of Conſpiracies, 10 vols. 12mo.; Abridgment of the Hiſtory of Spain, 5 vols. 12mo.; and ſome other works.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

TERPANDER, a lyric poet and muſician of Leſbos, 675 B. C. He is ſaid to have appeaſed a tumult at Sparta, by the melody and ſweetneſs of his notes. He added three ſtrings to the lyre, which before had only four.

TERTULLIAN (Quintus Septimius Florens), one of the fathers of the church, was a native of Carthage, and bred to the bar. The conſtancy of the martyrs converted him to chriſtianity, which he defended with great zeal and eloquence. From Carthage he went to Rome, and in the perſecution under Severus he drew up a famous apology for the chriſtians. In the latter part of his life he fell into the errors of montaniſm. He died about 216. The beſt editions of Tertullian's works are, that of Rigaltius, Paris, folio; and of Venice 1746, folio; and that of Semler, 4 vols. 8vo., Halli 1770.—Cave. Dupin.

TERWESTEN (Auguſtin), a painter, was born at the Hague in 1649. He improved himſelf in Italy, where he ſtudied the works of the beſt maſters. By his means the academy at the Hague was revived, and that at Berlin inſtituted. He died in 1711. He had two brothers, Elias and Matthew. The firſt excelled in painting fruits and flowers, and died in 1724; the other painted hiſtorical ſubjects, and died in 1735.—Pilkington.

TESTA (Peter), an Italian painter and engraver, was born at Lucca. He was drowned in the Tiber in 1650, endavouring to recover his hat, which had been blown into the river while he was ſitting on the bank ſketching a deſign.—Ibid.

TESTI (Fulvio), an eminent lyric poet, and accounted the Horace of modern Italy. He was born at Ferrara in 1593 of a noble family. He became miniſter of ſtate to the duke of Modena; but being accuſed of treaſon he was beheaded in 1646.—Tiraboſchi.

THAIS, a famous courtezan, who corrupted the youth of Athens. She accompanied Alexander, who was perſuaded by her to deſtroy the city of Perſepolis. After the death of the Macedonian conqueror ſhe became the wife of Ptolemy, king of Egypt.—Bayle.

THALES, a philoſopher of antiquity, was born B.C. 640, at Miletus. After travelling many years, particularly into Egypt, where he ſtudied the mathematics, he returned to his native place, and opened ſchool. Among his diſciples were Anaximander, Anaximenes, and Pythagoras, and he was often viſited by Solon and Thraſybulus. He is generally allowed to have been the father of the Greek philoſophy, and ſtands firſt on the liſt of the ſeven wiſe men. His doctrine was, that water is the firſt principle of all bodies; and that God is the mind which pervades the univerſe. He made ſome inventions in geometry, and firſt obſerved the apparent diameter of the ſun. He likewiſe obſerved the nature and courſe of eclipſes, and divided the year into 365 days. Thales died B.C. 545. —Diog. Laert. Stanley.

THELLUSSON (Peter Iſaac), a native of Geneva, who ſettled as a merchant in London, where he acquired a prodigious fortune, and died in 1798. He left about 100,000l. to his family, and the remainder of his property, conſiderably above half a million, is to accumulate to a certain period, when, if there are none of his deſcendants and name exiſting, the whole is to be applied by parliament towards paying off the national debt. In about one hundred years the amount will be about one hundred and forty-three millions. The family have endeavoured to ſet aſide the will in chancery, but without ſucceſs.—Gent. Mag.

THEMISON, a celebrated phyſician of antiquity, who lived before the chriſtian æra, and was the diſciple of Aſclepiades. He departed from the old ſyſtem, and formed a medical ſect called Methodiſts.—Juvenal.

THEMISIUS, an orator and philoſopher, was born in Paphlagonia in the fourth century. He acquired ſo great a reputation that Theodoſius the Great made him prefect of Conſtantinople, though a pagan. He was very intimate with St. Gregory Nazianzen. He died about A. D. 410. He wrote, Commentaries on the Philoſophy of Plato and Ariſtotle; the laſt only is extant. There remain ſome of his Diſcourſes, printed at Paris in 1684, folio.—Voſſius.

THEMISTOCLES, a celebrated Athenian general, was the ſon of Neocles, who diſinherited him for his profligacy. This diſgrace rouſed the ambition of Themiſtocles, who courted the favour of the people, and with ſuch ſucceſs, that when Xerxes invaded Greece he was at the head of the republic of Athens, and by his determined ſpirit and addreſs occaſioned the defeat of the Perſian fleet near Salamis. He afterwards, by a ſtratagem, prevailed on Xerxes to abandon Greece, and for thus ſaving his country he received diſtinguiſhed honours. He then turned his attention to the ſtrengthening of the fortifications, improving the harbours, and increaſing the navy; but in the midſt of his glory he was accuſed of intereſted deſigns to aggrandize himſelf, and was baniſhed. Themiſtocles then threw himſelf upon the generoſity of Artaxerxes, who received him with kindneſs, though he had formerly ſet a price upon his head. He died at Magneſia, in the Perſian dominions, B. C. 449, aged 65.—Plutarch. Corn. Nepos.

THEOBALD (Lewis), a dramatic writer, was born at Sittingbourn, in Kent, and died in 1742. He wrote ſeveral dramatic pieces of little merit. He is chiefly known by his edition of Shakeſpeare in 8 vols., 12mo., which, though depreciated by Warburton, poſſeſſes conſiderable merit, and ſhews no want of judgment.—Biog. Dram.

THEOCRITUS, a Greek poet, who flouriſhed at Syracuſe B. C. 282. Little is known of him, only that his friend and patron was Ptolemy Philadelphus. He is ſaid to have been ſtrangled by order of Hiero, king of Syracuſe, for having written a ſatire againſt him. Of his various works we have only the Idylls, which are remarkable for their pleaſing ſimplicity and ſweetneſs, and Epigrams. The beſt editions are, Warton's, Oxon. 1770, 2 vols. 4to.; Reiſke, Lipſ. 2 vols. 4to. 1760. Theocritus has been tranſlated into Engliſh by Polwhele, 2 vols. 8vo.—Biog. Claſſica.

THEODORE. See NEWHOFF.

THEODATUS, king of the Goths in Italy, was placed on the throne in 534 by his aunt, Amalaſonta, who married him; but ſome time afterwards he cauſed her to be ſtrangled. The emperor Juſtinian declared war againſt him, and Beliſarius, his general, marched into Italy, on which the ſoldiers of Theodatus depoſed him and placed Vitiges on the throne, who put him to death in 536.—Univ. Hiſt.

THEODORUS of Mopſueſtes, ſo named from the place of which he was biſhop, a city in Cilicia. He died in 428. His works, which favour neſtorianiſm and ſocinianiſm, were condemned in the fifth general council. What remains are a commentary on the Pſalms; another on the Twelve Minor Prophets; and ſome Fragments.—Lupin.

THEODORET, a father of the church, was born in 386. About 420 he was made biſhop, which office he diſcharged with great reputation. He was depoſed in a ſynod at Epheſus for eſpouſing the cauſe of Neſtorius, but was reſtored in the general council of Chalcedon. He died about 460. He wrote an Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory; Commentaries on the Scriptures; Lives of Saints, and other works, published by Sirmond in Greek and Latin, 4 vols. folio, 1642, and a fifth volume was added in 1684.—Ibid.

THEODORIC, the firſt king of the Goths in Italy, was the natural ſon of Theodomir, ſecond king of the Oſtrogoths, and given as an hoſtage to Leo I. in 461. He rendered great ſervices to the emperor Zeno, who honoured him with the conſulate in 484. He was afterwards ſent againſt Odoacer, whom he put to death, and made himſelf maſter of all Italy. In 509 he eſpouſed a ſiſter of Clovis, king of France. Theodoric diſplayed the qualities of a great prince. He regulated the adminiſtration of juſtice, allayed religious diſputes, reviſed the laws, and encouraged commerce. He died in 526. —Moreri.

THEODOSIUS, a Roman emperor, was born in 346 at Cauca, a city in Spain, of a noble family. His father, count Theodoſius, was beheaded by order of Valens in 376. The ſon was called to court by Cratian, who aſſociated him in the empire, and appointed him to govern Thrace and thoſe provinces which Valentinian had poſſeſſed in the Eaſt. He defeated the Goths in ſeveral actions, and compelled them to ſue for peace. His fame ſpread into Perſia, and Sapor III. ſolicited his alliance. In 385 a conſpiracy was formed againſt him, but it was diſcovered, and Theodoſius diſplayed the magnanimity of his diſpoſition by pardoning the criminals. But in 390 he committed a cruel action in cauſing the inhabitants of Theſſalonica to be put to the ſword, on account of a ſedition and riot in their city. St. Ambroſe was ſo ſtruck with horror by this tranſaction that he refuſed to admit Theodoſius into the church till he had given proofs of repentance. The emperor having defeated Maximus marched to Rome, where he received the honours of a triumph, after which he returned to Conſtantinople and defeated the barbarians who had ravaged Macedonia and Thrace. He then turned his arms againſt the uſurper Eugenius, who had been placed on the throne after the murder of Valentinian. Having defeated him at Aquileia, he cauſed him to be beheaded in 394. Theodoſius died the year following at Milan.—Univ. Hiſt.

THEODOSIUS II. ſucceeded his father Arcadius, ſon of the preceding, in 408, under the guardianſhip of his ſiſter Pulcheria. She cauſed him to marry Athenais, daughter of Leontius the philoſopher, who being baptized took the name of Eudocia, [ſee EUDOCIA]. Theodoſius defeated the Perſians with great ſlaughter near the Euphrates; but he was leſs fortunate againſt the Huns, who overran the empire, ſo that the emperor was obliged to purchaſe a peace. Theodoſius was a good natured prince, but weak and timid. He died in 450.—Univ. Hiſt.

THEODOTUS of Byzantium, ſurnamed the Tanner from his occupation. In the perſecution under Marcus Aurelius he was arreſted, and, to ſave his life, renounced the chriſtian religion. The faithful having reproached him for his apoſtacy, he invented the heretical notion that Chriſt was only a man. He was excommunicated, but obtained many followers, who were called Theodotians. He is not to be confounded with Theodotus the banker, who inſtituted the ſect of Melchiſedecians, becauſe they held that Chriſt is inferior to Melchiſedeck.—Dupin. Moſheim.

THEOGNIS, a Greek poet, was a native of Megara, and flouriſhed B. C. 544. There remain of his ſome fragments printed in the Corpus Poetarum Græcorum, and other collections.—Voſſius.

THEON, a Greek ſophiſt, who wrote a treatiſe of rhetoric entitled, Progymnaſtmata, written with elegance. It was printed at Leyden in 1726, 8vo. in Greek and Latin. —Ibid.

THEON of Alexandria, a philoſopher and mathematician in the time of Theodoſius the Great, was father of the celebrated Hypatia. His Commentary on Euclid was printed in Greek at Baſle in 1533, folio; and that on Aratus at Oxford in 1672, quarto.—Ibid.

THEOPHANES (George), a Greek hiſtorian, was born at Conſtantinople of a noble family. He entered into the monaſtic ſtate, and was received with diſtinction at the ſeventh general council; but the emperor, Leo the Armenian, exiled him to Samothrace, where he died in 818. He wrote a Chronicle beginning where Syncellus ends, and reaching to the reign of Michael Curopalatus. It was printed at the Louvre in 1655, folio.—Moreri.

THEOPHANES (Prokopovitch), a Ruſſian hiſtorian, was born in 1681. He was archbiſhop of Novogorod, and died in 1786. He wrote the Life of Peter the Great, and ſome theological treatiſes.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

THEOPHILUS, biſhop of Antioch, flouriſhed in the ſecond century. He was the firſt who uſed the term Trinity to expreſs the three perſons in the Godhead. His Defence of Chriſtianity was edited by Geſner at Zurich in 1546, and is appended to the works of Juſtin, 1742, folio.—Dupin.

THEOPHRASTUS, a Greek philoſopher, was born at Ereſus, in Leſbos. Plato was his firſt maſter, and he afterwards became a diſciple of Ariſtotle, who had a great eſteem for him. He ſucceeded that philoſopher in his ſchool at Athens, and his name became ſo celebrated that he was attended by two thouſand pupils. He died at the advanced age of 107. His works are, Hiſtory of Stones, of which Hill has given an Engliſh tranſlation; Treatiſe of Plants, printed at Amſterdam, folio; Moral Characters; there have alſo been tranſlated into Engliſh. All his works were publiſhed in folio, by Heinſius at Leyden in 1613.—Voſſius.

THEOPHYLACT archbiſhop of Achridia, and metropolitan of Bulgaria in the eleventh century, was a native of Conſtantinople, and wrote Commentaries on the Gotpels and Acts of the Apoſtles; alſo on ſome of the Minor Prophets and Epiſtles, printed at Paris in folio. He was alſo the author of Letters and Inſtitutio Regia, 4to.—Dupin.

Theramenes, an Athenian philoſopher and general, was one of the thirty tyrants who aſſumed the government of Athens, but he oppoſed their cruelties, on which Critias, one of his colleagues, accuſed him of troubling the ſtate, and Theramenes was condemned to take poiſon B. C. 403. It is remarkable that as he took the fatal bowl he ſaid, "here's to the health of Critias," which proves that drinking healths was a cuſtom among the ancient Greeks.—Plutarch.

Thespis, a Greek poet of Attica, ſuppoſed by ſome to be the inventor of tragedy, 536 B. C. He went from town to town in a cart, on which was erected a temporary ſtage, where two actors, with faces daubed by the lees of wine, entertained the audience with choral ſongs and ſpeeches.—Laert.

Thevenot (Melchiſedeck), librarian to the king of France, was born at Paris in 1621. He was ambaſſador at Conſtantinople and at Genoa, and aſſiſted at a conclave held after the death of pope Innocent X. He died in 1692. His Travels in the Levant, 2 vols. folio, are highly eſteemed. He alſo wrote the Art of Swimming, 12mo.—Moreri.

Thevenot (John), another traveller, who died in 1667. He introduced coffee into France, and was the author of Travels in Aſia, 3 vols, 4to. and 5 vols. 12mo.—Moreri.

Thiers (John Baptiſt), a learned divine of the Sorbonne, was born at Chartres about 1636. After being a profeſſor in the univerſity of Paris he obtained the benefice of Champrond, in the dioceſe of Chartres, where he embroiled himſelf in diſputes with his ſuperiors reſpecting eccleſiaſtical dues. He died in 1703. He wrote a Treatiſe on Superſtitions reſpecting the Sacraments; a Hiſtory of Perukes; De Feſtorum Dierum Immunitione liber, and ſeveral other curious works.—Ibid.

Thirlby (Styan), an ingenious and learned Engliſh critic, was born about 1692, and died in 1753. He was a doctor of laws of the univerſity of Cambridge, and wrote a Tract againſt Whiſton on the Trinity; but he is principally known by his capital edition of Juſtin's works, folio, 1723.—Anecd. of Bowyer.

Thielin (John Philip), a painter, was born at Mechlin in 1618. He was a nobleman of conſiderable fortune, and was employed by the king of Spain. He excelled in painting flowers, and died in 1667. His three daughters painted in the ſame ſtyle as the father.—Pilkington.

Thomas, ſurnamed Didymus, an apoſtle of Jeſus Chriſt, was a native of Galilee. He is diſtinguiſhed in the ſacred hiſtory by his diſbelief of the reſurrection of his maſter, on which Jeſus vouchſafed to permit him to put his fingers into his wounds, and Thomas exclaimed, "my Lord and my God." He ſuffered martyrdom in India, where there are ſtill Chriſtians who are called by his name.—Cave.

Thomas (James Erneſt), a landſcape painter, was born at Hagleſtein in 1588, and died in 1653. He reſided a long time in Italy, where he cultivated the friendſhip of Elſheimer, whoſe ſtyle he adopted.—Felibien.

Thomas (William), a learned prelate, was born at Briſtol in 1613, and educated at St. John's college, Oxford, after which he entered into orders. In 1665 he obtained the deanry of Worceſter, and in 1677 was conſecrated biſhop of St. David's, from whence he was tranſlated to Worceſter, where he died in 1689. He wrote an Apology for the Church of England; Roman Oracles ſilenced; and ſeveral Sermons. His grandſon, William Thomas, was alſo a divine of the church of England, and an eminent antiquary. He publiſhed an improved edition of Dugdale's Hiſtory of Warwickſhire, 2 vols. folio, and a Survey of the Cathedral of Worceſter. He died in 1738.—Wood Gen. Biog. Dict.

Thomas (Elizabeth), commonly called Corinna, an ingenious Engliſh lady, was born in 1675. She loſt her lover, Mr. Gwynet, as they were about to be married in 1711, which proved the ſource of her misfortunes. The remainder of her life was a ſcene of trouble and ſickneſs. Being intimate with Mr. Henry Cromwel, his Letters, with ſome of Mr. Pope's, came into her hands, and Curll, the bookſeller, having obtained them, ſent them to the preſs, which ſo provoked the poet that he gave Corinna no honourable place in his Dunciad. She died in 1730. Her Poems and Letters were publiſhed in 2 vols. after her death.—Gen. Dict.

Thomas (Anthony Leonard), a member of the French academy, was born at Clermont, in Auvergne, in 1732, and died in 1785. He wrote in 1756 Reflections, hiſtorical and literary, on Voltaire's poem of Natural Religion, in which he defends chriſtianity with great energy. In 1759 his Eloge of the Marſhal Saxe was crowned by the French academy. He afterwards celebrated the memories of D'Agueſſeau, Du Guay Trouin, Sully, Des Cartes, and Marcus Aurelius. He alſo wrote an Eſſay on the Character, Manners, and Minds of Females, 8vo.; an Eſſay upon Elogies, 2 volumes 8vo. He was likewiſe a good poet. A complete edition of his works appeared at Paris in 1802, 7 vols. 8vo.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

Thomasius (James), profeſſor of eloquence at Leipſic, was born there of a good family. Leibnitz was his diſciple, and had a great opinion of his philoſophical talents. He died in 1684. His principal works are, the Origin of Philoſophical and Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory; and ſeveral learned Diſſertations, 11 vols. 8vo. His ſon, Chriſtian Thomaſius, publiſhed a German Literary Journal at Leipſic, for ſome articles of which he was obliged to quit his country and go to Berlin. The king of Prussia made him professor of law in the university of Halle, where he died in 1728. He wrote in Defence of Concubinage; the History of Wisdom and Folly; and some other books.—Ibid.

Thompson (Edward), a poet, was born at Hull in Yorkshire. He received his education at Hampstead, under Dr. Cox, and at an early age went to the East Indies. He was afterwards pressed on board a man of war, and rose to the rank of lieutenant in 1757. At the end of the war he retired on half-pay, and amused himself in writing. His first publication was a very licentious poem called the Meretriciad. In 1764 appeared the Soldier, a poem in 4to. About this time he circulated proposals for a work entitled "Maritime Observations, collected from the Years 1753 to 1763 inclusive." But this work never was published. In 1765 he produced the Courtezan, a poem, which was followed by another of the same description, entitled the Demirep. In 1767 he published Sailor's Letters, 2 vols. 12mo. In 1769 he produced a laughable account of the Jubilee at Stratford upon Avon, under the title of Trinculo's Trip to the Jubilee: and about this time he collected his most licentious performances into two volumes, called The Court of Cupid. In 1773 he brought forwards at Drury-lane Theatre The Fair Quaker, a comedy altered from Shadwell. In 1777 he edited Paul Whitehead's works, and published also an edition of the works of Andrew Marvell, in 3 vols. 4to. By the friendship of Mr Garrick he obtained a captain's commission, and was appointed to the command of the Hyæna, in which he had the good fortune to take a French East Indiaman. In 1785 he had the command of the Grampus, on board of which he died on the coast of Africa in 1786.—Europ. Mag. vol. ix.

Thomson (James), an eminent poet, was born at Ednam, in the shire of Roxburgh, in 1700. He was educated at Jedburgh, and afterwards at Edinburgh, with a view to the ministry in the church of Scotland, which profession he declined. Having written his poem of Winter, he brought it to London, where it was published, but lay unnoticed for a considerable time. Afterwards its great merit brought him into notice and popularity, and the author added the three other seasons. Mr. Thomson accompanied the Hon. Mr. Talbot in his travels, and on his return settled at Richmond, in narrow circumstances. He produced some dramatic pieces of considerable merit; Liberty, a poem, and the Castle of Indolence, in the manner of Spenser. But his fame rests upon the poem of the Seasons, to which even Dr. Johnson has borne the testimony of approbation. In descriptive scenery, and pathetic expression, few poets will be found to excel Thomson. His manners were gentle and inoffensive, and his piety rational and unassuming. About two years before his death he obtained the place of surveyor-general of the Leeward Islands. He died in 1748. His works have been printed in four volumes 12mo.—Life prefixed to his works.

Thoresby (Ralph), a topographer and antiquary, was born at Leeds, in Yorkshire, in 1658. He was fellow of the royal society, and wrote the Topography of Leeds and the parts adjacent. He died in 1725.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Thorius (Raphael), a physician in the reign of James I. who was distinguished by his learning, and his love of wine. He was a French protestant, and died in London, of the plague, in 1625. He wrote a poem on Tobacco, in Latin, and some other works.—Wood.

Thorndike (Herbert), a learned divine, was educated at Trinity college, Cambridge, where he proceeded to his degree of bachelor in divinity. In 1643 he was elected master of Sidney college, of which he was soon after deprived for his loyalty. At the Restoration he obtained a prebend in Westminster abbey. He died in 1672. He wrote a folio volume, entitled Epilogus, in which he defends the church of England with great learning and ability. He was also the author of a Treatise on Weights and Measures; another on Church Censures; and he assisted Walton in the Polyglot.—Collier.

Thornhill (sir James), an eminent painter, was born in Dorsetshire in 1676. His uncle, the famous Dr. Sydenham, enabled him to pursue his inclination for painting, and he greatly improved himself abroad. The dome of St. Paul's, the hospital at Greenwich, and Hampton-court palace, exhibit fine specimens of his great talent in composition. He was appointed principal painter to queen Anne, who conferred on him the honour of knighthood. He acquired considerable wealth by his profession, and became a member of the house of commons. He died in 1732. Hogarth married his daughter.—Pilkington.

Thornton (Bonnel), an English poet, and miscellaneous writer, was born in London in 1724, and educated at Westminster-school, from whence he was elected to Christ church, Oxford, where he engaged with Colman, and others, in a periodical work entitled the Student; and afterwards in another called the Connoisseur. In 1766 he published a translation of Plautus, 2 vols. 8vo. and the year following a burlesque poem, called the Battle of the Wigs, against the physicians. He died in 1768.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Thou (James Augustus de), or Thuanus, a celebrated historian, was the son of Christopher de Thou, first president of the parliament of Paris, and was born in that city in 1553. He was intended for the ecclesiastical state, and his uncle, the bishop of Chartres, resigned some of his benefices in his favour; but the death of his elder brother altered the plan, and he became a counsellor to the parliament, and afterwards preſident. Henry III. employed him in an embaſſy firſt to Vienna and next to Venice. Henry IV. admitted him into his councils, and engaged him in ſeveral important negociations. He died univerſally reſpected in 1617. The hiſtory of his own time from 1545 to 1607, is written in pure Latin, and with great fidelity. The beſt edition is that of London in 7 vols. folio. His Latin poems were printed in 1611, 4to. His ſon, Francis Auguſtus de Thou, was librarian to the king, but having attached himſelf to Cinq-Mars, he was beheaded at Lyons in 1642.—Moreri.

Thrasybulus, a celebrated Athenian, who, in the time of the thirty tyrants, took refuge at Thebes. Having gained ſome followers, he marched againſt the uſurpers and expelled them. There was inſtituted a yearly feaſt at Athens in commemoration of this triumph. Thraſybulus wiſely procured a general amneſty to be paſſed, which decreed that no one ſhould be puniſhed for the diſorders which had occurred but the principals. He diſplayed his valour in Thrace, and ſlew the Lacedemonian general with his own hand. Thraſybulus fell in a battle with the Aſpendians, who were the allies of Sparta, B. C. 394.—Plutarch.

Thucydides, a Greek hiſtorian, was born at Athens 469 years B. C. He was of noble birth, and on arriving at maturity entered into the army, but failing in an expedition with which he had been entruſted, he was baniſhed, and in his exile he wrote the Hiſtory of his Times; a work which far exceeds that of Herodotus. He was afterwards recalled, and died at Athens B. C. 391. The beſt editions of Thucydides are that of Stephens, Paris, 1588; that of Oxford, by Hudſon, 1696; and that of Duker, Amſt. 1732; all in folio.—Biog. Claſſica.

Thuillier (Dom Vincent), a member of the congregation of St. Maur, was born at Coucy in 1685, and died in 1736. He tranſlated Polybius into French, 6 vols. 4to.; and wrote a Letter of an antient Profeſſor of Theology on the Bull Unigenitus.—Moreri.

Thunberg (Charles Peter), a celebrated Swediſh botaniſt, was the diſciple of Linnæus. The government of Holland ſent him to their ſettlements in Japan, where he made great collections. After this he went to Ceylon, and on his return to Europe became profeſſor of botany at Upſal. He died at the end of the eighteenth century. His Flora Japonica was publiſhed at Leipſic in 1784, 8vo.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

Thurloe (John), a political writer, was born in Eſſex in 1616, and bred to the law. He became confidential ſecretary to Cromwell, and continued in the ſame ſituation to his ſon. At the Reſtoration he was committed into cuſtody, but was ſoon releaſed. He died at Great Milton, in Oxfordſhire, in 1668. His ſtate papers have been printed in 7 vols. folio.—Gen. Dict.

Thysius (Anthony), a learned writer, was born at Harderwick in Holland about 1603. He was profeſſor of poetry and eloquence at Leyden, and librarian of the univerſity. He died in 1670. His works are, Compendium Hiſtoriæ Batavicæ; Exercitationes Miſcellaneæ; and ſeveral of the variorum editions of the Claſſics.—Moreri.

Tiarini (Alexander), a painter, was born at Bologna in 1577, and died in 1668. He painted portraits and hiſtorical ſubjects in a fine ſtyle.—Pilkington.

Tiberius (Claudius Nero), emperor of Rome, ſucceeded Auguſtus. The beginning of his reign was popular, and he affected to be called the father of the people; but he afterwards diſplayed his real character in his cruelty to his mother Livia and his wife Julia, and in the murder of many of the ſenators. He alſo cauſed Germanicus to be poiſoned, and committed numerous exceſſes. He died in the midſt of debauchery at Miſenum, A. D. 37, aged 78.—Suetonius. Tacitus.

Tiberius (Conſtantine), emperor of the Eaſt, was originally a Thracian, and by his merit roſe to the firſt offices in the ſtate. Juſtin the younger appointed him his colleague in 574. On the death of Juſtin, in 578, he became ſole emperor. His armies defeated the Perſians, and he reigned with great wiſdom and moderation. He died in 582.—Un. Hiſt.

Tibullus (Aulus Albius), a Roman poet in the reign of Auguſtus. He ſerved in the army, which he quitted for a life of pleaſure and indolence. Four books of his Elegies remain, which are diſtinguiſhed for their elegance. They are uſually publiſhed with Catullus and Propertius.—Biog. Claſſica.

Tickell (Thomas), a poet and miſcellaneous writer, was born in Cumberland in 1686, and educated at Queen's college, Oxford. He tranſlated the firſt book of the Iliad, which Addiſon preferred to that of Pope. He alſo wrote ſome papers in the Spectator, and became private ſecretary to Mr. Addiſon, when he was ſecretary of ſtate. He wrote a beautiful poem on the death of that great man, and publiſhed a collection of his works. He died in 1740.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Tickell (Richard), a poet and political writer, who died in 1793. He publiſhed "The Project," and the "Wreath of Faſhion," poems which had ſome popularity. But his principal piece was a pamphlet, called Anticipation, in which he imitated the manner and ſtyle of the leading members of the houſe of commons in 1779. He alſo adapted the Gentle Shepherd to the ſtage, and wrote the Carnival of Venice, a comic opera.—Ibid.

Tideman (Philip), a painter, was born at Hamburgh in 1657, and died in 1705. He was the diſciple of Laireſſe, and painted ſubjects of fabulous hiſtory and allegory.—Pilkington.

TIEDEMANN (Dietrich), a learned writer, was born in 1748, at Bremervorde in the duchy of Bremen. He completed his education at the univerſity of Gottingen, where he was greatly eſteemed by profeſſor Heyne. By the recommendation of that learned man he obtained in 1766 the ſituation of profeſſor of the Latin and Greek languages at Caſſel: from whence he removed in 1786 to Marburg, where he became profeſſor of philoſophy. He died in 1803. His principal works are, 1. Eſſay on an Explanation of the Origin of Language. 2. Syſtem of the Stoic Philoſophy. 3. Inveſtigation of Man. 4. The firſt Philoſophers of Greece. 5. Spirit of ſpeculative Philoſophy. 6. Argumenta Platonis.—Monthly Mag.

TIGRANES, king of Armenia, maintained a war againſt the Romans, but was defeated by Lucullus and Pompey. By a bribe of 60,000 talents, he was ſuffered to keep poſſeſſion of his throne. His ſon, of the ſame name, revolted againſt him, but was defeated. The Romans, however, made him king of Sophene. He was afterwards ſent in chains to Rome, by Pompey.

TILINGIUS (Mathias), a learned phyſician, was born in Weſtphalia, became profeſſor at Rintheln, phyſician to the court of Heſſe-caſſel, and died in 1615. His works are, 1. Curioſa Rhabarbari diſquiſitio, 4to; 2. Lilii Albi deſcriptio, 8vo.; De Laudano opiate, 8vo.; 4. Opiologia Nova, 4to.; 5. De Febribus, 8vo.; 6. Cinnabaris Mineralis, 8vo.—Moreri.

TILLEMANS (Peter), a landſcape painter, was a native of Antwerp; he came to England in 1708, and was employed by ſeveral noblemen in taking views of their ſeats, huntings, races, and horſes. He died in 1734.—Vertue.

TILLEMONT (Sebaſtian Le Nain de), a French hiſtorian and critic, was born at Paris in 1637. He was educated in the ſchool at Port Royal, and became one of the beſt writers of that inſtitution. His Hiſtory of the Emperors, and Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory, are written with great fidelity and clearneſs. He died in 1698.—Moreri.

TILLI (John, count), an illuſtrious general, was born at Bruſſels, and was for ſome time a member of the order of Jeſuits, which he quitted for a military life. He diſplayed great courage in Hungary againſt the Turks, and in 1620 had the command of the troops under duke Maximilian, at the battle of Prague. He ſhewed ſuperior talents in numerous actions in the German wars, and was no leſs diſtinguiſhed by his humanity. He was at laſt defeated by Guſtavus Adolphus, of Sweden, and received a mortal wound in defending the paſſage of the Lech in 1632.—Moreri.

TILLI (Michael Angelo), a botaniſt and phyſician, was born at Florence in 1655, and educated at Piſa. He was appointed phyſician to the great duke, and was ſucceſſively profeſſor in the univerſity of Piſa, ſuperintendant of the botanic garden, and fellow of the royal ſociety of London. His greateſt work is the Catalogus Horti Piſani, in fol. printed at Florence, 1723. He died in 1740.—Halleri Bibl. Bot.

TILLOTSON (John), an eminent prelate, was the ſon of a clothier at Sowerby, in Yorkſhire, and born in 1630. He received his education at Clare-hall, Cambridge, where he was choſen fellow in 1651. Though bred among the Puritans, he conformed at the Reſtoration to the church of England, and became curate of Cheſhunt, in Hertfordſhire. In 1663 he was choſen preacher to the ſociety of Lincoln's-inn, and the year after, lecturer of St. Lawrence Jewry. In 1666 he took his degree of D. D.; in 1670 he was made prebendary and two years after dean of Canterbury. He attended lord Ruſſell on the ſcaffold, and endeavoured to prevail on him to acknowledge the doctrine of non-reſiſtance, a principle which the doctor himſelf had afterwards occaſion to renounce. He was very zealous againſt popery in the reign of James II. and immediately after the Revolution he became the confidential friend of William and Mary, who beſtowed on him the archbiſhopric of Canterbury after the deprivation of Dr. Sancroft. This drew upon him the hatred of the non-jurors, who publiſhed many ſevere animadverſions upon him. He alſo received numerous letters of abuſe, a large bundle of which was found in his ſtudy, with this inſcription in his handwriting on the back, "Theſe are libels; I pray God forgive the authors of them; I do." This excellent prelate died in the arms of his pious friend Mr. Nelſon, in 1694. His Sermons were publiſhed after his death, for the benefit of his widow, in 10 vols. 8vo. and 3 vols folio. They are diſtinguiſhed by their perſpicuity and cloſeneſs of reaſoning.—Life by Birch.

TIMAGENES, an hiſtorian, who was a native of Alexandria, and became a ſlave at Rome, to the ſon of Sylla. His maſter gave him his liberty on account of his abilities. He was afterwards in the ſervice of Auguſtus, but loſt his favour, on which he burnt the hiſtory of his reign which he had written.—Voſſius.

TIMÆUS of Locria, a philoſopher, who was a diſciple of Pythagoras. He held that there is a univerſal motion throughout nature. A little treatiſe by him on the Nature of the Soul, and of the World, is in the works of Plato, and gave to that philoſopher the idea of his Timæus.—Diog. Laert. Suidas.

TIMOLEON, a celebrated Corinthian. His brother Timophanes aiming at the ſovereign power, was ſlain by Timoleon, aſſiſted by his brother Satyrus. Timoleon went afterwards to relieve the Syracuſans from the tyranny of Dionyſius, whom he compelled to fly. Timoleon ſpent the reſt of his life at Syracuſe, and died B. C. 337.—Plutarch.

Timon, the Miſanthrope, was born near Athens B. C. 420. He declared himſelf the enemy of the human race, and had a companion named Apemantus, who poſſeſſed a ſimilar diſpoſition. The latter aſking him one day why he paid ſuch reſpect to Alcibiades, "It is," ſaid the churl, "becauſe I foreſee that he will prove the ruin of the Athenians."—Plutarch.

Timoteo (da Urbino), an eminent painter, was born at Urbino in 1470, and died in 1524. He painted hiſtorical ſubjects, portraits, and landſcapes in a fine ſtyle.—Pilkington.

Timotheus, a poet and muſician of Miletus. He was the friend of Euripides, and received an immenſe ſum from the Epheſians, for a poem in honour of Diana. He died B. C. 557.—Pliny.

Timothy, the diſciple of St. Paul, was a native of Lyſtra, a city of Lycaonia. His father was a Pagan, but his mother a Jewеſs. He became biſhop of Epheſus, where, it is ſaid, he was ſtoned to death, A. D. 97. —Acts Apoſt. Cave.

Tindal (Matthew), a deiſtical writer, was born at Beer-ferris, in Devonſhire, and educated at Oxford, where he became fellow of All-ſouls college, and took his degree of doctor of laws. He turned papiſt in the reign of James II. but profeſſed himſelf a proteſtant and took the oaths at the Revolution to keep his fellowſhip. He died in 1733. His works are, 1. The Rights of the Chriſtian Church, 8vo. 1706. The deſign of this work, which was anonymous, was to ſhew the inutility of the clergy. 2 Chriſtianity as Old as the Creation, 4to. 1730. In this he endeavoured to undermine revelation. It was anſwered by ſeveral able writers, particularly Conybeare, Leland, and Foſter.—Gen. Dict.

Tindal (Nicholas), nephew of the preceding, was educated at Exeter-college, Oxford, and became fellow of Trinity-college, rector of Colbourn, in the Iſle of Wight, and chaplain to Greenwich hoſpital, where he died in 1774. He publiſhed a tranſlation and continuation of Rapin's Hiſtory of England, and an Abridgment of Spence's Polymetis, 12mo.—Anecd. of Bowyer.

Tindall (William), a divine and antiquary, was educated at Trinity college, Oxford, where he proceeded to the degree of M. A. in 1778. He publiſhed Juvenile Excurſions in Literature and Criticiſm, 1 vol. 12mo.; The Hiſtory and Antiquities of the Abbey and Borough of Eveſham, 4to.; Plain Truth in a Plain Dreſs, a pamphlet; and The Evils and Advantages of Genius contraſted, a poem. Mr. Tindall was a member of the ſociety of antiquaries, and chaplain of the Tower, where he ſhot himſelf in 1804, aged 50.—Gent. Mag.

Tinelli (Tiberio), an hiſtorical and portrait painter, was born at Venice in 1586, and died in 1638. Louis XII. conferred on him the order of St. Michael.—De Piles.

Tintoretto (James Robuſti), a famous painter, was born at Venice in 1512. He was a diſciple of Titian, who, fearing that he would become a powerful rival, diſmiſſed him. He was called the furious Tintoretto, from the bold manner of his painting, and the rapidity of his genius. He died in 1594. His ſon and daughter were alſo good artiſts. —De Piles.

Tippoo-Saib, ſovereign of Myſore and the Mahrattas, was the ſon of Hyder Ally, whom he ſucceeded in the government of his eſtates, which he defended with ſucceſs againſt the Great Mogul. In 1790 he engaged in a war with the Engliſh, and was defeated in a number of actions. In 1792 lord Cornwallis obliged him to ſue for peace, when Tippoo delivered his two ſons as hoſtages. The war was reſumed in 1799, and terminated with the entire conqueſt of Myſore and the death of Tippoo, who fell bravely fighting on the ramparts of his capital. His library was ſtored with valuable MSS. which are now in the college of Calcutta.—Hiſt. of War in India.

Tiraboschi (Jerome), a celebrated Italian writer, was born at Bergamo in 1731. He was a Jeſuit, and profeſſor of rhetoric at Milan. The duke of Modena appointed him his librarian, and he was enrolled among the nobility of that city. He died in 1794. His works are, 1. Memoirs on the Antient Order of Homilies, 3 vols. 4to. 2. Hiſtory of the Writers of Modena, 6 vols. 4to. 3. Hiſtory of Italian Literature from the age of Auguſtus, 13 vols. 4to.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

Tiraqueau (Andrew), or Tiraquellus, a French lawyer of the 16th century. He was a counſellor in the parliament of Paris, and laboured much to drive chicanery from the bar. He was employed by Francis I. and Henry II. in affairs of conſequence, and approved himſelf a man of ſingular integrity. His works amount to 7 vols. in folio. He died in 1574.—Moreri.

Tissot, an eminent Swiſs phyſician, who diſtinguiſhed himſelf in favour of inoculation, and alſo in recommending an experimental practice of phyſic. His medical works, particularly his advice to people concerning their health, are excellent. He died in 1797.—Nouv. Dict.

Titiano, or Vecelli, an Italian painter, was born at Cador, in Friuli, in 1480. His maſter was Giovanni Bellini, whoſe ſtiff and laboured ſtile Titian adopted; but on perceiving the works of Giorgione he altered his manner, and contracted an intimacy with that great artiſt. The reputation of Titian roſe rapidly, and the emperor Charles V. conferred on him the honour of knighthood, and a penſion. He painted hiſtory, portraits, and landſcape. His principal pictures are, A Laſt Supper, in the Eſcurial in Spain, and one at Milan, repreſenting Chriſt crowned with Thorns. He died in 1576. His brother Francis was alſo a good artiſt in hiſtory and portrait, and Horatio, the ſon of Titian, painted ſome excellent portraits. He died in 1579.—De Piles.

TITUS VESPASIAN, a Roman emperor, was the ſon of Veſpaſian, and born in A. D. 40. He ſerved under his father, and diſtinguiſhed himſelf greatly at the ſiege of Jeruſalem. In the year 79 he obtained the imperial dignity. In his youth he was diſſipated and extravagant, which gave room to fear that he would prove another Tiberius or Nero, but his ſubſequent conduct ſhewed theſe apprehenſions were groundleſs. He became the pattern of virtue, and the father of his people. He reformed the courts of law, and ſeverely puniſhed informers. Regarding his time as precious only for the public good, he once ſaid, on the recollection of not having done any act of utility, "My friends, I have loſt a day." He died A. D. 81.—Crevier.

TITUS, a diſciple of St. Paul, was a Greek and a Gentile, but on his converſion he became amanuenſis to the apoſtle, who conſecrated him biſhop of Crete, where he died at an advanced age.—Cave.

TIXIER (John), or Raviſius Textor, was lord of Raviſy, in the diſtrict of Nivernois. He taught the belles lettres in the college of Navarre, at Paris, with conſiderable ſucceſs, and died in 1522. He wrote letters, dialogues, epigrams, and a work entitled Officinæ Epitome, 8vo.—Moreri.

TODD (Hugh), an Engliſh divine, was born in Cumberland, about 1660, and educated at Queen's-college, Oxford. His publications were, The Deſcription of Sweden, The Life of Phocion, &c. He left in MS. Notitia Eccleſia Cathedralis Carliolenſis, &c. Notitia Prioratus de Wedderhall, &c. A Hiſtory of the Dioceſe of Carliſle, &c. He died after 1708.—Gen. Dict.

TOLAND (John), a deiſtical writer, was born in Ireland in 1669, and brought up a papiſt. But at the age of fifteen he turned proteſtant, and afterwards went to the univerſity of Glaſgow, from whence he removed to Edinburgh. After viſiting Leyden and Oxford, he returned to Ireland, which country he was obliged to leave to avoid a proſecution for writing a book called Chriſtianity not Myſterious. In 1698 he publiſhed the Life of Milton; which was followed by his deiſtical book entitled Nazarenus, and ſeveral other pieces of a like tendency. He died in 1722. His poſthumous works were printed in 2 vols. 8vo. 1726.—Gen. Dict.

TOLLIUS (Jacob), a learned phyſician, was born at Ingra, in the territory of Utrecht, and became profeſſor of eloquence and Greek, at Brandenburg. He publiſhed editions of Auſonius and Longinus with notes. He died in 1696. His brother Cornelius became amanuenſis to Iſaac Voſſius, and afterwards profeſſor of Greek and rhetoric at Harderwyck. He publiſhed a piece entituled De Infelicitate Literatorum. Another brother called Alexander is known by a good edition of Appian.—Moreri.

TOLLET (Elizabeth), an ingenious Engliſh lady, was born in 1694, and died unmarried in 1754. She was ſkilled in Latin, French, and Italian, and was acquainted with hiſtory and mathematics. She wrote ſome poems, and a drama called Suſanna, or Innocence Preſerved.—Biog. Dram.

TOLOMMEI (Claudio), a poet and orator, was born at Siena in 1494. He became biſhop of Corſola, and died in 1557. He wrote ſeveral eſteemed works, the principal of which is a Speech delivered before pope Clement VII. on the peace with the emperor Charles V. in 1529.—Tiraboſchi.

TOMPION (Thomas), an Engliſh watch and clock-maker of extraordinary merit, who died in 1696.

TONSTALL (Cuthbert), a learned prelate, was born in 1476. He ſtudied at Oxford, Cambridge, and at Padua, and was accounted the beſt mathematician of his time. He was conſecrated biſhop of London in 1522; the year following made lord privy-ſeal; and in 1530 tranſlated to Durham, of which he was deprived in the reign of Elizabeth for denying her ſupremacy. He died in confinement in 1559. He wrote a treatiſe, De Arte Supputandi, Lond. 1522, 4to.—Gen. Dict.

TOOKE (George), an Engliſh poet, was born about 1595. He ſerved in the expedition againſt Cadiz, in 1625, as captain of a band of volunteers, the particulars of which he has deſcribed in a poem. He died in 1675. He wrote canzonets to the memory of his wife.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

TOOKE (Thomas), an Engliſh divine, was born in Kent, and educated at St. Paul's ſchool, from whence he removed to Corpus Chriſti-college, Cambridge. He became maſter of the ſchool at Biſhop Stortford, which he raiſed from a ruinous ſtate, and by his means a new ſchool was built by ſubſcription. He died in 1721.—Ibid.

TOOKE (Andrew), a divine and ſchool-maſter, was born in London in 1673. He was educated at the Charter-houſe, from whence he removed to Clare Hall, Cambridge, where he took the degree of M. A. He became ſucceſſively uſher and maſter of the Charter-houſe ſchool, and alſo profeſſor of geometry at Greſham College. He died in 1731. Mr. Tooke publiſhed Father Pomey's Pantheon in Engliſh, without acknowleging the real author.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

TOPHAM (Thomas), a remarkable inſtance of muſcular ſtrength. He kept a public houſe at Iſlington, and uſed to perform ſurpriſing feats, ſuch as breaking a broom-ſtick of the firſt magnitude by ſtriking it againſt his bare arm; lifting two hogſheads of water; heaving his horſe over the turnpike gate; carrying the beam of a houſe as a ſoldier would his firelock, &c. He alſo could roll up a pewter dish of seven pounds as a man rolls up a sheet of paper; squeeze a pewter quart together at arms' length; and lift two hundred weight with his little finger over his head. At Derby he broke a rope fastened to the floor that would sustain twenty hundred weight; and lifted an oak table six feet long with his teeth, though half a hundred weight was hung at the extremity. He took Mr. Chambers, vicar of All Saints, who weighed twenty-seven stone, and raised him with one hand. He stabbed himself, after quarrelling with and wounding his wife, in 1749.—Hutton's Hist. Derby.

Toplady (Augustus Montague), an English divine, was born at Farnham, in Surrey, in 1737, and educated first at Westminster-school, and afterwards at the university of Dublin. In 1768 he obtained the vicarage of Broadhembury in Devonshire, but the air not agreeing with his constitution, he removed to London and officiated in a chapel in Orange-street, Leicester-fields. He died in 1778. He wrote Historic Proofs of the doctrinal Calvinism of the Church of England; and several other works, making 6 vols. 8vo. with his life prefixed.

Torfæus (Thermodus), a native of Iceland, who was historiographer to the king of Denmark. He wrote the History of Norway, containing also the annals of the northern parts of Scotland, from the year 850 to 1206. He died in 1720, aged 81.—Cordiner's Antiq. of Scotland.

Torrentius (John), a Dutch painter, was born at Amsterdam. He founded a sect of Adamites, for which he was sent to prison and confined a long time. He died in 1640. His pictures are well painted, but are very obscene.—Houbraken.

Torricelli (Evangelist), a mathematician and philosopher, was born at Faenza, in Italy, in 1608. He improved the art of making microscopes and telescopes, and was the first who discovered the method of ascertaining the weight of the atmosphere by quicksilver. He died in 1647.—Hutton.

Tory (Geoffry), a native of Bourges, who was professor of philosophy at Paris; but afterwards became a printer and greatly improved the art. He wrote a book on the proportion and distance of letters, which has proved very useful. He also published a translation of Horus Apollo's Hieroglyphics. He died in 1550.—Moreri.

Toscanella (Paul), a celebrated astronomer of the 15th century. He erected in the cathedral of Florence the famous gnomon, which is accounted the greatest of the kind in Europe, and of which a curious description was given by Father Ximenes, in his work Del vecchio e nuovo gnomone Fiorentino, printed at Florence in 1757, in 4to. Toscanella had also some ideas of the passage to the East Indies by the Cape of Good Hope, which he communicated to Martenz, at Lisbon, and which seems to have occasioned the Portuguese discoveries. He died about 1490.—Tiraboschi.

Tostatus (Alphonsus), a Spanish prelate, was educated at Salamanca, and became bishop of Avila. He distinguished himself at the council of Basil, and died in 1454, aged 40. He wrote Commentaries upon Eusebius, 5 vols. folio; also Commentaries on the Scriptures, much esteemed.—Nic. Antonio de Hisp. Script.

Totila, king of the Goths, who recovered the kingdom of Italy from Justinian. He was slain in battle in 552.—Univ. Hist.

Toup (Jonathan), a learned divine and critic, was born at St. Ives, in Cornwall, in 1713. He was educated at Exeter college, Oxford, but completed his degrees in arts at Cambridge. After entering into orders he obtained a prebend in Exeter cathedral, and the vicarage of St. Merryn in Cornwall. He died in 1785. Mr. Toup published Emendations of Suidas, and an excellent edition of Longinus.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Tournefort (Joseph Pitton de), a famous botanist, was born at Aix in Provence, in 1656. In 1678 he explored the mountains of Dauphiny and Savoy, and the year following went to Montpellier, where he studied physic, after which he travelled over the Pyrenees, and endured great difficulties and danger in searching for plants. He afterwards travelled into England, Spain, Holland, and other countries, cultivating his favourite science, and forming connexions with learned men. In 1683 he was made professor of botany in the royal garden. In 1692 he was admitted a member of the academy of sciences, and in 1700 he was sent into Asia by the king to collect plants. He died in 1708. His works are, 1. Elements of Botany, 3 vols. 8vo.; 2. Voyage to the Levant, 2 vols. 4to.; 3. History of the Plants round Paris, 2 vols. 12mo.; 4. Treatise on the Materia Medica, 2 vols. 12mo.—Halleri Bibl. Botan.

Towers (Joseph), a dissenting divine, was born in Southwark in 1737, and brought up to the printing business, under Goadby, of Sherborne, after which he settled as a bookseller in London; but having an ardent attachment to literature, he engaged in the ministry among the dissenters of the presbyterian persuasion, and in 1774 became pastor of a congregation at Highgate. In 1778 he was chosen one of the ministers of Newington Green meeting, in conjunction with Dr. Price. In 1779 he received his degree of LL.D. from Edinburgh. He died in 1799. Dr. Towers published a useful work, entitled British Biography, 7 vols. 8vo.; Observations on Hume's History of England; the Life and Reign of Frederic III. of Prussia, 2 vols. 8vo; a Vindication of Locke; several Sermons, and Political Tracts. He was also a coadjutor with Dr. Kippis, in compiling the new edition of the Biographia Britannica.—Private Communication.

TOWNLEY (Charles), an Engliſh antiquary and collector, was born of an antient family at Townley-hall, in Lancaſhire. His education was liberal, and he devoted himſelf chiefly to the forming of a muſeum of antique ſtatues, marbles, coins, and manuſcripts. His houſe in Park-ſtreet, Weſtminſter, was almoſt entirely filled with rude and bulky fragments of Egyptian architecture intermixed with ſome of the moſt beautiful ſpecimens of Greek and Roman models. His collection of ancient medals was extremely valuable; and among his manuſcripts, one of Homer was collated in a late edition. His Etruſcan Antiquities have been illuſtrated in 2 vols. 4to., by a Frenchman named D' Hancarville. Mr. Townley was a fellow of the royal and antiquarian ſocieties, and a truſtee of the Britiſh Muſeum. He left by will 4000l. for the purpoſe of erecting a building for his collection. He died in 1805, aged 67.—Gent. Mag.

TOWNSON (Thomas), a learned divine, was born in Eſſex in 1715 He was educated at Chriſt church, Oxford, and afterwards obtained a fellowſhip of Magdalen college. He obtained ſucceſſively the livings of Hatfield Peverel in Eſſex, Blithfield in Staffordſhire, and the lower mediety of Malpas in Cheſhire, and biſhop Porteus gave him the archdeaconry of Richmond in Yorkſhire. He died in 1792. Dr. Townſon publiſhed, Diſcourſes on the Four Goſpels; three Tracts in anſwer to the Confeſſional; and ſince his death has been publiſhed a Diſcourſe on the Evangelical Hiſtory, with his Life prefixed.

TOZZETTI (John Targioni), an Italian botaniſt, was born at Florence, in 1712. He ſtudied medicine at Piſa, and afterwards became keeper of the botanical garden at Florence. He wrote ſeveral works in Latin, and ſome in Italian. His firſt was a theſis upon the Utility of Plants, in the Practice of Phyſic; the others were chiefly connected with his profeſſion. He died at Florence, in 1783.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

TRADESCANT (John), an eminent Dutchman, who ſettled in England about the beginning of the reign of James I. He and his ſon were great travellers, and the elder is ſaid to have gone through moſt parts of Europe, Turkey, Greece, Egypt, and Barbary. He was the firſt perſon who collected a cabinet of curioſities, of which an account was printed, called Muſeum Tradeſcantium. The father is ſaid to have been gardener to Charles I. and had a very large garden at Lambeth, well ſtocked with rare plants. He died in 1652. The monument of the Tradeſcants is ſtill in Lambeth church-yard. —Pennant's London.

TRAJAN (M. Ulpinus Crinitus), a Roman emperor, was born in Andaluſia. He ſerved under Veſpaſian and Titus againſt the Jews; and became partner in the empire with Nerva, after whoſe death he enjoyed the ſole authority. His reign was popular, and he gained ſplendid victories over the Dacians Perſians, and other powers; but he diſgraced his great qualities by a rigorous perſecution of the Chriſtians. He died in Cilicia, A. D. 117. By his directions Apollodorus the architect erected the famous pillar at Rome ſtill called by his name.—Crevier. Univ. Hiſt.

TRALLIAN (Alexander), a medical writer, who flouriſhed about A. D. 550. He was a native of Tralles, in Lydia, and was the firſt who practiſed phlebotomy and uſed cantharides as a bliſter for the gout. His works have been printed at Baſil, Paris, and London.—Friend.

TRAPP (Joſeph), an eminent divine, was born at Cherington, in Glouceſterſhire, in 1672, and educated at Wadham college, Oxford, after which he became rector of Harlington, in Middleſex, and lecturer of Chriſtchurch and St. Lawrence Jewry, London. He died in 1747. Dr. Trapp publiſhed Prælectiones Poeticæ, 2 vols.; a Latin Tranſlation of the Paradiſe Loſt; four volumes of Sermons; a treatiſe on being Righteous Overmuch; a tranſlation of Virgil into blank verſe; and Abramule, a tragedy.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

TRAVERSARI (Ambrozio), a learned monk of Camaldoni, near Florence. He acted as interpreter between the Italians and Greeks. His tranſlation of Diogenes Laertius, inſcribed to Coſmo de Medici, has been ſeveral times printed. He was born in 1386, but the year of his death is uncertain.—Tiraboſchi.

TRAVIS (George), an Engliſh divine, was born at Royton, in Lancaſhire, and educated firſt at Mancheſter ſchool, and afterwards at St. John's college, Cambridge, where he took his degrees in arts. On entering into orders he obtained the vicarage of Eaſtham, and the rectory of Handley, in Cheſhire, alſo the archdeaconry of Cheſter, and a prebend in that cathedral. He diſtinguiſhed himſelf by ſome acute letters to Mr. Gibbon, in which he ſtrenuouſly maintained the genuineneſs of the controverted paſſage in 1 John, chap. v. 7. He died in 1797.—Gent. Mag.

TREMBLEY (Abraham), an ingenious writer, was born at Geneva, in 1710. He became tutor to the duke of Richmond, and was admitted a member of the Royal Society. He died at Geneva, in 1784. His works are Memoirs upon Polypes, 4to; Inſtructions from a Father to his Children; Inſtructions upon Natural Religion, &c.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

TREMELLIUS (Emmanuel), a learned divine, was born in 1510, at Ferrara, of Jewiſh parents. He embraced the proteſtant religion, and became Hebrew profeſſor at Heidelburg, and afterwards at Sedan. He died in 1580. He publiſhed a Latin tranſlation of the Bible.—Moreri.

TREMOLLIERE (Peter Charles), an hiſtorical painter, was born at Cholet in Poictou, in 1703. He painted ſeveral grand altar-pieces at Lyons, and died in 1739.—D'Argenville.

TRENCHARD (John), a political writer, was born in Somerſetſhire, in 1669. He was bred to the bar, which he never followed; but became member of parliament for Taunton. He died in 1723. He wrote, in conjunction with Gordon, Cato's Letters, and the Independent Whig.—Gen. Dict.

TRENCK (Francis, baron), a Pruſſian, who by his imprudences gave offence to the government of his country, and was ſent to priſon, where he endured great hardſhips for a long time. He at laſt effected his eſcape; and was in France at the time of the revolution, where he was arreſted and condemned to the ſcaffold by the revolutionary tribunal, in 1794. He wrote his own memoirs, which are intereſting, but marvellous.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

TREVISANI (Francis), an excellent painter, was born at Trieſte, in 1656. He married a noble Venetian lady, and ſettled at Rome, where he acquired great reputation. He excelled in hiſtory and landſcapes, and died in 1746.—Pilkington.

TREVISI (Jerome), an Italian painter of hiſtory and portrait, was born at Treviſi, in 1508. He became painter to Henry VIII. of England, who appointed him engineer at the ſiege of Boulogne, where he was killed in 1544.—Ibid.

TRISSINO (John George), an Italian poet, was born at Vicenza, in 1478. His tragedy of Sophoniſba was acted at Rome by order of pope Leo X. and received with uncommon applauſe; but his principal work is a poem on Italy delivered from the Goths. He died in 1550. His works were printed at Verona in 2 vols. fol. 1729.—Tiraboſchi.

TROGUS (Pompeius), a Latin hiſtorian, who wrote a Hiſtory of the World to the time of Auguſtus, which was greatly admired for its purity and elegance. It was epitomized by Juſtin. He flouriſhed B. C. 41.—Voſſius

TROMMIUS (Abraham), a proteſtant divine, was born at Gronin.en, in 1633. He was the author of a valuable Greek Concordance of the Old Teſtament, 1718, 2 vols. folio. The author died in 1719.—Moreri.

TROMP (Happertz), a Dutch admiral, was born at the Brill, in 1597. He roſe from the loweſt ſtation to the ſupreme command wholly by his merit. In 1639 he defeated a numerous Spaniſh fleet, and afterwards gained ſeveral other victories, but was ſlain on the quarter deck when fighting the Engliſh fleet in 1653.—Dict. Holland.

TRONCHIN (Theodore), a phyſician, was born at Geneva in 1709, and educated firſt at Cambridge, from whence he removed to Leyden, where he became the favourite pupil of Boerhaave. He ſettled at Amſterdam as phyſician, and afterwards at Geneva. In 1756 he removed to Paris, where he attended the royal family. He died there in 1781. His works are, ſeveral Articles in the Encyclopedie; a Treatiſe de Nympha; and a Diſſertation on the Colica Pictonum.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

TROOST (Cornelius), a Dutch painter, was born at Amſterdam in 1697, and died in 1750. His greateſt work is a picture in the ſurgeons' hall at Amſterdam, repreſenting the principal perſons of that profeſſion with a ſubject before them for diſſection.—Pilkington.

TROY (Francis de), a French painter, was born at Toulouſe in 1695: he was the diſciple of Nicholas de Loir, and became a profeſſor in the academy. He painted hiſtorical ſubjects and portraits, and died in 1730.—Ibid.

TROY (John Francis de), ſon of the preceding. Louis XIV. conferred on him the order of St. Michael, and appointed him director of the academy at Rome. He died in 1752.—Ibid.

TROYEN (Romboud Van), a Flemiſh painter, who died in 1650. He painted caves, grottoes, and the veſtiges of ancient edifices.—Ibid.

TRUMBULL (ſir William), an Engliſh ſtateſman, was born in Berkſhire in 1636. He was for ſome time ambaſſador in France, and afterwards ſecretary of ſtate. But he is chiefly known as the early patron and correſpondent of Pope. He died about 1710.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

TRYPHIODORUS, an ancient Greek poet, of whom, all that remains is a poem on the Deſtruction of Troy, printed at Oxford in 1742, 8vo. with an Engliſh tranſlation by Merrick.—Voſſius.

TUCKER (Abraham), a metaphyſical writer, was a gentleman of good fortune in Surrey, and died at his ſeat near Dorking, in 1775. He publiſhed a curious work called the Light of Nature, under the aſſumed name of Search. It was printed in 9 vols. 8vo.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

TUCKER (Joſiah), a celebrated divine, was born at Laugharne, in Caermarthenſhire, in 1711, and educated at St. John's-college, Oxford, where he took his degree of D.D. in 1759. On entering into orders he ſettled at Briſtol, and became rector of St. Stephen's, in that city, and prebendary of the cathedral. In 1758 he was preferred to the deanry of Glouceſter. He was an able writer on commercial, political, and theological ſubjects. At the beginning of the American war he endeavoured to prove the utility of granting independence to the colonies, for which he was greatly abuſed by many writers. His principal performance is a Treatiſe on Civil Government, againſt Locke, 8vo. He died in 1799.—Gent Mag.

TULDEN (Theodore Van), a Dutch painter, was born at Bois-le-duc in 1607, and died in 1676. He painted fairs, and the diverſions of peaſants, alſo hiſtorical ſubjects.—Houbraken.

TULL (Jethro), a gentleman of Oxfordſhire, who greatly improved agriculture, and wrote, a Treatiſe on Horſe-hoeing Huſbandry. He died in 1740.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Tullius Hostilius, the third king of the Romans, who ſucceeded Numa Pompilius. He deſtroyed the town of Alba, and carried its inhabitants to Rome; he was equally ſucceſsful againſt the Latins, and died B. C. 640.—Livy.

Tully (Thomas), a learned divine, was born at Carliſle in 1620, and educated at Queen's-college, Oxford. About 1642 he became maſter of the grammar ſchool at Tetbury in Glouceſterſhire, but he afterwards returned to his college, of which he was fellow and tutor. In 1657 he was appointed principal of St. Edmund Hall, and after the reſtoration was created D. D. and made chaplain to the king. In 1675 he obtained the deanry of Rippon. He died in 1676. Dr. Tully wrote Logica Apodeictica, 8vo.; Præcipuorum Theologiæ, 8vo.; and ſeveral controverſial pieces againſt Dr. Bull and Mr. Baxter on Juſtification.—Wood.

Tully (George) a learned divine, was born at Carliſle, and educated at Queen's-college, Oxford. On entering into orders he became prebendary of Rippon, and afterwards rector of Galeſide near Newcaſtle, and ſubdean of York. He died in 1695, aged 42. Mr. Tully wrote a Diſcourſe on the Government of the Thoughts, 8vo.; and ſeveral ſermons and tracts againſt popery. He alſo tranſlated from the Greek part of Plutarch's Morals; and from the Latin of Cornelius Nepos, the Life of Miltiades; and from Suetonius the Life of Julius Cæſar.

Tunstall (James), a learned divine, was born about 1710, and educated at St. John's-college, Cambridge, after which he became rector of Sturmer, in Eſſex, in 1739. In 1741 he was elected public orator of the univerſity; he died in 1772. Dr. Tunſtall wrote Diſcourſes upon Natural and Revealed Religion, and other works.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Turbido (Francis), an Italian painter, was born at Verona in 1500; he was the diſciple of Giorgione, and Veroneſe. He painted in freſco and in oil, and his moſt capital picture is a Tranſfiguration. He died in 1581. —Pilkington.

Turenne (Henry de la Tour d'Auvergne), viſcount de, ſecond ſon of the duc de Bouillon, and Elizabeth of Naſſau, daughter of William I. of Naſſau, prince of Orange, was born at Sedan in 1611. He learned the art of war under prince Maurice, his maternal uncle, and became the greateſt general of his age. After ſeveral gallant actions he took Briſac in 1638, for which Richelieu offered him his niece in marriage, but Turenne being a proteſtant declined the honour. The next year he ſerved in Italy, and afterwards ſignalized himſelf by the conqueſt of Rouſſillon. At the age of twenty-three he became field-marſhal, and in 1644 was appointed marſhal of France. About this time he was ſent to Germany, where he gained ſeveral victories, but was defeated in 1645 at Manindall. He ſhortly after repaired this loſs by the battle of Nordlingen, and the ſame year re-eſtabliſhed the elector of Treves in his eſtates. In the following year he effected the famous junction with the Swediſh army, and obliged the duke of Bavaria to ſue for peace. That prince having violated the treaty, Turenne defeated him in the battle of Zumulhauſen, and drove him from his dominions. In the civil wars of France he acted at firſt againſt the court, but in 1651 he made his peace, and became general of the royal army, and was oppoſed to the prince of Condé, whom he defeated. In 1657 he took Dunkirk in conjunction with the Engliſh troops. This was followed by the capture of ſeveral places in Flanders, which produced peace between France and Spain in 1659. The war being renewed in 1667 he was appointed marſhal of all the armies, and had the honour of inſtructing the king in the art of war. About this time he renounced the proteſtant religion. In 1674 he conquered Franche Comté, which occaſioned a league between the German ſtates againſt France. To prevent their junction Turenne attacked the army commanded by the duke of Lorraine, and gained a ſplendid victory. He afterwards defeated the imperialiſts at Mulhauſen, and again at Turkheim. Montecuculi was then ſent againſt him, and while the two armies were in view of each other, and preparing for battle, Turenne was killed by a cannon ball, at Sultzbach, in 1675.—Moreri.

Turgot (Anne-Robert James), a French ſtateſman, was born at Paris in 1727. He was educated in the college of the Sorbonne, after which he applied to commerce, and was appointed intendant of Limoges. He was next made comptroller-general of the finances, in which he ſhewed great talents, by endeavouring to effect a reform in the public expenditure, and introducing ſeveral important regulations for the revival and encouragement of trade. He died in 1781. He was at the head of the ſociety called Economiſts, after the death of Queſnay.—Life of Turgot by Condorcet.

Turnebus (Adrian), Greek profeſſor at Paris, and ſuperintendant of the royal preſs for works in that language, was born at Andeli in 1512, and died in 1565. He wrote notes on Cicero, Varro, Thucydides, and Plato; pieces againſt Ramus; tranſlations from Ariſtotle, Theophraſtus, Plutarch, Plato, &c.; and Latin Poems. But the moſt important of his works is his Adverſaria, 1580, folio.—Niceron. Bayle.

Turner (William), a phyſician and divine, was born at Morpeth in Northumberland, and educated at Pembroke-hall, Cambridge, where he embraced the principles of the reformers. He became a preacher, and travelled over the kingdom to propagate the proteſtant doctrines, for which biſhop Gardiner ſent him to priſon. On his releaſe he went abroad, and took his doctor's degree at Ferrara. At the acceſſion of Edward VI. he returned, and was made dean of Wells. When Mary came to the throne he went into exile, and did not return till her death. Queen Elizabeth reſtored him to his preferments. He died in 1568. Dr. Turner wrote a Treatiſe on the Baths of England and Germany; a Complete Herbal, or Hiſtory of Plants, folio; Hiſtoria de Naturis Herbarum Scholiis et Notis Vallata, 8vo.; and ſome other botanical works.—Pulteney. Wood.

Turner (Thomas), a pious divine, was born at Reading in Berkſhire, and educated at St. John's college, Oxford, of which he became fellow. In 1629 he obtained a canon reſidentiaryſhip in St. Paul's cathedral, and was appointed chaplain to Charles I. whom he accompanied to Scotland. In 1641 he was made dean of Rocheſter, and ſoon after dean of Canterbury, of which he was deprived with circumſtances of great barbarity in the rebellion. He recovered his preferments at the reſtoration, and died in 1672, aged 81.—Wood. Todd's Deans of Canterbury.

Turner (Francis), ſon of the above, was educated at Wincheſter-ſchool, from whence he removed to New college, Oxford. He became prebendary of St. Paul's, dean of Windſor, and in 1683 biſhop of Rocheſter, from whence the year following he was tranſlated to Ely. He was one of the ſeven biſhops who was ſent to the Tower by king James, and was deprived at the revolution for refuſing the oaths. He died in 1700. The biſhop publiſhed ſome Sermons. He alſo wrote pious Poems, and the Life of Mr. Nicholas Ferrar.—Ibid.

Turretin (Francis), a proteſtant divine, was born at Geneva in 1623. He became profeſſor of divinity in the univerſity of his native place, and was employed in an embaſſy to the ſtates of Holland. He died in 1687. His works are, 1. Inſtitutiones Theologiæ, 3 vols. 4to.; 2. Theſes de Satisfactione Jeſus Chriſti, 4to.; 3. De Succeſſione ab Eccleſia Romana, 2 vols.—Moreri.

Turretin (John Alphonſus), ſon of the preceding, was born at Geneva in 1671. He became the firſt profeſſor of eccleſiaſtical hiſtory at Geneva, where he died in 1737. He wrote an Abridgment of Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory; Sermons, and other works.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

Tusser (Thomas), an agricultural writer, was born at Raven-hall in Eſſex, and educated at Eton and Cambridge. He was for ſome time at court, but afterwards became a farmer. He died in 1580. Tuſſer wrote Five hundred Points of good Huſbandry, 1586, 4to. It is a curious picture of the agriculture of thoſe days.—Gen. Dict.

Twining (Thomas), a learned divine, was born in London, and educated at Sidney college, where he took his maſter's degree in arts in 1763. Dr. Porteus, biſhop of London, preſented him to the rectory of St. Mary's, Chicheſter, where he died in 1804. He publiſhed a Tranſlation of the Poetics of Ariſtotle, in one volume, quarto.—Gent. Mag.

Twiss (William), a preſbyterian divine, was born at Newbury in Berkſhire, and educated at New college, Oxford. He was preſident of the aſſembly of divines at Weſtminſter, and was made rector of St. Andrew, Holborn. He died in 1645. Dr. Twiſs was a zealous Calviniſt, and wrote, Vindiciæ Gratiæ, Poteſtatis et Providentia Dei, folio; Quatuor Diſſertationes de Scientia Mediæ, fol.; Riches of God's Love, and other works in defence of the doctrine of predeſtination.—Wood.

Tye (Chriſtopher), a muſician, was born in Weſtminſter. He was admitted to his degree of doctor in muſic at Cambridge in 1545. Dr. Tye was inſtructor in that ſcience to Edward VI. and organiſt of the royal chapel in the reign of Elizabeth. He compoſed a number of anthems.—Hawkins.

Tyers (Thomas), a miſcellaneous writer, who was bred to the bar, but never practiſed. He became proprietor of Vauxhall gardens, and was greatly eſteemed by Dr. Johnſon. Mr. Tyers wrote ſuppoſed conferences between eminent characters, political and literary, 8vo.; and ſome ingenious poems. He died in 1787.—Europ. Mag.

Tyndall (William), an Engliſh divine, was born on the borders of Wales about 1500, and educated at Magdalen hall, Oxford. Having embraced the doctrines of the reformers, he went to Antwerp, where he printed a tranſlation of the Scriptures into Engliſh. This being ſent over to London, all the copies were bought up: on which Tyndall reviſed his work, and printed a larger impreſſion. This exciting the hatred of the Romiſh clergy, he was apprehended as an heretic, ſtrangled, and burnt near Antwerp in 1536.—Fox's Acts and Mon.

Tyrannion, a celebrated grammarian of Pontus, whoſe real name was Theophraſtus, which his pupils altered to Tyrannion on account of his ſeverity. He was taken priſoner by Lucullus and carried to Rome, where he became intimate with Cicero, who employed him in arranging his library. He had a large one of his own; and made a collection of the works of Ariſtotle.—Cicero's Epiſt.

Tyrtæus, a Greek poet, who flouriſhed about 684 B.C. He diſtinguiſhed himſelf by warlike verſes to animate the Lacedemonians in their war with the Meſſenians, for which he was made a citizen of Sparta. Some fragments by him are in Plantin's Collection of the Greek Poets.—Voſſius.

Tyrwhitt (Thomas), a learned writer, was born in 1730, and educated at Eton, from whence he removed to Queen's college, Oxford, and in 1755 was elected fellow of Merton, which office he afterwards reſigned. In 1761 he became clerk of the houſe of commons. Mr. Tyrwhitt publiſhed an edition of Ariſtotle's Poetics; another

Chaucer, with an eſteemed life of that poet. He alſo wrote Notes on Shakſpeare, and collected the poems attributed to Rowley, in which controverſy he diſtinguiſhed himſelf. He died in 1786.—Gent. Mag.

Tysilio, a Welſh poet, hiſtorian, and divine, who flouriſhed in the ſeventh century; he wrote a Chronicle of Britain, from which Geoffry of Monmouth compoſed his fabulous hiſtory.—Owen.

Tyson (Edward), a learned phyſician, was born at Briſtol in 1650, and educated at Magdalen-hall, Oxford, where he applied to the ſtudy of phyſic, in which he took his degrees; after which he ſettled in London, and became a fellow of the royal ſociety, whoſe Tranſactions he enriched with many valuable papers. He was appointed phyſician to the hoſpitals of Bethlehem and Bridewell, and died ſuddenly in 1708. He publiſhed Phocæna, or the Anatomy of a Porpeſs, 4to.; Ephemeri Vita, or the Natural Hiſtory and Anatomy of the Ephemeron, 4to.; Orang Outang, or the Anatomy of a Pigmie compared with that of a Monkey, an Ape, and a Man, 4to.—Compleat Hiſt. of Europe, 1708, 8vo.

Tytler (William), an antiquary, was born at Edinburgh in 1711. He was the editor of The Poetical Remains of James I. to which he prefixed a diſſertation on the Literary Hiſtory of Europe. He alſo wrote an able vindication of Mary queen of Scots. He died in a very advanced age.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Tzetzes (John), a grammarian of Conſtantinople in the 12th century. He wrote Commentaries upon Lycophron, printed by Potter, at Oxford, 1697, folio.—Moreri.

U.

Ubaldini (Petruccio), a celebrated illuminator on vellum in the 16th century. There is extant a book illuminated by him, containing the ſentences of Scripture painted by order of Nicholas Bacon, and preſented by him to lady Lumley.—Vertue.

Udino (John da), an Italian painter, was born in 1494, and died in 1564. He was a diſciple of Raphael, and excelled in painting animals and landſcapes.—De Piles.

Ulacq (Adrian), a mathematician of Ghent, who wrote a Treatiſe on Trigonometry, in Latin, folio, 1633: and a work, entitled, Logarithmorum Chiliades Centum, 1628, folio.—Moreri.

Ulloa y Pereira (Louis de), a Spaniſh poet, was born at Toro. He gained great reputation by his ſonnets in the reign of Philip IV. and the count de Olivarez gave him the government of Leon. He died in 1660. His works were printed in 1674, 4to.—Nic. Antonio de Hiſp. Script.

Ulloa (Don Antonio), a Spaniſh mathematician, was born in 1716, and died in 1795. He was one of the mathematicians employed in meaſuring a degree of the meridian in Peru. On his return he was taken priſoner by the Engliſh, but was ſoon releaſed. He publiſhed an account of his Voyages in 2 vols 4to.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

Ulpian (Domitius), a celebrated juriſconſult, was miniſter of ſtate to the emperor Alexander Severus, who elevated him to the prætorſhip. His attachment to the pagan ſuperſtitions inſpired him with a great hatred of the Chriſtians. He was put to death by the ſoldiers in 226. Some of his fragments are extant.—Moreri.

Ulug-Beigh, a Perſian prince, and an eminent aſtronomer. His Catalogue of the Fixed Stars, rectified to the year 1434, was publiſhed by Dr. Hyde at Oxford, in 1665, 4to. The prince was ſlain by his ſon in 1449, after reigning at Samarcande about 40 years. There is another work by him upon Chronology, tranſlated into Latin by Greaves, and publiſhed with the original Arabic in 1650, 4to.—Ibid.

Upton (James), a learned divine, was born in Cheſhire in 1670, and educated at Eton, from whence he was elected to King's college, Cambridge, where he obtained a fellowſhip. He afterwards became maſter of the grammar ſchool at Taunton, in Somerſetſhire, where he died in 1749. He publiſhed an excellent edition of Aſcham's School-maſter, with notes, 8vo. 1711; and another of Ariſtotle's Art of Poetry. His ſon, James, was born at Taunton, and educated at Exeter college, Oxford, after which he became rector of Riſſington, in Glouceſterſhire, and prebendary of Rocheſter. He died in 1760. His works are, an Edition of Epictetus, 2 vols. 4to.: another of Spenſer's Faerie Queene, 2 vols. 4to.; and Obſervations on Shakſpeare, 8vo.—Anecd. Bowyer.

Urban V. pope, was born at Griſac, of a noble family. He became a benedictine, and abbot of St. Victor at Marſeilles. On the death of Innocent VI in 1362, he was elected to the papacy. He removed the papal ſeat from Avignon to Rome. This pope founded many churches, and reformed numerous abuſes. He died in 1370—Platina. Bower.

Urban VI. an Italian, was elected to the papal chair in 1378. The cardinals afterwards choſe Robert of Geneva, who took the name of Clement VII. Urban ſeverely perſecuted his enemies after ſecuring his ſeat. He died in 1389.—Bower.

Urban VIII. (Maffeo Barberino), aſcended the pontifical throne in 1623. He condemned the Janſeniſts, and died in 1644.

He wrote Latin poems, printed at Paris, in folio, and Italian poems, printed at Rome in 1640, 12mo.—Tiraboſchi.

URCÆUS (Anthony Codrus), a learned Italian, was born in 1446. His works are, Speeches, Letters, and Poems, in Latin. He died in 1500.—Bayle.

URSINUS (Zachariah), a proteſtant divine, was born at Breſlaw in 1533. On turning Calviniſt he was perſecuted by the Lutherans, which induced him to go to Heidelburg, and from thence to Neuſtadt, where he became profeſſor of divinity. He died in 1588. His works have been printed in 3 vols. folio. He is not to be confounded with George Urſinus, a Daniſh divine, who publiſhed a learned treatiſe on the Hebrew Antiquities.—Ibid.

URSINUS (John Henry), a lutheran divine, who was ſuperintendant of the churches of Ratiſbon. He died in 1667. His works are, 1. Exercitationes de Zoroaſtro, Hermete, Sanchoniathone, 8vo.; 2. Sylvæ Theologicæ Symbolicæ, 12mo.; 3. De Eccleſiarum Germanicarum origine et progreſſu, 8vo. His ſon, George Henry, wrote ſome philological works. He died in 1707.—Ibid.

URSUS (Nicolas-Raymarus), a Daniſh mathematician, was in his youth a ſwineherd, and did not learn to read till he was eighteen. His progreſs afterwards was very rapid, both in the languages and ſciences. He taught mathematics at Straſburgh, from whence he was invited to a profeſſorſhip at Prague. He died in 1600. He invented an aſtronomical ſyſtem ſo like that of Tycho Brahe as to bring him into a diſpute with that aſtronomer reſpecting the right of diſcovery.—Moreri.

USHER (James), an illuſtrious prelate, was born of an antient family at Dublin in 1580. His uncle, Henry Uther, archbiſhop of Armagh, the founder of Trinity college, placed him in that ſeminary, where he made a great progreſs in all kinds of learning. At the age of ſixteen he formed a Chronology of the Bible, in Latin, which was the origin of his great work, afterwards publiſhed under the title of Annals of the Old and New Teſtament, the beſt edition of which is that of Geneva in 1722, in 2 vols. folio. In 1607 he was appointed profeſſor of divinity at Dublin, and chancellor of St. Patrick's cathedral. In 1620 he was promoted to the biſhopric of Meath, from whence he was tranſlated to the archbiſhopric of Armagh in 1626. On the breaking out of the Iriſh rebellion he retired to England, and was promoted to the ſee of Carliſle, from which he received no advantage, owing to the civil wars and the abolition of epiſcopacy, of which he approved himſelf a zealous advocate. The curators of the univerſity of Leydea offered him a profeſſorſhip, which he declined; as he alſo did an invitation from cardinal Richelieu to ſettle in France with the free liberty of his religion. He died in 1656, and was buried in Weſtminſter-abbey. Beſides his Annals, he publiſhed a Body of Divinity, folio; the Hiſtory of Gotteſchalc in Latin; Antiquitates Eccleſiarum Britannicarum, folio; an Edition of the Epiſtles of Ignatius, Barnabas, and Polycarp, with notes; Sermons, and other learned works.—Life by Parr, prefixed to Uſher's Letters, 1686, folio.

UTENBOGAERT (John), one of the principal ſupporters of the Remonſtrants, was born at Utrecht in 1557, and died at the Hague in 1644. His principal works are, an Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory, folio; and Memoirs of his own Life, 4to.—Moreri.

UTENHOVIUS (Charles), a learned writer, was born at Ghent in 1536, and died at Cologne in 1600. He wrote Latin Poems; Epiſtolarum Centuria; Mythologia Æſopica, metro Elegiaco, 8vo.—Ibid.

V.

VAILLANT (John Foy), a French medalliſt, was born at Beauvais in 1632. He ſtudied medicine, in which he took his doctor's degree. Colbert employed him to collect medals in the Eaſt for the royal cabinet. On his return he was taken by the Algerines. After a captivity of ſome months he recovered his liberty, and being in danger of ſhipwreck he ſwallowed ſome of his largeſt medals, which did not come away for a conſiderable time. In 1702 he became penſionary of the academy of inſcriptions. He died in 1706. His principal works are, 1. Hiſtory of the Cæſars, 2 vols. 4to.; 2. Seleucidarum Imperium, 4to.; 3. Hiſtoria Ptolomæorum, Ægypti Regum, folio; 4. Nummi Antiqui Familiarum Romanarum, 2 vols. folio; 5. Numiſmata Græca, folio. His ſon, John Francis, was a learned phyſician and medalliſt. He died in 1708. He wrote a Treatiſe on the Nature and Uſe of Coffee; and a Diſſertation on the Cabiri.—Moreri.

VAILLANT (Sebaſtian), a French phyſician and botaniſt, was born at Vigny, near Pontoiſe, in 1669. He became ſuperintendant of the royal garden, and a member of the academy of ſciences. He died in 1722. His works are, 1. Remarks on Tournefort's Botanical Inſtitutions; 2. Diſcourſe on the Structure of Flowers; 3. Botanicon Pariſienſe, or a Deſcription of Plants which grow about Paris, folio, with plates; 4. a ſmall Botanicon, 12mo. 1743.—Halleri Bibl. Botan.

VAILLANT (Willeran), a portrait painter, was born at Liſle in 1633. He was employed at the French court, and died in 1677. His brother Bernard was a good painter of portraits in crayons.—Pilk.

VAISSETTE (Joſeph), a learned benedic-ine of the congregation of St. Maur, was born at Gaillac in 1685. He wrote a Diſcourſe on the Origin of the French Nation; Hiſtory of Languedoc, folio; a Univerſal Geography, 4 vols. 4to. He died in 1756. —Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

VALENS (Flavius), emperor of the Eaſt, was the ſon of Gratian, and born in Pannonia in 328. He was taken as aſſociate in the empire by his brother Valentinian in 364. He was a zealous Arian, and violently perſecuted the orthodox biſhops. Valens forced the Goths to make peace, but imprudently ſuffered them to ſettle in Thrace, where they were joined by great numbers of barbarians, and the war being renewed he marched againſt them, but was defeated near Adrianople. His ſoldiers carried him off and lodged him in a houſe, to which the purſuers ſet fire, and he was burnt A.D. 378.—Crevier.

VALENTIN (Moſes), an eminent painter, was born at Colomiers in Brie, in 1600. He adopted the manner of Caravaggio, and his pieces are highly eſteemed. He died at Rome in 1632.—De Piles.

VALENTINE, an hereſiarch of the ſecond century, was a native of Egypt, and a philoſopher of the platonic ſect. Being diſappointed of a biſhopric, he ſeparated from the church, and improved upon the gnoſtic notion of Æons, certain beings, as he pretended, by whom the world was created and governed. He gained followers, and died A.D. 160.—Moſheim.

VALENTINE (Baſil), the fictitious name of a chemical author in the ſixteenth century, whoſe writings are in the German language, but have been tranſlated into Latin and Engliſh. The principal are, 1. Currus Triumphalis Antimonii, or the Triumphant Chariot of Antimony, Amſt. 1671, 12mo.; 2. the Twelve Keys of Philoſophy, 8vo; 3. Teſtament of Baſil Valentine, 12mo.—Moreri.

VALENTINE (Michael Bernard), profeſſor of medicine at Gieſſen, was born there in 1657, and died in 1729. He wrote, 1. Hiſtoria Simplicium Reformata, folio; 2. Amphitheatrum Zootomicum, folio; 3. Medicina Nova-Antiqua, 4to.; 4. Cynoſura Materiæ Medicæ, 3 vols. 4to.; 5. Viridarium Reformatum, folio; 6. Corpus Juris Medico-legale, folio; 7. Phyſiologiæ Biblicæ Capitæ Selectæ, 4to.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

VALENTINIAN I. emperor of the Weſt, was the eldeſt ſon of Gratian. He gave the empire of the Eaſt to his brother Valens, in 364, after which he defeated the Germans, and quelled the revolt in Africa. The Quadi having taken up arms in 374, he marched againſt them and ravaged their country with fire and ſword, which compelled them to ſue for peace; but while he was ſpeaking to their ambaſſadors he broke a blood veſſel through paſſion, of which he died A.D. 375. His ſon, Valentinian II., was ſaluted emperor on his father's death by the ſoldiers, but he did not obtain it till his brother Gratian's death in 383. He was dethroned by the tyrant Maximus in 387. Theodoſius reſtored him after defeating Maximus the year following; but in 392 he was ſtrangled by his general, Arbogaſtes. Valentinian was a prince of great virtues and eminent piety. There was a third emperor of this name, who was the grandſon of Theodoſius the Great, and acknowleged emperor in 423 at the age of ſix years, under the guardianſhip of his mother, Placidia, who governed with great prudence; but when Valentinian came of age he plunged into debauchery, and ruled with ſuch tyranny that he was aſſaſſinated in 455.—Crevier.

VALERIANUS (Publius Licinius), a Roman, who was proclaimed emperor by his ſoldiers in Rhætia in 254. He aſſociated his ſon Gallienus in the government, and perſecuted the chriſtians. He made war on the Goths and Scythians with ſome ſucceſs, but he was taken priſoner in an expedition againſt Sapor, king of Perſia, who carried him to his capital in triumph, and treated him with great indignity, after which he ordered him to be flayed alive, and his body to be rubbed with ſalt, in which ſtate he expired, A.D. 270, aged 71. His ſkin being tanned red was nailed up in a temple.—Ibid.

VALERIANUS (Pierius), a learned Italian, was born at Belluno, in the ſtate of Venice, about 1475. Leo X. and Julius II. offered him a biſhopric, which he refuſed, and accepted only the place of apoſtolic notary. He died in 1558. His chief works are Latin Poems in 2 vols. 8vo.—Moreri.

VALERIUS MAXIMUS, a Latin hiſtorian, who ſerved with Sextus Pompeius in the army, and at his return wrote a collection of remarkable actions and ſayings of eminent Romans, dedicated to Tiberius. The beſt edition is that of Leyden with notes, 8vo. 1670.—Voſſius.

VALESIUS (Henry), or Henry de Valois, a learned critic, was born at Paris in 1603; he was brought up to the bar, which profeſſion he abandoned and devoted himſelf to literary purſuits. His merit procured him the place of hiſtoriographer to the king, and a penſion; he alſo received another from the clergy of France for publiſhing an edition of the Ancient Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtorians, printed at Amſterdam in 1699, in 3 vols. folio; and at Cambridge in 1720. He became blind, and died in 1726. His brother Adrian was alſo royal hiſtoriographer, and publiſhed a work entitled, Geſta Francorum, 3 vols. folio. He died in 1692. —Niceron.

VALINCOURT (John Baptiſt Henry du Trouſſet de), a French writer, was born in Picardy in 1653, and died in 1730. He wrote, the Life of Francis of Lorrain, Duke of Guiſe, 12mo.; Critical Obſervations on the Œdipus of Sophocles, 4to. &c.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

VALKENBURGH (Theodore), a painter, was born at Amſterdam in 1675. He acquired conſiderable property, which he loſt in an unfortunate voyage to the Weſt Indies. He died very poor in his native country in 1721. His pictures, eſpecially thoſe repreſenting dead game, are valuable. There was another artiſt of this name, who died in 1623; he painted markets and ſports. —Houbraken.

VALLA (Laurence), an Italian writer, was born at Placenza in 1415. He revived the Latin language from Gothic barbarity; but he was a very rigorous critic. Having hazarded ſome free opinions reſpecting the doctrines of the Roman church he was condemned to be burnt, but was ſaved by Alphonſus, king of Naples. Valla was then confined in a monaſtery, but pope Nicholas V., who reſpected his talents, called him to Rome, and gave him a penſion. He died there in 1465. His works are, 1. on the Elegance of the Latin Language, folio, and at Cambridge in octavo; 2. Hiſtory of the Reign of Ferdinand, King of Arragon, 4to.; 3. Tranſlations of Thucydides, Herodotus, and Homer's Iliad; 4. Notes on the New Teſtament; 5. Treatiſe on Falſehood and Truth; 6. Fables.—Tiraboſchi.

VALLA (George), an Italian phyſician, was alſo a native of Placenza. He became profeſſor of belles lettres at Venice, where he died about 1460. He wrote De Expetendis et Fugiendis rebus, two vols. folio.—Ibid.

VALLE (Peter Della), a famous traveller, was a native of Rome. He travelled into Turkey, Egypt, the Holy Land, Perſia, and India, and on his return to Rome publiſhed an account of his voyages in fifty-four Letters; the beſt edition of which is that of Rome 1662, 4 vols. 4to. He died in 1652, aged 66.—Moreri.

VALLISNIERI (Anthony), an eminent Italian naturaliſt, was born in Tuſcany in 1661. He ſtudied under Malpighi, and afterwards became phyſician to the pope. He died in 1730. His works, which abound with curious diſcoveries in natural hiſtory and medicine, were printed at Venice in 3 vols. 4to. 1733.—Ibid.

VALSALVA (Antony Marie), a famous phyſician, was born at Imola, in Italy, in 1666. He was profeſſor of anatomy at Bologna, and wrote a valuable treatiſe concerning the Human Ear, 4to., and ſome Anatomical Diſſertations in Latin, printed at Venice in 2 vols. 4to. 1740. He died in 1723.—Halleri Bibl. Anat.

VALVERDA (John de), a famous Spaniſh phyſician, who accompanied the cardinal of Toledo to Rome. He wrote in Spaniſh a Treatiſe on Anatomy, printed at Venice in 1589. He was alſo the author of a Treatiſe de Animi et Corporis Sanitate tuenda, 1553.—Nic. Antonio. Hiſp. Scrip.

VANAKEN (Joſeph), a Flemiſh painter, was born at Antwerp. He excelled in painting ſatin, velvet, lace, and embroidery. He died in 1749. There was another of his name who painted landſcapes and ſea-pieces. —Pilkington.

VANBRUGH (ſir John), a dramatic writer and architect, was born in Cheſhire. His firſt comedy, called "the Relapſe; or, Virtue in Danger," was acted with applauſe in 1697, and encouraged him to produce ſeveral others, which were all well received, and ſtill hold their place on the ſtage. He was for ſome time clarencieux king of arms, which place he ſold; and in 1716 was appointed ſurveyor of Greenwich hoſpital. He was alſo comptroller-general of works, and ſurveyor of the royal gardens. Sir John built ſeveral ſuperb edifices, the principal of which is Blenheim, the ſeat of the duke of Marlborough. He died in 1726.—Biog. Dram.

VANCOUVER (captain George), of the royal navy, author of a Voyage of Diſcovery to the North Pacific Ocean, and Round the World, in the years 1790-1795. He died in 1798.

VANDALE (Anthony), a learned phyſician, was born in Holland in 1638. He was bred to trade, but quitted that profeſſion for the ſtudy of phyſic, which he practiſed with reputation at Haerlem, where he died in 1708. He wrote a Treatiſe on the Oracles, which was anſwered by ſeveral writers, and abridged by Fontenelle. Vandale was alſo the author of a work on the Origin and Progreſs of Idolatry; a Diſſertation on Ariſteas and the Septuagint Verſion, &c.—Moreri.

VANDER LINDEN (Henry), profeſſor of divinity at Franeker, was born in 1546. He ſuffered greatly on account of his attachment to the Reformation. He died in 1614. —Ibid.

VANDER LINDEN (John Antonides), grandſon of the preceding, was born at Enkhuyſen in 1609, and educated at Leyden, but he took his degree of doctor at Franeker, where he was choſen profeſſor of phyſic. In 1651 he accepted the profeſſorſhip at Leyden, where he died in 1664. His works are, 1. De Scriptis Medicis, 8vo.; 2 Selecta Medica, quarto; 3. Editions of the Works of Hippocrates, Celſus, and Spigelius.—Halleri Bibl. Anat.

VANDERMEER (John), a painter, was born at Haerlem in 1628, and periſhed in a ſhipwreck in 1690. He excelled in painting landſcapes and ſea views. His brother was alſo a good artiſt in repreſenting landſcapes and animals.—Houbraken.

VANDER-MONDE (Charles Auguſtin), a phyſician, was born at Macao, in China, in 1727, of European parents, and died at Paris in 1762. He wrote, a Collection of Medical and Surgical Obſervations, 12mo.; Eſſay on the Manner of Perfecting the Human Species, 2 vols. 12mo.; Dictionary of Health, 12mo. &c.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

VANDER-MEULEN (Anthony Francis), a painter, was born at Bruſſels in 1634. He excelled in painting horſes, huntings, ſieges, nd battles. He made repreſentations on he ſpot of moſt of the actions in which ouis XIV. was engaged. He married a aughter of Le Brun, and died at Paris in 690.—D'Argenville.

VANDERVELDE (Adrian), an eminent ainter, was born at Amſterdam in 1639. He excelled in painting landſcapes, which e adorned with figures. He alſo painted iſtorical ſubjects, and all his works are carce and valuable. He died in 1672.

VANDERVELDE (Iſaiah), a Flemiſh ainter, who died at Leyden about 1630. He painted battles and the attacks of robers. John Vandervelde, his brother, was good engraver.—Ibid.

VANDERVELDE (William), called the ld, a painter, was a native of Leyden, and rother to the laſt mentioned. He ſettled in England, where he obtained a penſion from he crown, and died in 1693. He painted ea fights and views of ſhipping in an admirable ſtyle. His ſon William, called Vandervelde the young, was born at Amſterdam in 1663, and died in London in 1707. He ainted in the ſame way as his father, whom he greatly ſurpaſſed.—Ibid.

VANDERVENNE (Adrian Vander), a painter, was born at Delft in 1589. His ſubjects were beggars drinking and dancing, which he exeeuted with great humour and boldneſs.—Houbraken.

VAN DYCK (ſir Anthony), a famous painter, was born at Antwerp in 1599, and educated under Rubens. He reſided ſome time at Rome, and then removed to Venice, where he ſtudied the works of Titian and Paul Veroneſe. On his return to Flanders his reputation roſe to ſuch a height that cardinal Richelieu invited him to France, but he preferred viſiting England, where he was employed by Charles I., who conferred on him the honour of knighthood. His greateſt works are in this country, where he married a daughter of the earl of Gowry. He died in 1641, and was buried in St. Paul's cathedral. He painted hiſtorical ſubjects, particularly a deſcent from the croſs, at Antwerp; but his performances in England are moſtly portraits of royal and noble perſonages.—Vertue. Pilkington.

VAN DYCK (Philip), a painter, was born at Amſterdam in 1680. His portraits, converſations, and hiſtorical ſubjects, are very fine. He died in 1752.—Ibid.

VANE (ſir Henry), eldeſt ſon of ſir Henry Vane, ſecretary of ſtate to Charles I., was born about 1612, and educated at Magdalen hall, Oxford. He then went to Geneva, where he became a republican and fanatic, on which account he quarrelled with his father, and made a voyage to New England. He returned in 1637, and on the breaking out of the civil war took an active part againſt the king. However, he oppoſed the uſurpation of Cromwell, who cauſed him to be impriſoned. In 1662 he was brought to trial for high treaſon, found guilty, and beheaded on Tower-hill. He wrote ſome fanatical books in a very perplexing ſtyle, and which are now forgotten.—Clarendon. Granger.

VANIERE (James), a French jeſuit, and Latin poet, was born in 1664. He wrote an excellent poem on rural ſubjects, entitled Prædium Ruſticum, the beſt edition of which is that of Paris 1756, 12mo. The author died at Toulouſe in 1739.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

VANINI (Lucilio), an atheiſt, was born at Taurisano, in the kingdom of Naples, in 1585. He ſtudied philoſophy and medicine, alſo theology and judicial aſtrology. He was ordained prieſt, but quitted the eccleſiaſtical profeſſion and invented a ſyſtem of atheiſm out of the works of Ariſtotle, Averroes, and Cardan. He alſo formed the ſtrange project of preaching atheiſm, and after travelling through Germany, Holland, and England, he went to Toulouſe, where he was arreſted and condemned to death by the parliament. He was burnt alive in 1619. He wrote, 1. Amphitheatrum Æternæ Providentiæ, 8vo.; 2. De Admirandis Naturæ Arcanis, 8vo. This is the work for which he ſuffered.—Niceron.

VANLOO (John Baptiſt), a celebrated painter, was born at Aix in 1684, and died there in 1746. He painted many portraits of illuſtrious perſonages in a fine taſte. His ſon Louis became principal painter to the king of Spain, and Charles Philip to the king of Pruſſia.—Ibid.

VANLOO (Charles Andrew), brother and pupil of the above, was born at Nice in 1705. After viſiting Italy he became painter to the king, chevalier of the order of St. Michael, and a member of the academy of painting. He died in 1765. He painted many fine hiſtorical pictures for the king of France.—D'Argenville.

VANMANDER (Charles), an hiſtorical and landſcape painter, was born near Courtray in 1548. His principal pictures are, Adam and Eve in Paradiſe, and the Deluge. He died in 1606.—De Piles.

VANNI (Francis), an hiſtorical painter, was born at Sienna in 1563. He chiefly painted religious ſubjects, and died in 1610. —Ibid.

VANSOMER (Paul), a portrait painter, was born at Antwerp in 1576, and died in 1621. He reſided in England many years, and was greatly encouraged by the nobility and gentry.—Vertue.

VAN SWIETEN (Gerard), an eminent phyſician, was born at Leyden in 1700 He became the pupil of Boerhaave, after which he went to Vienna, where he was appointed phyſician and librarian to the empreſs Maria Thereſa. He alſo read lectures on the Materia Medica, and Practice of Phyſic, with great reputation in that city, where he performed many eminent cures, and died in 1772. His principal work is a Commentary on the Aphoriſms of Boerhaave, 5 vols. 4to.

This has been tranſlated into Engliſh in octavo.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

VARCHI (Benedict), an Italian writer, was born at Florence in 1503. His principal performance is the Hiſtory of Florence, fol. He was alſo the author of ſeveral poems, and a work entitled Ercolano, or Dialogues on the Philoſophy of Language. He died in 1566.—Tiraboſchi.

VARCHI (Benedict), an Italian writer, was born at Fieſoli in 1503, and died at Florence in 1566, aged 63. He had been profeſſor of morality at Padua, and wrote Latin and Italian Poems; but his principal work is a Hiſtory of his own Times, folio, 1721. Tiraboſchi.

VARENIUS (Bernard), a Dutch phyſician, who wrote an excellent Syſtem of univerſal Geography; which was re-publiſhed with great improvements by Sir Iſaac Newton, in 1672, and has been tranſlated into Engliſh, in 2 vols. 8vo. He was alſo the author of a curious Deſcription of Japan and Siam. He died in 1660.—Moreri.

VARGAS (Francis), a celebrated Spaniſh magiſtrate, and ambaſſador from Charles V. to the council of Trent. On his return to Spain he was appointed a counſellor of ſtate. He wrote a work on the Juriſdiction of the Pope and Biſhops, for which he incurred the reſentment of the court of Rome; alſo Memoirs of the Council of Trent. He died in 1560.—Nic. Antonio de Scrip. Hiſpan.

VARGAS (Louis de), a Spaniſh painter, was born at Seville in 1528, and died in 1590. Two of his beſt performances are Chriſt bearing his Croſs, and Adam and Eve in Paradiſe.—Cumberland.

VARIGNON (Peter), a French mathematician, was born at Caen in 1654, and died at Paris in 1722. He was geometrician to the academy of ſciences, and profeſſor of mathematics in the college of Mazarin. His works are, a Treatiſe on Mechanics, and numerous papers in the Memoirs of the Academy.—Eloge by Fontenelle.

VARILLAS (Antony), a French hiſtorian, was born at Gueret in 1624. He wrote a Hiſtory of France; Anecdotes of Florence, or the Secret Hiſtory of the Houſe of Medicis; Hiſtory of the Revolution in Europe on Account of Religion; and other works, which betray great prejudice and want of candour. He died in 1696.—Moreri.

VARIUS, a Latin poet, who was the intimate friend of Virgil and Horace, and was appointed by Auguſtus to examine and reviſe the Æneid. Some of his fragments are in the Corpus Poetarum, by Maittaire.—Voſſius de Poet. Lat.

VARRO (Marcus Terentius), a Roman writer, was born B. C. 118. He ſerved under Pompey againſt the Pirates, on which occaſion he was honoured with a naval crown. He died B. C. 29. He dedicated to Cicero a treatiſe on the Latin language, and he wrote another, De Re Ruſtica; which are extant, with ſome fragments of his Menippean Satires. They were printed at Venice in 1474, folio; and at Rome in 1557, 8vo.—Ibid.

VARRO the Gaul, another Latin poet, was born in the province of Narbonne. He wrote a poem, De Bello Sequanico; and tranſlated into Latin verſe the Argonautics of Apollonius. Only ſome fragments remain.—Ibid.

VASARI (George), an Italian painter and architect, was born at Arezzo in 1514, and died at Florence in 1578. He ſtudied after Del Sarto and Michael Angelo, and copied the remains of ancient ſculpture; but he was deficient in colouring. He wrote the Lives of Celebrated Painters, Sculptors, and Architects, printed at Florence in 1568, 3 vols. 4to.; and at Rome in 1759, in the ſame form. The treatiſe on Painting, publiſhed at Florence in 1619, in 4to, was the production of his nephew.—Felibien. D'Argenville.

VATABLUS (Francis), a profeſſor of Hebrew in the royal college of Paris, was born in Picardy. He had ſo great a knowlege of the Hebrew, as to aſtoniſh the moſt learned Jews. He wrote notes on the Bible, printed in Stephens's Bible in 1545. Theſe were condemned by the faculty of theology at Paris, but they are very highly eſteemed. The laſt edition of Vatablus's Commentaries was printed in 1729, in 2 vols. folio. He died in 1547.—Bayle. Moreri.

VATTEL (N.), a celebrated writer on juriſprudence, was born at Neufchatel; his principal work is a Treatiſe on the Law of Nations, or the Principles of Natural Law applied to the Conduct of States and Sovereigns, 2 vols. 4to. 1753. This is eſteemed a ſtandard performance, and ranks next to the works of Grotius and Puffendorff. The author died about 1770, at Bruſſels.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

VAVASSOR (Francis), a French jeſuit, was born in 1605; he taught rhetoric and theology at Paris, where he died in 1681. He wrote two Latin poems, 8vo.; a treatiſe De Ludicra Dictione, or on the Burleſque Style; another on Epigrams; and a Diſſertation on the Perſon of Jeſus Chriſt.—Moreri.

VAUBAN (Sebaſtian le Preſtre, ſeigneur de), a celebrated engineer, was born in 1633. He entered early into the army, and diſplayed an extraordinary genius for the ſcience of fortification and military tactics. He ſerved ſome time under the prince of Condé, in the Spaniſh army, but was brought over by Mazarine, and acted as engineer at the ſiege of St. Menchould: he ſerved in the ſame capacity at the taking of ſeveral other places; and was employed in fortifying ſome ſtrong poſts, particularly Liſle. For his eminent ſervices he was created a marſhal of France in 1703. He died in 1707. His works are, 1. Treatiſe on Fortification, under the title of the French Engineer, 8vo.; 2. New Treatiſe on the Attack and Defence of Places, 8vo; 3. Eſſays upon Fortification, 12mo.; 4. Political Teſtament of M. Vauban, 12mo.—Eloge par Fontenelle.

VAUGELAS (Claude Favre, lord de), a French writer, was born at Bourg, in Breſſe, in 1585. He was chamberlain to the duke of Orleans, but died poor in 1650. Vaugelas was a member of the French academy, and had a conſiderable concern in their great dictionary. He alſo wrote two excellent works; one entitled Remarks on the French Language, 4to.; and the other a tranſlation of Quintus Curtius.—Niceron.

VAUGHAN (ſir John), chief juſtice of the common pleas in the reign of Charles II. He died in 1674, and was buried in the Temple church: his reports were publiſhed after his death.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

VAUX (Nicholas, lord), a gallant Engliſh nobleman, who diſplayed ſuch proofs of valour at the battle of Newark in 1487, that he received the honour of knighthood. He became a great favourite with Henry VIII. and was created a peer. He died in 1522. In the Paradiſe of Dainty Deviſes are ſeveral elegant poems by lord Vaux, who is ſuppoſed to have been his eldeſt ſon Thomas.—Warton's Hiſt. Eng. Poet. Theatr. Poet.

VAUX (Noel Jourdan de), a French nobleman, was born in Burgundy, in 1705. He began his military career at the age of 19, as a lieutenant; and he ſerved in Italy at the ſieges of Pizzighitone and the caſtle of Milan. In 1734 he was made a captain, and was wounded at the battles of Parma and Gunſtalla. He commanded in Corſica in 1739, where alſo he was ſeverely wounded. In 1743 he ſerved in Bohemia, and diſtinguiſhed himſelf in the defence of Prague. He was alſo preſent in ſeveral battles, particularly that of Fontenoy. With 1500 men he covered the ſiege of Oudenarde, of which place he obtained the command. He alſo rendered eminent ſervice at the ſiege of Bruſſels, and at the battle of Rocroux. At the ſiege of Bergen-op-Zoom he was wounded by the burſting of a ſhell. In 1760 he was charged with the defence of Friedburgh. In 1769 he had the command in Corſica, which he completely ſubdued. For his great ſervices he was made commander in chief of Burgundy, and a marſhal of France. He died in 1788.

VEGA (Lopez Felix de), a Spaniſh poet, was born at Madrid, of a noble family, in 1562. He became ſecretary to the duke of Alva, and after the death of his ſecond wife he entered into orders. Pope Urban VII. created him doctor of divinity, ſent him the croſs of the order of Malta, and gave him a place in the apoſtolic exchequer. He died in 1635. His principal performances are comedies, which were acted with ſuch ſucceſs at Madrid as to produce the author a conſiderable fortune. His compoſition was ſo ready, and his invention ſo fertile, that he ſometimes wrote a comedy within the compaſs of a ſingle day. He alſo wrote ſeveral poems; and all his works make twenty-five volumes.—Nic. Antonio de Hiſt. Script.

VEGETIUS (Flavius Renatus), a Latin writer in the fourth century. He wrote Military Inſtitutions, which give a very exact view of the ancient tactics. He was alſo the author of a Treatiſe on the Veterinary Art, which is contained in the Rei Ruſticæ Scriptores; Leipſic, 2 vols. 4to. The Military Inſtitutions were printed at Paris in 1762, 12mo.—Voſſius.

VEIL (Charles Marie de), a Jew of Metz, who was converted to chriſtianity by Boſſuet, and became a canon regular of the order of St. Auguſtine; but about 1679 he came to England, and turned baptiſt preacher, and died about 1690. He wrote Commentaries on the minor prophets, and other books of the Scripture. His brother, Lewis, was alſo converted, and became a proteſtant. He publiſhed a treatiſe entituled Catechiſmus Judæorum in Diſputatione et Dialogo Magiſtri et Diſcipuli, ſcriptus a R. Abrahamo Jagel, monte Silicis oriundo, Hebrew and Latin, 1679.—Moreri.

VELASQUEZ (Don Diego de Silva), a Spaniſh painter, was born at Seville in 1594, and died at Madrid in 1660. Philip IV. appointed him his firſt painter, conferred on him the order of knighthood, and granted him a liberal penſion. Few of his pictures are to be ſeen out of his native country.—Cumberland's Anecd. of Spaniſh Painters.

VELLEIUS-PATERCULUS, a Roman hiſtorian, was born of a noble family in Campania. He was a military tribune, and ſerved under Tiberius in Germany: being the friend of Sejanus, he is ſuppoſed to have ſuffered at the time of his fall. Paterculus wrote an epitome of the Hiſtory of Greece and Rome, of which only a part remains. The beſt editions are that of Rhunkenius, Leyden, 2 vols. 8vo. 1779; and that of Burman, 1719, 8vo.—Voſſius de Hiſt. Lat.

VELSERUS (Mark), or Welſer, a learned civilian, was born at Augſburg, and died in 1614. His works are—1. Rerum Auguſto-Vindelicarum, folio; 2. Rerum Boicerum, 4to.—Moreri.

VELTHEIM (A. F. count), an eminent mineralogiſt, was a native of Brunſwick. He became ſuperintendant of the mines in the Hartz, and publiſhed a diſſertation on the Formation of Baſaltes; another on the Vaſes of the Ancients; on Memnon's Statue; and the Barberini, or Portland Vaſe. He alſo wrote on the Art of making Glaſs, and ſeveral other curious works. The univerſity of Helmſtadt conferred on him a doctor's degree, and the king of Pruſſia created him a count. He died in 1801.—Monthly Mag.

VENDOME (Louis Joſeph, duke de), a celebrated French general, was born in 1654, and entered early into the army as a volunteer under Louis XIV. in Holland. After passing through the different ranks, he became a general, and was sent into Spain, where he took Barcelona in 1697. The king named him commander in chief in Italy, in 1702, in the room of Villeroy, who had been very unsuccessful. Vendome changed the face of affairs, and gained several victories over the Imperialists. In 1705 he defeated prince Eugene at Cassano, and was on the point of taking Turin, when he was recalled to take the command in Flanders, where he was defeated by the duke of Marlborough. He then went into Spain, restored Philip to his capital, and took the English army, under lord Stanhope, prisoners. He died in Spain in 1712.—Ibid.

VENERONI (John), a French writer, was born at Verdun. He taught Italian at Paris, and, to pass for a Florentine, italianized his name from Vigneron to Veneroni. He wrote, 1. A Method of learning Italian, 1770, 12mo. This grammar has been translated into English, in 8vo. 2. A Dictionary, Italian and French, and French and Italian, 4to.; 3. Select Fables; 4. The Letters of Loredano and cardinal Bentivoglio translated into French.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

VENETIANO (Dominic), a Venetian painter, who introduced oil painting into Italy, but communicating the secret to Castagno, he was basely murdered by him, that he might have the secret to himself —Pilkington.

VENIUS, or VAN VEEN. (Otho), a painter, was born at Leyden in 1556. He studied under Zucchero at Rome, after which he went to Antwerp, and from thence to Brussels, where he died in 1634. He had a great knowlege of the claro obscuro. He was also a good writer, and published Amorum Emblemata, and several other works, with plates after his own designs. Rubens was his disciple.—De Piles. Felibien.

VENN (Henry), an English divine, was born at Barnes in Surrey, in 1725, and received his education at Jesus college, Cambridge, where he took his degrees in arts, and became fellow of Queen's college. In 1759 he was presented to the living of Huddersfield, in Yorkshire, which in 1770 he resigned for that of Yelling in Huntingdonshire. He died at Clapham in 1796. Mr. Venn wrote The Complete Duty of Man, (very different from the Whole Duty of Man); Sermons on various Subjects, 8vo.; Mistakes in Religion exposed, 8vo.; and several single sermons. He was a high Calvinist.—Necrology, 1798.

VENNER (Tobias), an English physician, was born at Petherton, in Somersetshire, in 1577; and educated at Alban-hall, Oxford. In 1613 he took his doctor's degree, and practised first at Bridgewater, and afterwards at Bath; he died in 1660. He wrote a book entitled, Via recta ad Vitam longam; or an Easy Way to a Long Life; also a Treatise on the Bath Waters.—Wood.

VENNER (Thomas), a fanatic in the reign of Charles II. He was a cooper in London. He opposed all government, republican and monarchical, asserting that the kingdom of Jesus on earth was begun. He and his followers were called fifth-monarchy men; and soon after the Restoration they proclaimed king Jesus publicly in the streets, for which Venner and twelve others were executed in 1661.—Echard's Hist Eng.

VERDIER (Cæsar), a French surgeon, was born near Avignon. He read lectures at Paris with great reputation, and died there in 1759. He wrote, 1. Abridgment of Anatomy, 2 vols. 12mo.; 2. Memoirs on Surgery; 3. Treatise on Midwifery, 12mo.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

VERE (Edward), earl of Oxford, was educated at St. John's college Cambridge. He was eminent for his valour and literary talents. In 1588 he sat upon the trial of Mary queen of Scots, and had a command in the fleet serving against the Spanish armada. He died in 1604. His poems were much admired in his time. There is a specimen in Percy's Reliques of Antient Poetry; and another in England's Parnassus, 4to. 1600 —Theatr. Poet.

VERE (sir Francis), an English general, was born in 1554. In 1585 he went to Holland with the forces sent by queen Elizabeth, under the command of the earl of Leicester. In 1596 he was appointed governor of Flushing, and afterwards gained immortal honour at the battle near Nieuport, and for his gallant defence of Ostend against the Spaniards. He displayed equal bravery and skill at the siege of Bergen-op-Zoom, and many other occasions. He died in 1608. Sir Horace Vere, his younger brother, served with him in the Low Country wars, and afterwards had the command of the forces sent by king James to the Palatinate. He escaped by wonderful presence of mind and skilful manœuvres from Spinola, with only four thousand men. He was created lord Vere by Charles I. and died in 1635 —Collier. Granger.

VERELST (Simon), an eminent Flemish painter, who excelled in flowers and fruits; he visited England, and died in 1710 —Vertue. Pilkington.

VERGENNES (Charles Gravier, count de), a French minister of state, was born of a noble family in Burgundy. In 1755 he was sent ambassador to Constantinople, and afterwards to Sweden; but when Louis XVI. came to the throne he was recalled, and made minister of foreign affairs. He displayed the qualities of a profound statesman, particularly in the peace of 1783. He died in 1787. There has been attributed to him an Historical and Political Memoir upon Louisiana, 2 vols. 8vo. printed in 1802.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

VERHEYEN (Philip), an eminent anatomist, was born in Holland in 1648. He laboured as a husbandman till he was twenty-two years of age, and then gained a place at the univerſity of Louvain, where he ſtudied medicine, received his doctor's degree, and obtained a profeſſorſhip. He died in 1710. His works are, 1. De Corporis Humani Anatomia, 2 vols. 4to.; 2. De Febribus, 8vo.—Halleri Bibl. Anat.

VERMEYEN (John Cornelius), an eminent painter, was born near Haerlem, and died at Bruſſels in 1559, aged 59. His beard was ſo long as to reach the ground. He was greatly employed and eſteemed by the emperor Charles V.—Houbraken.

VERNET, a French painter, was born at Avignon in 1712. He diſplayed great talents in his native country, and greatly improved them at Paris, where he was highly eſteemed, and became the firſt marine painter in Europe. He died in 1789.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

VERNON (Edward), a brave Engliſh admiral, was born in Weſtminſter, in 1684. He was unſucceſsful in his expedition againſt Carthagena in South America; but, in 1739, he took Porto Bello with a ſmall force. He died in 1757.—Mortimer. Smollett.

VERROCHIO (Andrew), a painter and ſtatuary, was born at Florence in 1432, and died in 1488. He diſcovered the art of taking buſts in plaſter, from the faces of dead or living perſons. He executed ſome fine ſtatues in bronze, but his paintings were indifferent.—De Piles. Felibien.

VERSCHURING (Henry), a painter, was born at Gorcum, of which place he was choſen a magiſtrate, but without quitting his profeſſion. He was drowned in 1690, aged 63.—Houbraken.

VERSKOVIS (James Francis), an artiſt, was born in Flanders: he carved figures and buſts, in ivory and wood; he had a ſon who was eminent in painting. Both died in England about 1749.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

VERSTEGAN (Richard), an Engliſh antiquary, was born in London of Flemiſh parents, and educated at Oxford, which he left without taking a degree. Being a roman catholic, he went to Antwerp, where he wrote a Reſtitution of Decayed Intelligence in Antiquities concerning the moſt noble and renowned Engliſh Nation, 4to; this was reprinted at London in 1634, and contains many curious paſſages; the laſt edition is in 8vo. 1674. Verſtegan alſo wrote, the ſundry ſucceſſive Regal Governments of England; and ſome other works. He died 1625.—Wood, A. O.

VERTOT (René Aubert de), a French hiſtorian, was born in Normandy in 1655. He became a capuchin, but afterwards quitted that order, and entered among the canons regular of Premontre. In 1705 he was admitted a member of the academy of belles-lettres, and in 1715 was appointed hiſtoriographer of the order of Malta. He died in 1735. His works are, Hiſtory of the Revolutions of Portugal, 12mo.; another of the Revolutions of Sweden; and a Hiſtory of the Roman Revolutions; Hiſtory of Malta, 4 vols. 4to. and 7 vols. 12mo.; Origin of the Grandeur of the Court of Rome; and a Critical Hiſtory of the Eſtabliſhment of the Britons among the Gauls.—Moreri.

VERTUE (George), an engraver, was born in London in 1684. His works are moſtly portraits. He wrote a Hiſtory of Painting and Painters in England, which was publiſhed by Horace Walpole, in 4 vols. 4to. Vertue died in 1757.

VERUS (Lucius Ceionius Commodus), a Roman emperor, was the ſon of Ælius and Domitia Lucilla, and adopted by Marcus Aurelius. He commanded againſt the barbarians in the Eaſt, whom he defeated, and was honoured with a triumph. He was alſo admitted as aſſociate in the empire, but died of an apoplexy in an expedition into Germany, in the 39th year of his age. He was a prince of diſſolute manners.—Crevier.

VESALIUS (Andrew), an eminent phyſician, was born at Bruſſels about 1514. He ſtudied at Paris under James Sylvius, after which he taught anatomy with great reputation in ſeveral univerſities: the emperor Charles V. and Philip II. of Spain appointed him their phyſician, but having opened the body of a Spaniſh gentleman, the relations reported him to the Inquiſition, and to expiate his offence he was obliged to go on a pilgrimage to the Holy Land. On his return the ſhip was loſt on the iſland of Zante, where he periſhed in 1564. He wrote, De Corporis humani Fabrica, Leyden, 2 vols. folio, 1722.—Halleri Bibl. Anat.

VESPASIAN (Titus Flavius), a Roman emperor, was deſcended from an obſcure family at Riti. He roſe entirely by his merit, and was rewarded with the conſular dignity for his public ſervices. Nero ſent him againſt Judæa, where he took ſeveral ſtrong places, and laid cloſe ſiege to Jeruſalem, which was afterwards taken by his ſon Titus. On the death of Vitellius, A. D. 69, he was proclaimed emperor by his army, and the choice was approved by the ſenate and people. He reformed the abuſes which prevailed in all departments of the ſtate, introduced excellent regulations for the correction of public morals, embelliſhed Rome with many uſeful works, fortified the cities of the empire, and proved himſelf the father of the people, while he refuſed the title. He was alſo a patron of men of learning, and diſcountenanced vice and immorality. This virtuous monarch died A. D. 79, aged 70.—Crevier.

VESPUTIUS (Americus), a native of Florence, who in 1497 made a voyage of diſcovery from Spain, by order of Ferdinand king of Caſtille. He diſcovered land about 1000 leagues W. of the Canaries, where he found ſigns of gold, and brought back ſome of the natives. In 1499 he ſailed again from Cadiz, and diſcovered what he conjectured to be a continent in five degrees of ſouth latitude. He made two other voyages in the ſervice of Emmanuel king of Portugal, and made ſome diſcoveries on the coaſt of Africa, but his accounts are very imperfect. It is, however, very extraordinary, that so vaſt a continent as the weſtern world ſhould be called after this adventurer's name inſtead of that of Columbus.—Churchill's Voyages.

VICARS (John), an Engliſh writer, was born in London, and educated firſt at Chriſt's hoſpital, and next at Queen's college, Oxford. He became uſher of the ſchool in Chriſt's hoſpital, and diſtinguiſhed himſelf in the civil wars as a zealous preſbyterian. He died in 1652. He wrote, God in the Mount, or England's Remembrancer, a poem, 4to.; Looking-glaſs for Malignants; and other virulent pamphlets againſt the royaliſts. Butler mentions him as "being inſpired with ale or viler liquors."—Hudibras. Wood, A. O.

VICARY (Thomas), the firſt anatomical writer in Engliſh, was ſerjeant-ſurgeon to Henry VIII. Edward VI. Mary I. and Elizabeth. He was alſo chief ſurgeon of St. Bartholomew's hoſpital. His book is entitled A Treaſure for Engliſhmen, contayning the Anatomy of Man's Bodie; publiſhed in 1548.—Aikin's Biog. Mem. of Medicine.

VICO (John Baptiſt) an ingenious writer, was born at Naples in 1670. He became profeſſor of rhetoric in the univerſity of his native place, where he died in 1740. His principal work is entitled Scienza Nuova.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

VICTOR-AMADEUS, the firſt king of Sardinia, ſucceeded his father as duke of Savoy in 1675. He joined the allies againſt France, on which marſhal Catinat was ſent againſt him, gained a great victory at Staffarde, and nearly ſubdued the whole of Savoy. Victor on the other hand entered Dauphiny, and made himſelf maſter of ſome ſtrong places, which, however, he was obliged to abandon, and to ſue for peace.—He made war again in 1701, having been promiſed by the emperor a conſiderable acceſſion of territory: the duke de Vendome took poſſeſſion of a conſiderable part of Savoy, and the French laid ſiege to Turin, which was relieved by Eugene. In 1713 Victor recovered the whole of his territory, and was acknowleged king of Sardinia. In 1730 he abdicated the throne to his ſon, but repenting of what he had done, he endeavoured to recover the crown. In this, however, he failed, and died in 1732, aged 67.—Univ. Hiſt.

VICTORIUS (Benedict), a phyſician, was born at Faenza, in Italy, about 1481. He was profeſſor at Bologna, and died about 1560. He wrote, De morbo Gallico, 8vo.; and ſome other works. Lionel Victorius, a relation of his, was alſo a medical profeſſor at Bologna, and died there in 1520. He wrote on the Diſeaſes of Children, 8vo.

VICTORIUS (Peter), a learned Italian, was born at Florence in 1499. His life was employed in collecting and explaining the antient Greek and Latin writers, particularly Varro. He was profeſſor of rhetoric and member of the ſenate at his native place, where he died in 1585.—Tiraboſchi.

VIDA (Mark Jerom), a modern Latin poet, was born at Cremona in 1470. He entered into the congregation of canons regular at Rome, where he was in great favour with Leo X. who gave him a priory; and Clement VII. as a reward for a poem dedicated to him, made him biſhop of Alba. He died in 1566. He wrote, 1. the Art of Poetry, a piece of great merit; 2. a poem on Verſification; 3. Scacchia Ludus, or a poem on Cheſs; 4. Hymnis de rebus divinis; 5. Chriſtiados libri ſex. Beſides theſe poetical works, he wrote Dialogues on the Dignity of a Republic, Letters, and other pieces in proſe. The beſt edition of his poems is that of Oxford, 3 vols. 8vo.—Ibid.

VIETA (Francis), a celebrated mathematician, was born at Fontenay in Poitou, in 1540. He was the firſt who uſed letters in algebra to deſignate known quantities. He alſo made corrections in the calendar, and improvements in geometry. He died in 1603. His works were publiſhed at Paris in 1646, in 1 vol. folio.—Moreri.

VIGAND (John), or Wigand, a German divine, was born at Mansfield in 1523. He had a ſhare in the Centuries of Magdeburg, printed at Baſle, in 13 vols. folio, 1562. He was appointed ſuperintendant of the churches in Pomerania, and died in 1587.—Melch. Adam.

VIGILIUS, an African prelate, and polemical writer, who flouriſhed about 484. His works were printed at Dijon in 1665, 4to.—Dupin.

VIGILIUS (pope), was a Roman, and obtained that dignity from Theodora, wife of Juſtinian, on a promiſe to revoke the acts of the council of Conſtantinople againſt the Eutychian biſhops in 537. He afterwards publiſhed a condemnation of that ſect, for which he was perſecuted and baniſhed. He died at Syracuſe in 555.—Platina.

VIGNOLE (James Barozzio), an Italian architect, was born at Vignola in 1507. He ſtudied at Rome, and afterwards viſited France, where he formed plans of ſeveral ſuperb works. The cardinal Farneſe recalled him to Rome, where he died in 1573. He wrote a Treatiſe on the Five Orders of Architecture, 3 vols. 4to.—D'Argenville.

VIGNOLES (Stephen de), better known by the name of de la Hire, a French captain, who ſignalized himſelf in the wars of Charles VII. He forced the duke of Bedford to raiſe the ſiege of Montargis, and accompanied Joan of Arc to the relief of that city, whereby he contributed to the re-eſtabliſhing of Charles on his throne. He died in 1447.—Moreri.

VILLALPANDUS (John Baptiſt), a Spaniſh Jeſuit, who died in 1608. He diſtinguiſhed himſelf by a learned Commentary on Ezekiel, 3 vols. folio, 1596. In this work is a very curious and exact deſcription of the city of Jeruſalem. He was alſo the author of an Expoſition on St. Paul's Epiſtles.—Nic. Antonio Hiſp. Script.

VILLARET (Claude), a French hiſtorian, was born at Paris in 1715. He was for ſome time an actor, but quitted the ſtage for a literary life. He died in 1766. Villaret continued Velly's Hiſtory of France. He alſo wrote a Treatiſe on the Art of Acting; and a Tract on the Mind of Voltaire, 8vo.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

VILLARS (Louis-Hector), marſhal of France, and grandee of Spain, was born at Moulins, in the Bourbonnois, in 1653. After diſtinguiſhing himſelf on various occaſions in the army, he was made marſhal-de-camp in 1690, and was ſent againſt Marlborough, but was defeated at Malplaquet, and dangerouſly wounded. He was appointed plenipotentiary for concluding a peace at Raſtadt, in 1714. In 1733 he was ſent into Italy, where he took Pizzighitone, but died ſoon after at Turin in 1734.—Ibid.

VILLENA (the marquis of), a Spaniſh poet, was of the royal houſe of Arragon, and lived at the beginning of the 15th century: he tranſlated the Æneis into Spaniſh verſe; but his beſt performance is his book on the Gaya Sciencia, in which he deſcribes the ceremonies of the Troubadours; his tranſlation of Dante into proſe is much eſteemed by his countrymen: he died in 1434.—Gen. Dict.

VILLENEUVE (Gabrielle Suſanna Barbot de), a celebrated French novel writer. She was the widow of Villeneuve, a lieutenant colonel in the French ſervice, and wrote the Young American; the Conjugal Phœnix; the Fair Hermits; and ſome other novels, the principal of which is, the Gardener of Vincennes. She died in 1755.

VILLIERS (George), duke of Buckingham, was born at Brookeſby in Leiceſterſhire, in 1592. After receiving a ſcanty education, he was introduced at the court of James I. who was ſtruck with his fine perſon, and made him his cup-bearer. The king alſo condeſcended to be his ſchool-maſter, appointed him gentleman of the bed-chamber, and knight of the garter. Honours and places were heaped on the favourite in rapid ſucceſſion; he was advanced to the dignity of duke, made lord high admiral, maſter of the horſe, and had the diſpoſal of all places in church and ſtate. He kept the ſame footing in the favour of Charles I. whom, when prince of Wales, he accompanied to Spain, to negociate a marriage with the infanta. But the people and parliament were diſcontented; votes and remonſtrances were paſſed againſt the duke, who cauſed the parliament to be diſſolved, and the ſupplies to be raiſed for the king's ſervice by illegal meaſures. War breaking out with France, the duke took the command of the expedition fitted out for the relief of Rochelle, inſtead of which he made a deſcent on the iſle of Rhé, and loſt the principal part of his forces. A new expedition was formed, but while the duke was at Portſmouth, and about to embark, he was ſtabbed by a diſcontented lieutenant named Felton, Aug. 23, 1628.—Clarendon.

VILLIERS (George), duke of Buckingham, ſon of the preceding, was born in 1627. He was educated at Cambridge, and on the breaking out of the civil wars, ſerved the king with great zeal till the ruin of the royal cauſe, when he went abroad. He accompanied Charles II. to Scotland, and was with him at the battle of Worceſter, when he had the good fortune to eſcape. By marrying the daughter of lord Fairfax, he recovered a principal part of his eſtate before the reſtoration, when he was made a lord of the bed chamber, member of the privy council, and maſter of the horſe. But entering into a conſpiracy againſt the king, he loſt his places. He afterwards recovered the royal favour, and was employed as ambaſſador to France. He died in 1688. The duke wrote a comedy by way of ridiculing the dramatic writers of his time, under the title of the Rehearſal. He was alſo the author of ſome poems. His morals were diſſipated.—Biog. Dram.

VINCENT (Thomas), a pious divine, who was ejected from the living of St. Mary Magdalen, in Milk-ſtreet. When the plague raged in London, he continued in the city, and preached regularly, to the great comfort of the inhabitants in that afflicting ſeaſon. He died at Hoxton in 1671. He wrote, God's Terrible Voice in the City by Plague and Fire, 8vo.; an Explanation of the Catechiſm; and other religious books.—Calamy.

VINCENT (Nathaniel), another non-conformiſt miniſter, was educated at Magdalen college, Oxford, and afterwards had the living of Langley Marſh, in Buckinghamſhire, from whence he was ejected in 1662. He ſuffered impriſonment for preaching in a conventicle, but obtained his releaſe, and died in 1697. He wrote the Converſion of a Sinner and the Day of Grace, 8vo.; ſeveral ſermons, and other pious books.—Ibid.

VINCI (Leonard de), a painter, was born in the caſtle of Vinci, near Florence, in 1445. Verrochio was his maſter, whom he ſoon excelled, as he did all the painters of his time. One of his greateſt performances was a picture of the Lord's Supper, at Milan, in which city he founded his celebrated ſchool of painting. He was alſo an excellent architect, and conſtructed the famous aqueduct which ſupplies Milan with water. From that place he went to Florence, where he laboured with Michael Angelo in ornamenting the grand council chamber. At the invitation of Francis I. he viſited the French court, and died in the arms of that monarch, in 1520. He wrote a Treatiſe on Painting, in Italian, folio, and ſome other works on the ſame ſubject.—De Piles.

VINES (Richard), a non-conformiſt divine, was born at Blaſton, in Leiceſterſhire, and educated at Magdalen college, Cambridge. On entering into orders, he obtained the rectory of Weddington, in Warwickshire. He joined the presbyterians in the civil war, and became a member of the assembly of divines at Westminster. He was also a frequent preacher before the parliament: and appointed master of Pembroke hall, Cambridge, which he resigned in 1650, because he would not take the engagement. He died in 1655. Several of his sermons have been printed.—Neal's Hist. Puritans.

VINNIUS (Arnold), professor of law at Leyden, was born in Holland in 1588, and died in 1657. He wrote a Commentary on the Institutes of Justinian, 2 vols. 4to; and another on the ancient law writers, 8vo.—Moreri.

VIRGIL (Publius Virgilius Maro), prince of the Latin poets, was born at Andes, near Mantua, about 70 years B. C. His first years were spent at Cremona, from whence he removed to Rome, when his country was partitioned out among the soldiers after the battle of Philippi. There, by means of his friend Mecænas, he was introduced to Augustus, who restored to him his estate. On this occasion he wrote his first Eclogue; and on completing the Bucolics, he undertook the Georgics. After these were finished, and had been read by Augustus, he began the Æneid, at the request of the emperor. This great poem has left the palm of superiority undecided between Homer and Virgil. The poet was engaged eleven years upon this immortal work, but died without revising it, at Brundusium, B. C. 19, and in the 51st year of his age. He left the greatest part of his property to Mecænas, Tucca, and Augustus. His remains were interred on the road leading from Naples to Puteoli, and the following epitaph was inscribed on his tomb: Mantua me genuit; Calabri rapuere; tenet nunc Parthenope: cecini pascua, rura, duces.

Virgil was of a remarkably timorous disposition; and as a proof of his modesty the following anecdote is recorded. Having written this distich on his patron,

Nocte pluit totâ, redeunt spectacula manè:
Divisum imperium cum Jove Cæsar habet, he placed it in the night on the gate of the palace. Enquiries were made by Augustus after the author of so fine a compliment, when Bathyllus, a miserable poet, avowed the verses, and obtained the reward. On this Virgil again wrote the same verses, and under them, with the beginning of another line in these words,

Hos ego versiculos feci, tulit alter honores;

Sic vos non vobis,

four times repeated. Augustus desired to have these lines completed, which Bathyllus could not effect. Virgil then finished them in this order:

Sic vos non vobis nidificatis aves;
Sic vos non vobis vellera fertis oves;
Sic vos non vobis mellificatis apes;
Sic vos non vobis fertis aratra boves.

Having thus proved himself the author of the distich, he received a reward, and the usurper was banished. The best editions of Virgil are Baskerville's, 4to, Birmingham, 1757; the Variorum, 8vo. 1661; and Glasgow, 12mo, 1758. This poet has been well translated into English by Dryden, Pitt, and Warton.—Biog. Classica.

VIRGINIA, daughter of the centurion L. Virginius. Appius Claudius, being enamoured of her charms, to obtain possession of her person, bribed a man to claim her as the daughter of his slave, when Appius, as judge, ordered her to be delivered into his hands. Virginius, who was at the camp, being informed of this infamous outrage, hastened to Rome, and, in the presence of Appius and the Roman people, plunged a knife into his daughter's bosom. He then returned to the camp, where he harangued the soldiers, who instantly marched to Rome. Appius destroyed himself in prison, and the office of decemvir was abolished, B. C. 449.—Livy.

VITELLIO, or VITELLO, a native of Poland, in the 13th century, who wrote a good treatise on optics, printed at Basil in 1572, folio.—Moreri.

VITELLIUS (Aulus), a Roman emperor, who rose by his vices. He was born of an illustrious family, and introduced himself into the favour of Tiberius by administering to his pleasures. He also gained the esteem of Caligula, Claudius, and Nero, by flattering their passions. Thus he possessed himself of the highest offices of the state; and by his lavish presents became a favourite with the soldiers. He was proclaimed in Germany by his army, at the same time that Otho was invested with the purple.—Three battles were fought between the rivals, which Vitellius lost; but in a fourth he was victor. His conduct was so licentious and extravagant, that the people revolted, and placed Vespasian on the throne. Vitellius, after suffering all manner of indignities from the populace, was put to death, and his body thrown into the Tiber, A. D. 69.—Tacitus. Suetonius.

VITRINGA (Campegius), professor of divinity at Franeker, was born at Leuwarden, in Friseland, in 1659. He died of an apoplexy in 1722. He wrote a Commentary on Isaiah, in 2 vols. folio; Apocalypseos Anachrisis, 4to.; Typus Theologiæ Practicæ, 8vo.; Synagoga Vetus, 4to.; Archisynagogus, 4to.; De Decemviris Otiosis Synagogæ, 4to.; Observationes Sacræ, 4to.—Campegius Vitringa, his son, was born at Franeker in 1693, and died in 1723. He wrote an Abridgment of Natural Theology.—Moreri.

VITRUVIUS (Marcus Vitruvius Pollio), a celebrated architect, was born at Formio, in Italy. He was greatly esteemed by Julius Cæsar, and employed by Augustus in constructing public buildings and warlike machines. He wrote a valuable Treatise on Architecture, the best edition of which is that of Amsterdam, in 1649, fol.—Felibien.

VIVARES (Francis), an ingenious engraver, was born in the village of St. John de Bruel, in Rouergue, in 1709. At the age of 18 he came to London, where his uncle, a master taylor, intended to bring him up to his own business. But he preferred the burin to the needle; and he was assisted in his favourite pursuit by Amiconi, an Italian painter, who gave him some instructions in drawing. He married when young, and had sixteen children by his first wife; and by his three wives thirty-one. He particularly excelled in landscapes, the foliage of his trees, and the richness of his foregrounds. Woollet had always one of his engravings before him when he was at work. He died in 1780.—Private Communication.

VIVES (John Lewis), a learned writer, was born in 1492, at Valentia, in Spain.—He came to England, and was employed in instructing princess Mary, daughter of Henry VIII.; but speaking freely of that monarch's divorce, he was sent to prison. On recovering his liberty, he went to Flanders, and died at Bruges, in 1540. He wrote a Commentary on St. Augustine's City of God; a Treatise on the Corruption and Decline of the Arts and Sciences; another on Religion, &c.—Moreri.

VIVIANI (Vincent), a mathematician, was born at Florence in 1621. He was the disciple of Galileo, and became first mathematician to the grand duke of Tuscany. He was a member of the academy of sciences at Paris, and died in 1703. His works are, 1. A treatise, entitled, Divination upon Aristeas, folio; 2. De Maximis et Minimis Geometricæ Divinatio, in quintum Conicorum Apollonii Pergæi adhuc desideratum, folio; 3. Enodatio Problematum Universis Geometris Propositorum a Claudio Commries, 4to.; 4. Treatise of Proportions, 4to.—Tiraboschi.

VOET (Gisbert), or Voetius, a learned divine and professor at Utrecht, who rendered himself remarkable by accusing Des Cartes of atheism; and the magistrates of that city were so weak as to condemn the apologetical letters of the philosopher upon the misrepresentations of this furious bigot, whose adherents were called Voetians. He died in 1677, aged 88. His works are, Politica Ecclesiastica, 4 vols. 4to.; Diatriba de Cœlo Viatorum, &c. His son Paul became professor of law at Utrecht, and wrote a Treatise on lawful and unlawful Duels, 12mo. He died in 1667.—Bayle.

VOISIN (Daniel Francis), minister of state and chancellor of France, died in 1718, aged 62. He was a man of inflexible integrity, as a proof of which the following anecdote is recorded. Louis XIV. had promised pardon to a notorious offender, but Voisin refused to seal the pardon: Louis in a rage demanded the seals, and having sealed the instrument offered them to his minister: "They are contaminated," said Voisin, "I will take them no more." Louis was struck with admiration at this, and threw the pardon into the fire. "Now," said Voisin, "I can take them, fire purifies every thing."—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

VOITURE (Vincent), an elegant writer, was born at Amiens in 1592. He attended the duke of Orleans into Languedoc, and was sent to negociate affairs of importance at Madrid, where he wrote some Spanish verses, which were ascribed to Lopez de Vega. He had several employments at court, but died poor in 1648. His poems and letters were printed after his death in 2 vols. 8vo.—Moreri.

VOLKOF (Feodor), a Russian actor, was born at Yaroslaf in 1729. By frequenting the German theatre he became passionately fond of the stage; and having constructed one in a private house, he performed with his brothers. His merits were soon perceived, and he was enabled to erect a proper theatre, and to collect a company. In 1752 he was sent for to Peterburgh, where the empress took him and his company into her service. Volkof was ennobled, and obtained a large estate. He died in 1763.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

VOLTAIRE (Marie-Francis Arouet de), a celebrated writer, was born at Paris in 1694. He received his education in the college of Louis the Great, and shewed proofs of a lively genius in his earliest years. He was intended for the law, which he renounced for poetry. Having an irresistible turn for satire, he was imprudent enough to write lampoons against the government; for which he was sent to the Bastile, where he continued a year. In 1718 appeared his tragedy of Oedipus, which experienced great success. In 1722 he produced his Mariamne, which was condemned in consequence of a ludicrous circumstance: Mariamne is represented as poisoned by order of Herod, and as the actress raised the cup to her mouth, a wag cried out, "The queen drinks!" This sarcasm proved the ruin of the piece. In 1726 he was again imprisoned in the Bastile; but after a confinement of six months he recovered his liberty, on which he went to England, where he published his Henriade by subscription. In 1730 came out his tragedy of Brutus, esteemed the best of his dramatic compositions. This was followed by several others, the principal of which are, Zara, Merope, Alzira, and Mahomet. His Philosophical Letters were burnt by a decree of parliament, and the author, apprehensive of the consequences to his person, withdrew from Paris. By the interest of Madame d'Etiole he gained the favour and protection of the court, and was appointed historiographer of France. In 1746 he was admitted a member of the French academy; and in 1750 the king of Prussia granted him a considerable pension. Voltaire paid that monarch a visit at Potsdam, where he was honourably entertained; but some differences arising between them, the poet quitted Prussia, carrying with him the poetical works of the king, who caused him to be arrested on the road, till the fugitive manuscript was restored. Voltaire then went to Colmar, from whence he removed to Geneva, and afterwards settled at Ferney, a village in the county of Gex, which he cultivated, and procured many ingenious artisans to settle there, whose works he sent to Russia, Germany, Spain, Italy, and Holland. At the beginning of the year 1778 he obtained leave to reside at Paris, where he was received with many flattering marks of distinction, but died there of a retention of urine, May 30, the same year. His remains were interred in the abbey of the Bernardins, near Troyes, but removed in 1791 by an order of the national assembly, and laid in the church of St. Genevieve, at Paris. Besides his poetical works, he wrote, Essay on General History; the Age of Louis XIV; Life of Charles XII. of Sweden; and History of the czar Peter the Great: the romances of Candide, Zadig, and some others. All his works have been published in 30 vols. 4to. and 70 vols. 8vo. He was cynical in his manners, an insidious enemy to Christianity, and insufferably vain and avaricious. As a writer, he was lively, brilliant, and imposing; but superficial and dogmatical.—Life prefixed to his Works.

Vondel (Josse, or Justus du), a Dutch poet, was born in 1537, of anabaptist parents, which sect he quitted, and turned Roman catholic. He died in 1679. His works make 9 vols. 4to.; the principal is a poem on the taking of Amsterdam, by Florence V. count of Holland.—Moreri.

Vopiscus (Flavius), a native of Syracuse, who flourished A.D. 304. He wrote the history of Aurelian, Tacitus, Florianus, Probus, Firmius, Carus, &c. printed at Leyden in the Historiæ Augustæ Scriptores, 2 vols. 8vo.—Vossius.

Vormar (Isaac), a learned German, who was employed as one of the Imperial plenipotentiaries in negociating the peace of Westphalia. He died in 1662. He wrote Memoirs of Public Affairs.—Moreri.

Vorstius (Conrade), a theological writer, was born at Cologne, in 1569. He took his doctor's degree at Heidelberg, and in 1611 succeeded Arminius in the divinity chair at Leyden. James I. king of England caused his book "de Deo" to be burnt, and complained to the states against the author, who retired to Torgau. He died in 1622. He published several other controversial books.—Ibid.

Vortigern, a British chief, who, on the departure of the Romans in 445, was elected king of South Britain. To repel the Scots and Picts he invited over the Saxons to his assistance, who landed in 450, under the command of Hengist and Horsa, and drove out the invaders. Vortigern fell in love with Rowena, daughter of Hengist, and on his marriage gave the father the kingdom of Kent, to which was afterwards added the whole of Wessex. Vortigern retired to Wales, and was burnt in his castle in 484.—Saxon Chron.

Vos (Martin de), a painter, was born at Antwerp about 1534, and died there in 1604. He painted history, portraits, and landscapes, in a very fine style.—Houbraken.

Vossius (Gerard John), a learned writer, was born near Heidelberg in 1577. He studied first at Dort and afterwards at Leyden, where he was appointed professor of philosophy in 1599; and at the same time he was chosen director of the college at Dort, notwithstanding his youth. In 1614 he accepted the charge of director of the theological college at Leyden, and afterwards was appointed professor of eloquence and chronology. His History of Pelagianism rendered him obnoxious to the Calvinists; but it procured him in England the favour of archbishop Laud, and a prebend in the cathedral of Canterbury. While in England he was admitted to the degree of doctor of laws at Oxford. In 1633 he accepted the professorship of history at Amsterdam, where he died in 1649. His works have been printed in 6 vols. folio.—Niceron.

Vossius (Dionysius), son of the above, was born at Dort in 1612. He was profoundly learned in the Oriental languages, and died at Amsterdam in 1633. He published a Latin translation of Maimonides on Idolatry, with notes, and other works.—Ibid.

Vossius (Isaac), another son of Gerard John Vossius, was born at Leyden in 1618. He visited Sweden on the invitation of queen Christina. In 1670 he came to England, and obtained from Charles II. a canonry of Windsor, and the degree of doctor of laws from the university of Oxford. He died in 1688. He published a book to prove that the Septuagint Version was produced by inspiration; but though he was remarkable for believing the strangest inconsistencies, he expressed some doubts respecting the sacred text, which made Charles II. say, "this learned divine is a strange man, he believes every thing but the Bible." His works are numerous.—Ibid.

Vossius (Gerard), a Romish divine, and relation of the above, was born in 1609. He published the works of Gregory Thaumaturgus, Ephrem Syrus, and some pieces of John Chrysostom and Theodoret, with Latin versions and notes.—Ibid.

Vouet (Simon), a painter, was born at Paris in 1582. He was for some time painter of the academy of St. Luke at Rome, but was recalled to France by Louis XIII., who employed him in ornamenting his palaces, and gave him a pension. He was the founder of the French school, and died in 1641.—De Piles.

Vroon (Henry Cornelius), a Dutch painter. He excelled in describing sea fights, and drew the designs for the tapestry in the house of lords which represent the destruction of the Spanish armada.—Houbraken.

W.

WADING (Peter), an Iriſh jeſuit, was born at Waterford in 1586. He became chancellor of the univerſities of Prague and Gratz, and died in the latter city in 1644. He wrote Latin poems, and a treatiſe againſt heretics in the ſame language.—Moreri.

WADSWORTH (Thomas), a nonconformiſt divine, was born in Southwark, and educated at Chriſt's college, Cambridge. At the reſtoration he was miniſter of Newington Butts, and of Laurence Pountney church, London, of which he was deprived in 1662. He died in 1676. He wrote on the Immortality of the Soul, and ſome Sermons.—Calamy.

WAGENSEIL (John Chriſtopher), a learned German, was born at Nuremberg in 1633. He took his degree of doctor of laws at Orleans, after which he became profeſſor of law and hiſtory at Altorf, but exchanged that profeſſorſhip for the chair of Oriental languages. He died in 1705. He wrote, 1. De Urbe Norimbergæ, 4to.; 2. Pera Librorum Juvenilium, 12mo.; 3. Tela Ignea Satanæ, 2 vols. 4to.—Moreri.

WAGNER (John James), a phyſician of Switzerland, was born i 1641. He became librarian of the city of Zurich, and died in 1695. He wrote, Hiſtoria Naturalis Helvetiæ Curioſa, 12mo.—Ibid.

WAGSTAFFE (Thomas), a learned divine, was born in Warwickſhire in 1645, and educated at the Charter-houſe in London, from whence he removed to New-Inn Hall, Oxford, where he took his degrees in arts. He afterwards became chancellor of Litchfield cathedral, and rector of St. Margaret Pattens, London, but was deprived at the revolution for refuſing the oaths. He practiſed phyſic for ſome time, and in 1693 was conſecrated a nonjuring biſhop. He died in 1702. Mr. Wagſtaffe publiſhed ſeveral Sermons, and an able Vindication of King Charles I. proving him the author of the Icon Baſilike.—Wood. Gen. Dict.

WAKE (William), a learned prelate, was born at Blandford, in Dorſetſhire, in 1657, and admitted a member of Chriſt church, Oxford, in 1672. In 1689 he took his doctor's degree, and afterwards became chaplain to king William and queen Mary, preacher to the ſociety of Gray's Inn, and canon of Chriſt church. In 1694 he obtained the rectory of St. James, Weſtminſter; in 1701 he was made dean of Exeter; in 1705 biſhop of Lincoln; and in 1716 tranſlated to Canterbury. He had a controverſy with Dr. Atterbury on the rights of convocations, and he entered into a correſpondence with ſome of the French biſhops about a union between the two churches. He died in 1737. The archbiſhop publiſhed a tranſlation of the Epiſtles of the apoſtolical Fathers, 8vo.; Expoſition of the Church Catechiſm; Tracts againſt Popery; and ſeveral Sermons.—Wood, A. O. Gen. Dict.

WAKE (Iſaac), a miſcellaneous writer, was born in Northamptonſhire, and elected fellow of Merton college, Oxford, in 1598. He became public orator of the univerſity, and was employed as ambaſſador to Venice and Savoy; on which occaſion he was knighted. He died in 1632. He wrote Rex Platonicus; Diſcourſe of the thirteen Cantons of the Helvetic League; on the State of Italy; on the Proceedings of the King of Sweden, &c.—Wood, A. O.

WAKEFIELD (Robert), a learned divine, was born in the north of England, and educated at Cambridge, after which he went abroad, and in 1519 was Hebrew profeſſor at Louvain. Shortly after he returned to England, became king's chaplain, and was appointed Hebrew profeſſor at Oxford. He was alſo made canon of Chriſt church, and died in 1537. He wrote a Paraphraſe on the Eccleſiaſtes; Syntagma de Hebræorum; and other works.—Ibid.

WAKEFIELD (Gilbert), a learned writer, was born at Nottingham in 1756. He received his education under Mr. Wooddeſon, at Kingſton-upon-Thames, of which pariſh his father was miniſter. In 1772 he entered of Jeſus college, Cambridge, where he took his bachelor's degree in 1776. The ſame year he publiſhed a collection of Latin Poems, with notes on Homer. In 1778 he entered into deacon's orders, and became curate of Stockport, in Cheſhire, from whence he removed to Liverpool. In 1779 he married, and about the ſame time quitted the church and undertook the office of claſſical tutor in the diſſenting academy at Warrington. While in that ſituation he publiſhed a number of works, the principal of which were, a tranſlation of the Firſt Epiſtle to the Theſſalonians; another of the Goſpel of St. Matthew; an Enquiry into the Opinions of the Chriſtian Writers of the three firſt Centuries, concerning the Perſon of Jeſus Chriſt, 4 vols. 8vo; and the Silva Critica. This laſt appeared from the Cambridge univerſity preſs. In 1790 he removed to the diſſenting college at Hackney, his connection with which ended in about a year. Soon after this he publiſhed a pamphlet againſt Public Worſhip, which ſtartled many of his moſt ardent admirers, and was anſwered chiefly by diſſenters. He continued to reſide at Hackney, engaged in claſſical ſtudies, till the progreſs of the French revolution and the war led him into the field of politics. He wrote ſome pamphlets againſt government, of which no notice was taken. But his Letter to the Biſhop of Landaff was conſidered as ſo inflammatory and of ſuch a dangerous tendency, that the attorney-general inſtituted a proſecution againſt him, and the publiſher

Mr. Wakefield was ſentenced to be impriſoned two years in Dorcheſter gaol, from whence he was liberated in May 1801, but died of a fever in September following. In his religious ſentiments he was a Socinian, and in his political a republican. As a claſſical ſcholar few excelled him; and his critical productions will be highly valued when his other works are ſunk in oblivion. The principal are, a tranſlation of the New Teſtament, 2 vols. 8vo.; Tragœdiarum Græcarum Delectus, 2 vo's. 12mo; and an edition of Lucretius, 3 vols. 4to.—Memoirs written by himſelf, 8vo. Monthly Mag.

WALDO (Peter), the author of the ſect of Waldenſes in the 12th century, was a merchant of Lyons. The ſudden death of a friend in his preſence proved the cauſe of his converſion. He gave his property to the poor, preached to them the truths of the goſpel, and gathered many followers. Being driven from Lyons they went into Dauphiny, Provence, and other countries. Though their manners were inoffenſive, yet as they ſeceded from the church of Rome, a cruſade was formed againſt them, by which many thouſands were deſtroyed. The ſect, however, ſtill continued, and ſpread over the vallies of Piedmont.—Moſheim.

WALES (William), an ingenious mathematician who went round the world with captain Cook in his firſt voyage as aſtronomer, and publiſhed, in a quarto volume, an Account of Aſtronomical Obſervations made in the Southern Hemiſphere. After his return he was appointed mathematical maſter of Chriſt's hoſpital, where he died in 1799. Beſides the above, Mr. Wales publiſhed Remarks on Mr. Forſter's Account of Cook's Voyage; an Enquiry into the Population of England and Wales; and an improved edition of Robertſon's Elements of Navigation. He alſo communicated a Diſſertation on the Achronical Riſing of the Pleiades to Dr. Vincent.—Gent. Mag.

WALKER (Clement), an Engliſh writer, was born at Cliffe, in Dorſetſhire, and educated at Chriſt church, Oxford, after which he retired to his eſtate in Somerſerſhire. Before the civil war he was made uſher of the exchequer, and was elected member of parliament for the city of Wells. He was ſo great an enemy to the independents and Cromwell that he was ſent to the Tower, where he died in 1651. He wrote, the Hiſtory of Independency, 4to., which contains many curious relations; the High Court of Juſtice, or Cromwell's Slaughter houſe, 4to.; and other works.—Wood.

WALKER (Edward), an hiſtorian, was born in Somerſetſhire. In 1639 he was made ſecretary at war, and was preſent at the battle of Edgehill in the royal army. In 1643 he was appointed garter king at arms, and knighted. After the reſtoration he became one of the clerks of the privy council. He died in 1676. He wrote, Hiſtorical Diſcourſes, folio; Order of the Ceremonies uſed at the Celebration of St. George's Feaſt at Windſor, 1674; Acts of the Knights of the Garter in the Civil Wars, &c.—Wood.

WALKER (William), a learned divine and grammarian, was ſucceſſively maſter of the ſchools of Lowth and Grantham, in Lincolnſhire, and had the honour of inſtructing ſir Iſaac Newton. He was rector of Colſterworth, in the ſame county, and died there in 1684, aged 61. He wrote ſeveral books on Grammar, Rhetoric, and Logic, but his principal performance is a Treatiſe on Engliſh Particles, 8vo.—Granger.

WALKER (John), an Engliſh divine, was of Exeter college, Oxford. He was a native of Devonſhire, and became rector of St. Mary's in the city of Exeter. For his work entitled, an Attempt towards Recovering an Account of the Sufferings of the Clergy in the great Rebellion, folio, 1714, he was created D D. by the univerſity of Oxford. He died about 1725.

WALKER (Robert), painter to Oliver Cromwell. Mr. Walpole ſays, that one of the portraits of the protector was purchaſed by an agent of the grand duke of Tuſcany for 500l. Walker died about 1670.

WALKER (Samuel), a pious divine, was born at Exeter in 1714. He was educated at Exeter college, Oxford, after which he entered into orders, and travelled with a young gentleman as his tutor. He ſettled at Truro, in Cornwall, where he conducted himſelf as an exemplary pariſh prieſt. He died in 1761. Mr. Walker publiſhed two volumes of Sermons on the Catechiſm, and two volumes of Practical Diſcourſes.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

WALKER (George), a celebrated Iriſh divine, who diſtinguiſhed himſelf by his gallant defence of Londonderry in 1689 againſt the forces of James II. till it was effectually relieved. He was ſlain at the battle of the Boyne.—Ibid.

WALKER (Obadiah), an Engliſh divine, was born in Yorkſhire, and educated at Univerſity college, Oxford, where he became fellow, but was deprived by the parliamentary viſitors in 1648. He recovered his place at the reſtoration, and in 1676 was choſen maſter of the college. He turned papiſt in the reign of James II., and publiſhed a virulent book againſt the character of Luther, and ſome other pieces. After the revolution he was deprived of the maſterſhip, on which he retired to London, and was maintained by his old pupil, Dr. Radcliffe. He died in 1698.—Wood, A. O.

WALL (Martin), a learned phyſician, was born at Powick, in Worceſterſhire, in 1708. He was educated at Worceſter college, Oxford, and afterwards choſen fellow of Merton college. He ſettled as a phyſician at Worceſter, and died at Bath in 1776. Wall had a fine taſte for painting, and deſigned the frontiſpieces to Hervey's Meditations. He wrote on the Virtues of Malvern Waters, and some other medical tracts. —Gen. Biog. Dict.

WALLACE (sir William), a famous Scotch gentleman, was born of a poor but antient family. Being resolved to deliver his country from the English yoke, he gathered a number of followers in 1298, attacked the enemy, and slew the earl of Warren. Wallace was revered as the saviour of the nation, and chosen regent during the captivity of Baliol. He penetrated into England, and ravaged Durham with fire and sword. Edward I., then in Flanders, immediately hastened home and marched against Wallace, who was defeated and fled. He was afterwards basely betrayed to the English, and executed in 1303.—Buchanan.

WALLER (Edmund), an English poet, was born at Colshill, in Buckinghamshire, in 1605. He received his education at Eton and King's college, Cambridge; but became a member of parliament at the age of eighteen, in which capacity he distinguished himself by some noisy speeches against the king and clergy. He, however, spoke against the abolition of episcopacy. In 1643 he was sent to the Tower on a charge of conspiring to deliver the city to the king. Two persons were executed for the plot, and Waller was condemned to be hanged, but saved himself by an abject submission and a liberal distribution of money. After a year's imprisonment he went into exile; but returned by favour of Cromwell, on whom he wrote an elegant panegyric. He also wrote another on the death of the protector, and afterwards celebrated the restoration and praised Charles II. He was also elected into parliament, where, by his eloquence and wit, he was the delight of the house. He endeavoured to procure the provostship of Eton, but being refused by Clarendon he joined in the persecution of that great man. He died in 1687, and was buried in the church of Beaconsfield. His Poems are easy, smooth, and generally elegant.—Johnson's Poets. Biog. Brit.

WALLIS (John), a learned divine and mathematician, was born at Ashford, in Kent, in 1616. He received his education at Emanuel college, Cambridge, from whence he removed to Queen's college, on obtaining a fellowship. In 1640 he entered into orders, and was appointed one of the scribes to the assembly of divines at Westminster. He afterwards became Savilian professor of geometry at Oxford, and keeper of the archives of that university. He was also one of the founders of the royal society. At the restoration he was confirmed in his places, and became chaplain to the king. He was one of the divines employed in revising the Liturgy. Dr. Wallis died in 1703. He published some books against Hobbes; a grammar under the title of Grammaticæ Linguæ Anglicanæ, 8vo.; Commercium Epistolicum, 4to.; De Cycloide et Corporibus inde Genitis; De Æstu Maris hypothesis Nova; Mechanico, sive de Motu Tractatus Geometricis; Archimedis Syracusani Arenarius et Dimensio Circuli, &c. Dr. Wallis was profoundly skilled in the art of decyphering.—Wood. Martin.

WALPOLE (sir Robert), a celebrated statesman, was born at Houghton in Norfolk, in 1674. In 1700 he was chosen member of parliament for Lynn. In 1705 he was appointed secretary at war, and in 1709 treasurer of the navy, but on the change of ministers he was voted by the commons to be guilty of corruption, and ordered to be expelled the house. The whig party, however, strenuously supported him, and he was re-elected for Lynn, though the house declared the election void. At the accession of George I. he was made paymaster of the forces, but two years afterwards he resigned his place and joined the opposition. Another change taking place in 1725, he had the lead in the administration, and was nominated first lord of the treasury, and chancellor of the exchequer. He maintained his power with great firmness till 1742, when he resigned, and was created earl of Orford, with a pension of 4000l. a year. He died in 1745.—Life by Coxe.

WALPOLE (Horace), youngest son of the preceding, was educated at Eton school, from whence he was sent to King's college, Cambridge, where he wrote some verses on Henry VI. the founder. In 1738 he was appointed inspector of exports and imports, which place he exchanged for that of usher of the exchequer. The year following he travelled with Mr. Gray, the poet; but a separation took place in Italy, owing to some misunderstanding between the two friends. In 1741 Mr. Walpole was elected into parliament; but he never made any other speech than one in defence of his father, in 1742. He retired from parliament in 1761, and led a life of literary ease at his seat of Strawberry Hill, in Middlesex, where he had a printing press, from which proceeded several elegant works, by himself and others. On the death of his nephew in 1791 he succeeded to the title of earl of Orford, which became extinct at his own death in 1797. Mr. Walpole wrote a Catalogue of Royal and Noble Authors; Historic Doubts concerning Richard III; Anecdotes of Painting, enlarged from Vertue; the Castle of Otranto, a romance; an Essay on Modern Gardening; and the Mysterious Mother, a tragedy. All his works have been pompously printed in 5 vols. 4to.—Walpoliana, 2 vols. 12mo. 1800.

WALSH (William), a poet, was born at Abberley, in Worcestershire, about 1660. He was a commoner of Wadham college, Oxford, which he left without a degree, and became gentleman of the horse to queen Anne. He was the early friend of Pope, who bestows some handsome compliments upon him in his Essay on Criticism. He died in 1708. His poems are not above mediocrity.—Johnson's Poets.

WALSINGHAM (Thomas), a benedictine monk of St. Alban's, was a native of Norfolk, and died about 1440. He wrote Auctuarium Polychronici; Acta Regis Henrici VI. &c.—Pitsæus.

WALSINGHAM (sir Francis), a statesman, was born at Chiselhurst in Kent, and educated at Queen's college, Cambridge, after which he went abroad. He entered early upon public employment, and was twice sent ambassador to the French court. In 1573 he was appointed secretary of state. He was a man of deep penetration and of profound policy. His negociations and dispatches have been published under the title of the Complete Ambassador, folio. He died in 1590, at the age of 90.—Biog. Brit.

WALTERS (John), a Welsh divine of the established church, was educated at Oxford, where he took his degree of M.A. and on taking orders became rector of Llandochau in Glamorganshire. He died in 1797. Mr. Walters compiled a valuable English and Welsh Lexicon, 1 vol. 4to. 1794. He was also the author of a Dissertation on the Welsh Language, and some sermons.—Owen's Cambr. Biog.

WALTON (Brian), a learned prelate, was born at Cleaveland, in Yorkshire, in 1600, and was educated first at Magdalen college, and afterwards at Peter-house, Cambridge. In 1639 he took his doctor's degree, and at this time was prebendary of St. Paul's, chaplain to the king, and rector of St. Martin Orgar's, London. He suffered considerably at the breaking out of the civil war, on which he fled to Oxford. He undertook and happily performed the publishing of a Polyglot Bible, in 6 vols. folio, in which he was assisted by the learned Edmund Castell, and other eminent men. Dr. Walton was also the author of a Defence of this Work, against Dr. Owen; and a book on the right of the London clergy to tithes. In 1660 he was preferred to the see of Chester, but died in London the year following.—Wood. Biog. Brit.

WALTON (Izaak), a biographical writer, was a native of Stafford, and became a tradesman under the Royal Exchange in London, where he acquired a good fortuue. He was very fond of fishing, and wrote a standard book on the subject, entitled, The Complete Angler, or Contemplative Man's Recreation, 8vo. Of this work sir John Hawkins has given an improved edition. Mr. Walton was also the author of the lives of Donne, Wotton, Hooker, Herbert, and bishop Sanderson, written in a very plain but entertaining manner, and full of curious anecdotes. Mr. Zouch has published a splendid edition of these lives, in a quarto volume, with memoirs of the author, who died at Winchester in 1683, aged 84. Another edition of his lives has been printed at Oxford in 2 vols. 8vo.—Wood. Hawkins.

WANLEY (Nathaniel), an English divine, who was educated at Trinity college, Cambridge, and afterwards obtained a living at Coventry, where he died about 1690. He published a curious book called, The Wonders of the Little World, or the History of Man, folio, in which there are many strange relations.—Gen. Dict.

WANLEY (Humphry), son of the preceding, was born in 1672, and educated at Edmund hall, Oxford. He became secretary to the society for promoting christian knowlege, and librarian to the earl of Oxford. He was uncommonly skilled in biography and the northern languages. He died in 1726. Mr. Wanley formed a catalogue of Saxon manuscripts for Dr. Hickes's Thesaurus.—Ibid.

WANSLEB (John Michael), a learned German, was born at Erfurt, in Thuringia, in 1635. He learnt the Oriental languages of Ludolph, who employed him to publish his Æthiopic Dictionary, in which Wansleb inserted many articles of his own invention. He also assisted Dr. Castell in preparing his Lexicon Heptaglotton. The duke of Saxe Gotho engaged him to go to Abyssinia, but he went no farther than Cairo. He was afterwards employed by Colbert to collect manuscripts and medals for the library of the king of France. He died in 1679.—Ibid.

WARBURTON (William), a learned prelate, was born at Newark upon Trent, in 1698, and bred an attorney, which profession he relinquished, and after going through a course of study he took orders without having had a university education. He afterwards received the degree of D.D. by mandamus from Cambridge. By marrying a niece of Mr. Allen of Prior Park he gained a considerable fortune, and in 1755 was preferred to a prebend in the cathedral of Durham. He was also preacher of Lincoln's Inn, and in 1757 advanced to the deanry of Bristol. In 1760 he was consecrated bishop of Gloucester, and in 1768 he instituted a lecture at Lincoln's Inn, in the form of a sermon, to prove the truth of revelation from the Prophecies. The bishop died in 1779, and was buried in Gloucester cathedral. His greatest work was the Divine Legation of Moses, 3 vols. 8vo. in which he defended revelation upon the grounds of religious deism, by admitting that though a future state made no part of the Jewish legislator's system, yet that the truth of the Mosaic scheme is capable of a moral demonstration. The performance, however, gave great offence to many learned and pious believers, who attacked it with great force; and were replied to by the author with haughtiness and asperity. Prior in point of publication, but next in ability, was the Alliance betwixt Church and State, 8vo.; in which well-reasoned work he incontrovertibly proved the necessity of religious establishments. Besides these works Dr. Warburton printed a Discourse entitled Julian, or a Discourse concerning the Earthquake and Fiery Eruptions which defeated that emperor's attempt to rebuild the Temple at Jerusalem; two volumes of Sermons; a View of Lord Bolingbroke's Philoſophy; a Tract on the Lord's Supper; a Treatiſe againſt the Methodiſts on the Doctrine of Grace; and ſeveral miſcellaneous pieces. The whole of his works have been handſomely publiſhed by his friend biſhop Hurd, in 6 vols. 4to. Pope left him the copyright of his works, which Warburton printed with notes. He alſo publiſhed an edition of Shakſpeare, which was ſeverely handled by Edwards, in his Canons of Criticiſm.—Life of Warburton by biſhop Hurd.

WARD (Samuel), a learned divine, was educated at Emmanuel college, Cambridge, and in 1609 became maſter of Sidney college in that univerſity. He was alſo profeſſor of divinity and archdeacon of Taunton. He was one of the divines ſent to the ſynod of Dort, where he altered his ſentiments with reſpect to the calviniſtic doctrines, which he had before rigorouſly maintained. He was impriſoned by the rebels on the breaking out of the civil war, and died of the ill treatment which he had received in 1643. He wrote ſome Theological Pieces, and ſeveral of his letters are in the collection of archbiſhop Uſher's, folio.—Gen. Dict.

WARD (Seth), a learned divine and mathematician, was born at Buntingford in Hertfordſhire, in 1617. He was educated at Sidney college, Cambridge, where he obtained a fellowſhip, of which he was deprived for refuſing the covenant. He afterwards went to Oxford, and was appointed ſavilian profeſſor of aſtronomy. He was alſo elected preſident of Trinity college, which he reſigned at the reſtoration. In 1661 he became fellow of the royal ſociety, and the year following biſhop of Exeter, from whence, in 1667, he was tranſlated to Saliſbury. In 1671 he was made chancellor of the garter, which honour he procured to be annexed to the ſee of Saliſbury. He loſt his reaſon ſome years before his death, which happened in 1689. He wrote a Lecture on Comets; an Idea of Trigonometry; Geometrical Aſtronomy; Exercitation on the Philoſophy of Hobbes; Diſcourſe on the Being and Attributes of God; and Sermons. —Life by Dr. Pope.

WARD (John), profeſſor of rhetoric at Greſham college, was born in London in 1679, and educated at Utrecht, where he took his degrees in law. He was intended for the miniſtry among the diſſenters, but it does not appear that he followed that profeſſion. He was admitted a member of the royal ſociety in 1723, and became one of the vice-preſidents in 1752. He was alſo a truſtee of the Britiſh muſeum, and died in 1758. Dr. Ward wrote the Lives of the Greſham Profeſſors, 1 vol. folio; Lectures on Oratory, 2 vols. 8vo.; and Diſſertations on Difficult Paſſages of Scripture, 8vo.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

WARD (Edward), a burleſque writer at the end of the 17th century, who wrote the London Spy, and turned Don Quixote into hudibraſtic verſe. He is not to be confounded with Thomas Ward, who wrote a poem in doggerel verſe, called the Hiſtory of the Reformation, 2 vols. 12mo. He was a bigoted papiſt.—Gen. Dict.

WARE (ſir James), an hiſtorian, was born at Dublin in 1594. He received his education in Trinity college there, and in 1629 was knighted by the lords juſtices, to whom his father was ſecretary. He ſucceeded him as auditor general of Ireland, but in the rebellion he came to England and was ſent to the Tower by the parliament, but releaſed a few months afterwards, on which he returned to Dublin. He next went to France, but recovered his place at the reſtoration, and died at Dublin in 1666. He wrote De Præſulibus Hibernia, folio; the Hiſtory and Antiquities of Ireland, folio; and ſeveral other works.—Wood's Faſti.

WARGENTIN (Peter), a Swediſh mathematician, was born at Stockholm in 1717, and died there in 1783. He conſtructed Tables of the Satellites of Jupiter, and wrote ſeveral papers in the Tranſactions of the Academy of Stockholm.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

WARHAM (William), an eminent prelate and ſtateſman, was born at Okely, in Hampſhire, and educated at Wincheſter ſchool, and New college, Oxford, of which he became fellow. In 1494 he was ſent ambaſſador to the duke of Burgundy, and on his return was advanced to the biſhopric of London. He was alſo made lord chancellor; and in 1504 tranſlated to the ſee of Canterbury. He governed with great moderation, and died in 1532.—Wood, A. O. Burnet's Reform.

WARIN (John), a ſculptor and engraver of Liege, was born in 1604. His merits procured him a place in the mint at Paris, where he engraved the ſeal for the French academy, which is conſidered as his maſterpiece. The ſubject is cardinal Richelieu. He alſo made two buſts in bronze, of Louis XIV. which are very fine. He was poiſoned by ſome villains in 1672. He was extremely avaricious.—Moreri.

WARING (Edward), a learned mathematician, was born in Shropſhire, and admitted of Magdalen college, Cambridge, in 1753. In 1760, he was appointed Lucas's profeſſor of mathematics, and in 1762 he publiſhed his Miſcellanea Analytica, 4to. a work of the higheſt order in abſtruſe mathematics. In 1767 he was created doctor of phyſic. He died in 1798. Beſides the above work he publiſhed ſome papers in the Philoſophical Tranſactions; Proprietates Algebraicarum Curvarum; and Meditationes Analyticæ.—Monthly Mag.

WARNER (Ferdinando), an Engliſh divine, who was rector of St. Michael, Queenhithe, London, and of Barnes in Surrey. He wrote an Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory of England, 2 vols. very ſuperficial and inaccurate;

Memoirs of ſir Thomas More; Hiſtory of the Iriſh Rebellion, 2 vols. 8vo.; a Treatiſe on the Cure of the Gout. Dr. Warner died of this diſorder in 1768.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

WARNER (John), ſon of the above, was educated at Cambridge, where he proceeded to his degree of D. D. in 1773. In 1771 he obtained the livings of Hockcliffe and Chalton in Bedfordſhire, and that of Stourton in the county of Wilts. He was afterwards chaplain to the Engliſh embaſſy at Paris. He died in 1800. Dr. Warner wrote a learned Tract on the Pronunciation of Greek, entitled Metron-ariſton. He alſo tranſlated the Life of Friar Gerund, from the Spaniſh, in 2 vols. 8vo.—Monthly Mag.

WARNER (Richard), a botaniſt, was bred to the bar, but never followed the profeſſion. He reſided at his ſeat of Woodford-green in Eſſex. He publiſhed "Plantæ Woodfordienſes, or a Catalogue of Plants growing ſpontaneouſly about Woodford in Eſſex," 8vo. He was alſo the author of a Letter to Garrick, on a Gloſſary to Shakſpeare, 8vo.; and tranſlated ſome of the comedies of Plautus. He died in 1775, and bequeathed his library to Wadham college, Oxford, where he had received his education.—Pulteney's Sketches of Bot.

WARTON (Thomas), a divine and poet, was born at Godalmin in Surrey, in 1687. He was educated at Magdalen college, Oxford, where he took his degrees, and became profeſſor of poetry twice. He obtained the vicarage of Baſingſtoke and Chobham, and died in 1745. A volume of his poems was printed in 1747, 8vo.—Europ. Mag.

WARTON (Joſeph), a learned divine, was ſon of the preceding, and born at Baſingſtoke, about 1722. He received his education at Wincheſter ſchool, from whence he removed to Oriel college, Oxford, which he left on taking his firſt degree. In 1757 he was created M. A. by diploma. In 1756 he publiſhed a volume of Odes, in 4to. of which a ſecond edition appeared the year following. About this time he became rector of Wynſlade in Hampſhire. In 1753 he publiſhed his tranſlation of Virgil, with notes, 4 vols. 8vo. He was at this time uſher of Wincheſter ſchool, of which, in 1766, he became maſter. In 1768 he took his degree of D.D. About 1787 he was preſented to a prebendal ſtall in Wincheſter cathedral, on which he reſigned the maſterſhip of the ſchool. In 1756 he publiſhed an ingenious Eſſay on the Genius and Writings of Pope, to which, in 1782, he added a ſecond volume, and in 1797 he publiſhed a new edition of that author. Dr. Warton died at his living of Wickham, in Hampſhire, in 1800.—Ibid.

WARTON (Thomas), brother of the laſt mentioned, was born in 1728, and educated firſt at Wincheſter ſchool, and next at Trinity college Oxford, where he obtained a fellowſhip, and took his degrees in arts. In 1756 he became profeſſor of poetry, which ſituation he held ten years. In 1771 he was preſented to the vicarage of Kiddington in Oxfordſhire, of which pariſh he wrote an account as the ſpecimen of a hiſtory of the county, which never appeared. In 1785 Mr. Warton was appointed poet laureat, and alſo Camden's profeſſor of modern hiſtory at Oxford. He died in 1790. He wrote ſome elegant Poems, 2 vols. 8vo.; a Hiſtory of Engliſh Poetry, 3 vols. 4to.; the lives of ſir Thomas Pope, and Dr. Bathurſt, 2 vols. 8vo.; Notes on Milton's ſmaller poems; Obſervations on Spenſer's Faerie Queen, 1 vol. 8vo.; and other works. —Europ. Mag.

WARWICK (ſir Philip), was born in 1608, in Weſtminſter, and educated at Eton; after which he ſtudied at Geneva. On his return to England he was made ſecretary to the lord treaſurer Juxon, and clerk of the ſignet. In 1646 he was appointed one of the king's commiſſioners to treat with parliament for the ſurrender of Oxford, and was afterwards made ſecretary to his majeſty. At the reſtoration he became member for Weſtminſter, and was knighted. He died in 1682. He wrote "Memoirs of Charles the Firſt," 8vo.—Wood's Faſti.

WASHINGTON (George), was born in 1732, in Virginia. His family emigrated from Cheſhire to that country about 1630. His father, Mr. Auguſtus Waſhington, was a man of conſiderable landed property. The ſubject of the preſent article received his education at home under a private tutor; after which he became an eminent ſurveyor. He was alſo major in the provincial militia, in which capacity he was ſent by general Dinwiddie, in 1753, to the French commander on the Ohio to complain of the inroads that were made, in violation of the treaties between the two crowns: he at the ſame time negociated a treaty with the ſix nations, and other weſtern tribes of Indians, for which he received the thanks of his country. In 1755 he ſerved as colonel under the unfortunate general Braddock, who fell a victim to his own haughtineſs and imprudence. Mr. Waſhington on that occaſion gave ſtrong proofs of his military courage and ſkill, particularly in conducting the retreat of the army. He held the command of the Virginian troops till 1758, when he gave in his reſignation on account of ill health. He now ſerved his country as a ſenator, and was elected a member of the aſſembly for Frederick county, and afterwards for that of Fairfax. When the breach between Great Britain and her colonies was widened by mutual animoſity beyond all proſpect of reconciliation, the eyes of his countrymen were fixed upon Mr.

Washington, and accordingly in June 1775, he took the command of the army of America, at Cambridge, in New England. Of the particulars of that great revolution it is impossible here to give a detail. The history of Washington, from this period, is the history of the American war, and must necessarily be voluminous. Suffice it to observe, that to his intrepidity, prudence, and moderation, the Americans were almost wholly indebted for that independence which was secured to them, by the treaty of peace concluded in 1783. Soon after this event Washington resigned his commission to congress, and in his address on that occasion, the magnanimity of the hero is blended with the wisdom of the philosopher. As a genuine proof of his patriotism, he would receive no pay for eight years service, but defrayed his expenses during the war out of his private purse. He now returned to his seat of Mount Vernon, like Cincinnatus, and set himself to complete those favourite improvements in agriculture which had been suspended. In 1789 he was elected president of the United States, on which he quitted his estate, and was received at Philadelphia with the applause which he so well merited. His government was marked by that well-tempered prudence which distinguished all his conduct. An insurrection among the people of Alleghany and Washington counties, instigated by the French agent, Genet, was suppressed by the energy and moderation of the president; who in 1796 effected a commercial treaty with Great Britain. He resigned his office the same year; and in 1798 accepted the command of the army, which he held till his death, Dec. 14, 1799.—Life of Washington, 4to. 1804.

Wasse (Christopher), a learned Englishman, was fellow of king's college, Cambridge, and afterwards superior beadle of law at Oxford. He translated Grotius's Catechism into Greek verse, and Gratius's Cynegeticon into English. He died in 1690. —Wood.

Wasser (Anna), an ingenious lady, was born at Zurich in 1679. She painted portraits in oil, but chiefly excelled in miniature painting. She died in 1713.—Pilkington.

Watelet (Claude Henry), a French poet, was born at Paris in 1718. He was member of the French academy and of several foreign societies. Though he had been receiver-general of the finances, he died poor in 1786. He wrote a poem on the Art of Painting; Comedies and other pieces of merit. He also left a Dictionary of Painting, Sculpture, and Engraving, which has been printed.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

Waterland (Daniel), a learned divine, was born at Wailesby, in Lincolnshire, in 1683, of which parish his father was rector. He received his education first at Lincoln, and next at Magdalen college, Cambridge, where he obtained a fellowship, and in 1713 was chosen master. He was also appointed chaplain to the king, and had the rectory of Ellingham in Norfolk. In 1727 he obtained the archdeaconry of Middlesex, and afterwards a canonry of Windsor. He died in 1740. Dr. Waterland wrote a Vindication of the Doctrine of the Trinity against Dr. Clarke, with a defence of that book. He was also the author of Sermons at Lady Moyer's Lecture; a Treatise on the Eucharist; a History of the Athanasian Creed; and other excellent works.—Biog. Brit.

Waterloo (Anthony), a landscape painter in the 16th century, was born at Utrecht. His pictures are admirably executed, and sell very dear.—Pilk.

Wats (Gilbert) an English divine, was born in Yorkshire, and educated at Lincoln college, Oxford, where he obtained a fellowship, and was created D.D. He died in 1657. Dr. Wats translated into English Lord Bacon's treatise De Augmentis Scientiarum, 4to.; and Davila's History of the Civil Wars.—Wood.

Watson (John), a learned prelate, was born at Rengworth, in Worcestershire, and educated at All Souls college, Oxford, after which he became a physician, but on the accession of queen Elizabeth he took orders. In 1572 he became dean, and in 1580 bishop of Winchester. He died in 1589. He wrote a Latin tragedy, entitled Absalom.—Wood. Langbaine.

Watson (Thomas), a non-conformist divine, was educated at Emmanuel college, Cambridge, where he took his degrees in arts. He obtained the living of St. Stephen, Walbrook, in the civil wars, but was deprived after the restoration. He died in 1673. He wrote a Course of Sermons on the Assembly's Catechism, in 1 vol. folio; and some other discourses.—Calamy.

Watson (James), a Scotch printer, was born at Aberdeen, and carried on his business with great reputation at Edinburgh, where he died in 1728. He printed a beautiful Bible in 4to.; another in crown 8vo.; and one of a very small size, less and much neater than Field's.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Watson (David), a learned writer, was born in Scotland in 1710. He received his education at St. Andrew's, where he became professor of philosophy; but in 1747 he left that university and came to London. He led an irregular life, and died in great poverty in 1756. He published a literal translation of Horace, in 2 vols. 8vo. with notes.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Watson (Robert), a divine and historian, was born at St. Andrew's, in Scotland, about 1730. He studied in the school and university of his native place, and afterwards at Glasgow and Edinburgh. He became doctor of laws, and professor of logic, rhetoric and belles-lettres, at St. Andrew's, and lastly principal of the united college. He died about 1780. Dr. Watson wrote the History of the Reign of Philip III. of Spain, which was printed in 1 vol. 4to., and 2 vols. 8vo. in 1783.—Europ. Mag.

WATSON (sir William), an eminent botanist, was born in London, and educated at Merchant Taylors' school, after which he was apprenticed to an apothecary. In 1738 he married and set up for himself, and in 1741 he was admitted a member of the royal society, to whose volumes he communicated many valuable papers on botanical subjects. About 1744 he engaged in the study of electricity, in which he made several important discoveries, and received as a recompence the Copley medal from the royal society in 1745. In 1757 he was presented with the degree of M. D. by the university of Halle, and also by that of Wirtemberg. In 1762 he was chosen one of the physicians to the Foundling hospital, and in 1784 a fellow of the college of physicians. In 1786 he received the honour of knighthood from his majesty. He died in 1787. His tracts on Electricity have been collected into one volume, 8vo.—Pulteney.

WATSON (John), an English divine, was born at Presbury in Cheshire, and educated at Brasenose college, Oxford, where he obtained a fellowship. In 1769 he was presented to the valuable rectory of Stockport, in his native county. He died in 1783, aged 59. Mr. Watson wrote the History of Halifax, in Yorkshire, 1 vol. 4to. 1775.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

WATSON (Henry), a surgeon, was born in London in 1702, and celebrated as a lecturer in anatomy, and in 1761 was elected surgeon of Westminster hospital. He died in 1793. He wrote an account of the Absorbents of the Urinary Bladder, and some papers in the Philosophical Transactions.—Ibid.

WATTEAU (Anthony), a painter, was born at Valenciennes in 1684, and died at Nogent, near Paris, in 1721. He resided some time in England, which he was obligated to quit on account of his health. He painted conversations and burlesque subjects in a good style.—Pilkington.

WATTS (Isaac), a pious and ingenious divine among the dissenters, was born at Southampton in 1674. He received part of his education under Mr. Rowe, a dissenting minister, who kept an academy in London, where he had that eminent prelate archbishop Hort for a fellow pupil. In 1696 Mr. Watts became tutor to the son of sir John Hartop, and after residing in that family four years he went to live with sir Thomas Abney at Newington. He also accepted an invitation from the independent congregation in Berry-street, St Mary Axe. In 1728 the universities of Edinburgh and Aberdeen did honour to themselves in conferring on him the degree of doctor in divinity. This truly estimable man died in 1741. His principal works are, A Treatise on Logic; an Essay on the Improvement of the Mind, intended as a supplement to that work; Introduction to Astronomy and Geography; Hymns; and a poetical version of the Psalms, usually sung in dissenting congregations; Horæ Lyricæ, or Poems, chiefly religious; Miscellaneous Thoughts, 12mo.; Scripture History, in a catechetical form, 12mo.; two volumes of Sermons; and Philosophical Essays, 8vo. The whole of his works, which are remarkable for their clearness and usefulness, have been printed in 6 vols. 4to.—Life by Dr. Gibbons.

WEAVER (John) a dancing master, who composed several dramatic pantomimes, as the Loves of Mars and Venus; Orpheus and Eurydice; and Perseus and Andromeda. He also wrote A History of the Mimes and Pantomimes of the Ancients; The Art of Dancing, with a Treatise on Action and Gesture.—He died about 1730.—Biog. Dram.

WEBB (Philip Carteret), an eminent lawyer and antiquary, was born in 1700. In 1751 he was employed in obtaining the charter of incorporation for the society of antiquaries. He was a member of parliament and solicitor to the treasury. He died in 1770. Mr. Webb wrote a number of small tracts, chiefly on legal subjects.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

WEBB (Benjamin), an English penman, was born in London in 1725. He was frequently employed in writing copies of honorary freedoms, bestowed by the city of London upon eminent persons; particularly that presented to his Danish majesty in 1768. His works consist principally of tables of calculations. He died in 1774.—Ibid.

WEBSTER (William), a writing master, who kept a school in Castle-street Leicester-fields. He translated, from the French of La Hoste, a Compendious Course of Mathematics, 2 vols. 12mo.; and wrote a small treatise on Arithmetic, and another on Book-keeping. He died in 1744, aged 60.—Ibid.

WECHEL (Christopher), a celebrated printer in Paris, who began to print Greek authors in 1530. His editions were remarkable for their correctness, which was owing to his employing the learned Sylburgius for his reader. He died in 1572. His son, Andrew, being a protestant, withdrew to Basil, where he carried on the printing business. He published a catalogue of books printed by him and his father, 8vo.—Moreri.

WEEVER (John), an English antiquary, was a native of Lancashire, and educated at Cambridge. He published a folio volume of great curiosity and value, entitled Funeral Monuments, 1631. An edition in 4to. was published in 1767. Weever died about 1632.—Wood.

WELBY (Henry), an extraordinary character, was born in Lincolnshire, where he had a large estate, but an attempt being made on his life by his brother, he took the resolution of secluding himself from all society. He accordingly took a house in Grub-street, London, where he lived forty-four years without being seen by any one. He died in 1636.—Phœnix Britannicus.

Wells (Edward), a learned divine, was born at Corsham, in Wiltshire, about 1665, and educated at Westminster school, from whence he was elected to Christ church, Oxford. He proceeded D.D. and obtained the living of Cotesbach in Leicestershire. He died about 1730. Dr. Wells published an Answer to Dr Clarke on the Trinity; pamphlets against the dissenters; a valuable work on the Geography of the Old and New Testament, 2 vols. 8vo.; a Course of Mathematics for young Gentlemen, 3 vols.; and other works.—Wood.

Welsted (Leonard), a poet, was born in 1689, and educated at Westminster school, where he wrote the humorous tale of The Apple Pye, which has been falsely attributed to Dr. King. Mr. Welsted obtained a situation in the ordnance office; and was honoured with a situation in the Dunciad by Mr. Pope. However, he was a man of genius, and several of his poems possess merit. He translated Longinus on the Sublime into English from Boileau's version, and wrote a comedy, called, The Dissembled Wanton. He died in 1747.—Biog. Dram.

Wellwood (Thomas), a Scotch physician, was born near Edinburgh in 1652, and educated at Glasgow. His father was suspected of being concerned in the murder of archbishop Sharpe, which made him fly to Holland, from whence he returned with king William. The son became king's physician for Scotland, and settled at Edinburgh, where he died in 1716. He wrote Memoirs of English Affairs from 1588 to the Revolution, very superficial and partial, in 1 vol. 8vo. He is not to be confounded with a presbyterian of the same name, who died at Perth in 1680. He wrote Emmanuel's Land, and other pious works.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Wenceslas, emperor of Germany, and king of Bohemia, was the son of Charles IV. whom he succeeded in 1378. He was deranged in his mind, on which account he was placed under confinement, and died in 1419.—Univ. Hist.

Wentworth (Thomas), earl of Strafford, was born in Yorkshire, of an ancient family. He was one of the principal leaders of the popular party in the house of commons against the measures of Charles the first; but was gained over to the court, made a peer, and appointed president of the north, and lord lieutenant of Ireland. On this occasion the famous Pym said to him, "You have left us, but we will never leave you till your head is off your shoulders." In this he kept his word. Lord Strafford displayed great talents for government in Ireland, where he encouraged agriculture, and laboured with zeal to promote the protestant interest. When the rebellion broke out in Scotland he gathered a force, and endeavoured to persuade the king to act with vigour, but his advice was overruled. His enemies in the commons, with Pym at their head, impeached him at the bar of the lords, and he was ordered into custody. His trial lasted eighteen days, and was carried on with uncommon virulence. His defence made a deep impression upon the hearers, though it did not abate the malice of his persecutors, who passed a bill of attainder against him. The king, however, refused his assent to it a long time. At length the earl himself wrote to advise his majesty to yield, which he did with extreme reluctance; and this great man was beheaded on Tower-hill, May 12, 1641.—Clarendon.

Werf (Adrian Vander), a painter, was born at Rotterdam in 1659, and died there in 1727. He painted historical subjects in miniature, which he finished in a style of great elegance. His works are very scarce. His brother Peter was his pupil, and a good painter. He died in 1718.—Pilkington.

Wesley (Samuel), an English divine, was born in Dorsetshire, and educated at Oxford, but was bred a dissenter. He afterwards conformed, and wrote some tracts against his old connections. He obtained the living of South Ormesby in Lincolnshire, and afterwards Epworth in the same county, where he died in 1735. Mr Wesley wrote a number of poems, which were ridiculed by Garth and other wits. His principal works are, The Life of Christ, an heroic poem, folio; and Dissertations on the Book of Job, in Latin, folio. His son Samuel was undermaster of Westminster school many years, and afterwards master of Blundel's school at Tiverton, in Devonshire, where he died in 1739. He wrote the Battle of the Sexes, and other ingenious poems, printed in 1 vol. 12mo.—Gen. Dict.

Wesley (John), son of Samuel Wesley the elder, rendered himself remarkable as the founder of a numerous sect. He was born at Epworth in 1703, and was educated at the Charterhouse, from whence he removed to Christ church college, Oxford, but in 1726 he was chosen fellow of Lincoln college, where he became an eminent tutor. In 1730 he and his brother, with a few other students, formed themselves into a small society for the purpose of mutual edification in religious exercises. So singular an association excited considerable notice, and among other names bestowed upon the members, that of Methodists was applied to them with such success as to continue to distinguish all their followers to the present time. Thinking that Oxford was not a sphere large enough for his labours, Mr. Wesley, with some others, went to Georgia, in America, in 1735, with a view of converting the Indians. After a stay there of two years, he returned to England, commenced itinerant preacher, and gathered many followers. The churches being shut against him, he built spacious meeting-houses in London, Bristol, and other places. For some time he was united with Mr. Whitefield, but differences arising on account of the doctrine of election, which was zealouſly eſpouſed and preached by the latter, they ſeparated, and the methodiſts were denominated according to their reſpective leaders. Mr. Weſley was indefatigable in his labours, and almoſt continually engaged in travelling over England, Wales, Scotland, and Ireland. His ſociety, though conſiſting of many thouſands, was uncommonly well organized, and he preſerved his influence over it to the laſt. He died in London, in 1791. He publiſhed ſome volumes of hymns, numerous ſermons, political tracts, and pieces in controverſy againſt the Calviniſts and Moravians. His preaching was extemporary, but not vehement. He dwelt much upon practical religion, though he taught his followers to look for extraordinary motions of the holy ſpirit, and to aſpire to a ſtate of ſinleſs perfection.—Life by Whitehead.

Wesley (Charles), younger brother of the above, was born in 1708, and educated at Weſtminſter ſchool, from whence he removed to Chriſt church college, Oxford, of which he became ſtudent. He was one of the firſt methodiſts, and continued a conſtant preacher among them to his death, which happened in 1788. He wrote ſeveral hymns and other pious pieces. His two ſons, Charles and Samuel, have diſtinguiſhed themſelves by their extraordinary ſkill in muſic. —Ibid.

Wesselus (John), a learned German, was born at Groningen, about 1419. His great merit was known to pope Sixtus IV. who invited him to Rome, and promiſed him whatever he ſhould require. Weſſelus contented himſelf with aſking for a Hebrew and Greek bible in the Vatican library. "And why," ſaid the pope, "do you not aſk for a biſhopric?" "Becauſe I do not want one," replied Weſſelus. He died in his own country, in 1489. He maintained many opinions ſimilar to thoſe of Luther. Some of his works were printed at Groningen in 1614, 4to. with this title, Farrago rerum Theologicarum.—Moreri.

West (Gilbert), an eminent writer, was born in 1706, and educated at Wincheſter and Eton, and afterwards at Chriſt church, Oxford. He became treaſurer of Chelſea hoſpital through the favour of William Pitt, afterwards earl Chatham. In 1747 Mr. Weſt printed his valuable work in vindication of the truth of our Savour's reſurrection, for which the univerſity of Oxford conferred on him the degree of doctor of laws. He alſo publiſhed a tranſlation of Pindar into Engliſh verſe, and wrote ſome elegant poems in Dodſley's collection. He died at Wickham, in Kent, in 1756.

West (Richard), an eminent lawyer, was a barriſter in the Temple, and in 1717 became king's counſel. In 1725 he was made lord chancellor of Ireland, but died the year following. He wrote a Diſcourſe concerning Treaſons and Bills of Attainder; and another Treatiſe on the Manner of creating Peers. He married a daughter of biſhop Burnet's.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

West (James), an ingenious gentleman, was educated at Baliol college, Oxford. In 1741 he ſat in parliament for St. Alban's, and was appointed one of the ſecretaries of the treaſury, which office he reſigned in 1762. He was preſident of the royal ſociety, and one of the vice-preſidents of that of antiquaries. He died in 1772. The late marquis of Lanſdowne purchaſed his MSS. and his collection of books was ſold by auction.—Anecd. of Bowyer.

West (Thomas), a topographical writer, was born at Ulverſton, in Lancaſhire, where he died in 1779. He wrote, The Hiſtory of Furneſs; and A Guide to the Lakes.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

Westfield (Thomas), a pious prelate, was born in the iſle of Ely, and educated at Jeſus college, Cambridge. He afterwards obtained the living of St. Bartholomew, behind the Exchange, and the archdeaconry of St. Alban's. He was ſo pathetic a preacher as to be called the weeping prophet. At the beginning of the rebellion he was made biſhop of Briſtol. He died in 1644.—Lloyd's Account of Suffering Loyaliſts.

Wetstein (John Rodolph), a learned divine, was born at Baſil in 1647, and ſucceeded his father as profeſſor of Greek and theology in that univerſity, where he died in 1711. He publiſhed ſome learned works, particularly Origen's Dialogue againſt the Marcionites. His brother, John Henry, was alſo a learned man. He ſettled as a printer at Amſterdam, where he publiſhed ſeveral correct editions of ancient authors, with prefaces. He died in 1726, aged 77.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

Wetstein (John James), of the ſame family as the preceding, was born at Baſil in 1693. He travelled into different countries to conſult manuſcripts of the New Teſtament, in order to publiſh an edition with various readings. In 1730 he printed his Prolegomena to that work; which gave ſuch alarm to ſome of the clergy, that they accuſed him to the council as a Socinian, and he was depoſed from the miniſtry. On this he went to Holland, where he ſucceeded Le Clerc as profeſſor of philoſophy, and died at Amſterdam in 1754. His edition of the New Teſtament appeared in 1751, in 2 vols. folio. He added to this great work two epiſtles of St. Clemens Romanus in Syriac, with a Latin verſion.—Ibid.

Whalley (Peter), an ingenious divine, was born in Northamptonſhire, and educated at Merchant Taylors' ſchool, and St. John's college, Oxford, where he became fellow. On quitting the univerſity he was preſented to the vicarage of St. Sepulchre's, Northampton. In 1768 he was choſen maſter of the grammar ſchool of Chriſt's hoſpital. He alſo obtained the rectory of St. Margaret Pattens; and the vicarage of Horley in Surrey. In 1776 he reſigned the ſchoolmaſterſhip of Chriſt's hoſpital, but afterwards he occupied at of St. Olave in Southwark. He was any years employed in compiling the Hiſ- y of his native county; but the work was ver completed. He was the author of, 1. n Inquiry into the Learning of Shakſpeare, o. 2. A Vindication of the Evidences d Authenticity of the Goſpels, 8vo. 3. n edition of the works of Ben Jonſon, with tes, 7 vols. 8vo. 4. Verſes prefixed to ervey's Meditations; and ſome ſermons. e died in 1791.—Europ. Mag.

WHARTON (George), an aſtrologer, was rn in Weſtmoreland. He ſpent the great- part of his patrimony in defence of harles I. and after the ruin of the royal uſe he wrote a number of almanacks, tronomical tracts, a chronology of remarka- e events, and other works. He was alſo e author of ſome doggrel verſes. After e reſtoration he was created a baronet, and ade treaſurer of the ordnance. He died in 81.—Granger.

WHARTON (Anne), a lady diſtinguiſhed r her poetical talents in the reign of harles II. She was daughter of Sir enry Lee, of Ditchley in Oxfordſhire, who, ing without a ſon, left his eſtate between is lady and her ſiſter, the counteſs of Abing- on. She was wife of Thomas, afterwards arquis of Wharton; and wrote ſeveral oems, printed in Dryden's and Nichols's ollections. She died in 1685.

WHARTON (Henry), an ingenious divine, as born in 1664, at Worſtead in Norfolk, which place his father was vicar. He re- ceived his education at Caius college, Cam- ridge, after which he became chaplain to rchbiſhop Sancroft, who gave him the rec- ory of Chartham, and the vicarage of Minſ- r, in Kent. He died in 1695. He wrote Treatiſe on the Celibacy of the Clergy gainſt the Church of Rome; Specimens of rrors in Burnet's Hiſtory of the Reforma- ion; Defence of Pluralities, 8vo.; Hiſtoria e Epiſcopis & Decanis Londinenſibus, nec- on de Epiſcopis & Decanis Aſſavenſibus, vo; Anglia Sacra, ſive Collectio Hiſtoria- um, &c. 2 vols folio; and a volume of Ser- ions, 8vo.—Wood, A. O.

WHARTON (Philip, duke of), was born bout 1699. On the death of his father, in 716, he diſcarded his tutor, and paid his ourt to the chevalier St. George, commonly alled the Pretender, who dignified him with he title of duke of Northumberland. He oon afterwards returned home, made his eace with government, and was created duke f Wharton. After this he joined the oppoſi- ion, and diſtributed a weekly paper called he True Briton. Having reduced his for- une by his extravagance, he again went broad, where he attached himſelf to the retender, and died in 1731.—Gen Biog Dict.

WHATELY (William), a pious divine, was born at Banbury in Oxfordſhire, in 1583. He was educated at Chriſt's college, Cam- ridge, and afterwards at Edmund hall, Oxford. On entering into orders he became vicar of Banbury, and lecturer of Stratford upon Avon. He was a man of learning, and died in 1639. He publiſhed a number of ſermons with quaint titles; a Treatiſe on Marriage; and an Expoſition of the Com- mandments, 8vo.—Wood.

WHEARE (Degory), an hiſtorian, was born at Jacobſtow, in Cornwall, in 1573, and educated at Exeter college, Oxford. He afterwards became Camden's profeſſor of hiſ- tory, and principal of Glouceſter hall. He died in 1647. He wrote de Ratione & Me- thodo Legendi Hiſtorias Diſſertatio, 8vo. 1625, and again in 1637. It was tranſlated into Engliſh by Edmund Bohun.—Wood.

WHEATLEY (Charles), an Engliſh di- vine, was born in London in 1686, and edu- cated at St. John's college, Oxford, where he obtained a fellowſhip. On taking orders he ſettled in London, and was choſen lectu- rer of St. Mildred, in the Poultry. He was afterwards preſented to the vicarages of Brent and Ferneaux Pelham, in Hertfordſhire. He died at the latter place in 1742. His works are, 1. A Rational Illuſtration of the Book of Common Prayer, the firſt edition of which was in folio, and the following ones in 8vo.; 2. An Hiſtorical Vindication of the Eighty- fifth Canon on bidding Prayer; 3. Anſwer to Hoadley on the Sacrament; 4. Private Devotions at the Holy Communion; 5. Ser- mons at Lady Moyer's Lecture, 8vo. After his death appeared his Miſcellaneous Ser- mons, in 3 vols. 8vo.—Gent. Mag.

WHEELER (George), a divine and baro- net, was born at Charing, in Kent, and edu- cated at Lincoln college, Oxford, after which he travelled into the Levant, accompanied by Dr. Spon. On his return he preſented ſeveral valuable antiquities, collected in his travels, to the univerſity, which compli- mented him with the degree of M.A. He entered into orders, and was made prebendary of Durham, and preſented to the vicarage of Baſingſtoke, in Hampſhire, and the rectory of Houghton-le-Spring, in the county of Durham. He died in 1724. His works are, a Journey into Greece, folio, 1682; an Ac- count of the Churches and Places of Aſſem- bly of the Primitive Chriſtians, 1689, 8vo.; and the Proteſtant Monaſtery; or Chriſtian Economics, 12mo.—Wood. Gen. Dict.

WHICHCOT (Benjamin), a pious divine, was born in Shropſhire in 1609, and edu- cated at King's college, Cambridge, of which he became provoſt, but was removed at the Reſtoration. He was afterwards ſucceſſively miniſter of Blackfriars and St Lawrence-Jew- ry, London. He died in 1683. His fune- ral ſermon was preached by Dr. Tillotſon. The firſt volume of his ſermons was publiſh- ed by the earl of Shafteſbury, author of the Characteriſtics; the three next by Dr Jef- fery; and the fifth by Dr. Samuel Clarke. —Gen. Dict.

WHISTON (William), a divine and ma- thematician, was born at Norton in Leice- terſhire in 1667. He was educated firſt at the free ſchool at Tamworth, and removed from thence to Clare Hall, Cambridge, where he obtained a fellowſhip, and took his degrees in arts. He afterwards became domeſtic chaplain to biſhop Moore of Norwich, who gave him the living of Loweſtoft. In 1700 he ſucceeded Sir Iſaac Newton as Lucas's profeſſor of mathematics at Cambridge, in which ſituation he read lectures on that great man's principles of philoſophy. About this time he began to oppoſe the doctrine of the Trinity, and conducted himſelf with ſo much imprudent zeal in the controverſy, that he was deprived of the profeſſorſhip, and expelled the univerſity. He then retired to London, where he ſupported himſelf by teaching mathematics, reading lectures, and writing books. In his latter years he turned baptiſt. He died in 1752. Mr. Whiſton was a man of conſiderable learning, but exceſſively credulous, notwithſtanding his want of faith in the Trinity. His principal works are, A New Theory of the Earth, 8vo. This was anſwered by Dr. Keil. Aſtronomical Lectures, 8vo.; Tranſlation of Joſephus, 4 vols. 8vo; Aſtronomical Principles of Religion; Hiſtory of the Old and New Teſtament, 6 vols. 8vo.; and Memoirs of his own Life, 2 vols 8vo.—Wood.

WHITAKER (William), a learned divine, was born at Holme in Lancaſhire, in 1548; and educated at Trinity college, Cambridge. He took his doctor's degree, and became regius profeſſor of divinity, and maſter of St. John's college, in that univerſity. Dr. Whitaker wrote ſome able books againſt popery. He was ſuſpected of puritaniſm, and died in 1595.—Fuller.

WHITBY (Daniel), a learned divine, was born at Ruſhden, in Northamptonſhire, in 1638. He became ſcholar of Trinity college, Oxford, and afterwards fellow. Dr. Ward, biſhop of Saliſbury, to whom he was chaplain, gave him a prebend in his cathedral, and the rectory of St. Edmund in that city. He alſo became chanter of the cathedral, and died in 1725. Dr. Whitby wrote a number of controverſial books; but he is chiefly known by an excellent volume on the five Points againſt Calviniſm, 8vo.; and his Paraphraſe and Expoſition of the New Teſtament, 2 vols. folio.—Wood. Gen. Dict.

WHITE (Thomas), an eminent divine, was born at Briſtol; and became a ſtudent of Magdalen Hall, Oxford, in 1566. After entering into orders, he ſettled in London, and obtained the rectory of St. Gregory, and that of St. Dunſtan in the Weſt. He was alſo ſucceſſively prebendary of St. Paul's, treaſurer of the church of Saliſbury, canon of Chriſt church, Oxford, and canon of Windſor. He died in 1623. Dr. White publiſhed ſome ſermons; but he is remembered by his charities, having founded an almſhouſe at Briſtol; a lectureſhip at Oxford; and made a liberal bequeſt to Sion college for the London clergy. He is not to be confounded with another miniſter of both his names, who lived after the Reſtoration, and was lecturer of St. Andrew, Holborn. He wrote a book on the art of Divine Meditation, 8vo.—Wood. Gen. Dict.

WHITE (Francis), a learned prelate, was educated at Cambridge, after which he became almoner to the king, dean and biſhop of Carliſle, from whence in 1631 he was tranſlated to Norwich. He died in 1637. This biſhop diſtinguiſhed himſelf by his writings againſt popery, and a conference with Fiſher the jeſuit in the king's preſence in 1624.—Granger.

WHITE (Thomas), or as he called himſelf Albius, a philoſopher and divine of the Roman church, was born in Eſſex. He was particularly intimate with Hobbes, though as philoſophers they did not agree. His works are remarkable for their ſubtlety about trifles. He died in 1676.—Wood. Granger.

WHITE (Jeremy), a nonconformiſt divine, was fellow of Trinity college, Cambridge, and houſehold chaplain to Oliver Cromwell. He was a man of conſiderable humour and dexterity; but was outwitted by Cromwell, for whoſe daughter he had an affection; and being one day on his knees before her, he was ſuddenly caught in that poſture by the protector, who demanded the reaſon. White replied that he had been long paying his addreſſes to the lady's maid, who ſtood by, but without avail, on which account he was ſoliciting the lady's intereſt. Cromwell immediately turning to the wench, demanded why ſhe refuſed Mr. White; and without ceremony ordered a clergyman to be called, and they were married on the ſpot. Jeremy lived privately after the Reſtoration, and died in 1707, aged 78. He wrote a remarkable book on the Reſtoration of all Things, printed after his death in 8vo. It is a defence of the notion that all men will finally be ſaved.—Calamy.

WHITE (Robert), an Engliſh engraver, who ſerved his time under Loggan. He is ſuppoſed to have engraved more portraits and frontiſpieces than any other artiſt. He was remarkably exact in his likeneſſes; and died in 1704.—Strutt's Engravers.

WHITEFIELD (George), one of the founders of the methodiſts, was born in 1714 at Glouceſter, where his mother kept the Bell Inn. He received his education in the crypt ſchool at Glouceſter, and afterwards became ſervitor in Pembroke college, Oxford. Dr. Benſon, biſhop of Glouceſter, ordained him, after which his zeal prompted him to preach in priſons, private houſes, the fields and open ſtreets. A courſe ſo ſtrange and irregular could not but give great offence, and the doors of the churches were univerſally ſhut againſt him. His eloquence was peculiarly ſtrong, and well adapted to make a great impreſſion upon ordinary minds; in conſequence of which he obtained many followers. In 1738 he went to America, where he was well received, and wonderful effects are recorded in his journals of the power of his preaching. Sudden and violent conver-

s were conſidered as indiſpenſibly neceſ- to prove that the hearers had obtained ine grace. For ſome time Mr. Whitefield ed in conjunction with the two Weſleys, at laſt ſerious differences aroſe between m reſpecting the calviniſtic doctrines of ab- ute election and final perſeverance. Theſe re zealouſly maintained by Mr. Whitefield l his followers, and as ſtrenuouſly denied the others. A diviſion aroſe, and the thodiſts were divided into two parties, cal- the Calviniſtic and Arminian methodiſts. . Whitefield built two large conventicles London, that called the Tabernacle in the y, and another in Tottenham-court-road. was alſo powerfully aſſiſted by the nteſs of Huntingdon, who appointed him r chaplain; and became the patroneſs of ſect, which ſtill continues in a flouriſh- ſtate. Mr. Whitefield died ſuddenly in w England in 1770. His Sermons, Let- s, and Controverſial Tracts, have been nted in 7 vols. 8vo.—Life by Gillies.

WHITEHEAD (Paul), a poet, was born in eſtminſter in 1710, and received a liberal ucation. His friend lord le Deſpenſer pro- red him a patent place worth 800l. a year. died in 1774. The beſt of his poems, hich are not above mediocrity, was entitled e Gymnaſiad, a mock heroic, deſigned to licule the brutal cuſtom of prize-fighting. Gen. Biog. Dict.

WHITEHEAD (William), a poet, was the n of a baker at Cambridge, and admitted ſt a ſizar, and afterwards a ſcholar of Clare- ll, Cambridge. He alſo obtained a fellow- ip, after which he accompanied two young blemen on their travels; by which means was appointed regiſter and ſecretary of the der of the Bath. In 1757 he became poet ureat. He died in 1785, aged 70. Be- les his odes and ſongs, he wrote the Ro- an Father, and Creuſa, tragedies; the hool for Lovers, a comedy; a Trip to Scot- nd, a farce; and ſome other pieces.— id.

WHITEHEAD (John), a phyſician and ethodiſt preacher. At an early age he ex- ibited proofs of genius, and acquired a know- ge of the Latin and Greek languages. He t up as a linen draper at Briſtol, and turned aker after having quitted the methodiſts. y means of his new connections he was en- bled to ſet up a boarding ſchool at Wandſ- orth. Afterwards he travelled abroad with young gentleman, and Mr Whitehead ſtu- ied anatomy and medicine at Leyden. He here took his doctor's degree, and ſoon after is return to London he became phyſician to he london Diſpenſary. After this he again oined the methodiſts, among whom he very ften preached. He alſo attended Mr. John Weſley in his laſt illneſs, preached his fun- al ſermon, and publiſhed memoirs of his fe in 2 vols. This publication, however, ccaſioned a rupture between the doctor and he conference, who wiſhed to publiſh a life f their founder for their own benefit. Dr. Whitehead died in 1804.—Monthly Mag.

WHITEHURST (John), aningenious mechanic, was born at Congleton, in Cheſhire, and bred to his father's buſineſs, which was that of a clock and watch-maker. He ſet up in that line at Derby, where he made the town clock at the town hall, and the clock and chimes in the tower of All-ſaints church. In 1775 he was appointed ſtamper of the money weights at the mint, on which he removed to London, where he continued to reſide till his death in 1788. Mr. Whitehurſt was a member of the royal ſociety, and his houſe was the reſort of ingenious and ſcientific men of whatever nation or rank. He is advantageouſly known in the world of letters by his Inquiry into the Original State and Formation of the Earth, publiſhed firſt in 1778, and again with improvements, in 1786, in 1 vol. 4to. He was alſo the author of an Attempt towards obtaining Invariable Meaſures of Length, Capacity and Weight, from the Menſuration of Time, 8vo.; and ſome papers in the Philoſophical Tranſactions.—Europ. Mag.

WHITELOCK (ſir James), a learned lawyer, was born in London, in 1570, and educated at Merchant Taylors' ſchool, from whence he removed to St. John's college, Oxford, and, in 1594, entered of the Middle Temple, where he was called to the bar. In 1620 he was elected member for Woodſtock; and about the ſame time received the honour of knighthood, and the appointment of chief juſtice of Cheſter. He afterwards became chief juſtice of the king's bench, and died in 1632. His works are Lectures, or Readings in the Middle Temple Hall; and ſeveral ſpeeches in parliament.—Wood.

WHITELOCKE (Bulſtrode), ſon of the preceding, was born in London in 1605. He was educated at Merchant Taylors' ſchool, and St John's college, Oxford, from whence he removed to the Middle Temple. In the long parliament he repreſented Great Marlow, in Buckinghamſhire, and was very active in proſecuting the earl of Strafford. He was appointed one of the lay members in the aſſembly of divines; and in 1647, became one of the commiſſioners of the great ſeal. In 1653 he was ſent ambaſſador from the Commonwealth to Sweden, and on his return was made a commiſſioner of the treaſury. In 1656 he was choſen ſpeaker of the houſe of commons, and the year following became one of Cromwell's houſe of lords. In 1659 he was appointed preſident of the council of ſtate, and keeper of the great ſeal, which he reſigned ſoon after, and retired to Chilton, in Wiltſhire, where he died in 1676. His works are, 1. Monarchy aſſerted to be the beſt, moſt antient, and legal Form of Government, 8vo.; 2. Memorials of Engliſh Affairs, folio, 1682, and again conſiderably enlarged, in 1732; 3. Several Speeches in Ruſhworth's and other collections.—Wood. Biog. Brit.

WHITGIFT (John), an eminent prelate, was born at Great Grimſby, in Lincolnſhire, in 1530. He received his education firſt at Queen's college, and afterwards removed to Pembroke Hall, Cambridge. In 1560 he entered into orders, and became chaplain to biſhop Cox of Ely, who gave him a living. In 1563 he was appointed lady Margaret's profeſſor of divinity, and was a great reſtorer of order and diſcipline in the univerſity. In 1567 he was made maſter of Trinity college, and regius profeſſor, which place he reſigned two years afterwards. He obtained the deanry of Lincoln in 1573; and in 1576 was conſecrated biſhop of Worceſter, from whence, in 1583, he was tranſlated to Canterbury. He was a great favourite with Queen Elizabeth, who uſed to call him her little black huſband. He was a zealous governor of the church, and ſtrenuouſly reſiſted the encroachments of the puritans. The archbiſhop founded an hoſpital at Croydon, and died at Lambeth, in 1604.—Life by Strype.

WHITTINGHAM (William), an Engliſh divine, was born at Cheſter, and educated at Braſenoſe college, Oxford. Afterwards he became fellow of All ſouls, and ſenior ſtudent of Chriſt-church. On the death of Edward VI. he went abroad; and returned in that of Elizabeth, ſtrongly prejudiced againſt the liturgy and church ceremonies. However he did not ſcruple to accept the deanry of Durham, where he committed great depredations in removing the ſtone coffins and other antient remains from the cathedral. He died in 1579. He tranſlated the Geneva Bible; and turned into metre ſome of the pſalms of David. They are in Sternhold and Hopkins's verſion, ſigned W. W.—Wood.

WHITTINGTON (Robert), a learned ſchoolmaſter, was born at Litchfield, and educated at Oxford; he publiſhed a Latin grammar in quarto, 1500; and ſeveral Latin pieces. He was a man of great learning and vanity, and wrote againſt Lily and Horman. He died about 1530.—Wood, A. O.

WHITTINGTON (ſir Richard), a wealthy citizen of London, who flouriſhed in the reigns of Richard II. Henry IV. and Henry V. He built Newgate, part of St. Bartholomew's hoſpital, the handſome library in Grey-Friars, now called Chriſt's-hoſpital, and part of Guildhall, with a chapel and depoſitory to keep the city records. He was knighted, and three times ſerved lord mayor of London: the laſt time was in 1419.—Stowe's London.

WICKLIFFE (John de), a celebrated divine, and ſtiled the morning ſtar of the Reformation, was born about 1324, in the pariſh of Wickliffe, in Yorkſhire. He was admitted firſt of Queen's college, but afterwards removed to Merton college, Oxford. In 1361 his great talents procured him the maſterſhip of Baliol college; and four years after he was made warden of Canterbury hall, then founded by archbiſhop Iſlip, whoſe ſucceſſor, Langham, diſplaced him at the inſtigation of the monks, who were the ſworn foes to Wickliffe, for expoſing their corrupt errors and practices. The pope having cited king Edward to Avignon for refuſing to pay him a yearly tribute, the monks defended the papal claim, which Wickliffe oppoſed with ſuch ſtrength, that he was made king's chaplain, and preferred to the rectory of Lutterworth, in Leiceſterſhire. In 1374 he was ſent, with ſome others, on an embaſſy to Rome, to complain of the number of benefices in England enjoyed by foreigners. This miſſion, however, produced no other effect than to confirm Wickliffe in his ſentiments of the papal tyranny. After his return he preached with ſtill greater vehemence againſt the corruptions of the Roman church. Pope Gregory XI. being informed of his conduct, iſſued ſeveral bulls againſt him, charging him with numerous hereſies. An aſſembly was accordingly held at St. Paul's by archbiſhop Sudbury, and Courtenay, biſhop of London, to examine Wickliffe, who appeared, ſupported by the Duke of Lancaſter and Lord Percy. Wickliffe made an able defence of himſelf, but the council ended without any determination. Wickliffe died in 1384, and was buried in his church at Lutterworth, but forty years afterwards his bones were taken up and burnt by order of the council of Conſtance. He wrote a tract on the Schiſm of the Popes; and tranſlated the New Teſtament into Engliſh. This laſt has been printed by the care of Mr. Lewis, folio.—Gilpin's Life of Wickliffe.

WICQUEFORT (Abraham), a Dutch ſtateſman, was born at Amſterdam in 1598. He entered into the ſervice of the elector of Brandenburgh, who employed him as his agent in France, where he reſided thirty-two years, and was much noticed by Mazarine. But being accuſed of communicating ſecrets of importance to the Dutch government, he was confined in the Baſtile ſome months. When the war broke out between France and Holland he retired to the Hague, where he was impriſoned four years, on a charge of holding correſpondence with the Engliſh. He contrived to make his eſcape, and retired to Zell, where he died in 1682. His works are, a Hiſtory of the United States, folio; and a Treatiſe on the Duties of an Ambaſſador, 2 vols. 4to.—Moreri.

WILD (Robert), a preſbyterian divine, who took his doctor's degree at Oxford, and became rector of Aynhoe, in Northamptonſhire, of which he was deprived at the reſtoration for nonconformity. He died at Oundle in 1679. His works are, the Tragedy of Mr. Chriſtopher Love; Iter Boreale, a Poem on the Impriſonment of Mr. Calamy in Newgate; and ſome other poetical pieces: alſo ſome Sermons.—Calamy.

WILD (Henry), a taylor of Norwich, who made himſelf maſter of the Hebrew and Arabic, and was drawn from obſcurity by Dr. Prideaux, who procured him a place in the Bodleian library. He afterwards removed to ondon, where he was ſupported by Dr. Mead. e died about 1733. He tranſlated from he Arabic Mahomet's Journey to Heaven. —Gen. Biog. Dict.

WILDBORE (Charles), an ingenious mathematician, who was entirely ſelf-taught oth in his favourite ſcience, and in the lanuages. He began his contributions to the Gentleman's Diary in 1759, and he was alſo he regular correſpondent of the Ladies Diary. Many of his communications are likewiſe in Martin's Miſcellaneous Correſpondence. In 1773 he had an amicable controverſy in Dr. Hutton's Miſcellanea Mathematica, with Mr. Dawſon of Sedbryk, on the velocity of water iſſuing from a veſſel when put in motion. In 1780 he became the editor of the Gentleman's Diary. Mr. Wildbore procured orders in the eſtabliſhed church, and had the living of Broughton Sulney, in Nottinghamſhire, where he died in 1803.—Monthly Mag.

WILDE (William), a lawyer of the 17th century. He was recorder of London in 1659, created a baronet in 1660, appointed king's ſerjeant, made one of the juſtices of the court of common pleas in 1668, and juſtice of the court of king's bench in 1672. He died in 1679. He edited Yelverton's Reports.—Gen. Dict.

WILKES (Thomas), an auguſtin monk, of Oſney, near Oxford. He wrote a Chronicle of Engliſh Affairs from the conqueſt to the end of the reign of Edward the firſt.—Nicholſon's Hiſt. Lib.

WILKES (John), alderman and chamberlain of London, was born in Clerkenwell in 1728: he received a liberal education, and after travelling abroad, married a lady of fortune, and became colonel of the Buckinghamſhire militia. In 1761 he was elected into parliament for Aylesbury, and at this time became a violent opponent of the Bute adminiſtration by publiſhing a periodical paper called the North Briton, the 45th number of which was ſo offenſive, that a general warrant was iſſued by the earl of Halifax, ſecretary of ſtate, to ſeize Mr. Wilkes and his papers. This affair made much noiſe, and brought him into great repute as the patriot of the day. He brought his action in the court of king's bench, where he obtained a verdict, by which general warrants were declared illegal. But he was ſoon afterwards involved in trouble on account of a moſt obſcene and blaſphemous publication called the Eſſay on Woman; for which he was expelled the houſe. He was at different times returned for Middleſex, but the election was always declared void till 1774, when he was permitted to take his ſeat without farther oppoſition. The ſame year he ſerved the office of lord mayor. He afterwards obtained the lucrative office of chamberlain of the city of London, and in 1790 quitted parliament. He rendered eminent ſervice in the riots of 1780 by exerting himſelf with ſuch promptitude as ſaved the bank from the depredators. He died in 1797.—Life by Almon.

WILKIE (William), a poet and divine, was born in Weſt Lothian, in 1721, and educated for the miniſtry at Edinburgh. He obtained his degree of doctor in divinity, and became profeſſor of natural philoſophy at St. Andrew's, where he died in 1772. Dr. Wilkie publiſhed a poem entitled, the Epigoniad; and ſome ingenious Fables, 8vo.—Anderſon's Collection of Poets.

WILKINS (John), a learned prelate, was born at Fawlſey in Northamptonſhire, in 1614, and educated at Magdalen-hall, Oxford. On entering into orders he became chaplain to lord Say, and afterwards to Charles count palatine of the Rhine. In 1638 he publiſhed his Diſcovery of a New World, or an attempt to prove that there may be another habitable world in the moon. This idea he enlarged and ſupported in a diſcourſe concerning a new planet in 1640. He alſo publiſhed ſeveral other ingenious pieces, particularly one, entitled, Mathematical Magic; which was reprinted in 1680. In 1649 he obtained the wardenſhip of Wadham college, which he vacated in 1656 by his marriage with the ſiſter of Oliver Comwell, but by his connexion with the uſurper the ſtatutes were diſpenſed with. In 1659 he was made maſter of Trinity college, Cambridge, of which he was deprived at the reſtoration. He then became preacher at Gray's inn, and rector of St. Lawrence Jewry. He was one of the inſtitutors of the royal ſociety, and in 1668 was promoted to the ſee of Cheſter. He died in 1672. His mathematical works have been printed in 2 vols. 8vo. He was alſo the author of ſome Sermons; a Diſcourſe on the Gift of Preaching; and another on Prayer.—Gen. Dict. Wood.

WILKINS (David), a learned antiquary and divine, was keeper of the library at Lambeth, of which he drew up a catalogue, printed in 1718. Archbiſhop Wake beſtowed upon him ſome church preferment. He publiſhed the New Teſtament in Coptic; an edition of the Saxon Laws; and another of Selden's works. He died in 1745.—Anecd. of Bowyer.

WILKINSON (Henry), a celebrated preacher among the preſbyterians. He was one of the aſſembly of divines at Weſtminſter, rector of St. Dunſtan in the Eaſt, canon of Chriſt church, Oxford, and Margaret's profeſſor of divinity in that univerſity; but was deprived of all his places at the reſtoration for nonconformity. He died at Clapham in 1675. Dr. Wilkinſon printed ſeveral ſermons.—Calamy.

WILKINSON (Henry), a puritan divine, was born in Yorkſhire in 1616. He received his education at Magdalen-hall, Oxford, of which in the time of the rebellion he became principal, but was ejected at the reſtoration. He died at Great Cornard in Suffolk, in 1690. He publiſhed Academical

Diſcourſes; a Treatiſe on Free Will; and another on the Divine Right of the Lord's Day, in Latin.—Ibid.

WILLIAM I. king of England, commonly called the Conqueror, was the natural ſon of Robert I. duke of Normandy, and of Arlotta the daughter of a furrier at Falaiſe, where he was born in 1024. He reigned quietly in Normandy till the death of Edward the Confeſſor, when pretending that the crown had been bequeathed to him by that monarch, he fitted out a large expedition, and landed on the coaſt of Suſſex. As ſoon as the troops were diſembarked he burnt the veſſels, exclaiming, ſee your country. Harold marched againſt him, but was defeated and ſlain at Haſtings; after which William marched to London, and was crowned at Weſtminſter on Chriſtmas day, in 1066. He reigned with great tyranny, in conſequence of which ſeveral inſurrections took place, but they were ſoon quelled, and William divided the lands of moſt of the nobility and gentry among his followers. He alſo introduced the Norman language, and ordered that all law pleadings and ſtatutes ſhould be in that tongue. To prevent nightly meetings and conſpiracies he inſtituted the curfew, or "cover fire bell," at the ſound of which every night at eight o'clock all fires and candles were to be put out. He cauſed a ſurvey to be made of all the lands in the kingdom, the account or regiſter of which was called the Doomſday book. In 1078 he finiſhed the tower of London. In 1087 he invaded France, and deſtroyed the city of Mantes. He was about to march to Paris, but died in conſequence of a fall from his horſe, and was buried the ſame year at Rouen.—Rapin.

WILLIAM II. or Rufus, ſo called from his red hair, was the ſon of the conqueror, and crowned on the news of his father's death, Sept. 27, 1087. He made a conqueſt of part of Wales, and obtained the duchy of Normandy from his brother Robert, in 1095. He was a great perſecutor of the clergy, and baniſhed Lanfranc, archbiſhop of Canterbury, from the kingdom. William was accidentally ſlain by an arrow, ſhot by Walter Tyrrel, as he was hunting in the New Foreſt, Hampſhire, in 1100, aged 44.—Ibid.

WILLIAM III. of Naſſau, prince of Orange, and king of England, was born at the Hague in 1650. He was the ſon of William prince of Orange, and of Henrietta Maria, daughter of Charles I. He married the princeſs Mary, daughter of James I. duke of York; and ſucceeded to the ſtadtholderſhip in 1672. He was alſo nominated general of the troops of Holland againſt Louis XIV. and made a vigorous reſiſtance to the French armies under Luxembourg, whom he defeated in 1674, but was repulſed in his turn by the prince de Condé. In 1688 the arbitrary meaſures of James II. induced many diſaffected nobles and others to invite over the prince of Orange. He gladly embraced the occaſion, and landed without oppoſition in Torbay, Nov. 5, the ſame year. James, finding himſelf unſupported, withdrew to France, and William took poſſeſſion of his throne in conjunction with his wife, the daughter of that unfortunate monarch. The coronation took place April 11, 1689. The year following William went to Ireland, where he defeated James at the battle of the Boyne. In 1691 he headed the confederated army in the Netherlands, took Namur in 1695, and in 1697 he was acknowleged king of England by the treaty of Ryſwick. On the death of Mary in 1693 the parliament confirmed to him the royal title. He fell from his horſe and broke his collar-bone, Feb. 26, 1702, and died March 8th following.—Rapin. Smollet.

WILLIAMS (John), a celebrated prelate, was born at Aber-Conway in Caernarvonſhire, in 1582. He received his education firſt at Ruthin ſchool, in Denbighſhire, and afterwards at St. John's college, Cambridge, where he proceeded to his degrees in arts. In 1612 he became chaplain to the lord chancellor Egerton, by which means he obtained ſome conſiderable preferment, and was admitted into his lordſhip's entire confidence. The chancellor alſo at his death gave him his manuſcript collections. He afterwards became chaplain to the king, and in 1620 dean of Weſtminſter. The year following he was ſworn of the privy council, and was made keeper of the great ſeal, and biſhop of Lincoln. He attended James I. on his death-bed, and preached his funeral ſermon, in which he compared him to Solomon. Soon after the acceſſion of Charles I. the great ſeal was taken from him, and he was proſecuted in the ſtar-chamber on a charge of betraying the king's ſecrets, fined 10,000l. and impriſoned in the Tower, where he remained above three years. In 1640 he was releaſed by parliament, and the year following made archbiſhop of York. He was again ſent to the Tower with ſome of his brethren, by the lords, for framing a proteſt againſt all proceedings in parliament while they were hindered from attending in their places by the mob. When he was releaſed the archbiſhop went to York, but the wars breaking out he retired to Wales, where he died in 1650.—Life by Hacket, and Lives of the Chancellors.

WILLIAMS (ſir Charles Hanbury), a poet and ſtateſman, was the ſon of John Hanbury, a director of the South Sea company. He repreſented the county of Monmouth in three ſucceſſive parliaments, and in 1744 was inſtalled knight of the bath. Two years after he was ſent ambaſſador to Pruſſia, and afterwards in the ſame capacity to Ruſſia, from whence he returned in 1759, and died the ſame year. His poems, which are remarkably lively, are in Dodſley's and other collections.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

WILLIAMS (Daniel), a preſbyterian miniſter, was born at Wrexham in Denbighshire, in 1644. He officiated some time in Dublin, from whence he came to London in 1687, and became pastor of a congregation. In 1709 he obtained his doctor's degree from Glasgow and Dublin, and died in 1716. He founded the library in Redcross-street for dissenting ministers Five volumes of his Sermons are in print.—Calamy

Williams (John), a pious bishop, was born in Northamptonshire, and educated at Magdalen-hall, Oxford. After the restoration he obtained the rectory of St. Mildred, in the Poultry, and a canonry in St. Paul's cathedral. In 1689 he became chaplain to William and Mary, who gave him a prebend of Canterbury, and in 1696 promoted him to the bishopric of Chichester He died in 1709. This bishop published several tracts against the romanists and dissenters, and a volume of Sermons, preached at Boyle's lecture —Wood.

Williams (Anna), an ingenious lady, was born in 1706, in South Wales: her father was a surgeon, but having a turn for mathematics, he imagined that he had discovered the longitude Filled with this idea, he came to London with his daughter in 1730, but the expenses of the metropolis soon swallowed up his scanty means, and he died in the Charter house. The daughter lost her sight by a cataract, after which she was taken under the protection of Dr. Johnson. Mr Garrick gave her the profits of a play, which produced 200l. and in 1766 she published by subscription a volume of miscellanies in prose and verse. She also translated from the French the Life of Julian. Miss Williams died in 1783.—Europ. Mag.

Willis (Thomas), a physician, was born in 1621, at Great Bedwin, in Wiltshire, and educated at Christ church, Oxford, where he took his degrees in arts. In 1642 he took up arms in the service of the king, but after the surrender of the garrison he applied to the study of physic. In 1660 he was appointed Sedley's professor of natural philosophy, and the same year took his doctor's degree He was one of the first members of the royal society, and became fellow of the college of physicians. He was the most celebrated physician in his time, and died in Westminster in 1675. His medical and philosophical works have been printed in 2 vols. folio.—Wood.

Willis (Browne), son of the above, was born at Blandford, in Dorsetshire, in 1682. He was educated at Westminster school, from whence he was elected to Christ church, Oxford, where he proceeded to his degree of doctor of laws. He was one of the revivers of the society of antiquaries, and during his long life visited all the cathedrals in England and Wales, except Carlisle. He was at one time member of parliament for Buckingham, and died in 1760. He gave his cabinet of coins and manuscripts to the university of Oxford. Dr. Willis published a Survey of the Cathedrals, in 2 vols. 4to.; also an Account of the Mitred Abbeys, 2 volumes 8vo. —Anecd. of Bowyer.

Willughby (Francis), an eminent naturalist, was born in Warwickshire in 1635, and educated at Cambridge, where he formed a close friendship with Mr. Ray, whom he accompanied in several excursions over England and Scotland, also through France, Holland, Germany, Italy, and Switzerland. He died in 1672, and left that gentleman trustee to his children Mr. Ray published, from the papers of his friend, his Ornithology in Latin, 1676, folio; and in 1678 an English translation of it, with figures engraved at the expense of Mrs. Willughby; also the History of Fishes, in folio, 1686.—Gen. Dict. Pulteney

Wilson (Arthur), an historian, was born in 1596 in Norfolk, and educated at Trinity-college, Oxford, after which he became servant to Robert, earl of Essex. He died in 1652. He wrote the History of the Reign of James I, folio, in a very pedantic style, and excessively partial.—Wood.

Wilson (Thomas), an eminently pious prelate, was born at Burton, in Cheshire, in 1663, and educated at Trinity college, Dublin. He was ordained at Kildare in 1685, and in 1692 became tutor to a son of the earl of Derby. At the same time he was offered the valuable living of Baddesworth, in Yorkshire, which he declined as being inconsistent with his resolves against non-residence. In 1697 he was, in a manner, compelled to accept the bishopric of Man, which had lain vacant four years. He was at the same time created doctor of laws by archbishop Tenison. The annual income of the see did not exceed 300l. a year, and yet out of that small stipend his charities were numerous. In 1703 he obtained an act of settlement for the island, and framed ecclesiastical constitutions, which were approved of by the lay proprietors and passed into a law. In 1707 he was made D.D. by the universities of Oxford and Cambridge. In 1722 the governor of the island sent the good bishop and his two vicars general to prison, for suspending the archdeacon, who had acted in violation of the ecclesiastical constitutions. After a confinement of two months they were released, and the proceedings were condemned by the king and council; but the bishop refused to prosecute his enemies. He also declined accepting an English bishopric which was offered him, being so attached to his diocese that no temptation could remove him. This apostolical prelate died in 1755, in the 93d year of his age, and the 58th of his consecration. His publications were all of a practical nature, and admirably adapted to inform the ignorant and to edify the virtuous. Since his death have been published his Sermons, in 4 vols. 8vo.; and his Notes on the Bible, in 3 vols. 4to.—Life prefixed to his works, 2 vols. folio.

Wilson (Thomas), son of the preceding, was born in 1703, and educated at Chriſt church, Oxford, where he proceeded to his degree of D.D in 1739. He obtained the rectory of St. Stephen Walbrook, and a prebend of Weſtminſter. He was alſo ſub-almoner to the king. Dr. Wilſon rendered himſelf ridiculous by engaging in party politics, and by his enthuſiaſtic attachment to Catharine Macaulay, whoſe ſtatue in the character of Liberty he ſet up in Walbrook church, but on quarrelling with the lady he removed this monument of his folly. He died at Bath in 1784 —Dr. Wilſon publiſhed his father's works.—Europ. Mag.

WILSON (Florence), a Scotch writer, was born in the county of Moray in 1500, and educated at King's college, Aberdeen. He afterwards went to Baſil, and laſtly to Paris, where he taught philoſophy in the college of Navarre. He died in his native country in 1557. He wrote a treatiſe De Tranquillitate Animæ.—Mackenzie's Hiſt. of Scotch Writers.

WILSON (John), was a native of Kendal, in Weſtmoreland, where his employment was that of knitting ſtockings. However, his fame for botanical knowlege was ſo great, that he gave leſſons alternately at that place and at Newcaſtle, and was attended by ſcholars from Scotland. In 1744 he publiſhed a Synopſis of Britiſh Plants in Mr. Ray's method, 8vo. He died about 1750.—Fulteney's Sketches.

WILSON (Richard), an eminent painter, was born at Pineges, in Montgomeryſhire, in 1714. He received an excellent education under his father, who was rector of that pariſh, and diſcovering a ſtrong inclination to painting he was placed under an obſcure artiſt in London, and afterwards he followed portrait painting in London with ſucceſs. In 1749 he went to Italy, where Mr. Lock, an Engliſh gentleman, employed him in taking ſketches and painting landſcapes. At Rome he cultivated the friendſhip of Vernet, the celebrated French painter, who adviſed him to adhere to landſcape-painting. In 1755 he returned to England, where he acquired the higheſt reputation in his line. On the eſtabliſhment of the royal academy he became a member, and in 1779 librarian. He died in 1782. Wilſon has been called the Engliſh Claude.—Europ. Mag. Pilkington.

WINCHELSEA (Anne, counteſs of), was the daughter of ſir William Kingſmill, in Hampſhire, and became maid of honour to the ducheſs of York, ſecond wife of James II. till her marriage with Heneage, ſon of the earl of Winchelſea. Her principal production was a Poem upon the Spleen. A collection of her works was printed in 1713. She died in 1720.—Biog. Fœmineum.

WINCHESTER (Thomas), an eminent divine, was born at Farringdon, in Berkſhire, and educated at Magdalen college, Oxford, where he proceeded to his degree of D.D. in 1749. He was alſo elected to a fellowſhip, which he reſigned in 1761, on obtaining the rectory of Appleton, in Berkſhire, where he died in 1780. He wrote a valuable tract on the Seventeenth Article of the Church of England, reprinted in 1803. He was alſo the author of ſome pieces againſt the Confeſſional. One Elhanan Winchester, an American miniſter, publiſhed ſeveral books in defence of the doctrine of Univerſal Salvation. —Life by Churton, prefixed to the tract above mentioned.

WINCKELMAN (John), a celebrated antiquary, was born at Stendal, in the Marche of Brandenburg, in 1718, of proteſtant parents. He was bred a ſhoemaker, which occupation he quitted for the ſtudy of literature at Sechauſen, where he became a profeſſor of the belles lettres. In 1754 he went to Dreſden, and embraced the Roman catholic religion. The year following he viſited Rome, where he was appointed in 1762 preſident of antiquities. He was conſidered as the firſt connoiſſeur of his time, and his friendſhip was courted by all perſons who travelled to Rome to obſerve the antiquities and curioſities of that city and neighbourhood. He was aſſaſſinated at Trieſte by a villain to whom he was ſhewing ſome of his valuable medals, in 1768. The murderer was taken and executed. Winckelman wrote, the Hiſtory of Arts among the Ancients; Elucidation of difficult Points of Mythology; Allegory for Artiſts; Remarks upon ancient Architecture. After his death were publiſhed his Familiar Letters —Life of Winckelman, by Heyne.

WING (Vincent), an aſtrological writer. He was author of the Celeſtial Harmony of the Viſible World, 1657, folio; an Ephemeris for Thirty Years; Computatio Catholica; and Aſtronomia Britannica. This laſt is a work of merit. He died in 1668. His name ſtill continues to be affixed to a popular ſheet almanack.—Life by Gadbury.

WINGATE (Edmund), a mathematical writer, was born in Bedfordſhire in 1593, and educated at Queen's college, Oxford, from whence he removed to Gray's Inn. He was appointed Engliſh teacher to the queen of Charles the firſt: but he took the covenant, and was elected into the parliament called by Cromwell. He died in 1656. He publiſhed the Uſe of the Rule of Proportion, commonly called Gunter's Scale; Natural and Artificial Arithmetic, 8vo. This book has gone through many editions. Tables of Logarithms; Ludus Mathematicus; the Exact Surveyor; and other works.—Wood.

WINSCHOMB (John), commonly called Jack of Newberry, who lived in the reign of Henry VIII. and was the greateſt clothier in England. He kept one hundred looms at work, and his houſe was, till lately, ſhewn as a curioſity. He led a troop of his workmen to the battle of Flodden-field.—Gen. Dict.

WINSLOW (James Benignus), a celebrated anatomiſt of Denmark, was a nephew of Steno, and born in 1669. He ſtudied under Du Verney, at Paris, where he turned Roman catholic, and became phyſician, demonſtrator in the king's garden, and member of the academy of ſciences. He died in 1760. Winſlow was the author of a Courſe of Anatomy, 4to.; Diſſertation on the Uncertainty of the Signs of Death, 2 vols. 12mo.; on Diſeaſes of the Bones; and other works of value.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

WINSTANLEY (William), a biographical writer, was originally a barber. He wrote, the Lives of the Poets; Select Lives of England's Worthies; Hiſtorical Rarities; and ſome other books. His ſtyle is miſerable, but we are obliged to him for ſome notices of perſons and things which would have been otherwiſe loſt. He died about 1690.—Granger.

WINSTON (Thomas), an Engliſh phyſician, was born in 1575, and educated at Clare-hall, Cambridge. In 1602 he went abroad, and took his doctor's degree at Padua. On his return he ſettled in London, and in 1615 was choſen profeſſor of phyſic at Greſham college, where he died in 1655. His anatomical lectures were printed in 1650.—Hutchinſon's Med. Biog.

WINTOWN, or WYNTOWN (Andrew), a monk and hiſtorian in Scotland, who died about 1400. He wrote a Chronicle of his Country in rhyme, in which there is a ſtrange mixture of truth and fable.—Nicholſon.

WINTRINGHAM (ſir Clifton), an eminent phyſician, was born at York in 1710. He received a liberal education, and after taking his degrees, became phyſician to the duke of Cumberland in 1749. He afterwards obtained the title of baronet, and died in London in 1794. He publiſhed an improved edition of Mead's Medical Precepts, 8vo.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

WINWOOD (ſir Ralph), an eminent ſtateſman, was born in 1565, at Aynhoe, in Northamptonſhire, and elected probationer fellow of Magdalen college, Oxford, in 1582. He ſerved the office of proctor in 1589, and ſoon after went on his travels. In 1607 he received the honour of knighthood, and was ſent ambaſſador to the ſtates of Holland. In 1614 he was made ſecretary of ſtate and privy counſellor. He died in 1617. His Memoirs of State Affairs were publiſhed after his death, in 1 vol. folio.—Wood, A. O. Gen. Dict.

WIRLEY (William), an heraldic writer, who was rouge-croix pourſuivant of arms, and died in 1618. He publiſhed the True Uſe of Armory ſhewed by Hiſtory and plainly proved by Example, 4to.—Ibid.

WISCHART (William), a Scotch divine, was born at Dalkeith in 1657. At the revolution he was made one of the miniſters of Leith, and in 1716 choſen principal of the univerſity of Edinburgh, and a miniſter of that city. He is the author of a Body of Divinity, in 1 vol. folio. He died in 1727.

WISCHEART (George), a Scotch prelate, was born in 1609, and educated at Edinburgh. He entered into epiſcopal orders, and became chaplain to the great marquis of Montroſe, whom he accompanied in his laſt expedition, was taken priſoner, and narrowly eſcaped being put to death. At the reſtoration he was made biſhop of Edinburgh, where he died in 1669. He wrote a very curious account of the wars in Scotland, and the Hiſtory of the Marquis of Montroſe, 1 vol. 8vo.—Gen. Dict.

WISE (Francis), a learned divine and antiquary, who was fellow of Trinity college, Oxford, and aſſiſtant to Dr. Hudſon, in the Bodleian library. He obtained the rectory of Rotherfield Grays, in Oxfordſhire; was appointed keeper of the archives of the univerſity, and Radcliffe librarian. He died in 1677. He publiſhed Annales Ælfridi Magni, 4to; Enquiries concerning the firſt Inhabitants of Europe, 4to.; and Obſervations on the Fabulous Times, 4to.—Wood.

WISSING (William), a portrait-painter, was born at Amſterdam in 1656. He was the diſciple of Dodraens, and on coming to England was employed by ſir Peter Lely, whoſe manner he imitated. He painted portraits of moſt of the royal family, and was a powerful rival of Kneller. He died in 1687.—Vertue.

WITHERS (George), an Engliſh poet, was born in 1588. He was impriſoned for his firſt book, entitled, Abuſes Whipt and Stript; but continued to write ſatires and eclogues in priſon. The latter poſſeſs merit. In the civil wars he was an officer in the parliament army, was taken by the royaliſts, and condemned to be hanged, but was ſaved by the interceſſion of Sir John Denham. He died in 1667.—Granger.

WITSIUS (Herman), a learned calviniſtic divine, was born in 1626 at Enckhuyſen, in Holland. He became ſucceſſively profeſſor of divinity at Franeker, Utrecht, and Leyden. He died in 1708. His principal works are, 1. Hiſtoria Hieroſolymitana; 2. Egyptiaca et Decaphyllon, cum Diatriba de Legione Fulminatrice Chriſtianorum; 3. De Economiæ Fœdorum, or the Economy of the Covenants. This has been tranſlated into Engliſh, 3 vols. 8vo. 4. Miſcellaneorum Sacrorum; 5. Maletemata Leydenſia, &c.

WITT (John de), ſon of Jacob de Witt, burgomaſter of Dort, was born in 1625, of a noble family. After completing his ſtudies, he went into other countries, and on his return paſſed through ſeveral offices till he became grand penſionary of Holland. He managed public affairs with great wiſdom, and placed the marine in an excellent ſtate. He oppoſed the elevation of William III. to the ſtadtholderate, and this conduct proved the ſource of all his miſfortunes. An attempt was made to aſſaſſinate him, but failed. His brother, Cornelius de Witt, was apprehended on a charge of conſpiring the death of the prince of Orange, and ſent to priſon; but though the accuſation was unſupported by proof, he was ſentenced to be baniſhed. John was about to accompany him, but as they were leaving the Hague the irritated populace tore them in pieces in the moſt fa-vage manner, in 1672. Thus fell these virtuous patriots, one of whom had served his country with fidelity as a statesman nineteen years, and the other as a soldier. The Negociations and Memoirs of John de Witt have been printed in 6 vols. 12mo.—Life of John de Witt, Utrecht, 1709.

WITT (Emanuel de), a Dutch painter, was born at Alcmaer in 1607, and died in 1692. He excelled in architectural subjects. —Houbraken.

WOFFINGTON (Margaret), a celebrated actress, was born at Dublin in 1718. Her first appearance in London was at Covent-garden theatre, in 1738, in the character of Sir Harry Wildair, in which she acquired great popularity. She died in 1760.—Europ. Mag.

WOIDE (Dr.), a learned divine, was a native of Poland, but resided in England twenty-five years, was minister of the German chapel in the Savoy, and of the Dutch chapel at St. James's; and also one of the assistant librarians of the British museum. He was deeply skilled in the Eastern languages, particularly the Coptic. He edited several important works, particularly the Alexandrian MS. of the New Testament in the British museum, and the Egyptian grammar of Mr. Scholtz. At the time of his death, which happened in 1790, he was engaged on an Egyptian lexicon.—Europ. Mag. Vol. XVII.

WOLFE (James), a celebrated commander, was the son of general Edward Wolfe, and born at Westerham, in Kent, in 1726. He entered young into the army, and possessing great military talents, improved by assiduity and experience, soon distinguished himself as a brave and skilful officer. He was present at the battle of Lafeldt, and in every subsequent engagement in Germany, in the war which terminated at the peace of Aix-la-Chapelle. When lieutenant-colonel of Kingsley's regiment, he brought it to such exact discipline, that as long as the six battalions on the plain of Minden are recorded in history, the stand of that regiment will be remembered to his honour. He was greatly instrumental to the taking of Louisburg, and was scarcely returned from thence when he was appointed to the chief command of the important expedition against Quebec in 1759. This undertaking afforded ample scope for the exercise of his great military talents. But he was mortally wounded in the moment of victory, on the news of which he lifted up his eyes to heaven, and said, "I thank God; I die contented." There is a fine monument to his memory in Westminster abbey; and Woollett engraved a beautiful picture of his death, from a painting by West.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

WOLFF (John Christian), or Wolfius, was born at Breslaw in 1679. He studied first at Jena, and afterwards at Leipsic, where he published a Thesis on the manner of Studying Philosophy. In 1707 he became professor of mathematics at Halle, and in 1721 was appointed counsellor to the court of the king of Prussia. But some of his metaphysical opinions giving offence to the faculty of theology, he was banished from Halle, on which he removed to Marpurg, where he obtained a professorship with the title of aulic counsellor to the prince of Hesse. He was also honoured with marks of distinction by the king of Sweden, and was elected a member of the academy of sciences at Paris, and of that of Petersburg. In 1741 he was recalled by Frederic III. king of Prussia, who appointed him privy counsellor, vice-chancellor, and professor of the law of nature and nations. He was afterwards made chancellor of the university, and the elector of Bavaria created him a baron. He died at Halle in 1754. His principal works are, a Course of Mathematics, 2 vols. 4to.; Philosophia Rationalis, sive Logica, 4to.; a System of Metaphysics, 4to; Jus Naturæ, 8 vols. 4to.; Jus Gentium, 4to.; Horæ Subsecivæ Magdeburgenses; Dictionary of the Mathematics, 8vo.; Specimen Physicæ ad Theologiam Naturalem Applicatæ, 8vo. His Latin style is barbarous, but his ideas are profound and often obscure.—Nouv. Dict. Hist.

WOLLASTON (William), an ingenious divine, was born in Staffordshire in 1659, and educated at Sidney-Sussex college, Cambridge, where he took his degrees in arts. He became assistant and afterwards master of Birmingham school; but becoming possessed of a good fortune, by the death of a relation, he retired to London, and led a studious life. He died in 1724. His Religion of Nature delineated, 4to. and 8vo. is an attempt to prove the truth of religion on mathematical principles. It is a curious work, but very abstruse.—Gen. Dict.

WOLLEBIUS (John), a native of Basil, who flourished in the 17th century. He wrote a little tract, entitled, Compendium Theologiæ, translated into English by Alexander Ross. The author died in 1629.—Ibid.

WOOLLETT (William), an eminent engraver, was born at Maidstone in Kent, in 1735. He was instructed in engraving by Timney, and became engraver to his majesty. He died in 1783. His engravings fetch a high price, particularly the early impressions of the death of general Wolfe.—Strutt.

WOLSEY (Thomas), a celebrated cardinal, was the son of a butcher at Ipswich in Suffolk, and born there in 1471. He received his education at Magdalen college, Oxford, and became tutor to the sons of Grey, marquis of Dorset, who gave him the rectory of Lymington in Hampshire. Making his way at court, he gained the favour of Henry VII. who sent him on an embassy to the emperor, and on his return made him dean of Lincoln. Henry VIII. gave him the living of Torrington in Devon, and afterwards appointed him register of the garter and canon of Windsor. He next obtained the deanry of York, and attending the king to Tournay in France was made biſhop of that city. In 1514 he was advanced to the ſee of Lincoln, and the year following to the archbiſhopric of York. He was at this time in the zenith of power, and had a complete aſcendancy over the mind of the king, who made him lord chancellor, and obtained for him a cardinalſhip. He was alſo nominated the pope's legate. His influence and income were prodigious, and he lived in a princely ſtyle; but having given offence to the king by not promoting his divorce, he fell into diſgrace, and his property was confiſcated. In 1530 he was ſeized at York, but died on his way to London, ſaying, "Had I ſerved my God as faithfully as I have the king, he would not have forſaken me in my old age." He was a man of unbounded ambition, and of licentious manners; but of conſiderable learning and great policy. He founded Chriſt church college, Oxford, and built Hampton court palace.—Life by Fiddes.

WOLTERS (Henrietta), a Dutch lady, was born at Amſterdam in 1692. She painted portraits in miniature with great elegance. She died in 1741.—Pilkington.

WOMACK (Laurence), a learned biſhop, was educated at Cambridge, where he took his doctor's degree. In 1660 he was inſtalled archdeacon of Suffolk, and in 1683 nominated biſhop of St. David's. He died in 1685. This biſhop wrote, 1. the Examination of Tilenus before the Triers, 12mo. This is a ſmart book againſt the Puritans. 2. The Calviniſtic Cabinet uncloſed, 12mo; 3. The Reſult of falſe Principles, or Error Convinced by its own Evidence, 4to.; and ſome other books, chiefly in anſwer to the Calviniſts.—Wood.

WOOD (Anthony), an Engliſh antiquary and biographer, was born at Oxford in 1632. He proceeded to his degree of M.A. and in 1674 publiſhed the Hiſtory of that Univerſity. This work was afterwards printed in Latin. He publiſhed in 1691 his Athenæ Oxonienſes, 2 vols. folio. It is a valuable collection of the lives of writers and biſhops educated at Oxford. A ſecond edition, conſiderably improved by biſhop Tanner, appeared in 1721. Biſhop Burnet having attacked this work it was vindicated by the author in an octavo volume. He died in 1695.—Gen. Dict.

WOOD (Robert), a native of Ireland, who travelled through Greece with Meſſrs. Bouverie and Dawkins. He afterwards became under ſecretary of ſtate, and died in 1771. Mr. Wood is known by a very claſſical and ingenious Eſſay on the Original Genius of Homer.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

WOODALL (John), a ſurgeon in the reigns of queen Elizabeth and James I born about 1569. He was author of "The Surgeon's Mate," and "Viaticum," books of inſtruction to young ſurgeons. He died in 1638.—Aikin.

WOODCOCK (Robert), was born in 1692. He quitted a place he held under government, that he might not be interrupted in his favourite purſuits of muſic and painting. He played on the hautboy, and compoſed ſome pieces which were publiſhed. As a painter he excelled in ſea-pieces. He died in 1728.—Pilkington.

WOODFORD (Samuel), was born in London in 1636, and educated at Wadham college, Oxford, after which he entered of the Inner Temple, but at the reſtoration he became a member of the royal ſociety, and was ordained. He obtained the living of Hartley Mauduit, in Hampſhire, and a prebend in the cathedral of Chicheſter. In 1677 the archbiſhop of Canterbury conferred on him the degree of D. D. and in 1680 he was preferred to a prebend of Wincheſter. He died in 1680. His works are, a Paraphraſe on the Pſalms, 8vo.; another on the Canticles; to which are added ſeveral Poems of little merit.—Wood.

WOODHEAD (Abraham), a Roman catholic writer, was born at Maltham in Yorkſhire, and educated at Univerſity college, Oxford, of which he became fellow, and entered into orders. He was deprived of his fellowſhip in the rebellion, but was reſtored at the reſtoration. Having embraced the Roman catholic religion he ſettled at Hoxton, upon a ſmall penſion allowed by the college, and died there in 1678. He wrote the Guide in Controverſies, and ſeveral other books in favour of popery, but all under diſguiſed names.—Ibid.

WOODVILLE (Elizabeth), widow of ſir John Grey, who was ſlain in the battle of Bernard's Heath. After his death ſhe applied to Edward IV. for the reſtoration of his eſtate, when that monarch fell in love with, and married her. The princeſs Elizabeth was the fruit of this marriage, who married Henry VII. and thus united the houſes of York and Lancaſter.—Rapin.

WOODWARD (John), a phyſician, was born in Derbyſhire in 1665. He was bred up by Dr. Peter Barwick, and in 1692 became profeſſor of phyſic at Greſham-college. In 1695 archbiſhop Teniſon conferred on him the degree of doctor of phyſic. The year following he publiſhed an Eſſay towards a Natural Hiſtory of the Earth, 8vo. This volume was intended to be the precurſor of a larger work which never appeared. It contains many curious and ſome fanciful things. Dr. Woodward died in 1728.—Gen. Dict.

WOODWARD (Henry), a celebrated comedian, was born in London in 1717. He was apprenticed to Mr. Rich, the manager and celebrated harlequin; and he became ſo excellent in low comedy as to be the favourite of the town. Having realized by his profeſſion 6000l. he embarked it in a theatre at Dublin, and loſt the whole. As he was jumping on a table in the character of Scrub, he met with a fall which occaſioned his death in 1777. Woodward wrote a comedy called "The Man's the Maſter;" and "Marplot in Liſbon," a farce.—Biog. Dram.

WOOLSTON (Thomas), a deiſtical writer, was born at Northampton in 1669, and educated at Sidney college, Cambridge, where he proceeded to his degree of B. D. In 1705 he publiſhed "The Old Apology for the Truth of the Chriſtian Religion againſt the Jews and Gentiles revived, which was little noticed; but his "Six Diſcourſes on the Miracles of Chriſt," were written with ſo much freedom as to occaſion ſeveral anſwers and a proſecution againſt the author, who was ſentenced to be impriſoned a year and to pay a fine of 100l. He died in the rules of the king's-bench in 1733.—Gen. Dict.

WOOTON (John), a painter of landſcapes, horſes, and dogs, who died in 1765. His price for a picture was regularly forty guineas.—Pilkington.

WORLIDGE (Thomas), a portrait-painter and engraver. His etchings after Rembrandt are peculiarly excellent. He publiſhed a book of gems from the antique, and died in 1766.—Walpole.

WORMIUS (Olaus), a Daniſh phyſician, was born in Jutland, in 1588. After travelling into different countries he became profeſſor of medicine at Copenhagen, in 1624, and was appointed phyſician to the king. He died rector of the Univerſity in 1654. His works are, 1. Antiquitates Danicæ, Litteraturæ Runica, Faſti Danici, &c. folio; 2. Danica Litteratura Antiquiſſima Vulgò Gothica Dicta, folio; 3. Monumentorum Danicorum; 4. Duplex Series Antiqua Regum Daniæ, &c.; 5. Lexicon Runicum, &c. There was another of this name who was profeſſor of eloquence, hiſtory, and phyſic, at Copenhagen, where he died in 1708. He wrote, 1. De Gloſſopetris; 2 Viribus Medicamentorum Specificis; and other works.—Moreri.

WORSDALE (James), a painter and dramatic writer. He was pupil to ſir Godfrey Kneller, whoſe niece he married. He was the author of ſeveral dramatic pieces, in one of which, "The Aſſembly," he performed the character of Lady Scandal. He died in 1767.—Biog. Dram.

WORSLEY (ſir Richard), an ingenious Engliſh gentleman, was a native of the Iſle of Wight. He ſucceeded his father ſir Thomas in 1768, and in 1775 married a daughter of ſir John Fleming, bart. from whom he was divorced in 1782. He was comptroller of his majeſty's houſehold, governor of the Iſle of Wight, and repreſentative in parliament for Newport. In the early part of his life he purchaſed in various parts of Europe a fine collection of marbles, ſtatues, and other antiques, of which a deſcription was engraved and publiſhed in 2 vols. folio, entitled "Muſæum Worſleianum." Sir Richard was alſo the author of a Hiſtory of the Iſle of Wight, in one volume, 4to. 1781. He died in 1805, aged 54.—Gent. Mag.

WORTHINGTON (John), a pious divine, was a native of Wales, and educated at Emmanuel college, Cambridge. He became maſter of Jeſus college, and rector of St. Bennet Fink, London, till the fire of London, when he obtained the living of Ingoldſby, in the county of Lincoln, and a prebend in the cathedral of that ſee. He died in 1671. He wrote, 1. A Form of Sound Words, or a Scripture Catechiſm, 8vo.; 2. The Great Duty of Self-reſignation, 8vo.; 3. The Doctrine of the Reſurrection conſidered, 8vo. &c.—Wood.

WORTHINGTON (William), a learned divine, was born in Merionethſhire in 1703, and educated at Jeſus college, Oxford, where he took his doctor's degree. Archbiſhop Drummond gave him a prebend in York cathedral. He died in 1778. Dr. Worthington publiſhed Sermons at Boyle's Lecture, 2 vols.; an Eſſay on Redemption; and the Scripture Theory of the Earth, 8vo. —Gen. Biog. Dict.

WOTTON (Edward), a learned phyſician, was born at Oxford in 1492. He was very eminent in his profeſſion, and became member of the college of phyſicians, and phyſician to Henry VIII. He died in 1555.—Wood.

WOTTON (ſir Henry), an eminent writer and ſtateſman, was born at Boſton-hall in Kent, in 1568. He received his education at Wincheſter ſchool, and at New-college, Oxford, from whence he removed to Queen's college, where he took his degree of M. A. and read a lecture on optics. After leaving the univerſity, he went abroad, and became ſo intimate with the duke of Tuſcany, that he ſent him with letters to James VI. of Scotland, under the name of Octavio Baldi. When that monarch came to the Engliſh throne, he conferred on him the honour of knighthood, and ſent him ambaſſador to the republic of Venice, and other ſtates. In 1623 he was made provoſt of Eton, being all the reward he received for his great ſervices. He died in 1639, and was buried in the chapel of Eton college. He wrote the Elements of Architecture; Parallel between the Earl of Eſſex and the Duke of Buckingham; Characters of ſome of the Kings of England; Eſſay on Education; and Poems printed in the Reliquiæ Wottonianæ, 8vo.—Life by Walton.

WOTTON (William), a learned divine, was born at Wrentham in Suffolk in 1666, of which place his father was rector. At the early age of ten years he was admitted of Catharine-hall, Cambridge. In 1679 he took his firſt degree, and afterwards obtained a fellowſhip of St. John's college. On entering into orders he obtained the rectory of Middleton and the ſinecure of Llandrillo in Denbighſhire. He died in 1726. Dr. Wotton publiſhed, 1. Reflections on Antient and Modern Learning, which book was ridiculed by Swift in his Battle of Books; 2. An Abridgement of the Roman Hiſtory; 3. Memoirs of the Cathedrals of St. David's and Landaff; 4. Letter to a Student of Divinity.—Gen. Dict.

Wouters (Francis), a Dutch painter, who was a diſciple of Rubens, and came to England with the imperial ambaſſador in 1637. He chiefly practiſed in landſcape, with ſmall naked figures as Cupids. He died in 1659.—Vertue.

Wouvermans (Philip), a landſcape painter, was born at Haerlem in 1620. He enriched his pictures with huntings, encampments, or other ſubjects where horſes could be introduced. He died in 1668. His brothers, Peter and John, were both diſtinguiſhed artiſts.—Houbraken.

Wrangel (Charles Guſtavus), a marſhal and conſtable of Sweden, who diſtinguiſhed himſelf as a naval and military commander. He defeated the Daniſh fleet in 1644, and the imperial army near Augſburg in 1648, and the Dutch fleet at the paſſage of the Sound in 1658. He died in 1676.—Moreri.

Wren (Matthew), a learned biſhop, was born in London, and educated at Pembroke-hall, Cambridge, where he took his doctor's degree. He became maſter of Peter-houſe, and vice chancellor of the univerſity; and in 1628 dean of Windſor; afterwards biſhop of Hereford, and in 1636 biſhop of of Norwich, from whence in two years he was tranſlated to Ely. At the beginning of the rebellion he was committed to the Tower, where he remained till the reſtoration without being brought to trial. He died in 1667. He wrote a book againſt the Socinians, and ſome of his letters have been printed in different collections. —Wood.

Wren (ſir Chriſtopher), a celebrated architect, and nephew of the above, was born at Eaſt Knoyle in Wiltſhire, in 1632. At the age of fourteen he was ſent to Wadham college, Oxford, and in 1653 elected fellow of All-ſouls. In 1657 he was choſen profeſſor of aſtronomy at Greſham college; but removed to Oxford in 1660 on being appointed Savilian profeſſor of aſtronomy. The ſame year he was created doctor of the civil law. In 1663 he became a fellow of the royal ſociety, to which he communicated many valuable papers and obſervations. In 1665 he was nominated architect for rebuilding St. Paul's cathedral; and after the fire of London, he drew the plan of a new city, which he preſented to the king, but it was not adopted. This plan was engraved in 1724. In 1668 he was appointed ſurveyor general of his majeſty's works. The variety of buſineſs in which he was now engaged, induced him to reſign his profeſſorſhip in 1673, and the year following he received the honour of knighthood. In 1680 he was choſen preſident of the royal ſociety. He ſat twice in parliament; firſt for Plympton in Devonſhire, and afterwards for Melcombe Regis in Dorſetſhire. He died in 1723, and lies buried in St. Paul's cathedral, which is the greateſt effort of his genius. His other works are, the theatre at Oxford; Bow church; St. Stephen, Walbrook; St. Magnus, London-bridge; and St. Dunſtan's in the Eaſt.—Biog. Brit.

Wright (Edward), an Engliſh mathematician, was educated at Cambridge, and afterwards accompanied the earl of Cumberland in his expedition to the Azores in 1589. In 1599 he publiſhed his excellent book, called the Errors of Navigation corrected; in which he lays down the true method of making a ſea chart, which goes by the name of Mercator. He alſo conſtructed a Table of Meridional Parts, and Tables of the Sun's Declination. His other works are, a Treatiſe on the Sphere, another on Dialling, and a book of Navigation, called the Haven-finding Art. He died about 1620.—Martin's Biog. Phil.

Wright (Joſeph), an excellent painter, was born at Derby in 1734. He ſtudied under Hudſon, and in 1773 went to Italy, where he reſided two years, and improved himſelf by ſtudying the works of the greateſt maſters. On his return to England he ſettled in his native town, where he died in 1797. His landſcapes are beautiful, and many of his hiſtorical pictures are painted in a fine taſte.—Monthly Mag.

Wright (Paul), a divine, who was educated at Pembroke-hall, Cambridge. The governors of Bridewell, St. Thomas's, and other city hoſpitals, preſented him to the vicarage of Oakley, with the parochial chapel of Burden, in Eſſex, and alſo to the rectory of Snoreham in 1739. In 1773 he publiſhed propoſals for printing by ſubſcription, Chauncey's Hiſtory of St. Alban's, which however never appeared. In 1774 he republiſhed Heylyn's Help to Engliſh Hiſtory, 8vo. He afterwards ſuffered his name to be prefixed to a Family Bible, with notes. He died in 1785.—Europ. Mag.

Wurmser (Dagobert Sigiſmund, count), field-marſhal in the Auſtrian ſervice, was born in Alſace, and in his youth ſerved in the French army, from whence he paſſed into that of the emperor, and roſe to the higheſt military rank. In 1793 he was ſent againſt the French, whom he defeated, and compelled to retreat in diſorder into Upper Alſace. He then took Haguenau and ſome other ſtrong places: but being oppoſed by ſuperior numbers, he was obliged to abandon all that he had taken, and was defeated at Teiſchweiler. The year following he commanded the army of the Upper Rhine, and made himſelf maſter of Manheim. In 1796 he commanded in Italy, where he defeated the French in two actions, but was at laſt obliged to throw himſelf into Mantua, which he defended till the extremity of famine obliged him to capitulate the 2d Nov. 1797. He died in Hungary the ſame year at the age of 80.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

Wyatt (ſir Thomas), an accompliſhed gentleman, was born in Kent of an antient family, and educated at St. John's college, Cambridge, from whence he removed to Oxford. Henry VII. conferred on him the honour of knighthood, and employed him in ſeveral embaſſies. He died ſuddenly in 1541. He wrote ſome elegant ſongs and ſonnets, printed with thoſe of his friend the earl of Surrey. He alſo tranſlated David's pſalms into Engliſh verſe.—Wood.

WYCHERLY (William), an Engliſh poet and dramatic writer, was born in Shropſhire in 1640. He ſpent ſome years in France, where he embraced the catholic religion, which he afterwards renounced, but again abjured the proteſtant faith, and returned to the Romiſh communion. In the reign of Charles II. he was diſtinguiſhed by his wit and perſonal accompliſhments, and was taken into the particular friendſhip of the ducheſs of Cleveland. He afterwards married the counteſs of Drogheda, whoſe fortune he ſquandered in extravagance, and was thrown into priſon for debt, from whence he was releaſed by James II who gave him a penſion. In his old age he married a young woman, but died eleven days after in 1715. His comedies are, Love in a Wood; The Country Wife; The Plain Dealer; The Gentleman Dancing Maſter. A volume of his poems was printed in 1728.—Biog. Dram.

WYCKE (Thomas), a painter, was born at Haerlem in 1616. He ſpent ſeveral years in Italy, where he drew many fine views of ſea ports. He died in 1686. His ſon John Wycke, was an excellent painter of battles and animals. He lived many years in London, where he aſſiſted Knelier. He died in 1702.—Pilkington. Vertue.

WYKEHAM (William de), an illuſtrious prelate, was born at Wykeham in Hampſhire, in 1324. He owed his greatneſs to Nicholas Uvedale, lord of the manor of Wykeham, and governor of Wincheſter; who gave him an education, and made him his ſecretary. Edward III appointed him ſurveyor of the royal buildings, and chief juſtice in eyre. By Wykeham's advice that monarch built the caſtle of Windſor. In 1359 he was conſtituted chief warden and ſurveyor of the royal caſtles; and in 1363 warden and juſticiary of the king's foreſts on this ſide Trent; keeper of the privy ſeal in 1364; two years after ſecretary to the king; and in 1367 he ſucceeded Edyngdon in the ſee of Wincheſter, and the ſame year was appointed chancellor, in which office he continued till 1371. He repaired the palaces and houſes belonging to his ſee at a great expenſe, and was zealous in eſtabliſhing diſcipline and reforming abuſes.—He founded New College, Oxford, and that at Wincheſter. He died in 1404.—Life by Lowth.

WYNANTS (John), a painter, was born at Haerlem in 1600. His landſcapes are ſcarce and valuable. He died in 1670.—Pilkington.

WYNDHAM (ſir William), a ſtateſman, was born about 1687. On his return from his travels, he was choſen knight of the ſhire for the county of Somerſet; in 1710 he was appointed ſecretary at war; and in 1713 chancellor of the exchequer. He was diſmiſſed from his place on the acceſſion of George I. and falling under ſuſpicion at the breaking out of the rebellion in 1715, he was committed to the Tower, but was never brought to trial. He died in 1740.—Gen. Biog. Dict.

WYTMAN (Matthew), a painter, was born at Gorcum in 1650. His ſubjects were landſcapes and converſations. He died in 1689.—Pilkington.

X.

XACCA (Fraſmus), a native of Sicily in the 17th century. He wrote a hiſtory of the eruption of mount Etna in 1669 in Italian; a Latin poem on Fevers; and a tranſlation of Taſſo's Jeruſalem into that language.—Tiraboſchi.

XANTIPPE. See SOCRATES.

XANTIPPUS, a Lacedemonian general, who was ſent to the ſupport of the Carthaginians, and by his good conduct reſtored their affairs, and defeated the Romans under Regulus. Notwithſtanding his ſervices, the Carthaginians ordered the captain of his ſhip to throw him into the ſea.—Moreri.

XENOCRATES, a philoſopher of Chalcedon. He was the diſciple of Plato, and taught at Athens with ſuch reputation that the judges diſpenſed with his oath when he appeared in court as a witneſs. He died B.C. 314.—Diog. Laertius.

XENOPHANES, a Greek philoſopher who was contemporary with Socrates. He held that the moon is inhabited. His philoſophy was written in verſe.—Ibid.

XENOPHON, a celebrated general, philoſopher, and hiſtorian, was born at Athens, and became the diſciple of Socrates, with whom he was a favourite. He entered early on the military courſe, and accompanied Cyrus in his expedition againſt Artaxerxes. He immortalized himſelf by his famous retreat after the battle of Cunaxa, at the head of ten thouſand Greeks. After his return he attached himſelf to Ageſilaus king of Lacedemon, and died at Corinth B.C. 360. Xenophon wrote the Cyropædia, or Life of Cyrus the Great, in eight books. It is a performance of great exactneſs, and in a chaſte ſtyle. His other works are, 1. Hiſtory of the Expedition of Cyrus the Younger, and of the celebrated Retreat of the ten thouſand. 2. A Hiſtory of Greece, beginning where Thucydides ends. 3. The Memorable Sayings of Socrates. 4. An Apology for that Philoſopher, &c. All his works were printed at Paris in 1625, folio; at Oxford in Greek and Latin, 5 vols. 8vo. 1703. There was another Xenophon who wrote the Lives of Abrocomus and Anthia. He lived at Epheſus in the 4th century.—Voſſius de Hiſt. Græc. Stanley.

Xerxes, the fifth king of Perſia, and ſecond ſon of Darius Hyſtaſpes. He conquered Egypt, and then turned his arms againſt Greece with an army of 800,000 men, and 100 ſhips. He threw a bridge over the Helleſpont, and cut a paſſage through mount Athos; but at the ſtraits of Thermopylæ he was encountered by Leonidas, who with 300 Spartans made a prodigious ſlaughter of the Perſians. The Athenians ſhortly after defeated their fleet near Salamis, on which Xerxes was obliged to return to his own country, leaving Mardonius in the command of the remains of his army. Diſguſted with the war, he abandoned himſelf to luxury, and was ſlain by Artabanus the captain of his guards, B.C. 465. When Xerxes viewed his prodigious army from an eminence, he wept on the reflexion that in a few years not one of that vaſt multitude would be exiſting.—Plutarch.

Ximenes (Francis), a celebrated Spaniſh prelate and ſtateſman, was born at Torrelaguna, in Caſtile, in 1437. He ſtudied at Salamanca, and afterwards at Rome. Cardinal Gonzales made him his grand vicar, and queen Iſabella appointed him her confeſſor. In 1405 he was preferred to the archbiſhopric of Toledo, where he reformed abuſes, and inſtituted many excellent charities. Julius II. made him a cardinal in 1507, and at the ſame time he became miniſter of ſtate, in which ſtation he conducted himſelf with wiſdom and integrity. He died in 1517. He founded the univerſity of Alcala, where he cauſed to be printed the great Polyglot Bible, called the Complutenſian, which is now extremely ſcarce.—Life by Flechier.

Xylander (William), a learned critic, was born at Augſburg in 1532. He became profeſſor of Greek at Heidelberg, where he died in 1576. He publiſhed an edition of Strabo in Greek and Latin; and of Dion Caſſius and Marcus Aurelius.—Melch. Adam.

Xyphilin (John), patriarch of Conſtantinople, where he died in 1075. He was commonly called John of Trebiſond, from the place of his birth. We have by him an abridgment of the Hiſtory of Dion Caſſius, 1592, folio.—Moreri.

Y.

Yalden (Thomas), a poet, was born at Exeter in 1671, and educated at Oxford, after which he entered into orders, and in 1707 took the degree of D.D. He obtained two livings in Hertfordſhire, and was very intimate with biſhop Atterbury, on which account he was taken up and his papers ſeized, when that prelate was ſent to the Tower. Dr. Yalden, however, was ſoon diſcharged. He died in 1736. His poems have been printed in one volume 8vo. —Cibber's Lives of Poets.

Young (Patrick), a learned Scotchman, was educated at St. Andrews, and incorporated M.A. at Oxford in 1605. He was keeper of the king's library as St. James's. He publiſhed St. Clement's Epiſtle to the Romans, Greek and Latin, 1637, and was engaged to print the Septuagint after the Alexandrian MS. given to Charles I. by Cyril Lucar, but did not execute it. He was a profound Grecian, and died in 1652. —Life by T. Smith.

Young (Edward), a divine and poet, was born at Upham, in Hampſhire, in 1681. His father who was an eminent clergyman, died in 1707, and left two volumes of excellent ſermons. The ſon was educated at Wincheſter ſchool, and All Souls college, Oxford, where he ſtudied the civil law, after which he ſtood candidate for a ſeat in parliament but was unſucceſsful. He then turned his thoughts to divinity, was ordained, made chaplain to the king, and preſented to the living of Welwyn in Hertfordſhire, where he died in 1765. Dr. Young married lady Elizabeth Lee, daughter of the earl of Litchfield, and widow of colonel Lee, by whom he had a ſon who ſurvived him. As a poet he ſhines in his Night Thoughts, which abound with ſublimities, but are often very obſcure. His poem on the Laſt Day is alſo a performance of great merit. Beſides theſe works, he wrote the Revenge, and the Brothers, tragedies; The Centaur not Fabulous, a moral ſatire; Eſtimate of Human Life, a ſermon; Conjectures on Original Compoſition; The Love of Fame the Univerſal Paſſion; ſome papers in the Spectator; and miſcellaneous poems.—Life prefixed to his works.

Yriarte (Don John d'), a learned Spaniard, was born in the iſle of Teneriffe, and educated at Rouen and Paris. After completing his ſtudies he went to Madrid, where he became librarian to the king, member of the academy, and interpreter to the ſecretary of ſtate. He died in 1771. He wrote miſcellaneous works in Spaniſh, 2 vols; Catalogue of Greek MSS. in the royal library; and another of Arabic MSS. in the Eſcurial, 2 vols. folio.—Nouv. Dict. Hiſt.

Z.

ZABARELLA (Francis), a celebrated cardinal, was born at Padua in 1339. He became a famous profeſſor of the canon law in different univerſities, and was honoured with the cardinalſhip by pope John XXI. who ſent him ambaſſador to the emperor Sigiſmund. He aſſiſted at the council of Conſtance, where he adviſed the depoſing of the pope in hopes of ſucceeding him. He died there in 1417. He wrote a treatiſe on ſchiſm, and other works.—Moreri.

ZABARELLA (James), of the ſame family, was born at Padua in 1533, and died in 1589. He was well acquainted with the Ariſtotelian philoſophy, and became profeſſor at his native place. He wrote Commentaries on Ariſtotle; and a treatiſe de inventione æterni motoris, 4to.—Ibid.

ZACUTUS, or Luſitanus, a Jewiſh phyſician of Portugal, who retired to Amſterdam when Philip IV. iſſued an edict againſt the Jews. He died in 1641. His medical works make 2 vols folio, 1649. His grandſon diſtinguiſhed himſelf by his ſkill in mathematics, and was the author of a book called Juchaſin, a Jewiſh chronology, from the creation to the year 1500.—Ibid.

ZALEUCUS, a famous legiſlator among the Locrians, a people of Italy, B.C. 500. One of his laws was, that every adulterer ſhould loſe his eyes. It happened that his own ſon was taken in the crime: on which Zaleucus, to ſatisfy the law, and in ſome meaſure ſave his ſon, had one of his own eyes taken out, and one of the culprit's.—Ælian.

ZAMOSKI (John), the ſon of Staniſlaus, caſtellan of Chelm, a city of Red Ruſſia, was a man of great talents and virtue. Being ſent to Paris, and afterwards to Padua, he ſtudied with ſuch reputation as to obtain the rectorſhip of the latter univerſity. It was in this ſituation that he wrote his Treatiſes of the Roman Senate, and the perfect Senator. On his return to Poland he was employed in the higheſt offices of the ſtate. Stephen Battori gave him his niece in marriage, made him grand chancellor of the kingdom, and afterwards general of his armies. He diſtinguiſhed himſelf as a military commander and a ſtateſman, by delivering a great part of the Poliſh dominions from the yoke of Muſcovy. On the death of Stephen Battori the Poliſh nobles offered him the crown, which he refuſed, and cauſed Sigiſmund, prince of Sweden, to be elected. Zamoſki died in 1605, honoured as the defender of his country and the protector of the ſciences.—Moreri.

ZANCHIUS, or ZANCHY (Jerome), a learned reformer, was born at Alzano, in Italy, in 1516, and entered among the canons regular of Lateran, but becoming intimate with Peter Martyr, he embraced Lutheraniſm, and quitted Italy. He retired to Straſburg in 1553, but afterwards left that place, and became profeſſor of divinity at Heidelberg, where he died in 1590. The works of Zanchius were publiſhed in 8 vols. folio, in 1613. He was a man of conſiderable learning, piety, and moderation.—Bayle.

ZANNICHELLI (John-Jerome), an Italian phyſician, was born at Modena in 1662. He fixed his reſidence at Venice, where he gained a great reputation, and died in 1729. He wrote, 1. Catalogus Plantarum terreſtrium, marinarum, &c. 2. Promptuarium remediorum chymicorum, 8vo. 3. De Myriophillo Pelagico. 4. Lithographia duorum montium Veronenſium, &c. 5. De Kuſco ejuſque præparatione, 8vo. 6. Opuſcula Botanica, 4to. 7. Hiſtory of Plants growing round Venice, folio.—Halleri Bibl. Botan.

ZANNONI (James), a phyſician and botaniſt of Bologna. He diſcovered many plants, and died in 1682. His works are, 1. Hiſtoria Botanica, fol. 1675. 2. Rariorum Stirpium Hiſtoria, folio.—Ibid.

ZANOTTI (Francis Maria Garazzoni), an eminent philoſopher, was born at Bologna in 1692. He was educated among the Jeſuits, after which he ſtudied the law, which profeſſion he renounced, and applied to the mathematics under Beccari. In 1716 he was appointed ſecretary to the ſenate of Bologna, and two years after profeſſor of mathematics in that univerſity. He introduced the Newtonian ſyſtem inſtead of the Carteſian. He was appointed librarian of the Inſtitute, and compiled two catalogues of its library. In 1766 he became preſident of the Inſtitute. He died in 1777. He wrote ſeveral poetical and philoſophical works.

ZARATE (Auguſtin), a Spaniſh writer, was ſent to Peru in 1543, as treaſurer-general of the Indies; and on his return to Europe was employed in the Low Countries. He wrote a Hiſtory of the Diſcovery and Conqueſt of Peru, Antwerp, 8vo. 1555. A French tranſlation was printed at Amſterdam in 1700, 2 vols. 12mo.—Nic. Antonio. Hiſp. Scrip.

ZECHARIAH, one of the minor prophets, was the ſon of Barachiah, and grandſon of Iddo. The place of his birth is uncertain. His ſtyle reſembles that of Jeremiah. He flouriſhed B.C. 520.—Gray.

ZEGEDIN (Stephen), a Lutheran divine, was born in Hungary in 1505. He propagated the proteſtant religion with great zeal in his native country, for which he was perſecuted. He died in 1572. His works are, A Commentary on the Scriptures; A Defence of the Trinity, &c.—Moreri.

ZELOTTI (John Baptiſt), an Italian painter, was born at Verona in 1532, and died in 1592. He was the diſciple of Titian; and diſtinguiſhed for the beauty of his colouring and the elegance of his deſign.—De Piles.

ZENO, founder of the ſect of Stoics, ſo called from his opening a ſchool in the portico of Stoa, at Athens. He was born at Citium, in Cyprus, but being driven by a ſtorm on the coaſt of Attica, he ſettled there, taught philoſophy and was the firſt who brought logic to perfection. He held the principle of fatal neceſſity, and defended the right of ſuicide. Zeno one day beat his ſervant ſeverely for a theft, on which the fellow exclaimed, "It is my fate to be a thief." "Yes, ſirrah," ſays his maſter, "and to be drubbed for it too." Zeno died B.C. 264, aged 94.—Diog. Laërtius.

ZENO, called the Iſaurian, emperor of the Eaſt, married the daughter of Leo I. in 458. His conduct was ſo odious, that in 475 he was driven from his throne by Baſiliſcus, but the year following he recovered it. He died in 491.—Univ. Hiſt.

ZENO (Apoſtolo), the father of the Italian opera, was born at Venice in 1669. He eſtabliſhed the academy of the Animoſi at his native city in 1696, and commenced in 1710 the celebrated periodical work called Il Giornale de Litterati. He afterwards became poet-laureat to the emperor Charles VI. He wrote Obſervations on the Italian Hiſtorians, 2 vols. 4to; and his dramatic works were printed in 1744, in 11 vols. 4to. He died in 1750.—Tiraboſchi.

ZENOBIA, queen of Palmyra, married Odenatus, a Saracen prince, and contributed to the victories he gained over the Perſians, which rendered ſuch eſſential ſervice to the Romans, that ſhe was honoured with the title of Auguſta. After the death of her huſband ſhe conquered Egypt; but the emperor Aurelian marched againſt her, and laid ſiege to Palmyra. Being taken as ſhe attempted to make her eſcape, ſhe was conducted to Rome in triumph, and died near that city.—Univ. Hiſt.

ZEPHANIAH, one of the minor prophets. He lived in the reign of Joſiah, about 624 B.C. He exhorted the Jews to repentance, and predicted the deſtruction of Nineveh.—Gray's Key O. T.

ZERUBBABEL, the ſon of Salathiel, and of the family of the kings of Judah. He gained the eſteem of Cyrus, king of Perſia, who gave him the ſacred veſſels with which he returned to Jeruſalem, where he rebuilt the temple, which was dedicated B.C. 515.—Prideaux's Connexions.

ZEUXIS, of Heraclea, a famous painter. Pliny relates his diſpute with Parrhaſius for the prize of painting, as follows: Zeuxis painted ſome grapes ſo naturally, that the birds uſed to peck at them; and Parrhaſius repreſented a curtain ſo artfully, that Zeuxis ordered it to be drawn aſide, that he might ſee the painting behind it; diſcovering his miſtake, he confeſſed himſelf outdone, ſince he had only impoſed upon birds, whereas Parrhaſius had deceived thoſe who were judges of the art. Zeuxis painted a boy carrying grapes which the birds flew to eat; but the boy was not ſo well executed as the fruit. His greateſt performance was a picture of Helen. He died of laughter on looking at the repreſentation of an old woman, which he had painted B.C. 350.—Pliny.

ZIEGLER (James), a mathematician and divine of Suabia, who died in 1549. The principal of his works are, 1. Notes on particular Paſſages of Scripture, 1518, folio; 2. Deſcription of the Holy Land, 1536, fol.; 3. De Conſtructione Solidæ Spheræ, 4to.—Melch. Adam. Vit. Germ. Theol.

ZIEGLER (Gaſpar), profeſſor of law at Wittemberg, was a native of Leipſic, and died in 1690. His principal works are, De Milite Epiſcopo; De Diaconis et De Diaconiſſis; De Epiſcopis.—Moreri.

ZIETEN (John Joachim Von), a Pruſſian general, was born near Berlin in 1699. He entered early into the army and ſoon diſtinguiſhed himſelf by his courage, although his perſonal figure was diminutive. Having challenged his captain he loſt his commiſſion for ſome time, but at laſt he was reſtored, and he obtained the command of a company of huſſars, which body of troops he rendered extremely formidable by his regulations. He diſtinguiſhed himſelf greatly in the campaign of 1745, but by the intrigues of general Von Winterfeldt he loſt the favour of the king till the commencement of the ſeven years war, when he was appointed lieutenant general. He rendered eminent ſervices at the battle of Prague and in many others; particularly the ſtorming of the heights of Torgau. After the termination of that war he led a retired life, greatly eſteemed by his ſovereign and by the whole nation. He died in 1785.—Life by Mad. Blumenthal.

ZIMMERMANN (Mathias), a proteſtant divine, was born at Epires, in 1625. He became miniſter at Meiſſen, and died in 1689. His works are, 1. Amœnitates Hiſtoriæ Eccleſiaſticæ, 4to.; 2. Florilegium Philologico-Hiſtoricum, 4to.—Ibid.

ZIMMERMANN (John George), a celebrated phyſician was born at Brug, in the canton of Berne, in 1728. He ſtudied at Gottingen under Haller, and afterwards attended the lectures of Gaubius. On his return to his own country he applied principally to literature, but without neglecting his profeſſion. His writings recommended him to the friendſhip of the king of Pruſſia, and he was appointed, by the regency of Hanover, phyſician to his Britannic majeſty. He died in 1795. His works are a poem on the Earthquake at Liſbon, 1755; a Phyſiological Diſſertation on Irritability; an Eſſay on Solitude; this has been tranſlated into French and Engliſh; an Eſſay on National Pride.—Life by Tiſſot.

ZINCK (Chriſtian Frederick), an enamel painter was born at Dreſden about 1684, and came to England in 1706, where he ſtudied under Boil, whom he ſurpaſſed. He painted portraits of many of the royal family, and died in 1767.—Pilkington.

ZINZENDORF (Nicholas Lewes, count), was born of a noble family in Saxony, and rendered himſelf remarkable as the founder, or rather reviver, of the religious ſociety commonly called in this country Moravians, abroad Herrnhuters, and by themſelves the United Brethren. They ſettled firſt in Upper Luſatia in 1722; and becoming conſiderable, formed a village called Herrnhut in 1732. A few years afterwards they came to England, having been perſecuted in their own country; and by means of general Oglethorpe and other diſtinguiſhed perſons, they obtained a ſettlement here under a particular act of parliament, by which they were diſtinguiſhed from other ſects. Their government is epiſcopal, their doctrine ſound, and their manners irreproachable; but what renders them particularly deſerving of reſpect is, the pains which they have ſucceſsfully taken in the propagation of the goſpel in heathen countries. Count Zinzendorf died in 1760, and was ſucceeded in the government of the Brethren by count Dohna. —Spangenberg's Hiſt. of the Unitas Fratrum.

ZISCA, or Ziſka (John), a gentleman of Bohemia, who became the leader of the Huſſites, and rendered himſelf very formidable by ſeveral victories. He loſt an eye in one action, and the other at the ſiege of Rabi, but he ſtill continued to oppoſe the emperor Sigiſmund, who ſent ambaſſadors to offer him the government of Bohemia. Amidſt the negotiation Ziſca died of the plague in 1424. The ſtory of his ordering his ſkin to be made into a drum to animate his followers, is a fable.—Moreri.

ZOE, the fourth wife of the emperor Leo VI. and mother of Conſtantine Porphyrogenitus, during whoſe minority ſhe governed the empire with diſcretion, quelling the revolt of Conſtantine Ducas, obliging the Bulgarians to return to their own country, and making a peace with the Saracens. Conſtantine, when he came of age, ſent her into exile, where ſhe died. There was another of this name, who was daughter of Conſtantine XI. and wife of Argyrus, whom ſhe murdered, and married Michael the Paphlagonian. She died in 1050.—Univ. Hiſt.

ZOILUS, a rhetorician of Thrace, who flouriſhed about 270 years B.C. He criticized the Iliad with ſuch virulence as to be called Homeromaſtix, and the dog; and his name has become ſo familiar as to be applied to all ſnarling critics.—Voſſius.

ZOLLIKOFER (George Joachim), a proteſtant divine, was born in Swiſſerland in 1730, and educated at Bremen and Utrecht. After officiating in the Pays de Vaud, he obtained a ſettlement at Monſtein in the Griſons, from whence he removed to Iſenburg and in 1758 to Leipſic. He died in 1788. He wrote a book of Devotions, and two volumes of Sermons, both tranſlated into Engliſh.—Preface to his Sermons.

ZONARAS (John), a Greek hiſtorian, was employed in ſtate affairs at the court of Conſtantinople, but afterwards he turned monk. He compiled a Chronicle or Annals from the Creation to A.D. 1118. He was alſo the author of Commentaries on the Apoſtolic Canons.—Moreri.

ZONCA (Victor), an able mathematician of Italy in the 17th century, who publiſhed a collection of curious inventions in mechanics, entitled Novo Teatro di Machini ed Edifici, Padua, 1621, folio.—Ibid.

ZOPPO (Mark), an hiſtorical and portrait painter, was born at Bologna in 1451. He was the diſciple of Andrew Mantegna, whoſe ſtyle he imitated. He died in 1517. —De Piles.

ZOPYRUS, one of the courtiers of Darius, the ſon of Hyſtaſpes. He cut off his noſe and ears at the ſiege of Babylon, and went over to the Babylonians, pretending that Darius had exerciſed this cruelty upon him. In hopes he would be ſtimulated by revenge, they gave him the command of their army, which he treacherouſly betrayed to Darius. —Herodotus.

ZOROASTER, or Zerduſht, a philoſopher of antiquity, is ſuppoſed to have lived in the reign of Darius Hyſtaſpes. He has been by ſome called the founder, and by others the reformer, of the Magian religion. Others conſider him a Jew, or think that he received his education in Judea. He taught that nothing could render men unworthy of the divine favour but vice. Of all virtues, he eſteemed what the Greeks called philanthropy, for which reaſon he exhorted his followers to acts of beneficence. He gave his diſciples a form of devotion, which they affirmed was brought from heaven. The Magi, or prieſts, were of three ranks, over whom was an archimagus, which office he aſſumed himſelf. He loſt his life at Balck, when it was taken.—Bayle.

ZOSIMUS, an ancient hiſtorian in the beginning of the fifth century. He wrote the Hiſtory of the Emperors from Auguſtus to his own time, part of which is extant, and was printed at Oxford, in 1679, 8vo. He declaims with great aſperity againſt the Chriſtians.—Ibid.

ZOUCH (Richard), a civilian, was born at Anſley in Wiltſhire, and educated at Wincheſter ſchool; from whence he removed to New-college, Oxford, and afterwards became an advocate in Doctors' Commons. He was alſo chancellor of the dioceſe of Oxford, principal of Alban-hall, and judge of the high court of admiralty. He died in 1660. He wrote ſome books on juriſprudence in Latin; and Caſes and Queſtions Reſolved in the Civil Law, 8vo. 1652. But his princial work is a Vindication of the Juriſdiction f the Admiralty of England, againſt Sir Edward Coke, 8vo.—Wood.

Zoust (Gerard), a German painter, who was celebrated for his portraits of men, in which he had more ſucceſs than in painting ladies. He lived in London, where he had Riley for a pupil. He died in 1681.—Vertue. Granger.

Zucchero (Taddeo), a painter, was born in the duchy of Urbino, in 1529. He ſtudied the works of Raphael, and by his acquaintance with anatomy excelled in painting human figures. He died in 1566. His brother Frederic was a good artiſt, but was obliged to quit Rome for painting a picture in which ſeveral officers of the papal court were repreſented with aſſes' ears. He afterwards went to Spain, France, and England, and was employed by perſons of the higheſt rank. The pope recalled him, erected an academy for him at Rome, and gave him the title of prince. He died in 1609.

Zuinglius (Ulric), an eminent reformer, was born at Wildhauſen, in 1487. While he officiated as preacher at Zurich, he declaimed againſt the church of Rome, which produced a reformation in Switzerland. He publiſhed a book on the Euchariſt, in which he denied the Lutheran doctrine. This occaſioned a great controverſy, and his followers were called Zuinglians. He afterwards took up arms againſt the catholics, and died in the field of battle in 1531. His works are extant in 4 vols. folio.—Bayle.

Zumbo (Gaſton John), a ſculptor, was born at Syracuſe in 1656. He reſided at Florence, where he was employed by the grand duke. He afterwards removed to Paris, and died there in 1701.—Moreri.

Zwinger (Theodore), a learned phyſician, was born at Baſil in Switzerland. He compiled a great work, called The Theatre of Human Life, 8 vols, folio. He died in 1588, aged, 54.—Ibid.

Zwinger (Theodore), a deſcendant of the preceding, and profeſſor of eloquence, philoſophy, and medicine, at Baſil, died in 1724, after having publiſhed, 1. A Botanical Theatre, 1690, folio; 2. Faſciculus Diſſertationum, 4to.; 3. Diſſertatio de acquirenda vitæ longevitate, &c.—Ibid.

Zypæus, or Vanden Zyp (Francis), a learned writer, was born at Malanes in 1580. The biſhop of Antwerp appointed him canon and archdeacon of his church. He died in 1650, aged 75. He wrote, 1. Analytica enarratio juris Pontificii novi. 2. Conſultationes Canonicæ. 3. Notitiæ Juris Belgici. 4. De Juriſdictione Eccleſiaſtica & Civili.—Ibid.

 Notwithſtanding the immenſe labour which has been employed to give to the third Edition of this Dictionary every poſſible degree of completeneſs and accuracy, the learned Reader may perhaps diſcover trivial omiſſions and imperfections, which, in printing twelve thouſand Articles, and forty thouſand Dates, it was impoſſible wholly to avoid. Notices of ſuch, hints for any kind of improvement, and communications of new and authentic articles, will be thankfully received, if addreſſed, poſt-paid, to Mr. Phillips, No. 6, Bridge-ſtreet, Blackfriars.

BOOKS recently published by R. PHILLIPS, No. 6, Bridge-street, Blackfriars.

A New Cyclopædia, completed in Twelve Months.

On January the 1st, 1807, was published, and on the first Day of every Twelve following Months will continue to be published,

A Part, in Quarto, price Nine Shillings each, of

A NEW AND COMPENDIOUS

DICTIONARY OF ARTS AND SCIENCES,

To be completed within the year, by the publication of one Part on the first day of every Month; the whole making Twelve Parts, at Nine Shillings each, or Two large and elegant quarto Volumes, with One Hundred and Twenty superior Engravings by Mr. Heath and Mr. Porter.

By G. GREGORY, D D.

Doctor in Philosophy and the Arts, and Honorary Member of the Imperial University of Wilna; Member of the Manchester and Newcastle Literary and Philosophical Societies; Honorary Member of the Board of Agriculture; Domestic Chaplain to the Lord Bishop of Llandaff; Author of Essays Historical and Moral; the Economy of Nature, &c

A DICTIONARY of ARTS and SCIENCES in a compendious form, sufficiently copious without being prolix, accurate but not diffuse, divested of all superfluous matter, compressing rather than copying what has been done by others, and exhibiting a clear but concise view of the present state of the various branches of human knowledge, has long been a desirable object to the English reader.

The following are the immediate Advantages which are promised to the Purchasers of this new Dictionary

First, It will exhibit a compendium of all human knowledge, the more luminous because cleared of all extraneous matter; rather practical than speculative; and in which particular attention will be paid to the most useful branches.

Second, It will be of a convenient and comparatively portable size, calculated to lie on the table of every studious person, as a book of constant reference.

Third, It will be printed so as to correspond with the quarto editions of Dr. Johnson's Dictionary; and the possessors of both works will thus have, in four quarto volumes, and at a moderate expence, all the literary aid which the English student or reader can possibly require.

THE HISTORY of GREAT BRITAIN from the REVOLUTION of 1688, (when Hume's History terminates,) to the TREATY of AMIENS in 1802. By WILLIAM BELSHAM, Esq. A new edition, being THE FOURTH, including recent corrections and considerable additions by the author; in twelve uniform volumes, octavo, price 5l. 5s. in boards.

N. B. This is the ONLY HISTORY of the same period, and the only uniform work which continues the history of Mr. Hume to the present time, thereby completing a series of our national history, with spirit, fidelity, and ability, from the aboriginal Britons to the year 1802.

THE HISTORY of GEORGE the THIRD may be had separately, in eight volumes, price 3l. 12s. in boards, or any two volumes may be had separately, price 9s. each in boards.

This work enables those persons who are possessed of Smollet's History to the death of George II. or of Smollet and Hume, to complete a series of English History down to the peace of Amiens in 1802.

The HISTORY of ENGLAND, from the Invasion of Julius Cæsar to the Revolution, by DAVID HUME, Esq. in eight volumes, octavo, with portraits, price 2l 16s. in boards.

Hume and Belsham may be had complete in Twenty uniform Volumes, bound, or in boards of all Booksellers.

The HISTORY of the Decline and Fall of the ROMAN EMPIRE, by EDWARD GIBBON, Esq. in twelve volumes, octavo, price 4l. 4s. in boards.

THE HISTORY of the LATE WAR, from its commencement in 1792, until the definitive treaty of peace between Great Britain and France in 1802. To which are annexed, a review of the causes, and early progress of the French revolution, together with copious indexes. By ALEXANDER STEPHENS, of the honourable society of the Middle Temple, Esq. In two very large volumes, medium 4to. illustrated with maps, price 3l. 13s. 6d. in boards.

AN UNIVERSAL HISTORY, ANCIENT and MODERN, comprehending a correct and complete view of the transactions of every Nation, Kingdom, and Empire on the globe, from the earliest accounts of time, to the general peace of 1802. In twenty five elegant volumes, price 3s. 6d. each in boards, upon common paper, and 5s. in boards, upon fine paper. By WILLIAM MAVOR, LL. D. vicar of Hurley in Berkshire, chaplain to the Earl of Moira, author of the British Nepos, &c. &c. The two editions of this valuable work may be had done up in three kinds of binding, at the following prices:

Mo.ra,

	£	s	d
Common paper, in boards	4	13	6
Ditto ditto half-bound	5	0	0
Ditto ditto calf gilt	5	15	6
Fine and large paper, in boards	6	5	0
Ditto ditto half-bound	6	16	6
Ditto ditto calf-gilt	7	10	0

Nine volumes of this work are occupied with Ancient and Sixteen with Modern History; and these principal parts or any particular history, may be had separately.

 The English language has hitherto been without any popular view of Universal History. It will be immediately confessed by every competent judge, that Bossuet is too short and unsatisfactory; that Voltaire, whatever may be his merits in other respects, is too gay, unelaborate, and desultory; and that the great English Universal History is rather to be consulted like a Dictionary than to be perused as an Analysis of the subject to which it relates. The author of the present work has been solicitous to avoid the extremes of prolixity and brevity, and to be at once clear, distinct, and comprehensive; he hopes, therefore, that his work will prove a desirable acquisition to young persons, to public schools, to ladies, to circulating libraries, to all private collections, and in general, to all persons to whom the great Universal History, in sixty-six volumes, is either too voluminous, or too expensive.

THE HISTORY of MODERN EUROPE, or a complete HISTORY of the States and Kingdoms of EUROPE, from the time of Charlemagne; in a series of letters to a young nobleman. By WILLIAM RUSSEL, M. D. In five large volumes, 8vo. 2l. 5s. boards.

THE HISTORY of ENGLAND, from the earliest records to the peace of 1802, for the use of schools, embellished with thirty copper-plates, representing the most remarkable events of English History. By WILLIAM MAVOR, LL. D. In two volumes, royal 18mo. 12s. bound.

A small edition, in two volumes, price 10s. bound.

THE HISTORY of ENGLAND, in a series of letters from a nobleman to his son (commonly ascribed to the late Lord LITTLETON). In two vols. 8s. in sheep.

THE HISTORY of ENGLAND to the peace of Amiens, 1802, with views of the state of society and manners in each age, written in a series of letters, addressed to a young lady at school. By CHARLOTTE SMITH. In three volumes, 8vo. price 15s. bound and lettered.

DR GOLDSMITH's HISTORY of ENGLAND abridged for the use of schools, with several copper plates, price 3s. 6d. bound.

THE HISTORY of ROME, from the foundation of the city of Rome, till the termination of the Eastern Empire. By WILLIAM MAVOR, LL. D. In three volumes, royal 18mo. price 15s bound, or upon common paper, price 12s. bound.

THE HISTORY of Greece, from the earliest periods till its reduction into a Roman province. By the SAME AUTHOR. In two volumes, royal 18mo. with engravings, and a correct map, price 10s. bound, or 8s. upon common paper.

ANCIENT HISTORY for the use of schools, by the REV. J. ROBINSON, Author of Grecian Antiquities, &c. &c. price 10s. bound.

MODERN HISTORY, for the use of schools, by the same Author, price 5s.

The GRAMMAR of HISTORY, by means of which History may, for the first time, be taught in Schools; also by Mr. Robinson, price 3s. bound.

THE LIFE of GENERAL WASHINGTON, Commander in Chief of the American forces during the war which established the independence of his country, and first president of the United States; compiled under the inspection of his nephew, the HON. BUSHROD WASHINGTON, from original papers bequeathed to him by his deceased relative. By JOHN MARSHALL, Chief Justice of the United States, &c. &c. To which is prefixed AN INTRODUCTION, containing a compendious view of the colonies planted by the English on the continent of North America. Vols. I. II. III. IV. and V. (which completes the work) elegantly printed in 4to. price 1l. 11s. 6d. each in boards.

Another edition printed in demy octavo, price 10s. 6d. each volume in boards.

FEMALE BIOGRAPHY; or, MEMOIRS of Remarkable and Illustrious WOMEN of all ages and countries, impartially and faithfully compiled from the most authentic sources, and arranged alphabetically. In six handsome volumes, 12mo. price 1l. 11s. 6d. in boards.

THE LIFE and AGE of GEOFFREY CHAUCER, the father of English poetry; including memoirs of his near friend and kinsman, JOHN of GAUNT, duke of Lancaster; and views of the state of society, and the arts, from the dawn of literature in modern Europe to the end of the fourteenth century. By WILLIAM GODWIN, author of Political Justice:

Juſtice, Caleb Williams, &c. In two elegant volumes, 4to. illuſtrated with portraits, price 3l. 13s. 6d. in boards.

A ſecond edition of the ſame work, in four volumes, octavo, 1l. 16s. in boards.

MEMOIRS of a TRAVELLER, written by Himſelf, (the REV. L. DUTENS) now in retirement, containing Hiſtorical, Political, and Literary Anecdotes of many of the principal Perſonages of the preſent Age, 5 vols. 1l. 5s.

THE LIFE of GENERAL DE ZIETEN, colonel of the royal Pruſſian regiment of huſſar life-guards. By Madame DE BLUMENTHAL, two vols. 8vo. 14s. boards.

MEMOIRS of the late MRS. ROBINSON, written by HERSELF. To which are ſubjoined ſeveral of her original Poems. A new edition, in two elegant volumes, foolſcap 8vo. half-a-guinea in boards.

MEMOIRS of the LIFE of the late LEE LEWES, the comedian, written by himſelf, and containing anecdotes of the Engliſh, Scottiſh and Iriſh Stages during a period of forty years. Publiſhed by his ſon, JOHN LEE LEWES, ESQ. in four volumes, ſmall 8vo. price 16s. in boards.

MEMOIRS of the LIFE of the late SAMUEL FOOTE, commonly called the Engliſh Ariſtophanes, with anecdotes of his contemporaries and a collection of his bons mots, CHIEFLY ORIGINAL. By WILLIAM COOKE, ESQ. in three elegant volumes, ſmall 8vo. price 13s. 6d. boards.

A BIOGRAPHICAL INDEX to the PRESENT HOUSE of COMMONS, containing correct notices of the lives, the family and party connections, parliamentary conduct, and other particulars, relative to all the members of the Commons houſe of parliament; intended as a companion to Debrett's and Kearſley's Peerage. Cloſely printed in one large volume, royal 18mo. with plates, price 9s. 6d. in boards, or 10s. 6d. bound in red, and lettered.

PUBLIC CHARACTERS of 1806—7, conſiſting of BIOGRAPHICAL MEMOIRS of eminent LIVING PERSONS, faithfully and impartially compiled from authentic Sources. In one large volume, 8vo. price half-a-guinea, boards.

 Alſo new editions of the EIGHT preceding volumes, each at the ſame price.

WALPOLIANA; conſiſting of original bon mots, apophthegms, obſervations on life and literature, with extracts from unpubliſhed letters of the late HORACE WALPOLE, EARL of ORFORD. In two elegant volumes, foolſcap 8vo. embelliſhed with two vignette titles, and with fac ſimilies of the hand-writing of Mr. GRAY, and Mr. WALPOLE, price 9s. in boards.

ADDISONIANA; a work relating to the life, times, and contemporaries of MR. ADDISON, on the ſame plan as the Walpoliana; embelliſhed with portraits, &c. and with ſeven letters of Mr. ADDISON never before publiſhed, exactly engraved from the originals. In two elegant volumes, price 10s. 6d. in boards.

SWIFTIANA; relating to DEAN SWIFT, on the plan of the two preceding, with portraits and with fac ſimilies of Swift, Bolingbroke, Voltaire, and others of his contemporaries. In two elegant volumes, 10s. 6d. boards.

BROOKIANA; conſiſting of original anecdotes, papers, and obſervations of HENRY BROKE, ESQ. the celebrated author of the Fool of Quality, Guſtavus Vaſa, &c. &c. compiled by CHARLES WILSON, in two volumes, 8vo. 10s. 6d. boards.

N. B. The editors conſider it as a duty which they owe to themſelves to ſtate, that theſe works do not conſiſt of mere ſelections, or of, "the beauties" of their reſpective authors, but are an attempt towards the production of a limited ſeries of genuine Engliſh anas, which they hope will excite as lively and permanent an intereſt among the lovers of Engliſh literature, as works on the ſame plan have long excited in the literature of France.

THE SPIRIT of the FRENCH ANAS, or Selections from the beſt of the French Anas, interſperſed with biographical ſketches, and forming one of the moſt intereſting and entertaining books in our language. In three elegant volumes, ſmall 8vo. with portraits, price 15s. boards.

THE LETTERS and other WORKS of the RT. HON. LADY MARY WORTLEY MONTAGU, now firſt publiſhed, by permiſſion, from the original manuſcripts, in the poſſeſſion of the Moſt Noble the Marquis of BUTE; none of which had hitherto been printed, excepting an imperfect copy of the letters from Conſtantinople. To the whole are prefix'd authentic Memoirs of her Life. By the REV. JAMES DALLAWAY, M. B. interſperſed with letters hitherto unpubliſhed, from Pope, Young, Fielding, and other diſtinguiſhed characters. The FIFTH EDITION, in five volumes, foolſcap 8vo. price 1l. 5s. in boards, decorated with a portrait, by Caroline Watſon, and with fac ſimilies.

THE CORRESPONDENCE between FRANCES, Counteſs of HARTFORD, (late Ducheſs of SOMERSET) and HENRIETTA LOUISA, Counteſs of POMFRET, between the years 1738 and 1742, during the reſidence of the latter lady abroad; interſperſed with original poetry, and anecdotes of the Engliſh, French, and other courts, and of diſtinguiſhed perſons then living; with ſome account of the writers. By the REV. W. BINGLEY. A SECOND EDITION, in three elegant volumes, 1l. 1s. with a portrait, by Caroline Watſon.

J. ADLARD, Printer, Duke-ſtreet, Smithfield.

