THE favourable reception with which this Book was honoured by the Public, has encouraged the Editor to present a second edition, more correctly arranged, and very considerably enlarged. Some words and explanations in the former edition having been pointed out as rather indecent or indelicate, though to be found in Le Roux, and other Glossaries of the like kind, these have been either omitted, softened, or their explanations taken from books long sanctioned with general approbation, and admitted into the seminaries for the education of youth—such as Bailey's, Miege's, or Philips's Dictionaries; so that it is hoped this work will now be found as little offensive to delicacy as the nature of it would admit.

A list is here added of such books as have been consulted for the additions.

P R E F A C E

TO THE

F I R S T E D I T I O N .

THE great approbation with which so polite a nation as France has received the Satirical and Burlesque Dictionary of Monsieur Le Roux, testified by the several editions it has gone through, will, it is hoped, apologize for an attempt to compile an English Dictionary on a similar plan; our language being at least as copious as the French, and as capable of the witty equivoque: besides which, the freedom of thought and speech arising from, and privileged by, our constitution, gives a force and poignancy to the expressions of our common people, not to be found under arbitrary governments, where the ebullitions of vulgar wit are checked by the fear of the bastinado, or of a lodging during pleasure in some gaol or castle.

The many vulgar allusions and cant expressions that so frequently occur in our common mon conversation and periodical publications, make a work of this kind extremely useful, if not absolutely necessary, not only to foreigners, but even to natives resident at a distance from the Metropolis, or who do not mix in the busy world: without some such help, they might hunt through all the ordinary Dictionaries, from Alpha to Omega, in search of the words, “black legs, lame duck, a plumb, malingering, nip cheese, darbies, and the new drop,” although these are all terms of well-known import at Newmarket, Exchange-alley, the City, the Parade, Wapping, and Newgate.

The fashionable words, or favourite expressions of the day, also find their way into our political and theatrical compositions: these, as they generally originate from some trifling event, or temporary circumstance, on falling into disuse, or being superseded by new ones, vanish without leaving a trace behind. Such were the late fashionable words, a bore and a twaddle, among the great vulgar; maccaroni and the barber, among the small: these, too, are here carefully registered.

The Vulgar Tongue consists of two parts: the first is the Cant Language, called sometimes Pedlars French, or St. Giles's Greek; the second, those burlesque phrases, quaint allusions, and nick-names for persons, things, and places, which, from long uninterrupted usage, are made classical by prescription.

Respecting the first, that is, the canting language, take the account given of its origin, and the catastrophe of its institutor, from Mr. Harrison's Description of England, prefixed to Hollingshead's Chronicle; where, treating of beggars, gypsies, &c. he says,

“ It is not yet fifty years sith this trade be“ gan: but now it hath prospered sithens “ that time, it is easy to judge; for they are “ now supposed, of one sexe and another,
 “ to amount unto above ten thousand per“ sons, as I have harde reported. More“ over, in counterfeiting the Egyptian roges,
 “ they have devised a language among them“ selves, which they name Canting, but “ others Pedlars French, a speache compact “ thirty yeares since of English, and a great “ number of odde wordes of their own de“ vising, without all order or reason; and “ yet such it is, as none but themselves are “ able

“ able to understand. The first deviser “ thereof was hanged by the neck, as a just “ reward, no doubt, for his defartes, and a “ common end to all of that profession.

“ A gentleman (Mr. Thomas Harman)
 “ also of late hath taken great paines to “ search out the secreet practizes of this un-“ gracious rabble; and, among other things,
 “ he setteth down and describeth twenty-two “ sorts of them, whose names it shall not “ be amisse to remember, whereby each one “ may gather what wicked people they are,
 “ and what villany remaineth in them.”

For this list see the word CREW.—This was the origin of the cant language; its terms have been collected from the following Treatises:

The Bellman of London, bringing to light the most notorious villanies that are now practised in the kingdom. Profitable for gentlemen, lawyers, merchants, citizens, farmers, masters of households, and all sorts of servants, to marke, and delightfull for men to reade.—Lege, Perlege, Relege.—1688.

Thieves falling out, true men come by their goods.—1615.

English Villanies, seven severall times prest to death by the printers; but (still reviving againe) are now the eighth time (as the first) discovered by lanthorne and candle-light: and the helpe of a new cryer, called O-per-se O; whose loud voyce proclaimes, to all that will heare him, another conspiracy of abuses lately plotting together, to hurt the peace of the kingdom; which the bell-man (because he ther went stumbling i'th' dark) could never see till now; and because a company of rogues, cunning canting gypsies, and all the scumme of our nation, fight under their tattered colours. At the end is a canting dictionary to teach their language, with canting songs. A booke to make gentlemen merry, citizens warie, countrymen carefull; fit for justices to reade over, because it is a pilot by whom they may make strange discoveries.—London, 1638.

Bailey's, and the new Canting Dictionary, have also been consulted, with the History of Bamfield More Carew, the Sessions Papers, and other modern authorities. As many many of these terms are still professionally used by our present race of free-booters of different denominations, who seem to have established a systematical manner of carrying on their business, a knowledge of them may therefore be useful to gentlemen in the commission of the peace.

The second part, or burlesque terms, have been drawn from the most classical authorities; such as soldiers on the long march, seamen at the capstern, ladies disposing of their fish, and the colloquies of a Gravesend boat.

Many heroic sentences, expressing and inculcating a contempt of death, have been caught from the mouths of the applauding populace, attending those triumphant processions up Holborn-hill, with which many an unfortunate hero till lately finished his course: and various choice flowers have been collected at executions, as well those authorized by the sentence of the law, and performed under the direction of the sheriff, as those inflicted under the authority and inspection of that impartial and summary tribunal, called the Mob, upon the pick-pockets, pockets, informers, or other unpopular criminals.

In the course of this work many ludicrous games and customs are explained, which are not to be met with in any other book: the succession of the finishers of the law, the abolition of the triumph or ovation of Holborn Hill, with the introduction of the present mode of execution at Newgate, are chronologically ascertained; points of great importance to both the present and future compilers of the Tyburn Chronicle.

To prevent any charge of immorality being brought against this work, the Editor begs leave to observe, that when an indelicate or immodest word has obtruded itself for explanation, he has endeavoured to get rid of it in the most decent manner possible; and none have been admitted but such as either could not be left out without rendering the work incomplete, or in some measure compensate by their wit for the trespass committed on decorum. Indeed, respecting this matter, he can with great truth make the same defence that Falstaff ludicrously urges in behalf of one engaged in rebellion, viz. that he did not seek them, but that, like rebellion in the case instanced, they lay in his way, and he found them.

The Editor likewise begs leave to add, that if he has had the misfortune to run foul of the dignity of any body of men, profession, or trade, it is totally contrary to his intention; and he hopes the interpretations given to any particular terms that may seem to bear hard upon them, will not be considered as his sentiments, but as the sentiments of the persons by whom such terms were first invented, or those by whom they are used,

The first part of the document is a letter from the Secretary of the Board of Education to the Board of Trustees of the University of the State of New York. The letter is dated the 10th day of January, 1884. The Secretary states that he has the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 27th of December last, in relation to the proposed changes in the curriculum of the State Normal School at Albany. He expresses his regret that the Board of Education is unable to accede to your request at this time, and explains the reasons therefor. He states that the Board of Education is of the opinion that the proposed changes are not in accordance with the policy of the State Board of Education, and that they would be a departure from the established course of study. He also states that the Board of Education is of the opinion that the proposed changes would be a departure from the policy of the State Board of Education, and that they would be a departure from the established course of study. He also states that the Board of Education is of the opinion that the proposed changes would be a departure from the policy of the State Board of Education, and that they would be a departure from the established course of study.

in the litter.—To follow like a tantony pig; i. e. St. Anthony's pig; to follow close at one's heels. St. Anthony the hermit was a swine herd, and is always represented with a swine's bell and a pig. Some derive this saying from a privilege enjoyed by the friars of certain convents in England and France (sons of St. Anthony) whose swine were permitted to feed in the streets. These swine would follow any one having greens or other provisions, till they obtained some of them.

TO KNOCK ANTHONY. Said of an inkneed person, or one whose knees knock together; to cuff Jonas. See JONAS.

APE LEADER. An old maid: their punishment after death, for neglecting to increase and multiply, will be, it is said, leading apes in hell.

APOSTLES. To manœuvre the apostles; i. e. rob Peter to pay Paul; that is, to borrow money of one man to pay another.

APOTHECARY. To talk like an apothecary; to talk nonsense: from the assumed gravity and affectation of knowledge generally put on by the gentlemen of that profession, who are commonly but superficial in their learning.

APOTHECARY'S BILL. A long bill.

APOTHECARY'S OR LAW LATIN. Barbarous Latin, vulgarly called Dog Latin, in Ireland Bog Latin.

APPLE CART. Down with his apple-cart; knock or throw him down.

APPLE DUMPLIN SHOP. A woman's bosom.

APPLE-PYE BED. A bed made apple-pye fashion, like what is called a turnover apple-pye, where the sheets are so doubled as to prevent any one from getting at his length between them: a common trick played by frolicsome country lasses on their sweethearts, male relations, or visitors.

APRIL FOOL. Any one imposed on, or sent on a bootless errand, on the first of April; on which day it is the custom among the lower people, children, and servants, by dropping empty papers carefully doubled up, sending persons on absurd messages, and such like contrivances, to impose on every one they can, and then to salute them with the title of April Fool.

APRON STRING HOLD. An estate held by a man during his wife's life.

A R T

- ARCH DUKE. A comical or eccentric fellow.
- ARCH ROGUE, or DIMBER DAMBER UPRIGHT MAN.
The chief of a gang of thieves or gypsies.
- ARCH DELL, or ARCH DOXY, signifies the same in rank among the female canters or gypsies.
- ARD. Hot. Cant.
- ARISTIPPUS. A diet drink, or decoction of sarsaparilla, china, &c. sold at certain coffee-houses, and drank as tea.
- ARMOUR. In his armour, pot valiant; to fight in armour, to make use of Mrs. Philips's ware. See C--D--M.
- ARK. A boat or wherry. Let us take an Ark and winns; let us take a sculler. Cant.
- ARK RUFFIANS. Rogues who, in conjunction with watermen, robbed, and sometimes murdered, on the water, by picking a quarrel with the passengers in a boat, boarding it, plundering, stripping, and throwing them overboard, &c. A species of badgers. Cant.
- ARRAH NOW. An unmeaning expletive, frequently used by the vulgar Irish.
- ARS MUSICA. A bum-fiddle.
- ARSE. To hang an arse; to hang back, to be afraid to advance. He would lend his a--e, and sh-te through his ribs; a saying of any one who lends his money inconsiderately. He would lose his a--e if it was loose; said of a careless person. A--e about; turn round.
- ARSY VARSEY. To fall arsy varsey, i. e. head over heels.
- ARTHUR; KING ARTHUR. A game used at sea, when near the line, or in a hot latitude. It is performed thus: a man who is to represent king Arthur, ridiculously dressed, having a large wig made out of oakum, or some old swabs, is seated on the side, or over a large vessel of water. Every person in his turn is to be ceremoniously introduced to him, and to pour a bucket of water over him, crying, Hail, king Arthur! If during this ceremony the person introduced laughs or smiles (to which his majesty endeavours to excite him, by all sorts of ridiculous gesticulations), he changes place with, and then becomes,

- becomes King Arthur, till relieved by some Leather-sock, who has as little command over his soul, as he himself.

INVERCAULD WOOD. A Scotch word, which signifies to be left out or to be in the woods.

IRISH AND ENGLISH. The first of the two was said by a writer, John Keble, in the year 1800, in the course of a Poem, in the following manner.

IRISH AND ENGLISH. He was in the month-day last, that is, dark night.

IRISH AND ENGLISH. A mixture of wine and water, into which is put a small quantity of salt. Also one of the largest of Mr. Puffinber's, and so contains the others.

IRISH AND ENGLISH. A name among Irish people, for bearing the name of a man's name, after he has lost it by age, by illness, or by other means, is made to appear younger than he is. It is a common saying of this kind in the north of Ireland, that the Irish have for their names, when a man's name is changed, all the individuals of that name, which he has lost, even learning what name he has, and the name he has lost, which is a name he has lost.

IRISH AND ENGLISH. A name also the English have for man's name. A name also the English have for man's name, which is a name he has lost.

IRISH AND ENGLISH. A name also the English have for man's name, which is a name he has lost.

The first part of the paper is devoted to a general introduction of the subject. It is shown that the theory of the present paper is a special case of a more general theory. The theory is then developed in a series of sections. The first section is devoted to the definition of the terms used in the paper. The second section is devoted to the derivation of the equations of motion. The third section is devoted to the derivation of the equations of equilibrium.
 The fourth section is devoted to the derivation of the equations of compatibility. The fifth section is devoted to the derivation of the equations of boundary conditions. The sixth section is devoted to the derivation of the equations of initial conditions. The seventh section is devoted to the derivation of the equations of continuity. The eighth section is devoted to the derivation of the equations of conservation. The ninth section is devoted to the derivation of the equations of conservation of energy. The tenth section is devoted to the derivation of the equations of conservation of momentum. The eleventh section is devoted to the derivation of the equations of conservation of angular momentum.
 The twelfth section is devoted to the
 derivation of the equations of conservation of mass. The thirteenth section is devoted to the derivation of the equations of conservation of charge. The fourteenth section is devoted to the derivation of the equations of conservation of baryon number.
 The fifteenth section is devoted to the
 derivation of the equations of conservation of lepton number. The sixteenth section is devoted to the derivation of the equations of conservation of flavor. The seventeenth section is devoted to the derivation of the equations of conservation of color. The eighteenth section is devoted to the
 derivation of the equations of conservation of spin. The nineteenth section is devoted to the derivation of the equations of conservation of parity. The twentieth section is devoted to the derivation of the equations of conservation of charge parity.
 The twenty-first section is devoted to the
 derivation of the equations of conservation of time reversal. The twenty-second section is devoted to the derivation of the equations of conservation of CPT. The twenty-third section is devoted to the
 derivation of the equations of conservation of CP. The twenty-fourth section is devoted to the derivation of the equations of conservation of P. The twenty-fifth section is devoted to the derivation of the equations of conservation of C. The twenty-sixth section is devoted to the
 derivation of the equations of conservation of T. The twenty-seventh section is devoted to the derivation of the equations of conservation of CP. The twenty-eighth section is devoted to the derivation of the equations of conservation of CPT. The twenty-ninth section is devoted to the
 derivation of the equations of conservation of CP. The thirtieth section is devoted to the derivation of the equations of conservation of CPT.

A by-stander telling him that noise was called cocking, the next morning, when the cock crowed, the citizen, as if he had not forgot what was told him, cries out, Do you hear how the cock neighs? The king of the Cockney is mentioned among the regulations for the sports and shows formerly held in the Middle Temple on Chibricmas Day, where he had his officers, a marshall, constable, butcher, &c. See Dugdale's Origines Juridicæ, p. 247.—Ray says, the interpretation of the word Cockney, is, a young person raised or reared, made wroton; or a wren's cock, delicately bred and brought up, so as, when arrived at man's estate, to be unable to bear the least hardship. Whatever may be the origin of this appellation, we learn from the following verses, attributed to Hugh Bigot, Earl of Norfolk, that it was in use in the time of King Henry II.

Was I in my youth at Bury,

And by the river Wensley,

It were not hard for the king's son of Cockney

To be the king of London.

Can. A Spanish name.

Can. of Canons. A punishment used by the seamen for petty offences, or irregularities, among themselves; if a man be offending the offender on the forenoon with a walking stick, or pipe staff; the number usually inflicted is 4 dozen. At the first stroke the delinquent repeats the word march, on which all persons present are to take off their hats, on pain of like punishment: the last stroke is always given as loud as possible, and is called the parry, which, except soldiers, where that punishment is sometimes awarded, water and the parry are not included in the stroke. The word parry and above, or, in the vulgar phrase, parry given for making. This piece of discipline is still retained in Ireland, by the school boys, on serious occasions, and the Rector without taking off their hats; it is there called knock butty.

Canoe House. A crock butler.

Canoe. Canoe, forward. A cockpit Canoe; a forward cockpit.

Canoe. To cry cockles, to be hanged; perhaps from the Canoe made while sleeping. Canoe.—This will rejoice the the cockles of one's heart; a saying in praise of wine, ale, or spirituous liquor.

COCK PIMP. The supposed husband of a bawd.

COCK ROBIN. A soft easy fellow.

COCK-SURE. Certain: a metaphor borrowed from the cock of a firelock, as being much more certain to fire than the match.

COCK'S TOOTH. I live at the sign of the cock's tooth and head-ach; an answer to an impertinent person, who asks where one lives.

COCK YOUR EYE. Shut one eye: thus translated into apothecaries Latin—Gallus tuus ego.

COCKER. One fond of the diversion of cock-fighting.

COCKNEY. A nick name given to the citizens of London, or persons born within the sound of Bow bell, derived from the following story: A citizen of London being in the country, and hearing a horse neigh, exclaimed, Lord! how that horse laughs! A by-stander telling him that noise was called neighing, the next morning, when the cock crowed, the citizen, to shew he had not forgot what was told him, cried out, Do you hear how the cock neighs? The king of the Cockneys is mentioned among the regulations for the sports and shows formerly held in the Middle Temple on Childermas Day, where he had his officers, a marshall, constable, butler, &c. See Dugdale's Origines Juridicales, p. 247.—Ray says, the interpretation of the word Cockney, is, a young person coaxed or coquered, made wanton; or a nestle cock, delicately bred and brought up, so as, when arrived at man's estate, to be unable to bear the least hardship. Whatever may be the origin of this appellation, we learn from the following verses, attributed to Hugh Bigot, Earl of Norfolk, that it was in use in the time of king Henry II.:

Was I in my castle at Bungay,

Fast by the river Waveney,

I would not care for the king of Cockney:

Dawn. A man, tall, looking man.
 Down. A local joke, formerly used at Salaber, on large companies, or parties heading of their courage.
 It was performed by our Pease, who had the knack of performing mad jokes, and who, by the direction of some of the company, would bark out a word in a low, Ki-bu's manner, as if just broken loose from his cage, as the great object of this act by the farce. Downy became so much the fashion of the place, that it was exhibited before his Majesty, the Prince of Wales, father of our present sovereign. Pease obtained the name of Downdy, from a fool, he used to say, which had for its motto
 the words Downy de Down.

GYPSIES. A set of vagrants, who, to the great disgrace of our police, are suffered to wander about the country. They pretend that they derive their origin from the ancient Egyptians, who were famous for their knowledge in astronomy, and other sciences; and, under the pretence of fortune telling, find means to rob or defraud the ignorant and superstitious. To colour their impostures, they artificially discolour their faces, and speak a kind of gibberish peculiar to themselves. They rove up and down the country in great companies, to the great terrour of the farmers, from whose geese, turkeys, and fowls, they take very considerable contributions.

When a fresh recruit is admitted into the fraternity, he is to take the following oath, administered by the principal maunder, after going through the annexed forms:

First a new name is given him, by which he is ever after to be called; then standing up in the middle of the assembly, and directing his face to the dimber damber, or principal man of the gang, he repeats the following oath, which is dictated to him by some experienced member of the fraternity:

I, Crank Cuffin, do swear to be a true brother, and that I will in all things obey the commands of the great tawney prince, and keep his counsel, and not divulge the secrets of my brethren.

I will never leave nor forsake the company, but observe and keep all the times of appointment, either by day or by night, in every place whatever.

I will not teach any one to cant, nor will I disclose any of our mysteries to them.

I will take my prince's part against all that shall oppose him, or any of us, according to the utmost of my ability; and will I suffer him, or any one belonging to us, to be abused by any strange adventures, fallies, knaverys, pillories, feed-dice, Irish toys, fringes, whip jacks, jacksens, baggy buckets, domosties, clipped dogges, pastimes, or curials; but will defend him, or them, as much as I can, against all other enemies whatever; I will not conceal any thing from him, or from the rest of the company. Lastly, I will cleave to my duty and fidelity, and will bring her due, murthery prayers, gobies, grudging cheere, or ill of the bewery, for any thing else I can come at, as winnings for her wapping.

The canton-baw, it seems, is a tradition, that from the three first articles of the oath, the first leaders of a certain boastful, worshippful fraternity (who pretend to derive their origin from the ancient sacred monarch both the first and form of their establishment; and that their pretended derivation from the first leader is a forgery, it being only from the first John Tyler, the Anchor Tribe. At the admission of a new brother, a general doke is applied for beere, or drinke, to make themselves merry on the occasion. As for peckage, or viables, they can procure it without money; for while some are sent to break the ruffians, or woads and bushes, for stry, others are detached to fish geese, chickens, geese, ducks (or swillards), and pigs. Their mess is their butcher, who probably make bloody work with what living things are brought there; and having made holes in the ground, under some narrow ledge in an obscure place, they make a fire, and hold or scall their meat, and when it is enough, ~~to~~ to work with their teeth and nails, and having eaten more like bralls than men, they drink more like fowls than a man everform, entertaining one another all the time with songs in the canting style.

As they live, so they lie, pigs, &c. provided, and know not how to claim a property either in their goods or children; and the general manner of their sleep is to lie together, like all the rest, and were sometimes sent to

L. e. drinking it off. Getting an oyster; eating it. Getting a house; clearing it of its furniture.

Gyab, or Jyab. Any striking of path with a seal.

Gyasing. Jeering or ridiculing.

Gyts, or Gyts: Hopping Gyles; a nick name for a lame person: St. Giles was the tutelary saint of cripples.

Gytsars. A set of vagrants, who, to the great disgrace of our police, are suffered, to wander about the country. They pretend that they derive their origin from the ancient Egyptians, who were famous for their knowledge in astronomy, and other sciences; and, under the pretence of fortune telling, find means to rub or defraud the ignorant and superstitious. To colour their impostures, they artificially discolour their faces, and speak a kind of gibberish peculiar to themselves. They rove up and down the country in great companies, to the great terror of the farmers, from whose geese, turkeys, and fowls, they take very considerable contributions.

When a fresh recruit is admitted into the fraternity, he is to take the following oath, administered by the principal man of the gang, after going through the usual forms.

First a new name is given him, by which he is ever after to be called; then standing up in the middle of the assembly, and directing his face to the chamberlain or principal man of the gang, he repeats the following oath, which is dictated to him by one experienced in arts of dissimulation:

I, Arak Usher, do swear to be a true brother, and that I will in all things obey the commands of the great tawney prince, and keep his counsel, and not divulge the secrets of my brethren.

I will never leave nor forsake the company, but observe and keep all the times of appointment, either by day or by night, in every place whatsoever.

I will not teach any one to cheat, nor will I disclose any of our mysteries to them.

I will take my prince's part against all that shall oppose him.

or any of us, according to the utmost of my ability; nor will I suffer him, or any one belonging to us, to be abused by any strange abrams, rufflers, hookers, pailliards, swaddlers, Irish toyles, swigmen, whip jacks, jarkmen, bawdy baskets, dommerars, clapper dogeons, patricoes, or cur-tals; but will defend him, or them, as much as I can, against all other outliers whatever. I will not conceal aught I win out of libkins or from the ruffmans, but will preserve it for the use of the company. Lastly, I will cleave to my doxy wap stiffly, and will bring her duds, margery praters, goblers, grunting cheats, or tibs of the buttery, or any thing else I can come at, as winnings for her wappings.

The canters have, it seems, a tradition, that from the three first articles of this oath, the first founders of a certain boastful, worshipful fraternity (who pretend to derive their origin from the earliest times) borrowed both the hint and form of their establishment; and that their pretended derivation from the first Adam is a forgery, it being only from the first Adam Tiler: see ADAM TILER. At the admission of a new brother, a general stock is raised for booze, or drink, to make themselves merry on the occasion. As for peckage, or eatables, they can procure it without money; for while some are sent to break the ruffmans, or woods and bushes, for firing, others are detached to filch geese, chickens, hens, ducks (or mallards), and pigs. Their mortis are their butchers, who presently make bloody work with what living things are brought them; and having made holes in the ground, under some remote hedge in an obscure place, they make a fire, and boil or broil their food; and, when it is enough, fall to work tooth and nail: and having eaten more like beasts than men, they drink more like swine than human creatures, entertaining one another all the time with songs in the canting dialect.

As they live, so they lie, together promiscuously, and know not how to claim a property either in their goods or children; and this general interest ties them more firmly together, than if all their rags were twisted into ropes, to bind them indissolubly from a separation; which detestable union is farther consolidated by the above oath.

They stroll up and down all summer time in droves, and dextrously pick pockets, while they are telling of fortunes; and the money, rings, silver thimbles, &c. which they get, are instantly conveyed from one hand to another, till the remotest person of the gang (who is not suspected because they come not near the person robbed) gets possession of it; so that, in the strictest search, it is almost impossible to recover it: while the wretches with imprecations, oaths, and protestations, disclaim the thievery.

That by which they are said to get the most money, is, when young gentlewomen of good families and reputation have happened to be with child before marriage, a round sum is often bestowed among the gypsies, for some one mort to take the child; and as that is never heard of more by the true mother and family, so the disgrace is kept concealed from the world; and, if the child lives, it never knows its parents.

KERRY SECURITY. Bond, pledge, oath, and keep the money.

KETCH. Jack Ketch; a general name for the finishers of the law, or hangmen, ever since the year 1682, when the office was filled by a famous practitioner of that name, of whom his wife said, that any bungler might put a man to death, but only her husband knew how to make a gentleman die sweetly. This officer is mentioned in Butler's Ghost, page 54, published about the year 1682, in the following lines:

*Till Ketch observing he was chous'd,
And in his profits much abus'd,
In open hall the tribute dunn'd,
To do his office, or refund.*

Mr. Ketch had not long been elevated to his office, for the name of his predecessor Dun occurs in the former part of this poem, page 29:

*For you yourself to act squire Dun,
Such ignominy ne'er saw the sun.*

The addition of 'squire,' with which Mr. Dun is here dignified, is a mark that he had beheaded some state criminal for high treason; an operation which, according to custom for time out of mind, has always entitled the operator to that distinction. The predecessor of Dun was Gregory Brandon, from whom the gallows was called the Gregorian tree, by which name it is mentioned in the prologue to Mercurius Pragmaticus, a tragi-comedy acted at Paris, &c. 1641:

This trembles under the black rod, and he Doth fear his fate from the Gregorian tree.

Gregory Brandon succeeded Derrick. See DERRICK.

KETTLE DRUMS. Cupid's kettle drums; a woman's breasts, called by sailors chest and bedding.

KETTLE OF FISH. When a person has perplexed his affairs in general, or any particular business, he is said to have made a fine kettle of fish of it.

KHAJBAR. The worthy brethren of this order met, A. D. 1749, at the Nag's Head, Tothill-street, Westminster.

KICKS. Breeches. A high kick; the top of the fashion.

It is all the kick; it is the present mode. Tip us your kicks, we'll have them as well as your fear; pull off your breeches, for we must have them as well as your money. A kick, a speech. Two and a kick; half-a-crown. A kick in the guts; a dram of gin, or any other spirituous liquor. A kick up; a disturbance, a disturbance or dance. An odd kick in one's gallop; a strange whim or peculiarity.

To kick the bucket. To die. He kicked the bucket one day; he died one day.

KICKSAPPOO. Dead. Negro slang.

KICKSAPPA. French dishes; corruption of gouttes de saup.

KID. A child.

KIDNEY. Rogues who make it their business to defraud young apprentices, or school boys, of goods committed to their charge, by persuading or threatening to execute some trifling message, pretending to take care of their parcels till they come back; their aim, in fact, being, to be called the kidney.

KIDDER. A forchteller; see CROCK. Kidderers are also persons employed by the gaudsater to gather pearls.

KIDNEY-NIPPER. Taylor out of work, who creeps off the waistcoat pockets of these brethren, when cross-legged on the board, thereby grabbing their bit. Cast.

KIDNAPPER. Originally one who stole or deceived children or apprentices from their parents or masters, to send them to the colonies; called also spanner; but now used for all recruiting crimps for the king's troops, or those of the East India company, and agents for indenting servants for the plantations, &c.

KIDNEY. Disposition, principles, humour. Of a strange kidney; of an odd or unaccountable humour. A man of a different kidney; a man of different principles.

This officer is mentioned in Butler's Ghost, page 54, published about the year 1682, in the following lines:

*Till Ketch observing he was charg'd,
And to his profits much charg'd,
He should the tribute stand;
To do his office, or resign.*

Mr. Ketch had not long been elevated to his office, for the name of his predecessor Dun occurs in the former part of this poem, page 29:

*For to yourself is all Squire Dun,
Such ignominy as is law the son.*

The addition of 'squire,' with which Mr. Dun is here dignified, is a mark that he had beheaded some late criminal for high treason; an operation which, according to custom for that sort of work, has always entitled the operator to that distinction. The predecessor of Dun was Gregory Brandon, from whom the gallows was called the Gregorian tree, by which name it is mentioned in the prologue to Mirra's Fragmentus, a tragic-comedy acted at Paris, &c. 1641:

NYPPER. A cut-purse: so called by one Wotton, who in the year 1585 kept an academy for the education and perfection of pick-pockets and cut-purses: his school was near Billingsgate, London. As in the dress of ancient times many people wore their purses at their girdles, cutting them was a branch of the light-fingered art, which is now lost, though the name remains. Maitland, from Stow, gives the following account of this Wotton: This man was a gentleman born, and sometime a merchant of good credit, but fallen by time into decay: he kept an alehouse near Smart's Key, near Billingsgate, afterwards for some misdemeanor put down. He reared up a new trade of life, and in the same house he procured all the cut-purses about the city, to repair to his house; there was a school house set up to learn young boys to cut purses: two devices were hung up; one was a pocket, and another was a purse; the pocket had in it certain counters, and was hung about with hawks bells, and over the top did hang a little facing bell. The purse had silver in it; and he that could take out a counter, without noise of any of the bells, was adjudged a judicial nypper: according to their terms of art, a foyster was a pick-pocket; a nypper was a pick-purse, or cut-purse.

This horse consisted of two or more planks about eight feet long, fixed together so as to form a sharp ridge or angle, which answered to the body of the horse. It was supported by four posts, about six feet long, for legs. A head, neck, and tail, rudely cut in wood, were added, which completed the appearance of a horse. On this sharp ridge delinquents were mounted, with their hands tied behind them; and to steady them (as it was said), and lest the horse should kick them off, one or more firelocks were tied to each leg. In this situation they were sometimes condemned to sit an hour or two; but at length it having been found to injure the soldiers materially, and sometimes to rupture them, it was left off about the time of the accession of King George I. A wooden horse was standing in the Parade at Portsmouth as late as the year 1750.
